[57] Ixtlilxochitl, Obras históricas (1892), II: 197: "En la gran provincia de Tochpan puso por su mayordomo á Huehutli, que cobraba en cada un año de las mantas del género atrás referido, mil quinientos y ochenta fardos, y mas veinticinco mantas y huepiles, sin más cuatrocientos fardos, y más diez mantas de ilacatziuhqui [Molina: cosa torcida] de a ocho brazas, y otros tantos fardos le mantas de ilacatziuhqui delgado de a cuatro brazas, que por todo venían á ser cuarenta y siete mil seiscientos cuarenta y cinco mantas, enaguas y huepiles, piezas de ilacatziuhqui y pañetes sin más las amas de palacio y criadas que eran necesarias para el servicio. La gran provincia de Tochpan se dividía en siete provincias, que contenian todas ellas sesenta y ocho pueblos a ellas sujetos."
[58] Tezozomoc, Crónica mexicana (1878), p. 315. See also Krickeberg, Los totonaca (1933), pp. 110–111.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

TRIBUTE

651 Tribute of the whole province.—Tlapacoyan paid the following tribute to its Mexican masters:

CLOTHING

[29] 714 400 bundles of black-and-white striped mantles
800 bundles of large white mantles
2 warriors' costumes*

651 632 Tribute of the component towns.—Acaçacatla, if we are correct in identifying it with the modern Zacatlán, gave no tribute other than a few judicious gifts.*

Chila paid, as might be expected from the Matricula leaf, a tribute of cotton mantles.*

19. Atotonilco el Grande

SOURCES OF THE MAP

635 114 The glyphs for Atotonilco and its five fellow towns appear on page 8 of the Matricula and is copied on folio 30' of the Codex Mendocino. There is an Empire province of Atotonilco which may be called the province of Atotonilco de Pedraza (see p. 37 above), but the one represented on folio 30' may be named after the town within it which is indicated by the Matricula annotator as Atotonilco el Grande—the only town he identifies on this page. The towns of this province lay in the south-central part of eastern Hidalgo. The Mendocino, as usual, identifies all towns, and has been compared with the modern map [28] (American Geographical Society, "Millionth Map," sheet "San Luis Potosí") with the following result:

103

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Acxxochitla, 3	Acxxochitlán
Atotonilco, 1	Atotonilco el Grande
Huayapan, 5	[No change]
Quechquecçaloyá, 2	[See Remarks on Towns]
Tulançinco, 4	Tulancingo
Çuilmiquilco	[See Remarks on Towns]

* RHE, 1: 469: "no tributaban como otros pueblos sino de que quando ellos querian hazer algun presente á mexicanos lo hacian y no otra cosa."
 RHE, 1: 481: "ordinariamente tributaban á mexicanos mantas de algodon."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Quachqueçaloyan is given as "dos leguas del mismo Atotonilco"[28] 632 and seventeen leagues from México.[29] As "Tlaquetzaloyan" it appears 131 eight leagues from Hueyacocotla.[30] It was one of two subject towns belonging to Atotonilco in the sixteenth century.[31]

Çtzihuinquilocs may be located from a literary reference, which places it southeast of Epazoyuca.[32]

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants.—Tulançinco, in this province, was a town of great antiq- 635 uity, a former center of the Toltecs of Tula, Hidalgo. Sahagún com- 175 ments on the ruins at Tulançinco in the same breath with those of Tula itself and of Xochicalco.[33] These ruins have only recently been surveyed.[34] Tulançinco eventually became an important garrison town of the Acolhuaque,[35] and it was from this point, according to Tezozomoc's Crónica mexicana (p. 312), that the conquest of the Huaxteca was launched.

Provincial borders in 1519.—The province of Atotonilco el Grande 635 lay between two tierras de guerra. To the north was Metztitlan, and 131 probably a second city-state (Tototepec de Veracruz); to the south was Tlaxcala. East and west, however, were other Empire provinces, Tlapacoyan and Hueypuchtla.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of the province of Atoto- 651 nilco el Grande to its overlords in Mexico is given below:

CLOTHING [291 714]

800 bundles of rich mantles[36]
2,600 bundles of mantles of white nequen[37]
4 warriors' costumes with shields[38]

---

[28] PNE, 3: 91.
[29] PNE, 2: No. 135.
[30] GPM, p. 270.
[31] PNE, 2: No. 21.
[32] RHE, 1: 240: "Entre levante y sur [de Epazoyucca] eran muchos pueblos pequeños como tulinquilocs [sic] y tulyamca y el pueblo de tepepulco está cinco leguas cuadras [sic]."
[33] Sahagún, Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (1938), I: 8 and III: 109.
[34] By Carlos Margain; see Bibliography.
[35] Ixtlilxochitl, Obras históricas (1891), II: 199.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

TRIBUTE 651

Tribute of the whole province.—Acolhuacan Province is said to have given the following tribute:

CLOTHING [241]

2,000 bundles of large white "twisted" mantles
1,200 bundles of rich thin mantles, in three styles
400 bundles of loincloths [714]
400 bundles of women's skirts and blouses
121 warriors' costumes with shields ("one fine piece")

FOOD [262]

4 wooden bins (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli)

Tribute of the component towns.—Acolman (a) rendered tribute 632 of henequen garments, in bundles of twenty, every quarter, and 651 maguey leaves for fuel, but, to judge from a statement in the Papeles de Nueva España (6:213), this seems to have been destined for the local cacique.

Cempoalan at first gave obsidian knives for war clubs to Texcoco. [412] After passing into Mexican hands it gave a canoe annually, and then, in the time of Moctezuma's predecessor, fowl and other things.*

Epaçoyucan and adjacent towns paid only obsidian knives until [412] Ahuitzotl enlarged the temple of Huitzilopochtli and increased tribute demands generally. Thereafter they paid mantles and maize and domestic fowl.*

---

* Corrected from the Mendocino version: 103 pieces, 3 fans.

* RHE, 2:131: "estos quatro pueblos y sus sujetos eran en tiempo de su gentilidad del señor de texcoco nezahvalcoyotzin andando el tiempo y siendo señor en mexico yzcoaltzin pusieron los pueblos de xaxpanala y tlaquilpa y tecpilpa al señor de mexico solamente tzapala se quedo en el señorio que sobre ellos tenia y reconocian siempre el Reyno de texcoco Reyno de acolhuacan tributaban sabajas con que hacian macanas y despues andando el tiempo y siendo señor en mexico yzcoaltzin mucho tiempo no tributaron nada sino solamente cada año Ichaches vna canoa a mexico hasta que en tiempo de ahuizotzin sucessor de moctezuma fue el primero que mando tributasen sesenta gallinas y todo genero de bolatería [this for a new temple] como sucedio Moctezuma en su lugar no quiso perseuerlas tributos."

* RHE, 2:142: "eran del señorio de texcoco ... no tributaban nada solamente sabajas con que hacian macanas y siendo señor en mexico yzcoaltzin pidiole al señor de texcoco que se tenia muchas tierras que le diese algunos pueblos de la comarca de mexico entonces se dividió este pueblo porque ganaron tambien el señor de mexico las sabajas la mitad llevó el de texcoco y otra mitad el de mexico y entró tambien otros pueblos sujetos del señorio de mexico como cempoalaxochitlan tlaquilpa pachuca tepeapulco y tenantzingo todos estos pueblos pusieron a mexico y estos pueblos ayudaron a sacar sabajas y no tenian otro tributo hasta que vino a señorear el sucessor de moctezuma que frontier. To the south was Huaxtepec, to the southwest Quauhnahuac, and to the north the jigsaw-puzzle provinces of the heart of the Empire. 635 131

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The province of Chalco gave the richest food tribute of the whole Empire: 651

CLOTHING

800 large mantles
2 warriors' costumes with shields* [291 714]

FOOD*

6 wooden bins of maize
2 wooden bins of beans
2 wooden bins of chian
2 wooden bins of huauhtli [262]

22. Quauhnahuac

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The fourth page of the Matrícula shows us a series of towns headed by Quauhnahuac, a name the Spaniards, in an unfortunate jest, changed to Cuernavaca.' This province now forms the western half of the State of Morelos, with a very minor prolongation south into Guerrero. There are sixteen of these town glyphs, all of which are copied in the Mendocino on folio 23', with the tribute lists running over onto folio 23'. The Mendocino annotator seems to have made one of his rare slips, identifying one of the glyphs wrongly, as shown below. The map of this province is based on the 1910 "Carta General del Estado de Morelos" (Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora), on which the following towns have been located: 635 114 [128] 103

MENDOCINO	1910 MAP	MENDOCINO	1910 MAP
Acatlypac, 4	Acatlipa	Quauhnahuac, 2	Cuernavaca
Amacuztida, 14	Amacuzac	Teocalçinco, 17	Teocalzingo (Gro.)
Atlicholoyan, 9	Atlacholoya	Xiuhtepec, 3	Xiutepec
Coatlan, 7	Coatlán del Río	Xochitepec, 6	[No change]
Chimalco, 16	Panchimalco	Xoxoutla, 15	Jojutla de Juárez
Huiçilapã, 1	Huitzilac	Yztla, 11	Puente de Ixtla
Miacatla, 5	[No change]

Three towns remain to be located: Molotla, Ocpayucã, and Yztepec.

* Bernal Díaz (Historia verdadera de la conquista de la Nueva España [1904], II: 40) speaks of the "pueblo que se dice Cuadlabaca [!] e comunalmente corrompiendo agora aquel nombre y le llamamos Cuernavaca."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

and are "muy tímidos y toscos o torpes." This seems to have been a general opinion.[181] Quauhnahuac was their principal town, from which they spread south and into what later became Huaxtepec Province.[182]

Provincial borders in 1519.—The province of Quauhnahuac was surrounded by other provinces of the Empire. The intricate provinces of the Valley of Mexico lay to the north. Eastward were Chalco and Huaxtepec, and in the south Tlalcoçauhtitlan. Tepequacuilco, Tlachco, and Malinalco formed the western borders, from south to north.[183]

Quauhnahuac itself was subject to Texcoco specifically. There was a special room in the palace at Texcoco for storing the tribute of this southern province[184] and even a detailed list of what Texcoco received.

Regional names.—The region is called Tlalhuic, by one source, at least.[185]

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The following goods were exacted from the Cuernavaca region:

CLOTHING

1,200 bundles of large "twisted" mantles
800 bundles of little white mantles
1,200 bundles of little mantles "richly worked, the sort the lords and caciques wore"
400 bundles of loincloths
400 bundles of women's skirts and blouses
8 warriors' costumes with shields

[181] Códice Ramírez, fol. 20: "los tlalhuicas que era la gente mas tosca dessos seis reinos . . ."

[182] Durán, Historia de las indias de Nueva España (1867–1880), I: 12: "llegaron los Tlaloicas [sic] . . . los quales como allaron ocupado lo demas, asentaron en lugar que agora possen, tomando por principal asiento y cabeça de su provincia, á Cuauhnauac, de donde salieron los Señores de aquella congregacion á hacer sus moradas y asientos como los demas, unos á Yahutepec, otros á Oxxtepec, á Acapichtlan, á Tlaquilenanco con todos los demas pueblos, villas y estancias que llamamos Marquesado, pues es el del felicísimo Marqués del Valle."

[183] Ixtlilxochitl, Obras históricas (1892), II: 180. A plan of the Texcoco palace and its enormous figures in the Códice Quinatzin.

[184] Códice Ramírez, fol. 20: "llamaron estos a su provincia Tlalhuic porque la poblaron los Tlalhuicas."

[185] Among these was the "Huaxtec" (Cuexteca?) dress with its peaked cap so typical of the century and divinities of that region. In the Matrícula it is clearly marked "xoxopanti cuexteca tuctli," "one yellow Huaxtec costume"—which confirms Seler's identification of the style from literary sources alone. He says, "Ich kein Bild kenne, das durch eine Beischrift als cuexteca? Devise gekennzeichnet wäre" (Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Amerikanischen Sprach- und Altertumskunde [1902–1923], II: 603–602).

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

Only in the northeast was there any contact with enemy terrain. 635
There Tetela and Hueyapan are described as frontier towns,[a] while 131 memory of conflict with the dwellers of the plateau also persisted in Totolapan and adjacent towns well within the province.[b]

Regional names.—The zone of the towns specified as Xochimilca, together with near-by Atlatlauca, was called Quauhtengo.[c] South of Yacapichtla lay another district referred to as the Tlalnahuac, in which Tlayacac and Tecpaçinco were prominent centers.[d]

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—In the Matricula we see, and in the 651
Mendocino we read of, the following opulent tribute which flowed to the Triple Alliance from the province of Huaxtepec:

CLOTHING [291]

400 bundles of loincloths
400 bundles of women's clothing
1,400 bundles of large mantles of "twisted" cloth
8,000 bundles of rich little mantles
46 warriors' costumes with shields (6 being fine pieces)* [714]

FOOD*

4 large wooden cribs (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli) [262]

OTHER GOODS

2,000 polished pottery dishes of various colors [323
8,000 reams of native paper 259]

Tribute of the component towns.—Rather curiously, no details are 632 available on the origins of the foregoing tribute, military aid and 651 prisoners alone being mentioned. [727]

[a] PNE, 6: 286.

[b] Atlatlauca, Totolapan, and Tlayacapan "trayan guerras" with "Chalco, Guexoçingo, Tazcala, Cholula; las quales heran sobre sus tierras" (PNE, 6: 9). We read in Lehmann, Die Geschichte der Königreiche von Colhuacan und Mexico (1938), §§ 1202–1203, how the people of Totolapan accompanied Nezahualpilli in a successful campaign against Huexotzinco in 11. Tochtli, 1490.

[c] "Estan las dichas tres cabeneras asentadas en tierra llana, çercadas de montes y sierras no muy altas; llamase la Probincia Quahutengo, y dixose asi porque los mas de sus subjetos eran poblados en montes, y en la dicha lengua se dize el monte quahutla o quahutengo" (PNE, 6: 10).

[d] RHE, 11: 224: "Los pueblos de la tlalnahuac son catorze cabeçeras caen casi todas desta villa [Yacapichtla] á la parte del sur dizen llamarse asi porque es tierra llana y mas caliente quanto la una cabeçera dizen que antiguamente no abia mas de dos cabeçeras que heran tequepeçinco y tlayalaque y que los demas heran estançias y asi agora se nombran estas cabeçeras."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—According to the Mendizabal-Jiménez Moreno linguistic map, Tlalcoçauhtitlan embraced a diversity of languages. Apart from the predominant Náhuatl, areas of Tlapanec, Matlame, and the unclassified Tuxteca are noted. The province of Tlalcoçauhtitlan was brought into the Empire by Nezahualcoyotl, who placed a governor over it.[*] Provincial borders in 1519.—West of Tlalcoçauhtitlan lay the province of Tepequacuilco; east of it Quiauhteopan, and to the north Quauhnahuac and Huaxtepec. These were Empire provinces. On the south, however, it gave on obscure and bellicose Yopitzinco.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The yellow earth which gave its name to the province of Tlalcoçauhtitlan naturally figured in its tribute, which was as follows:

CLOTHING

400 bundles of large mantles[]
1 warrior's costume with shield[*]

FOOD

100 pots of bee honey[]

OTHER GOODS

20 dishes of tecoçahuitl, "ques un barnyz amarillo con que se embixavan"[]

[*] Ixtlilxochitl, Obras históricas (1892), II: 198: Nezahualcoyotl "... fué sobre la [provincia] de Tlauhcocauhtitlan y la ganó, en donde puso por su mayordomo á Huitzilocuah, en donde se le daban de tributo y reconocimiento en cada un año diez y seis bateas de color y veinte cargas de copal, doscientas sesenta y ocho jícaras y tecomates finos, y veinte cargas de varas de tlacuilol quauitle." The last item is clarified by Sahagún (Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España [1938], III: 222): "Hay unos árboles silvestres que se llaman tacuiloquauitl, que quiere decir que tiene madera pintada, porque ellos son bermejos, y tienen las vetas negras que parecen pinturas sobre el bermejo; es árbol muy preciado, porque de él se hacen teponaztles, tamboriles y vihuelas, y suenan mucho estos instrumentos cuando son de esta madera; y por ser muy pintada y de buen parecer es muy preciada."

[] Tezozomoc (Crónica mexicana [1878], p. 315) includes among the tribute from the Huaxteca "bezan amarillo que llaman Tecuezalin y tecozahuitl con que untan y tiñen jícaras, y abundan manos y piés."

Editorial note (C. O. Sauer): This Náhuatl word may possibly also signify the yellowish lacquer base, prepared from Coccus insects. The intermediate slopes between the volcanic highlands and the Balsas lowland were and are the chief source of this substance, prized in the aboriginal crafts of central and southern Mexico.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The Mendizabal-Jiménez Moreno linguistic map indicates great linguistic complexity for this province: Náhuatl, Mixtec, Tlapenec, and Matlame. 101 197

Olinalan, celebrated for its lacquer-work, probably carried on that activity in pre-Hispanic times. From adjacent Tlalcoçauhtitlan Province, perhaps only a few kilometers away, "bateas" went as tribute to Texcoco.[a] [531]

Provincial borders in 1519.—Because half the towns of the province cannot be identified on the maps of unexplored Guerrero, the north of this province is a great blank. It bordered, probably, on Huaxtepec Province in that direction, as on the west with Tlalcoçauhtitlan, on the east with Yoaltepec, and on the south with Tlapan, all of them fellow tributaries. 635 131

Regional names.—Somewhere in the dubious northeast began the region known as Totollan.[b]

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Quiauhteopan was a rich mining region, as is shown by the following list of its tribute to the highlands: 651

CLOTHING

400 large mantles [291]
1 warrior's costume with shield* [714]

FOOD

100 jars of bee honey* [263]

OTHER GOODS

40 large copper bells [326]
80 copper axeheads [317]
1 dish of little turquoises*

Tribute of the component towns.—Olinalan, in the mid-sixteenth century, rendered a sizable quarterly tribute of base gold, cacao, money resulting from the sale of cacao, and sixty little jars of honey (over 652 651

[a] See the section on Tlalcoçauhtitlan, above.

[b] FNE, 5: 57: "Fuentle ... está en la provincia de los Totoltecas de lengua mexicana diferente de las de la Mixteca sujetos a la doctrina de la cabecera de Acatlan." Of the same town, it is said farther on (5: 77): "En este pueblo se habla la lengua mexicana corrupta, porque es de la provincia de Tonala."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

Provincial borders in 1519.—This was the northernmost of the three provinces lying east of Tlaxcala and separating it from the sea. North of it was Tuchpa; northwest, Tlapacoyan; and to the south, Quauhtochco. 635 131

Regional names.—The northern part of the province was part of the Totonacapan.

TRIBUTE 651

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of Tlatlauhquitepec held little variety: [291 714]

CLOTHING

1,608 bundles[20] of black-and-white striped mantles[21]
2 warriors' costumes and shields[22]

OTHER GOODS [314]

800 cakes of liquidambar[23]

Tribute of the component towns.—Xilotepec gave maize, chickens,[24] and liquidambar.[25] 632 651

Teotlalpan (Hueytlalpan) gave cotton mantles.[26]

Xoxopanco and Tzotzocolco "... antiguamente tributaban a montecuma mantas de algodón," according to the unpublished relación mentioned above.

27. Quauhtochco

SOURCES OF THE MAP

Quauhtochco was one of the provinces cutting Tlaxcala off from the sea. Glyphs of its seven principal towns are painted on page 24 of the Matrícula and on folio 48' of the Mendocino. By means of the 1908 map of Veracruz,[27] in the center of which area this province lay, five of these towns may be identified, as follows: 635 114 [128] 103

MENDOCINO	1908 MAP	MENDOCINO	1908 MAP
Ahuilizapan, 5	Orizaba	Tuchçonco, 3	Tozongo
Quauhtochco, 2	Huatusco	Ytzteyocan, 4	S. Nicolas
Totodan, 1	Totutla

Two others remain to be located: Quauhtetelco and Teuhçoltzapotli.

[20] Corrected from 1,600.
[21] Cf. Krickeberg, Les totonaques (1933), pp. 111–112, for an examination of tribute from this province.
[22] Cf. n. 6 above.
[23] RHE, 1: 460: "eran basallos de monteçuma tributabanle mantas de algodon."
[24] Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora.
[25] [Chickens are not known to date from pre-Spanish times in the New World. In this case, the word may be a generic term for fowl.—Analyst]
[26] [illegible]

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

632 Teoçiocan is called "Teocinyocan" by another native source.[28] It is perhaps an estancia of Zongolica (a), "en tierra fria," called San Juan de Teoyxuacan, two leagues from the cabecera.[29]

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

175 Inhabitants and languages.—Cuetlaxtlan, we are told by a Texcocan 197 chronicler, was conquered by that power,[30] a statement confirmed by the "Relación de Cempoalla."[31] The pre-Hispanic language was Náhuatl.

635 Provincial borders in 1519.—Cuetlaxtlan lay between Quauhtochco
131 and Tochtepec, which were on the northwest and on the southeast respectively. Northeastward was the sea, and to the southwest was a doubtful region embracing at least one free city-state of the Mazateca.

TRIBUTE

651 Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of Cuetlaxtlan, in contrast with that of adjacent Quauhtochco, was variegated:

CLOTHING

[291] 400 women's blouses and skirts
400 small mantles, borders black and white
400 half-quilted mantles
400 mantles of 4 brazas each 400 large white mantles, 4 brazas each
160 very rich mantles for lords and caciques
1,200 black-and-white striped mantles
[714] 2 warriors' costumes with shields*
[317] 1 string of chalchiuites*
[237] 400 bunches of quetzal feathers*
[301] 2 lip plugs of crystal, with blue and gold mountings*
20 lip plugs, light amber, mounted in gold*
1 hair adornment of quetzal feathers*

FOOD

[262] 200 loads of cacao*

Cuetlaxtlan paid cacao and cotton mantles, both white and decorated.[32]

[28] Sahagún, Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (1538), IV: 134.
[29] PNE, 5: 230.
[30] Ixtlilxochitl, Obras históricas (1892), I: 320 and II: 196.
[31] RHE, 1: 131.
[32] PNE, 5: 9: "tributavanle cacao y mantas de algodón blancas e pintadas."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

province was Náhuatl, but along the southwest both Chinantec and Mazatec were spoken.

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the northwest of Tochtepec Province lay Cuetlaxtlan and its fortress; to the southwest was the doubtful zone of the independent Mazatec. Southward, Coayxtlahuacan and Coyolapan provided another strong link with the Empire, but somewhere along the southeast the province of Tochtepec gave on enemy regions, through which a thin line of fortresses must have led to Xoconochco.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The wealth of Tochtepec was phenomenal. Of the several lists of tribute which we have, the Matricula shows the following items:

CLOTHING

1,600 rich mantles, of the kind the lords and caciques wore 800 red-and-white striped mantles
400 women's blouses and skirts
1 warrior's costume and shield, with a birdlike standard*
1 gold shield
1 feather standard like a bird's wing—yellow feathers*
1 gold diadem*
1 gold headband, a hand's width and thick as vellum*
2 strings of gold beads
3 large chalchiuites*
4 strings of chalchiuites*
20 lip plugs of light amber mounted in gold* 20 lip plugs of crystal with blue smalt and gold setting*

FOOD

20 loads of cacao

la mar del Norte hasta otra provincia que se dice Tochtepec [sic] que asimismo la ganó y sujetó, y puso en ella por su mayordomo y cobrador de tributos (de más de la gente de guarnición que en cada una de ellas dejaba) á Tozoctzin, que cobraba en cada un año cuarenta fardos de mantas ricas y viaste de unas camisetas asimismo ricamente tejidas de finos colores, que montan ciento y veinte piezas: igualmente le sembraban y cultivaban en cada un año una sementera de cacao, que tenía de longitud cuatrocientas medidas y de latitud doscientas, sin más treinta y tres cargas de cacao que se cobraban de tributo, dos mil pelotas de hule y cuatrocientos paños de grana, sin más muchas piezas de plumería, como eran rodelas, penachos y otras divisas que los reyes usaban cuando salían a las guerras, hechas de la plumería rica que llaman quetzali. Esta provincia contenía doce provincias, asimismo sujetas, y daban de tributo cierta cantidad de armas y criadas para el servicio de palacio."

* Contributed by Uxilla. See Tribute of the Component Towns, below.

 Also from Uxilla.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

635 131 Provincial borders in 1519.—North of Yoaltepec Province lay the Empire province of Tepeacac, and to the east that of Tlachquiauco, but to the south were other Mixtec peoples never subjugated by the Triple Alliance: Tototepec of Oaxaca and her allies. Ayoxochiquilazala was an outpost against these. To the west Tlapan and Quiauhteopan were Empire territory again.

TRIBUTE

651 Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute rendered by Yoaltepec was small but choice; it included gold and turquoises. It is listed as follows:

CLOTHING

[291 714] 400 large mantles
1 warrior's costume with shield*

FOOD

[263] 40 jars of honey

OTHER TRIBUTE

[316 533] 40 little gold disks, "the size of a Host" and as thick as one's finger*[a]
10 middle-sized turquoise masks (mosaic)*[b]

632 651 Tribute of the component towns.—Acatlan gave military supplies and food to the Imperial armies which passed through it and from time to time sent gifts of mantles and rabbitskins to its overlord in Mexico, as well as providing personal services. Certain gifts were received in return.[c]

[712] Ayoxochiquilazala, though a garrison town giving military service, also paid tribute of gold dust.[d]

---

[a] Cooper Clark, in his edition of the Códice Mendocino (1: 73), remarks that "it is reasonable to suppose that these gold disks . . . measured about three inches in diameter."

[b] The Mendocino commentary considers the turquoise symbol appearing with the masks to represent a separate tribute of turquoises, but this conclusion does not seem justified.

[c] As in Ocelotepec, in the province of Coyolapan, q.v., PNE, 5: 59, says that Acatlan "solamente ... daua ... a la jente de guerra que por el passaba" food and arms from an arsenal there, and " ... enbiauan de quando en quando vn presente al Rey de Mexico, de mantas y pellejos de liebres y de conejos." In the same source are mentioned the services rendered by various lords and their wives in the Imperial court, in eighty-day shifts.

[d] RMEH, T. 2, Appendix, pp. 147–148: "acudian con el tributo á monteçuma y le davan oro en polvo y no le acudian con otra cosa porque en esto dicho pueblo tenia monteçuma jente de guarniçion aperçebida para las guerras y esta gente mexicana comian y gastavan las gallinas venados conejos y maiz que eran obligados á dar á monteçuma."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

as the "Nómina de Tributos de Tlapa y su senorio al Imperio Mexi- 651 cano" give us unparalleled material for a future study in detail of the 212 tribute of this province. We now have the bookkeeping from both sides, that of the conquerors and that of the conquered. Until the codices are fully published, however, we can only remark the abundant tribute of gold, confirmed by the Matricula and reconfirmed by the excavations of Atliztac, which may have been included in the province."

The Matricula and Mendocino specify: 651

CLOTHING

400 bundles of mantles and women's blouses [291
402 bundles* of little red-striped mantles 714]
800 bundles of large mantles
2 warriors' costumes with shields*

OTHER TRIBUTE

10 strips of gold "de quatro de dos en ancho y de largo tres quartos [316 de vara," and the thickness of parchment
20 bowls of gold dust, each bowl of 2 almoçadas capacity 415] 800 bowls called tecomates, "the good kind they drink cocoa from"

Tribute of the component towns.—We have testimony regarding 632
the tribute of one town, Ayutla, in both the pre-Hispanic and the 651 early colonial periods. On certain other towns, only information about the latter period is available.

Ayutla and near-by towns joined in giving Moctezuma the following [415 every six moons: a bar of heavy gold, three fingers thick; gourds; deer 291 and tiger skins; fish and cotton.* In the mid-sixteenth century it gave 248 40 measures of gold dust and various items of clothing quarterly, as 262] well as a turkey daily and the services of three Indians in a cacao grove.*

* Noguera, "Importancia arqueológica del descubrimiento de objetos en Texmelincan, Guerrero," Boletín del Museo Nacional (1933), Epoca II, 2: 42–44.

* Corrected from the figure of the Mendocino commentary, 400.

* PNE, 4: 260: "era de Moteçuçuma ... le davan vna vara de oro maçiço de gordor de tres dedos, y 'tecomates' que son como calabaças, y cueros de venado y pescado y algodon y cueros de tigures, y que todos los dichos pueblos ... le davan este tributo antiguamente cada seys lunes."

* PNE, 1: No. 28: "dan cada ochenta dias quarenta pesos de oro en polvo y dos mantas de dos braças cada vna, damascadas, y dos cotines grandes y ocho mantillas y quatro camisas y quatro naguas y cada dia vna gallina de la tierra y mas tres yndios de servicio en vna huerta de cacao y todos juntos quando es menester la benefician."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—This province seems to have been formed 635 out of a vanquished Mixtec city-state, at a very late period indeed in 648 the Empire's history. It is listed as one of three principal pre-Hispanic powers of the region in the "Relación de Teoçapotlan,"[] though we know that it lost its independence in 1511 or 1512.[]

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the south lay sister Mixtec states 635 such as Puctla and Zacatepec, which defied the Mexicans successfully, 131 to the east and north the Empire province of Coayxtlahuacan, and to the west that of Yoaltepec. 635

Regional names.—Tlachquiauco lay in what is commonly called the Mistecapan.

TRIBUTE

The only data available on the tribute of Tlachquiauco Province 651 comes from the Codex Mendocino:

CLOTHING [291

400 large mantles 714]

1 warrior's costume and shield*

OTHER GOODS*

20 vessels of gold dust [316

5 sacks of cochineal 237]

400 bunches of quetzal feathers

35. Coayxtlahuacan

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The province of Coayxtlahuacan appears on page 21 of the Matricula 635 and is copied on folio 43r of the Codex Mendocino. It contained eleven [131] principal towns,[*] all of which have been found. They lay in northern 114 Oaxaca. In the Matricula the towns of "Cohuaxtlauacã," "Tamaçolapan," and "Tepozcololan" are identified in the roman alphabet; and [*] PNE, 4: 193: "dizen los yndios que poco antes que los españoles viniesen solos auian sido de Tuxuepec que estos eran guerreros por si, y los de Tlachiaco que tambien eran guerreros por si, y Montecçuma que era el Señor de México."

[*] Anderson and Barlow, "The Maize Tribute of Moctezuma's Empire," Annals of the Missouri Botanical Garden (1943), 30: 414–415.

[*] Cortés (Cartas y relaciones [1866], pp. 152–153) speaks of twelve towns in the province of "Cuauxaca."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

197 Inhabitants and languages.—The province of Coayxtlahuacan was Mixtec in speech, except for Cuicatec (extending eastward from Cuicatlan), Chinantec (north and east of Atlatlaucca), and, curiously enough, Chocho-Popoloca in the very heart of the province (Tamaçulapan to Coayxtlahuacan).

101 In Coayxtlahuacan Province centered the rich and complicated
175 Mixtec culture, concerning which some detailed information has been preserved for us in such codices as the Nuttall and the Vindobonensis. Most extensive data on the pre-Hispanic history and ethnography of this region can be recovered from these manuscripts when they are fully studied. Many of the towns of this province were originally important city-states, with their own dynastic histories.

171 Among the notable cultural differences separating the peoples of 805 this province from the Náhua, are such variant calendar systems as the Mixtec, studied by Jiménez Moreno,* and the Cuicatec, in the still inadequately investigated "Codex Fernández Leal."

635 Provincial borders in 1519.—At the height of the Empire of Mocte-131 zuma, Coayxtlahuacan had certain half-intimidated (though not actually subjected) zones to the north, the sprawling Empire province with its Oaxaca garrison to the east, the still resisting Mixtec city-states* to the south, and Tlaxiaco and other Mixtec towns, recently overrun, to the west.

TRIBUTE

651 Tribute of the whole province.—The province of Coayxtlahuacan was exploited for the following items:

CLOTHING

[291] 400 bundles of quilted mantles, richly decorated 400 bundles of mantles, striped red and white
400 bundles of black-and-white mantles
400 bundles of loincloths
[714] 400 bundles of women's blouses and skirts
2 warriors' costumes together with shields*

* Códice de Yanhuitlán.

* Such as Puctla, Zacatepec, and others the relations of which appear in RMEH, T. 2, Appendix.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

651

CLOTHING

80 Huaxtec warriors' costumes, together with shields* [291]
800 bundles of wide mantles (quarterly) 714

FOOD (quarterly)

40 baskets of cacao ground with maize [262]
40 baskets of chian pinolli

OTHER TRIBUTE

Perpetual repair of the teocalli of Huitznahuac' [358]

38. PETLACALCO

SOURCES OF THE MAP

On the verso side of the American Philosophical Society leaf (2A) of 635 the Matricula and on folio 20' and 20' of the Codex Mendocino the 114 tributary province of Petlacalco is represented. Just as Çitlaltepec 131 and Tlatelolco included the northern lakes, so this province included the Lake of Chalco and its southern shore—the Pedregal. The tribute-gathering center lay in the zone of once powerful Azcapotzalco. On [128] the 1: 100,000 map "Valle de México" of the Secretaría de Agricultura 103 y Fomento (1937) we find a number of the towns of this province:

MENDOCINO	1937 MAP
Auchpanco	Ayapango
Cocotlan, 15	[No change]
Colhuacacinco	[See Remarks on Towns]
Cuitlahuac, 11	Tlahuac
Huiçilopochco, 9	Churubusco
Mizquic, 14	[No change]
Olac, 12	[See Remarks on Towns]
Petlacalcatl, 8	[See Remarks on Towns]
Tecalco	[No change]
Tecoloapan, 7
Tepopulan, 16	[No change]
Tezcacoac	[See Remarks on Towns]
Tzapotitlan, 10	Zapotitlan
Xico, 13	[No change]

The list of missing towns, however, is extensive:

Acapan	Tlaçoxiuhco
Nexxitlan	Toyac
Tepechpan	Xaxalpan
Tequemecan	Yopico

* San Juan Huitznahuac, jurisdiction of Azcapotzalco, D.F. (?).

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The northern part of this province was 101 the heart of the Tepanec zone. The Tepanec tribe is assumed—with 197 little proof—to have been Náhuatl-speaking. To the south were two other conquered tribes of better-known affiliation, the Chalca and Xochimilca, mutually related.

Provincial borders in 1519.—South of Petlacalco lay the sterile lava 635 flows which separated it from the province of Chalco (Chalco-Tlal- 131 manalco, not Chalco-Atenco), a province curving down through the mountain passes to Tepoztlan. To the west was the province of Quahuacan, and to the north Quauhtitlan, both at one time Tepanec strongholds. Eastward lay the lake provinces of Çitlaltepec and Tlatelolco.

Regional names.—At least the zone around Petlacalco itself be- 635 longed to the former Tepanecapan—the Tepanec area subject (until 1428) to Azcapotzalco.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The following materials were col 651 lected by the tribute gatherers to Petlacalco:

CLOTHING*

65 warriors' costumes with shields
2,400 loads of mantles of "twisted" cloth
800 loads of colored mantles
400 loads of loincloths
400 loads of women's clothing

[291 714]

FOOD*

1 bin of beans
1 bin of chian
2 bins of huauhtli

[262]

[p. 134 is blank]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

zuma had two houses full of every sort of arms, many [344] of them richly adorned with gold and precious stones. 411 There were shields great and small, and a sort of broad-swords, and others like two-handed swords set with stone knives which cut much better than our swords, and lances longer than ours are, with a fathom of blade with many knives set in it, which even when they are driven into a buckler or shield do not come out, in fact they cut like razors so that they can shave their heads with them. There were very good bows and arrows and double-pointed lances and others with one point, as well as their throwing sticks, and many slings and round stones shaped by hand, and some sort of artful shields which are so made that they can be rolled up, so as not to be in the way when they are not fighting, and when they are needed for fighting they let them fall down, and they cover the body from top to toe. There was also much quilted cotton 714 armour, richly ornamented on the outside with many coloured feathers, used as devices and distinguishing marks, and there were casques or helmets made of wood and bone, also highly decorated with feathers on the outside, and there were other arms of other makes which, so as to avoid prolixity, I will not describe, and there were artizans who were skilled in such things and worked at them, and stewards who had charge of the arms.

Let us leave this and proceed to the Aviary, and I am 231 forced to abstain from enumerating every kind of bird 136 that was there and its peculiarity, for there was everything from the Royal Eagle and other smaller eagles, and many other birds of great size, down to tiny birds of many-coloured plumage, also the birds from which they take the rich plumage which they use in their green feather work. The birds which have these feathers are about the size of the magpies in Spain, they are called in this country

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

411 his sword attached or suspended from the wrist.[51] Clubs ("quauhololli") may have been also in use. But battle-axes, or anything like the Peruvian "chumpi," do not appear to have been known to the Mexicans.[52]

●714 If now we turn to the defensive arms, to the protective armour proper, of the Mexicans, we meet in the first instance the shield ("chimalli"). Not the merely ornamental shields used and carried by warriors and chiefs on festive occasions only,[53] but the "con agudos Pedernales, engeridos por los filos, . . . que dando grandes golpes no se "deshacia; cortaban en lo blando, quanto topaban, pero en lo duro resurtian, como eran "los filos muy delgados"). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXIII). "The first blows alone "were fearful, as the edge soon wore out." (The name "Macuahuitl" may derive from "maitl," hand, and "cuahuitl," tree). The tables accompanying the work of Durán have many representations of the maccuahuitl. The "handle" or hilt is usually formed by a ball or knob, sometimes by a ring.

[51] H. H. Bancroft (Native Races of the Pacific States of N. America. Vol. II, p. 411). If we have not heretofore quoted, and may perhaps not quote hereafter, this splendid compilation, it is merely because we revert to original authorities, and not at all out of disregard for the highly valuable assemblage of data which the distinguished author has furnished to science.

[77] [52] Mr. Bancroft has given a fine illustration of a club used by some of the Indians of the present Republic of Mexico. But among the Mexicans proper, the sword, "maccuahuitl," was the most common and frequently used weapon. Clavigero figures it like the blade of a saw-fish, with teeth; and Tezozomoc calls it "espadarte." But there can be no doubt that the intention of the Indians was to make a continuous blade (or edge), and not a row of teeth. (Along the sea-coast the "proboscis" of the saw-fish may have been used occasionally as a weapon, but it certainly never furnished a type.) The Peruvian "chumpi" was a peculiar weapon, and has nothing analogous elsewhere on this continent. It required both hands to wield it. An illustration of it is found in Herrera, Frontispiece to the fifth Decade, where the portraits of thirteen Yncas are given. Both Manco-Capac and Viracocha each hold a "chumpi" or spear terminating in a broad star, like the "Morgenstern" of the Swiss. Some authors persist in giving to the Mexican sword the name of "macana," but this word is not Mexican. Neither is it Carib. It was imported from the Antilles by the Spaniards, and is probably "arua." Von Tschudi "Peru, Reise-skizzen" (St. Gall, 1846) describes, vol. 2, chap. 7, p. 231, the macana still in use among the wild Indians of the Peruvian "Montañas," East of the Andes. He says: "the sword, macana, is also, like the bow, made out of the hard "chunta. This wood is dark brown, very hard and heavy. The macana is four feet "long, one inch thick, and five to six inches broad; at the handle it is only three inches "wide and rounded, both edges are as sharp as those of a sabre." The same author describes also the club, "matusino," of the same tribes. It is a rough imitation of the "chumpi" of the Incas, deer-prongs taking the places of the metallic star. Its length is about four to five feet. Durán also has drawings of a Mexican club, corresponding to the figure given by Mr. H. H. Bancroft.

[53] These shields, richly ornamented with featherwork, were used at great festivals, at the dances. Illustrations are given in Herrera, Frontispiece to the second Decade, in Clavigero, and especially in the "Raccolta di Mendoza," printed in Lord Kingsborough. They were frequently sent as presents, and among the presents which Cortés received while at Vera-Cruz, Gomara mentions once twenty-four, and again five, of such shields. "Cinco rodelas de pluma y plata," and "veinte y cuatro rodelas de oro y "pluma y aljofar, vistosos y de mucho primor" (Vedia I, p. 223). He distinguishes them from the war-shield which he describes as "una rodela de palo y cuero, y á la re-"donda campanillas de laton morisco, y la capa de una plancha de oro, esculpida en "ella Vitzilopuchtli, dios de las batallas, y en aspa cuatro cabezas con su pluma é pelo, "al vivo y desollado, que eran de leon, de tigre, de aquila, y de un huarro."

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

round, small, "target," worn by the "brave" on his left arm and 714 made of "canes netted together and interwoven with cotton 'two-
"fold,' covered on the outside with gilded boards and with feath"ers, and so strong that a hard cross-bow shot could alone pene-
"trate them . . . ."[54]

With this shield they warded off blows in close combat,[55] and even arrows and darts at full speed. Each warrior probably carried his own shield, although it is sometimes stated that the ar- [726] chers, while shooting, were shielded by others.[56] This, however, would necessarily imply a greater progress of the military art among the Mexicans than we may safely allow.

The remainder of the protective armour of the Mexicans is intimately connected with their costume.

The ordinary dress of a Mexican consisted of a sleeveless jacket 291
("huepil") fastened on the right shoulder, and of the breechcloth 714
("maxtlatl"). The head, arms, and legs from the knees downwards, were bare. A mantle, short among the common Indians, longer among the chiefs, completed the costume.[57] Sometimes 714 they went to war without any other protection, but in most cases the warrior wore a frock of quilted cotton, about three-quarters of

[54] The "anonymous conqueror" (Col. de Doc., Vol. I, p. 373). Compare Torquemada (Lib. IV, cap. XXXI, p. 422), and Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXIII).

[55] See the description of a single combat between a Cempoaltecan and Tlaxcaltecan (Herrera, Dec. II, lib. VI, cap. VI, p. 143, and Torquemada, Lib. IV, cap. XXXI, p. 422).

[56] Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXIII) and the anonymous conqueror both assert, that each warrior had a shield. But Fray G. de Méndieta is still more positive (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 130): "Tras estos llegaban los golpes de espada y rodela, con los cuales iban "arrodelaloe los de arco y flecha, y allí gastaban su almacen." However, Fray Diego Durán says: (Cap. XIV, p. 121) "y llegados á un lugar que llaman Tecuitlatenco, hicie-"ron alto y esperaron la armada de Mexico que venian por la laguna, que eran mill "canoas, muy bien Adereçadas de gente y pauesos con gran numero de flagas y varas "arrojadiças, flechas y rodelas y de hombres para defensa de los flecheros, los quales "estaban tan diestros en desviar flechas con las rodelas, que era espanto, porque en "viéndola venir, luego la danan con la rodela que la echauan à través." This seems to indicate that there were special men detailed to protect the archers, and therefore a division into different arms, although there is no other evidence of such a fact. It may have been the case here, since the fight (against Cuitlahuac) was to take place on water chiefly, but nowhere else do we meet a division into kinds of arms, like archers, spearmen, swordsmen, etc., etc. All Mexican warriors were armed as nearly alike as possible. The Anonymous Conqueror, after mentioning the different weapons, says: "y "molti, ò la maggior parti di esse portano tutte queste sorti di armi con che combattono." ("Relatione, etc.," in Vol. I. of Col. de Doc., p. 374.)

[57] Gomara (Conquista de México. Vedia, Tom. I. p. 440. "Calzan unos zapatos como "alpargatas, punicos por bragas. Visten una manta quadrada, afiudada al hombro "derecho como gitanas"). The Anonymous Conqueror (p. 376. "La maniera del ves-"tire de gli huomini"). Tezozomoc (Crónica, Cap. XXXVI, p. 56. "the macehuals "of lower grade, wore short mantles, plain, of cotton or nequen"). The "maxtlatl" is described by the Anonymous Conqueror as follows: "a towel, like unto a sheet

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

714 an inch thick, up to one and one-half inches, and therefore strong enough to resist an arrow-shot, or even the dart at long range. This was the cotton-armour subsequently adopted by the Spaniards under the name of "Escaupil" ("Ichcahuipilli").[58] Sometimes even the limbs were encased in such quilted armour,[59] and the outside of the "ichcahuipil" was adorned with feathers and plates of gold or silver. The feet were protected by leather soles or moccasin-like shoes ("cactli," "cotaras"), but the use of them was not general.[60] Warriors of merit especially, inserted their heads

[241] "worn over the head while travelling, of various colors, and variously adorned, with "the ends hanging downwards, one in front and the other behind." It was common to the aborigines of Mexico and Central America, and is represented on the sculptures of Palenqué, of Copan, and of Chichen-Itza. The tables of Durán give, perhaps, the most reliable picture of these costumes.

[58] "Ichcahuipilli" derives from "Ichcatl," cotton, and "huepil," jacket. Alvarado, in his second letter to Cortés, dated 28 July, 1524 (Vedia. Vol. I), mentions an ichcahuipil used by Indians of Guatemala, which was three inches thick and reached as far down as the ankle: "porque venian tan armados, que el que caia en el suelo no se po- "dia levantar; y con sus armas cosseletes de tres dedos de algodon, y hasta en los "pies. . . . ." (p. 402.)

[59] There are several representations of such protection of the thighs, and also of the arms, especially in the splendid work of Lord Kingsborough, taken from the Mendoza codex. The entire costume, from the neck to the knee, seems to be of one piece. We have no accurate description, however, of them. It is doubtful whether they terminated into upper "leggings," or whether into a frock-like continuation, reaching from the girdle to the knee. Perhaps both; at least there are traces of both. (Anonymous Conqueror, p. 374. Clavigero, Lib. VII, cap. XXIII.) The absence of the "Ichcahuipil" was not, however, always a sign of low rank. Some warriors of particular merit even went to war almost naked (See Humboldt, "Vues de Cordillières," Tab. XIV, fig. 4), and Herrera (Dec. II, cap. XXI, p. 267, speaking of the natives of Tepeaca, who were subject to Mexico: "and the most valiant ones went only in breech-cloth, painting their naked body black and red"). There was, consequently, no absolute uniformity and uniform distinction in dress and armament, and this was still increased by the variety of customs among the numerous tribes which assisted the Mexicans in war, each tribe having its own manner of dress, and keeping separate on the battlefield. A Mexican army must have been a rather strange, motley crowd. Still there was, in all probability, less variety than among the Peruvian warlike bodies. Of the latter's variegated array the report of Francisco de Xerez, secretary of Pizarro, gives a good illustration (Vedia, vol. II).

[60] "Cactli," corrupted into "catis," is rendered by Molina (II, p. 11) as "shoes, or sandals." Torquemada says (Lib. IV, cap. XVI, p. 430, vol. I): "the King wore "golden shoes, which they call cacles, and are after the fashion of those of the ancient "Romans, adorned with much jewelry, the soles fastened with cords." (Idem: Lib. XI, cap. XXX, p. 305) "they gave to him cotaras or sandals . . . ." Gomara (Conquista, etc., p. 323), in the list of presents sent by Cortés to the Emperor, mentions: "many shoes like so of grass, made of deer-hides, some with golden thread, and the "soles of certain white and blue stones . . . ." "other shoes, six pairs, of leather "of different color, adorned with gold or silver or pearls." The question is, whether they were moccasins or sandals. The sculptures of Palenqué show an approach to either. Durán (Cap. XXVI, p. 214), in speaking of the distinctions of dress, says: "And [242] "thus it was ordained, first: that the Kings should not appear in public, except in ur- "gent cases; that the King alone might wear a crown in the city, but that in war all the "great chiefs and valiant captains might wear crowns also, and royal tahaus . . . .

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

into wooden forms, intermediate between masks and helmets, imitating heads of ferocious beasts like tigers, lions, wolves, also snakes, and covered with the skins of these animals.[61] The principal captains and war-chiefs were distinguished by their wide and long mantles,[62] by the cut and tress of their hair,[63] and by towering bushes of green feathers on the so-called "helmets" protecting the head.[64]

"It was ordained that the King and his coadjutor, Tlacaelel, should alone wear shoes "in the royal house, and that none of the great chiefs might enter the palace with shoes "on, under penalty of death; and they alone could wear shoes in the city, except those "who had distinguished themselves in war, which for their merit, and in token of their "bravery, were permitted to wear light and common sandals, because the gilded and "painted ones belonged to the great chiefs alone." We would suggest that the "cactli" or "cotarras" were half-moccasins, similar to slippers. It is not devoid of interest to notice here, that even the wearing of these articles depended upon actual merit and reputation achieved in war, and not upon wealth or inheritance. War was, indeed, "the life of the tribe."

"Anonymous Conqueror (Col. de Doc., I, p. 373). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXIII). Drawings are found in Clavigero, in the Mendoza Codex, as published by Lord Kingsborough, and in the frontispiece to the 3d Decade of Herrera (Vol. I). It may be that the honorific titles of "daring lions, tigers, and eagles," which have greatly contributed to the supposition of the existence of "military orders," or "orders of chivalry," were based upon the wearing of such costumes by the braves. As already stated, not all the warriors carried such masks or helmets, but our data are too imperfect to enable us to state positively the class or standing of those who wore them.

"Durán (Cap. XXVI, p. 215). "Tambien se determinó que solo el rey pudiese traer "las mantas galanas de labores y pinturas de algodon y hilo de diversas colores y plu-"mada, decadas y labradas con diversas labores y pinturas y diferencialias quando á "él le pareciese, sin aver excepcion en traer y usar las mantas quel quisiese; y los "grandes señores, que eran hasta doce, las mantas de tal y tal labor y hechura, y los "de menos valia, como uviese hecha tal ó tal valencia ó haçaña, otras diferentes; los "soldados, de otra menor labor y hechura, no pudiendo usar de otra preciosa labor ni "diferencia, mas de aquella que allí se le señalaba con sus cañidores y bragueros, que "alcançan y siguien la hechura de la manta que le era permitida. Toda la demas gente, "so pena de la vida, avió determinado que ninguno usase de algodon ni se pusiese "otra manta sino de seguen, y questas mantas no pasasen mas de quantos cubriesen la "rodilla, y si alguno la trujese que llegase á la garganta del pié, fuese muerto, salvo si "no tuviese alguna señal en las piernas de herida que en la guerra le uviesen dado, " . . . . .") Also Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI, p. 36). Here again we find the kind and cut of the mantle, its ornaments determined by the warlike achievements of its bearer.

"Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI, p. 37). Humboldt ("Vues des Cordillères," Vol. I, p. 267). The figure of the Aztec in folio is taken from the Codex Anonymous of the Vatican. Says the Anonymous Conqueror: "To him who distinguished himself in war "they made a mark in the hair, that his prowess might be recognized and seen at once, "since they never wore the head covered" (p. 371). Braids or tresses of hair as well as of leather, were sometimes given as presents, and were. Tezozomoc mentions them frequently, under different names.

"The head-dress, or "divisa."—"tlauizili," or "quetzalpatzactli," is represented on nearly every Mexican painting or picture-leaf. It is also represented on the stone of sacrifice, as adorning the victorious warrior of each group. Its size is generally exaggerated. Gomara (p. 288, Vedia, I) includes in his list of objects sent by Cortés to the Emperor: "a helmet of wood, gold-plated, with jewels in front or outside, and twenty-"five little golden bells, and its crest of a green bird, whose eyes, beak, and feet were

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

714 While we shall, further on, have occasion to recur again to the 287 question of military costume and ornaments; when we treat of 237 the different grades of warriors and captains, it remains to be said here that featherwork, worn as a layer over the "escaupil," played a prominent part in the Mexican armour.[65] It formed an elastic layer on the outside of the quilted jacket, and besides it furnished, through an assemblage of colors peculiar to each sub-division of the force, the "uniform," or, as the Spanish authors call it, the "livery," of that particular sub-division. The Anonymous Conqueror says: "They cover their jackets and breeches "with feathers of various hues, presenting a very good appear-"ance; one company of soldiers has them white and red, others "blue and yellow, and others wear them still different."[66] Bernal-Diez mentions that while fighting on the causeways during the siege of Mexico: "in the morning many captaincies (detach-"ments) would attack us, relieving each other from time to time; [302] "some had one livery and ensign, others had other ones."[67] Such of the warriors as were but scantily clothed painted their naked bodies.[68]

[293] "of gold." Tezozomoc (Cap. LIV, p. 86) gives the following description of the figure of Axayaca, carved out of the rock of Chapultepec, "with hair of precious feathers, "painted of the colors of the bird tlauhquechol . . . ." The bird whose plumage furnished the material was called "quetzal-tototi." It is "Trogon resplendens." (See "San Salvador and Honduras im Jahre 1571," a German translation of the report of Diego Garcia de Palacio, by Dr. A. von Frantzius, of Freiburg, ib.—p. 86, No. 61 note. The notes by the learned translator, as also those of Dr. Berendt, are highly valuable.) The "tlauhquechol" was also used.

[65] Prescott (History of the Conquest of Mexico, 1868, Book I, chap. II, pp. 45, 46, and 47, of Vol. I).

[66] (El Conquistador anónymo) Col. de Doc., Vol. I, p. 372.

[67] "Historia verdadera de la Conquista de Nueva-España" (Cap. CLIII, p. 188, in vol. II. of Vedia).

[68] It is presumable that the colors were those of the detachments to which the warriors belonged. At any rate, it shows that the Mexicans, like the northern Indians, had a special "war-paint." Those of Tepeaca, their allies or subjects, used black and red (Herrera, Dec. II, cap. XXI, p. 267, of Lib. X). Clavigero says (Lib. VII, cap. XXIII): "The common soldiers were naked with the exception of the girdle (maxtlatl), but they "sought to imitate the dress which they lacked, by painting their bodies with various "colors." Further on he adds (Cap. XXIV): "Besides the common flag of the army "each company of two or three hundred men had its own banner, and was, besides, "distinguished by the color of the plumage, which the officers and nobles wore over "their armour." Although this is no direct evidence of the fact, still it tends to intimate that the paint used by the common warriors was in imitation of the featherwork peculiar to their corps. They also painted their faces previous to an engagement: sometimes black. Tezozomoc relates that, on one occasion, Ahuitzotl painted his face yellow ("con un betun amarillo"). His armour was blue (Durán, Cap. XLVI, pp. 371 and 372, "tiñéndose las caras con la tierra divisa, quelles asi llamauan, y el rey Auitzotl vestido de ricas mantas, y debaxo muy bien armado con sus armas azules . ."

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

when the Tenochcas reached the field of battle

they rushed to the attack and took no less than thirty prisoners, from each of whom they detached an ear with their obsidian knives before sending him to the rear. After the battle Coxcox made a speech praising the valor of his forces in taking so many prisoners but denigrating the Tenochcas who came back empty handed. The vassals waited until their lord had finished speaking and then inquired of him why each captive was short an ear. The attention of the Culhuas being riveted to this extraordinary circumstance, the Tenochcas opened their pouches and displayed the missing ears, proving beyond cavil the measure of their prowess. Clearly the war-sacrifice cult had reached the Valley by this time, for the emphasis set on the taking of prisoners indicates that this was one of the chief purposes of war. Furthermore, a drawing shows the later sacrifice of the prisoners, a cult practice the accomplishment of which was to make the Aztecs dreaded by other tribes throughout the length and breadth of Mexico.

So great had the prestige of the Tenochcas become that they went to their lord, Coxcox, and asked for his daughter as a wife for their chief so that they might found a dynasty. Coxcox granted their request, and the Tenochcas were so overcome with gratitude that they sacrificed the luckless girl and draped her skin on a priest to impersonate a nature goddess, Toci. Then with somewhat less than tact they invited the father to the ceremony. He, expecting a marriage celebration, was utterly horrified and summoned his warriors, to exterminate the Tenochcas who forthwith fled to the lake, rejoining their brethren already there.

There were two communities on the islands at the middle of the fourteenth century: Tenochtitlan, which seems to

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

555 finely graded scale of social eminence. (See Plates 33–36.)

425 A married man received a plot of land directly from the 511 clan or else took over his father's fields if the latter were too old to work. Diligent husbandry, eked out by making stone tools, pottery or practicing some such craft for barter, could produce a good living. Unmarried men helped their fathers and were able to add to their prestige by taking part in the numerous military campaigns.

[721] Since the capture of victims for sacrifice was the chief 555 glory of war, an able soldier who could subdue his enemies and drag them to the rear received much honor. According to the number of captives taken, a warrior had the right to wear an increasingly elaborate costume. Consistently success-
[575] ful warriors could enter an order, like the Knights of the Eagle or the Ocelot (often referred to as Tiger), which performed special dances and rituals. Sometimes a warrior of unusual prowess received additional grants of land or more often obtained an increased portion of the clan's share of tribute. Having reached an established position by this means, he had a more important voice in clan councils and might attain a seat in the council itself. A special honorific, tecuhtli [654] (grandfather), which corresponds to chief among the North American Indians, distinguished these men. The title signified high social, but not official, rank, and from these men who had distinguished themselves by probity, bravery and religious observance, high elective and appointive posts were filled.*

624 In this stratum there were many positions of honor and influence, which, like petty political offices in small North American towns, were held in connection with some other means of livelihood. There were officials who kept order in the markets and tribunals which settled disputes in clan

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

have been an important religious center in Middle Culture times. However, neither trade nor religion broke down the sense of communal and political independence in Central Mexico. (See Plate 35, Fig. 2.)

Foreign relations centered around war, which, we have seen, was an important part of Aztec economy and religion. The same confusion of motives that we find in our modern culture affected the reasons for military action. We wage war for economic, territorial and political advantages and, while condemning the practice in our adversaries, justify our own participation by saying that we are fighting for freedom, to liberate someone, to extend civilization or to ensure peace. Soldiers on our own side are brave and attain glory, preserve our social virtues and sacrifice themselves for the public well-being. Those on the other side are aggressors, agents of evil and cowardly knaves. The Aztecs made war for defense, revenge and economic motives, which were inextricably confused with the need for the sacrificial victims requisite for proper adoration of their gods. Thus in warfare the great aim was to take captives, but behind this religious goal lurked the less holy urges of political and economic expediency.

The captive himself attained social status, since he went to a special warrior's heaven. A redoubtable Tlaxcalan chief, named Tlahuicol, was singled out for sacrifice to the sun and fought so successfully with his dummy weapons that he killed some of his adversaries and wounded a number of the others. He was pardoned and offered a chieftaincy in the Tenochcan army. Tlahuicol, however, rejected his pardon and gladly underwent sacrifice for the greater honor and glory in that death. This story illustrates the attitude of the individual warrior, which is not unlike that of the mediaeval knight or career soldier in our own culture.[8]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The Aztec reasons for fighting and their social and moral sanctions for war were not so very different from our own, except that we have many more, due to our superior rationalizations. The Aztec military technique, however, was definitely inferior, since it was not so completely developed a social tool as it is our own culture. The basic organization of the army required the participation of every able-bodied man under the direction of the war chief. However, as Aztec society grew more intricate and greater numbers of warriors took the field, the military structure became more rigid.

The unit of organization was an aggregation of twenty men, several of which were combined into larger bodies of two to four hundred, roughly corresponding to our platoons and companies. Special detachments of from four to six men, who did scouting and raiding, operated much as do the squads of our own military system. The clan commander marshaled the larger bodies, much as a colonel handles his regiment. The clan troops were banded together in four divisions under the heads of the four municipal quarters, and the tribal war chiefs had the supreme command. In a very numerous army the troops from a given quarter, or barrio, were sometimes divided into brigades, composed of the forces from two or three clans.[8]

The high tribal officers, the war chief, the chiefs of the quarters and the clan chiefs commanded the larger bodies. The ordinary chiefs and members of the warrior orders, the Knights of the Eagle and the Tiger and of a third infrequently mentioned order, the Arrow, according to their particular ability, took over the lesser units. In other words,

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

723 648 pation in trade and booty far in excess of the apparent size and importance of the town.[11] (See map, end papers; Plates 41, top; 42, top; 43.)

721 The purely economic and military aspects of war are as crude, when judged by our modern technical standards, as the rest of the purely mechanical aspects of Aztec life. On the other hand, the ritualistic conception of war as the earthly re-enactment of the titanic struggle between opposing forces in nature has a quality almost sublime. The political and economic frictions that brought about conflict were welcomed by the warriors as an opportunity to vibrate to the deep rhythms of nature, rhythms which met in a celestial antiphony in the Sacred War which the Sun fights each day as he, by his own death and sacrifice, ensures the life of man.

721 796 The War of Flowers was undertaken to satisfy this yearning when no active campaign was in progress. In this incongruously named ceremonial combat the best warriors from several states met in a very real battle, so that feats of arms could be accomplished and captives taken to satisfy the hunger of the gods. One famous War of Flowers was repeated for several years, and the cream of the fighting men of Texcoco, Tenochtitlan and Tlacopan vied with the might of Cholula, Huexotcingo and Tlaxcala. If a warrior were captured he met the most glorious of deaths in direct sacrifice to the Sun. If he lived he gained renown. If he were slain, he [775] was cremated, an honor reserved only for fighting men and passed on to the special heaven where warriors dwell.[12]

726 Such warfare had no place in a conflict with Europeans, but, when reduced to fighting for their bare lives against the Spaniards, the Aztecs put up one of the most desperate de-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Paying only the most cursory attention to this pious little /74 scene, knots of chiefs were converging on a large building at 721 ● a corner of the plaza. The war chief, Montezuma, was plan- 644 ning an attack on a neighboring town, remiss in its tribute payment, so there must be a gathering of clan leaders to prepare for war. Adorned with helmets like the heads of jaguars, eagles and wolves, girt with armor of wadded cotton brocaded in many colors or embroidered with feathers, their faces set with nose and lip ornaments of jade and gold, these fierce-visaged chiefs passed proudly through the door, but in an anteroom to the council chamber they stripped off their ornaments. Then bareheaded and barefoted, with down- [643] cast eyes, they made their way to the throne, where sat the slim figure of Montezuma, simply dressed but for the gold crown and jade earrings of his exalted office. (See Plate 33.)

The austerity of the council chamber was not borne out /74
by Montezuma's other apartments, which contained all the 644 appurtenances of a sybaritic potentate. The war chief's two wives and his many concubines occupied magnificent quarters. Kitchens and storehouses were spread over another great space, for not only were there some three hundred guests served at each meal but also a thousand guards and attendants. In contrast to the profusion within, outside the kitchen door squatted patiently a threadbare group of countrymen from whose carrying bags swayed the mottled heads of the trussed turkeys which they had brought as offerings for the royal larder.

Other rooms in Montezuma's palace contained the tribal treasure, composed of the tribute wrung from many towns. Gold, jade, rich feather mantles, baskets of produce, were heaped in abundance. Clerks were listing the goods in pic-

The Thirteenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they called ce izcuintli, [which] they said was the sign of fire, they held a great festival in honor of Xiuhtecutli, god of fire. In it they offered him much copal [incense] and many quail. They arrayed his image in many kinds of papers and with many rich adornments. Among the rich and powerful, they celebrated a great feast in honor of the fire, in their own houses; they held dinners and banquets in honor of the fire. In this same sign they held elections of lords and consuls, and in the fourth house of this sign they enacted the formalities of their elections, ixtas, dances, and gift [giving]. After these feasts, they forthwith proclaimed war against their foes.

La treszena fiesta mouible.

En el signo que llamauan ce izcuintli: dezian que era el signo del fuego: hazian gran fiesta a honrra de xiuhtecutli, dios del fuego: en ella le ofrecian mucho copal, y muchas codornizes: componjan su ymagen, con muchas maneras de papeles, y con muchos ornamentos ricos: entre las personas ricas y podcrosas, hazian gran fiesta, a honrra del fuego, en sus mjsmas casas, hazian combites, y vaiquetes, a honrra del fuego. En este mjsmo signo: hazian la eleccion de los señores y consules, y en la quarta casa deste sino: hazian la solēnjdad, de sus elecciones, combites, y areytos, y dones. Despues destas fiestas apregonauan luego la guerra contra sus enemigos.

796x [314] [289 774] [565] [666 431] 721

The Fourteenth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce atl, in the first house of this sign, they celebrated a feast to the goddess of water, named Chalchihuhtli icue. All those who dealt in water celebrated the festival—those who sold water, as well as those who fished, and those who gained other livelihoods which there are in the water. These arrayed her image and laid offerings before her, and reverenced her in the house called calpulli.

La catorzena fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce atl: en la primera casa deste signo, hazian fiesta, a la diosa del agua llamada chalchiuhtli ycue: hazian la fiesta, todos los que tratauan en el agua: assi vendiendo el agua, como pescando, como haziendo otras gragerias, que ay en el agua. Estos componjan su ymagen, y la ofrecian, y reuerenciauan, en la casa llamada Calpulli.

[776] [463]

The Fifteenth Common Movable Feast

The lords, leading men, nobles, and rich merchants, when a son or daughter was born to them, paid much heed to the sign, the day, and the hour in which he was born. And of this they forthwith set out to inform the judicial astrologers, and to ask as to the good fortune or ill of the child who was born. And if the sign in which he was born was propitious, they had him baptized at once; and if it was adverse they sought the most favorable house of that sign [in which] to baptize him. When they baptized him, they banqueted the kinsmen and friends, so that they would be present at the baptism, and then they gave food and drink to all the guests, and also to the children of the whole suburb. They baptized him at sunrise in the house of his father. The midwife baptized him, uttering many prayers and performing much ceremony over the child. This [same] feast they also observe today in the baptism of their children, as to feasting, eating, and drinking.

Lā quinzena decima fiesta mouible comū.

Los señores, y principales, nobles, y mercaderes, ricos quando les nacia algun hijo o hija; tenjan gran cuēta con el signo en que nacia; y el dia, y la hora en que nacia: y desto yuan luego a ynformar a los astrologos, judiciarios: y a pregantar por la fortuna buena o mala de la criatura que nacia. Y si el signo, en que nacia era prospero, luego le hazian baptizar, y si era aduerso buscauan la mas prospera casa de aquel signo para le baptizar. Quando le baptizauan, combidauan a los parientes, y amigos: para que se hallassen presentes al baptismo: y entonce dauan comjda, y beujda, a todos los presentes, y tambien a los njños, de todo el barrio: baptizauanle, a la salida del sol, en casa de su padre, baptizauale la partera, diziendo muchas oraciones: y haziendo mucha ceremonja sobre la criatura. Esta fiesta, tambien la vsan agora, en los baptismos de sus hijos, en quanto al combidar, y comer, y beber.

777 787 565 852 [759]

The Sixteenth Movable Feast

As soon as the parents saw that their son was of La setzena decima fiesta mouible.

Despues los padres viau que su hijo era de edad para

584

643 701 the seasoned warriors, the fearless warriors, the Otomí, and the noblemen who dwelt in the young men's houses.

721 And when it had come to pass that the ruler adorned them, when he had done this to the brave warriors, then the ruler ordered all the majordomos to bear their goods, all the costly devices, and all the valuable capes there to battle, that the ruler might offer and endow with favors all the [other] rulers, and the noblemen, and the brave warriors, the men [at arms] who were about to go to war, who were to be extended as if made into a wall of men dexterous with arms. And the ruler forthwith called upon the rulers of Texcoco and Tlacopan and the rulers in all the swamp lands, and notified them to proclaim war in order to destroy a [certain] city. He presented them all with costly capes, and he gave them all insignia of great price. Then he also ordered the common folk[2] to rise to go forth to war. Before them would go marching the brave warriors, the men [at arms], the lord general, and the commanding general.

726 The lords of the sun, it was said, took charge and directed in war. All the priests, the keepers of the gods, took the lead; they bore their gods upon their backs, and, by the space of one day, marched ahead of all the brave warriors and the seasoned warriors. These also marched one day ahead of all the warriors of Tenochtitlan. Again these marched one day ahead of all the warriors of Tlatilulco. These also marched one day ahead of all the men of Acolhuacan, who likewise marched one day ahead of all the Tepaneca, who similarly marched one day ahead of the men of Xilotepec; and these also marched one day ahead of all the so-called Quaquasa. In like manner the [men of] other cities were disposed. They followed the road slowly and carefully.

And when the warlike lands[3] were reached, the brave warrior generals and commanding generals then showed the others the way and arranged them in order. No one might break ranks or crowd in [687] among the others; they would then and there slay or beat whoever would bring confusion or crowd in among the others. All the warriors were extended there, until the moment that Yacatoitzli, [god of] the night, would descend—that darkness would fall.

tiacahoan, in oqujchtin, in tequjoaque, in quaquachicti, in otomj: ioan in telpuchnemj in pipilti.

auh in ic iuhquj, in otecencauh tlatoanj, in tiacauh, in iuh oqujchiuh. Niman qujnnaoatia, in tlatoanj: in jxqujchtin calpixque, injc intlatquj ietiaz; in jxqujch tlaçotlanquj, tlaujztli: ioan in jxqujch tlaçotilmatli, in vmpa iauc, in qujnmacaz, in qujntlauhtiz, in tlatoanj: In jxqujchtin tlatoque, ioan in pipilti, ioan in tiacahoan, in oqujchtin in iauteoatoque, in iuhquj oçelotenanti, quauhtenanti mochiuhtoque: ioan in tlatoanj, achto qujnnotza in tlatoanj tetzcuco, ioan tlacopan: ioan in jxqujch chinanpanecatl in tlatoque, qujncaqujtia, injc iautlatoa, injc poliujz ce altepetl: qujntlauhtia, in jxqujch tlaçotilmatli, ioan qujnmaca, in jxqujch tlaçotlanquj tlaujztli. Niman no ic qujnnaoatia: in jxqujch in jmaçeoal, injc iauqujçatiuh: impan hicatiuj in tiacaoan, in oqujchtin, in tlacochcalcatl tecutli, ioan tlacateccatl, tonatiuh itlatocahoan mjtoaia, qujiacana in qujujca iauc, iacattiuj in ixqujchtin tlamacazque, in teupixque, qujnmama in jntevoan cemjlhujtl qujmjtztiuj, in ixqujchtin tiacahoan, in tequjoaque, no cemjlhujtl qujmjtztiuj, in jxqujch iauqujzquj in tenochcatl, no cemjlhujtl qujmjtztiuj, in jxqujch iauqujzquj tlatilulcatl: no cemjlhujtl qujmjtztiuj, in jxqujch aculhoacatl: no cemjlhujtl qujtztiuj, in jxqujch tepanecatl, no cemjlhujtl qujtztiuj, ixilotepecatl: no cemjlhujtl q'mjtztiuj, in jxqujch moquataitoa: çan no iuj in oc cequj altepetl, motetecpana, iujian, iocuxca, in otlatoca.

Auh in jcoac, oazioac teuatenpan, tlachinoltempan, in iehoantin tiacaoan tlatlacuchcalca, tlatlacatecca njman teamaca, tetecpana, aiac vel tepanauja, aiac vel tetlan quiça, çan njmon vncã qujnmjctia, qujntujujtzquj, in aquja tlaxnelozzequj: tetlan quiçazzequj, in oommotea ixqujch iauqujzquj, in ic inman in oealhuetz acsujztli, in tlaioalli injc tlaioalcujoaz: auh in jcoac ic itech nequetzaloz, in altepetl poliujz, achto oc cenca mochiia in tletl, in quemman cae-

2. The corresponding Spanish passage reads: "Mandaua luego, a los calpixques, que llamauan arriaz, a todos los principales, para el, y para sus soldados; y enviaua la mesma a sus gentes, y los dauaa armas."

3. Tlaxnelozzequj, doubtful translation; cf. Sahagún, op. cit., II, p. 105 (lugares para la guerra solitarios), and p. 109 (los lugares de los desiertos).

and finally all the people of the uplands and those of the swamp lands."[4]

And Moctezuma said to them: "You have tired yourselves; you have suffered affliction, O men dexterous in war. Rest yourselves. [But] perhaps you only fool me. Let me still behold the truth of your account."

And then he confined them. If the report which they had made were not true, Moctezuma jailed them and did away with them

And there in battle was when captives were taken. When it had come to pass that they went against and conquered the city, then the captives were counted, there, in wooden cages: how many had been taken by Tenochtitlan, how many had been taken by Tlatilulco, and by the people of the swamp lands and the people of the dry lands everywhere. The captives were examined [to determine] how many groups of four hundred were formed.

Those who counted were the generals and the commanding generals. And then they sent messengers here to Mexico. Those who were sent as messengers were seasoned warriors, who informed Moctezuma of the great veracity of the four-hundred count. They brought word of how many groups of four hundred had been made captive.

And then they declared to him how many of the noblemen had won their reward for having made captives; that haply a number [of them] had had their hair shorn as seasoned warriors, or that some [had been made] leaders of the youths. When Moctezuma heard this, he rejoiced exceedingly, because his noblemen had taken captives. And at that time he freed those whom he had cast in jail—the victory messengers—and he gave them gifts along with the others.

And if war should be proclaimed against Atlixco, or Uexotzinco, and if there once again they took captives, they won much glory thereby; Moctezuma accorded them great honor for it. For his noblemen had taken captives, and had gained repute, and had reached the station of nobility—the estate of the eagle and the ocelot warriors. From there they came to rule, to govern cities; and at that time they seated them with [the nobility], and they might eat with Moctezuma.

565
868
701

Auh quimjlhujaia in moteçuma, oanquijçiauhque, oanquijhjoujque in oçeloquichtle: ximotlalican aço çan annechiztlacahuja, ma oc njcchia in jneltica tlatolli:

[687]

auh njman quimoncaltzaqua intlacamo melaoac tlatolli oquicaquitique moteçuma quintlatlatia quinpopoloa.

727

Auh in vmpa iauc in iquac otlamaloc, in ic ihuqui in oia in oompoliuh, altepetl, njman ic mocempoa in mamalti, in vncan oacaltitla quezquj oaxioac in tenochtitlã, quezquj oaxioac in tlatilulco, auh inic noujian cenchinanpanecatl, centlalhoacpanecatl, mocemjtta in mamalti quezquitzontli omuchiuh.

[202
701]

Jehoantin tlapoa in tlatlacochcalca, in tlatlacatecca: auh njman ic oallatitlanj, in njcan mexico, in oalmotitlanj iehoantin in tetequjoaque, in quioalnonotzã motecuçuma, in ie uel imelaoaca in jcentzontecca, in quioalitquj tlatolli, in quezquitzontli omochiuh malli:

auh in quimelauiliaia in quezquintin otlacnopilhuique in pipilti in otlamaque, aço cequintin motequioacaxima anoce cequintin telpuchiacati. Jn quicaquia in motecuçuma cenca ic papaquia ipampa ca ipilhoan in ootlamaque: auh quinjquac quinquiztiaia, in quincaltzaquaia in tequipan titlanti quimõtehoan motlatlauhtia.

[431]

721 ●
729
727

Auh intla oalmjtus iauiotl in atlixco, aço vexotzinco, intla oc ceppa vmpa tlamazque, cenca ic vel panuetzi, ic cenca uel quimmauiztilia in motecuçuma: ipampa ca ipilhoan in ootlamaque, in onmoteniotique in oconmjiaoaiotique in pillotl in quauhiotl, in oceloiotl, ic oncan in quiça in tlatocati, in quipachoa altepetl, auh quinjquac intlan quintlalia: ytlan tlaqua in motecuçuma

4. Chimalpanecatl: Sahagún's comment on fol. 53 of Book X of the Florentine Codex is descriptive: "y he de la figura mas, que son los consejeros de los chimalpanecas."

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

Appendix C

Continuation of the Twenty-first Chapter[1]

. . . He alternated [his lip plugs] when he fitted them in. And [Moctezuma gave him] his head band [with two tufts] of eagle feathers [ornamented] with obsidian knives fashioned of gold, and his cape with, perhaps, the serpent mask design, or the earthen vessel fashioned of feathers, or the ocelot cape with a red border; and a breech clout with long ends, having either the eagle claw or the market place design.

At that time he acquired new sandals—not embroidered nor cut according to a pattern, but black, with their thongs of either orange or red leather. And when he went to the palace, he put the sandals on in order to go along the road. He went receiving great honors, because he was Moctezuma's chieftain. He proceeded with much acclaim. And when he reached the Eagle Gate he drew off the sandals which he had put on; he was no longer shod when he entered the royal palace, where were the great men dexterous in arms, the war leaders.

And also at that time he won the title known as general or commanding general. If the general or commanding general were to die, then [another] would be chosen and selected [from among] those who had been made their deputies. They said that they had become lords of the sun.

And all the seasoned warriors, who had entered the field of battle, all these Moctezuma rewarded. When the Feast of Tlacaxipehualiztli was celebrated, he gave each of them four pieces of black cloth, each eight measures broad. And likewise he gave the leaders of the youths the cape of scorpion design with a striped, orange border and the carmine colored breech clout with the wind jewel design at the ends.

And [as for] those whom we knew to be seasoned war leaders and leaders in the fray, then started [the custom] that Moctezuma [had] the hair of those who were chieftains cut as shown ones or as Otomí [warriors].

When and wherever war was proclaimed, always they remained guarding and paying heed to

. . . q'papatla y' çaço catleuatl conaquiz. auh in iquauhchalpiaya coztic teocuitlatl in itecpayo. auh in itilma, aço couazayacayo, anoço yuitica tehtecomayo, anoço ocelotentlapalli in q'maca. motecuiçoma yuã mastlatl yacauiac aço quauhiztio, anoço tianquiztli omõtiuh i mastlatl. 701 293 [431]

yquac yancuicã quicui in cactli, amo tlahmachyo amo cuicuiltic çan tliltic. in icuetlasmecayo aço uitzteculli. anoço chichiltic cuetlastli. auh in iquac ye yauh tecpã ommocactia inic ohtli q'toca. cenca momauizçotitiuh ypampa ca ytiacauh im motecuiçoma. cẽca motlcyotitiuh. Auh i ye onaci quauhquiauac quicopina in icac quitlalia aoc momocactia inic calaqui tecpan tlahtoca in ompa cate uehuey quauhti, uehuey ocelome i yaotachcaua. [576]

Auh no yquac quimahcua in tocaitl im mitoua tlacochcalcatl. anoço tlacatecatl. intla miquiz tlacochcalcatl anoço tlacatecatl yquac ano pepenalo. yeuantin ym ixiptlayouã mochiuaya. quihtouaya ytlahtocatl mochiua in tonatiuh.

Auh in iequichtin i yaotequiuaqz i yaotitlancalaqz i ye mochintin in q'tlauhtiaya motecuiçoma. yquac in tequiçquistiloya in tlacaxipeualiztli in q'mmacaya tilpuputlauac chichicuec çotl nanauhmaca. auh no yui in tetpochiaqz in q'mmacaya camopalihuauanq' colotlalpili nochpolmastlatl yacayecaconcayo. [431]

Auh i yeuantin i in otiq'tlemeuhqz i yaoequaqz i yaotachcatl. oncã quiçaya in q'nquachicximaya. motecuiçoma anoço quimotlximaya. in tiacauã catca. [302]

in iquac çaçocampa ualmiouaya yaoyotl çã mochipa quichiuiczz quipopouhticzz in iuquauhyo in 701 721

1. See ending of Chapter 21, above.

701 their estate as men dexterous in war, as men of valor,
721 as chieftains. Thus none, when they went, might take account that they might die. [For] if war were not proclaimed, if they were not to go off to die, none might know for how much time they might live. And if war were proclaimed, then set forth together the assembled men of Mexico. The generals and the commanding generals led them. When they reached the place which they were to conquer, upon the next day they disposed them in battle array.

726 And there on the battlefield went the shorn ones
687 in pairs. The Otomí [warriors] also went in pairs. If one of the shorn ones died in the fray and if the other of the shorn ones turned tail, then Moctezuma [had an official] take after him. No more might he enter the Eagle House; they kept him shut away in his [own] house. Of no further use was he. And they suspended the shorn one. And in the same way they exacted penalty of Otomí [warriors] if one of them died [in battle] and if the other fled. They took after him; they suspended him as chieftain. And also they deprived him of rank if he showed fear.

All with which they had bedight him—the precious capes and costly breech clouts—no longer could he assume. He might put on only a poor maguey fiber cape or a wretched yucca fiber cape, as he deserved.

701 And perhaps in a year or two [Moctezuma] re-431 membered him, sought him out, and drew him from 643 his home. And when he went before Moctezuma, thereupon he gave him again the devices, perhaps [ornamented] with quetzal feathers or with gold. Then [the ruler] gave him gifts; he presented him a bundle of capes, and provided him with grains of maize—he gave him a canoe full of maize grains; and he provided him with chia—he weighed out two large measures of chia. And thereafter once again he placed himself among [those in] the Eagle House, because he merited once more assuming all the costly capes and breech clouts and all the honors which were his.

701 And if, as a shorn one, or as an Otomí [warrior], 726 he were to take a captive there at Atlixco or at Uexotzinco, much was Moctezuma's heart gladdened thereby. And all the lords were happy because of it; they were pleased and rejoiced therefor, that those who were shorn ones or Otomí [warriors] had taken captives: because men dexterous in war had surrounded [the foe].

imoceloyo inic oquichti inic tiacauh. inic ayac ỹ uini ça quipopoohtinemi in immiquiz. im ma uehcihco yaoyotl im ma ommiquiti ma oce ontlamati in oc quesquich cauitl nemiqz. auh intla oualmihto yaoyotl nimã ommolini i ye ixtlacatl mexicatl. in teyacana tlatlacochcalca. tlatlacatecca in oacito in ẽpa tepeuazqz. oc ommihuipã i yautecca.

auh i ye ompa yaoc. ommettitini in quequachicti. no ommettitini. in otomi. intla ce oyaomic quachic. intla oc ce ualmocuepa quachiqz. niman ic quitohtocaya i motecoçoma. aocmo calaqz in ẽuhcali. ça iccen quicallatiaya. aocca moneqz. auh q'caualtiaya inic quachic. Auh çan ye no iuh q'ntlatzacuiltiaya in otomi intla çan no ce omic intla oc ce ualmocuepa. quitohtoca quicaualtia inic tiacauh. auh no quicaualtia inic otlamamauhtiaya.

in isquich in itech oq'tlaliaya in tlaçotilmahtli. in tlaçomastlatl. aoc tle quicui. ça ichtilmahtzintli. anoço iccotilmahtzintli. in q'mulpilia. inic quitlamahcualmacaya.

auh in quilnamiquia aço ce xiuitl anoço ẽxiuitl. in quitemoua. ychan in q'ualanaya. auh in ẽya ispã motecuiçoma. nimã ye ic q'ualmaca in tlauiztli aço quetzallo. anoço teocuitlayo. niman quitlauhtia cen q'milli in q'maca tilmath. yuã quitlaohtia cem acalli in q'maca tlaolli yuan quichientia. aço ontetl y ucy tzincopinq' ic q'tamachiua chien. auh quã ye no ceppa yquac tetlan motlalia in ẽuhcali. ypampa ca ontlamalceuh oc ceppa mochi q'cui in tlaçotilmahtli in tlaçomastlatl. in isq'ch ytech poui in imauizaço.

Auh intla yquachicyo intla yxtõyo ypan otlama in ompa atlixco anoço uexotzinco oc cenca ic pequi in iyollo motecuiçoma. yuan in isquichrin tlahueqz ic papaqz ic motlamachtiaya ic ahauiaya. in oppan tlamahqz isquachicyo in imoõyo. ỹpãpa ca oquimiauayotino in quauhyotl in occloyotl.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

648 them as brothers. As other great Caciques had given their 717 obedience to His Majesty, it would be well that they should give theirs as the others had done.

They replied that we had hardly entered into their country, yet we already ordered them to give up their Teules (for so they called their Idols), and that they could 648 not do it. As to giving their obedience to our King, they were content to do so. And thus they pledged their word, but it was not done before a notary. When this was over we at once began our march towards the City, and so great was the number of people who came out to see us that both the streets and house tops were crowded, and I do not wonder at this for they had never seen men such as we are, nor had they ever seen horses.

They lodged us in some large rooms where we were all together with our friends from Cempoala and the Tlaxcalans who carried the baggage, and they fed us on that day and the next very well and abundantly. I will stop here and go on to say what else happened.

CHAPTER LXXXIII.

How, at the orders of Montezuma, they had planned to kill us in the City of Cholula, and what happened about it.

721 AFTER the people of Cholula had received us in the festive manner already described, and most certainly with [a show of] good will, it presently appeared that Montezuma sent orders to his ambassadors, who were still in our company, to negotiate with the Cholulans that an army of 20,000 men which Montezuma had sent and equipped, should on entering the city, join with them in attacking us by night or by day, get us into a hopeless plight,[1] and bring all of us that they could [capture] bound to Mexico. And he 721 sent grand promises together with many presents of jewels and cloths, also a golden drum, and he also sent word to the priests of the city that they were to retain twenty of [782] us to sacrifice to their idols.

[1] Acapillasen; literally, place us in chapel, i.e., the place where those condemned to death spend their last night.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

All was in readiness and the warriors whom Montezuma 725 quickly sent were stationed in some ranchos and some rocky thickets about half a league from Cholula and some were already posted within the houses, and all had their arms ready for use, and had built up breastworks on the Azoteas and had dug holes and ditches in the streets so as to impede the horsemen, and they had already filled some houses with long poles and leather collars and cords with which they were to bind us and lead us to Mexico; but our Lord God so ordained that all their plots should be turned against them.

Let us leave this now and go back to say that when, 721
as I have said, they had taken us to our quarters they fed us very well for the first two days, and although we saw them so peacefully inclined, we never gave up our good custom of keeping fully prepared, and on the third day they neither gave us anything to eat nor did any of the Caciques or priests make their appearance, and if any Indians came to look at us, they did not approach us, but remained some distance off, laughing at us as though mocking us. When our Captain saw this, he told our interpreters Doña Marina and Jerónimo de Aguilar to tell the Ambassadors of the Great Montezuma, who remained with us, to order the Caciques to bring some food, but all they brought was water and fire wood, and the old men who brought it said that there was no more maize.

That same day other Ambassadors arrived from Montezuma, and joined those who were already with us and they said to Cortés, very impudently, that their Prince had

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

•721 sent them to say that we were not to go to his city because he had nothing to give us to eat, and that they wished at once to return to Mexico with our reply. When Cortés saw that their speech was unfriendly, he replied to the Ambassadors in the blandest manner, that he marvelled how such a great Prince as Montezuma should be so vacillating, and he begged them not to return to Mexico, for he wished to start himself on the next day, to see their Prince, and act according to his orders, and I believe that he gave the Ambassadors some strings of beads and they agreed to stay.

When this had been done, our Captain called us together, and said to us—"I see that these people are very much disturbed, and it behoves us to keep on the alert, in case some trouble is brewing among them," and he at once sent for the principal Cacique, whose name I now forget, telling him either to come himself or to send some other chieftains. The Cacique replied that he was ill and could not come.

721 When our Captain heard this, he ordered us to bring 743 before him, with kindly persuasion, two of the numerous priests who were in the great Cue,* near our quarters. We brought two of them, without doing them any disrespect, and Cortés ordered each of them to be given a chalchihuite, which are held by them to be as valuable as emeralds, and addressing them with friendly words he asked them what was the reason that the Cacique and chieftains and most of the priests were frightened, for he had sent to summon them and they did not want to come. It seems that one of these priests was a very important personage among them, who had charge of or command over all the Cues in the City, and was a sort of Bishop among the priests and was held in great respect. He replied that they, who were priests, had no fear of us, and if the Cacique and chieftain did not wish to come, he would go himself and summon them, and that if he spoke to them he

* [i.e., temple pyramid.—Analyst]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721 believed they would do as he told them and would 783 come.

Cortés at once told him to go, and that his companion should await his return. So the priests departed and summoned the Cacique and chieftains who returned in his 721 company to Cortés' quarters. Cortés asked them, through our interpreters, what it was they were afraid of, and why they had not given us anything to eat, and said that if our presence in their city were an annoyance to them, we wished to leave the next day for Mexico to see and speak to the Lord Montezuma, and he asked them to provide carriers for the transport of the baggage and tepusques (which are the cannon) and to send us some food at once.

The Cacique was so embarrassed that he could hardly speak, he said that they would look for the food, but their Lord Montezuma had sent to tell them not to give us any, and was not willing that we should proceed any further.

721 While this conversation was taking place, three of our 725 friends, the Cempoala Indians, came in and said secretly to Cortés, that close by where we were quartered they had found holes dug in the streets, covered over with wood and earth, so that without careful examination one could not see them, that they had removed the earth from above one of the holes and found it full of sharp pointed stakes to kill the horses when they galloped, and that the Asoteas had breastworks of adobes[1] and were piled up with stones, and certainly this was not done with good intent for they also found barricades of thick timbers in another street. At 721 this moment eight Tlaxcalans arrived, from the Indians
782 whom we had left outside in the fields with orders that they were not to enter Cholula, and they said to Cortés—

[1] Sun-dried bricks.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721 "Take heed, Malinche, for this City is ill disposed, and we 782 know that this night they have sacrificed to their Idol, which is the God of War, seven persons, five of them children, so that the God may give them victory over you, and we have further seen that they are moving all their baggage and women and children out of the city." When 721 Cortés heard this, he immediately sent these Tlaxcalans back to their Captains, with orders to be fully prepared if we should send to summon them, and he turned to speak to the Cacique, priests and chieftains of Cholula and told them to have no fear and show no alarm, but to remember the obedience which they had promised to him, and not to swerve from it, lest he should have to chastise them. That he had already told them that we wished to set out on the morrow and that he had need of two thousand[1] warriors from the city to accompany us, just as the Tlaxcalans had provided them, for they were necessary on the road. They
721 replied that the men would be given, and asked leave to go 723 at once to get them ready, and they went away very well contented, for they thought that between the warriors with whom they were to supply us, and the regiments sent by Montezuma, which were hidden in the rocky thickets and barrancas, we could not escape death or capture, for the horses would not be able to charge on account of certain breastworks and barricades which they immediately advised the troops to construct, so that only a narrow lane would be left through which it would be impossible for us to pass. They warned the Mexicans to be in readiness as we intended to start on the next day and told them that they were going to give us two thousand[2] warriors to accompany us, so that as we marched along, off our guard, between the two forces our capture would

---

[1] "Blotted out "three or four."—G. G.

[2] Blotted out "four."—G. G.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

be sure and they would be able to bind us, and this they might look on as a certainty, for they [the Cholulans] had made sacrifices to their War Idols who had promised them victory. 721 723

Let us cease speaking of this which they looked on as a sure thing and return to our Captain who, as he wished to be more thoroughly informed about the plot and all that was happening, told Doña Marina to take more chalchihuites to the two priests who had been the first to speak, for they were not afraid, and to tell them with friendly words that Malinche wished them to come back and speak to him, and to bring them back with her. Doña Marina went and spoke to the priests in the manner she knew so well how to use, and thanks to the presents they at once accompanied her. Cortés addressed them and asked them to say truly what they knew, for they were the priests of Idols and chieftains and ought not to lie, and that what they should say would not be disclosed in any manner, for we were going to leave the next morning, and he would give them a large quantity of cloth. They said the truth was that their Lord Montezuma knew that we were coming to their city, and that every day he was of many minds and could not come to any decision on the matter, that sometimes he sent to order them to pay us much respect when we arrived and to guide us on the way to his city, and at other times he would send word that it was not his wish that we should go to Mexico, and now recently his [Gods] Tescatepuca and Huichilobos, to whom he paid great devotion, had counselled him that we should either be killed here in Cholula or should be sent, bound, to Mexico. That the day before he had sent out twenty thousand warriors, and half of them were already within this city and the other half were stationed near by in some gullies, and that they already knew that we were about to start to-morrow; they also 721 [787]

11:Diaz T.H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

•72| told us about the barricades which they had ordered to be made and the two thousand warriors that were to be given to us, and how it had already been agreed that twenty of us were to be kept to be sacrificed to the Idols of Cholula.

Cortés ordered these men to be given a present of richly embroidered cloth, and told them not to say anything [about the information they had given us] for, if they disclosed it, on our return from Mexico we would kill them. He also told them that we should start early the next morning, and he asked them to summon all the Caciques to come then so that he might speak to them.

That night Cortés took counsel of us as to what should be done, for he had very able men with him whose advice was worth having, but as in such cases frequently happens, some said that it would be advisable to change our course and go by Huexotzingo, others that we must manage to preserve the peace by every possible means and that it would be better to return to Tlaxcala, others of us gave our opinion that if we allowed such treachery to pass unpunished, wherever we went we should be treated to worse [treachery], and that being there in the town, with ample provisions, we ought to make an attack, for the Indians would feel the effect of it more in their own homes than they would in the open, and that we should at once warn the Tlaxcalans so that they might join in it. All thought well of this last advice. As Cortés had already told them that we were going to set out on the following day, for this reason we should make a show of tying together our baggage, which was little enough, and then in the large courts with high walls, where we were lodged, we should fall on the Indian warriors, who well deserved their fate. As regards the Ambassadors of Montezuma, we should dissemble and tell them that the evil-minded Cholulans had intended treachery and had attempted to put the blame for it on their Lord Montezuma, and on themselves as his Ambassadors, but we did not believe Montezuma had given any such orders, and we begged them to stay in their apartments and not have any further converse with the people of the city, so that we should not have reason to think they were in league with them in their treachery, and we asked them to go with us as our guides to Mexico.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721

They replied that neither they themselves nor their Lord Montezuma knew anything about that which we were telling them. Although they did not like it, we placed guards over the Ambassadors, so that they could not go out without our permission, and Montezuma should not come to know that we were well aware how it was he who had ordered it to be done.

All that night we were on the alert and under arms with the horses saddled and bridled, and with many sentinels and patrols, although indeed it was always our custom to keep a good watch, for we thought that for certain all the companies of the Mexicans as well as the Cholulans would attack us during the night.

There was an old Indian woman, the wife of a Cacique, who knew all about the plot and trap which had been arranged, and she had come secretly to Doña Marina our interpreter, having noticed that she was young and good looking and rich, and advised her, if she wanted to escape with her life, to come with her to her house, for it was certain that on that night or during the next day we were all going to be killed, for the Great Montezuma had so arranged and commanded that the Mexicans and the people of the city were to join forces, and not one of us was to be left alive, except those who would be carried bound to Mexico. Because she knew of this, and on account of the compassion she felt for Doña Marina, she had come to tell her that she had better get all her possessions together and come with her to her house, and she would there marry her to her son, the brother of a youth who was with another old woman who accompanied her.

11:Dias T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721

When Doña Marina understood this (as she was always very shrewd) she said to her, "O mother, thank you much for this that you have told me, I would go with you at once but that I have no one here whom I can trust to carry my clothes and jewels of gold of which I have many, for goodness sake, mother, wait here a little while, you and your son, and to-night we will set out, for now, as you can see, these Teules are on the watch and will hear us."

The old woman believed what she said, and remained chatting with her, and Doña Marina asked her how they were going to kill us all, and how and when and where the plot was made. The old woman told her neither more nor less than what the two priests had already stated, and Doña Marina replied—"If this affair is such a secret, how is it that you came to know about it?" and the old woman replied that her husband had told her, for he was a captain of one of the parties in the city, and as captain he was now away with his warriors giving orders for them to join the squadrons of Montezuma in the barrancas, and she thought that they were already assembled waiting for us to set out, and that they would kill us there; as to the plot she had known about it for three days, for a gilded drum had been sent to her husband from Mexico, and rich cloaks and jewels of gold had been sent to three other captains to induce them to bring us bound to their Lord Montezuma.

When Doña Marina heard this she deceived the old woman and said—"How delighted I am to hear that your son to whom you wish to marry me is a man of distinction. We have already talked a good deal, and I do not want them to notice us, so Mother you wait here while I begin to bring my property, for I cannot bring it all at once, and you and your son, my brother, will take care of it, and then we shall be able to go." The old woman believed all that was told her, and she and her son sat down to rest. Then Doña Marina went swiftly to the Captain and told him all that had passed with the Indian woman. Cortés at once ordered her to be brought before him, and questioned her about these treasons and plots, and she told him neither more nor less than the priests had already said, so he placed a guard over the woman so that she could not escape.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

When dawn broke, it was a sight to see the haste with which the Caciques and priests brought in the warriors, laughing and contented as though they had already caught us in their traps and nets, and they brought more Indian warriors than we had asked for, and large as they are (for they still stand as a memorial of the past) the courtyards would not hold them all.

Early as it was when the Cholulans arrived with the warriors, we were already quite prepared for what had to be done. The soldiers with swords and shields were stationed at the gate of the great court so as not to let a single armed Indian pass out. Our Captain was mounted on horseback with many soldiers round him, as a guard, and when he saw how very early the Caciques and priests and warriors had arrived, he said—"How these traitors long to see us among the barrancas so as to gorge on our flesh, but Our Lord will do better for us." Then he asked for the two priests who had let out the secret, and they told him that they were at the gate of the courtyard with the other Caciques who wished to come in, and he sent our interpreter, Aguilar, to tell them to go to their houses, for he had no need of their presence now. This was in order that, as they had done us a good turn, they should not suffer for it, and should not get killed. Cortés was on horseback and Doña Marina near to him, and he asked the Caciques, why was it, as we had done them no harm what-

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721 ever, that they had wished to kill us on the previous night? and why should they turn traitors against us, when all we had said or done was to warn them against certain things of which we had already warned all the towns that we had passed through, namely, that they should not be wicked and sacrifice human beings, nor worship Idols, nor eat the flesh of their neighbours, nor commit unnatural crimes, but that they should live good lives; and to tell them about matters concerning our holy faith, and this without compulsion of any kind. To what purpose then had they quite recently prepared many long and strong poles with collars and cords and placed them in a house near to the Great Temple, and why for the last three days had they been building barricades and digging holes in the streets and raising breastworks on the roofs of the houses, and why had they removed their children and wives and property from the city? Their ill will however had been plainly shown, and they had not been able to hide their treason. They had not even given us food to eat, and as a mockery had brought us firewood and water, and said that there was no maize. He knew well that in the barrancas near by, there were many companies of warriors and many other men ready for war who had joined the companies that night, laying in wait for us, ready to carry out their treacherous plans, thinking that we should pass along that road towards Mexico. So in return for our having come to treat them like brothers and to tell them what Our Lord God and the King have ordained, they wished to kill us and eat our flesh, and had already prepared the pots with salt and peppers and tomatoes. If this was what they wanted it would have been better for them to make war on us in the open field like good and valiant warriors, as did their neighbours the Tlaxcalans. He knew for certain all that had been planned in the city and that they had even promised to their Idol, the patron of warfare, that twenty of us should be sacrificed before it, and that three nights ago they had sacrificed seven Indians to it so as to ensure victory, which was promised them; but as the Idol was both evil and false, it neither had, nor would have power against us, and all these evil and traitorous designs which they had planned and put into effect were about to recoil on themselves. Doña Marina told all this to them and made them understand it very clearly, and when the priests, Caciques, and captains had heard it, they said that what had been stated was true but that they were not to blame for it, for the Ambassadors of Montezuma had ordered it at the command of their Prince.

263 262 266

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

Then Cortés told them that the royal laws decreed that such treasons as those should not remain unpunished and that for their crime they must die. Then he ordered a musket to be fired, which was the signal that we had agreed upon for that purpose, and a blow was given to them which they will remember for ever, for we killed many of them,[1] so that they gained nothing from the promises of their false Idols.

Not two hours had passed before our allies, the Tlaxcalans, arrived, whom I have already said we had left out in the fields, and they had fought very fiercely in the streets where the Cholulans had posted other companies to defend the streets and prevent their being entered, but these were soon defeated. They [the Tlaxcalans] went about the city, plundering and making prisoners and we could not stop them, and the next day more companies from the Tlaxcalan towns arrived, and did great damage, for they were very hostile to the people of Cholula, and when we saw this, both Cortés and the captains and the soldiers, on account of the compassion that we had felt for them, restrained the Tlaxcalans from doing further damage, and for the work, for, between the two great dangers in which we found ourselves, it was better and more to the purpose to seize Montezuma than to wait until he attacked us; for if he began the attack, what chance should we have? Some of us soldiers also told Cortés that it seemed to us that Montezuma's stewards, who were employed in providing us with food, were insolent and did not bring it courteously as during the first days. Also two of our Allies the Tlaxcalan Indians said secretly to Jerónimo de Aguilar, our interpreter, that the Mexicans had not appeared to be well disposed towards us during the last two days. So we stayed a good hour discussing the question whether or not we should take Montezuma prisoner, and how it was to be done, and to our Captain this last advice seemed opportune, that in any case we should take him prisoner, and we left it until the next day. All that night we were praying to God that our plan might tend to His Holy service.

[1] Blotted out; "and others were burned."—G. G.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

The next morning after these consultations, there arrived, very secretly, two Tlaxcalan Indians with letters from Villa Rica and what they contained was the news that Juan de Escalante, who had remained there as Chief Alguacil, and six of our soldiers had been killed in a battle against the Mexicans, that his horse had also been slain, and many Totonacs who were in his company. Moreover, all the towns of the Sierra and Cempoala and its subject towns were in revolt, and refused to bring food or serve in the fort. They [the Spaniards] did not know what to do, for as formerly they had been taken to be Teules, that now after this disaster, both the Totonacs and Mexicans were like wild animals, and they could hold them to nothing, and did not know what steps to take.

When we heard this news, God knows what sorrow affected us all, for this was the first disaster we had suffered in New Spain. The interested reader may see how evil fortune came rolling on us. No one who had seen us enter into that city with such a solemn and triumphant reception, and had seen us in possession of riches which Montezuma gave every day both to our Captain and to us, and had seen the house that I have described full of gold, and how the people took us for Teules, that is for Idols, and that we were conquerors in all our battles, would have thought that now such a great disaster could have befallen us, namely that they no longer attributed to us our former repute, but looked upon us as men liable to be conquered, and that we should have to feel their growing insolence towards us.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

As the upshot of much argument it was agreed that, by one means or another, we should seize Montezuma that very day, or we would all die in the attempt.

So that my readers may see how Juan de Escalante fought this battle and was killed in it, he and six soldiers and a horse and the Totonac allies whom he took with him, I wish here to describe it before coming to the seizure of Montezuma, so as not to leave anything behind, for it is necessary that it should be clearly understood.

CHAPTER XCIV.

How the Mexican Captains fought a battle against Juan de Escalante, and killed him and a horse and six soldiers and many of our Totonac allies.

•721 It was in this way; you may remember my having said in the chapter that treats of the subject, that when we were camped at a town called Quiahuitztlan, that there came together many allied towns which were friendly with the people of Cempoala, and our Captain persuaded them to agree not to pay any more tribute to Montezuma, and there were more than thirty towns which rebelled against him. It was then that we captured Montezuma's tax gatherers, as I have already related in the chapter that treats of that subject. When we left Cempoala to come to Mexico there remained in Villa Rica, as Captain and Chief Alguacil of New Spain, one Juan de Escalante, who was a man of high standing, and a friend of Cortés, who ordered him to render to these friendly towns all the assistance they might need. 721

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

It appears that the great Montezuma kept many garrisons and companies of warriors in all the frontier provinces, there was one at Soconusco to guard the frontier of Guatemala and Chiapas, another at Coatzacualcos, and another on the frontier of Michoacan,[1] and another on the frontier of Panuco, between Tuxpan and the town which we called Almeria, on the north coast. And it appears that this garrison near to Tuxpan, demanded tribute of Indian men and women, and supplies of provisions for their people from certain towns in the neighbourhood, which towns were allied to Cempoala and did service to Juan de Escalante and to the settlers who were stationed at Villa Rica and were engaged in building the fort. When the Mexicans demanded tribute and service from these towns they replied that they would not give it, for Malinche had ordered them not to do so, and the great Montezuma had approved. Then the Mexican Captains replied that if they did not pay tribute that they would come and destroy their towns and carry them off captive, and that their Lord Montezuma had recently given them those orders. 712 721 721 651 721

When our Totonac allies heard those threats they came to Juan de Escalante and complained loudly that the Mexicans were coming to rob them and devastate their country. On hearing this, Escalante sent messengers to [1] Mechuacan in the text.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721 the Mexicans telling them not to annoy or rob those towns, for their Lord Montezuma approved of our all being great friends, and that if they did so he would come against them and attack them. The Mexicans took no notice of that reply or of the threat, but said that we should 726 find them in the field. Juan de Escalante who was a very competent man and prompt in his actions, summoned all our allies from the towns in the Sierra to come with their arms, that is bows, arrows, lances and shields, and he also called together the most active and healthy of his soldiers, (for I have already said that nearly all the settlers who had remained in Villa Rica were invalids and sailors,) and with two cannon and a little powder, three crossbows, two muskets, and forty soldiers and over two thousand Totonac Indians, he went in search of the Mexican garrison, who were already out robbing a town of our allies. They met in the fields at dawn of day, and as the Mexicans doubled in number our Totonac allies, and as the latter were always in terror of them on account of their former wars, at the first attack of the Mexicans with arrows, darts, stones and war cries, they took to their heels and left Juan de Escalante to fight the Mexicans alone, in such a manner that he and his poor soldiers barely reached a town called Almeria, which they set on fire and burned the houses. There he rested a little for he was badly wounded.

In those skirmishes and attacks, the Mexicans carried off alive a soldier named Argüello, a native of Leon, a man with a very large head and black curly beard, and he was very sturdy in appearance and a man of great strength. Juan de Escalante and six of his soldiers were very badly wounded and one horse was killed. They returned to Villa Rica and within three days Escalante and the six soldiers were dead.

000 It was in this way that what we call "the affair at Almeria"

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

and Montezuma released, and that some of them should proclaim themselves as Kings of Mexico, as I will go on to relate.

CHAPTER C.

How the nephews of the great Montezuma went about assembling the other Lords and persuading them to come to Mexico and free the great Montezuma from his imprisonment and drive us out of the City and kill us.

As Cacamatzin, lord of the City of Texcoco, which after Mexico is the largest and most important city that there is in New Spain, knew that his uncle, Montezuma, had been imprisoned for many days, and that we were taking the upper hand in every way that was possible, and also got to know that we had opened the chamber where the great treasure of his grandfather Axayaca was kept, but had not taken anything from it, he determined, before we could take possession of the treasure, to call together all the Lords of Texcoco, who were his vassals, and the lord of Coyoacan, who was his cousin and Montezuma's nephew, and the lord of Tacuba, and the lord of Iztapalapa, and another great Cacique who was lord of Matalçingo, who was very nearly related to Montezuma and of whom it was even said that he was the rightful heir to the kingdom and lordship of Mexico, and who was a chieftain known among the Indians for his personal bravery. While he [Cacamatzin] continued to negotiate with these and other Mexican chieftains that on a given day they should come with all their forces and attack us, it seems that the Cacique whom I have said was known for his personal bravery (whose name I do not know), said that if he [Cacamatzin] would assure to him the Kingship of Mexico, to which he was the rightful heir, that he and all his relations, and the people of the province called Matalçingo,

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

631 would be the first to take up arms and turn us out of 643 Mexico, or not leave any one of us alive. It appears that 721 Cacamatzin replied that the Chieftainship of Mexico belonged to him and that he himself must be King, for he was the nephew of Montezuma; and that if he [the Lord of Matalçingo] did not wish to come, that they would make war on us without his help or that of his people, for it seems that Cacamatzin had got ready all the Lords and towns already named by me, and had already arranged the day on which they were to fall on Mexico, and that the chieftains of his faction who were then in the city would facilitate their entry.

721 While these negotiations were going on, Montezuma knew all about them from his powerful relation [the lord of Matalçingo] who would not come to an agreement with Cacamatzin, and to be more sure of it, Montezuma sent to summon all the Caciques and chieftains of that City [Texcoco], and they told him how Cacamatzin was going about persuading them all with words and gifts to join him in an attack on us, and to free his uncle. As Montezuma was prudent and did not wish to see his city rise up in arms or riots, he told Cortés what was happening. Our Captain and all of us soldiers knew a good deal about this disturbance, but not so fully as Montezuma now detailed it. The advice that Cortés now gave him was that he should give us his Mexican followers and we would fall on Texcoco and capture or destroy that city and its neighbourhood. As that advice did not suit Montezuma, Cortés sent to tell Cacamatzin that he should cease his preparations for war, which would be the means of his destruction, for he wished to have him as a friend, and that all that he could do for him personally he would do, and many other compliments. Now Cacamatzin was a young man who found many others, who shared his opinions, ready to support him in the war, so he sent to tell Cortés, that he understood his flatteries and did not want to hear any more of them, but that when he saw him coming then he would say to him whatever he liked. Cortés again sent to tell him that he should beware not to do an ill turn to our King and Lord, for he would pay for it with his person, and lose his life for it. He replied that he knew no King and wished he had never known Cortés, who, for all his fair words, had imprisoned his uncle.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721

When he [Cacamatzin] sent this answer, our Captain implored Montezuma, as he was such a great Prince, and had among his Captains in Texcoco both great Caciques and kinsmen who were not friendly with Cacamatzin, who was very haughty and much disliked, and as Montezuma had with him there in Mexico a brother of this same Cacamatzin, a youth of a good disposition, who had fled from his own brother to escape being killed by him, (for after Cacamatzin he was the heir to the kingdom of Texcoco,) [our captain implored Montezuma] to concert measures with his people in Texcoco to seize Cacamatzin, or to send secretly to summon him to come [to Mexico,] and if he did come, to lay hands on him and keep him in his power until he had quieted down. Moreover as this (other) nephew was in his house and was subject to him, he should presently promote him to be the Lord and should take the chieftainship from Cacamatzin, who was doing him an injury and going about stirring up all the cities and Caciques of the land to make him Lord over his [Montezuma's] city and kingdom.

Montezuma said that he would at once send to summon him, but he did not think he would come, and that if he did not come he would make arrangements with his Captains and relations to seize him.

Cortés thanked him heartily for this, and even said: "Señor Montezuma, you may indeed believe me that if you wish to go to your Palace, you are free to do so, for since I understand that you are well disposed towards me, I am so devoted to you, that were I not in such a [difficult] position, I would not even insist upon accompanying you when you proceed to your palace with all your nobility. If I have failed to carry out such a plan, it is on account of my Captains who went to seize you, for they are not willing that I should set you free, and also because you say that you prefer to stay in confinement so as to avoid the disturbances through which your nephews would attempt to obtain power over this City of yours, and deprive you of your rule."

11:Diaz T.H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

0721

Montezuma answered that he thanked him, and as he began to understand Cortés' flattering speeches and saw that he made them, not with any intention of setting him free, but only to test his good will, and also because his page Orteguilla had told him that it was our captains who had advised Cortés to take him prisoner, and he must not believe that Cortés would set him free without their consent, Montezuma added that it was as well for him to remain a prisoner until he could see whither the treachery of his nephews would lead. Moreover he would immediately send messengers to Cacamatzin, begging him to appear before him, as he wished to speak to him about friendship between him and us, and would send to tell him, that as for his imprisonment he need not trouble himself about it, that had he desired to free himself many opportunities for doing so had offered, and that Malinche had twice told him to return to his palace, but he did not wish to do so, but to fulfil the commands of his Gods that he should remain a prisoner. Indeed if he did not so remain, he would soon be a dead man, and the priests who ministered to the Idols had known this for many days, and for this reason it would be advisable to be on good terms with Malinche and his brothers. Montezuma sent the same message to the Captains of Texcoco, telling them that he was sending to summon his nephew to make friends, adding that they should beware how that youth turned their brains so that they would take up arms against us. 721

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

Let us leave this talk, which Cacamatzin thoroughly understood, for he took counsel with his chiefs as to what should be done. Cacamatzin then began to bluster and say that he would kill us all within four days, and that his uncle was a chicken not to attack us when he advised him to do so, when we were coming down the mountain towards Chalco, where he had the troops all posted and everything ready, that [instead of doing so] he personally received us in his city as though he knew that we had come to confer some benefit on him, and had given us all the gold that had been brought to him as tribute. Moreover we had broken into and opened the house where the treasure of his grandfather Axayaca was stored, and added to all this we had taken Montezuma prisoner, and were already telling him that he must get rid of the Idols of the great Huichilobos, as we wished to set up our own in their places. So that things should not come to a worse pass, and so as to punish such deeds and affronts, he [Cacamatzin] prayed his chieftains to give him their help, for all that he had told them they had seen with their own eyes, even how we had burnt Montezuma's own Captains, and nothing more could be endured, and they ought all to unite as one man and make war on us.

Cacamatzin promised them there and then, that if the Lordship of Mexico should fall to him, he would make them great chieftains, and he also gave them many golden jewels, and told them that he had already made arrangements with his cousins, the lords of Coyoacan and Iztapalapa and Tacuba and other relations, to help him, and there were other chieftains in Mexico itself who would assist him and let him into the city at whatever hour he might

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

•72| choose. He said that some of them might go along the causeway and all the rest could go across the lake in their pirogues and small canoes, and they would enter the city without meeting opponents to defend it, for his uncle was a prisoner, and they need have no fear of us, for they knew that only a few days ago, in the affair of Almeria, his uncle's Captains had killed many Teules and a horse, and they had seen the head of the Teul and the body of the horse; that they could kill us all in an hour and could have feasts and stuff themselves with our bodies.

When this speech was finished, they say that the Captains looked at one another, waiting for those who usually spoke first in councils of war, and that four or five of these Captains replied to him, how was it possible for them to go without the permission of their great prince Montezuma, and wage war in his very house and city? that they should first send to let him know about it, and if he consented, they would accompany Cacamatzin with the greatest good will; but otherwise they did not wish to turn traitors. It seems that Cacamatzin was angered with the Captains and ordered three of those who gave that reply to be imprisoned. As there were present at that meeting and council others, who were his relations, who were longing for a riot, they said that they would aid him to the death. So he decided to send to his uncle the great Montezuma to say that he ought to be ashamed of sending him word to come and make friends with those who had done him such harm and dishonour in holding him a prisoner, that such a thing was only possible because we were wizards and had stolen away all his great strength and bravery with our witchcraft, and that our gods and this great lady from Castile, whom we said was our Counsellor, had given us the great power to do what we had done. And in this which he said last he was not in error, for it was certainly the great mercy of God and his blessed Mother that helped us. To return to our story, the gist of his message was, that he would come in spite of us and of his uncle to speak to us and to kill us. 721

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

When the great Montezuma heard that insolent reply, he was greatly angered, and at once sent to summon six of his most trusted captains. And he gave them his seal, and he also gave them some golden jewels, and ordered them to go to Texcoco, and secretly to show that seal to certain Captains and relations of his, who were on bad terms with Cacamatzin on account of his haughtiness, and so to manage that they should make prisoners of Cacamatzin and those who were in his confidence, and bring them before him at once. When those Captains had departed, and it was understood in Texcoco what it was that Montezuma had ordered, as Cacamatzin was greatly disliked, he was taken prisoner in his own palace while he was discussing the subject of the war with his confederates, and they brought five of them as prisoners in his company. [643]

As that city stands close to the lake, they got ready a great pirogue with awnings, and they placed Cacamatzin and the other prisoners in it and with a great crew of rowers they brought them to Mexico. When they had disembarked, they placed Cacamatzin in a richly adorned litter fit for a king such as he was, and with the greatest show of respect they brought him before Montezuma. [501]

It seems that in his interview with Montezuma, he was even more insolent than he had been before, and Montezuma knew of the plots he had made to raise himself to the lordship of Mexico, about which he learnt further complete details from the other prisoners who had been brought to him. If Montezuma was angry with his nephew before, he was now doubly so, and he promptly sent him to our Captain to be held as a prisoner, and the other prisoners he ordered to be set free.

Cortés went at once to the palace to Montezuma's

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721 chamber to thank him for so great a favour and the order was given that the youth[1] who was in Montezuma's company, who was also his nephew and the brother of Cacamatzin, should be raised to the Kingship of Texcoco.

721 666 I have already said that he had come here to seek the protection of his uncle when his brother wished to kill him, and that he was the next heir to the kingdom of Texcoco. So as to make the appointment with all solemnity and with the consent of all the city, Montezuma summoned before him the principal chieftains of the whole province and after fully discussing the matter, they elected him as King and Lord of that great city, and he was named Don Carlos.

721 After all this was over, when the Caciques and Kinglets, nephews of the great Montezuma, namely the Lord of Coyoacan, and the Lord of Iztapalapa, and he of Tacuba saw and heard of the imprisonment of Cacamatzin, and learnt that the great Montezuma knew that they had joined in the conspiracy to deprive him of his kingdom and give it to Cacamatzin, they were frightened and did not come to pay their court to Montezuma as they were used to do. So with the consent of Cortés, who clamoured and persuaded him to order them to be seized, within eight days they were all in prison and attached to the great chain, and our Captain and all of us felt not a little relieved.

000 The reader who is interested may see what lives we were leading, for every day they were planning to kill us and eat our flesh, if the great mercy of God which always followed us had not come to our rescue, and but for that good Montezuma who always gave a favourable turn to our affairs. Just think what a great Prince he was who, although imprisoned, was so faithfully obeyed, that all was once more made peaceful, and those chieftains were prisoners.

[1] Cuicuitucatzin.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

sions, but their presence was obligatory, that they might see and learn. Besides, as often as war was proclaimed, a general muster and rehearsal was held at each quarter.[24] We have no detailed report of such exercises, of the evolutions, if any, carried out by the warriors, but an incident of the history of Mexico may furnish us with an approximate picture. When, in 1473, the tribe of Tlatilulco, independent at that time from Mexico, agreed upon attacking the latter, they practised beforehand, and with as much secrecy as possible.[25] Setting up posts of hard wood, they beat against them with their swords and clubs; they sped arrows and threw darts at thick wooden planks, and lastly they went out into the lake and shot at birds flying.[26] This may be supposed an illustration of the manner in which the Mexicans practised at arms.

These exercises partaking, frequently at least, of a religious character, they ordinarily took place at the squares surrounding temples, more particularly in the great place of the chief "house of God" ("teo-calli") of Mexico.[27] Immediately preceding a foray or campaign, warriors and youth aggregated there also, not only to practice, but especially to receive their weapons out of the

"other times appointed, the latter caused the young men to practice at arms, that they "might be ready for war. He even set out premiums to those who would distinguish "themselves, and not only was present, but sometimes used the bow and sword, taking "part in the exercises." Also to Torquemada (Lib. X, cap. XIV, p. 236, of 2d volume, but especially cap. XI, p. 232. "En esta fiesta hacian alardes, y escaramuças todos los "Soldados y Hombres de Guerra, donde cada qual pretendia aventajarse al otro; y se "mostraban muy valientes, y esforçados; de donde nacia señalarse muchos, y aventu-"rarse á casos muy peligrosos"), and Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXI, p. 143).

[24] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXXIV, p. 147, and cap. XC).

[25] It is well known that the Mexicans had formerly divided into two tribes: the Mexicans proper, of Tenuchtitlan (Tenuchcas), and those of Tlatilulco. The latter never denied their common descent. At the time of their conspiracy to overthrow the Tenuchca they are said to have agreed upon: "that Mexicatl-Tenuchtitlan should be ob-"literated, and Tlatilulco-Mexico should become head of the world" (Tezozomoc, cap. XLI). It is not devoid of interest to know that, as late as 1473 (the year 7 "calli"), or only 48 years previous to the Spanish conquest, the very existence of the Mexican power became seriously threatened by a small tribe, subsisting as an independent people within musket range of Mexico. This fact, and the negotiations of the Tlatilulca with the other tribes of the valley, at that period, furnish one of the best illustrations of the loose manner in which all the tribes subject to Mexico at the time of Cortés were bound to the Mexicans. After the overthrow of the Tlatilulcans by Axayacatl of Mexico, their pueblo became the fifth "quarter" (calpulli), and under Spanish rule it bore the name of "Santiago."

[26] Tezozomoc (Cap. XLI). Durán (Cap. XXXIII, pp. 229 and 230). According to the latter, they at first practised with the sling, throwing stones against a wooden image; he does not mention the use of the sword or club, only missiles. Otherwise, both authors agree perfectly.

[27] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXXIV, p. 147). Herrera (Dec. II, lib. VII, cap. II, p. 187, of 1st volume).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

646 The existence of this council as
642 a supreme authority, proves the Mexicans to have been, not subject to the despotic rule of a monarch, but organized after the principles of a military democracy. They were a barbarous but free and warlike community.

●721 Legitimate causes for war were frequently furnished to the Mexicans. Their traders, or those of allied or subjected tribes, were often exposed to outrage and ill-treatment on the part of and among foreign "pueblos." Such acts were always regarded as justifying open warfare, and the opportunity was speedily improved. But pretexts[198] were eagerly sought for also, and the Mexicans therefore never at a loss to find some ground for pouncing upon any tribe which excited their cupidity. We have already stated that war was carried on by them for subsistence. It
[782] was further required for the purpose of obtaining human victims, their religion demanding human sacrifices at least eighteen times every year.[199] Every important event, like an improvement of the "teo-calli,"[130] and especially the installation of a new war-chief of the highest degree ("Tlaca-tecuhtli"), had to be celebrated by a special butchery of men,—and these victims had to be obtained through war.[131] Therefore the well-known custom of the Mexi-
[726] cans, on the battlefield, to look more to the capture than to the slaying of their foes.[132]

[198] The war which resulted in the conquest of Chalco, the foray against Ahuilizapan (Orizava) and Cempoal, were all brought about by the most wanton provocations on the part of the Mexicans (Tezozomoc, Cap. XIX, p. 30; cap. XXI, p. 33; cap. XXXI, p. 48). (Torquemada, Lib. II, cap. XL, p. 150.) (Clavigero, Lib. IV, cap. XIII.) Durán positively denies it, saying that the Mexicans never made war unless provoked, but this is too manifestly untrue (Gomara, p. 442).

[199] These were the regular monthly festivals only.

[200] Durán (Cap. XXXVII, p. 287), when the war against Mechoacan was determined upon: "and that the main reason why he wished to measure himself with their strength "was to try to celebrate with them (by the means of prisoners taken from them) the in-"auguration of the stone, that was similar to the sun, and to tinge his temple with the "blood of these nations." Gomara ("De las guerras," p. 442, Vedia, I, "y para, como "ellos dicen, haber esclaves que sacrificar à los dioses y cebar à los soldados").

[131] It was obligatory upon the chieftain to inaugurate his administration with a military exploit, and great importance was placed upon that the head-chief should make prisoners on that occasion with his own hands. Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXIV, p. 431). Tezozomoc (Cap. LVII, p. 93; cap. LXI, p. 101; cap. LXXXIV, p. 147). These three passages relate to Tizocic, to Ahuitzotl, and to the last Montezuma, respectively.) Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVII, pp. 121, 122, and 123). Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LV, p. 172, and cap. LXIX, p. 198).

[132] This was a very fatal custom, as against the Spaniards. Had the Mexicans been intent upon killing instead of overpowering their white enemies alive, their resistance would have been more formidable. Thus, for the sake of capturing a single horseman, they recklessly sacrificed numbers of their own, when they thought to be able to surround him, and cut him off from his corps or detachment. The custom was, however, general among the Nahuatlac tribes.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

The question of peace or war could only be decided by the supreme council of chiefs.[133] If war was to take place it was sometimes, but not always, resolved to send delegates to the tribe concerned, challenging it to fight or to submit and to become tributary to the Mexicans.[134] These delegates carried particular distinctive tokens;[135] they proceeded unmolested to the pueblo which they were to notify, and, entering the council-house, briefly exposed the object of their coming to the chiefs there gathered. If, after deliberation, the tribe thus threatened agreed to submit and to give tribute, then all was well, and the delegates departed again, loaded with presents. But if any reparation or proposal for accommodation other than actual submission was proffered, or if the reply was even defiant, the Mexican delegates at once stepped up to the head war-chief of the enemy, and with white paint (which they carried in their casket of supplies) anointed his arms. Further, they placed feathers on his head and gave to him a shield and sword. This was the declaration of war.[136] Thereupon they withdrew, but if a custom prevailing among all the tribes then inhabiting the [133] We have, on this point, the positive declaration of the last Montezuma himself. When the tribe of Huexotzinco sent delegates to Mexico, proposing an alliance against Tlaxcallan, Montezuma replied to them: "Brothers and sons, you are welcome, rest "Yourselves a while, for although I am king indeed, I alone cannot satisfy you, but "only together with all the chiefs of the sacred Mexican senate" ("Yo solo no puede "valeroc, sino con todos los principales del sacro senado Mexicano." Tezozomoc, Cap. XCVII). Also, Gomara ("De las guerras," p. 442, Vedia, I).

[134] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVI. p. 129): "This was the common way, although "sometimes they took them by surprise."

[135] Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. I. p. 534): "In the right carried an arrow, holding it "by its head, the feathered end upwards, and in the left hand a small shield."

[136] Ixtlilxochitl ("Histoire des Chichimèques ou des Anciens rois de Tezcuco," Cap. XXXVIII, pp. 268, 270, 271, and 272) claims that they sent three different summons, one by the Mexicans, one by the Tezcucans, and another by the Tlacopans. But this is not otherwise confirmed. The answer, unless time was positively requested, and the Mexicans deemed it politic to delay, decided the very first time.

Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 129): "Determined and resolved that there should "be war, they sent certain shields and robes to those whom they intended to assail (as "it was their custom to never send a message without a present)." Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. II, p. 537, almost a literal copy from Mendieta). Tezozomoc (Cap. VIII, p. 15; cap. XXVII, p. 40, etc., etc.). Ixtlilxochitl ("Hist. des Chichim.," Cap. XXXVIII). Durhn (Cap. IX, p. 74; cap. LVII, p. 430. Montezuma being challenged by the Huexotzinca, and Cap. LIX, p. 464, by the Cholulteca). The white paint, "tizatl" (Molina, II, p. 113, "cierto barro, o tierra blanca." See, also, Tezozomoc, Cap. VIII), was an emblem of death, the shield, "for to defend himself therewith," and the sword, "for to offend if "he was able." The latter is analogous to the red tomahawk sent in token of war by northern savages (Loskiel: "Geschichte der Mission der evangelischen Brüder unter "den Indianern in Nord-Amerika." Barby, 1788, Part I, cap. XI, p. 187. Also, Adair: "History of the American Indians").

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

72 | country, had permitted their coming unmolested,[137] their return, once outside of the council-house, was not placed under any similar safe-guard. Oftentimes that return to Mexico was attended with the most imminent personal danger to the delegates.[138]

The cases, if any, are certainly few in number, where a tribe thus provoked or defied, voluntarily submitted to tribute. The Mexicans could be sure, almost, of war, whenever their supreme council had agreed upon it. Therefore, as soon as the meeting at the official house had concluded, war was proclaimed in the four quarters of the pueblo, and in case of great urgency, a monstrous [203] drum, with a specially dismal sound, called the whole tribe to arms from the top of the chief temple.[139]

72 Owing to the peculiar organization just discussed, a rapid mobilization of the forces of the whole tribe was very feasible. The minor subdivisions gathered under their "captains," and all together proceeded almost simultaneously to the store-houses of the four great quarters of the tribe, where the stewards dealt out the

[137] Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. I, p. 555): "que aunque estas Gentes eran de su "natural condition mas vengativas, que todas las del Mundo, respetaban a' los Embax-"adores de sus mortales enemigos, como a' Dioses, teniendo por mejor violar qualquier "rito de su Religion, que pecar contra la fé dada á los Embaxadores."

[138] For comparison with Loskiel on the northern Indians (Cap. XI, p. 187) see Tezozomoc (Cap. VIII, p. 15). When the "Atempanocatl Tlacaelelitzin" returned for the second time to Ascaputzalco, this time to challenge the Tecpanecas and defy them to open war, and after he had properly decorated their war-chief Tezozomoctli, the latter gave to him a sword, a shield, and a helmet, saying: "Take here, also, something to "protect your body, and this shield and sword, "macuahuitl," and see if you may "return home safely." Atempanocatl was attacked by Tecpanecan scouts, pursued as far as upon Mexican soil, and escaped only through his swiftness and personal bravery. This episode is confirmed by Durán (Cap. IX, p. 74), and by Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XII, pp. 488 and 489), although they both say that the Mexican delegate escaped by avoiding the warriors of the Tecpanecas by circuitous paths. Still, it shows that his return was attended with great personal danger. Clavigero (Lib. III, cap. XVII) attributes this action to the first Montezuma. ("Huehue-Montezuma," or "Montezuma Ilhuicamina.")

[139] Bernal-Diaz (Cap. XCII, Vedia, II, pp. 90 and 91). On the top of the great temple: "y allí tenian un tambor muy grande endemasia, que cuando le tenian el sonido "del era tan triste y de tal manera, como dicen instrumento de los infiernos, y mas de "dos leguas de allí se oia; y decian que los cueros de aquel tambor eran de sierpes muy "grandes." Besides this drum they used conch-shells in great numbers, thus creating a horrid noise. The Spaniards grew intimately acquainted with these awful signals on the night of the 1st of July, 1520, when the various instruments called out the Mexican warriors to that pursuit which caused the slaughter on the dyke leading to Tlacopan. Every one reading the splendid descriptions of Mr. Prescott, of this bloody retreat ("History of the Conq. of Mexico," Book V, chap. III), will remember: "the "huge drum in the desolate temple of the war-god sent forth those solemn tones which, "heard only in seasons of calamity, vibrated through every corner of the capital" (p. 388, of Vol. II).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 727 set, were all carried into captivity except such as could escape into the wilderness lying beyond their cultivated areas of soil.[176]

726 The Mexicans, however, were not exclusively successful on their 175 numerous forays and expeditions. More than once they met with severe defeats, and on one occasion even, in their attack upon Michhuacan, in 1479, they were so terribly beaten that they never afterwards renewed the attempt.[177]

726 Besides, in their constant wars against the rival confederacy, also of "Nahuatl" stock, at whose head was the tribe of Tlaxcallan or Tlascala, the fortunes of the day often turned against the Mexican invaders, or at least assailants.[178] In the first instance, that of the defeat in Michhuacan, the Mexicans actually fled from the battlefield in consternation, pursued by the victorious enemy across the "war-ground," but no further.[179] The engagements with the tribes of Tlaxcallan, Huexotzinco, or Cholula, were fought so near the valley that even if the Mexicans had been worsted during the day, they could retire quietly and mostly unmolested the next morning.[180] The manner in which such retreats were carried on is hardly known.

[176] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXXIV, p. 146) describes as follows the attack upon Nopallan and Ycpatepec: "Arriving at midnight, they moved so secretly that they reached the "royal house, counted the entrances and sallies, ascended to the top of the temple," etc., etc. Then the scouts returned to the main temple, reporting upon what they had found, and when the morning star arose they fell upon the settlement, "each body "moving like a strong wall and with the swiftness of lightning, ... and they "began to slaughter so furiously that neither old people, nor women, nor children "were spared, and they set fire to the houses, also to the temple, so that the place "looked like a volcano." (Compare the reports upon the burning of Schenectady by the French and Indians, in 1690,—contained in vol. I, of "Documentary History of the "State of New York." pp. 297–312.)

[177] Tezozomoc (Cap. LII). Durán (Cap. XXXVII). The date is fixed by Señor Alfredo Chavero, of Mexico, in his valuable essay entitled "Calendario Azteca" (p. 4).

[178] This confederacy consisted of Tlaxcallan and Huexotzinco,—perhaps also Atlixco. Cholula may, to a certain extent, have been included in it, but it was certainly not any longer the case when Cortés arrived. On the contrary, Cholula was then on friendly terms with Mexico. Cortés says ("Carta Segunda," Vedia I, p. 19): "por "que los naturales della eran amigos de Muteczuma;" and, further on (p. 21), "y fice "que los desta ciudad de Churultecal, y los de Tascaltecal fuesen amigos, porque lo "solian ser antes, y muy poco tiempo habia que Muteczuma con dadivas los habia "aducido a' su amistad, y hechos enemigos de estotros."

[179] The pursuit lasted until they reached Tlaximaloyan (Tagimarca), at the confines of Toluca. Tezozomoc (Cap. LII, p. 88): "Llego' el campo Tarasco hasta Tagi-"marca, que dizen Tlazimoyalan: los otros que habian llegado hasta los terminos de "Toluca se volvieron, viendo que su campo no llegava: al ira adelante." The pursuit of the Michhuacanese consisted in harassing the Mexicans with arrows, but no close combats are mentioned.

[180] The wars of the Mexicans against Tlaxcallan and its associates were a struggle for definitive supremacy, and not, as many authors have it, pre-arranged regular bat-

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Until now we have considered the Mexicans only when in conflict with tribes of their own country and race, inferior or equal to them in degree of culture, and proportionately in military resources. But we must necessarily cast a glance upon their wars against their subsequent conquerors, the Spaniards, and investigate how far our pictures of the organization and the military tactics of the Mexican tribe are confirmed by the events of the conquest. Ere, however, we enter upon this discussion, which shall also furnish us with an illustration of defensive Indian warfare in Mexico, it is urgent that we should become acquainted with the nature of fortifications erected and used by the aborigines.

While there exists distinct evidence that walls of stone were erected occasionally for the defense of certain positions not directly connected with, or in the immediate vicinity of, settlements, such instances are very rare. Such is the famous wall by which the Tlaxcallans closed the valley of their eastern confines.[161] In general, the conception of the tribes of Mexico in fortifying any particular place, amounted to raising it above the surrounding level, and crowning this raised area with a parapet of stone or wood. It is not quite clear whether the elevation extended always to the ties, for the purpose of mutually obtaining victims for religious offerings, and for the exercise of the young men in the art of war. The fact that these battles took place at fixed days and at certain places appointed, is no proof of the latter, but it simply resulted from the custom of challenging an enemy, and meeting him therefore at a specified time and on the "war-ground." (Compare Durán, Cap. LIX, p. 463). The respective forces being quite evenly matched, these actions were renewed from time to time, each party hoping to tire out the other, until to be able to strike a decisive blow; but neither succeeded so far, so that in fact the battles remained practically undecided. Against Tlaxcallan the Mexicans made one great attempt, when the confederacy of the former with those of Huexotzinco was broken up for a short time, and the latter applied to Mexico for assistance against the Tlaxcallans, who had invaded the soil of Huexotzinco. There is as yet a great deal of contradiction and obscurity in regard to those inter-tribal wars, and the pompous descriptions thereof by many authors are scarcely trustworthy. One point appears positive, that however often the Mexicans may have been the worst sufferers in those fights, neither the Tlaxcallans nor their allies were ever able to threaten Mexico seriously. In course of time there is hardly any doubt but that the Mexicans would have tired out and conquered their adversaries, as they had previously tired out and finally subjugated the tribe of Chalco, in the valley. For a truly natural description of these engagements, I refer the reader to the pages of Durán, and especially of Tezozomoc.

[161] See Cortés ("Carta Segunda," Vedia I, p. 15): "E a' la Salida del dicho valle fallé "una gran cerca de piedra seca, tan alta como estado y medio, que atravesaba todo el "valle de la una sierra a' la otra, y tan ancha como veinte piés, y por toda ella un petril "de pié y medio de ancho, para pelear desde encima, y no mas de una entrada tan an-"cha como diez pasos, y en esta entrada doblada la una cerca sobre la otra a' manera "de rebelin, tan estrecho como cuarenta pasos . . ." Also, Bernal-Diez (Cap. LXII). Gomara (p. [illegible]. "El primer rencuentro que Cortés tobo con los de Tlaxcalan"). Torquemada (Lib. IV, cap. XXIX). Herrera (Dec. II, lib. VI, cap. IV).

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

174 in the lagune, they were confined to their original area and to such
648 artificial garden-beds as they accumulated around it. Meanwhile their allies on the mainland, the Tecpanecas, were making themselves formidable in warfare to the other tribes; the Mexicans assisting. The moment arrived however, when the latter, having secured a defensive position, acquired military experience and greater strength, sought to free themselves from the tax which had heretofore burthened their trade and barter. War ensued, and the Mexicans, now in turn supported by enemies of the Tecpanecas, completely overthrew the power of the latter tribe. By this victory, they not only secured a foothold on the mainland, but became at once one of the ruling tribes of the western valley of Mexico.[54]

728 The only territorial accession gained by the Mexicans, in fact the only one claimed by them, appears to have been the hill of Chapultepec. They already had the use of the springs rising there, now they acquired their full and unincumbered possession.[55] The remainder of Tecpanecan territory was left to that tribe intact, and in no manner annexed to that of Mexico. The organization of the tribe, its government, and distribution of the soil, remained equally undisturbed. No Mexican representatives were delegated to rule Azcaputzalco or Cuyuacan. But the Mexicans in turn subsequently controlled the military power of the conquered tribe, and, besides, it was thereafter held to tribute. This

[54] Durán (Cap. IX and X). Tezozomoc (Cap. VII. VIII. IX. X. XI, XII, XIII. XIV and XV). Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XIII and XIV). Herrera (Dec. III, lib. II, cap. XII and XIII). Ixtlilxochitl (Hist. des Chichim.," Cap. XXX, XXXI and XXXII). Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. XXXV, XXXVI and XXXVII). Veytia (Lib. II, cap. I, LI. LII. LIII and LIV). Clavigero (Lib. III, cap. XVII. XVIII and XIX). Bustamante (Part I. cap. XXIII). Prescott ("History of the Conquest of Mexico," Book I, cap. I. pp. 15 and 16).

721 [55] It is even stated that the petition of the Mexicans for stone and wood to construct therewith a channel leading from Chapultepec to their pueblo, was the cause of the war. See Durán (Cap. VIII, p. 66). Tezozomoc (Cap. V, pp. 11 and 12). Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. II, p. 478. "Con esta ocasion, ora sea que ellos de proposito lo buscassen, para romper con los Tepanécas, ora que con poca consideracion se moviessen, al efecto embiaron una embaxada al Rey de Azcapuzalco muy resoluta diziendo, que del agua que los avia hecho merced, no podian aprovecharse, por ancreelos desbaratado el caño por muchas partes. por tanto le pedian los proviniésse de madera, y cal, y piedra, y embiasse sus oficiales que con ellos hiziessen un caño de cal y canto que no se desbaratasse.") Chapultepec remained specifically Mexican soil thereafter, it being the source of fresh water for the pueblo of Mexico. When Cortés moved against the tribe the second time, he seized the hill after a short but desperate struggle. (Cortés "Carta Tercera," p. 71, Vedia I. Bernal-Diez, cap. CL, p. 176, Vedia II. Clavigero, Lib. X. cap. XVII). See also Icazbalceta, in his Introduction to the 3d Dialogue of Cervántes-Salazar ("Mexico in 1554," pp. 256 and 257). Veytia (Lib. III, cap. I, p. 142, of 3d vol.). Bustamante ("Tezozoc en los ult: Tiempos." Parte IIa, cap. I, p. 148).

721 696 Twenty-sixth Chapter, in which it is told how these rulers (upon the day sign mentioned) proclaimed war. And at that time were sentenced those who were to die.[1]

Injc cempoalli on chiquacen capitulo: vncan motenevia, in quenjn ichoantin tlatoque (in jpan in tonalli omotenevih) iaotlatoaia, ioan vncan tlatzontequjlilloia in mjqujztli ipan catca.

701 721 When already the election ceremony had taken place, with festivity,[2] [the newly-elected rulers] disposed themselves for war to be declared. Also in this way it was said that for a second time, in war, the rulers would hold the election ceremony. Then to a considerable degree did the chieftains, the strong, cast their lot with him. They were urged and thrust upon him that they might show him their skill and aid him; so that they might take captives for him. This was because in this way they sought, dedicated themselves to, and gained their drink and food, and their capes, through the help of which they would live and have raiment; and he would honor them, etc. They would become his standard-bearing warriors, who, it was said, courted danger, hurled themselves against the foe, and joined in the fray.

In jquac ic omotecpac tecoanotzaliztica: njman ic no cuele oalmotlalia injc iaotlatolo, no ic mjtoa ic oppa iaoc motecpacaz in tlatoanj, iquac cenca ipan mopepena in tiacaoan, in chicaoaque, ipan netoochoio, nemamalioa, injc qujtlamatolinque, quipalevinque, injc ichoan uel qujtlamaltizque, ipampa ca qujxtoca, ipan mjxpea, qujmcentoqujlia in jauh, in jtlaqual, in jtilma, injc ipal nemjzque, ipallaquemjzque, qujnmuujzçotia, Er°. itlaujcecaoan mochioazque in mjtoa: injc aqujtiaçotla in jntzontecon, in jmelchiqujuh, teca mcmiotla, ueujc mopetlatiuj:

696 And it was also said that on this [day sign] One Dog a court of justice was held. Then was sentence pronounced upon those who were to die. And at this time were released and freed those who had done nothing serious. And they absolved of their crimes those who had suffered injustice for no apparent crime or discernible fault, and had served and paid a penalty for it: those who had only wrongly been imprisoned for some invented wrong, who only paid and stoned another's fault or crime, or perhaps served in another's place. Perhaps they imprisoned one for another's fault. So they had been forced into bondage and had become slaves. At once they bathed there at Chapultepec to lay aside their crimes.[3]

ioan mjtoa no ipan tecutlatoloia injn oc itacujntli, vncan tlatzontequjlilloia in jmpan ca mjqujztli: auh iquac qujxtiloia, caoaloia, in amo cenca eui ic cate, ioan qujntlatlacollaçaia, in tlatlacoti, in amo cenca melaoac, in amo uel ixnezquj, in amo cenca uel nentica ic tlacoti, ic tlanamjquj in aço çan tlapictli qujtzaqua, çan tlapiqujloque, çan ixpopoiotlanamjctiloque, ixpopoiotlanamjoque, aço çan tepon in tlaiecoa, aço çan tecujtl in qujzaqua, injc cujuiloque in victli, mecapalli, injc victique, mecapaltique, iquac njman vmpa oimaahia, in chapultepec, injc qujncaoa, intlatlacul:

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "en el mismo ceremoniaron a nuestro, a los que por algún gran crimen, estaban presos."

2. Ibid.: "Era acabado de hacer la fiesta de la dedicación de su señorío. . . . mas de nuestro la grandeza de su señorío." Cf. also Anderson and Dibble, loc. cit.

3. Cf. Florentine Codex, Book VI, Chapter xiv: Mo chapultepec ximaahi. In the Garibay ed., VI, 41, 67, the corresponding Spanish text reads: "Dicen otro a bañar a Chapultepec, a quarla poder irse a bañar a Chapultepec. — Este refrán dice el que ha tenido alguna gran enfermedad o algún cargo pesado, con deseo de verse libre de aquel cargo o enfermedad, diciendo: Mo chapultepec ximaahi, que quiere decir, bañarse ha ya en aquel remedio cuando este cargo o enfermedad se me quitare. Chapultepec es una fuente que está cerca de México, muy buena; los que se bañan en ella piensan que les hace dicha gran merced. Así, este adagio es de los mexicanos." or the master of the youths were not keeping watch, having already become addlepated.[10] And the ruler most sternly commanded that all the seasoned warriors and lords keep watch all day and all night in warlike lands and be concerned to be a rampart of men dexterous at arms in enemy paths. And they were to apprehend and seize informers who had entered here in secret, who walked about the city. And they perceived when war was to be proclaimed. And when war already was declared, then they hastened to enter [their city] to warn their lords so that then they would ready themselves for guarding against the foe.

in jxqujchtin iauteoaque in tlatoque icemjlhujtl 643
içcioual tlapiazque, in teuatenpan in tlachinoltempã. 726
in qujmocujtlaujzque oçelotenamjtl, quauhtenamjtl, in iauotli: ioan qujmanazque quintzitzquizque in tetlan nenque in ichtaca oalcalaquj in qujoalnemilia altepetl, ioan oallapia in jquin iautlatoloz, auh in oqujcacque ca ie iautlatolo: njman calactiuetzi in connonotza intlatocauh inic njman no moçencaoa
iautlapializtica.

And if informers[11] were seized, they were slain; they were beaten, because of what they made known. And if it were noted that some knew the Mexicans and were living with them in their homes, they also imprisoned the informers of the ruler's foes, with the householders who had been plotting with them, and their children, and plundered their goods, so that nothing[12] was to be seen in their homes.

Auh intla ano tetlanenque, mjctilo, tetzotzonalo 687
inca nenonotzalo. Auh intla macho, ca acame qujmati in mexica in inchan oalmocallotia, in tetlanenque in jiaohoan no qujtzacytiuja, inca nenonotzaloia in chaneque, ioã in jnpilhoan, ioan namoicloia in intlatquj atl neneçia in inchan.

And likewise the ruler urged strongly that watch be kept within the city, all day and all night, lest someone betray the city, lest it might be surrounded by enemies. And therefore sometimes the ruler and the city would march forth. And the ruler commanded that rulers of the youths, the brave warriors, and all the youths, each day, at night, should sing and dance, so that all the cities which lay around Mexico should hear. For the ruler slept not, nor any of the Mexicans.

Auh çan no iuhquj cenca ipan tlatoaia in tlatoanj 643
injc cenca tlapialoz in jitic altepetl, icemjlhujtl, 726
çeioal, in ma aca qujtlachichiujli altepetl, in ma 722
iauiaoalolo quenmanjan, auh injc icatiaz tlatoanj, ioan altepetl qujnnaostiaia in tlatoanj in telpuchtla-toque, in tiacahoan: ioan in ixquich telpuchtli, injc [533] momoztlae ioultica cujcoanozque, injc qujoalcaqujz ixquich altepetl, in qujiaoalotoc mexico: ca amo cochi in tlatoanj, ioan ixquich mexicatl.

And when it was deep night, then the priests of Tenochtitlan and of Tlatilulco, and [men from] all the hamlets [nearby], blew shell trumpets and beat two-toned drums. Then all the priests went forth. Everywhere they performed penances all about the mountain tops. And thus they kept watch lest they come upon something. [When] already it grew light, they went into [the city]. Thus they kept guard each night; thus did they do.

Auh in jquac tlaquauhtlapoiaoa: njman tlapitza, 722
ioan teponaçohoa, in tlamacazque tenochca, ioan tlatilulca: ioan ixquich altepemaitl, icoac qujça in jxquichtin tlamacazque, noujian in ontlamaçeoa noujian tepeticpac, ioan ic ontlapia in aço itla qujnamjqujtiuj ie tlatujnaoac ỹ oalcalaquja injc ontlapiaia çeçeioal iuh qujchioaia.

10. Simeon, op. cit., identifies ocizitl as an intoxicating plant, and chopul as Heimia connamomi, a medicinal plant. Olmos, op. cit., p. 223, has, for Hacer a otro enfermo, o dar mal consejo: Mizitl, chopul, cocoxochqui, nanacatl nicnitzinzmi. . . .; for Embriagarse, o salir de seso: Yiach cqueni in mizitl, in nanacatl, in cocoxochqui inic cyoaiaic, inic ocoxomic. In Lib. VI, fol. 20Vv, of the Florentine Codex, this passage appears: "Yo atontolmeno, o desatinadamente: iá yohqui mizitl, in yohqui chopul atiquiyc. Itechpa mipania: in cqueni oncmo quiçaqujxtiquiyc tecuacuilmitl: ic tohqui in ma tlamatqui, ma chopul cqueqque: injc ocuij: oncmo quiçaqujxtiquiyc in tlein ic mocuitlaoia: ipampa injc ania, in ama mocuitlo: tlein. Tlein mach oncque, tlein mach oncpopolo: ma cel cujxtoma, oncmo quiçalaoaia in mocuitlo: in oncmo tiotij, ticoui in tlacuilli." The corresponding Spanish text reads: "Esto loco quiere decir. Andas tocando y dando palmadas en el pecho como hombre que a comido hallucinos. Por metaphora se dice: de aquel que sirvido trayeron y derbarcado en su casa, sirvido obrepido, no se quiere enseñar: y a este tal decirle que se bayale que se conjele que ninguna bien enseña resulta su corazon."

11. Tetlan aczquer: accusado, according to Simeon, op. cit. Tetlanenemi, however, in Molina, op. cit., is translated as chismere or malsin (gossip, tattlemongr; lit., ?, possibly, informer).

12. Ab: probably ate is meant.

sons; bean greens[21] and green beans; green maize, tender maize, tender maize stalks; tamales of maize blossoms, tortillas of green maize, and all edible things—tortillas, tamales, tamales and tortillas with honey, large tortillas, and rolled tortillas.

And also there were proprietors among whom were spread out smoking tubes, pipes, and cigars, [some] quite resinous and aromatic; and tobacco bowls; and large pottery braziers and hearths, and earthen basins, and pots, and jars for storing water, and settling jars, and flat cooking plates, and sauce vessels, and earthen cups, and everything [made of] earthenware.

And those who were directors of the market place, if they did not show concern over their office, were driven forth and made to abandon their office. And if someone sold stolen goods—perchance a costly cape, or a green stone,—if it were made known and he did not declare from whom he had bought that which had been stolen, they went to exact the penalty, and he died. Such was the sentence of the lords and judges, so that [men] would be fearful of that which was stolen and no one would buy it.

It was the duty of the market place folk to make the war provisions—biscuits, and finely ground, dried maize and chía seeds, and dried maize dough, and dried, lime-treated maize dough. With these was the market place charged, and the market place directors, the men and women thus appointed, were charged with assigning the tribute.

elotlaxcalli, ioan in jxquich qualooj, tlaxcalli, tamalli, necutamalli, necutlaxcalli, vei tlaxcalli, tlaxcalmjmjlli. 443 443 656 262

No ioan vncatca, in tlaiacanque in jpan manca acaquauijtl, acaiiectl, iietlalli, vel ocotzoio, ioan xochiocotzotl, ioan iiecaxitl, ioan apantlecaxitl, ioã tlequaztli, ioan apaztli, ioan xoctli, ioan atlalilcomjtl, ioan xaiocomjtl, ioan comalli, ioan molcaxitl, ioan in çoquitecomatl, ioã in jxquich tlamantli çoquitlatquitl. 443 463 656 [276] [415]

Auh in ichoantin tianquizpan tlaiacanque, intlacamo quimocuitlauia, intequiuh, totoco, ioan caoaltilo in jntequiuh. Auh intla aca tlachtectli quinamaca, aço tlaçoilmatli, anoço chalchiuitl, intla oximachililoc, intlacamo quinextia in aquin quicobujli, in tlein tlachtectli, quitzacutiuh, mjquja, iuhquj tlatzontequiliaia, in tlatoque, tecutlatoque, ic mjmacaçia in tlein tlachtectli, aiac vel quicoaia, [685]

in jntequiuh catca tianquizpantlaca quichioaia iiauitacatl, in tlaxcaltotopochtli, ioan pinolli, ioan texoatzalli, ioan nextamalhoatzalli, injc ipan tequitia tianquiztli, ioan tianquizpan tlaiacanque, in tlaixquetzalli equichti, ioan çioa in tequitlatoque catca. 443 722 651 705

21. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 235, describes epyquilitl as "hojas y ramas de las frijoles"; on p. 338, however, it is given as Mimosa pigra var. Mimosa L.

[p. 70 is blank]

342 643 [373] 644 722

And in the great palace, the ruler's residence, likewise was watch kept all night. Never did the fire go out. It was watched all night and made to burn with pine torches there in the residence of the ruler—at the Tlacxitlan, and the Teccalli, and the Tecpilcalli, the Quauhcalli, the Achcauhcalli, the Cuicacalli, the Coacalli, and the residences of the lords throughout the city, and the priests' houses, and the majordomos' houses—where assembled the majordomos,—and the young men's houses which were placed in all the neighborhoods.[13] Then the youths filled the houses as they kept guard. None slept in his [own] home. The task of the youths was to go into the forest, in order that watch be kept within the city; for nightly there was light and fires were burned; thus was guard maintained.

Auh in vei tecçan in tlatoca, çan no iuhquj çeioal in tlapialoia, aquenman ceuja in tletl: çeioal in tlapialoia, ioan tlauijloia ocotica, in vncan iieian tlatoanj, ioan tlacxitlan, ioan teccali, ioã tecpilcalli, quauhcali, achcauhcali, cujcacali, ioan coacali, in jntenetlaliaian tlatoque altepetl ipan, ioan calmecac, ioan texicali in jnneçenqujxtiaia calpixque, ioan telpuchcali, in noujian tlãlãxilacalpan mamanj: vncã icacaltemj in telpupuchti in tlapia, aiac ichan oncochia, intequjuh catca in telpopochti, in quauhtla ializtli, injc tlapieloia iitic altepetl injc çeçeioal tlauijloia tlatlatiloia, injc tlapieloia.

643 542

FIFTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how the ruler was amused.

The ruler, when he beheld and knew that the common folk and vassals were very fretful, then commanded that the ball game be played, in order to animate the people and divert them. He commanded the majordomos to take out the rubber ball, and the girdles, and the leather hip guards, and the leather gloves with which the ruler's ball players were dressed and arrayed. And things were arranged on the ball court; there was sprinkling, there was sanding, there was sweeping.

INJC MACUJLLI PARRAPHO: ipan mitoa, in quenjn mellelquixtiaia, tlatoanj.

In tlatoanj in jcoac quittaia, çujmatia ca cenca nentlamati in cujtlapilli, atlapalli maceoalli: njman tlanaoztiaia, injc ollamaloc, injc teellaquaoaia, injc tepaquiltiaia tlatoanj: quinnaoztiaia in calpixque, injc qujoalcujzque in olli, ioan nelpilonj, ioan queçoatl, ioan maieoatl: injc mocencaoa injc mochichioa, in jollancaoan tlatoanj, ioan tlacencaoalo in tlachco, tlauijlilo, tlaxahujlo, tlachpano:

643 525

And all which the ruler was to wager in the game—the valued capes, the duck feather capes, the costly breech clouts, the green stone lip plugs, the golden ear plugs, the green stone necklaces, the golden necklaces, the wrist bands with large, precious,[14] green stones upon them, and all the precious capes and bedding—the majordomos brought out and placed in the ball court. And those who were to challenge and play ball against the ruler then matched all his costly goods. And all the poor folk placed [for] the ruler, each one, old capes like those which the vassals wore. And if they won from the ruler, then the majordomos brought out others and laid out all the costly goods which they had won of the ruler, and also they gave to the vassals all which they had won of the ruler.

ioan in jxqujch qujtlanjtoc tlatoanj, in tlaçotilmatli in xomoiujtilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in chalchiuhtenteti, teucujtlanacochtli, chalchiuhcozcatl, teucujtlacozcatl, matzopetztli chalchiujtl vei ipan ca, tlaçotl: ioan in ixqujch tlaçotilmatli, ioan pepechtli qujoalqujxtia in calpixque, qujoallalis in tlachco. Auh in ichoantin qujnamjqujzque, in collamjzque tlatoanj: njman jq'tiamjctia, in jxqujch itlatquj tlaçotli: auh in ie ix motolinja maceoalli, iceciaca contlalia tlatoanj ica iiaiaçol in iuhquj qujquemj maçeoalli. Auh intla oqujtlanque tlatoanj, njman tepatla, in calpixque qujtema in ixqujch tlaçotli tlatqujtl, in oqujtlanjlique tlatoanj: auh in maceoalti no qujnmaca in jxqujch oqujtlanilique tlatoanj.

---

13. Tlaxitlan/pan: see Arturo Monzón: El calpulli en la organización social de los tenochcas (México: Instituto de Historia, 1949), p. 51, where the term tlaxitlanalli is defined as a small barrio or street. According to Orozco y Berra, op. cit., I, p. 369, "los pueblos quedaron subdivididos en nueve calpulli ó barrios, excepto los parcialidades otra, cada calpulli dividido por calles ó tlaxitlanalli."

14. Tlaçotl: the corresponding Spanish text refers to dowry, in which case the Aztec should read dowry.

727 [severed] heads of the Spaniards, each one, on the [horizontal] staves [of the skull rack]. They also strung up the heads of the horses, arranging them below, while the heads of the Spaniards were above.[5] It appeared as if they were strung facing the [rising] sun. But [as for] all the various [allied] people, they did not string up the heads of the people of distant provinces. And fifty-three Spaniards were captured, and four horses.

in onoca, in çoçetoca, tonatiuh qujxnamjctoca. Auh in jxqujch nepapan tlacatl, amo qujçoçoque in intzontecô in veca tlaca. auh in axioaque Españoles onteçpantli onmatlactli omei, yoan nauhteri cavallos:

726 Nevertheless, in all places watch was kept. There was fighting. Not because of [this success] did posting of watchmen cease. Everywhere those of Xochimilco went hemming us in, in their boats. On both sides were captives taken; on both sides there was killing.

auh tel novian tlatlapielo, necalioa: amo ic mocaoa in tlapielistli, in novian techiaoalotinemj ic xuchmjlca in acaltica, necoccampa tlamalo, necoccampa mjoua.

722 262 And all the common folk suffered torments of famine. Many died of hunger. No more did they drink pure, clean water[6] — only brackish water did they drink. Of it many people died, and many people therefore [suffered from] a bloody flux, of which they died. And all was eaten — lizards and swallows; and maize straw,[7] and salt-grass.[8] And they ate calorie wood,[9] and they ate the glue orchid,[10] and the frilled flower;[11] and tanned hides, and buck-skin, which they roasted, baked, toasted, or burned, so that they could eat them; and they gnawed sedum,[10] and mud bricks.[11] Never had there been

[137]

Auh in jxqujch macevalli, cenca tlaihioviaia maisnoia, mjec in mapiztmjqujli aocmo quja in qualli atl, in ecatl, ça tequjxqujatl in quja ic mjec tlacatl momjqujli, yoã mjec tlacatl ic tlaelli qujtlaz ic mjc: yoan much quaioc in cuetzpalin, in cujcujtzcatl, yoan Eloçacatl, yoan in tequjxqujçacatl: yoan qujquaquaque in tzumpanquavitl, yoan qujquaquaque in tzacuxuchitl, yoan in tlaqujli, yoan in cuetlaxtli yoan in maçaeoatl, qujtletleoatzaia, qujmoonqujaia qujtotetepotzaia, qujtotoponjaia injc qujquaia yoã in tetzmetl, yoan in xantetl qujtetzoaia: aoc tle iubquj inic tlaihioviloc, temamauhti in tzaqualoc, vel tonac

3. Corresponding Spanish text: "Los capitanes eran ahor . . . los otros indios eran hacer . . . los caballos eran hacer."

4. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 550, reads this passage.

5. Huauhtli: leaves, or straw, of maize, which Mexican cattle eat, green or dry; in other words, the plant itself after the maize grains have been harvested (personal communication, Rafael García Granados). — In Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, pp. 271-272, it is described as "hierba . . . se muy verde y tiene parecer como el trigo, y es blanca, almacaba las cosechas y estas amarradas." Remesal, op. cit., p. 259, describing it as a diuretic and purgative, suggests "maize straw" as a name.

6. Tequisquipanoli: probably pastures on saline lands, of the variety called "grama," creeps over the ground, putting forth small roots (personal communication, Rafael García Granados). — For this, Sahagún, op. cit., p. 271, has "hierba muy deprava y espinosa, que se hace en tierra salitrosa . . . se hierba para quemar." Remesal, op. cit., p. 225, citing Hernández (op. cit.), calls it some grass or marsh grass, possibly Distichlis spicata (L.) Greene. Grama (tequisquipanoli in Molina, op. cit.), Santamaría (op. cit., II, p. 31) identifies as Paniceum repens L., very abundant in the Americas.

7. Tzompanquauitl. According to Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 275), "es árbol verdinegro, tiene las cosas redondas y de buen parecer, tiene unas flores que se llaman xopanchichitl; son muy coloradas y de buen parecer y se suelen dar ensiguno; las hojas de este árbol se llaman xopinitl"; p. 246: "Xopanitl, árbol, flor y fruto del Colorín. Erythrina corallodendron. D.C. Leguminosae." Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 321, giving the same botanical identification and E. americana Mill., adds the current common name (zompanuale), and observes of the bean (colorín) that it is "especie de frijolillo rojo, duro que constituye un alimento muy venenoso."

8. Tizaxochitl. Remesal, op. cit., p. 309, calling it a "glue flower," identifies it as Mirabilis campanulata La Llave and Lex. (?), Epidendrum pastoris La Llave and Lex (?), Cassarrina macedonica Rzedowski (?) — all orchids. Hernández, op. cit., II, pp. 375-376: Tizaxochitl o tizaxochitl flordeliz: Mirabilis campanulata La Llave y Lex, or B. crocifolia La Llave y Lex.

9. Tlapozilli. In Molina, op. cit., tlapozilli is pheasant or cinnamon. Tlapozilli, however, is given by Remesal, op. cit., p. 226, as "billed flower" — probably Mirabilis jalapa L., known as marvella. It is medicinal. Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 184, adds these common names: San Diego de la noche, arrebolera, and prunpatilla.

10. Tecuxuchitl. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 249, says it is like xocuxuchitl: "hojas muy verdes y redondas, y también muy lucidas, y tienen las cosas coloradas. . . . olor . . . dulce, y aspera y lampiñas . . . la semilla de esta cosa redonda" (medicinal). Remesal identifies it as Sedum dendroideum Moziño and Sessé — commonly, siempreviva (op. cit., p. 222). Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 43, adds S. quitense H. B. K. and S. roseum Sess.

11. Cf., however, Sahagún, op. cit., p. 550: "und Stock und Leder und Hirschhaut, die braten, backen, rösten, brennen, essen es so, und Tizaxochitl und Lehmziegel und eine Tecuxuchitl." Of tecuxuchitl or tecuxuchitl, Sahagún (op. cit., p. 249) says it is a bad-smelling plant used for coloring. Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 142 (tecuxuchitl), says it is "también conocer de varias plantas endemoniadas, como el coyoxochitl o cuyoxochitl (Cosmosiphon tulipanosis), el tecuxuchitl (Mirabilis longiflora), y otras." such suffering. It was terrifying how they were besieged; truly, in great numbers they starved. And quite calmly [the enemy] hemmed us in and contained us.

100 –

in apixmjc: auh çan jvian tachvalcaltechpachotiquac, çan jviã techololãlique. 722 262

[p. 102 is blank]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 strength of one tribe tried to rout the yelling horde of their adversary, and the first to run lost the battle. Captives were taken, tribute imposed, the temple burned, and the defeated group was then left alone again.

To attain victory more easily surprise attacks, sometimes implemented by a little treachery, were instituted. However, the cumbrous process of getting an army onto the field of battle usually prevented this favored method of warfare. More often the Tenochcas and their allies would feint with a screen of warriors, who would be easily repulsed in a pretended rout. The main body would wait in a place of concealment until the pursuing enemy came into view, whereupon they would charge out and demolish them. Losses were chiefly felt in the number of captives taken, since these short hand-to-hand combats were not very damaging to the man power of either side. [787] The capture of a chief or the recognition of a sign of evil portent was sufficient to demoralize an army and, despite their bravery and constant experience in warfare of this type, the Aztecs were little fitted to resist soldiers trained in European techniques.

723 There was rather more opportunity for strategy than for battle tactics. Considerable planning, as we have said, was necessary to move troops upon the field of battle. The Aztecs won campaigns in Oaxaca, Puebla, western Mexico and along the Vera Cruz coast, as far north as Tamaulipas.* Having to move step by step and to intimidate or win over town after town, they needed patience and knowledge of geographical and political conditions. One reason for the honor in which merchants were held was the information of this character which they could furnish from their travels.

*Ta-mow-le'e-pas.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The triple alliance was a typical example of Aztec strategy. Nezahualcoyotl wanted to restore the hegemony of Texcoco and destroy Tezozomoc's Tepanec power, the center of which was Azcapotzalco. The two towns were separated by the Lake of Mexico. To move troops overland would have required several days; to move them across the lake in canoes would have meant having a landing base on the western shore. Nezahualcoyotl, therefore, induced Tlacopan and Tenochtitlan, which were at the back door of Azcapotzalco and tributary to it as well, to declare war. Thus he had a base at which to land his canoes filled with troops, and while his allies engaged the enemy strongly in this quarter, the Texcocan chief had time to bring reinforcements around the lakes by the overland route to attack another point.

The town of Chiconauhtla offers another example of these simple strategic ideas. This settlement dominated the straits through which the northern lakes of Zumpango and Xaltocan empty into Lake Texcoco. The people here could destroy any force in canoes moving east against Texcoco or west against Azcapotzalco. Their forces also could make a flank attack on land armies skirting the lakes against either of those two objectives. Early in the thirteenth century Chiconauhtla became a fief of Texcoco and participated, as a sort of guardian of the western marches, in campaigns against rebellious western tribes and in the great war with Tezozomoc. Later it seems to have become part of the Tenochtitlan chain of vassal towns, and its chief had the honor of sharing a royal apartment in Montezuma's palace with the rulers of far more important city-states. To confirm this documentary evidence excavation of the site reveals, in the quantity and quality of the material culture surviving, evidence of partici-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

723 648 pation in trade and booty far in excess of the apparent size and importance of the town.[11] (See map, end papers; Plates 41, top; 42, top; 43.)

721 The purely economic and military aspects of war are as crude, when judged by our modern technical standards, as the rest of the purely mechanical aspects of Aztec life. On the other hand, the ritualistic conception of war as the earthly re-enactment of the titanic struggle between opposing forces in nature has a quality almost sublime. The political and economic frictions that brought about conflict were welcomed by the warriors as an opportunity to vibrate to the deep rhythms of nature, rhythms which met in a celestial antiphony in the Sacred War which the Sun fights each day as he, by his own death and sacrifice, ensures the life of man.

721 796 The War of Flowers was undertaken to satisfy this yearning when no active campaign was in progress. In this incongruously named ceremonial combat the best warriors from several states met in a very real battle, so that feats of arms could be accomplished and captives taken to satisfy the hunger of the gods. One famous War of Flowers was repeated for several years, and the cream of the fighting men of Texcoco, Tenochtitlan and Tlacopan vied with the might of Cholula, Huexotcingo and Tlaxcala. If a warrior were captured he met the most glorious of deaths in direct sacrifice to the Sun. If he lived he gained renown. If he were slain, he [775] was cremated, an honor reserved only for fighting men and passed on to the special heaven where warriors dwell.[12]

726 Such warfare had no place in a conflict with Europeans, but, when reduced to fighting for their bare lives against the Spaniards, the Aztecs put up one of the most desperate de-

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954
NU7 Aztec NU7

532

[291
302]

[643
714]

[283
286]

[701
714
793
411]

[723]

—After Paso y Troncoso

72-74. Women's array—napili, cueitl (Chapter 15). 75. Weaving and spinning equipment (Chapter 16). 76. Laying plans for war (Chapter 17). 77. The ruler's war array (Chapter 17). 78. Priests and warriors in battle array (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(I)]

[p. 36(H) is blank]

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

Seventeenth Chapter, in which are told the exercises of the rulers and how they might perform well their office and their government.

FIRST PARAGRAPH, where is told, as well, the ordering of those sent when war was waged.

The ruler was known as the lord of men. His charge was war. Hence, he determined, disposed, and arranged how war would be made.

First he commanded masters of the youths and seasoned warriors to scan the [enemy] city and to study all the roads—where [they were] difficult, where entry could be made through them. This done, the ruler first determined, by means of a painted [plan], how was placed the city which they were to destroy. Then the chief noted all the roads—where [they were] difficult, and in what places entry could be made.

Then he summoned the general and the commanding general, and the brave warriors, and he commanded them how they were to take the road, what places the warriors were to enter, for how many days they would march, and how they would arrange the battle. And he commanded that these would announce war and send forth all the men dexterous in war to be arrayed, and to be supplied with provisions for war and insignia.

The ruler then consulted with all the majordomos—the men of the Petlacalco[1] and of the Aztacalco, the majordomos of Quauhnauac and Uaxtepec, and [those] of Cuetlaxtlan, Tochpan, Tziuhcoac, Tepequacuilco, Ulipan, Coatlixtlauacan, Tlappan, Tlachco, Matlatzinco, Ocuillan, Xilotepec, Atotonilco, Axocopan, Itzcuincuitlapilco, Atocpan, and Ayotzintepec. He ordered them to take out all their [goods held in] storage, the tributes, costly articles—insignia of gold, and with quetzal feathers, and all the shields of great price.

And when the majordomos had delivered all the costly devices, the ruler then adorned and presented with insignia all the princes who were already able in war, and all the brave warriors, the men [at arms],

Injc caxtolli omome cap°, vncan mjtoa in jnncie- 643 hecoliz in tlatoque: in quenjn vel quichioazque inte-qujuh, in jntlatocaio.

INJC CE PARRAPHO: vncan mjtoa, ioan in- 643
tlatecpanalistli, in quititlanja injc iauquiçaia. 701

In tlatoanj, tlacatecutli, motocaiotia: itequjuh catca in iauiotl, injc ichoatl quitzontequj, quitecpana, quiçencahoa, in quenjn mochioaz iauiotl:

achto quinaoatia in tiachcahoan, in tequjòaque, in 643 connemjlia altepetl, in conjtta, in quezquj vtli, in campa ouica, in campa ic calacoaz, in ic iuhquj achto 723 oquinemjli in tlatoanj, tlapallacujlolpan omotlali: in altepetl, in poliujz, ic onjtztica in tlatoanj in izqui vtli, in campa ouican, quezquican in calacoaz. [102]

Niman ic quioalnotza: in tlacuchcalcatl, in tlaca-teccatl, in tiacahoan quinnaoatia, in iuh teumacazque in quezquican calaquiz: iauquizquj, in quezquilhujtl monenemiz, in quenjn iautecoz: ioan quinnaoatia, injc ichoantin, iautlatoaque quinnaoatizque: in jxquich in qcauhtloçelotl, injc mochichioaz, injc moçencaoaz: in jca iauitacatl, ioã tlaujztli.

Auh in ichoatl tlatoanj: njman quinnonotza in 643 jxquichtin calpixque, petlacalcatl, aztacalcatl: quauh- 714 naoac calpixquj, oaxtepec calpixquj, cuetlaxtecatl:
tochpanecatl: tziuhcoacatl, teprquacujlcatl, hoappanecatl, coaixtlaoacatl, tlappanecatl, tlachcotecatl, matlatzincatl, ocujltecatl, xilotepecatl, atotonjlcatl, axocopanecatl, itzcuincujtlapilcatl, atocpanecatl, aio-tzintepecatl, quinnaoatia, injc quioalcujzque, in jxquich in jnpiel, in tlacalaquijlli, in tlaçotlanquj tlaujztli in cozticc teucujtlaio, in quezallo: in jxquich tlaçochimalli.

Auh in jcoac oquioalisquijque in calpixque: in 643 jxquich tlaçotlanquj tlaujztli: iichoatl tlatoanj, nj- 701 man quicencaoa quintlaujzmaca in jxquichtin tlaçopipiltj, in ic imjxco ca iautilistli: ioan in jxquichtin

1. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 99; Sahagún, op. cit., I, p. 166; II, p. 311.

And he who in vain would save himself, implored and said to them: "What do you do, O Mexicans? I am not [the one]." They answered him: "Thou art [one of them] also, O fool; [art thou] not a carrier?" Then and there they slew him. They only [continued] to guard the people; they went about cautious of others. Their eyes and concern were only to guard the Mexicans. Many they punished for imagined [evil], those who perished without warning, whom they punished not for their own crime.

Auh in oc nen momaquixtiznequj, in qujntlatlauhtia quimjlhuja. Tle amai mexicae, camono tehoatl: conjlhuja, ca no tehoatl nocne, amo titequjtquj: njman ic vncan cõmjctia ça teixpipia, ça motecujtlavitinemj, ça imjx intequjuh, ça tepipia in mexica: ca mjequjntin in tlapictli qujtzacutiaque in jxpopoiomjctiloque in amo vel intlatlacul qujtzacutiaque. 726

And still other carriers hid and sheltered themselves. No more were they to be seen; they showed themselves to no one; no longer would they come forth to the people. They were in great fright, swooning with fear. They lived hidden, lest they fall into the people's hands.

Auh in oc cequjnti tequjtque motlatique, mjnaxque, aocmo moteititiaia, aocmo motenextiliaia, aocmo tevic quiçaia, cenca momauhtiaia, mauhçaçonequja, mjinaxtinenca, injc amo temac vetzizque.

And when they laid siege to the Spaniards, for only seven days did they join battle with them in their quarters. And for twenty-three days they were shut in. And for as many days, the canals were dredged, widened, deepened, and made precipitous. Everywhere the canals were made dangerous and difficult. And on the roads, in various places, they erected barriers, laid walls, and placed ramparts. Passages between houses were made dangerous.

Auh in jquac oquincaltzacque in Españoles: çan chicomjlhujtl in quincalicalque. Auh in caltzacuticatca cempoalilhujtl omei: auh izquilhujtl in, in acalotli motatatacac, mopapatlauh, movevecatlano, motetepexiõtz novian movicantlaii, moovitili in acalotli: Auh in vtli ipã, netetenantiloc, tenamjtl motetecac, netetenantlaliloc, mooviujcantlali in caltzalãtli: 723 726

And when this had taken place[9]—

auh in ie iuhquj.

9. Chapter 21 may end with an interruption completed in the beginning of Chapter 22. Angel María Garibay (Historia de la literatura náhuatl, II, p. 292), however, identifies the break as one of several lacunae. See also the ending of Chapter 33.

[p. 58 is blank]

-57-

000 Twenty-second Chapter. Here is told how it became known that the Captain, Don Hernando Cortés, was coming, and that he was returning to Mexico.

—it became known that the Captain now was coming from Tepeyacac.[1] He had set forth bringing with him many Spaniards, and a great number of men of Tlaxcalla and Cempoalla—many of them, large numbers, an abundance, a teeming multitude, a great host. Not only [in numbers] were they coming, [but] they came to war; they came with devices, in war array, [with] their shields, obsidian-bladed swords, and wooden clubs borne upon their shoulders. They came stirring up a column of dust, [so that] their faces were covered and ashen with dust. They were caked with earth—clothed in dust, in much earth, [which] flaked off. In haste they ran and hurried here. They said, as they went: "Come along, O men of Tlaxcalla! O men of Cempoalla!"

●723 And the Mexicans determined among themselves that thereafter they would not be seen, but would hide and conceal themselves. As if the earth lay dead, they would speak aloud no more, [but] only remain spying out of entrances, openings in walls, and holes which in some measure they had pierced through walls, through which they could look out. Only those who had [houses] by the roadside—those along the edge of the road—could do so. But those who were among houses could not. [For] if the Spaniards had seen how many chieftains there were in some places, marshaled together, they would have thought in their hearts that the Mexicans would begin, start, and initiate the war.

And after this, [Cortés] went to and entered the palace; whereupon they shot off the guns.[2]

726 And when this had taken place, then [the Mexicans] came forth intent upon battle. Thereupon there were [war] cries and there was fighting; the fray was then joined; there was battle. Arrows and rocks fell upon the Spaniards.[3]

Iajc cempoalli omome capitulo: vncã mjtoa in quenjn machiztico in ie vitz capitan don hernãdo Cortes injc oalmocuepaia mexico.

In omachiztico in ie vitz in Capitan tepeiacacpa in quiçaco, mjequjntin in quinoalhujcac in Españoles yoan cenca mjequjntin in tlaxcalteca yoã in cempoalteca vel mjequjntin vel ixtlãin, vel itzachintin, vel tonac, vel tonaque: amo çan iuh vallaque, valiztiaque, valmotlavizztiiaque, valmoiauchichiuhtiaque, inchichimal, inmamaquauh, inmamavitzoc quiquequequechotivitze, teuhtli quioalçtztiaque, omach itztlaliuhque omach yixtenextiuhque, omach moca tlalloaque, omach tetetuhquimjliuhque, çã moca tlaltin, omach cocoztlaloaq̃ cenca oalmotlaloa, cenca oalhujcinj, motzatzatzilitivi: quitotivi, vallatotoca tlaxcaltecae, cempoaltecae.

Auh in Mexica monaoatique, injc amo quin mottitizque, çã motlatizque, mjnaiazque, iuhquin tlalli mjctimotecac, aocac naoui, tel hoallachiclotoc in tlazacujlcamac, yoan tepancamac, yoan tlacoiocco achi quicocoionjque in tepantli, injc vmpa ontlachie: çan ichoan in otenoaque, in otentli quitocatoque in iuh quichiuhque: auh in calaiepantla onoque amo iuh quichiuhque. Auh intla quimjttanj in cana quexquichtin manj, tepeuhtimanj, in tlacaoan, ca iniol iuh tlamatizquja in Españoles, ca in mexica ichoan quipeoaltia, ichoan quitzintia, ichoan inpeoal in iuiiotl.

Auh in ie iuhquj in ocalaquico vei tecpan: njman ie ic quitlatlaça in tlequiquizttli:

auh in ie iuhquj, njmã ie ic oalquiça quioalixtis in mjcalizque: njmã ie ic tlacaoaca, ie ic necaliza, njmã ie ic muchico in iauiotl, njman ie ic tlaiecolo onvetzi in mjtl, in tetl, in inupan Espanoles.

1. Tepeyacac: presumably not the site north of Tenochtitlan, but one between it and Tlaxcalla.
2. Corresponding Spanish text: "comenzaron a subir todos los tiros en alegría de los que venían llegando, y para atemorizar a los enemigos."
3. The clubs is omitted in the Nahuatl text.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721 "Take heed, Malinche, for this City is ill disposed, and we 782 know that this night they have sacrificed to their Idol, which is the God of War, seven persons, five of them children, so that the God may give them victory over you, and we have further seen that they are moving all their baggage and women and children out of the city." When
721 Cortés heard this, he immediately sent these Tlaxcalans back to their Captains, with orders to be fully prepared if we should send to summon them, and he turned to speak to the Cacique, priests and chieftains of Cholula and told them to have no fear and show no alarm, but to remember the obedience which they had promised to him, and not to swerve from it, lest he should have to chastise them. That he had already told them that we wished to set out on the morrow and that he had need of two thousand[1] warriors from the city to accompany us, just as the Tlaxcalans had provided them, for they were necessary on the road. They
721 replied that the men would be given, and asked leave to go
723 at once to get them ready, and they went away very well contented, for they thought that between the warriors with whom they were to supply us, and the regiments sent by Montezuma, which were hidden in the rocky thickets and barrancas, we could not escape death or capture, for the horses would not be able to charge on account of certain breastworks and barricades which they immediately advised the troops to construct, so that only a narrow lane would be left through which it would be impossible for us to pass. They warned the Mexicans to be in readiness as we intended to start on the next day and told them that they were going to give us two thousand[2] warriors to accompany us, so that as we marched along, off our guard, between the two forces our capture would

[1] "Blotted out "three or four."—G. G.

[2] Blotted out "four."—G. G.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

be sure and they would be able to bind us, and this they might look on as a certainty, for they [the Cholulans] had made sacrifices to their War Idols who had promised them victory. 721 723

Let us cease speaking of this which they looked on as a sure thing and return to our Captain who, as he wished to be more thoroughly informed about the plot and all that was happening, told Doña Marina to take more chalchihuites to the two priests who had been the first to speak, for they were not afraid, and to tell them with friendly words that Malinche wished them to come back and speak to him, and to bring them back with her. Doña Marina went and spoke to the priests in the manner she knew so well how to use, and thanks to the presents they at once accompanied her. Cortés addressed them and asked them to say truly what they knew, for they were the priests of Idols and chieftains and ought not to lie, and that what they should say would not be disclosed in any manner, for we were going to leave the next morning, and he would give them a large quantity of cloth. They said the truth was that their Lord Montezuma knew that we were coming to their city, and that every day he was of many minds and could not come to any decision on the matter, that sometimes he sent to order them to pay us much respect when we arrived and to guide us on the way to his city, and at other times he would send word that it was not his wish that we should go to Mexico, and now recently his [Gods] Tescatepuca and Huichilobos, to whom he paid great devotion, had counselled him that we should either be killed here in Cholula or should be sent, bound, to Mexico. That the day before he had sent out twenty thousand warriors, and half of them were already within this city and the other half were stationed near by in some gullies, and that they already knew that we were about to start to-morrow; they also 721 [787]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

491 town called Tlamanalco,[1] both of them subject to Mexico;
[636] that the one road was well swept and cleared so as to induce us to take it, and that the other road had been closed up and many great pines and other trees had been cut down so that horses could not use it and we could not march along it. That a little way down the side of the 491 mountain along the road that had been cleared, the 723 Mexicans (thinking that we must take that road) had cut away a piece of the hill side, and had made ditches and barricades, and that certain squadrons of Mexicans had waited at that point so as to kill us there. So they counselled us not to go by the road which was clear, but by the road where the felled trees were, saying that they would send many men with us to clear it, and as the Tlascalans were also with us, between them they would clear away the trees, and they said that that road came out at Tlamanalco.

000 Cortés received their present very kindly and told them that he thanked them for the counsel they had given him, and that with God's help he would not abandon his march but would go the way they advised him. Early the next morning we began our march, and it was nearly midday when we arrived at the ridge of the mountain where we found the roads just as the people of Huexotzingo had said. There we rested a little and began to think about the Mexican squadrons on the intrenched hillside where the earth works were that they had told us about.

Then Cortés ordered the Ambassadors of the great Montezuma who came in our company to be summoned, and he asked them how it was that those two roads were [1] Bernal Díaz seems to have gone wrong in his topography. At the gap between the two volcanoes the roads probably divided, one (to the right) going by way of Tlamanalco to Chalco, the other (more direct) going to Amecameca. The Spaniards probably took the more direct (the blocked up) road to Amecameca, and did not go to Tlamanalco at all. Cortés, in his second letter, says that he went to Amecameca, and does not mention Tlamanalco.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

714 by the maturer warriors. A tribesman had the right to elaborate his dress in accordance with his prowess, and the great chiefs wore attached to their backs immense frames covered with feathers. Tribes, and even clans, wore special insignia, so that friend could be distinguished from foe and chief from common warrior. The term uniform could hardly be used, since the rich variety and indulgence in individual fancy produced a kaleidoscopic effect in the motley array of bright colors and strange forms.*

712 To supply these forces was a very considerable task. Each quarter of the town had its tlacochcalco, or house of darts, an arsenal where the military supplies were stored. This was situated near the chief temple, the lofty sides of which made it a natural strong point. At a call to arms the clan leaders could rapidly assemble their men and equip them at these rallying points, which were also centers of the religious and social life of the community.*

724 An offensive campaign was a more serious undertaking. Having no beasts of burden, the warriors had to carry their own food with them. Due to the governmental system, wherein each town was independent, the armies did not dare live off the country for fear of inciting revolt and also because most communities lacked the food to sustain a large body of men. Thus, prior to a war, negotiations had to be made whereby supplies could be concentrated and allies brought together at a point as near as possible to the zone of attack. Usually a single battle decided the issue, since the [726] attacking force could not maintain itself in the field for more than a very few days. The calculations necessary to fight a war two or three hundred miles away in Oaxaca, say, were highly complex, and much of the Aztec force on such a campaign must have been composed of local tribesmen, stiffened 724 ● with a garde d'élite of Tenochcas and Texcocans.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Owing to this difficulty in respect to transport, siege 712 operations were virtually impossible, so that formal fortifications were rare. Some towns were built in very strategic locations, high on a mountainside or in the bend of a river, having access restricted to a narrow neck of land. Tenochtitlan, owing to its situation on the lake, was a natural fort. The causeways were penetrated by canals at intervals, so that removal of the portable bridges created natural barriers. The flat roof tops offered good points from which to harry the enemy in the street below, and the many temples were strong points difficult to reduce. (See Plate 37, top.)

Miles of defensive walls surrounded a site in Tlaxcala, where a ditch backed by a wall enclosed an area of several square miles. At Huexotla,* a fief of Texcoco, a wall at least fifteen feet high still exists and must have had a strong defensive value, although its ostensible purpose was to enclose the area about the main temple. Xochicalco† is situated on a high hill which was intensively terraced, and it was further strengthened by a wide ditch cut through the point of easiest access. Sometimes a site was chosen between two ravines which made impassable obstacles to an attacking force. However, while defensive purposes were often taken into account in building towns, strictly defensive works, in the nature of fortifications, were seldom undertaken.[10]

Open fighting, the difficulty of keeping up extended cam- 726
paigns and the informal character of the military force were factors which stultified the development of tactics or strategy. In battle the howling mob which represented the collective of Uexotzinco,* and the lords of foreign lands, and the lords of Tlaxcalan, and the lords of Acolman, and the ruler of Tlalmanalco, and all the lords posted on the shores of the ocean, and all the lords of the cities encircling Mexico—the ruler of Texcoco and the ruler of Tacuba.

*Way-ha'-ta. †Sho-chi-cal'-co.

And when all the invited lords had assembled—[both] friendly and unfriendly lords—he provided them food. He gave them drink and food; costly goods he gave them all: capes without price, and valuable breech clouts, and devices, and costly shields. There was dancing; there was a procession; there was singing, night and day, as the ruler provided them colors.

And at that time he also gave gifts to all the noblemen, brave warriors, and lords, and judges, and rulers of the youths, and all the singers, and all the keepers of the gods, fire priests, and [other] priests.

And when the feast ended, then all the hidden guests departed.

FIFTH PARAGRAPH, in which it is told how the ruler adorned himself when he was to war upon some city.

And then, when some days had passed, the ruler proclaimed war—that they would go to set forth somewhere to war. He gave costly devices and shields to the noblemen and to all the brave warriors and men [at arms]. And the ruler himself went to war. To get forth to battle and to conquer, he took all the warriors, and the lords of all the cities about, that they might set forth to war and conquer. And when they had gone forth to conquer and to wage war, they rejoiced greatly over the number of captives whom they had taken, since they would slay them all before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli in order with them to observe his feast. And he accorded honor to all the brave warriors and captors; with many things did he favor them. He gave them costly capes, and breech clouts, and long labrets, and hand fands; and he gave them titles by which they would be honored and obeyed as men [at arms] and brave warriors.

tequc, iuan tequchtlan tlacatecpan, iuan ocuitec tlacatecpan 643
iuan tequanquer tlacatecj: iuan in jaqujchtin tlacatecpan, ytlaxcamatcli quijtocaqueque, iuan in jaqujchtin 527 tlacatecpan in ohcpatl ipan, quijcualanque mexica, iuan 648 cuco tlacatecj, iuan tlacapan tlacatecj.

Auh in jcuac ocmoquixquer in jaqujchtin tlacatecatlalchtin tlacatecpan, in jcuiaxcan tlacatecpan iuan ilcahuan: ninoan ic quijtlaqualchia, quijtoneca in ixi, in tlacualli, tlaqualaqujj, quijtlalchia in jaqujch tlaqualli, iuan tlapanaualli, iuan tlaujcoli, iuan tlapalaqujj chimalli, ueuetlo macuahu, cuijco, cuicui cuijlujujl, in tequequijchin tlacatecj.

auh in jcuac no quijtlalchia, in jaqujchtin pipiltin, tlacatecl, iuan tecutlatecpan, iuan achcacauhti, iuan tlapochtlatecpan, iuan jaqujchtin cujcanjque, iuan in- [431] quijchtin teopixque tlamacazque, tlamacazque:
auh in ocmoquix tecuancuallotli, ninoan ic ompeua in jaqujchtin tlacatecatlalchi.

INIC MACUJLLI PARRAPHO: vncan mijna. 643 in quanja mocuecueuia, in tlacatecj, inic cana iauia, 292 ohcpatl ipan. 726
Auh çan ninoan iquequijchiuac, iaxtlauia in tla- 724 tecatecj, inic cana iauiquiauiztiuh, quijtlalchia in tlacatecpan tlaqualaqujj iuan chimalli iuan pipiltl, iuan in jaqujchtin tlacahuan, oquijchi: auh iuanin in tlacatecj in iaxtlauiac, in oniauquiça, in ontequa quijujca in jaqujchtin iauquiçaque, iuan in nonjuan tlacatecpan ohcpatl ipan inic oniauquiça, ontequa: auh in jcuac tlacatecpan, oniauquiçato cenca pogui, in quauquijch mulli ocuanto, inic mochintin ixpan vitzilopochtli quijnejcitiuia, inic, inca illuiquijchtia. Auh iß inquijchtin tlacatecpan, tlamatiquac, quijnemijxtiotia, mijac tlamatilli inic quijnejcmilia, quijtlalchtia in tlaqualli, iuan maxtlatl, iuan tequcatl, iuan tlalpilonj, iuan quijtocaueca inic mamjxtilliauaque, inic tlacamachtiauaque, inic oquijchi, tlacatecatl.

6. In this, [illegible] tlacatecpan is followed by many [illegible], tlacatecpan, and colors of the Mixtec country.

[p. 66 is blank]

65

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

armament.[140] Thus the largest bodies were assembled, furnished 726 [illegible] weapons, and organized under their respective leaders of all grades on very short notice, awaiting the signal from the chief commander to sally forth, either by canoes across the lake,[141] or along the causeways, to the mainland. Each warrior carried 726 mostly his own frugal provisions[142] which the women of each 724 household had prepared; "corn-bread, meal-cakes, ground beans, "corn-meal seasoned with pepper;"[143] but special carriers also accompanied the force, loaded with a surplus of food, with robes for tents, reeds for huts and bowers, and with cooking utensils like kettles, pans, baskets; also with mats.[144] Sometimes these [140] It also happened that an interval of twenty days (a Mexican month) elapsed between the proclamation of war and the final departure. At least, in most cases, a few days were spent in preparations, since the Mexicans had to give time to their outside allies or subjects to prepare, also. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI): "The Mexicans in "the interval prepared the arms in all the quarters,—shields, swords, and made and "finished many rods ("tlatzontectli"), also slings, and pebbles to be thrown with "cords." (Id., Cap. LVII) "Within twenty days they prepared and fitted out all kinds "of arms, first in the five quarters of Mexico-Tenochtitlan: Moyotlan, Teopan, Ytza-"cualco, Cuepopan, and Tlatilulco, now called Santiago." In many cases, however, an instantaneous mobilization of the whole force became necessary. Mexico, in times of peace, had to be always ready for war. See, also, Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, pp. 49 and 50).

[141] Canoes, "acalli" (water-houses, from "atl," water, and "calli," house), were used 608
for the traffic with the main land, but also largely for the carrying of warriors. It is well known what important part they played against the Spaniards during the siege. For the movements of the Mexicans against a hostile tribe, both on land and water, see Durán (Cap. XIV, p. 111), wherein he describes the attack upon Cuitlahuac, both by canoes and on dry land.

[142] Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369): "porque demas de lo que los reyes proveyan de sus "grandes trojes y graneros, cada soldado llevaua á questas su particular comida, "todo lo que pedia llevar, atada á la carga el espada y la rodela, etc., etc."

[143] The women prepared the food, but it also occurred that the stewards dispensed it. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 49): "With this the stewards and calpixques of the tribes 243
"gave to their quarters maize for to make biscuit, tlacaztutopochtli, pinole, ground "pepper, chiya, beans, and all what pertained to it, providing themselves with every-"thing necessary for certain day stated." The "tlaxcaltotopochtli" (from "tlaxcalli," corn-bread, and "totopochtli," burnt-bread) would be biscuit of maize-meal, and it is therefore called "viscocho." The pinolli, or pinole, corn-meal mixed with pepper, was an important victual. The food of the Mexicans, in general, outside of the meals (exclusively fowl and some game) and aquatic animals, consisted of maize in various forms, and of pepper, "chilli," as seasoning. Cacao furnished their main beverage, and stores of it were taken along. See, also, Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369): "maiz tostado "y otro molido y hecho harina, frijol molido, pan bizcochado, tamales mechosos y cura-"dos al sol, grandes fardos de chile, cacao molido hecho en pellas"). They also used [illegible] to compose a beverage called "yolatli," which possessed particularly vivifying 276 qualities (See note of Sr. Ramirez to p. 280 of Durán), and which they dispensed even on the battlefield (Durán, Cap. XXXVII; Tezozomoc, Cap. LII).

[144] These carriers are called "tamemes," and are generally regarded as having been 554 slaves. But they probably were outcasts from the bond of kinship, or the men of 558 newly conquered tribes (like Tlatilulco for a time after its capture), upon whom this degrading work (beasts of burden!) was imposed as a penalty. Slaves were not ne-

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 carriers were burthened with a surplus of arms, and even with or-
724 naments, designed to reward deeds of high valor on the battlefield itself. This "train" (if we may use the expression) was under the command of stewards, who accompanied the force for that purpose.[145] The Mexicans having no domestic animals besides small [231] dogs and fowls, it necessarily followed that their supplies and stores taken along by carriers were limited, and that consequently their expeditions could never be of long duration, partaking more of the character of forays or "raids" than of regular campaigns. As long as they moved among friendly tribes they expected these to furnish victuals; further on they relied upon what the enemy's country might possibly afford.

726 But the Mexicans, since their position in the middle of the la-
648 gune had been secured, and after they had once gained a foothold on its shores by overpowering successively some of the tribes scattered along the mainland, not any longer ventured out alone on their marauding expeditions. They required of those whom they conquered to join them in arms at their bidding.[146] What the exact relations were, which existed between the Mexicans and the other tribes of the valley, especially those of Tezcuco and Tlaco-

Slaves were not nu-
[567] merous among the Mexicans, if there were any at all beyond the prisoners of war. The latter they could not use for such a purpose. Some of the young people often accompanied the warriors, carrying their weapons and supplies, that they might see and learn (Tezozomoc, Cap. LXXI, p. 121). But the numbers of these carriers (100,000) are greatly exaggerated. Among the various objects mentioned by Tezozomoc as carried along by the Mexicans in their campaigns, there are "tents, low huts, reeds for the xacales." "Tent," in Mexican, signifies "Quachcalli," from "Quachtli," mantle, and "calli," house. Huts, "xacalli," of straw, or bowers, they certainly used, and the step is not very great, from the hut to the tent covered with what we call among northern Indians a "blanket." Durán mentions both tents and huts, "tiendas y xacales," frequently (Cap. XXI, pp. 183 and 186; cap. XXII, p. 190, etc.). The cooking utensils, like pans and kettles, had to go along, of course. Mats, "petlatl," for couches, and probably, also, for the covering of huts, were equally requisite and even indispensable. Lastly, mantles of "nequen" (Sisal hemp, "Jennequin"). This was the most ordinary [291] material composing the dress of Mexicans. The "huepil" of the ordinary Mexican was made out of "nequen." These mantles were used for protection against the sun; they were light and therefore convenient to wear and to have carried (See Tezozomoc, Cap. XXXII, pp. 49 and 50).

[145] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 50): "Y los mayordomos personalmente fuéron á "esta jornada" (against Orizava).

[146] Those tribes which had been made subjects to Mexico were compelled, whenever called upon, to join the armed forces of the Mexicans. Tezozomoc seldom speaks of any foray without mentioning that the subjected tribes took part in it, on the summons of the Mexicans to that effect. See Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 133); Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXI, p. 49; cap. XLVII, p. 77; cap. LI, p. 83). There is hardly any direct testimony, but the fact is abundantly proven that the Mexicans could call out, and did call out, to their assistance, any tribe which they had previously conquered. See Durán (Cap. XI, p. 113); and Zurita "Rapport, etc." p. 11.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 therefore, that sallied out of Mexico was sure to find at the meet-
648 ing-place appointed, numerous reinforcements from various tribes, fully armed and equipped, with an organization similar to their own,[153] ready for the onward march, at the end of which, if successful, a certain share of human victims and of plunder would reward their efforts.[154]

As soon as the entire force was duly collected at the appointed meeting-place, it began to move forward speedily and swiftly, and in a straight line, if possible, towards the enemy's country. The various tribes, as well as their respective subdivisions, kept distinct from each other, led by their own native chiefs. The Mexicans were mostly in the rear. The approach of this body of warriors was not always pleasant to tributary or friendly settlements situated along the marchroute. These were expected to come out with reinforcements, with food and presents, and if any one of them failed or neglected to comply with these requisitions, it became exposed to the most barbarous violence. Such pueblos were sacked, plundered, the people ill-treated. In their fury the Mexicans sometimes went so far as to empty and destroy the stores of maize, and to kill wantonly the few domestic animals (dogs and fowls) of the unfortunate inhabitants.[155]

[724] The tribute which the valley pueblos paid to Mexico may yet, perhaps, prove to have been more a religious offering than anything else. They were certainly more on terms of equality, whereas the foreign tribes were held in subjection proper. The word "popoluca," stammerers, applied by the Mexicans to those of the coast, and which has induced Clavigero to adopt the erroneous idea of a "Popoluca" language, shows the disdain and hatred nourished by tribes of different stock towards each other.

[153] Each tribe had to prepare its own arms and supplies, it remained under its own chiefs and captains. Tezozomoc and Durán both agree on this point. Their organization was essentially the same as that of the Mexicans. Everywhere in the valley, and even in Matlaltzinco, we find the characteristic division of the Mexicans,—the two head-war-chiefs, the four quarters, and the minor captains and braves.

[154] Ixtilxochitl ("Histoire des Chichimeques," Cap. XXXVIII, p. 273) says that Mexico and Tezcuco had each two-fifths, Tlacopan one-fifth, of the spoils. Tezozomoc claims three-fourths for Mexico alone. The point is yet in doubt. (Zurita, "Rapport, etc.," p. 12.)

[725] [155] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 50): "The Mexicans never lacked food nor supplies," when on the march, since they "were so much feared by all the tribes, that as soon as "they arrived they were well received and treated. When their forces were on the "war-path neither man nor woman remained outside of their dwellings, out of fear of "the warriors, and if these perchance met any one, any laborer or trader, they robbed "him even up to his very clothes. Such tribes as did not go out to meet them they plun-"dered and robbed of everything, emptying their stores of maize, killing their fowls "and even their dogs." (Id. Cap. LXXXIV, p. 147.) Durán (Cap. XXI, p. 183): "porque "para el camino los pueblos y ciudades proveian de todo lo necessario, como tengo "dicho, so pena de ser destruidos." It thus appears that for the march the Mexicans did not have to provide any food, since the settlements along the route had to maintain

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

The objective point of this march was, as we have already stated, the enemy's territory. There was no strict boundary-line dividing the tribes of Mexico from each other; a belt of uninhabited or deserted land merely surrounded and thus isolated every tribe.[156] This neutral strip was the ground on which the enemy expected the Mexicans (provided they knew of their coming, and felt strong enough to meet them in the open field).[157] It was, therefore, commonly called "ground of war or battle" ("Yaotialli"),[158] and as soon as the Mexican force approached this region, its movements grew less swift and proportionately more cautious. At dusk they halted on this dangerous area, selecting for their encampment, if possible, an elevated, open position, unfavorable for surprise. The huts (and perhaps tents) and bowers, for which some materials had been taken along, were hurriedly them, Duran positively saying, on the same page, after a lengthy enumeration of the supplies and provisions prepared for the journey: "lo qual, luego fué en seguimiento "de la gente; lo qual no se proveia sino para el lugar donde se avia de asentar el real, "porque para el camino los pueblos y ciudades proveian de todo lo necessario, etc., "etc., etc." The same author continues (p. 194): "Hacianse servir como dioses, y en "todos los caminos no parecia gente por donde iban los soldados y la gente de guerra, "todos se encerraban que no osavan andar por los caminos, porque los soldados les "quitaban quanto llevaban en sus cargas, y si acaso le queria defender, los apaleavan "y herian, y algunos mataban y iban robando las sementeras y matando quantas galli-"nas y perillos topaban; iban haciendo quanto mal podian, como lo hacen agora "nuestros españoles, si no los van a' la mano, ... y asi en sabiendo que avia "guerra, todos los vecinos de los pueblos, por donde avian de pasar los del exercito, se "escondian y escondian el maiz, el chile, las gallinas y los perros, finalmente escondian "quanto tenian." This shows a very simple mode of subsistance,—they lived upon the country through which they passed. But it also shows the barbarous condition of the Xahuxil tribes. Even on their march through a friendly country from whose annual tribute they partly subsisted, they behaved little better than a large horde of savages, or at least of cut-throats and highway robbers. The "civilized" troops of Europe were little better at that time, and even up to the close of the 17th century.

726 [131]

[156] Gomara ("De las guerras," Vedia, I, p. 442): "They call quiahtiali the space and "area which they left depopulated between the boundaries of each province for to fight "there, and it is like unto sacred." See Tezozomoc (Cap. LXVIII, p. 113; cap. LXXXVI, p. 151; cap. XCV, p. 167, etc., etc.). The delegates sent by Tlaxcallan, Huexotzinco, and Cholula, to assist at the festivals in Mexico, were always met "half way in the woods" ("la mitad del monte") separating the tribes. Ixtlilxochitl ("Histoire des Chichimèques," Cap. XXXIII, p. 123) mentions a boundary line between the territories of Mexico and Tezcuco, but the description of it is such that the statement remains more than doubtful.

[157] Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. III, p. 328): "Quando se admitia la Batalla, y venian "los unos, contra los otros, salian los de la Provincia, o' Pueblo a' un lugar particular, "que tenian entre sus terminos los quales llamaban Tauhtialli, que quiere decir; Ter-"mino o' Lugar de la Guerra. Aqui salian los Proprietarios de la Tierra a' recibir a los "contrarios." Also, Gomara (Vedia, I, p. 442).

[158] From "yaoti," enemy, or "yaoyotl," battle or war, and "tialli," ground or soil.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

of us that they could [capture] bound to Mexico. And he 721 sent grand promises together with many presents of jewels and cloths, also a golden drum, and he also sent word to the priests of the city that they were to retain twenty of [782] us to sacrifice to their idols.

All was in readiness and the warriors whom Montezuma 725 quickly sent were stationed in some ranchos and some rocky thickets about half a league from Cholula and some were already posted within the houses, and all had their arms ready for use, and had built up breastworks on the Asoteas and had dug holes and ditches in the streets so as to impede the horsemen, and they had already filled some houses with long poles and leather collars and cords with which they were to bind us and lead us to Mexico; but our Lord God so ordained that all their plots should be turned against them.

Let us leave this now and go back to say that when, 721
as I have said, they had taken us to our quarters they fed us very well for the first two days, and although we saw them so peacefully inclined, we never gave up our good custom of keeping fully prepared, and on the third day
they neither gave us anything to eat nor did any of the Caciques or priests make their appearance, and if any Indians came to look at us, they did not approach us, but remained some distance off, laughing at us as though mocking us. When our Captain saw this, he told our interpreters Doña Marina and Jerónimo de Aguilar to tell the Ambassadors of the Great Montezuma, who remained with us, to order the Caciques to bring some food, but all they brought was water and fire wood, and the old men who brought it said that there was no more maize.

That same day other Ambassadors arrived from Montezuma, and joined those who were already with us and they said to Cortés, very impudently, that their Prince had

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-'.20) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721 believed they would do as he told them and would 783 come.

Cortés at once told him to go, and that his companion should await his return. So the priests departed and summoned the Cacique and chieftains who returned in his 721 company to Cortés' quarters. Cortés asked them, through our interpreters, what it was they were afraid of, and why they had not given us anything to eat, and said that if our presence in their city were an annoyance to them, we wished to leave the next day for Mexico to see and speak to the Lord Montezuma, and he asked them to provide carriers for the transport of the baggage and tepusques (which are the cannon) and to send us some food at once.

The Cacique was so embarrassed that he could hardly speak, he said that they would look for the food, but their Lord Montezuma had sent to tell them not to give us any, and was not willing that we should proceed any further.

721 While this conversation was taking place, three of our friends, the Cempoala Indians, came in and said secretly to
● 725 Cortés, that close by where we were quartered they had found holes dug in the streets, covered over with wood and earth, so that without careful examination one could not see them, that they had removed the earth from above one of the holes and found it full of sharp pointed stakes to kill the horses when they galloped, and that the Asoteas had breastworks of adobes[1] and were piled up with stones, and certainly this was not done with good intent for they also found barricades of thick timbers in another street. At
721 this moment eight Tlaxcalans arrived, from the Indians
782 whom we had left outside in the fields with orders that they were not to enter Cholula, and they said to Cortés—

[1] Sun-dried bricks.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 erected, each tribe camping distinct from the other, the Mexicans occupying the centre of the entire camp.[159]

It was customary with the Mexicans to send out spies who, under different disguises, penetrated the hostile country ere the force had reached its neighborhood.[160] Besides, as soon as the latter halted on the "war-ground," numerous braves ventured out in advance, as scouts, stealthily creeping through the woods, as near the enemy as possible, to ascertain its position and numbers, as well as armament. The information gathered from these sources was reported during the night to the Mexican chieftain in command, who sat in council of war with the other principal leaders. This meeting, guided partly by the information thus obtained, devised the plan of attack for the coming day. The tactics of the [725] Mexicans were extremely simple: a decoy, in the shape of a precipitate retreat, and an ambush at the termination of it, seem to have been their highest conception. Therefore, during the night, they often dug pits far in advance of the encampment, wherein, at the close of the council, the most daring braves (and even the Mexican commander himself, occasionally) concealed themselves, their bodies covered with straw, branches, or foliage.[161] Meanwhile the warriors were overhauling their arms, painting them-

[159] Duran (Cap. XIX, p. 166): "Asi se partio' el exercito de Tulancingo y caminó "hasta llegar á vista de los enemigos, donde empeçaron a' hacer tiendas y xacales, "cada provincia y nacion para si." (Idem, Cap. XXI, pp. 183 and 184; cap. XXII, p. 190; cap. XXXVII, p. 288: "donde a' tercer dia se juntaron todos los soldados y gente de "guerra con toda la priesa posible y mandaron asentar el real, el qual asentaron con "muchas tiendas y casas de esteras, quellos usauan en sus guerras y oy en dia las usan "en los mercados, que son unos tendejones de juncos que echan las espadañas.") Tezozomoc (Cap. LI, p. 83; cap. LXXVIII, p. 139). This author contains so many details on this subject that we forbear quoting him further with reference to chapter and page. He distinctly says that each tribe camped by itself, the Mexicans in the middle.

[160] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 126): "enviaban delante sus espias muy disimuladas y pláticas en las lenguas de la provincia a' do iban a' dar guerra." Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. II, p. 526) copies almost textually.

[725] [161] Tezozomoc mentions this very frequently. (Cap. XLVIII, he relates how the chief Axayaca hid himself in such a pit, in the foray against the Matlaltzinca. This is confirmed by Durán, Cap. XXXV, p. 277: "Y quedandóse en celada el rey, metidos en-"tre las ramas y otros debaxo de la tierra escondidos todos los soldados viejos y princi-"pales valerosos.") He also mentions (Cap. XIX, pp. 169 and 176) a very extensive ambush of that kind against the Huaxtecas. Mendieta says (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 131): "They used ambushes, and often very artificial ones, since they laid down on the "ground, covering themselves with straw or herbs, etc., etc." Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. III, p. 530) agrees almost literally with the above. Also Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXV): "They used ambushes frequently, and concealed themselves in bushy places, "or even in pits made for that purpose, as the Spaniards often experienced it. Fre-"quently they took to flight in order to draw the enemy into dangerous positions, or to "assail his rear with fresh troops." We shall revert to this point hereafter.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

721 individual warrior, which is not unlike that of the mediaeval
715 knight or career soldier in our own culture.[8]
782

721 The Aztec reasons for fighting and their social and moral 726 sanctions for war were not so very different from our own, except that we have many more, due to our superior rationalizations. The Aztec military technique, however, was definitely inferior, since it was not so completely developed a social tool as it is our own culture. The basic organization of the army required the participation of every able-bodied man under the direction of the war chief. However, as Aztec society grew more intricate and greater numbers of warriors took the field, the military structure became more rigid.

701 The unit of organization was an aggregation of twenty men, several of which were combined into larger bodies of two to four hundred, roughly corresponding to our platoons and companies. Special detachments of from four to six men, who did scouting and raiding, operated much as do the squads of our own military system. The clan commander marshaled the larger bodies, much as a colonel handles his regiment. The clan troops were banded together in four divisions under the heads of the four municipal quarters, and the tribal war chiefs had the supreme command. In a very numerous army the troops from a given quarter, or barrio, were sometimes divided into brigades, composed of the forces from two or three clans.[9]

The high tribal officers, the war chief, the chiefs of the quarters and the clan chiefs commanded the larger bodies. The ordinary chiefs and members of the warrior orders, the Knights of the Eagle and the Tiger and of a third infrequently mentioned order, the Arrow, according to their particular ability, took over the lesser units. In other words,

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

714 by the maturer warriors. A tribesman had the right to elaborate his dress in accordance with his prowess, and the great chiefs wore attached to their backs immense frames covered with feathers. Tribes, and even clans, wore special insignia, so that friend could be distinguished from foe and chief from common warrior. The term uniform could hardly be used, since the rich variety and indulgence in individual fancy produced a kaleidoscopic effect in the motley array of bright colors and strange forms.[8]

712 To supply these forces was a very considerable task. Each quarter of the town had its tlacochcalco, or house of darts, an arsenal where the military supplies were stored. This was situated near the chief temple, the lofty sides of which made it a natural strong point. At a call to arms the clan leaders could rapidly assemble their men and equip them at these rallying points, which were also centers of the religious and social life of the community.[9]

724 An offensive campaign was a more serious undertaking. Having no beasts of burden, the warriors had to carry their own food with them. Due to the governmental system, wherein each town was independent, the armies did not dare live off the country for fear of inciting revolt and also because most communities lacked the food to sustain a large body of men. Thus, prior to a war, negotiations had to be made whereby supplies could be concentrated and allies brought together at a point as near as possible to the zone of attack. Usually a single battle decided the issue, since the [724] attacking force could not maintain itself in the field for more than a very few days. The calculations necessary to fight a war two or three hundred miles away in Oaxaca, say, were highly complex, and much of the Aztec force on such a campaign must have been composed of local tribesmen, stiffened 724 with a garde d'élite of Tenochcas and Texcocans.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Owing to this difficulty in respect to transport, siege 712
operations were virtually impossible, so that formal fortifications were rare. Some towns were built in very strategic locations, high on a mountainside or in the bend of a river, having access restricted to a narrow neck of land. Tenochtitlan, owing to its situation on the lake, was a natural fort. The causeways were penetrated by canals at intervals, so that removal of the portable bridges created natural barriers. The flat roof tops offered good points from which to harry the enemy in the street below, and the many temples were strong points difficult to reduce. (See Plate 37, top.)

Miles of defensive walls surrounded a site in Tlaxcala, where a ditch backed by a wall enclosed an area of several square miles. At Huexotla,* a fief of Texcoco, a wall at least fifteen feet high still exists and must have had a strong defensive value, although its ostensible purpose was to enclose the area about the main temple. Xochicalco† is situated on a high hill which was intensively terraced, and it was further strengthened by a wide ditch cut through the point of easiest access. Sometimes a site was chosen between two ravines which made impassable obstacles to an attacking force. However, while defensive purposes were often taken into account in building towns, strictly defensive works, in the nature of fortifications, were seldom undertaken.[10]

Open fighting, the difficulty of keeping up extended cam- 726
paigns and the informal character of the military force were factors which stultified the development of tactics or strategy. In battle the howling mob which represented the collective

*Way-ehs'-tla. †Sho-chi-ca'l-co.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 strength of one tribe tried to rout the yelling horde of their adversary, and the first to run lost the battle. Captives were taken, tribute imposed, the temple burned, and the defeated group was then left alone again.

To attain victory more easily surprise attacks, sometimes implemented by a little treachery, were instituted. However, the cumbrous process of getting an army onto the field of battle usually prevented this favored method of warfare. More often the Tenochcas and their allies would feint with a screen of warriors, who would be easily repulsed in a pretended rout. The main body would wait in a place of concealment until the pursuing enemy came into view, whereupon they would charge out and demolish them. Losses were chiefly felt in the number of captives taken, since these short hand-to-hand combats were not very damaging to the man power of either side. [787] The capture of a chief or the recognition of a sign of evil portent was sufficient to demoralize an army and, despite their bravery and constant experience in warfare of this type, the Aztecs were little fitted to resist soldiers trained in European techniques.

723 There was rather more opportunity for strategy than for battle tactics. Considerable planning, as we have said, was necessary to move troops upon the field of battle. The Aztecs won campaigns in Oaxaca, Puebla, western Mexico and along the Vera Cruz coast, as far north as Tamaulipas.* Having to move step by step and to intimidate or win over town after town, they needed patience and knowledge of geographical and political conditions. One reason for the honor in which merchants were held was the information of this character which they could furnish from their travels.

*Ta-mow-li'e-pas.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

723 648 pation in trade and booty far in excess of the apparent size and importance of the town.[11] (See map, end papers; Plates 41, top; 42, top; 43.)

721 The purely economic and military aspects of war are as crude, when judged by our modern technical standards, as the rest of the purely mechanical aspects of Aztec life. On the other hand, the ritualistic conception of war as the earthly re-enactment of the titanic struggle between opposing forces in nature has a quality almost sublime. The political and economic frictions that brought about conflict were welcomed by the warriors as an opportunity to vibrate to the deep rhythms of nature, rhythms which met in a celestial antiphony in the Sacred War which the Sun fights each day as he, by his own death and sacrifice, ensures the life of man.

721 796 The War of Flowers was undertaken to satisfy this yearning when no active campaign was in progress. In this incongruously named ceremonial combat the best warriors from several states met in a very real battle, so that feats of arms could be accomplished and captives taken to satisfy the hunger of the gods. One famous War of Flowers was repeated for several years, and the cream of the fighting men of Texcoco, Tenochtitlan and Tlacopan vied with the might of Cholula, Huexotcingo and Tlaxcala. If a warrior were captured he met the most glorious of deaths in direct sacrifice to the Sun. If he lived he gained renown. If he were slain, he [775] was cremated, an honor reserved only for fighting men and passed on to the special heaven where warriors dwell.[12]

726 Such warfare had no place in a conflict with Europeans, but, when reduced to fighting for their bare lives against the Spaniards, the Aztecs put up one of the most desperate defenses in history. It was the last sacrifice, in which Aztec 726 civilization offered up its very existence in an effort to survive. Aztec culture achieved, with Stone Age tools, a civilization patterned to balance the life of man against the dimly perceived forces of the universe. Its downfall was inevitable when confronted with that inexorable European world of steel, objective reasoning and a religion adjusted to meet such totally different concepts as the demands of the powerful and the needs of the weak.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

We cannot tell what Aztec civilization might have become. 000 Like all the nations of the past, and of the present too, which have flourished and ultimately withered in death, the Aztecs nurtured within themselves the seeds of their own destruction. But before we turn from their remote splendor to the preoccupations of our modern life let us catch two last glimpses of Aztec civilization: one of the city of Tenochtitlan as the Spaniards first saw it, the other of the Aztecs in their ultimate war, profane and deadly on this final occasion.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

a defense carried on with that courage found in forsaken men, in this case abandoned by their very gods. We have seen, in the bitter year of 1940, the same pattern repeated when France collapsed and England found a new strength in despair.

An examination of the Mexican social structure in relation to the psychological state of the Aztec mind shows that the Spaniards arrived at a time very favorable for conquest. Comparison of the Aztec military technique with the European discipline and armament of the day reveals an exceptional opportunity for the triumph of European tactics. To explain the familiar tale of the Conquest from the Indian point of view may throw into sharper relief this conflict between two systems of civilization.

Aztec war was highly ceremonial and fought in a spirit very different from the realistic calculation of European strife. The technical equipment of the Indians did not meet the requirements of a conflict waged in terms of European military practice. Moreover, Cortes arrived at the end of the summer, when the tribes of Mexico were too busy harvesting the crops essential for their survival to think seriously of military affairs. A final factor dooming the Aztecs to inevitable defeat was the political structure of Indian Mexico, which provided no way of converting military success to the establishment of a powerfully consolidated state.

The Aztec theocracy did not lend itself to governing or absorbing conquered peoples, although in time a social mechanism might have been developed. While the Aztecs received tribute from over a wide territory, there were constant revolts and betrayals. Probably this same process went on among the other tribal groups in Mexico, so that the politi-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

[532]

FIG. 6. Aztec sorcerers, sent from the highland, offer bewitched food to Cortes and his staff, who disdain the viands. Codex Florentino

[726] foreign to Indian principles of war. The simple Indian methods of mass attack were of little avail against the maneuvering of a well-drilled force, for the native tactics could only bring the merest fraction of their fighting force in direct contact with the enemy.

[754] The Spaniards also resisted witchcraft on the occasion when Montezuma seriously applied it. However, sorcery, according to native standards, was at best a two-edged weapon, so that it is doubtful if this failure had any other than a confirmatory bearing on the Indian attitude of mind toward the supernatural quality of the Spaniards. The problem that beset Montezuma was not that the invaders were themselves gods, but that they were the symbols, the vicars on earth, as it were, of vast unearthly forces bent on establishing a new social order. As such the Spaniards required the most gingerly handling.[8] (See Fig. 6.)

175 669 When the Spaniards were approaching the capital a political problem entered to complicate the spiritual one. The

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

ments from the army of Narvaez to join the beleaguered [726] troops of Alvarado. The ceremonial aspect of war in Indian Mexico did not envisage the splitting of an adversary's army and the separate destruction of its weakened parts, a rudimentary law of European military tactics.

Yet once the Spaniards were united in the city they ceased to be a military problem and became the emotional focus of the Indians' wrath and fear. They had to shut themselves up in the palace of Axayacatl to resist the force of this uprising in which the whole tribe participated. The Aztecs, having immobilized their enemies, visited their hate and rage in a manner unparalleled in the annals of Indian campaigns. Every citizen joined in hurling missiles at the besieged in-

[532]

Fig. 15. Here the Spanish are dislodging the Aztecs from a temple, where the Indians had gathered to enfilade them. Lienzo de Tlaxcala

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175

[532]

FIG. 20. Cortes' plan to retake Tenochtitlan involved isolating the island city from the mainland. Tenochtitlan is shown in the center of the picture, surrounded by the lake on which float the war canoes of its defenders. The Spanish forces devote themselves to reducing the mainland towns. Lienzo de Tlaxcala

[726] In each case the Indian war convention of a single decisive mêlée proved worthless against the versatility of the Spanish attack. Cortes soon pacified the eastern country sufficiently to try to regain Tenochtitlan. (See Fig. 19.)

175 648 Typical Indian perfidy, from our point of view today, but common sense to the people of that era, virtually accomplished the downfall of Mexico. The Texcocans, closest allies of the Aztecs, and for that reason perhaps the most jealous

The fifteenth month they named Panquetzaliztli. In this month they celebrated a feast to the god of war, Uitzilopochtli. Before this feast, the priests of the idols fasted for forty days and performed other severe penances, like going naked at midnight to carry branches to the mountains. Etc.

Chapter 15
Panquetzaliztli

On the second day of this month all began to perform a dance and to sing the canticles of Uitzilopochtli in the the courtyard of his pyramid. Men and women danced, all together. They began these canticles in the afternoon, and they ended at nearly ten o'clock. These dances and songs lasted twenty days.

On the ninth day of this month, they adorned, with great ceremonies, those whom they were to slay. They painted them in various colors; they decked them in many papers. Finally they performed a dance with them, in which went a woman paired with a man, singing and dancing.

On the sixteenth day of this month, the owners of the slaves began a fast; and on the nineteenth day, they began to perform a number of dances in which all, men and women, went grasping hands, and they danced winding back and forth in the courtyard of the aforementioned pyramid. A number of old men sang, and played [instruments] while the others danced.

After those who were to die had performed many ceremonies, there came down from the pyramid of Uitzilopochtli one attired in the ornaments of the god Paynal, and he slew four of those slaves in the ball court which was found in the courtyard which they called Teotlachtli. From there he departed and circled all the city, running; and in certain places he slew, in each one, a slave. And from that point [onward], two factions began a mock battle. Some died in the skirmishing.

1. Marginal notation: Dedicatio Templi adeat.

"Al quinzeno mes llamauan Panquetzaliztli: En este mes haziã fiesta al dios de la guerra Vitzilobuchtli: antes desta fiesta los satrapas de los ydolos ayunauan quarenta dias y hazian otras penjtencias asperas como era yr a la media noche desnudos a lleuar ramos a los montes. Etc.

796X [805 776 785]

Cap. 15.
Panquetzaliztli.

1 e KL. e 9[1]
2 f El segundo dia deste mes començauã f 10
3 g todos a hazer areyto, y a cantar los can- g 11
4 A tares de Vitzilobuchtli, en el patio de A 12
5 b su cu, baylauan hombres y mugeres to- b 13
6 c dos juntos: comẽçauan estos cantares c 14
7 d a la tarde, y acabauan cerca de las diez: d 15
8 e durauan estos bayles y cantos veinte e 16
9 f dias. f 17
10 g A los nueue dias deste mes: apare- g 18
11 A jauã cõ grandes cerimonjas a los que A 19
12 b aujan de matar pintauanlos de diuersas b 20
13 c colores, componjãlos con muchos pa- c 21
14 d peles: al fin hazian vn areyte con ellos, d 22
15 e en el qual vyan vna muger y vn hom- e 23
16 f bre pareados cantando y baylãdo. f 24
17 g A los deziseys dias deste mes: co- g 25
18 A mençauã a ayunar los dueños de los A 26
19 b esclauos y a los dezinueue dias, comen- b 27
20 c çauan a hazer vnas danças en que yvan c 28
todos asidos de las manos hombres y mugeres, y dançauan culebreãdo en el patio del dicho cu, cantauã y tañjan vnos viejos entre tanto que los otros dancauan.

Despues de auer hecho muchas cerimonjas los que avian de morir decendian del cu de Vitzilobuchtli, vno vestido con los ornamẽtos del dios Paynal, y mataua quatro de aquellos esclauos en el juego de pelota que estaua en el patio que llamauã teutlachtli: de alli yva y cercaua toda la ciudad corriendo, y en ciertas partes mataua en cada vno vn esclauo: y de alli començauan a escaramuçar dos partialidades, murian algunos en la escaramuça.

796X [535] [346] [726]

532
[714
726
411]
[727 782]
[693]
[726
714
411]
[693]
[695]

—Ilter Pasa y Troncoso

79. Warriors in battle array (Chapter 17). 80. Conquest of a city (Chapter 17). 81. Sacrifice of a war captive (Chapter 17). 82-84. Judges (Chapter 17). 85. A trial (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(K)]

[p. 36(J) is blank]

643 701 the seasoned warriors, the fearless warriors, the Otomí, and the noblemen who dwelt in the young men's houses.

tiacahoan, in oqujchtin, in tequjoaque, in quaquachicti, in otomj: ioan in telpuchnemj in pipilti.

721 And when it had come to pass that the ruler adorned them, when he had done this to the brave warriors, then the ruler ordered all the majordomos to bear their goods, all the costly devices, and all the valuable capes there to battle, that the ruler might offer and endow with favors all the [other] rulers, and the noblemen, and the brave warriors, the men [at arms] who were about to go to war, who were to be extended as if made into a wall of men dexterous with arms. And the ruler forthwith called upon the rulers of Texcoco and Tlacopan and the rulers in all the swamp lands, and notified them to proclaim war in order to destroy a [certain] city. He presented them all with costly capes, and he gave them all insignia of great price. Then he also ordered the common folk[2] to rise to go forth to war. Before them would go marching the brave warriors, the men [at arms], the lord general, and the commanding general.

auh in ie iuhquj, in otecencauh tlatoanj, in tiacauh, in iuh oqujchiuh. Niman qujnnaoatia, in tlatoanj: in jxqujchtin calpixque, injc intlatquj ietiaz; in jxqujch tlaçotlanquj, tlaujztli: ioan in jxqujch tlaçotilmatli, in vmpa iauc, in qujnmacaz, in qujntlauhtiz, in tlatoanj: In jxqujchtin tlatoque, ioan in pipilti, ioan in tiacahoan, in oqujchtin in iauteoatoque, in iuhquj oçelotenanti, quauhtenanti mochiuhtoque: ioan in tlatoanj, achto qujnnotza in tlatoanj tetzcuco, ioan tlacopan: ioan in jxqujch chinanpanecatl in tlatoque, qujncaqujtia, injc iautlatoa, injc poliujz ce altepetl: qujntlauhtia, in jxqujch tlaçotilmatli, ioan qujnmaca, in jxqujch tlaçotlanquj tlaujztli. Niman no ic qujnnaoatia: in jxqujch in jmaçeoal, injc iauqujçatiuh: impan hicatiuj in tiacaoan, in oqujchtin, in tlacochcalcatl tecutli, ioan tlacateccatl, tonatiuh itlatocahoan mjtoaia, qujiacana in qujujca iauc, iacattiuj in ixqujchtin tlamacazque, in teupixque, qujnmama in jntevoan cemjlhujtl qujmjtztiuj, in ixqujchtin tiacahoan, in tequjoaque, no cemjlhujtl qujmjtztiuj, in jxqujch iauqujzquj in tenochcatl, no cemjlhujtl qujmjtztiuj, in jxqujch iauqujzquj tlatilulcatl: no cemjlhujtl qujmjtztiuj, in jxqujch aculhoacatl: no cemjlhujtl qujtztiuj, in jxqujch tepanecatl, no cemjlhujtl qujtztiuj, ixilotepecatl: no cemjlhujtl q'mjtztiuj, in jxqujch moquataitoa: çan no iuj in oc cequj altepetl, motetecpana, iujian, iocuxca, in otlatoca.

●726 The lords of the sun, it was said, took charge and directed in war. All the priests, the keepers of the gods, took the lead; they bore their gods upon their backs, and, by the space of one day, marched ahead of all the brave warriors and the seasoned warriors. These also marched one day ahead of all the warriors of Tenochtitlan. Again these marched one day ahead of all the warriors of Tlatilulco. These also marched one day ahead of all the men of Acolhuacan, who likewise marched one day ahead of all the Tepaneca, who similarly marched one day ahead of the men of Xilotepec; and these also marched one day ahead of all the so-called Quaquasta. In like manner the [men of] other cities were disposed. They followed the road slowly and carefully.

And when the warlike lands[3] were reached, the brave warrior generals and commanding generals then showed the others the way and arranged them in order. No one might break ranks or crowd in among the others; they would then and there slay or beat whoever would bring confusion or crowd in among the others. All the warriors were extended there, until the moment that Yacauitztli, [god of] the night, would descend—that darkness would fall.

[687]

Auh in jcoac, oaxioac teuatenpan, tlachinoltempan, in iehoantin tiacaoan tlatlacuchcalca, tlatlacatecca njman teumaca, tetecpana, aiac vel tepanauja, aiac vel tetlan qujça, çan njmon vncã qujnmjctia, qujnujujtequj, in aqujn tlaixneloznequj: tetlan qujçaznequj, in oommoten ixqujch iauqujzquj, in ie inman in ooalhuetz acaujztli, in tlaioalli injc tlaiooalcujoaz: auh in jcoac ie itech nequetzaloz, in altepetl poliujz, achto oc cenca mochiia in tletl, in quenman cue-

2. The corresponding Spanish passage reads: "Mandaua luego, a los calpixques, que llevassen armas, a todos los principales, para si, y para sus soldados: y entonces lo notificaua a su gente, y les dauan armas."

3. Teuatenpan, tlachinoltempan: cf. Sahagún, op. cit., II, p. 103 (lugares para la guerra ordenados), and p. 105 (los lugares de las batallas).

And when they already were to rise against the city to destroy it, first was awaited tensely the moment when fire flared up—when the priests brought forth [new] fire—and for the blowing of shell trumpets, when the priests blew them.

And when the fire flared up, then as one arose all the warriors. War cries were raised; there was fighting. They shot fiery arrows into the temples.

And when they first took a captive, one fated to die, forthwith they slew him there before the gods; they slashed his breast open with a flint knife.

And when the city had been overcome, thereupon were counted as many captives as there were, and as many Mexicans and Tlatilulcans as had died. Then they apprised the ruler that they had been orphaned for the sake of Uitzilopochtli; that men had been taken captive and been slain. And the ruler then commanded the high judges to go to tell and inform all in the homes of those who had gone to die in war, that there might be weeping in the homes of those who had gone to war to die. And they informed those in the homes of as many as had gone to take captives in war that they had received honors there because of their valor. And they were rewarded according to their merits; the ruler accorded favors to all—costly capes, breech clouts, chocolate, food, and devices, and lip rods and ear plugs. Even more did the ruler accord favors to the princes if they had taken captives. He gave them the offices of stewards, and all wealth without price—honor, fame, renown.

And if some had done wrong in battle, they then and there slew them on the battlefield; they beat them, they stoned them.

And if several claimed one captive, and one man said, "He is my captive," and another man also said, "He is my captive": if no man verified it, and also if no one saw how they had taken the captive, the lord of the sun decided between them. If neither had an advantage of the two who claimed the captive, then those who had taken four captives, the masters of the captives, decided that to neither one would the captive belong. He was dedicated to the Uitzcalco[4] [or] they left him to the tribal temple, the house of the devil.

And when the city which they had destroyed was attained, at once was set the tribute, the impost. [To the ruler who had conquered them] they gave that ponjz: injc tlequauhtlaça tlamacazque: ioã in tlapitzalli in tecuiztli, in oqujpitzque tlamacazque: 726

ioan in ocuepon tletl, njman ic cemeoa, in jxqujch iauquizquj, motempapauja, mjcali, qujtlemjna in teucalli.

Auh in achto in caçi malli in maliacatl, çan njman vncan, imjxpan qujmjctia, in tetru, tecpatica queltetequjj.

Auh in jcoac ompoliuh altepetl, njmã ie ic nemalpoalo, in quexqujch malli: ioan in quexqujch omjc mexicatl, in tlatilulcatl, njman muchi qujcaqujtia in tlatoanj, injc tepal oicnopiltic vitzilobuchtli injc otlamaloc, ioan omjcoac: auh in tlatoanj njman qujnnaoatia, in tecutlatoque: injc qujtemachtitiuj, injc qujtecaqujtititiuj, in jnchan in jzqujnti, oiaumjqujto, injc choqujlilozque in jnchachan, in oiaumjqujto: ioan qujtecaqujtia in jnchan, in quezquj otlamato iauc, ic vncan qujcujia in maujziotl, in jpampa oqujchiotl: ioan qujmomaceujaia in jxqujch iteicneliaia in tlatoanj, in tlaçotilmatli, in maxtlatl, in atl, tlaqualli, ioan tlaujztli, ioan teçacatl, nacochtli: oc cenca qujmjcneliaia in tlaçopipilti, in tlatoanj intla otlamato, qujmaca calpixcantli: ioan in jxqujch tlaçotli necujltonolli, in maujziotl, in tleiotl, in teiotl. 727 [555]

Auh intla acame qujtlacoa iauiotl, njman vmpa qujnmjctia in iauc qujnviujtequj, qujntetepachoa. 687

Auh intla acame, qujmocujcujlia ce malli, qujtoa ce tlacatl, ca nomal, in oc ce tlacatl no qujtoa ca nomal: intlacamo ce tlacatl itech nelti, aiac no qujmjttac, in quenjn tlamaque: iehoantin qujntlatzontequjlia, in tonatiuh itlatocahoan: aiac tle onqujça in jmomextin in qujmocujcujlia in malli: iuh qujtzontequj, in quauhtlatoque, in mallatoque, aiac ce itech pouhquj iez in malli: vitzcalli qujpoaia, calpolco qujcaoaia, in jchan tlacateculotl. 727

Auh in jcoac oaxioac altepetl in ovmpoliuh, njman icoac mxtlalia, in tequjtl, in tlacalaqujlli itech mana in tlein vmpa muchioa, auh njman no iquac ixque- 728 651

4. Cf. ibid., pp. 301-302, referring to the barrio of Cuauhtin, where slaves fought and died in sacrifice: "Este era en el patio del templo que se dice Uitzcalco."

643 drums, the rubber drum hammers, and the ground
533 drums, and all the properties used in the dance. And 534 [he appointed the kind of] dance, him who would give the pitch, those who would lead, him who would beat the two-toned drum, him who would play the ground drum. All was first arranged, so that nothing would be left out.

veuetl: ioan in ixqujch maçeoallatqujtl, ioan netotiliztli, aqujn cujcaitoz, aqujque in teiacanazque, aqujn teponaçoz, aqujn veuetzonaz, mochi achto mocencaoaia injc atle itlacaujz.

643 And when there was a dance, the ruler [decided] 535 the day. At this time, he adorned and arrayed himself, [in his] head band with sprays of quetzal
292 feathers and gold, with which he bound his hair; a 301 yellow labret, or a green stone lip plug, which he inserted in his [lower] lip; golden ear plugs, which he inserted in [the lobes of] his ears; and he laid on a neck band, either a neck band of green stone or a collar with turquoise inserted; he placed on his wrist a bracelet with a large green stone upon it, or a large turquoise; or a golden arm band; and a quetzal feather fan. With [these] costly goods he went in procession and danced. With a priceless cape he covered and wrapped himself, and in a costly breech clout he girt himself.

Auh in ie icoac maçeoa tlatoanj, in tlein ilhujtl ipan mocencaoa, mochichioa quetzallalpilonj coztic teucujtlaio, injc qujlpia itzon, coztic teçacatl, anoço chalchiuhtentetl in conaquja itenco, coztic teucujtlamacochtli, in caquja inacazco: auh in cozcatl conteca, aço chalchiuhcozcatl, anoço cozcapetlatl, teuxiujtl itlaactoc, macuextli imac qujtlalia vei chalchiujtl ipan ca anoço vej teuxiujtl, anoço coztic teucujtlamatemecatl, quetzalecaceoaztli, tlaçotlanquj injc mjtotia injc maceoa, tlaçotilmatli in qujmolololoa, in qujmoquentia, tlaçomaxtlatl in qujmomaxtlatia,

565 Then also they arrayed and accorded favors to all 535 the lords, and noblemen, the men [at arms], brave warriors, and the high judges, and the [lesser] judges, and brave warriors, men [at arms], and masters of the youths, and singers. And the ruler gave them drink and food, all the things which have been mentioned.

njman ic no qujcencaoa qujntlauhtia: in ixqujchtin tlatoque, ioan pipilti, in oqujchti, tiiacaoan, ioan tecutlatoque, ioan achcacauhti, ioan tiiacaoan oqujchtin, ioan tiachcaoan, ioan cujcanjme, ioan qujnmaca in jiauh, in jtlaqual tlatoanj in jzqujtlamantin omoteneuhque.

687 And if the singers did something amiss—perchance a two-toned drum was out of tune, or a ground drum; or he who intoned, marred the song; or the leader marred the dance—then the ruler commanded that they place in jail whoever had done the wrong; they imprisoned him, and he died.

Auh intla itla qujtlacoa cujcanjme: aço teponaztli qujchalanja, anoço veuetl, anoço cujcaitoa, qujpoloa cujcatl: anoço teiacana, in qujpoloa netotiliztli: njman tlanaoatia in tlatoanj, quauhcalco contlalia in aqujn tlatlacoa, qujtzacutiuh mjquja.

643 FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how 726 he who was the ruler kept vigil; how he kept guard at night and all day, because of war.

The ruler was especially concerned with the keeping of watch against enemies and the guarding of the city, all day and all night. Hence he gave stern commands that guard should be kept faithfully. For at times, suddenly, the City of Mexico was circled by foes; perchance somewhere for this they were gathered together, and were laying a snare. Therefore the ruler kept careful vigil. He did not become besotted. He himself sometimes set forth by night, circled the city, and beheld what was done: perhaps the priest

INJC NAUJ PARRAPHO: vncã mjtoa injc ixtoçoaia in aqujn tlatoanj, injc tlapiaia in ioaltica: ioan in cemjlhujtl in jpãpa iauiotl.

In tlatoanj oc cenca qujmocujtlaujaia in iautlapializtli, ioan altepepializtli, cemjlhujtl ceioal, ic tlatlaquauhnaoatiaia, injc cenca tlapialoz ma quenmanjan atenemachpan iauiaoalolo in altepetl mexico, aço cana ica necentlalilo, tlachichiujlilo, ipampa cenca ixtoçoaia in tlatoanj, amo tlaoanaia, iioma in iohoaltica quenmanjan qujçaia qujiaoaloa in altepetl qujtta tlein muchioa, acaçomo tlapia in tlamacazquj in tiachcauh aço ie necujtlaujlo in mjxitl in tlapatl in octli ioan oc cenca qujntlaquauhnaoatiaia in tlatoanj or the master of the youths were not keeping watch, having already become addlepated.[10] And the ruler most sternly commanded that all the seasoned warriors and lords keep watch all day and all night in warlike lands and be concerned to be a rampart of men dexterous at arms in enemy paths. And they were to apprehend and seize informers who had entered here in secret, who walked about the city. And they perceived when war was to be proclaimed. And when war already was declared, then they hastened to enter [their city] to warn their lords so that then they would ready themselves for guarding against the foe.

in jxqujchtin iauteoaque in tlatoque icemjlhujtl 643
içeiooal tlapiazque, in teuatenpan in tlachinoltempã, 726
in qujmocujtlaujzque oçelotenamjtl, quauhtenamjtl, in iauotli: ioan qujmanazque qujntzitzqujzque in tetlan nenque in ichtaca oalcalaquj in qujoalnemilia altepetl, ioan oallapia in jqujn iautlatoloz, auh in oqujcacque ca ie iautlatolo: njman calactiuetzi in connonotza intlatocauh inic njman no moçencaoa
iautlapializtica.

And if informers[11] were seized, they were slain; they were beaten, because of what they made known. And if it were noted that some knew the Mexicans and were living with them in their homes, they also imprisoned the informers of the ruler's foes, with the householders who had been plotting with them, and their children, and plundered their goods, so that nothing[12] was to be seen in their homes.

Auh intla ano tetlanenque, mjctilo, tetzotzonalo 687
inca nenonotzalo. Auh intla macho, ca acame qujmati in mexica in inchan oalmocallotia, in tetlanenque in jiaohoan no qujtzacutiuja; inca nenonotzaloia in chaneque, ioã in jnpilhoan, ioan namoieloia in intlatquj atl neneçia in inchan.

And likewise the ruler urged strongly that watch be kept within the city, all day and all night, lest someone betray the city, lest it might be surrounded by enemies. And therefore sometimes the ruler and the city would march forth. And the ruler commanded that rulers of the youths, the brave warriors, and all the youths, each day, at night, should sing and dance, so that all the cities which lay around Mexico should hear. For the ruler slept not, nor any of the Mexicans.

Auh çan no iuhquj cenca ipan tlatoaia in tlatoanj 643
injc cenca tlapialoz in jitic altepetl, icemjlhujtl, 726
çeioal, in ma aca qujtlachichiujli altepetl, in ma 722
iauiaoalolo quenmanjan, auh injc icatiaz tlatoanj, ioan altepetl qujnnaoatiaia in tlatoanj in telpuchtla-toque, in tiacahoan: ioan in ixqujch telpuchtli, injc [533] momoztlae ioaltica cujcoanozque, injc qujoalcaqujz ixqujch altepetl, in qujiaoalotoc mexico: ca amo cochi in tlatoanj, ioan ixqujch mexicatl.

And when it was deep night, then the priests of Tenochtitlan and of Tlatilulco, and [men from] all the hamlets [nearby], blew shell trumpets and beat two-toned drums. Then all the priests went forth. Everywhere they performed penances all about the mountain tops. And thus they kept watch lest they come upon something. [When] already it grew light, they went into [the city]. Thus they kept guard each night; thus did they do.

Auh in jquac tlaquauhtlapoiaoa: njman tlapitza, 722
ioan teponaçohoa, in tlamacazque tenochca, ioan tlatilulca: ioan ixqujch altepemaitl, icoac qujça in jxqujchtin tlamacazque, noujian in ontlamaçeoa noujian tepeticpac, ioan ic ontlapia in aço itla qujnamjqujtiuj ie tlatujnaoac ỹ oalcalaquja injc ontlapiaia çeçeioal iuh qujchioaia.

10. Simdon, op. cit., identifies mizial as an intoxicating plant, and tlapatl as Ricinus communis, a medicinal plant. Olmos, op. cit., p. 223, has: los Hazer a otro vellaco, o dar mal consejo: Mizial, tlapatl, cuauxuhqui, nauauil mictoitiocmi. . . .; los Embriachoar, o sabio de uino: Ytech quoua in octli, in nauauil, in mizti, in cuauxuhqui inic oyaniuic, inic oococuic. In Lib. VI, fol. 209r, of the Florentine Codex, this passage appears: "In tiriciztiocmj, in timoltzoncuitiocmj: in juhquj mjzial, in juhquj tlapatl oniquac. Itechpa mjzuia: in oquja niocmo quijzaquizaquj tzoncuitiuiti: ca inhquj in ma tlaxoaquj, ma tlapatl oquçqua: injc oruj: niocmo quijnuiquj in tlein ic moxoxalaia: ipampa injc oinic, in amo momocuitia: ilnilnia. Tlein mach oticqua, tlein mach oticpopolo: ainc ual mjzicoa, niocmo quijalcaua in mocallo: in niocmo ticzuj, ticcua in tlacoujdo tlellelkoc. Por metaphora se dize: de aquel que siendo trauejuo y desbarazado en su oficio, siendo corregido, no se quiere enmendar: y a este tal dizenle que se beuido que el conejdo que ninguno biua cosrja rescibe su corazon."

11. Tetlan nenque: sentinels, according to Simdon, op. cit. Tetlanenuiui, however, in Molina, op. cit., is translated as chismero or malsin (gossip, tattlebearer; hence, possibly, informer).

12. Ad: probably ade is meant.

of Uexotzinco,[8] and the lords of foreign lands, and the lords of Tzapotlan, and the lords of Anauac, and the ruler of Tehuantepec, and all the lords posted on the shores of the oceans, and all the lords of the cities encircling Mexico—the ruler of Texcoco and the ruler of Tlacopan.

And when all the invited lords had assembled—[both] friendly and unfriendly lords—he provided them food. He gave them drink and food; costly goods he gave them all: capes without price, and valuable breech clouts, and devices, and costly shields. There was dancing; there was a procession; there was singing, night and day, as the ruler provided them solace.

And at that time he also gave gifts to all the noblemen, brave warriors, and lords, and judges, and rulers of the youths, and all the singers, and all the keepers of the gods, fire priests, and [other] priests.

And when the feast ended, then all the bidden guests departed.

FIFTH PARAGRAPH, in which it is told how the ruler adorned himself when he was to war upon some city.

And then, when some days had passed, the ruler proclaimed war—that they would go to set forth somewhere to war. He gave costly devices and shields to the noblemen and to all the brave warriors and men [at arms]. And the ruler himself went to war. To set forth to battle and to conquer, he took all the warriors, and the lords of all the cities about, that they might set forth to war and conquest. And when they had gone forth to conquer and to wage war, they rejoiced greatly over the number of captives whom they had taken, since they would slay them all before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli in order with them to observe his feast. And he accorded honor to all the brave warriors and captors; with many things did he favor them. He gave them costly capes, and breech clouts, and long labrets, and head bands; and he gave them titles by which they would be honored and obeyed as men [at arms] and brave warriors.

toque, ioan tzapotlan tlatoque, ioan anaoac tlatoque, 643
ioan tequantepec tlatoanj: ioan in jxqujchtin tla- 527 toque, ilhujcaatentli qujtztoque, ioan in jxqujchtin 648 tlatoque in altepetl ipan, qujiaoalotoque mexico, tetzcuco tlatoanj, ioan tlacopan tlatoanj.

Auh in jcoac ocenqujzque in jxqujchtin tlacoa-notzaltin tlatoque, in jicnihoan tlatoque ioan iiauhoan: njman ic qujntlaqualtia, qujnmaca in atl, in tlaqualli, tlaçotlanquj, qujntlauhtia in jxqujch tlaçotilmatli, ioan tlaçomaxtlatl, ioan tlaujztli, ioan tlaço-tlanquj chimalli, netotilo maceoalo, cujco, ceioal cemjlhujtl, in tepaqujltia tlatoanj, auh in jcoac no qujntlauhtia, in jxqujchtin pipiltin, [431] tiacaoã, ioan tecutlatoque, ioan achcacauhti, ioan tel-puchtlatoque, ioan ixqujchtin cujcanjme, ioan ix-qujchtin teupixque tlenamacaque, tlamacazque:

auh in otzonqujz tecoanotzaliztli, njman ic ompeoa in jxqujchtin tlacoanotzalti.

INJC MACUJLLI PARRAPHO: vncan mjtoa, 643 in quenjn mocencaoaia, in tlatoanj, injc cana iautiz, 292 altepetl ipan.

Auh çan njman iquezqujlujioc, iaotlatoa in tla- 726 toanj, injc cana iauqujxoalotiuh, qujntlauhtia in 724 tlaujztli tlaçotlanquj ioan chimalli im pipilti, ioan in jxqujchtin tiacaboan, oqujchti: auh iioma in tlatoanj in iauh iauc, in oniaoqujça, in ontepeoa qujujca in jxqujchti iauqujzque, ioan in noujian tlatoque alte-petl ipan inic oiaoqujça, ontepeoa: auh in jcoac ōtepeoato, oiaoqujçato cenca paquj, in quexqujch malli ocanato, injc mochintin ixpan vitzilopuchtli qujnmjctiaia, inic inca ilhujqujxtiaia. Auh in ix-qujchtin tiacaoan, tlamanjme, qujnmaujziotia, mjiec tlamãtli injc qujmjcnelia, qujntlauhtia in tlaçotil-matli, ioan maxtlatl, ioan teçacatl, ioan tlalpilonj, ioan qujntocamaca injc maujztililozque, injc tlacamachozque, injc oqujchti, tiacaboã.

8. In ibid., uexotzinco dancer is followed by yoay mixtecapan dancer, and rulers of the Mixtec country.

[p. 66 is blank]

65

701 721 their estate as men dexterous in war, as men of valor, as chieftains. Thus none, when they went, might take account that they might die. [For] if war were not proclaimed, if they were not to go off to die, none might know for how much time they might live. And if war were proclaimed, then set forth together the assembled men of Mexico. The generals and the commanding generals led them. When they reached the place which they were to conquer, upon the next day they disposed them in battle array.

imoceloyo inic oquichti inic tiacauã. inic ayac ỹ uiui ça quipopouhtinemi in immiquiz. im ma ualmihto yaoyotl im ma ommiquiti ma oce ontlamati in oc quesquich cauitl nemizqz, auh intla oualmihto yaoyotl nimã cemolini i ye iatlacatl mexicatl. in teyacana tlatlacochcalca. tlatlacatecca in oacito in õpa tepeuazqz. oc cemilhuipã ĩ yaoteca.

726 687 And there on the battlefield went the shorn ones in pairs. The Otomí [warriors] also went in pairs. If one of the shorn ones died in the fray and if the other of the shorn ones turned tail, then Moctezuma [had an official] take after him. No more might he enter the Eagle House; they kept him shut away in his [own] house. Of no further use was he. And they suspended the shorn one. And in the same way they exacted penalty of Otomí [warriors] if one of them died [in battle] and if the other fled. They took after him; they suspended him as chieftain. And also they deprived him of rank if he showed fear.

auh i ye ompa yaoc. ommettitiui in quaquachicti. no ometitiui. in otomi. intla ce oyaomic quachic. intla oc ce ualmocuepa quachiqz. niman ic quitohtocaya i motecoçoma. aocmo calaqz in q̃uhcali. ça iccen quicallatiaya. aocca moneqz. auh q'caualtiaya inic quachic. Auh çan ye no iuh q'ntlatzacuiltiaya in otomi intla çan no ce omic intla oc ce ualmocuepa. quitohtoca quicaualtia inic tiacauh. auh no quicaualtia inic otlamamauhtiaya.

All with which they had bedight him—the precious capes and costly breech clouts—no longer could he assume. He might put on only a poor maguey fiber cape or a wretched yucca fiber cape, as he deserved.

in isquich in itech oq'tlaliaya in tlaçotilmahtli. in tlãçomastlatl. aoc tle quicui. ça ichtilmahtzintli. anoço icçotilmahtzintli. in q'mulpilia. inic quitlamahceualmacaya.

701 431 643 And perhaps in a year or two [Moctezuma] remembered him, sought him out, and drew him from his home. And when he went before Moctezuma, thereupon he gave him again the devices, perhaps [ornamented] with quetzal feathers or with gold. Then [the ruler] gave him gifts; he presented him a bundle of capes, and provided him with grains of maize—he gave him a canoe full or maize grains; and he provided him with chía—he weighed out two large measures of chía. And thereafter once again he placed himself among [those in] the Eagle House, because he merited once more assuming all the costly capes and breech clouts and all the honors which were his.

auh in quilnamiquia açõ ce xiuitl anoço õxiuitl. in quitemouaya. ychan in q'ualanaya. auh in õya ispã motecuiçoma. nimã ye ic q'ualmaca in tlauiztli açõ quetzallo. anoço teocuitlayo. niman quitlauhtia, cen q'milli in q'maca tilmatli. yuã quitlaoltia cem acalli in q'maca tlaolli yuan quichientia. açõ ontetl y uey tzincopinq' ic q'tamachiua chien. auh quí ye no ceppa yquac tetlan motlalia in q̃uhcali. ypampa ca ontlamahceuh oc ceppa mochi q'cui in tlaçotilmahtli in tlaçomastlatl. in isq'ch ytech poui in imauizço.

701 726 And if, as a shorn one, or as an Otomí [warrior], he were to take a captive there at Atlixco or at Uexotzinco, much was Moctezuma's heart gladdened thereby. And all the lords were happy because of it; they were pleased and rejoiced therefor, that those who were shorn ones or Otomí [warriors] had taken captives: because men dexterous in war had surrounded [the foe].

Auh intla yquachicyo intla yotõyo ypan otlama in ompa atlisco anoço uexotzinco oc cenca ic paquia in iyollo motecuiçoma. yuan in isquichtin tlahtoqz ic papaqz ic motlamachtiaya ic ahauiaya. in oypan tlamahqz inquachicyo in imotõyo. ỹpãpa ca oquimiauayotito in quauhyotl in oceloyotl.

Fourteenth Chapter, in which it is told how Moctezuma ordered closed the road, so that the Spaniards might not come to arrive here in Mexico.

And Moctezuma had vainly commanded that they obstruct the road; that with maguey they plant the highway which led direct here to Mexico; and that there they be shown the road which led to and entered Tezcoco.

And when they had blocked the way with rows of maguey, [the Spaniards] then learned of it and saw that they had only closed the way. They thought nothing of it. They took [the plants] up; they kicked each one far; they hurled them out. Far off they cast the maguey plants.

They slept at Amaquemecan.[1] Then they went on, direct, along the road and came to reach Cuitlauac. There also they slept.

Assembling from all parts the rulers who held sway over the people of the floating gardens — Xochimilco, Cuitlauac, Mizquic — they spoke to them just as they had spoken to the rulers of Chalco. And these rulers of the dwellers in the floating gardens then also submitted.

And when the Spaniards had been satisfied, then they moved on and settled themselves at Itztapalapan. Thereupon they called for and sought the rulers known as the Four Lords — [those of] Itztapalapan, Mexicatzinco, Colhuacan, and Uitzilopochco. In the same manner they spoke to and addressed them (as hath been told). And just so they peacefully and quietly submitted to the Spaniards.

And Moctezuma commanded that none make war upon them nor contend against and meet them in battle. He ordered only that they not neglect [the Spaniards' needs]; that great care be taken of them.

And upon this, here in Mexico, all lay quiet; [the people] did not go out or venture forth. Mothers did not let [children] go out. The roads were empty, and clear; the roads were clean, as in early morning.

1. Details are to be found in Chimalpahin, op. cit., pp. 187-188.

Injc matlactli onnavi capitulo, vncan mjtoa in quenjn Motecuçoma tlanaoati in motzatzaquaz vtli injc amo vel aciqujvi Españoles, in njcã mexico. 726

Auh in Motecuçoma, oc nen tlanaoatica in qujtzatzaquazque in vtli, in vchpantli, qujmetecaque in oallamelauhticac njcã Mexico: auh ie vmpa qujmontlachieltiaia, in jpan vtli iaticac, calacticac tetzcucu.

Auh in vncan qujmetepãtzacca: njman qujmatque, qujttaque in çan oqujtzatzacque, atle ipan conjttaque, caanque, veca conxoxopeuhque, quioalchichitotzque, veca ica ommamaiauhque in metl:

vncã cochque amaquemecan, njmã ie ic vitze, tlamelauhtivitze, qujmelauhtivitze in vtli, acico in cuitlaoac, çan oc no vncan cochque:

in oqujncentlalique tlatoque, in jzqujcan tlatocachioa injc chinãpaneca in Suchmjlco in cujtlaoac, in mjzqujc: çan ie no ivi in qujmjlhujque, in juh qujmjlhujque chalcatlatoque. Auh in iehoanti chinanpaneca tlatoque, çan njmã no intlan oncalacque.

Auh in oiniollo vmpachiuh, in Españoles: njman ic oalolinque ommotlalico in jtztapalapan: njman ie no ic qujnnotza, qujnnenotzallanj in tlatoque: Nauhtecutli mjtoa. In jtztapalapan, Mexicatzinco, culhoacan, Vitzilobuchco: çã ie no ie in qujmjlhujque, injc qujntlatoltique (in oiuh mjto). Auh çan no ivian, iocuxca intlan oncalacque in Españoles.

Auh in Motecuçomatzin, amo tlanaoatiaia injc aca qujniauchioaz, injc aca iauiotica qujnnamjqujz, aiac iauiotica qujnnamjqujz, çan tlanaoatiaia, injc amo çan tlacomachozque, ça cenca inca nechioaloz.

Auh in jquac y, in njcan Mexico, ça iuhqujn cactoc, aocac oalqujça, aocac oalqujztica. In tenanhoan aocmo oaltequjxtitlanj, ça chichipaoaticac in vtli, ichpelpul icac, ça ichpeliuhticac in vtli, ça iuhqujn tlal-

Then all the dwellers in cities beyond the mountains — those of Tlaxcalla, of Tliliuhquitepetl, of Uexotzinco — sped along at the rear. They came girt for war, with their cotton armor, their shields, their bows; their quivers filled and crammed with feathered arrows, some of barbed, wooden points, some blunted, some with obsidian points. They came crouching, and as they went, loosed cries and shrieks while striking their mouths with their hands; they screeched and whistled, and shook their heads.

And some bore burdens upon their backs; they carried rations on their backs. Some carried things [held by a tump line about] their foreheads, or, some, their breasts; some bore things on carrying frames, some in cage-like baskets, some in deep, reed baskets; some bore bundles; they carried them upon their backs; some dragged the great lombard guns, which rested upon wooden wheels. And they moved them along shouting.

njman ie ixquich in aoatepeoa, in tlateputzcatl, in tlaxcaltecatl, tliliuhquitepecatl, in vexotzincatl: tlatoquilitivitze, moiauchichiuhtivitze imjichcavipil, inchichimal, intlatlavitol, inmjmjcon tetentiuh, cacatatzcatiuh in totomjtl, cequj chichiqujlli, cequj tihpontli, cequj itzmjtl momamantivi, motenvitectivi, motenpapavitivi, tocujleuhtivi, tlatlanqujqujztivi, moquacuecuechotivi. 648 726

Auh in cequjntin tlamama, itacamama, cequjntin tlaixquamama, cequjntin tlaelpanmama, cequjntin tlacacaxvia, cequjntin tlaoacalhuja, cequjntin tlatompiavia, cequjntin tlaqujmjlhuja, mamaço tlaqujmjlmamama, cequjntin quivilana in vevei, in totomaoac tlequjqujztli, quauhtemalacac oonotiuh, qujcavatztivitze. 648 726 482

[p. 40 is blank]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532

[726]

[728]

— After Paso y Troncoso

29. The road to Tenochtitlan is sown with maguey plants (Chapter 14). 30. Spaniards receive the submission of two of the Four Lords. (Chapter 14). 31-36. Spaniards on the march from Ixtapalapan to Tenochtitlan (Chapter 15).

[p.44(F)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
●726
[764]

[502]

[764]

—After Paso y Troncoso

86. Burning of Moctezuma's body (Chapter 23). 87. Itzquauhtzin's body is carried away (Chapter 23). 88. Burning of Itzquauhtzin's body (Chapter 23). 89. Spaniards set forth from their quarters in Tenochtitlan (Chapter 24). 90. Spaniards are detected leaving (Chapter 24). 91-93. Flight from Tenochtitlan (Chapter 24). 94. People of Tecalhuayocan comfort the Spaniards (Chapter 25).

[p. 44 (N)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532

[726
714]

—After Paso y Troncoso

103. Spaniards reach Tepoxuodan (Chapter 26). 104. Mexican warriors pursue the Spaniards (Chapter 26). 105. Spaniards reach Cetulutepec (Chapter 26). 106. Spaniards reach Xoloc (Chapter 26). 107. Spaniards reach Aztaquemecan (Chapter 26). 108. Mexicans on mountain-top watch for the departure of the Spaniards (Chapter 27). 109, 110. Battle at Mt. Tonan (Chapter 27).

[p. 44 (P)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726

[502]

[701
502]

— After Paso y Troncoso

119. Spaniards attack Çaquiapan (Chapter 30). 120. Spaniards crumble the wall at Xolloco (Chapter 30). 121. Fighting at Xolloco (Chapter 30). 122. Spaniards pierce the wall at Uitzillan (Chapter 31). 123. Allies of the Spaniards fill the canals (Chapter 31). 124. Spanish horsemen ride in at Uitzillan (Chapter 31). 125. Spanish horseman spears a Tlatilulcan (Chapter 31). 126. Mexican warriors unhorse and kill the Spaniard (Chapter 31). 127. Shorn ones land from warboats (Chapter 31).

[p. 44(R)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726

—After Paso y Troncoso

128. Spaniards are attacked on both sides (Chapter 31). 129. Mexican warriors toss the captured cannon into the water at Tetamapolco (Chapter 31). 130. Mexicans flee from Tenochtitlan (Chapter 32). 131. Exploits of Tzilacatzin (Chapter 32). 132-134. Battle about Ayauhcalxitlan and Nonoalco (Chapter 32). 135-137. The warrior Tzilacatzin in three disguises (Chapter 32).

[p. 44 (5)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648
714
[502]
[724]

—After Paso y Troncoso

138, 139. Spaniards are fought off and withdraw (Chapter 32). 140. Warriors of Xochimilco, Itzapalapan, and Coyoacan arrive to work treachery upon the Mexicans (Chapter 33). 141. Quauhtemoc and a nobleman (Chapter 33). 142-145. The treachery of those of Xochimilco, Itzapalapan, and Coyoacan is prevented (Chapter 33).

[p. 44 (T)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726
[687]

—After Paso y Troncoso

146. Quauhtemoc and Motecuzoma punish the traitors (Chapter 33). 147, 148. Spaniards arrive at Yaxalamco (Chapter 33, 34). 149-151. Mexicans disperse the Spaniards and capture some (Chapter 34). 152-155. Mexicans capture and sacrifice fifty-three Spaniards, some horses, and many allies (Chapter 35).

[p. 44 (U)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
●726

[417]

—After Paso y Troncoso

156, 157. Mexicans capture and sacrifice fifty-three Spaniards, some horses, and many allies (Chapter 35). 158. Spaniards enter the market place at Tlatilulco (Chapter 36). 159. Spaniards fire the temple at Tlatilulco (Chapter 36). 160, 161. Battle in the market place at Tlatilulco (Chapter 36).

[p. 44(V)]

796 778 Twentieth Chapter. Here is told how the Spaniards[1] slew and destroyed the Mexicans who were celebrating the Feast of Uitzilopochtli in the place called the Temple Courtyard.

726 And after this, when already the feast was taking place, all were dancing and singing, and there was song with dance. The song roared.

When now it was time, and the moment was opportune for the Spaniards to slay them, then they issued forth girt for battle; they came to block everywhere the ways leading out and in, [called] Quauhquiauac, Tecpantzinco, Acatl yiacapan, and Tezcacoac.[2] And when they had closed them off and also various [other] places, [the people] were contained, [so that] nowhere could they get out.

And this having been done, they then entered the temple courtyard to slay them. They whose task it was to kill them went only afoot, each with [his] leather shield, some with their iron-studded shields, and each with iron sword. Then they surrounded those who danced whereupon they went among the drums. Then they struck the arms of the one who beat the drums; they severed both his hands, and afterwards struck his neck, [so that] his neck [and head] flew off, falling far away. Then they pierced them all with iron lances, and they struck each with the iron swords. Of some they slashed open the back, and then their entrails gushed out. Of some, they split the head; they hacked their heads to pieces; their heads were completely cut up. And of some they hit the shoulder; they split open and cut their bodies to pieces. Some they struck in the shank; some on the thigh. Of some, they struck the belly, and then their entrails streamed forth. And when one in vain would run, he would only drag his entrails like something raw, as he tried to flee. Nowhere could he go. And one who tried to go out, there they struck and pierced him.

But some climbed the wall, and so succeeded in taking flight. Some entered the various tribal temples, and there escaped. And some eluded [the Inic cempoalli capitulo: vncã mjtoa in quenjn Espanoles qujnmjctique, qujmjatlatique in Mexica, in qujlhujqujxtiliaia Vitzilobuchtli in vncã mjtoaia Teuitoalco.

Auh in ie iuhquj, in ie illujtlamacho, in ie netotilo in ie cujco, in ie cujcoanolo: in cujcatl, iuhqujn xaxamacatimanj.

In ie inmã, in ohlainmantic inic temjctinque in Españoles: njman ie ic oalqujça omoiauchichiuhque, ocontzatzaquaco, in jzqujcampe quixoaia, calacoaia, in quauhqujiaoac tecpantzinco, acatl yiacapan, Tezcacoac. Auh in ocõtzatzacque: no izqujcã momanque, aocac vel hoalqujça.

Auh in ie iuhquj, njmã ie ic calaquj in teuitoalco in temjctinque: in intequjuh in temjctique çan tlacxipãvia imeevachimal, cequj intotopchimal, yoan intetepuzmaquauh: njman ie ic qujniaoalos in mjtoia, njmã ie ic vi in vevetitlan, njmã qujmavitecque in tlatzotzona oalcocoton vmeztli in jmacpal çatepan qujquechvitecque veca vetzito in jquech: njmã ie muchintin texixili tepuztopiltica, yoan teviviteque tepuzmaquauhtica: cequjntin qujncujtlaço. njman valmotoxaoa in incujtlaxcol, cequjntin qujnquatzatzaianque, vel qujtzeltilique in intzontecon, vel itzeltix in intzõtecõ. Auh in cequjntin qujmaculhujtecque, oalcacamatlapan, oaltzatzaian in innacaio: cequjntin qujncotzvivitecque, cequjn qujnmetzvivitecque, cequjntin qujmjtivitecque, njmã moch oalmotoxaoa in incujtlaxcul. Auh in aca oc nen motlaloa in jcujtlaxcul, ça qujvilana, iuhqujn xoxoqujova in momaqujxtiznequj, aoc campa vel huj: auh in aquin qujçaznequj, vmpa qujoalhujtequj, qujvalxixili.

Auh cequjntin, tepantli qujtlecavique, tel huel momaqujxtiq: cequjntin calpulco cacalaque vmpa momaqujxtique. Auh in cequjntin intlan momaq'a-

1. In the Codex, the slide is omitted.

2. These were, respectively, the south gate of the main temple square (see map) to the Itzapalapan road; the west gate to the Tlacopan road; and, probably, the north and east gates. — Cone, Barrier, compound.

●726 Spaniards] among [the dead]; they went in among those who had died, only feigning death, and were able to escape. But one who stirred, when they saw him, they pierced.

And the blood of the chieftains ran like water; it spread out slippery, and a foul odor rose from the blood. And the entrails lay as if dragged out. And the Spaniards walked everywhere, searching in the tribal temples; they went making thrusts everywhere in case someone were hidden there. Everywhere they went, ransacking every tribal temple as they hunted.

And when [all this] became known, there then was a shout: "O chieftains! O Mexicans! Hasten here! Let all prepare the devices, shields, and arrows! Come! Hasten here! Already the chieftains have died; they have been put to death, destroyed, shattered, O Mexicans, O chieftains!" Thereupon arose an outcry, a shouting, a shrieking with hands striking the lips. Quickly the chieftains marshaled themselves: as if working with a will they brought the arrows and shields. Then the fray joined. They shot at them with barbed arrows, spears, and tridents, and they loosed darts with broad, obsidian points at them. It was as if a [mass of] deep yellow reeds spread over the Spaniards.

[4!]

tique, intlan cacalacque in ovelmjcque, çan momjcanenequja, vel momaquixtique: auh in aca oc mopoçaoa in conjtta, conjxili.

Auh in jmesço in tiacavan iuhqujn atl ic totocac, iuhqujn aalacatoc, yoan xoqujiac coatoc in eztli. Auh in cujtlaxcolli iuhqujn tlavilanj. Auh in Españoles, novian nemj in tlatemoa in calpulco, novian ontlaxiltivi in tlatemoa, in açaca vmpa mjnaia, novia nenque, quixaqualotinenque in iaqujcan calpulco in tlatemoque.

Auh in omachoc, njman ie ic tzatzioa. Tiacavane mexicae vallatotoca, ma nechichioalo in tlaviztli, in chimalli, in mjtl, vallacivi, vallatotoca, ie mjquj in tiacaoan: ommjcque, onixpoliuhque, ommjxtlatique: Mexicae tiacaoane. Njmã ie ic tlacavaca, ie ic tzatzioa, netenviteco, iciuhca valnechicaovac in tiacavan iuhqujn nececenquetzalo in mjtl in chimalli quijtquj. Nimã ie ic necalioa, qujmõmjna in jca tlatzontectli, in jca tlacochtli, yoan in mjnacachalli, yoan in tlatzontectli, itzpatlacio in co. .aça: iuhqujn çozpul ommoteca in acatl, in impan Españoles.

Twenty-first Chapter. Here is told [how] war first began, when the Mexicans gave battle to the Spaniards here in Mexico.

And the Spaniards fortified themselves. And the Spaniards also shot at the Mexicans with iron arrows, and fired the guns at them. And then they put Moctezuma in irons.

And all the chieftains who had died [in the temple courtyard] were thereupon taken out and brought forth, and identified. And the mothers and fathers raised a cry of weeping; all wept over them; there was wailing. First they took them to their homes. Later they carried them to the temple courtyard, brought them together there, and burned them together there at the place called Quauhxicalco.[1] But some [were] burned only at the various young men's houses.

And when the sun was about to enter his house, [but] a little sun still [shone], thereupon Itzquauhtzin cried out; on the [palace] roof-top, he called out and spoke: "O Mexicans, O men of Tenochtitlan and Tlatilulco, your ruler, the lord of men, Moctezuma, beseeceth you and saith: 'Let the Mexicans hear! We are not the equals [of the Spaniards]![2] Let [the battle] be abandoned! Let the arrow and shield be stilled! Unhappy [are] the poor old men and women, the common folk, those not yet of understanding — who toddle, who crawl, who lie placed in cradles or on [cradle] boards, those yet untrained!' For this reason doth your ruler say: 'We are not the equals [of the Spaniards]; may [the strife] cease' — because they have shackled him; they have had irons placed on his feet!"

And when he had said this, then they raised a clamor and chid him. The Mexicans became more and more enraged. One, much inflamed by anger, said: "What saith Moctezuma, O fool? [Art thou] not one of his warriors?"[3] Whereupon there was

Injc ceampoalli oce capitulo: vncan mjtoa iancuj- 726
can peuh iauiotl, injc qujmjcalque Mexica in Españoles in njcan mexico.

Auh in ichoantin Españoles: njman valmotepetlatzatzacque. Auh in Españoles no qujnvalmjna in Mexica in jca tepuzmjtl, yoan ic qujnvalmotla in tlequjqujztli. Auh njman tepuztli contlatlaliique in Motecuçoma:

auh in jxqujchtin tiacavan in omjcque: njmã ie ic 764
tequjxtilo, teçaçaco, teiiximacho. Auh in tenanvan in tetaoan tlachoqujztleoa tetchoqujlilo, nechoqujlilo, oc inchachan qujnvicaca, çatepan qujnoalhujcaque in teuitvalco, qujncentlalique: vmpa qujncentlatique, cecnj in jtocaiocan: Quauhxicalco. Auh in cequjntin tlatlaque çan tetelpuchcali.

Auh in ie oncalaqujz tonatiuh, in oc achiton tona- 648
tiuh: njman ie ic valtzatzi in Jtzquauhtzin, tlapanco valtzatzi: qujoalito. Mexicae, tenuchcae, tlatilulcae, amechtlatlauhti in amotlatocauh, in Tlacatecutli in Motecuçoma: qujoalitoa. Ma qujcaqujcan in Mexica, ca amo titenamjcvan, ma motlacavaltican, ma momana in mjtl in chimalli, motolinja in jcnoveve, in jcnoilama in cujtlapilli, in atlapalli in aiamo qujmati in moquequetza, in movelana, in coçultentoc, in vapaltentoc, in aiamo qujmomachitia: ipampa conjtoa in amotlatocauh. Camo titenamjcvan, ma netlacaoaltilo, ca ocontepuziotique, tepuztli icxic ocontlatlalilique:

Auh in oconjto in, njmã ie ic conchachalatza, conaoa, çan ie ilhujce tlavelcuj in Mexica qualanj, ce ilhujce poçonj: conjlhuja. Tlein qujoalitoa Motecuçoma nocne? amo ce yioqujchoan? Nimã ie ic tlacaoaca, niman ic maantimoquetz in tlacaoaca:

1. Four places named Quauhxicalco, in the temple square, are mentioned in Book II — The Ceremonies, pp. 168, 170, 171.
2. Corresponding Spanish text: "¡nosotros somos hombres no muy fuertes mas que nosotros."
3. Ibid.: "Que dice el pobre de Moctezuma? Y no valiente eres el, no guerrero de la guerra." Nacer: literally, "my friend."

648 an outcry, and then the tumult rose and spread. Thereafter arrows fell upon the roof-tops. But the Spaniards sheltered Moctezuma and Itzquauhtzin under their shields lest the Mexicans pierce them with the arrows.

For this reason were the Mexicans in great wrath: because [the Spaniards] had completely destroyed the chieftains [in the Temple Courtyard]; without warning, they had slain them by treachery.[4]

726 Not yielding to force of arms, [the Mexicans] surrounded the palace. They watched various places that none might enter it secretly — that none might in stealth take in tortillas. Hence, at once was stayed all which they had been receiving; forthwith they left no more. In this way they would starve them.[5]

And as for those who would in vain advise [the besieged], or gain merit by secretly giving [one of them] a little food, if they were seen or detected, they then and there slew them. They killed them on the spot. They either struck them on the back of the head, or they stoned them.

At one time some Mexicans were seen carrying in furs. These let word fall that through them some had secretly gone in. Therefore all were strictly commanded that every road and canal be well guarded and watched; that all take great care in the watching. And those who took in the furs [482] [were] carriers,[6] the emissaries of the stewards of Ayotzintepec and Chinantla. Then and there they breathed their last; their work dropped; at the canal they struck them on the back of the head with wooden clubs.[7] Those of Tenochtitlan had only quarreled among themselves, and quite in confusion had seized the carriers. They said: "Surely he is one [of them]!" Then they put him to death. And if they noted someone [wearing] his fine crystal lip rod, then they quickly seized and killed him. They said: "Surely this one also walketh entering within, to serve food to Moctezuma." And if they saw someone who had tied on himself the maguey fiber cape[8] of a carrier, him also they quickly seized. They said: "This one also is a brute who goeth bearing evil tales, and letteth them in to see Moctezuma."

njmã ie ic onvetzi in mjtl in tlapanco. Auh in Motecuçomatzin yoan Itzquauhtzi, qujnchimalcaltia in Españoles in ma qujnmjnti in Mexica.

Inic cenca qualanque in Mexica: iehica ca vel qujmjxtlatique in tiacaoan in ainnemachpan in qujnçoiomjctique, in amo ivivi ic concauhque qujiaoalotinem; in tepancalli: tlatlapia in açaca onjchtacacalaquj, in açaca conjchtacacalaquja tlaxcalli, çan njman ic ommotzacu in jxqujch in omacoia, çan njmã aocac tle concaoaia: iuhquin qujncujtlaoatzque.

Auh in aqujque oc nen xonexcaia, tlamatzoaia, motlamaceviaia, in ichtacatzin cõmacaia in tlaqualtzintli: intla oittoque, intla oittaloque, njman vncã qujnmjctia, vncan qujntlatlatia, açe qujncuexcochvitequj, anoço qujntetepachoa.

Cequjntin mexica ceppa ittaloque, qujcalaqujaia totomjtl: iehoantin tlanexotlaque, inca cequjntin oncalaquj ichtaca, ic cenca netlaquauhnaoatiloc injc vellapielotz, vel mopiaz in jxquj vtli yoan in jxquj acalutli, vel necujtlaviloa vel ixpialoia. Auh in qujcalaqujaia totomjtl tequjtque intlaivalhoã in calpixque aiutzintepecatl yoan chinantecatl: njman vncan ihiotl qujz, njmã vncã intequjuh vetz, acaloco in qujmõcuexcochviviteoque, vitzantica, çan monetechvia in tenuchca, yoan çan jliviz in qujntzitzquja in tequitque, qujtoaia. Ca iehoatl in: njmã ic conmjctia. Auh intla aca conjttaia ichopilotenteuh: njman qujcujtivetzi, conmjctia: qujtoa, ca no iehoatl in oncalactinemj in contlatlamaca in Motecuçoma: yoan intla aca qujtta, qujmolpilia tequitcaaiatl, no qujcujtivetzi, qujtoa: ca no iehoatl in tlapalpul, in tetzauhtlatolli qujtqujtinemj, cõcalaquja, in conjtta motecuçoma.

4. For qujqujpopoiomjctique read qujnicpopoiomjctique.

5. Literally, "they dried their entrails."

6. Corresponding Spanish text: "los arrojaron a pajes de Motecuçoma."

7. Vitzantica: read ontzantica.

8. Corresponding Spanish text: "ropas mantas delcadas que llamã ayatl."

And he who in vain would save himself, implored and said to them: "What do you do, O Mexicans? I am not [the one]." They answered him: "Thou art [one of them] also, O fool; [art thou] not a carrier?" Then and there they slew him. They only [continued] to guard the people; they went about cautious of others. Their eyes and concern were only to guard the Mexicans. Many they punished for imagined [evil], those who perished without warning, whom they punished not for their own crime.

Auh in oc nen momaquixtiznequj, in qujntlatlauhtia quimjlhuja. Tle amai mexicae, camono nehoatl: conjlhuja, ça no tehoatl nocne, amo titequjtquje njman ic vncan cõmjctia ça teixpipia, ça motecljtlavitinemj, ça imjx intequjuh, ça tepipia in mexica: ca mjequjntin in tlapictli qujtzacutiaque in jxpoposomjctiloque in amo vel intlatlacul qujtzacutiaque. 726

And still other carriers hid and sheltered themselves. No more were they to be seen; they showed themselves to no one; no longer would they come forth to the people. They were in great fright, swooning with fear. They lived hidden, lest they fall into the people's hands.

Auh in oc cequjnti tequjtque motlatique, mjnaxque, aocmo moteittitiaia, aocmo motenextiliaia, aocmo tevic quiçaia, cenca momauhtiaia, mauhçaçonequja, mjinaxtinenca, injc amo temac vetzizque.

And when they laid siege to the Spaniards, for only seven days did they join battle with them in their quarters. And for twenty-three days they were shut in. And for as many days, the canals were dredged, widened, deepened, and made precipitous. Everywhere the canals were made dangerous and difficult. And on the roads, in various places, they erected barriers, laid walls, and placed ramparts. Passages between houses were made dangerous.

Auh in jquac oqujncaltzacque in Españoles: çan chicomjlhujtl in qujncalicalque. Auh in caltzacuticatca cempoalilhujtl omei: auh izqujlhujtl in, in acalotli motatatacac, mopapatlauh, movevecatlano, motetepexiõtz novian movicantlali, moovitili in acalotli: Auh in vtli ipã, netetenantiloc, tenamjtl motetecac, netetenantlaliloc, mooviujcantlali in caltzalãtli: 723 726

And when this had taken place[9] —

auh in ie iuhquj. COO

9. Chapter 21 may end with an interruption completed in the beginning of Chapter 22. Angel María Garibay (Historia de la literatura náhuatl, II, p. 252), however, identifies the break as one of several instances. See also the ending of Chapter 33.

[p. 58 is blank]

000 Twenty-second Chapter. Here is told how it became known that the Captain, Don Hernando Cortés, was coming, and that he was returning to Mexico.

—it became known that the Captain now was coming from Tepeyacac.[1] He had set forth bringing with him many Spaniards, and a great number of men of Tlaxcalla and Cempoalla—many of them, large numbers, an abundance, a teeming multitude, a great host. Not only [in numbers] were they coming, [but] they came to war; they came with devices, in war array, [with] their shields, obsidian-bladed swords, and wooden clubs borne upon their shoulders. They came stirring up a column of dust, [so that] their faces were covered and ashen with dust. They were caked with earth—clothed in dust, in much earth, [which] flaked off. In haste they ran and hurried here. They said, as they went: "Come along, O men of Tlaxcalla! O men of Cempoalla!"

723 And the Mexicans determined among themselves that thereafter they would not be seen, but would hide and conceal themselves. As if the earth lay dead, they would speak aloud no more, [but] only remain spying out of entrances, openings in walls, and holes which in some measure they had pierced through walls, through which they could look out. Only those who had [houses] by the roadside—those along the edge of the road—could do so. But those who were among houses could not. [For] if the Spaniards had seen how many chieftains there were in some places, marshaled together, they would have thought in their hearts that the Mexicans would begin, start, and initiate the war.

And after this, [Cortés] went to and entered the palace; whereupon they shot off the guns.[2]

●726 And when this had taken place, then [the Mexicans] came forth intent upon battle. Thereupon there were [war] cries and there was fighting; the fray was then joined; there was battle. Arrows and rocks fell upon the Spaniards.[3]

Injc cenpoalli onnume capitulo: vncã mjtoa in quenjn machiztico in ie vitz capitan don hernãdo Cortes injc oalmocuepaia mexico.

In omachiztico in ie vitz in Capitan tepeiacacpa in quiçaco, mjequjntin in quinoalhujcac in Españoles yoan cenca mjequjntin in tlaxcalteca yoã in cempoalteca vel mjequjntin vel ixa ·in, vel ixachintin, vel tonac, vel tonaque: amo çan iuh vallaque, valiauiaque, valmotlavizticiaque, valmoiauchichiuhtiaque, inchichimal, inmamaquauh, inmamavitzoc quiquequequechotivitze, teuhtli qujoalçtztiaque, omach iixtlaliuhque omach yixtenexiuhque, omach moca tlalloaque, omach teteuhquimjliuhque, çã moca tlaltin, omach cocotztlaloaq̃ cenca oalmotlaloa, cenca oalhujcinj, motzatzatzilitivi: qujtotivi, vallatotoca tlaxcaltecae, cempoaltecae.

Auh in Mexica monaoatique, injc amo quin mottitizque, çã motlatizque, mjnaiazque, iuhquin tlalli mjctimotecac, aocac naoati, tel hoallachielotoc in tlatzacujlcamac, yoan tepancamac, yoan tlacoiocco achi quicocoionjque in tepantli, injc vmpa ontlachie: çan iehoan in otenoaque, in otentli quitocatoque in iuh quichiuhque: auh in calnepantla onoque amo iuh quichiuhque. Auh intla quimjttanj in cana quexquichtin manj, tepeuhtimanj, in tiacaoan, ca iniol iuh tlamatizquja in Españoles, ca in mexica iehoan quipeoaltia, iehoan quitzintia, iehoan inpeoal in iuiiotl.

Auh in ie iuhquj in ocalaquito vei tecpan: njman ie ic quitlatlaça in tlequjquitzli:

auh in ie iuhquj, njmã ie ic oalquiça quioaliztia in mjcalizque: njmã ie ic tlacaoaca, ie ic necaliou, njmã ie ic muchioa in iauiotl, njman ie ic tlaiecolo onvetzi in mjtl, in tetl, in impan Espanoles.

1. Tepeyacac: presumably not the site north of Tenochtitlan, but one between it and Tlaxcalla.
2. Corresponding Spanish text: "començaron a sonar todos los tiros en señyal de los que eniyan llegado, y para atemorizar a los enemigos."
3. The title is omitted in the Nahuatl text.

● 726 But the Spaniards shot iron bolts and guns. Many men were pierced by the arrows and shot by the guns. The crossbowmen aimed the bolts to good purpose; they sighted well along the bolt upon whom they would pierce. And the iron bolts, when they went, seemed to fly humming and whizzing; great was their whirring. And not purposelessly did the arrows fly. All struck and pierced people through. And the guns were well trained upon and aimed at the people. And when [the shots] struck, all went down stretched out on the ground, extended like sleeping-mats. Without one's knowing, it struck one; without warning, it slew one. As many as they hit, so many died,[4] when they struck vital spots — perhaps the forehead, or the back of the head, or the heart, or the breast, or the belly, or the abdomen. But if they struck only the thigh or the shoulder, they did not then die. They were not endangered, but would recover. And when the Mexicans saw how the gun [shots] and iron bolts struck, they went from side to side, as if back and forth, hither and thither. They kept good watch and observed carefully.

And when there had been battle for four days, then [some] chieftains climbed up — selected and chosen ones, who possessed devices, in whose faces was war. All went up to the top of the [pyramid] temple. They carried up two beams and many rounded oak logs, called the god's wood, which they carried up in order to cast them down [on the foe].

And after them climbed the Spaniards; they mounted the [pyramid] temple. The Spaniards[5] proceeded in squadrons and in files. Ahead went the arquebusiers, who climbed up very deliberately, not massed. They advanced firing the arquebuses and thus loosing shots. Second went the crossbowmen, the archers using iron bolts. Third went the swordsmen. Fourth went the lancers, the halberdiers.

And the chieftains in vain marshaled themselves to cast the wood, the thick oak logs, down upon the Spaniards. They only fended them off with their shields at once and took no heed [of them]. And when the Spaniards had reached the summit, they thereupon struck, pierced, and stabbed [the foe]. And the chieftains, on this, threw themselves to the Auh in ichoãtin Españoles: qujoallaça in tepuzmjtl, yoan in tlequjqujztli, mjec tlaçatl mjnaloc yoan tlequjqujzviloc: in tlatepuztlavitolhujanj, vel qujxcatzinta in mjtl, vel ipan qujtlachialtia in mjtl in aquin qujmjnaz: auh in tepuzmjti injc ꝫuh iuhquin qujqujnacatiuh, iuhquin çoçolocatiuh, cenca çolonj: auh atle çan nen qujça in mjtl, moch temjna, mochi nalqujça in teitic: yoan in tlequjqujztli, vel tepan qujiacatia, vel tepan contlachialtia. Auh in jquac vetzi, vellaltitech viloa, vellaltitech nepacholo, iuhquin pepechtli neteco, amo tenemachpan in tepã iauh, amo qujteimachitia in temjctia, in quezquj ipan iauh vel itzquj mjquj: in jquac imovican vetzi, in aço imjxquac, in anoço incuexçochtlan, anoço iniollopan, anoço imelchiqujpan, anoço imjtipan, in anoço vel inxillan: auh intla çan Imetzpan, anoço imacolpan vetzi, amo njmã ic mjquj, amo ic oviti, çan tel vmpati. Auh in oquittaq̃ mexica in juh vetzi tlequjqujztli yoan in tepuzmjtl, ça avic vivi, iuhquin ixtlapalhujuj, tlatlaxtlapaloa cenca vel motlachielia, vel mjmati.

Auh in ie iuh navilhujtl necalioa: in tiacaoan tlecoque, ichoan in tlatzonanti, in tlapepenti, in tlavicoque, in jmjxco ca iauiotl, muchintin tlecoque in jcpac teucalli, vme vepantli qujtlecavica, yoan mjec in aoaquavitl, mjmjmjltic, itoca, teuquavitl in qujtlecavique, in impan qujoallaçazquja.

Auh njmã ie ic tleco in Españoles qujtlecavia in teucalli, tlatlamãtitivi, cuecuentitivi in Espanoles; tlaiacantivi in matlequjqujceque, cencã tlamach in tleco, amo mamana, qujtlãztivi in matlequjqujztli, ic tlamotlativi, tlaõcaiotitivi, in tepuztlavitoloanj, in tlatepuzmjvianj, tlaiecaiotia in tepuzmaquaveque, in tlanaubcaiotitivi, tepuztopileque, tzinacãtopileque.

Auh in tiacaoan oc nen valmomamanaia in qujoallaça quavitl, in tomaoac aoaquavitl in impã Españoles: çan qujchinaltopeoa, ç... njman aoc tle onievat. Auh in opanvetzito in Españoles: njmã ie ic tevivitequj, yoan tezixili, tetzotzopitza. Auh in tiacaoã njman ie ic valmotepeoa in jtlamamatlaioc teucalli, iuhquin tlilancatl valmotepeoa. Auh in Espa-

4. Corresponding Spanish text: "[illegible] los españoles tales sus tiros [illegible] muy certeros que sabe heroman tire que no matase con el." landings of the temple [pyramid];[6] like black ants they tumbled down. And the Spaniards[7] hurled indeed all of them from the temple [pyramid]; none then escaped. And when they had come from dealing death, thereupon [the Spaniards] entered [the palace] and quickly barricaded themselves.
5. The title is omitted in the Nahuatl text.

And this happened during the hour of eating.

And when this had come to pass, then it was made known to the people, and [the dead] were taken forth; and when all who had been cast from the temple [pyramid] had been taken out, then all were burned at the various young men's houses.[8]

noles vel mochintin quinteucalhujque in jxquichtin tlecoca in tiiacaoan, vel mochinti moteucalhujque, njman aocac maquiz. Auh in ontemjctico, njman ie ic callacq̃ valmotzatzacutivetzque. 726

Auh inin muchiuh ie tlaqualizpan:
auh in ie iuhquj njmã ie ic teiximacho, teçaçaco: 264 764 auh in ie muchintin oçacoque in moteucalhujq̃, njmã ie ic tetlatilo in tetelpuchcali.

6. See Pl. 83.

7. The title is omitted in the Nahuatl text.

8. Corresponding Spanish text: "Y llegando ale alto del co, començaró a huir y matar a los que estauan arriba, y muchos dellos se despeñaró por el co abajo, finalmente todos murieron los que eran subidos al co turnaronse los españoles a su fuerte y bastecieronse muy bien. Los mexicanos enterraron a los que alli murieron porque toda era gente principal y de mucha cuenta en la guerra."

[p. 62 is blank]

764 And as it burned, with pure hatred, with little good will, some chid him, and said: "This evildoer! He terrorized the world! In all the world there was dread [of him]; in all the world there was fear and fright before him; this man, when anyone offended him only a little, he then slew. Many he punished for imagined evil, which was not real but only a fabrication of words."[4] And still many who cursed him, grumbled in their teeth, chattered, and shook their heads.

But Itzquauhtzin they went off with in a boat. They proceeded to take his body in a boat, to arrive here at Tlatilulco. They were deeply saddened; their hearts were desolate. All burst into tears.[5] None chid him; none belittled him. They said: "The lord, the commanding general Itzquauhtzin, suffered torments. He, with Moctezuma, underwent fatigue and affliction. How much pain he endured for us since we have come here and tarried during all the time that Moctezuma was [alive]!" Thereupon they set in order the palace flag and the rest of the paper array with which they bedight him, and they laid food before him.[6] And then they took him in order to burn him in the Temple Courtyard at a place called Quauhxicalco. With great honors his body burned.

●726 And for four days there was fighting. For only seven more days the Spaniards were contained in their quarters. And when the seven days had passed, [some Spaniards] again sallied forth, going to observe, look about, and arrive there at Maçatzintamalco.[7] They went to gather stalks of green maize; they went to secure green ears of maize. Even as enemies they went to gather the green maize. They were in great haste; they no more than got there, and then quickly returned to enter [the palace]. And when they set out, the sun was high; [on their return, the sun] was setting.

Auh injc tlatlac, çan tlavelpan, aocmo cenca teiollocopa: cequj caoa: qujtoa. Inin tlapalpul: cemanaoac in otlamamauhtiaia, cemanaoac in ooalimacaxoia. cemanaoac in oivic valnemamauhtiloia, valneiçaviloia: in ichoatl in, in aqujn çã tepitzin, injc qujiolitlacoaia, njman contlatlatiaia, mjec in tlapictli oqujtzacujlti in amo nelli in çan tlatolchichioalli: yoan oc mjectin in caoaia, qujqujnacaia, ôoiovaia, moquaquacuecuechoaia.

Auh in Itzquauhtzin conacaihujto, acaltica conanato in jnacaio, injc caxitico njcan tlatilulco, cenca motlaocultique, cenca ichoioac in iniollo, teixaiovitoa, aiac ma cavaia, aiac in ma qujtelchioa: qujtoaia. Oqujhiovi in tlacatl, in tlacuchcalcatl in Itzquauhtzin, ca ivan otlaihiovi, yoã omotolinj in Motecuçoma, quexqujch oqujhiovi in topampa in vmpa otivallaque, otioalitztiaque in ixqujch cavitl in ocatca in Motecuçoma: njman ie ic qujchichioa in tecpanjtl, yoan oc cequj amatlatqujtl ic qujchichiuhque: yoan qujtlamamacaque: auh njman ic qujvicaque in qujtlatito in teuitvalco, itocaiocan quauhxicalco: cenca tlamavizzililiztica injc tlatlac in jnacaio.

Auh iuh navilhujtl necalioac, ça on chicomjlhujtique in caltzacuticatca in Españoles. Auh in oacic chicomjlhujtl: oc valqujzque ommotlachielito, ommotlatlachielito, vmpa onacito in maçatzintamalco: concujto ovatl, valxiloiotia, çan coniaucujto in toqujzvatl, cenca çan onjciuhtivia, çan tequjtl onacito: njma ic valcalactivetzque: auh in onqujzca ie vmmotzcaloa, ie vncalaquj in tonatiuh.

4. Corresponding Spanish text: "dgenos denios mal de Moteçuçoma porque mujo sido muy cruel."

5. Corresponding Spanish text: "los del dañadro lloraron mucho a su gouernador porque era muy bien quisto."

6. See Pl. 88.

7. "Entre Popoala y Chapolapec," according to R. H. Barlow: "Anales de la conquista de Tlaxcala en 1473 y en 1521," Tlaxcala a través de los tiempos, V (1945), p. 40, n. 7; it is also noted that "Ixhilcichil (2:297) lo colocan en 'el valle de Almoradi.'" The Anales de Tlaxcala (Heinrich Berlin, ed.; México: Antigua Librería Robredo, 1948), p. 65 (§312), mentions the place in connection with Nonoalco. —In this paragraph, as in many others, is to be noted a great similarity between Sahagún's translation and the Anales de Tlaxcala (§§302, 303). — Rafael García Granados, personal communication.

Twenty-fourth Chapter. Here is told how the Spaniards and those of Tlaxcalla set out and fled from Mexico by night.

And after dark, when midnight came, thereupon came out the Spaniards, crowded together, and all of the men of Tlaxcalla. The Spaniards took the lead, and the Tlaxcallans followed behind, covering the rear, like their walls, their rear guard. They went carrying a wooden bridge, which they proceeded to lay across the canal over which they passed.[1]

At the time, it was drizzling; there was a fine sprinkle, a gentle spray, of rain. They crossed easily some of the canals, at Tecpantzinco, Tzapotlan, and Atenchicalco. But when they went to attain Mixcoatechialtitlan,[2] the fourth canal, then it was seen that they were leaving. A woman fetching water spied them, whereupon she cried out and said: "Mexicans! Come here quickly! Already they leave! Your foes are already slinking away!" Then also a man cried out from the top of the [pyramid] temple of Uitzilopochtli. His cries spread well out over the people; everyone heard him. He said: "O chieftains, O Mexicans! Your foes are already setting out! Hasten here by war boat and along the roads!"

And when it was heard, then there was an outcry. On this, the war boatmen broke forth. They rushed; they plied the poles furiously; the boats struck and bumped one another. They came to [a place called] Mictlantonco Macuilcuitlapilco.[3] And from two sides the war boats came upon them. They pressed upon them, the war boats of those of Tenochtitlan and the war boats of those of Tlatilulco. And a number went afoot, direct to Nonoalco, making their way toward Tlacopan, intending to cut off their advance.

Injc cexpoalli onnavi Capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn Españoles yoan in tlaxcalteca qujzque, choloque in mexico ioaltica. 726

Auh in ovaliovac in oacic ioalnepantla, njmã ie ic qujça in Españoles: ommotenque, yoan in ie ixqujch tlaxcaltecatl: in españoles iacattivi, auh in tlaxcalteca tlatoqujlitivi, tlatzinpachotivi, iuhqujnma intenanoan, intzacujlhoan muchiuhti:, qujvicatiaque quauhtlapechtli contecatiaque in acaloco in jpan ompanotiaque: [312] in jquac in aoachqujauhtimanj, aoachtzetzeliuhtimanj, aoachpixauhtimanj, oc cequj in vel companavique acalotli Tecpantzinco, Tzaputla Atenchicalco. Auh in oacito mjxcoa mjxcoatechialtitlã injc nauhcan acaloco: ie vncan ittoque, in ie qujça: ce atlacujc civatl, in qujmjttac: njman ie ic tzatzi: qujto. Mexica, xioalnenemjcan, ie qujça, ie navalqujça in amoiaovan: njmã no ce tlacatl tzatzic in jcpac vitzilobuchtli vel tepan moteoac in jtzatziliz, ixqujch tlacatl qujcac: qujto. Tiacavane, mexicae, ie onqujça in amoiauoan, vallatotoca in acalchimalli, yoan in vtli ipan. 487 [263]

Auh in ocacoc: njmã ie ic tlacaoaca: njmã ie ic tlatzomonj in acalchimaleque, totoca, tequjtlaneloa, macalhujtequj, macalhujtectivi, tlamattivi mjctlantonco, macujlcujtlapilco: auh in acalchimalli, necoc in impan valmonamjc, in impan valmopic, in tenuchca imacalchimal, yoã in tlatilulca imacalchimal: yoan cequjntin icxipã iaque, nonoalco tlamelauhque, tlacupampa itztiaque, qujniacatzacujlizquja: 726

1. The Aztec would permit sending "bridges" and "canals." — According to all other sources, they carried only one wooden bridge, which was mined in the first canal (that is, at Tecpantzinco, before the present site of the Post Office) and could not be used for the rest of the canals (personal communication, Rafael García Granados).

2. Mixcoa is repeated in the Nahuatl MS.

These places were all at canals near the main temple square, on the road to Tlacopan. Cano (op. cit.) says of Atenchicalco and Mixcoatechialtitlan that they were on the Calzada de Tacuba between S. Juan de Letrán and Cuauhtemoc; Tzapotlan was on the same calzada in the barrio of Tlacopan.

3. The corresponding Spanish text refers to "un lugar que se llamaba mictlantonco, macuilcuitlapilco"; Cano (op. cit.) mentions a Macuilcuitlapilco, "que pertenece a Sn. Pablo y mencionan Sahagún (IV-183)."

726 [411] Thereupon the war boatmen cast their barbed spears at the Spaniards. From two sides—from both sides—fell the barbed spears. And the Spaniards also shot arrows at the Mexicans; they shot iron bolts and guns. On both sides there was death. The Spaniards and the Tlaxcallans were shot by arrows; the Mexicans were shot. And when the Spaniards reached Tlaltecayoacan, there at the Tolteca canal,[4] there they fell into what seemed a deep chasm; they filled an abyss. There all fell. Those of Tlaxcalla and Tiliuhquitepec tumbled in, as well as Spaniards, and the horses, and some women. With them the canal was completely filled, full, clear to the banks. But those who came at the very rear, emerged and crossed over on men, on bodies.

And when they had proceeded to reach Petlacalco,[5] where there was another canal, very slowly, cautiously, and softly, with guarded measure, they set forth upon the wooden bridge. Here they recovered themselves, caught their breaths, and revived their valor.

And when they reached Popotlan,[6] it was dawn, and light was spreading. Already [the Mexicans] set out to attack: already they had been recognized from afar. And then they went raising a war cry against them and surrounding them. The Mexicans took after them; they took those of Tlaxcalla; and Spaniards were slain. And also Mexicans and Tlatilulcans were killed. On both sides was death dealt. They made the Spaniards leave Tlacopan; they pursued them. And when they advanced forcing them from Tiliuhcan and Xocotlihiovican, there at Xoxocotla,[7] there Chimalpopoca, son of Moctezuma, died in the fray. They came upon him pierced by a barbed spear, and wounded. Likewise Tlaltecatzin, [648] lord of the Tepaneca, died there. They had guided the Spaniards, and gone ahead to show them the route, keep them from wrong roads, maintain them on their course, and make the way for them.[8]

Thereupon they passed the Tepçolatl (a small stream). They crossed and forded the water there at Tepçolatl.[9] Then they climbed the embankment njmã ie ic contlaça in acalchimalleque in tlatzcatectli in impã in Españoles: necoccampa necoc in valhuetzi in tlatzontectli. Auh in ichoantin Españoles, no qujnvalmjna in Mexica, qujvallaça in tepuzmjtl, yoan in tlequjqujztli necoc mjcoa: mjnalo in Españoles, yoan tlaxcalteca: mjnalo in Mexica. Auh in Españoles in oacique in tlaltecaioacan in vncan in tulteca acaloco: vncan iuhquin motepexivique, motepexitenque, mochintin vncã onvetzque, ommotepeuhque in tlaxcaltecatl, in Tiliuhquitepecatl, yoan in Españoles, yoã in cavallome, cequj cioa: vel ic ten in acalotli, vel ic tzoneuh. Auh in ça tlatzacutiaque, ça tlacapan, ça nacapan in onqujzque, in vmpanoque.

Auh in oacito petlacalco, in oc ce vncan icaca acalutli, çan jvian, çan matca, çan tlamach, çan tlamatzin in onqujzque, in jpan quauhtlapechtli, vncan patito, vncan imjhio qujcujque, vncã moqujchquetzque.

Auh in oacito popotlan, otlatvic, otlanez, ie oqujchcuhtivi, ie veca motlamatilitivi. Auh njmã ie ic qujmjcaoatztivi, qujmololhujtivi, intech icativi in Mexica, qujmaantivi in tlaxcalteca yoã in Españoles mjctivi: auh no mjctilo in Mexica in tlatilulca, necoc mjcoatiuh, tlacupan qujnqujztique in qujntoca. Auh in oqujnqujztito Tiliuhcan, xocotlihiovican, vncan in xoxocotla, vncan in iaumjc in chimalpupuca, in jpiltzin Motecuçoma: in jpan qujçato mjntoc, tlatzõtectica, yoan vivitectoc, çã ie no vncan in mjc, Tlaltecatzin, tepanecatl tecutli in qujniacanaia, in qujntlaiztlatitivia, qujmotlaxilitivia, qujmotequjlitivia, qujmoquechilitivia in Españoles:

njmã ie ic companavique in Tepçolatl (ce atoiatontli) vmpanoque, onapanoque, in vncan tepçolac, njmã ic ontlecoque in acuecu, ommotlalito otoncal-

4. Ibid.: "Escaba por Sn. Fernando y la Ermita de los Mártires o de Sn. Hipólito" (citing Don. Fernando Ramírez).

5. Ibid.: canal on Calzada de Tacuba — the next to last canal.

6. See map. Caso (op. cit.), however, identifies it as the last canal on the Calzada de Tacuba.

7. Bustamante, op. cit., p. 122: "el camino que va dela Tacuba."

8. In the Robredo edition of Sahagún (IV, p. 73), the account, from Bustamante's 1840 edition, is that "murieron dos hijos de Moctezuma, el uno se llamaba Chimalpopoca y el otro Tlalocatzi, los cuales iban guiando a los españoles."

9. Tepçolatl: a stream near Ommalpulco (Bustamante, loc. cit.).

[Acueco][10] and went to quarter themselves at Otoncalpulco,[11] [where] wooden barriers or palisades stretched about the courtyard. There they refreshed themselves; each one rested. And there they breathed. They caught their breaths; there they revived. [And] there those of Teocalhueyacan[12] came to meet them and lead them forward.

pulco, quauhtenaniotoc, quauhtenametoc in itvalli: vncã mocevique, mococevique, yoã vncan ihiio cujque, imjhio qujcujque, vncan patito, vncã qujnnamjqujco in teocalhujacan in valteiacan. 726

10. Bulnes edition, loc. cit.: "una cuesta que se llama Acueco."
11. Corresponding Spanish text: Otoncuculco; Bustamante, loc. cit.: "cerca se llama Santa María de los Remedios."
12. Teocalhueyacan is the usual spelling.

[p. 68 is blank]

727 all was claimed as booty. He who came upon something, took it, whatever it was; he appropriated it, carried it off on his back, and took it to his home. And on the very place where there were the killings, all—whatsoever it was—which they had gone from and left in fear, and much war equipment, were there stolen: the lombard guns, the arquebuses. And some lay there strewn; gunpowder, iron swords, iron lances, halberds, iron crossbows, and iron bolts lay scattered. And also there were looted iron helmets, corselets of iron and of chain mail, and leather, iron,[1] and wooden shields. And there were claimed as booty the bars and plates of gold, and gold dust, and golden necklaces with pendants.

And when all had been pillaged, thereupon all dispersed into the water and, severally, searched for things, some using their hands, some using their feet.

And as they had set forth, those in the lead had been able to escape. But those who had closed the march, those fell [into the canal] and sank in the water. All had died. It seemed as if verily mountains of [dead] men had been formed. They had pressed against one another and indeed slain themselves, smothered.

●726 And while this was going on, there at Acueco [the Spaniards] had slept; still at night, yet well toward the dawn, they arose, bedight themselves, and girt themselves for battle. Each put on his war array. Thereupon they departed, moved on, and placed themselves in order. And the Mexicans took after them, shouting and crying out—following after them only at a distance, keeping after them from there. And when they reached another place, called Calacoayan, on top of a rounded hill, on a small rise, where there were rows of rocks,[2] there they set upon and slew the people, spearing them. The people there were unwarned, these Calacoayan folk. Without notice they were slain. [The Spaniards] vented and loosed their wrath upon them. And when they had put the people to death, thereupon they came down below and occupied the flat lands, the small plain called Tiçapan. After this they climbed up to Teocalhueyacan.

çaço tlein ipan oquiçato, quicuitivetzi, quimotechtia, quimomamaltia quitquj in jchan, yoan vel ipan nemimjctiloc in jxquich in çaço tlein oquimauhcacauhtiquizque yoan mjec in iautlatquitl in vncan namoieloc in tomaoac tlequiquiztli in matlequiquiztli, yoan cequj vncan tepeoac, vncan tepeuh in tlequiquiztlalli, in tepuzmaquavitl, in tepuztopilli in tzinacantopilli, in tepuztlavitolli, in tepuzmitl: yoã no vncan maceoaloc in tepuzquacalalatli, in tepuzvipilli, in tepuzmatlavipilli, in eoachimalli, in tepuchimalli, in quauhchimalli: yoan vncan momaceuh in teucuitlatl in tlaxantectli, yoan teucuitlacomalli, yoan teucuitlatl tlaxaqualolli, yoan in chaioac concatl teucuitlaio.

Auh in ie ixquich in otlanamoieloc, nimã ie ic onnetepeoalo in atlan, netlatetemolilo, cequintin tlamatemoa, cequintin tlacxitemoa.

Auh injc quizque in iacattiaque, ie vel quizque: auh in ça tlatzacutiaque, ichoantin in motepexivique in matlanvique, mochintin mjcque vel iuhquj tlacatepetl motlali monenepanotoque, çan monetechmjctique, mjhiomjctiq̃:

auh in ie iuhquj in vncã acueco, in oncochque, oc veca iovan oc vellavizcalpan in meuhq̃, in mochichiuhque. in moiauchichiuhque, in õmaaquique in iautlatquitl: njman ie ic oncoa, onolinj, õmotema. Auh in mexica quimjcavatztivi quimoiovitivi, aocmo intech onaci, ça vecapa quimjtztivi ça quin vecapa vitivi, ça quinnachcapavitivi. Auh in onacique cecnj, itocaiocan calacoaian, tlamjmjlolticpac, tlacpactonco, in vncã tecuecuentla, vncã õtemjctitiquizque ontexixilque, amo quimjmachitique in vncan tlaca, in calacoaiantlaca, amo innemachpan in mjctiloque, intech motlavelquixtique, intech mellelquixtique. Auh in ontemjctique: nimã ie ic ontemo in tlanj, connamjquj in tlalpechtli, in jxtlaoatontli: itoca, Tiçapan: njman ie ic ontleco Teucalhujacan.

1. Tepuzbimalli and tepuzchimalli.
2. See Pl. 98.

Twenty-seventh Chapter, in which is told how the Mexicans came to and reached the Spaniards as they followed them at the rear.

Injc cempoalli on chicume capitulo vncan mjtoa in quenjn Mexica intech acito in Españoles injc qujnteputztocaia. 726

Also this very time was when the Mexicans advanced and arrived in order that they might cut off [the Spaniards'] progress. The Mexicans went to and established themselves at the foot of a mountain called Tonan. And when dawn broke, the Spaniards[1] arrayed themselves and ate. Likewise the Mexicans bedight themselves and ate and drank. They drank a mixture of pinole and water.[2] Some climbed to the top [of the mountain], as scouts and sentinels, to watch for when the Spaniards would depart and move on. In truth, standing guard was their very charge, their concern.

No vel iquac in onacito Mexica in qujniacatzacujlizquja: in ommotecato mexica itzintlan tepetl itoca Tona. Auh in otlatvic nec mocencaoa in Espanoles tlatlaqua: no ivi mexica mocecencaoa tlatlaqua, aatli, pinolatl qujy: cequjntin tlacpac tlecoque, iautlachixque, iautlapixque, qujmonjtztoque in quēmā oneoazque, in quenman onolinjzque in Españoles: vel imjx intequjuh in ontlachixticate. [262 272]

And after this, when the Spaniards[3] already proceeded and followed the road, then the scouts cried out and said: "O Mexicans, your foes are already going! Let us array ourselves! Let us arm ourselves, each one! Let us all proceed! Let us all go together! Let none remain behind!" And when they heard this, there was running; all ran hither and thither and went in pursuit.

Auh in ie iuhquj in ie olinj in ie utlatoca in Espanoles: njman ie ic valtzatzi in iautlachixque: qujvalitoa. Mexicae ie iauh in amoiaouh, ticcencaoa, ticcecencaoa; ticemolinj, ticenvi, aiac moczuhtiaz. Auh in oqujcacque nec netlalolo, tlaixqujqujça, tlatotoca.

And when the Spaniards saw them, they waited for them. They then closed ranks in order to encounter them. They studied them carefully in order to consider how to fare well against them. And after this, [the Mexicans] then ran at them; they hurled themselves at them, so that all were enclosed within [the Spaniards' ranks]. Then they were speared and lanced; indeed, then died in great numbers those of Mexico and Tlatilulco. They went to deliver themselves, cast themselves into [the Spaniards'] hands, and came upon death. But few fled from their hands and so did not die. And those who remained at a distance, who remained following from afar, did not die. And when the Spaniards had dealt death among the people, and had spent their rage, they thereupon departed. All who bore burdens went following them. No one knew of them where they Auh in oqujnvalittaque in Españoles: qujnvalmochialtique, ic oalmomanque in qujnnamjqujzque, vel qujnnemjlia in quenjn vel qujnchivazque. Auh in ie iuhquj nec qujnxopiloa, qujncujtlaxeloa in quexqujch calitic momantiqujz, nec texixilioa, tetzotzopitzalo, vel vncan tonacamjcque in mexica in tlatilulca, çan qujmōmomacato, inmac ommotlaçato, çā conmotoqujlique in mjqujztli, ça quezqujn in tematitlampa qujz in amo mjc: auh in veca manca, in tevecapaviti manca amo mjcque. Auh in ontemjctique in imellel onqujz in Españoles: njman ie ic vi, qujnteputzvitivi in jxqujchtin tlamama. Ca aocac qujnmati in campa cochque in jquac: vncan in in valmocuepato, in qujmonjcxicaoato, qujmonteputzcaoato in Españoles.

1. Espanoles: the tilde is omitted in the Nahuatl text.

2. Sahagún (op. cit., II, p. 479) says that it is now a drink of ground toasted maize mixed in water with cacao, sugar, cinnamon, and achiote (achiote — Bixa orellana L.).

3. See footnote 1 supra.

726 slept at this time. Here was the place to which [the Mexicans] went in order to return, when the Spaniards showed their heels to and turned their backs upon them.

766 727 Upon this, then were identified the chieftains who had died, who had been speared. There they burned all of them. And their charred [remains] they gathered up; they collected the bones of each of them. They heaped them all up and then buried them: they buried them in the earth.

805 And these are all the days since the Spaniards came to and entered Mexico, on One Wind of the day count and One Reed of the year count, on the eve of the tenth day of Quecholli. And when they had tarried one day, Two House, at that very time it was the tenth day of Quecholli. And when they came to the end of Quecholli, when it was the actual feast day, thereupon after it followed Panquetzaliztli, with twenty days.[4] Then after it came Tititl, also with twenty days. Then followed after it Izcalli tlami,[5] also with twenty days. Then, at that time, set in the five days known as Nemontemi. And when the five days came to an end, then began Atl caualo, or Quauitl eua, in which the year returned[6] — in which began the new year — also of twenty [days]. Then came after it Tlacaxipeualiztli, also of twenty [days]. Then followed after it Toçoztontli, also of twenty [days]. Then proceeded after it Uei toçoztli, also of twenty [days]. Then came after it Toxcatl, also of twenty days. This was when the chieftains perished; when they were cut to pieces, when the Mexicans were put to death. Then followed after it Etzalqualiztli, also of twenty days. Then came after it Tecuilhuitontli. This was when [the foe] set forth; upon an opportune day, the Spaniards set out, to disappear by night without the knowledge of [the Mexicans]; without its being their will, they set forth by night. And when the count of all the days is added, they are two hundred and thirty-five. And they had been our friends for one hundred and ninety-five days. And they were our foes for forty days.

000 And when the Spaniards had thus gone, it was therefore thought that in truth they had departed forever, that indeed once and for all they had left —

Auh in ie iuhquj: njmã ie ic teiiximacho in tiacaoan in omjcque, in oxixiliosque, vncan qujntlatique in jxqujchtin: auh in intecullo qujpepena, in jmomjo qujnenechicoaia, coolokaia, çatepã contocaia, contlaltocaia.

Auh in izqujlhujtico in Mexico inic calaqujco in Españoles: ipã ce hecatl in cemjlhujtlapoalli: auh in xiuhtonalli ce acatl, oc muztla tlamatlaltiz Quecholli: auh in cemjlhujtique yme calli: vel iquac in tlamatlacti quecholli: auh in oacic, tlamj quecholli in vel ilhujtl: njman ie ic qujoaltoqujlia in Panquetzaliztli, cempoalilhujtl: njmã qujvaltoqujlia Tititl no cempoalilhujtl: njman qujvaltoqujlia Jzcalli tlamj, no cempoalilhujtl: njmã iquac valmotlalia macujlilhujtl moteneoa Nemontemj: auh in ontzoqujz macujlilhujtl: njmã ic vmpeoa in Atl cavalo, anoço quavitl eoa, vncã xiuhqujtzqujlo, vncan peoa in iancujc xivitl, no cempoalli: njmã qujoaltoqujlia tlacaxipeoaliztli no cempoalli: njman qujvaltoqujlia Toçoztontli, no cempoalli: njman qujvaltoqujlia vei toçoztli, no cempoalli: njman qujvaltoqujlia Toxcatl no cempoalilhujtl: ie vncan ixpoliuhque Tiacaoan in xaxamacaque, in mexica in mjcoac: njmã qujvaltoqujlia Etzalqualiztli, no cempoalilhujtl: njman qujvaltoqujlia Tecujlhujtontli, ie vncan in qujzque, vel ipan in ilhujtl in qujzque in Españoles, in moioalpoloque, amo tenemachpan, amo iuh catca teiollo inic qujzque ioaltica. Auh injc mocempoa in jzqujlhujtique matlacpoalli oçe, oncaxtolli: auh in tocnjoan catca chicunapoalilhujtl on caxtolli. Auh in toiaovan catca vmpoalilhujtl:

Auh in oiuh iaque in Españoles: iuh nemachoc in ca oiccen iaque, in ca iccen oiaque, aocmo cepa valmocuepazque, aocmo ceppa imjloch qujchicoa-

4. The Aztec wet ships Amatzolli.

5. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II — The Ceremonies, p. 154.

6. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., VII — The Sun, Moon, and Stars, and the Binding of the Years, p. 23; Sahagún, Bulmalo ed., II, p. 269.

000 to and established quarters at Coyoacan, and it became the Marquis' charge — as well as the road from Acachinanco[3] which led into Tenochtitlan; for the Marquis knew that those of Tenochtitlan were great warriors, great chieftains.

●726 And at Nextlatilco, or Iliacac, there in truth first came the fighting, when they quickly came to and reached Nonoalco.[4] The chieftains came pursuing them. None of the Mexicans died. Then the Spaniards turned back. The chieftains, who fought valiantly by boat, the warboatmen, shot darts at them. Their darts rained upon the Spaniards. They then entered [Nonoalco]. And the Marquis thereupon threw himself upon those of Tenochtitlan; he proceeded along the Acachinanco road. Many times, in truth, there was battle; and the Mexicans contended against him.

ques: auh in vtli in acachinanco vallaticac tenuchtitlan, in moma marques ca vei oqujchtli in tenuchcatl vei tiacauh:

auh in nextlatilco, anoço iliacac, vel vmpa achto iaupevaco, njman acitiuetzico in nonoalco in qujnvaltocaque tiacavan, aiaac mjc in Mexica: njman ic moteputztiqué in Españoles. In tiacavan in acaltica tlaecoa, in acalchimaleque qujmômjna: in immjuh, ontzetzelivi in impan Españoles: njman ic calaque. Auh in Marques njman ie ic qujvallaça in invicpa tenuchca qujvaltoca in vtli in acachinãco: mjecpa valmicalia, auh connamjquj in Mexica.

3. A location in the lake, which can now be fixed as to the east of the Calzada de S. Antonio Abad and south of the Calzada de Fr. Servando Teresa de Mier (personal communication, Rafael Garcia Granados).

4. Nextlatilco and Iliacac are parts of the barrio of Nonoalco, in Tlatelolco. Nonoalco (S. Miguel) is described as an "Islote al norte de la Calzada de Tacuba," an area today bounded N. by Calle de la Emigración and Manuel Gonzáles; E., irregular line approximating Guerrero; S., approximately Luna and Plaza de Alameda; and W., Olivo. — Caso, op. cit.

Thirtieth Chapter, in which is told how the Spaniards fashioned their boats there at Texcoco, in order to come here to conquer Mexico.

And when their twelve boats had come from Texcoco, all of them were brought together there at Acachinanco. Then the Marquis moved [his camp] there to Acachinanco, whereupon [the Spaniards] proceeded to find out where the boats could enter—where the canals were straight, or deep, or not deep [enough], so that they might nowhere be grounded. But the canals were twisting and winding; they could not there get them in.

Two boats they brought in there; they forced them through the road going straight from Xolloco. And once [for all] they resolved and determined to do away completely with the Mexicans. When they had so decided, then they placed themselves in order. They carried guns; in the lead they went bearing the large cotton banner. And so, without confusion or impatience, they proceeded beating drums, and sounding flutes, and blowing wooden whistles.

And the two boats came floating slowly; at one side only were the boats floating. But on the other side came no boats, because it was a place built up with houses. Then they came, giving battle. On both sides death was dealt and captives were taken. And when those of Tenochtitlan who dwelt in Çoquipan saw this, they then ran off; they fled in fear. The small children were taken from among the people. Into the water they went; all in the water were the common folk. A cry of weeping arose. And the boatmen filled boats with their little ones. They plied the boat poles; they plied them with vigor. Nothing else did they take with them, but left, hastily, in their fear, all their wretched belongings. Indeed everything they left scattered in their hurry. And our foes plundered as they went, taking whatsoever they came upon. What they found as they went, they took; they carried off with them perchance [regular] capes; or large, cotton ones; or devices; or two-toned drums; or ground drums.

Injc cempoalli onmatlactli capitulo vncan mj- 000
tot in quenjn Españoles qujxinque imacal vmpa tetzcocu injc tepevaco njcan mexico.

Auh in ovalla imacal tetzcocu matlactetl omuine, çan oc much vmpa mocenten in acachinanco, njman vncã valmjquanj in Marques in acachinanco: njmã ie ic qujtlatemolitinemj incampa vel calaqujz acalli, incampa ie melavaticac acalotli, in açq vecatlan, in acanoço vecatlan injc amo cana macanaz: auh in acalotli in cocoltic, in cuecuelpachtic, amo vei vncan qujcalaqujque, vntetl in acalli in concalaqujque, concujtlaviltequjltique in vtli xolloco vallamelauhticac: auh ceppa quĩcentlatalhujque, quicemjtoque, injc quincentlazilizque mexica in quincentlatalhujzque: nec motecpana, qujvica in tlequjqujztli qujniacantivitz in quachpanjtl, çan njman amo mamana, amo momocivia, tlatzotzontivitze, yoan tlapitztivitze yoan quavilacapitztli.

Auh in vntetl acalli, çan jvian onotivitz, çan cec- 726
tlapal in vallonotia in acalli: auh in oc cectlapai atle valla in acalli, iehica ca calla, nec iativitze, necalivativitz, necoc mjcoa, necoc tlamalo. Auh in oqujttaque in tenuchca in çoqujpan onoque: nec motlaloa, momauhcatlaloa, tetlan tlaano in pipiltzitzinti, çan atlan in vi, cematl mantiuh in macevalli, tlachoqujztleva. Auh in acaleque qujmacaltenque in impilhoantzitzin, qujntlanelhuja, qujntequjtlanelhuja, aoc tle ma itla conmocujlique, çã moch conmauhcacauhtiqujzque, in intlatqujtzin, çan much vmpa contepeuhtiqujzque. Auh in toiaovan tlanamoxtivi, qujcujtivi in tlein ipan oqujçato, in tlein oqujpantito qujcuj, qujmotqujlia in açq tilmatli, in açq quachtli, in anoço tlaviztli, in anoço teponaztli in anoço vevetl.

726 And those of Tlatilulco fought, there at Çoquipan,[1] in war boats. And when [the Spaniards] came to reach Xolloco, where there was a wall which cut across shutting off the road, they fired at it with the big guns. As the first [charge] fell, it did not crumble; but at the second, it collapsed; at the third, finally it quite went to the ground; and at the fourth, at last the wall [fell] completely leveled.

And the two boats moved in to meet those in war boats.[2] There was fighting in the water. And the guns occupied the entire prows of the boats. And there where the [Mexicans'] boats lay thick, where they lay close together, there, upon them, they fired. Many men died thereby. Then the boats went bobbing up and down and rocking, and sank. Just so was it with the bolts; the one upon whom they could take aim could not escape; he then died and there breathed his last. But when the Mexicans could behold and determine where the gun [shots] and bolts would strike, no longer did they follow a direct course. Only from side to side would they veer; only sideways, at a slant, they traveled.

And when [those on land] also already saw that now the big gun was to fire, they all fell to the ground: all stretched out on the ground, and lay flat. And the chieftains withdrew to enter the spaces among the houses. The road became clear; the wide road lay empty [of people].

And then [the Spaniards] proceeded to and reached Uitzillan,[3] where was yet another wall. And many [Mexicans] were spread out by it, crouched, taking refuge behind the wall. For a short time the [Spaniards'] boats were grounded there, as their prows struck land. There for a brief space they tarried while they prepared the guns.

Auh in tlatilulca vmpa tlaiecoque in çoquipan, acalchimaltica: auh in xolloco in oacico in vncan tenamjtl onoca, in onepãtla in quitzacutoca vtli: in tlequjquiztli vei, ic quimotlaq̃, aiamo xitin in iancujcan vetz, auh injc vppa, xitin: auh injc expa, iequene vel tlaltitech ia: auh injc nappa iequene vel iccen tlaltitech ia in tenamjtl.

Auh in ontetl acalli quinnamjctiuh in acalchimaleque, necaliva in atlan. Auh in tlequjquiztli imacaliacac tetentiuh: auh in vnca tetzavatoc acalli, in vncan tecpichauhtoc: vmpa inpan contlaça mjec tlacatl ic mjc: njman aaquetztivetzi, nenecujliuhtivetzi, papachiuhtivetzi: çan ie no ivi in tepuzmjtl in aquin vel quimottilia, aocmo quiça, njman mjquj, vncan qujhiovia. Auh in ovel quitzaque Mexica, in ovel quinemjliq̃ in juh vetzi tlequjquiztli, yoã in tepuzmjtl, aocac motlamelauhcaquetza, ça xvic vivi, tlatlaxtlapaloa, ça ixtlapalhujvi.

Auh in jquac ie no quitta in ie vetziz in vei tlequjquiztli, tlaltech viloa, tlaltech neteco, nepacholo. Auh in tiacavan cacalçtivetzaque in caltzalan chipavatimoquetz in vtli, in vchpantli, ça iuhquin chipaçpul icac.

Auh njman onacico in vitzillan, in oc ce vncã onoc tenamjtl: auh mjequjntin itlan mopachoroca quimotoctitoca in tenamjtl: achitonca vncan ommacã, ontzotzen in jmacal, vncan achitonca onvecavaque in oquiz conchichiuhque tlequjquiztli.

1. Barrio, also known as S. Pablo, Tenpan Çoquipan, or Xoloxiuhco, an area bounded now N. by Calle de Guatemala and Miguel Negrete; E., Calzada de Tlalpan; S., Calzada del Chabacano and Calle de Morelos; and W., Calzada de S. Antonio Abad. — Cano, op. cit.

2. See Pl. 120.

3. Near the Church of S. Pablo (corresponding Spanish text).

Thirty-first Chapter, in which is related how the Spaniards came with the brigantines and took after those who were in boats in order to join battle with them, and then emerged and came to arrive near all the houses.

And when they had readied [the guns], thereupon they fired upon the wall. And the wall then gave way and parted from behind. And the second time [the shot] struck, the wall then fell to the ground destroyed; it burst open, pierced through. Then likewise the road appeared clear [of men]. And the chieftains who were by the wall then dispersed. All fled from there, escaping in terror. And all the various men [allied to the Spaniards] then quickly advanced filling each canal. Then they speedily leveled them with stones, adobes, and some logs so that they were filled.

And after the canals had been filled, then came the horse[men], perhaps ten of them. They rode in a circle; they came wheeling about, twisting and circling. [And] once again horse[men] came, following after the others. And a number of Tlatilulcans who had quickly entered the palace which had been the home of Moctezuma then emerged in terror, and came up against the horse[men]. One [of them] lanced a Tlatilulcan. And though he had speared him, yet he took hold firmly of the iron lance. Then his companions went up to tear it from [the rider's] hands, threw him down upon his back, and upset him. And when he had fallen tumbled to the earth, they hit him repeatedly, they struck him on the back of the head. He died there.

Thereupon the Spaniards assembled and set out together. Then they reached Quauhquiyauac (the Eagle Gate). And they took with them the lombard gun and the equipment which went with it. They placed it at the Eagle Gate. (And for this reason is it called the Eagle Gate, that there stood an eagle carved in stone, a good man's height tall — so high — and flanking it stood, on one side, an ocelot, and on [the other] a wolf, likewise hewn of stone [)].

Injc ompoalli ommatlactli oce capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn Españoles ic valietiaque in vergantines, qujnvaltocaque in acaltica nenca in qujnnamjqujto: njmã ic valqujzque itech acico in jxqujch calli. 726

Auh in oconchichiuhque: njmã ie ic qujvalmotla in tenamjtl: auh in tenamjtl, njmã tzatzaian, cujtlaxeliuh. Auh injc vppa vetz: njmã tlaltitech ia in tenamjtl, vevelocac, vmpet, oncoion: njman no iuhqujn chipacpul moquetz vtli. Auh in tiacavã in tenantitlan onoca, njmã ic valxitinque, valnetlalolo, nemauhcaqujxtilo. Auh in jxqujch nepapan tlacatl: njman iciuhca contetentivi in acalotli, njman iciuhca conjxmana tetica, xantica yoan cequj quavitl injc tlaatzopque.

Auh in ie iuhquj, in ommatzop acalotli: njman ie ic valcoa in cavallome, aço matlacteme, ontlaiavaloco, ontlamalacachoco, ommocovitzoco, ommotevilacachoco: ie no ceppa centlamantli valevaque in cavallome, qujnvalcujtlapãvitiaque. Auh cequjntin tlatilulca talactivetzque in tecpan catca in jchan motecuçoma: njman ic valmauhcaqujçaia, qujmonmonamjctico in cavallostin: ce qujxilico in tlatilulca. Auh in oqujxilico, oc vel can in jtepuztopil: njman qujmacujlito in jcnjvan, icujtlapan qujoalmaiauhque, qujvaltzineuhque: auh in otlalpan vetzico mec qujvivitequj, concuexcochvivitecque, oncan ommjc.

Niman ie ic qujoalcentlaça, oalcemolinj in Españoles: njmã ic onacico in quauhqujiavac. Auh in tomaoac tlequjqujztli qujvicativi, intlatquj ietiuh, contecaque in quauhqujiavac. (Auh injc moteneoa quauhqujiaoac, ca vncan icaca in quauhtli, tetl in tlaxixintli, vel cennequetzalli injc quauhtic, inic vecapan: auh qujztatzacutimanj, in centlapal icaca ocelotl: auh in centlapal icaia cujtlachtli, çanno tetl in tlaxintli. Auh in ie iuhquj in vevei tiacavan, oc nẽ [351 532]

726 And, when this had come to pass, the great chieftains in vain took refuge behind the stone columns; and [347] the stone columns [were] in two rows, altogether eight [of them]. And also the chieftains crowded on the roof terrace of the Coacalli.[1] They filled the roof terrace. None of the chieftains [could] go beyond.

And the Spaniards at first remained quiet. And when they fired the gun, it became very dark; smoke spread out. And those who were hiding behind the stone columns all fled; and all those who were on the roof terrace hurled themselves down, and all ran far away. Then [the Spaniards] took up the gun and went to place it upon the large, round stone.
[1534] And on top of the [pyramid Temple of] Uitzilopochtli, holding vigil to no purpose, [priests] struck two-toned drums; as if with all force they struck the two-toned drums. And then two Spaniards climbed up, going to club them there. And when they had gone there to strike them, they cast them down; they threw them down from there.

And the shorn ones, all the chieftains, who had been fighting in boats, all came forth and issued on to the dry land. And those who plied the boating poles for them [were] the young boys; only these guided the boats. And upon this the chieftains then took note of the spaces among the houses. They ran fast; all in truth shouted and said: "O chieftains, make haste!"

And when it came to pass that the Spaniards saw that they were about to come to grips with and pursue them,[2] then they cowered and sped away; they turned tail; they indeed fled and ran. From both sides they were shot at with darts and barbed arrows; and from both sides they were pelted with stones. Shortly, then, they went to find respite at Xolloco, to catch their breath. There [the battle] quieted, and thereupon [the Mexicans] all turned back. And the Spaniards then also returned and went to establish themselves at Acachinanco. But the gun, in their haste, they abandoned there on the large, round stone. Then the chieftains seized it, ran it forward, and went to toss it into the water. They pulled it to Tetamaçolco.[3] qujmototoctiticaca in tetlaquetzalli: auh in tetlaquetzalli ompantli, nepan chicuej. Auh in coacalli ixlapãioc, no tetentoque in tiacavan, motlatlapantenque aocac ixtlapal iauh in tiiacavan.

Auh in Españoles çã njman amo mamana: auh in oquitlazque tlequjqujztli cenca tlaiovac, poctli motecac. Auh in qujmototitimanca in tetlaquetzalli, netlaloloc yoan in jxqujchtin tlapanco onoca valmotepeuhque veca netlaloloc, nec qujvallecavia in tlequjqujztli contecaco temalacatitlan: auh in jcpac vitzilobuchtli, oc nẽ tlapiaia, qujvitequja in teponaztli, iuhqujn ontetemj qujvitequj teponaztli: auh njmã ic ontlecoque vmentin Españoles, vmpa qujmonvivitequjto: auh in oqujmonvivitequjto in ca valmaiauhque, qujnvalchicanauhque:

auh in quaquachictin in jxqujchtin in tiacavan in acaltica tlaiecoaia, muchintin valqujzque, vallalvacaqujzque: auh in tetlanelhuja in telpopotzizinti, çan ichoãtin in qujvalhujvicaque in acalli. Auh in ie iuhquj in tiaiacavan, nec qujmottilia in caltzalantli vellatotoca, vel netzatzililo: qujtoa. Tiacavane, ma vallatotoca:

auh in ie iuhquj, in oqujttaque in Españoles in ie impan monamjquj in ie qujntotona, njmã ic mocototztlalique, motepuztique, vel totoca, motlaloa necoccampa in valmjnaloia in tlatzontectica, yoan necoccampa in valtepacholo, qujn vmpan xolloco patito, imjhio qujcujto, vmpa valmomanaro: njman ie ic valnecuepalo. Auh in ichoantin Españoles, njman ic no mocuepa motlalito in acachinanco: auh in tlequjqujztli vncan qujcauhtiqujzque in temalacatitlan: njman conanque in tiacavan, qujtototza qujmaiavito atlan, tetamaçolco qujtztlititiaque.

---

1. Spanish text: "muchos otros grandes estaban encima de la casa que estaba armada sobre las columnas." The Coacalli is described in Book VIII —Kings and Lords, p. 44.

2. Qujmotoctiticaca: probably qujmotoctiticaca in tetlaquetzalli.

3. Spanish text: "en esta agua profundo que llamaban Tlilmaçapalco, que está cabe el mesón que se llama Tepanécaco, donde estaba las bombas."

Thirty-second Chapter. Here is told how the Mexicans in terror left their city, from fear which they felt of the Spaniards.

Inje cempoalli ommatlactli omume capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn Mexica valmauhcaquizque in vncan imaltepeuh ipan in quimjmacazque Españoles. 726

And meanwhile those of Tenochtitlan came to enter, here, in Tlatilulco. There were cries of weeping, and there were shouts. Many were the tears of the beloved women. And the men[1] went with their women. One or another carried his child upon his shoulders. When, then, they abandoned their city, it was for only a day. And the Tlatilulcans yet again went there to Tenochtitlan to give battle.

And at this time Pedro Alvarado yet once more moved there against Iliacac, which is toward Nonoalco. Nothing could he accomplish. It was as if he had arisen against a stone. For those of Tlatilulco put forth great effort. On both sides was there fighting, on the road and on the water with war boats. When Alvarado grew tired, then he turned back and went to camp at Tlacopan. And only two days after they had thrown against them the boats which first went — only[2] two — then all [the boats] set forth together and stopped at the outer houses of Nonoalco. Thereupon they issued on to the dry land, the firm ground. Then they followed the narrow road, [into] the heart of the settlement.

And when the Spaniards came, all was clear. No man of the common folk appeared. But Tzilacatzin, a great chieftain and very brave, then cast three of his stones which he carried — great, huge, round rocks: wall stones, or white stones. One he had in his hand; two he bore upon his shield. Thereupon he gave chase to and went against the Spaniards, dispersing and scattering them in the water. Into the water they went. In truth, heavily laden on the water [were the boats] as they went down [into them].

Auh in jquac in, in tenuchca valcalaque in ojcan tlatilulco, tlachoquiztlaoa, tlatzatziztlaoa, ixachi in jmjxaio cioatzitzinti: auh in toquichtin quinvivicatze in incicivaoi in aca quiquechpanoa in jpiltzin: njmã iquac in quicsuhque in jmaltepeuh ça cemjlhuitl. Auh in tlatilulca ie ne vmpa itztivi in tenuchtitlan in mjcalizque.

Auh in ie iuhquj in Pedro aluarado: ie ne vmpa quivallaz in iliacac, in jvicpa nonoalco, aiatle vel quichiuhque, iuhquin tetitech onevaco: ichica ca in tlatilulca cenca mochicauhque, necoc in tlaiecoloc, vtli ipan, yoan atlan in acalchimaltica: in omoxixiuhtlati in aluarado, njmã ic mocuep, motlalito in tlacuban: auh çan jviptlaioc in quivalcentlazque in acalli in acachto valla, can oc ontetl: auh çatepã muchi cõquiça in caltenco nonoalco ommotemato: njman ie ic oalquiça in tlalhoacpã, in tlalhoacpan: njma ie ic quivaltoca opitzactli, in calla icac, quivaliolloia.

Auh in vncan valquizque Españoles ocactivetz, aocac tlacatl oquiz in maçevalli. Auh in tzilacatzin vei tlacauh cenca oquichtli: njmã ic quivallaz, etetl in quitquj iteuh, vevei tepopul mamalacachtic ie in tenuiocatetl, anoço iztac tetl, ometetl imac ietiuh, vnetl ichimaltitlan ietiuh, njman ie ic quintoca quimontepevaio atlan, quimõtoxavaio in Españoles, ça atlan in oniaque, vel aiaetizque in ontetemoque

1. Tiopipiltin: literally, we (men, as somewhat rendered in this translation.
2. Can: probably çan is meant.

701 (And this Tzilacatzin was an Otomí [warrior], as a chieftain, because of his Otomí hairdress. For he despised his foes, even the Spaniards. He disdained them; in truth, all were completely terrified. When they saw Tzilacatzin, our foes then cowered. And much did they try to slay him; either to pierce him with iron bolts, or shoot him with a gun. But Tzilacatzin disguised himself, that he might not be [301] recognized. At times he put on a device; he hung his lip pendants and inserted his golden ear plugs, and he put on a neck band of small white shells; but his head went uncovered, so that it was apparent that he was an Otomí. And sometimes [he had] only his heavy cotton shirt and a thin band with which he wrapped his forehead. And at times he [293] disguised himself by putting on a feather headdress and wig, a head band with [two] eagle feather tufts which went at the back of the head, used to bind [his hair]. Thus did one go with it bound at the time that men were cast into the fire.[3] He went in the guise of one who cast men into the fire; he went imitating those who cast men into the fire. [He had] his golden arm bands; on both arms he had them — in both places he had them on his arms. And the [301] golden arm bands glistened.[4] And also he had about the calves of his legs, leather bands — gilded leg bands, which shone.)

(Auh inin Tzilacatzin otomjtl catca injc tiacauh, ipampa in tlaotonxintli, iehica amo imjxco tlachiaia in iniaovan in manel Españoles, amo tle impan qujmjttaia, vel tlacenmamauhtiaia: in jquac in qujttaia in Tzilacatzin, njman mocototztlalixia in toiaovan: auh cenca qujtemoaia, injc qujmjctiazque, in aço qujtepuzmjvizque, in anoço qujtlequjqujzvizque. Auh in Tzilacatzin, çã mjxpoloa injc amo iximachoz: in quenman tlaviztli in ommaqujaia, itenpilol compiloaia, yoan itetecujtlanacoch yoã conmocozcatia in jcozquj chipoli, çan tlapouhtiuh in jtzontecon, neztiuh injc otomjtl: auh in quẽmanjan çanjo in ichcavipil canactontli injc ommoquaqujmjlos, auh in q̃manjan injc mjxpolos cõmaqujaia ihujtzoncalli, quatzone quauhtlalpilonj icuexcochtlampa tentiuh, ic tlalpitiuh iehoatl injc tetlepantlaxoia, iuhqujn tetlepantlazquj ipã qujztiuh, qujntlaiciecalhujtiuh in tetlepantlazque itetecujtlamatemecauh necoccampa in ietiuh yiocanjxti ietiuh in jmac: auh in teucujtlamatemecatl cuẽcuenio auh no ie in jcxic ieietiuh, cotzeoatl, teucujtlacotzeoatl çan petlanquj)

● 726 And then, next day, when once again their boats set out, they grounded them at Nonoalco, at Ayauhcaltitlan.[5] And then also came out those who went afoot, as well as all the Tlaxcallans and Otomí. Indeed, in force the Spaniards issued to fall upon [the Mexicans]. And when they came to and arrived at Nonoalco, thereupon there were battle and fighting; in truth there spread strife and war. Death was dealt on both sides. All their foes were shot at with arrows, and also all the Mexicans. On both sides equally was there suffering. Thus all day and all night they all fought.

Auh njmã imuztlaioc in ie no cuel eppa qujçaco in jmacal conacanaco nonoalco, ataubcaltitlã: auh njman no qujçaco in tlaxipanvia yoan in ie ixqujch tlaxcaltecatl yoan otomjtl, vel tonac in qujntepevitivitze in Españoles. Auh in oacico nonoalco: njmã ie ic tlaiecolo, necaliva, vel mostemman in tlaiecolizzli in iauiotl, necoc in mjcoaia ixqujch mjnaloa in iniaovan, no ixqujch in mexicatl, necoc ivi, necocolo, iuh cemjlhujtl, iuh ioac in necaliosc.

But [there were] two great chieftains who turned not their faces, who despised those who were their foes, who set no value upon their bodies. The first man was named Tzayectzin; the second was named Temoctzin. And a third was the [afore]mentioned Tzilacatzin.

Çan vmen in vevei tiacaoã in amo mjtzacujlianj, in atle inpan qujmitta in iniaovã catca, in amo qujtlaçotlaia in innacaio. Injc ce tlacatl itoca Tzaiectzin. Injc vme itoca, Temoctzin: auh ic teeca in omotenuh in Tzilacatzin.

3. See Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II — The Conquest, Chapter 28.

4. Commentator probably meant to insert.

5. A part of Nonoalco, in Tlatelolco — Cano, op. cit.

And when the Spaniards tired, when they could achieve nothing, when they could not break through the Mexicans, then they went, and entered [their encampment], much afflicted in spirit. Their allies went following behind them.

Auh in omoxhuhtiuiqoe in Españoles, in avel quiqa- 726 chiou, in avel quiqopetla in Mexica: njman ic iaque, calacque, vel imellel acic, quiocuitlapanvitivi in intavilanalhoan.

[p. 90 is blank]

726 Thirty-third Chapter, in which is told how the people of the floating gardens, those of Xochimilco and Cuitlauac, and of Itztapalcoan, and still others, came to help the Mexicans.

726 648 And once it came to pass that the people of Xochimilco, Mizquic, Colhuacan, Mexicatzinco, and Itztapalapan sent emissaries who came to confer with Quauhtemoc and still other noblemen and chieftains. They came, saying to them: "O my beloved prince, with a little we have come to give aid to the city. Perchance it may be that thus the debt is paid [you]. These are the words of the rulers who yet guard there. In truth here dwell the rulers; so have come and assembled the eagle and ocelot [warriors] in boats, in order, they say, now to drive off our foes."

And upon this, when they had said their say, when they had spoken, thereupon [Quauhtemoc] replied to them: "It is well. Ye have shown favor [to us]; ye have suffered trials and tribulations. Help the city. Let there be battle!"

[41] [43] 72 After this, he gave them gifts; he gave them devices and shields, and they gave them each chocolate. To each one they gave a shallow gourd vessel of chocolate. Thereupon he said to them: "Onward! Let there be battle, O chieftains! For our foes already are come!" Thereafter went the emissaries there to where lived those of Cuitlauac; they escorted them there. And as they went, then grew the crying of war cries everywhere along the road. Thereafter there was fighting.

726 But these people of Xochimilco then also raised a war cry and fell upon the boats. In no wise did they help us, but only, then, robbed the people. They despoiled the beloved women and the small children, and the beloved old women. Then some they there slew; there these breathed their last. And still others they did not slay, but carefully lowered them into the boats.

And when already they were doing this, when already they were spiriting the people away, then chieftains raised an outcry. They said: "O Mexicans, what now are the fools doing? Let all pursue them!" Thereupon there were war cries. They gave them chase in boats.

Injc cempoalli onnnadlactli omei capitulo vncan mjtoa in quenjn chinanpaneca in Suchmjlca, cujtlavaca, yoan in Jtztapalapaneca, yoan oc cequjntin vallaque in quinpalevizquja mexica

Auh ceppa muchiuh in iehoantin suchmjlca, cujtlaoaca mjzqujca, colhoaque, Mexicatzincatl, Jtztapalapanecatl, vallaivaque, quinonotzaco in quauhtemoctzin, yoã in oc cequjntin in tlatoque, in tiacavan: quimjlhujco. Nopiltzintzine ca achitzin ic ticpalevico in atl, in tepetl, aço velitiz ca çan ic ixtlavico in intlatol in tlatoque, in oc vmpa tlapia, ca nel njcan onoque in tlatoque, ca ovallaque, ocenquiçaco in quauhtli ocelutl in acaltica: ca qujl axcã quicentlaçaz in toiaouh.

Auh in ie iuhquj in oconjtoque in intlatol, in ontlanonotzque njman ie ic quimjlhuja. Ca ie qualli, oanmotlacnelilique oanquimjhiovilique, oanquimociaviltique ma xicmopalevilican in altepetl, ma tlaieiecavi:

njman ie ic quintlauhtia, quinmaca in tlaviztli, in chimalli, yoan quincacacavatique, cecen xicalpechtli in quinmacaque cacaoatl: njmã ie ic quimjlhuja. tlacueleoatl, tla tlaieiecavi tiacaoane, ca ie vitze in toiaovan, njma ie ic vi in titlanti in vmpa onoque in cuitlavaca in quinvalhujcaque. Auh in oiaque njman ic maantimoquetz in tlacavaca in jtzquican vtlica: njman ie ic necalioa.

Auh in iehoantin in, in Suchimjlca njman ie ic no icavaca, yoan macalhujtequj: amo ma techpalevique, çan njmã ie ic tenamoia, quinnamoxque in cioatzitzinti, yoan in pipiltzitzinti, yoan in jlamatzitzin njman cequjntin vncan q'nmjctique vncan ihiotl quiz. Auh in oc cequjntin amo quinmjctique, çan ivian acalco quimontemovique.

Auh in ie iuh quichioa inin ie tenaoalpoloa: njman ic tzatzique in tequivaque, quitoque. Mexicae tlein ic quichioa in, tlaveliloque? ma vallatotoca: njman ie ic tlacavaca, quintoca acaltica.

726 And all the boats which were at Nonoalco then were assembled there; all left from there in order to pursue. Then they proceeded to hem in those of Xochimilco. Thereupon they slew them; they speared and beat them. But some they only took. And almost all died there; in truth, there they were destroyed. And all [the women] whom they had seized, all of them they left there. None of the beloved women were taken away.

And while this was already coming to pass, then the Spaniards settled back.

And just as those of Xochimilco had devised, and would have done, just so [the Spaniards] would do away with us through deceit. And all whom they seized of Xochimilco, Cuitlauac, etc., they thereupon brought and hurried there to Yacacolco, where now is [the Church of] Santa Ana.[1] There were Quauhtemoc and Mayeuatzin, ruler of Cuitlauac (for he was here at the time of the war).

And when [those of Cuitlauac] had been brought, they greeted Mayeuatzin. They said to him: O my younger brother, [may it] be well with thee." But Mayeuatzin replied to them: "You fools, have I perchance bidden you? What have you done?" And Quauhtemoc then said to Mayeuatzin: "O my younger brother, do thy work." And Mayeuatzin thereupon offered up as sacrifices four, whom he slew, of his vassals. Likewise Quauhtemoc slew four.

And later, of all who were included among the captives, it was commanded that they be slain, everywhere in the temples of the devils. Everywhere the captives gave blood to [the images].

726 687 And afterwards the Mexicans were wroth because of this. They said: "Verily, here among us, mingling with us, are the people of Xochimilco; they have already made their homes here. Do they not, in truth, deliver their messages [to our foes]? So these we shall take forth; they shall perish!" And upon this, when judgment was indeed pronounced, thereupon were drawn out all the beloved women and old women, and those already mature. All were slain. None were spared, because of those who went bearing false witness of them and doing undeserved ill: those of Xochimilco and Cuitlauac who came [saying] they would help us.

Auh in nonovalco in onoca in jxqujch acalli: njmã ic muchi vmpa mocemjtequjc, much vmpa in inic tlantoca: njmã ic quintzacujlico in Suchmjlca: njman ie ic temjctia, teixiili, teviviitequj. Auh cequjntin çan qujmacique: auh vel muchintin, vncã mjcque, vel oncan mjztlatique. Auh in jxqujchtin in qujmacique, çã muchtin vncan qujncaubã aiac vicoc in cioatzitzinti.

Auh in jquac ie iuh muchioa in, njman ic mocototztlalique in Espeñoles.

Auh in juh qujmolhujca, in juh qujchivazquja xochimjlca, çan ic technacalpolozquja: auh in jxqujchtin qujmacique in suchimjlca: in Cujtlavaca. &c. njman ie ic qujnvica, qujntototza in vmpa Jacaculco, in axcan ie sant Ana: vmpa icaca in Quauhtemoctzi, yoan in Maichoatzin, cujtlaoac tlatoanj (ca njcan ipan muchiuh in iauiotl).

Auh in oaxivaque contlapalo'imanj in Maichoatzin: conjlhuja. Nicauhtzine, n.oiolicatzin: auh in maichoatzin, qujnvalilhuja. In antlapalpopul cujx namechcujcujtlavi, tle oamaxque. Auh in quauhtemoctzin njman qujoalilhuj in Maichoatzin. Nicauhtzine ma ximotlacotili: auh in Maichoatzin: njman ie ic tlamjctia, navi in cõmjcti in jmaceoalhoan: no navi in conmjcti in Quauhtemoctzin.

Auh in çatepan in ac onaaquj in mamalti, oallanavatiloc injc mjctilozque novian in intetreupan tlatlacateculo, vel novian tepanjzque in mamalti.

Auh çatepã ie ic qualanj in Mexica: qujtoque. Ca njcan totlanonoc, technelotoc in suchimjlcatl in ie njcan chanchiva, amo nel vmpa contlalia in jtlatol. Auh inin ça tiqujncaoa, çan popolivi: auh in ie iuhquj, in ovel motzõtec, njman ie ic teçaçaco in cioatzitzinti, in jlamatzitzin yoã in ie tlapalivi, muchintin mjmjctiloque, aocac mocauhque, ca iuhqujn qujmontlatolevito, qujmoncujtlachivito in ovallaque in techpalevizquja xochmjlcatl, in cujtlaoacatl.

1. Spanish text: "en el Tlatelolco." A barrio, "onde del gobierno de Cuauhtémoc, donde actualmente se encuentra el templo de Santa Ana en la calle del Peralvillo," according to R. H. Barlow: "Una pintura de la conquista en el templo de Santiago," Tlatelolco a través de los siempos, VI (1945), p. 58. Caso (op. cit.) identifies it as a district or neighborhood in the barrio of Sta. Ana Atenanitech, near Tenochtitlan.

And then, some days later, two boats came there to Ysuhtenco.[2] The Spaniards came alone, proceeding in the early dawn. There were no [allied Indian] men; [the Spaniards] came quite alone. And upon this, when they had beached their boats, they thereupon leaped out on dry land. And when they had set forth on the firm ground, then they came giving battle. They went each firing guns and crossbows.

And the chieftains flattened themselves behind walls; they remained hidden in houses or behind walls. And the sentinel [had] as his care and charge [to know] when to break forth. And when it was already good time, at the right moment, he then cried out and said: "O Mexicans, onward!"

Auh njman iquezqujlhujoc, ontetl in acalli quj-726 ꝫco, vncan in jiauhtenco çan mjxcavico in Españoles, ioatzinco in quj̃çaco, aiaac tlacatl, çan oc valmjxcavitiaque. Auh in ie iuhquj in oconacanque imacal: njman ie ic vallalhoecaquj̃ça: auh in ovallalhoecaquj̃zque njman ie ic mjcaltivitze, tlatlequj-quj̃zvitivitze, tlatepuzmjvitivitze.

Auh in tiacavan cẽca mopachoa tenantitlan, yoã quj̃mototoctitimanj in calli anoço tepantli. Auh in iautlachixquj vel yix itequjuh in canjn neovaz: auh in ie qualcẽ in ie inman, njman ie ic tzatzi: quj̃toa. Mexicae ma ie cuel.

2. Port of Huexotla. — Ibid.

[p. 94 is blank]

726 Thirty-fourth Chapter, in which is told how the Mexicans took captive and seized fifteen[1] Spaniards.

Injc cempoalli onmatlactli onnavi capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn ichoantin Mexica tlamaque in qujmacique Españoles caxtolti.

"O Mexicans, onward!"

Mexicae ma ie cuel:

On this, the sentinel raised a war cry. [Shell] trumpets were sounded, and they charged with shield.

njman ie ic tlacaoaca, yoan tlapitzalo yoan chimallaça in iautlachjxquj:

Thereupon they took after the Spaniards, they followed dispersing them and taking captives. Fifteen of the Spaniards were seized. Then they brought them in. And their boats [the enemy] withdrew, going to stand by in the middle of the lagoon.

njman ie ic qujntoca in Españoles, qujmaiauhtivi yoã qujmantivi, caxtoltin in anoque in Españoles: njmã ic qujnoalhujcaque: auh in jmacal njmã ic qujtzinquixtique, anepantla contecato.

727 And when they had brought the eighteen where they were to die, there at the place called Tlacochcalco,[2] they thereupon stripped them; they took from them all their arms and their cotton armor, and all which was on them. All they tore from them. Then they were made slaves; they slew them. And their companions remained watching them from the middle of the lagoon.[3]

Auh in oqujmazitico caxtoltin omei in vncan mjqujzque itoca: tlacuchcalco: njmã ie ic qujnpepetlaoa, moch qujncujlique in iniautlatquj, yoã in jmjchcavipil, yoan in jxqujch in intech catca, moch qujntepeoaltique: njman ie ic tlacoti qujnmjctia: auh in jmjcnjoan qujnvalitztoque anepantla.

726 And at one time they put in two of their boats there at Xocotitlan.[4] When they had landed, thereupon they went looking in the settlement of the people of Xocotitlan. And Tzilacatzin and other chieftains, when they saw the Spaniards, set upon them and sent them fleeing, casting stones at them as they went. They came to chase the Spaniards into the water.

Auh ceppa qujcalaqujque vntetl in imacal in vmpa xocotitlã: in oconacanque, njmã ie ic vmpa itztivi in incalla xocoteca. Auh in Tzilacatzin, yoan oc cequjntin tiacaoan: in oqujmittaque in Españoles: njman intech oalietiqujzque, qujnoallalochtocaque, qujntepachotivi, atlan qujntepeoaco in Españoles.

And another time [the Spaniards] brought their boats there to Coyonacazco[5] to wage war and give battle. And on arriving, then some Spaniards came out. Leading them came Castañeda Xicotencatl,[6] who walked wearing his [device of] quetzal feather

Auh ie no ceppa qujoalhujcaque in jmacal in vncan coionacazco injc tlaiecozque, injc mjcalizque. Auh in oacico njman ic valqujzque cequjntin Españoles, qujnvaliacan in castañeda xicotencatl: iquetzaltemal ietinemj. Nimã ie ic vallatepuzmjvia: auh

1. Eighteen are mentioned here. Cf. also Buenaventura, op. cit., p. 189 (chapter heading). The corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex has fifteen.

2. Buenaventura, loc. cit.: "en que estaba una cava que era como casa de audiencia, cerca de donde agora es la iglesia de Santa Ana."

3. Corresponding Spanish text: "los encerraron los cerraron delante del pueblo que se llamaba Mazajuxtec y los otros españoles estuvieron mirando desde las sargentinas como los mataron."

4. Buenaventura, op. cit., p. 190: "que es agora [el barrio de] S. Francisco." Cano (op. cit.) says it is the same as Cihuatempan, in Macuxtlaulan.

5. Buenaventura, loc. cit.: "cerca del barrio de Sta. Lucía (que por otro nombre se llama Amaxac)." Cano (op. cit.) identifies Coyonacazco as a part of the barrio of Tolpachotzinco, to the north in Tlaxcalan. R. H. Barlow ("Cinco siglos de las calles de Tlaxcalan," Tlaxcalcia a través de los tiempos, IX [1947], p. 32) places it "no lejos de la estación del Ferrocarril de Hidalgo." A map in Antonieta Espejo and R. H. Barlow: "El plano más antiguo de Tlaxcalan," Tlaxcalcia a través de los tiempos, I (1944), shows it in the northeast part of the city.

6. Buenaventura, loc. cit.: "Rodrigo de Castañeda (á quien los indios llamaban Xicotencatl, por usarla por sobrenombre)."

95

●726 balls. Thereupon they shot iron bolts; but only one was pierced, in the forehead, wherefore he then died. Castañeda was the one who shot the arrow. And the chieftains moved in against him and they drove [the Spaniards] into the water, stoning them. And Castañeda there would have perished, but he clung to the boat and thus they carried him to Xocotitlan.

[349] And one boat lay at Tetenanteputzco, where the walls curve.[7] And another boat lay there at To-[491] tecco,[8] where the road goes direct to Tepetzinco.[9] It only lay on guard in the water, and at nightfall they took it [away].

And some days thereafter the Spaniards once again resolved [to war upon] us.[10] Then they came, [443 317] and chose the Quauecatitlan[11] road which led direct to the salt market. But there on the Quauecatitlan road, they could not spread out. So all those of Tlaxcalla, Acolhuacan, and Chalco thereupon filled in the canals.[12] And on the road where they could not spread out, they cast adobes and roof beams; door lintels, pillars, and round logs were set in; they threw bundles of reeds into the water. And when it was filled in, then the Spaniards, disposed [in battle order], very slowly proceeded: a cotton banner led them; they went blowing trumpets and beating drums. And behind them went in position all the Tlaxcallans, and indeed all those of [other allied] [533] cities. Those of Tlaxcalla became very brave; they shook their heads, beat their chests, and sang. The Mexicans also sang. There was chanting on both sides. They intoned whatsoever they remembered. Thus they were able to animate themselves.

And as they reached Tlalhuacan,[13] all the chieftains were crouched; they stretched themselves out very flat, and were well hidden. They hid their ça ce inmjnoc izquac, njman ic momjqujli: ichoatl in valtemj in castañeda. Auh in tiacaoã itech ietiquizque, atlan qujnnemjtique, qujntetepachoque: auh vncã mjqujzquja in castañeda: auh ça acaltitech pilcatia injc qujvicaque xocotitlan.

Auh centetl acalli onoca tetenanteputzco, vncã in colivi tetenamjtl: auh in oc centetl acalli vmpa onoca in totecco: in jpan vtli tlamelaoa Tepetzinco, çan tlatlãpixtoca in atlan. Auh in ie ioa qujvica.

Auh iquezquilhujoc ie no ceppa techcentlatalhuj in Españoles: nec vitze, ie qujoalmottilique in quauecatitlan vtli, in oallamelauhticac iztanamacoian. Auh in vncan in quauecatitlan in vtli ca moiauhque. Auh in jxqujch tlaxcaltecatl, in aculhoacatl, in chalcatl: njman ie ic catzupa in acalutli: yoan in oca moiauhque vtli: contlaça in xamjtl, yoan in calquavitl, in tecoc in tlaixquatl in tlaquetzalli, in quãmjmjlli, in acatl qujcujtlalpia in contepeoa atlan. Auh in jquac in omotzop nec valmotema in Españoles, cencã ivian in iativitze, qujniacana in quachpanjtl, tlapittivitze, tlatzotzontivitze. Auh imjcampã onotivitze in ie ixqujch tlaxcaltecatl, yoan in ie ixqujch altepeoa, cenca muchicava moquaquacuecuechoa, meeltzotzona in tlaxcalteca, cujca, no cujca in mexica necoccampa cujco, queoa in çaço tlein qujlnamjquj, ic mellaquaoa muchioa.

Auh in oacico tlalhoacan in tiacaoã vel nepacholo, vel mopachoa vel netlatilo, qujtetetzontlaliaia, qujchixtoque in quemman teevitilox, in quenman quj-

7. Corresponding Spanish text: "cerca de aquella yglesia que se llama ahora luxia." Cano (op. cit.) places it in la Garita de Peralvillo, barrio of Tlaxpachuhuhcan.

8. "Cerca de la Cruz, pueblo desmantelado." — Cano, op. cit.

9. El Peñón de los Baños — east of the center of Tenochtitlan, in the lake. However, Espejo and Barlow, op. cit., p. 46 and map, locate it as a hill in the southeastern part of Tlatilulco.

10. Corresponding Spanish text: "determinaron entre sí los españoles de darnos guerra por allí."

11. Quauhcacalitlan ampatli — "calle que iba derecho de Nonoalco al Mercado de la Sal. . . . probaqueha hasta encontrar el Ahuehuetlo y probablemente correspondía con la Calzada de Nonoalco, Mercado, Almacenes, Corralejo y Rivera." — Cano, op. cit. Espejo and Barlow, op. cit., show it in their map as in the northeast part of the city.

12. In Bustamante, loc. cit., the version is somewhat different from what appears in either the Spanish or Nahuatl text of the Florentine Codex: "por razon de los españoles que los indios habian muerto en su presencia, tornaron á preparar guerra de nuevo, haciendo juramento solemne que la guerra no habia de cesar hasta que vengasen la muerte de sus hermanos los españoles, y no quedase hombre dellos que no muriese en su manos; de cuyo acuerdo comenzaron á cegar todas las acequias y caminos de canoas por donde pudiesen entrar los barquillos no podian entrar, y así comenzaron á derribar casas, y allanar todas las acequias."

13. Corresponding Spanish text: "en barrio que se llama Tlalmacan que es agora santa mjjo" (San Martin).

heads. They waited until the time that the command to charge would be given, the time that they would hear the battle cry, and the order to advance. And when the cry was given, [it was]: "O Mexicans, onward against them!" Then the Tlapaneca Ecatzin, an Otomí [warrior], came to engage them and to hurl himself at them. He said: "O chieftains of Tlatilulco, onward! Who are these barbarians? Move forward!" Then he proceeded to throw himself against a Spaniard and struck him to the ground. This [Ecatzin] came first to cast him to the ground. He did it to him first. And when he had gone to overthrow him, then they went dragging the Spaniard off.

caqujzque tzatziliztli, in teevitiliztli: auh in otza- 726 tzioac. Mexicae, ma ie cuel iehoatl: njman ic qujvalixti, in Tlapanecatl hecatzin, otomjtl, inca ommomotlac: qujto. Tiiacavane tlatilulcae, ma ie cuel, aqujque inin Tenjme, xivalnenemjcan: njman ic ica ce maiavito in Español, tlalli ic qujvitec: iehoatl in valiacattivia in qujmaiavito in qujvaliacatitivia. Auh in oqujmaiavito: nec convilanato in Español.

[p. 98 is blank]

726 Thirty-fifth Chapter. Here is related how once again the Mexicans took captives and seized Spaniards, and, as counted, the captured Spaniards [were] fifty-three. And also [were taken] many men of Tlaxcalla, Texcoco, Chalco, and Xochimilco. Also [it is told] how they slew all in sacrifice there before those which were their gods.

Injc cempoalli on caxtolli capitulo: vncan moteneoa, in quenjn ie no ceppa tlamaque mexica in qujmacique Españoles, in juh mopouhque in axivaque Españoles, ontecpãtli ommatlactli omei: yoã no mjequjn tlaxcalteca, Tetzcuca, chalca, xuchmjlca. Auh in quenjn muchtin, vncã qujnmjctique in imjxpan inTeuoan catca./.

And when this had come to pass, then the chieftains who had been crouched, together fell upon them; they fell upon them from their ambush in the spaces among houses. And the Spaniards, when they saw this, [were] as if drunk. Thereupon were
727 captives made. Many men of Tlaxcalla, Acolhua-
726 can, Chalco, Xochimilco, etc., were taken. Verily, myriads of captives were made and men slain. Truly, they forced the Spaniards into the water, and indeed all the [allied] people.

Auh in ie iuhquj in jxqujchtin tiiacavan, nec qujvalcentlaça in omopachotoca, caltzalantli qujvaltotocatiqujzque. Auh in Españoles in oqujttaque ça iuhqujn tlavãque: njman ie ic tlamalo, mjequjntin in axivaque in tlaxcalteca, in aculhoaque, in chalca, in xuchmjlca, &c. vel tonacatlamaloc, tonacamjcoac, vel atlan qujnnemjtique in Españoles, yoã in ie ixqujch tlacatl:

And the road became very slippery. It could no longer be traveled; each one could only slip and slide. And the captives were dragged along. Here in this place the [Spaniards'] standard was taken. Here it was seized. Those of Tlatilulco took it. It was captured there where now is [the church] named San Martín. But [the Spaniards] showed no concern over it; they were not troubled over it.[1] And others escaped [the Mexicans'] hands. They went leaving them exhausted at Colhuacatonco,[2] at the edge of the canal. There they retired to establish themselves.

auh in vtli vel petzcauhtimoquetz, aoc vel nenemoa, ça nepepetzcolo, ça neaalaoalo. Auh in mamaltin tevivilano. Ie vncan in, in axioac in vandera, vncan anoc: ichoantin caciõ in Tlatilulca: vncan in macic, in ie axcan sanct Martin moteneoa: çan atle ipã qujttaque, amo õnecujtlaviloc. Auh in oc cequjntin tematitlampa qujzque: vmpa qujmõciauhcavato in colhoacatonco, acalotenco, vmpa valmomanato.

727 And after this they took the captives there to Yacacolco. They were urged forward; they went surrounding their captives. One went weeping; one singing; one crying war cries while striking the mouth with the palm of the hand. And when they had been brought to Yacacolco, thereupon they were placed in rows, in files. One by one they proceeded to the small pyramid, where they were slain. First went the Spaniards. They took the lead. But all those of the [allied] cities came only last, following. And when they had been slain, then they strung the Auh njmã ie ic qujnvica in mamaltin in vmpa iacacolco, tetototzalo, qujmololhujtivi in immalhoan, in aca chocatiuh, in aca cujcatiuh, in aca motenvitectiuh. Auh in onteaxitiloc iacaculco: njmã ie ic tevipano, tevipanolo, ceceniaca oniatimanj in mumuzco, in vncan tlamjctilo, iacattiaã in Españoles, coniacatique: auh ça vntlatzacujque, ontlatoqujlique in ixqujchtin altepeoaque. Auh in ontlamjctiloc, nec qujnquaquauhço in intzontecon in Españoles: no qujçoçoque in cavallosme intzõtecon, tlatzintlan in qujtecaque: auh in intzontecon Españoles tlacpac

1. It was captured by an Indian from Tlatilulco named Tlapanecatl or Tlapanecatl Iacatzin, according to the version in Bustamante, op. cit., pp. 191-192; here it is said that this exploit preceded the capture of the fifty-three Spaniards.

2. A barrio in the Parcialidad de Sta. María la Redonda Cuepopan or Tlaxpachiahcan; now bounded N. by Calle del Organo; E., República de Chile; S., Perú; W., Allende (approximately). — Cano, op. cit.

727 [severed] heads of the Spaniards, each one, on the [horizontal] staves [of the skull rack]. They also strung up the heads of the horses, arranging them below, while the heads of the Spaniards were above.[5] It appeared as if they were strung facing the [rising] sun. But [as for] all the various [allied] people, they did not string up the heads of the people of distant provinces. And fifty-three Spaniards were captured, and four horses.

in onoca, in çoçotoca, tonatiuh quixnamjctoca. Auh in jxquich nepapan tlacatl, amo quinçoçoque in intzonteco̱ in veca tlaca. auh in xxioaque Españoles ontecpantli onmatlactli omei, yoan nauhtetl cavallos:

726 Nevertheless, in all places watch was kept. There was fighting. Not because of [this success] did posting of watchmen cease. Everywhere those of Xochimilco went hemming us in, in their boats. On both sides were captives taken; on both sides there was killing.

auh tel novian tlatlapielo, necalioa: amo ic mocaoa in tlapieliztli, in novian techiaoalotinemj in xuchmjlca in acaltica, necoccampa tlamalo, necoccampa mjcoa.

722 262 And all the common folk suffered torments of famine. Many died of hunger. No more did they drink pure, clean water[4] — only brackish water did they drink. Of it many people died, and many people therefore [suffered from] a bloody flux, of which they died. And all was eaten — lizards and swallows; and maize straw,[5] and salt-grass.[6] And they ate colorin wood,[7] and they ate the glue orchid,[8] and the frilled flower;[9] and tanned hides, and buckskin, which they roasted, baked, toasted, or burned, so that they could eat them; and they gnawed sedum,[10] and mud bricks.[11] Never had there been

[137]

Auh in jxquich macevalli, cenca tlaihioviaia maianoia, mjec in mapizmjqujli aocmo quja in qualli atl, in ecatl, ça tequjxqujatl in quja ic mjec tlacatl momjqujli, yoã mjec tlacatl ic tlaelli qujtlaz ic mjc: yoan much qualoc in cuetzpalin, in cujcujtzcatl, yoan Eloçacatl, yoan in tequjxqujçacatl: yoan qujquaquaque in tzumpanquavitl, yoan qujquaquaque in tzacuxuchitl, yoan in tlaqujli, yoan in cuetlaxtli yoan in maçaeoatl, qujtletleoatzaia, qujmooxqujaia qujtototopotzaia, qujtotoponjaia injc qujquaia yoã in tetzmetl, yoan in xantetl qujtetexoaia: aoc tle iuhquj inic tlaihioviloc, temamauhti in tzaqualoc, vel tonac

5. Corresponding Spanish text: "los españoles eran afuera . . . los otros indios eran dentro . . . los caballos eran hasta."

4. Seler, op. cit., p. 550, reads this yenal.

5. Eloçacatl: leaves, or straw, of maize, which Mexican cattle eat, green or dry; in other words, the plant itself after the maize grains have been harvested (personal communication, Rafael García Granados). — In Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, pp. 271-272, it is described as "hierba . . . es muy verde y tiene porrones como el trigo, y es blanco, almacenlo los conejos y otros animales." Emmart, op. cit., p. 259, describing it as a diuretic and purgative, suggests "maize straw" as a name.

6. Tequixquiçacatl: probably pasture on saline lands, of the variety called "grama," creeps over the ground, putting forth small roots (personal communication, Rafael García Granados). — For this, Sahagún, op. cit., p. 271, has "hierba muy dulzora y sepinosa, que se hace en tierra salitrosa . . . es buena para quemar." Emmart, op. cit., p. 223, citing Simdon (op. cit.), calls it some grass or couch grass, possibly Distichlis spicata (L.) Greene. Grama (tequixquiçacatl in Molina, op. cit.), Santamaría (op. cit., II, p. 31) identifies as Panicum repens L., very abundant in the Americas.

7. Tzumpanquauitl. According to Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 275), "es árbol mediano, tiene ramas arrojadas, tiene la copa redonda y de buen parecer, tiene unas flores que se llaman equimixóchitl; son muy coloradas y de buen parecer y no tienen olor ninguno; las hojas de este árbol se llaman equimitl"; p. 348: "Equimitl. Árbol, flor y fruto del Colorín. Erythrina corallodes. D.C. Leguminosa." Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 331, giving the same botanical identification and E. americana Mill., adds the current common name (zompanche), and observes of the bean (colorín) that it is "especie de frijolillo rojo, duro que contiene un alcaloide muy venenoso."

8. Tzacuxuchitl. Emmart, op. cit., p. 309, calling it a "glue flower," identifies it as Mexia compendaria La Llave and Lex (?), Epidendrum parviri La Llave and Lex (?), Oncidium macrolenum Kunth (?) — all orchids. Hernández, op. cit., II, pp. 375-376: Tzacuxuchitl o tzacalli florido: Mexia compendaria La Llave y Lex, or B. cordata La Llave y Lex.

9. Tlaquilli. In Molina, op. cit., tlaquilli is plaster or stucco. Tlaquilin, however, is given by Emmart, op. cit., p. 226, as "frilled flower" — probably Mirabilis jalapa L., known as marvella. It is medicinal. Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 186, adds these common names: San Diego de la noche, arrebolera, and trompetilla.

10. Tetzmetl. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 249, says it is like xantetzmitl: "hojas muy verdes y carnosas y redondillas, y también mucho leche, y tiene las ramas coloradas. . . . nacen . . . duces, y especas y largullas . . . lo interior de esta raíz medicia" (medicinal). Emmart identifies it as Sedum dendroideum Moziño and Sessé — ornamental, siempreviva (op. cit., p. 223). Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 85, adds S. quaerum H. B. K. and S. reversum Stev.

11. Cf., however, Seler, op. cit., p. 550: "und Stuck und Leder und Hirschhaut, die brieten, buken, rösteten, brannten, auch es so, und Tetzmetzpaz und Lehmziegel und auch Tezcal." Of tezcal or tescal, Sahagún (op. cit., p. 289) says it is a hot country plant used for coloring. Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 163 (tezcate), says it is "nombre vulgar de varias plantas malvaceadas, como el capulincillo o nigua (Cocoxiqui xalapensis), el tecopote (Malvaviscus arreigera, y otras."

100 --

726 Thirty-sixth Chapter, in which is told how the Spaniards for the first time came to and entered the market place here in Tlatilulco.

And at one time it came to pass that four horse-[men] came to enter the market place. And when they had proceeded to come in, they then traveled in a circle; they followed about the outer edge of the market place and went lancing the chieftains. Many were the dead. They had penetrated the market place at this time — the first time that they had come to look at the market place. Then they went; they fled.

And the chieftains dared to come up to and give them chase. And at the time they had come, entering the market place for the first time, [it was] unexpected; they had given no warning.

And also this was the time that they burned the temple.[1] They laid fire to it. And when they had set it afire, then it flared up. Very high rose the blaze, the tongues of flame. It was as if the fire roared and kept flaring up. And when [the Tlatilulcans] saw that the temple was now burning, then there was weeping; there were tearful greetings. For it was thought that there would be plundering.[2]

And after there had been battle for a long time in the market place, the war spread to the outskirts. Little by little, they abandoned the wall,[3] there at Tenexnamacoyan. And there at Copalnamacoyan,[4] and at Atecocolecan[5] and at Xochicalco,[6] [the Mexicans][7] entered among the houses. The chieftains took positions on the wall. And all the houses of those of Quauhquechollan, which stood around the market place, all became a barrier. Many [of the Mexicans] took their places upon the roof terraces, Injc cempoalli on caxtolli ocs capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn Españoles iancujcan calaqujco tianquijco in njcan tlatilulco.

Auh ceppa mochiuh nauhteme in cavallos in calaqujco tianquijco. Auh in ocalaqujco, nec tlanaoatl quitoca, tianquijztentli quitoca in tiiacavan quinxixiltivi, mjeq'ntin in mjcque concujtlaxeloco in tianquijztli: iquac iancujcan quittaco in tianquijztli: njman ic iaque, ic moteputztique.

Auh in tiacaoan intech motlapaloque quintocaq̃: auh in jquac calaqujco iancujcan tianquijzco amo tenemachpan, amo quiteimachitique:

auh yoan njmã iquac quitlatique in teucalli, contlemjnque: auh in ocontlemjnque nec cuetlan, cenca veca eoac in tletl, in tlenenepilli, iuhquin ihicoioca tletl yoan cuecuetlanj. Auh in oquittaque in ie tlatla in teucalli: njman ie ic nechoquililo, nechoqiiztlapalolli: iuh nemachoc in ca ie ontenamoieloz.

Auh vecauhtica in necalioac in tianquijzco, vel tetemman in iauiotl, aiaxcã in quicauhque in tenamjtl, in vncan in tenexnamacoiã. Auh in vncan copalnamacoian, yoan atecocolecan, yoã in vncan xuchicalco in caltzalan, in calacoaia, vel ipã mantinenca in tiacavan in tenamjtl. Auh in jxquich quauhquecholteca calli in tianquijztli quiiavalotoc moch tenamjtl mochiuh mjequintin tlapanco onoca in vallamotla, qiiioallaça in tetl, in mjtl, oallatepachoa, vallamjna, yoan moch mocujtlacoionj in quauhquechol-

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "el mesmo dia pusieron fuego al en mayor que era de Vitzilobuchli."
2. Ibid.: "temuerõ mal agüero de ser quemar el en."
3. Ibid.: "desmayaron los españoles y se retraxeron con el artilleria."
4. Probably near Yacacolco, Tlilhuacan, and Amanqua, in Tlatilulco, on the Amanac road or tlatilacalli; now Calle de Gonzáles Bocanegra. — Cano, op. cit. Tenexnamacoyan can be presumed to have been nearby.
5. Sta. Cruz Atecocolecaya, now "a la esquina norueste de las patios de los Ferrocarriles." — R. H. Barlow: "Las ocho ermitas de Santiago Tlatelolco," Tlatelolco a través de los tiempos, IX (1947), p. 69.
6. In a barrio of Tlatelolco, bounded now, N., by an extension of Calle de la Comunacia; E., approximately la Parcialidad; S., Matamoros; and W., extension of Sta. María la Redonda. — Cano, op. cit.
7. From here on, Tlatilulco is the scene of battle. Doubtless warriors of Tenochtitlan and Tlatilulco fought together. The term "Mexicans," from this point forward, in brackets, implies Indians of both these cities.

●726 in order to throw rocks. They cast down stones and darts; they cast rocks and shot arrows. And all the back walls of the houses of the people of Quauhquechollan[8] were pierced with openings. They made small openings. And when again the horse[men] pursued them, then they would try to cling to their legs and cut off their advance. [Then] the chieftains quickly entered [the openings].

teca calli, achitoton qujcoionjque. Auh in jquac ie no valtetoca in cavallosme, in ie no qujnxopiloznequj, in ie qujniacatzacujliznequj: vmpa cacalactivetzi in tiacavan.

And at one time it came to pass that the Spaniards proceeded to enter Acatl yiacapan.[9] Then there was plundering, and poor, common folk were spirited away. And when the chieftains noted it, then they fell upon the [enemy] chieftains. There came to stand a shorn one, named Axoquentzin. He pursued his foes. He forced them to let [the common folk] go; he made them turn about. And this chieftain died there. They shot him with an iron bolt, there, in the breast. When they shot him, the arrow pierced his heart. He lay as if stretching after a sleep.[10] So had he died. And then our foes withdrew to establish themselves.

Auh ceppa muchiuh in Españoles: acatl yiacapan in valcalacq̃ nec tenamoielo, nec teçaçaco in macecoaltzitzinti. Auh in oqujttaque in tiiacavan: nec qujvallaça in tiiacavan, vncan icativitz quachic: itoca Axoquentzin qujntocac in jiaovan, qujntetlaçalti, qujnmalacacho: auh inin tiacauh vncã momjqujli, vncan qujtepuzmjviq̃ yielpan, in qujtlaxilique, yiollopan in qujtlaxilique tepuzmjtl, iuhqujn necochaano inic ommomjqujli: auh njmã ic mocototztlalique in toiaovan.

And there at Yacacolco,[11] similarly was there battle. The Spaniards[12] who shot iron bolts came in order to aid and join the Four Lords,[13] who had gone to close off the road. And the chieftains then crouched, in order to cut into their rear as the sun already hung [low]. And at this point, when they were already coming, some of our foes climbed upon the roof terrace. And, crying out, they said: "Ho, O Tlaxcallans! Hasten here! Here are our foes!" Then they cast down darts upon those who were spread out on the ground. Then they broke through.[14]

Auh in vmpa in iacacolco: çan no ivi in tlaiecolo, in Espanoles in tlatepuzmjvia tecpantivitze, qujnpalevitivitze, qujntlamatilitivitze in nauhtecutli, qujtzacutivitze in vtli. Auh in tiacavan nec nepacholo, injc qujncujtlaxeloztque, ie ommopiloa in tonatiuh. Auh in ie iuhquj in ie vitze: cequjntin tlapanco tlecoque in toiaovan: auh in otzatzic, qujto. huj tlaxcaltecae, xioalnenemjcan, njcan cate in amoiaovan: nec qujvallaça in mjtl, in impan in mopachotoca, nec xitinque:

Slowly [the Spaniards] came to reach Yacacolco, where the battle had spread to the outskirts. They had come only to skirmish; they could not break the Tlatilulcans, who were on the other side of the water, shooting arrows and casting rocks at them. No overpass, no bridge did [the Spaniards] take.

yiolic onacico in iacaculco vncã motetemmã in iauiotl: çan vncã ommotzotzonaco avel qujnpetlaque in Tlatilulca, in amac onoque qujnvalmjna, qujnvaltepachoa aoc tle in panoanj, aoc tle acuepanavaztli, ocaanque.

---

8. Sans. —va at Xochicalco (note 6); probably the market was [illegible] — Cam. op. cit.

9. Bustamante, op. cit., p. 194: "Otro dia los españoles volvieron a hacer entrada á tiempo por la parte del patio donde estaba el Cú grande de Vitzilopochli, por el patio del mismo que se llama Acatlyacapa."

10. If read never home, the passage would be translated: "It was as if [the arrow] extended on both sides, so that he perished."

11. Corresponding Spanish text: "se revolvieron los españoles que pelearon de la parte de su reja." In Bustamante, op. cit., p. 195, the fighting is said to have taken place at Zacualco, "que es á donde está agora la iglesia de Santa Ana."

12. Espanoles: the tilde is omitted in the MS.

13. See Chapter 14.

14. Bustamante, op. cit., p. 195: "y dando todos juntos los españoles y tlaxcaltecas, algunos tlaxcaltecas y españoles subieron sobre las azoteas de las casas que estaban en rededor del tianguez. Estos que subieron sobre las azoteas descubrieron la ciudad, y dieron voces á los que iban por bajo y dijeron. . . . ¡Mirad, tlaxcaltecas, que vuestros enemigos están aquí en ciudad! Y luego comenzaron a flechar á los que estaban en la ciudad, matándose y destrozándose, y los de la ciudad como vieron que ya los habian sido, comenzaron á huir."

Thirty-seventh Chapter. Here is told how the Mexicans laboriously uncovered by night the waterways which the Spaniards had filled in by day.

Injc cempoalli on caxtolli omume capitulo: vncan mjtoa in q̃nin Mexica in cohuvitiaia in qujtlatlaqoaia in atl in ioaltica, in vncan catzupaia Españoles in tlaca. 726

And our foes went filling in the canals. And when the enemies had gone, once more [the Mexicans] took up the rocks with which the foes had filled them in. When dawn broke, once again it was even as it had been the day before. Often they so did, where [the Spaniards] had filled in the canals — immediately taking up the stones, the wood, etc. — so that by a little the war was lengthened, and gradually [the Spaniards] broke through [the Mexicans]. For these canals were looked upon as great walls.

Auh in toiaovan, catzuptivitze in acalutli. Auh in onoiaque in iavme ie no ceppa qujqujxtia in tetl injc otlaatzupca iaume: in otlatvic ie no ceppa iuhcan, in juhcan catca ialhoa: muchipa iuh qujchiuhque in vncã catzupaia in acalotli, in çan njmã qujvalqujxtiaia in tetl in quavitl. &c. ic achi vecaoac in iauiotl, aiaxcan in qujnvalpetlaque: auh in acalotli in, iuhq'n vei tenamjtl ipan momatia. 726 487

And [as for] the Spaniards and all the Tlaxcallans, their common charge was the road, the highway to Yacacolco, and to Thilhuacan and Atezcapan.[1] And Yacacolco, Cuepopan,[2] Apauazcan,[3] and Atliceuhyan, with which went Ayacac[4] and Totecco, were the charge of those of Xochimilco, Cuitlauac, Mizquic, Colhuacan, and Itztapalapan. It became their common task to give battle in boats.

Auh in Españoles yoan in jxqujch tlaxcaltecatl incentequjuh in vtli, in vei vtli iacacolco, yoan in tilhoacan in atezcapan. Auh in iacaculco, in cuepopan, in apaoazcan, yoan atliceuhian injc iaticac aiacac, in totecco intequjuh muchiuh in Xuchmjlcatl, in cujtlaoacatl, in mjzqujcatl, in culhoacatl in Jtztapalapanecatl, incẽtequjuh muchiuh in acaltica in tlaiccoaia.

And the boatmen and archers of Atliceuhyan and Ayacac girded themselves to come to grips with them. They lost no time. In truth, they were evenly matched. [It was] as if it rained barbed spears; like serpents, arrows streamed and poured. When they hurled them with spear throwers, it was as if a deep yellow mass spread over the foes.

Auh in atliceuhca, yoan aiacacalque in acaleque, in tlamjnanj, vel muchicaoa injc qujnnamjquj, amo moquequetza, vel moneneuhcavia, iuhqujn tzetzelivi in tlatzontectli, iuhqujn coatl motlamjna mopipiaçoa in mjtl: in jquac atlatica qujtlaça iuhqujn cozpul ommoteca in impan iaume: 726 [411]

And a number of chieftains — the Tezcacoacatl Xiuhcozcatzin, the Tepanecatl Quaquatzin,[5] Uitzitzin, and Itzcuintzin, people of Yacacolco, whose houses were situated there, neither tarried, nor abandoned their beloved women and children. With difficulty they went to bring them safely to a house by another canal which was in Amaxac.

auh in cequjntin tiacaoan in Xiuhcozcatzin quaquatzi, Tezcacoacatl, Tecpanecatl, Vitzitzin, Itzcujntzin: in iacaculca vel ipan mantivia in calli: amo moquequetzaia, amo qujxiccavaia in Cioatzintli, in piltzintli, aiaxcan in qujmõcaltechpachoto in oc ce acalotli itech in amaxac icac.

1. A barrio fronting that of Tlaxcallan in Tenochtitlan: an area now bounded N. by Calle de Manzanares; E., Comonfort; S., Orgaz; and W., Sta. María la Redonda and the water's edge. — Cline, op. cit. R. H. Barlow ("Los solares aztecas," p. 61) locates it "entre las calles de Jaime Nunó y de González Bocanegra."

2. Cuepopan or Tlaquechiahuac, an area bounded now, N., by Calle de Manzanares; E., Gabriel Leyva; S., Pedro Moreno (once a canal); and Lerdo. — Cline, op. cit.

3. To the east of the Plaza de Tlatelolco. — Ibid.

4. Atliceuhyan and Ayacac were probably in the barrio of Tolpochcalchiuhcan. — Ibid.

5. Seler, op. cit., p. 555, groups the names and titles as given here.

●726 And once it befell that the Spaniards came forth there at Totecco. And when they had reached where the young men's house stood, a place called Ayacac, then they set fire to it.

And another of the Spaniards' boats put in there at Atliceuhyan, and many of the boats of those of Xochimilco entered with it. And the chieftain Temilotzin, the commanding general, placed himself upon a small pyramid and stood looking toward the Spaniards. And the chieftain Coyoueuetzin put on the device of an eagleocelot [warrior]—half eagle and half ocelot. In a boat he came from Tolmayecan to fall upon [the Spaniards]. And many war boats[6] came following him. He said: "O chieftains, onward! Let us repulse them!" Thereupon they struck against the ship. And when the Spaniards had seen this, they then turned back, and [the Mexicans] went after them. Then [Coyoueuetzin and the Mexicans] made straight for Atliceuhyan. And the Spaniards' boats then withdrew from the others and went to take position at Amanalco. And many of those of Xochimilco died of the arrows. And after this, when [the Mexicans] had pursued them, once again [the Spaniards] held a position, and then drove the chieftains back. Coyoueuetzin hid himself behind a small pyramid. Then he succeeded in turning them back and forced them there where stood the young men's house at Atliceuhyan. Once more [the Spaniards] pursued Coyoueuetzin and came making him jump into the water. And once again Itzpapalotzin, a young Otomí [warrior], threw them back. He had also assumed a device. Then he took after them; like a ball of mud he rolled them together. In truth, he went to battle with them in a boat.[7] Then they departed. Thus were they undone.

And those of Cuitlauac thought that their ruler Mayeuatzin had indeed died—that he had perished with the others. They were exceeding wroth; they said: "You have slain our ruler. Bring him forth! Why have you slain our ruler?" And Mayeuatzin, when he had learned that his vassals were angry, that they were angry in his behalf, then said to Coyoueuetzin:[8] "O my elder brother, set up one of our elders who can shout loudly—of loud speech and Auh ceppa muchiuh in vmpa totecco, vmpa oalquizque in Españoles: auh in onacico in vncan telpuchcalli icac: itocaiocan aiacac: njman contlemjnque.

Auh in oc centetl in jmacal in Españoles, valcalac in vncan atliceuhian, yoã mjec in jmacal in Xuchimjlca in qujvalhujcaticalac. Auh in tiiacauh in Temjlotzin, tlacateccatl: momuzco in oquetzticac, qujmonjtzticac in Españoles: auh in tiiacauh Coiovevetzin: in onaquj tlaviztli quauhtlocelutl: cectlapal quauhtli cectlapal ocelutl acaltica in valla tolmaiecampa in qujvallaz: yoan mjec in acalchimalli, in qujtlamatilitivitze: qujvalitotia. Tiacavane ma ie cuel ichoatl ticcentlaça: njmã ie ic macalhujtequj. Auh in oqujttaque in Españoles: njman ic motepuztzitique, qujntocaque: nec vallamelaoa in atliceuhiã. Auh in jmacal Españoles: nec qujtzinqujxtia, contecato amanalco. Auh in Xuchimjlca, mjequjntin injc mjcque mjtl: auh in ie iuhquj in oq'ntocaque, oc ceppa valmomãque, nec qujnvaltoca in tiiacavan: in Coiovevetzin qujmotocti in mumuztli: njmã ic qujcuep vel qujmaxitito in vmpa icac telpuchcalli in atliceuhian: ie no ceppa qujvaltocaque in coiovevetzin atlan conchololtico: ie no cuele contlaz in telpuchotomjtl, Jtzpapalotzin in no onaquj tlaviztli, nec q'ntoca, iuhqujn çoqujtl qujmololoa, vel qujntepeoato aca acalco: njman ic iaque, ic popolivito.

Auh in cujtlaoaca in momatque ca omjc, ca otehoan mjc, in intlatocauh in Maiehoatzin, cenca qualanj: qujtoaia. Ca oanqujmjctique in totlatocauh Xiqualnextican, tleica in oanqujmjctique totlatocauh. Auh in Maiehoatzin in oqujma in ca qualanj, in jmaceoalhoan: injc qujtlaqualanjlia: njmã qujlhuj in Coiovevetzin. Nachcauhtzine, tla ce xiqualquetza in tachcavan in vel tzatzi, in tlatolchicaoac, in tozcachicaoac: njman ic qujvalnotzque ce tequjoa,

6. See Pl. 116, 117, 121.

7. Ana ocelov: ana is probably a copyist's error. Seler, op. cit., p. 536, reads the phrase qujmoyoua ocelov.

8. The MS is apparently corrected here to read as reproduced: qujlhuj in coiovevetzin.

strong voice." Then they spoke to a seasoned warrior named Tlamayocatl, and then Mayeuatzin commanded and said to him: "Go forth and tell those of Cuitlauac: 'O men of Cuitlauac! Your ruler Mayeuatzin hath sent me! Behold him! There he standeth upon the small pyramid!'" And when those of Cuitlauac had heard him, they answered him: "Nay, ye have slain him!" Then he said unto them: "Nay, he is not dead! Look well upon him! There he now standeth!" And [Mayeuatzin] spoke forth: "I have not died. Let nothing injure my lip rod, my green stone [jewels], my devices!" And when he ended his speech, then a cry arose [among the Indians who were with Spaniards], whereupon there was fighting. Then they pursued [the Mexicans]. But in the market place, there at Copalnamacoyan, the battle, gradually abating, lasted long.

And once our foes of Tliliuhquitepec and Atetemollan* together conferred and took note of a narrow road which led between house clusters. It was the path of a nobleman named Tlacatzin. And when our foes had already entered, then the chieftains drove them forth. And a man, a chieftain and a seasoned warrior named Tlapanecatl, whose home was at Atezcapan, then engaged them. Our foes then quickly seized him. And the [Mexican] chieftains then rushed and went shooting arrows at our foes. Then they made [the enemy] loose the captured chieftain. But our foes then smote him in the calf of the leg, there where the leg is bled. Then [the enemy] departed; the fighting ceased.

itoca: Tlamaiocatl: nec qujnaoztia in Maichoeztzin: 726
qujlhuja. Tla xoniauh, tla xiqujmonjlhuj in cujtlaoaca: Cujtlavacac, onechoaliva in amotlatocauh in Maichoeztzin, xoconjttacan nechca moquetzticac mumuzco. Auh in oqujcacque cujtlaoaca, qujvalitoque. Ca amo, ca oanqujmjctique: nec qujmonjlhuja. Ca amo mjquj, vel, xocottacan ic in nechca icac: yoan qujvalitoa, ca amo njmjquj, ma itla nechitlacalhujti, in notençac, in nochalchiuh, in notlaviz: auh in ocontzonqujxti in jtlatol, nec tlacaoaca: njman ic ic necalioa, nec qujvaltoca. Auh in tianqujzco in vmpa copalnamacoian, aiaxcan in mocauh, vncã vecaoac in iauiotl. [293]

Auh ceppa tecentlatalhujque in toiaovan in Tlil- [491] iuhqujtepeca, atetemoleque: ic qujmottilique in vpitzactli in calla qujzticac, yiovi catca ce pilli: itoca, Tlacatzin. Auh in ic calaquj in toiaovan: nec qujntoca in tiiacaoan. Auh ce tlacatl tiacauh, tequjoa, itoca Tlapanecatl, atezcapã ichan catca: nec qujnoalnamjquj, njmã ic qujcujtivetzque in toiaovan: auh in tiiacavan, njmã ipan ommotepeuhque, qujnmjntivi in toiaovan: njmã ic contetlaçaltito in cacica tiiacauh. Auh in toiaovan nec qujvalmetzvitecque: vncã in jnezcoaian: njman ic iaque, õmocacauhque in mjcali.

* Corresponding Spanish text: "se repartió los amojes de dizando."

[p. 108 is blank]

726 Thirty-eighth Chapter, in which is told how the Spaniards set up a catapult with which they would by trickery slay the Tlatilulcans.

And then the Spaniards set up a catapult upon a small pyramid, in order to hurl rocks at the common folk. And when they had readied it, when they were about to fire it, much did they come circling it; much did they point with their fingers. They pointed to the common folk; they motioned there where they had assembled at Amaxac.[1] All the common folk noted with concern the Spaniards pointing with their arms, as they were about to hurl and cast it, as if using a sling on them. Then [the Spaniards] wound and twisted [the ropes]. Then the wooden beam of the catapult rose upright. But the stone would not go there upon the common folk; it only went to fall beyond the back of the market place at Xomolco.

And so, there, [the Spaniards] quarreled among themselves; it appeared as if the Spaniards jabbed [one another's] faces with their fingers. Much did they chatter. And the catapult kept teetering and swaying, and little by little stilled itself. Then indeed it could be seen that the sling was on top; very thick was the rope. Because [it was provided with] a rope, [the Mexicans] named it "the wooden sling."

And once more the Spaniards hurled [their strength] against [the Mexicans]. And all the Tlaxcallans thereupon formed themselves in rows at Yacacolco, and Tecpancaltitlan,[2] and Copalnamacoyan. Then, there at Atecocolecan, they headed all those who were besieging us.[3] Very slowly they proceeded, taking position. And the chieftains went taking their places.[4] They gathered courage, and indeed stood up as men [of war]. None swooned nor behaved like women. They said: "Come, O chieftains! Who are these little barbarians — little men of low condi-

Injc cempoalli on caxtolli omei capitulo: vncã mjtca in quenjn españoles qujtlalique quauhtematlatl, injc qujnpoiomjctizquja in tlatilulca.

Auh njman in iehoan Españoles, qujtlalique in quauhtematlatl in mumuztiepac, injc qujntepechozõ in macevaltin. Auh in oqujcencaubque, in ie qujtlaçazque, cenca cololhujtinemj, cẽca ommapiloa, qujnmapilhuja in macevalti, ommapiloa in vmpa omocenqujxtiõ in amaxac, in ie ixqujch macevalli, cenca qujmõmottitia, ommaçoa in Españoles, injc impan contlaçazque conmaiavizque, in juhquj qujntematlavizque: nec qujmalacachoa nec qujtevilacachoa: njmã ic meoatiquetz in quauhtemalacatl in jquauhio. Auh in tetl amo vel vmpa ia in jpã macevalli, çan ie icampa iteputzco in vetzito tianqujztli xumolco.

Auh ic vncã mjxnamjcque in juh nezque Españoles iuhqujn mjxmapilxixili, cenca chachalaca. Auh in quauhtematlatl mocuecuepa avic iaiauh, çan jvian motlamelauhcaquetztia: njman ic vel nez in jiacac catca in tematlatl cenca tomaoac in mecatl, injc mecaio: njman ic qujtocaiotique quauhtematlatl:

auh ie no ceppa qujcentlazque in Españoles: yoã in jxqujch tlaxcaltecatl, njmã ie ic motecpana in iacaculco, yoan tecpancaltitlan yoan copalnamacoia: njmã ie vmpa atecocolecan qujniacana in jxqujch techiaoalotoc, cencan ivian in onotiuj. Auh in tiiacaoan valmomãtivi, vel mochichicaoa, vel moqujchquetza, aiac tlacuecuetlaxoa, aiac tlacioatlamachtia: qujtoa. Xioalnenemjcan tiiacavane, aqujque in tenjtotonti, tlalhujcatotonti. Auh in tiiacavan avic vivi, ixtlapalhujvi, aocac tlamelauhca icac, motlamelauhcaquetza

1. In the barrio of Tlaxomulco, "cerro la Concepcion," in the version of Bustamante, op. cit., p. 209. Cano, op. cit., identifies it as a dazitlacalli in the barrio of Atenanitlan, an area bounded now, N., by Calle del Canal del Norte; E., Ave. del Trabajo; S., barrio of Metamolinaco and a broken line from intersection of Tehuca and Manzanos to approximately the intersection of Pelado and Jesús Carranza; and W., Jesús Carranza.

2. A barrio occupying an area bounded now, N., by Calle de la Independencia; E., a line approximately along Morrupó, prolonged to Plaza de S. Juan; S., Pugibet; and W., Luis Moya. — Ibid. The context would suggest, however, another place of the same name in Tlatilulco.

3. Seler, op. cit., p. 559, translates thus: "In Atecocolecan liegt ganz ruhig der Führer über die gegenüber (Ixwiqkfiw), die uns umringen (ainwikkiuwa)."

4. The context does not indicate whether Tlaxcallan or Mexican chieftains are meant; it may be speculated that the latter are referred to. See a parallel passage, supra., Chap. 34.

● 726 tion?"[5] And the chieftains kept going from one side to the other, back and forth. None stood upright nor rose straight.

(And often the Spaniards placed themselves among their enemies. They were not to be seen; as the natives were arrayed, so also they bedight themselves. They put on devices and bound on mantles over [their shoulders], in order to disguise themselves. They went hiding themselves among the people and took watchful care. When [the Spaniards] struck someone with an arrow, all crouched; all fell to the ground. There was much watching; there was alertness as to whence came and whither went the iron bolt. Well did the chieftains of Tlatilulco take care and keep good watch.)

And little by little [the Spaniards] penetrated them and laid siege to them. And at Copalnamacoyan, on the road to Amaxac, the [bearers of] shields came close to one another; they met face to face.

And there was a man whose name was Chalchiuhtepeua, who hid himself behind a wall there at Amaxac. And this one was a Mexican from Tlatilulco. And he spied a horse, in order to spear it. And when he had speared the horse, then the Spaniard [riding it] went down back of it. Then his companions quickly came forth to seize him, and then put to flight all the chieftains and lords who were with them. Then they fell in behind them in pursuit. So once again they made them come to a stand at Copalnamacoyan, where stood the wall. Forthwith each rested, and each departed and entered his house.

And once it came to pass that all who were about us, though not the Spaniards, came and assembled there at Teteuhtitlan.[6] It was yet early dawn when they took position. Thereupon they leveled over a lagoon; they filled in the body of water named Tlaixcuipan,[7] for they went about crowded together. All manner of rocks they bore; all kinds of wood, pillars, door lintels, adobes, worked corner stones, etc. They moved with much chattering, raising the dust. For this reason had they so done, that they thought and imagined that thus they could rob the common folk who were at the edge of the road, who dwelt on the border of the way which led to Tepeyacac.

(auh mjecpa motlacacuepaia in Españoles, amo monextiaia in juh mochichioa njcan tlaca: no iuh mochichioaia, tlaviztli cõmaqujaia, tilmatli panj qujmolpiliaia, injc mjxpoloaia, çan motetocticiuiztiz, çan jc qujteimachitia, in oaca qujmjnque, nepacholo, tlahtech vikoa, cenca tlachialo, cenca mjxpepetza in campa ie vallauh, in campa ie valitztiuh in tepusmjtl, vel mjmati, vel motlachielia in tiiacaoan in Tlatilulca:)

Auh cencan yiolic intech xocotivi, intech caltechpachotivi. Auh in copalnamacoian in jpan vtli amaxac cenca netechpachiuhtiuh in chimalli, moquanamjcctiuh.

Auh ce tlacatl itoca catca Chalchiuhtepeoa, qujmotocti tepantli, vncã in amaxac. Auh in ichoatl in ca mexicatl tlatilucatl: auh cenca qujmottilia in cavallo injc qujxiliz: auh in oqujxil cavallo: njman ic valmotzincuh in Español: njman ic caantiqujzque in icnjvan, njman ic qujnteputztique, çan much ieõtin in tiiacavan, yoan in pipiltin, intech ietiqujzq̃ noc imjcampa qujnteputztique, ic ie no ceppa qujnquetzato in copalnamacoian, in vncan tenamjtl onoca: nec ic onceceuh, viviloac, cacalacoac.

Auh ceppa muchiuh in jxqujch in techiaoalotoc: amo no ichoan in españoles: cenqujçato in vmpa Teteuhtitlan oc ioan in momanato: njmã ie ic tlaatzupa, catzupa in atezcatl in itoca Tlaixcujpã iuhqujn moquequeztinemj ixqujch tetl qujtequj, ixqujch quavitl, tlaquetzalli, tlaixquatl, xamjtl, tenacaztli, &c. chachalacatinemj teuhtli qujquetztinemj: in jpampa iuh qujchiuhca, ca iuh qujlnamjquja, iuh qujmopictiaia, injc qujnnamoiezque in macevalti in otentoque in onoque in jpan vtli tepeiacac iaticac.

5. See Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, pp. 133, 132.

6. Near — or surrounding? — Tlaixcuipan: "probablemente en el barrio de Tlaxcuichilco." — Cline, op. cit.

7. A pond (estanque) in or near Teuxhtitlan. — Ibid.

And when the chieftains had beheld what now [the foe] did and intended, thereupon they deliberated as to what they would do. And when they had decided, thereupon went a boat, very carefully, which they poled rapidly. It came to a stop at the road's edge. No war device showed; it only came covered over. Another came. Just so, cautiously, they poled it forth rapidly. And once more came two boats, so making four. Then arose two eagle and two ocelot [warriors]. The first eagle [warrior] was Topantemoctzin; the second, Tlacotzin. And the first ocelot [warrior] was Temilotzin; the second, Coyoueuetzin. Thereupon broke forth one ocelot and one eagle [warrior], poling their boats furiously—as if the boats flew. They went cautiously to Teteuhtitlan, in order to intercept and cut off the advance [of the foe]. And when they had gone, once again, also, two—another eagle and another ocelot [warrior]—sped forth to hurl themselves into the midst [of the fray]. And when they had already gone, the flutes were blown, and thereupon people were robbed. And some from there approached to cut off the advance of the chieftains.

And when our foes saw this, they would have fled. Many died in the water, sunk and submerged, only piled up one on another, as if no longer conscious, as if stunned, fallen, soaked. Those who in vain tried to flee, only fell between the beams. They were pulled out, it is said, completely smeared with mud, slippery with mud, well soaked and completely drenched. Very many perished; there they died in myriads. And this was the last time that there our foes, the various people [allied to the Spaniards] died in numbers. And when our foes had died, the next day was quite calm.

And thus came the Spaniards here to Amaxac. They went to and reached where the common folk had taken refuge.[8] They had completely surrounded us. The battle spread all around, there at Amaxac and on the road which led to Tepeyacac. Then [the Spaniards] went to and entered the young men's house named Ueican,[9] for there assembled all the young men. Then they climbed up to the roof terrace. And all the common folk thereupon jumped down behind the young men's house, and then all dispersed into the water. And a great sea-

Auh in oquittaque tiiacaoan in ic tlein quichioa, 726
qujmopictia: njman ie ic qujnemjlia in quenjn vel quichioazque: auh in ovel qujnemjlique, njman ie ic ce vitz in acalli, cencā yiolic, in quitlanelhujtivitze, contecaco vtenco, amo valneztia in tlaviztli, çan vallepachiuhtia, ie no ce valla, çan ie no ivi in jiolic quivallanelhujtiaque: auh ie no ceppa valla vme in acalli ic onnauhtetix. Nimā ic valmevatiquetz vntetl quauhtli, ontetl ocelutl: injc ce quauhtli, iehoatl in Topātemoctzin: injc vme, iehoatl in Tlacutzin. Auh injc ce ocelutl iehoatl in Temjlotzin: injc vme, iehoatl in Coiovevetzin: njmā ie ic oneoa: ce ocelutl, ce quauhtli, qujntequjtlanelhuja, iuhqujn patlanj acalli, vmpa tlamattiuh in teteuhtitlan in q'niacacotonazque, in qujnviltequjzque. Auh in jquac oisque ie no ceppa no contlazque in omentin no ce quauhtli, auh no ce ocelutl qujntlacomotlazque: auh in jquac ie vi nec tlapitzalo, njman ie ic tenamoielo: auh ceq'ntin njpa qujniacatzacujlico in tiiacaoan.

Auh in oquittaque in toiaovan motlaloznquja mjec in atlan mjc, in polacō in illaoque, ça netech ommotilinjaia, iuhqujn aocmo qujmati, ça iuhqujn çoçotlaoa ça iuhqujn chachapantivetzi, in oc nen motlaloznequj ça quauhcamac activetzi, tevivilano, omach moçoqujneloque, omach moçoqujpetzcoque, vel chachaquanque, vel popolacque, vel mjec in ixpoliuh, oncan vel tonacamjcoac: auh ça yioppa in vncā ontonacamjcque in toiaovan in nepapan tlaca: auh in jquac ommjqujco in toiaovan, in jmuztlaioc, ça cactimanca:

auh ic vallaque in Españoles in vncan amaxac, vel vmpa acito, in vmpa tlantoque in macevaltin, vel techiacaloque, vel motetemmā in iauiotl, in vel vncā amaxac yoan ipan vtli in tepeiacac iaticac: njmā ic calaqujto in telpuchcali: moteneoa veican: iehica ca vncan monechicoaia in jzqujch telpochtli: njman [561 ic tlecoque in tlapanco. Auh in jzqujch maceoalli: 344] njman ie ic ommotepeoa in jcampa Telpuchcalli, nec atla onnetepevalo. Auh ce vei tiiacauh quachic itoca, Vitzilhoatzin tlapanco moquetz, icpac in telpuchcalli, oc iuhqujn tenamjtl muchiuh, oc ic achi con-

8. Corresponding Spanish text: "donde eran la iglesia de la christiandad."
9. Ibid.: "Juntamente llegaron a donde estaban el mozaco de los mexicanos."

726 soned warrior, a shorn one, named Uitzilustzin, placed himself above, on the roof terrace of the young men's house. Like a wall he now became.[10] Meanwhile, the common folk followed him a little. But the Spaniards then fell upon them and bore down on them, and thereupon beat, hacked, and pierced him. Then once more the chieftains set upon [the Spaniards], and they then quickly loosed the chieftain [Uitzilustzin]. Then they went to lay hands on him, but he did not, nevertheless, die. Then they went, and all was quiet.

And [the temple with] images of the devils [the Spaniards] then set fire to. They burned it.[11]

And the chieftains to no purpose came to hold their position. Yet [the Spaniards] shot no arrows at the women, but only at those who came out as men [of war]. And when all ceased, there was only a little sun.

And on the fourth day likewise it came to pass that our foes marched forth together. Wheresoever there were common folk, there the Spaniards moved cautiously. Very softly they kept going. And the chieftain and commanding general Temilotzin in vain opposed them. He took refuge behind a wall. [411] As an eagle [warrior] he stepped forth; he had his iron sword with him, with which he would cut them down. But when he saw that nowhere could he do anything, then he cast himself into, and made his way in, the water. There were great war cries. Then once again the battle engulfed them. Only there did they reach. In truth, all day did the battle last.

And when it had dawned, when already it was the fifth day, once again our [Indian] foes and the Spaniards made an assault. And all who surrounded us, in truth, marched together. They were around us, hemming us in. Nowhere could any go nor proceed. All were indeed compressed. All were verily crushed and trampled. And when they had come close among us, a woman poured water upon them; she drenched their faces; she dashed water into the faces of our foes.[12]

[693] And the ruler Quauhtemoc, and the chieftains Coyoueuetzin, Temilotzin, Tepantemoctzin, Auelitoctzin the chief justice, Tlacotzin, and Petlauhtzin

tocac in macevalli. Auh in Españoles: njmã ic imp̃: ommotepeuhque, impan ommotzquijque: njman ic ic qujvivitequj, qujtlatlapana, qujtzeltilia: njman ic ic no ceppa qujvallazque in tiiacaoen: auh njman ic qujcauhtiquijzque in tiiacauh. njman ic conanato, amo tel vel mjc, njmã ic iaque, cactimoman.

Auh in diablome imjxiptlavan: vncan cnotlecavique, contlatlatique.

Auh in tiiacavan, oc nen valmomantivi tel amo ma qujnmjna in cioa: çan ichoantin in oqujchicativitze: auh in necacaoaloc ça achiton tonatiuh.

Auh injc navilhujtl çan ic no ivi in mochiuh cemolinque in toiaovan: in vmpa onoc macevalli vmpa tlamattivi in Españoles, cencan ivian in iativi. Auh in tiiacauh tlacateccatl in temjlotzin, oc nen qujnmopachiviaia, tepantli qujmotocti Quauhtli ipan qujzticac, itepatzmaquauh ieticac, injc qujncotonazquja: auh in oqujttac in aoccampa veli, njmã ic atlan valmomaiauh, axotlatiuh, cenca tlacavaca: vncan ic no ceppa moertemmã in iauiotl, çan vncan acito: vel cemjlhujtl in manca iauiotl.

Auh in otlatvic, in ic ic macujlilhujtl: ic no ceppa vel qujcẽtlaz in toiaouh in Españoles: yoan in jxqujch in techiaoalotoc, vel cemolin, vel techiavaloque, techololhujque, aocac campa vel huja vel nexnocolo, vel nepapatzolo, vel mjequjntin patzmjcque, nequequeçaloc. Auh in cenca ic in techonaci, oc civatl qujvallatequja, qujmjxtatequja, qujmjxapapatza in toiaovan.

Auh in tlatoanj in Quauhtemoctzin yoan in tiiacavan in Coioovetzi in Temjjotzin, Topantemoctzin, Auelitoctzin. Mixnotlailotlactzin. Tlacotzin, Pe-

10. Ibid.: "vn capitan que se llamaua Vitzilustzin con muchos soldados que estaua sobre los diputados constituyeron a vnos (redado?) a los españoles pensandose por otro para que no pasassen a dicho estaua al rompido."

11. Ibid.: "y aun dio los españoles pegaron fuego a vnos de la qual auia muchos estaua de los yndios." See Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II—The Conquistadores, p. 148 (Cuauhtin).

12. Corresponding Spanish text: "los mexicanos tomaban polvaraas arquebuz o los contrarios con el agua de los arroyos arrojandosela con los rostros."

then seized upon a great chieftain named Tlapaltecatl opochtzin, whose home was Costlan. Thereupon they arrayed him, and put on him the quetzal feather owl[13] which had been the device of Auitzotzin. Quauhtemoc said: "This device was the device of my begetter, of my father Auitzotzin.[14] Let him wear it. Let him die in it. May he gain honor before the people. May he become a portent in it. May our foes see and marvel at him."[15] And when they put it on him, he was indeed terrifying. Truly wonderful he appeared. And [Quauhtemoctzin] commanded four to aid him and be at his side. They gave him the darts[16] [and dart thrower] which were the devil's—the throwing spears with flint points.

tlauhtzin. Nimã ic conanq̃ ce vei tiacauh, itoca Tlapaltecatl opuchtzin costlan ichã njman ic ic qujchichioa, conaqujque, in quetzaltecu[l]tl: itlaviz catca in Aujtzotzin: qujto in Quauhtemoctzin. Jnjn tlaviztli, itlaviz catca in notechiuhcauh in notatzi Aujtzotzin, ma ichoatl conjtquj ma ipan ommjquj ma cõtemaviçolti ma ipan tetlatiti ma qujttacan in toiaovan ma qujmaviçocan. Auh in oconaqujque vel temamaubti, vel maviztic in neci: auh navinti in qujnnavatique in qujvalpalevitiazque, in qujvallamatilitiazque, qujvalmacaque in jmjuh catca tlacateculotl, tlacumjtl, iacatecpaio.

And when they had done this, it became like a portent for the lords of the Mexicans. The ruler's vicar Tlacotzin said: "O Mexicans! O Tlatilulcans! Hath Mexico been nothing—that on which Mexican rule was founded? It is said to be with the power of Uitzilopochtli, which he hurled at one. It is none other than the fire serpent, the fire drill, with which he walked, casting it at our foes—which you, O Mexicans, have held as his power of the dart. Forthwith you will aim it against our foes. You will cast it not to the earth; you will hurl it with strength at [the foe]. And if one or two will be struck—if one or two of our enemies will be reached,—it is in truth a token for us [that] yet, for a little, we shall look to favor; [that] yet our lord [the god] may desire it." Thereupon went the quetzal-owl [bedight warrior], with quetzal feathers as if parted.

Auh injc iuh qujchiuhque in, iuhqujnma intlapoal muchiuh in tlatoque in Mexica: qujto in Civacoatl tlacutzin. Mexicae tlatilulcae, atlei injc mexico ocatca, injc ommanca mexicaiutl: in mjtoa in vncan inavatil in vitzilobuchtli in tepã qujtlaça ca çan iee in xiuhcoatl, in mamalhoaztli in otepã qujtlaztinenca in toiaupan in ie anconcuj Mexicae in jnaoatil in mjtl: çan njmã vmpa anqujtlachieltizque in ivicpa toiaovan, amo çan tlalpan anqujmaiavizque cenca intech in anqujtlaçazque: auh intla ce, anoço vme momjnaz: auh in ano ce, anoço vme in maçiz toiaouh ca nel totlapoal, oc achitzin tinacazitztiazque, oc quenjn qujmonequjltiz in totecujo: njman ie ic iauh in quetzalteculotl, in quetzalli iuhqujn xexeliuhtiuh.

And when our foes saw him, [it was] as if a mountain had burst. In truth, all the Spaniards took fright; much did he terrify them, as if they had seen in him something [inhuman]. Then the quetzal-owl [warrior] climbed up to the roof terrace. And some of our foes, who could see him, stood up. Then they forced him to turn back, and took after

Auh in oqujttaque in toiaovan, iuhqujn tepetl vitomj vel muchintin momaubtique in Españoles, cenca qujnmauhti, iuhqujnma itla ipan qujttaque: njman ic tlapanco tlecoc in quetzalteculotl. Auh in cequjntin toiaovan in ovel qujttaque moquetzque: njman ic qujvalcuepque, qujvaltocaque: ie no ceppa no qujncuep qujntocac in quetzalteculotl, njman

13. Bustamante, op. cit., p. 211: "un buho (buho de plumaje vivo y esparcido)."

14. While Book XII was in press Dr. Anderson wrote the following comment from Florence, Italy: "The word is almost illegible in the MS. (reproduction of the original (Ms.-Palat. 218-220, Laurentian Library, Florence), in connection with researches in Europe made possible by the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation), suggests that matchiuhcauh (my father or begetter) is meant."

15. Corresponding Spanish text: "Entonces ya los mexicanos arrendaro de todos parte de los enemigos arrebaron de temor presentaro o aparecieron ellos ya mexicanos no sentiero o el los quedaron lugar de ganaper de aquel gran peligro en que estando; y hablo el señor de mexico que se llamaua quauhtemotzin, y dixo a los principales que eran el estando . . . hagamos experimentar a ver si podemos ganaper deste peligro I que estaueis ganaper en de los ueis enbiaron que se metieron mantuuo y estaueis los arrenos y dieipor que pasa de mi padre ahuitzotzin. luego llamaron a un mancebo valiente hombre que se llamaua Tlapaltecatl apuchtzin que era del barrio de costlan donde se agaro la parcuela de 1.° estaueis en el dichoho."

16. The Aztec text may read iuj iujuh. In jujuh is probably meant.

726 him. Another time the quetzal-owl [warrior] turned them back and pursued them. Thereupon he took from them the quetzal feathers and the gold [looted by the foe],[17] and then he jumped down from the roof terrace. He did not die, nor did our foes carry him off. Now also, three of our foes had been taken. At last the battle came to an end; with this, stillness spread, and no more was done. Then our foes departed. All was quiet, and nothing more took place. Thus night fell.

And upon the morrow, likewise no more happened. None spoke aloud. The common folk only settled back. And the Spaniards did nothing more. They only remained still; they remained looking at the common folk. Nothing more occurred; they remained quiet, in place.

701 And here are named all the chieftains, the great men who were wise in the ways of war, who disposed [men] for battle, who assumed the burden of war: the general Coyoueuetzin, and the Tzilacatecutli Temilotzin. These were Tlatilulcans. And those of Tenochtitlan [were] the ruler's vicar Tlacotzin and the captain of the armies Motelchiuhtzin. These are they who were the great chieftains of Tlatilulco and Tenochtitlan.

ie ic qujnamoia in quetzalli, yoan in teucujtlatl: auh njman ic vmpa valhuetz in tlapanco, amo mjc, amo qujvicaque in toiaovan: ie no icintin in axivaque in toiauiã ça icoen ontzotzon in iauiotl ic cactimoman, aoc tle muchiuh: njman ic iaque in toiaovan, cactimo[illegible]n, aoc tle muchiuh injc oniovan.

Auh in jmuztlaioc, çan njmã aoc tle muchiuh, aocac navati, ça pachiuhtoc in macevalli. Auh in ieboantin Españoles aoc no tle ay, ça onoque, qujmonjxtoque in macevaltin aoc tle mantoc, cencã ça onoq̃.

Auh njcan motenevia in jzq'ntin tiiacavan, in vevei oqujchtin, in vel imjxco catca iauiotl, in iautecaia in jpan icaca iauiotl. Tlacuchcalcatl, Coiovevetzin, Tzilacatecutli Temjlotzin: in ieboantin in ca tlatilulca. Auh in tenuchca, ieboantin in. Cioacoatl tlacutzin, vitznaoatl Motelchiuhtzin: oca ieboãtin in, in veveintin tiiacavan catca in tlatilulco, yoan injc tenuchtitlan.

17. This is explained in the Spanish text: "salio este con su el dispuesto donde los dexaron tenjan quitado y tomado de sus enbidos."

Thirty-ninth Chapter, in which is told how, when the [Spaniards] had forced them to the wall, there appeared to the Mexicans what showed itself to be [a ball of] jasper[1] which seemed to issue from the heavens and came to view like a large coal of fire.

Injc cempoalli on caxtolli onnavi capitulo: 726 787 vncã mjtoa in quenjn ichoantin Mexica in jquac ovel qujncaltechpachoto in nez in mottac Eztetl: iuhq'nma ilhujcacpa valla. Auh injc valneztia iuhqõjõ vei tlexuchtli.

And when night had fallen, then it rained and sprinkled at intervals. Late at night the flame became visible; just so was it seen, just so it emerged as if it came from the heavens. Like a whirlwind[2] it went spinning around and revolving; it was as if embers burst out of it — some very large, some very small, some like sparks. Like a coppery wind it arose, crackling, snapping, and exploding loudly. Then it circled the dike and traveled toward Coyonacazco;[3] then it went into the middle of the lake there to be lost.

Auh in ovalioac: njman ie ic qujqujiavi, avachqujqujiavi, ie tlaqusuhiova in nez tletl: in juh mottac, in juh nez, iuhqujn ilhujcacpa valla, iuhqujn ecamalacutl, momamalacachotiuh, motevilacachotiuh, iuhqujn cuecuepocatiuh tlexuchtli, cequj vevei, cequj çan tepitoton, cequj ça iuhqujn tlemoiutl, iuhqujn ecatepuztli, moquetza, cenca icoioca, tetecujca, titicujca, çan qujiavalo in atenamjtl: coionacazco in valiztia: njmã ic ia in anepantla, vmpa popolivito, None shouted; none spoke aloud.

aiac motenvitec, aiac navat:

And on the next day, nothing more happened. All remained [quiet], and also our foes [so] remained.

auh in jmuztlaioc, aoc no tle muchiuh, ça onoac, ça no onoque in toiaovan.

But the Captain [Cortés] was watching from a roof-top at Amaxac — from the roof-top of [the house of] Axtavatzin — under a canopy. It was a many-colored canopy. He was looking toward the common folk; the Spaniards stood crowded about him and took counsel among themselves.

Auh in capitan tlapãco vallachixtica in amaxac, Axtavatzin itlapanco, cevalcaloo, tlatlapalli in cevalcalli, qujmonjtztica in macevaltin, cololhujtoque in Españoles, mononotztoque.

And [on our side] were Quauhtemoc and the other noblemen[4] — the ruler's vicar[5] Tlacotzin, the lords' judge[6] Petlauhtzin, the captain of the armies[7] Motelchiuhtzin, the constable[8] of Mexico, and the head priest;[9] and also the rulers of Tlatiluco — the Auh in Quauhtemoctzin; yoan in oc cequjntin tlatoque. Civacoatl tlacotzin. Tlillancalquj. vieznaoatl. Petlauhtzin. Motelchiuhtzi mexicatl. Achcauhtli, Tecutlamacazcatzin. Niman in ichoantin in tlatiluco tlatoque. Tlacuchcalcatl. Coiovevetzin. tla- 701 565

1. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 306, translates amatl (amatl [illegible]) as Blackjaw. See, however, Simeón, op. cit.
2. Sahagún, loc. cit., has ein Windball (?).
3. See Chapter 34, n. 5.
4. We have rearranged the first line of the notes as Sahagún does in op. cit., p. 307, for the sake of more logical reading.
5. Gobernador. Cf. Clark, op. cit., III, fol. 3; also Juan de Torquemada: Segunda parte de los veinte i un libros rituales i monarchia indiana (Madrid: Nicolas Rodrigues Franco, 1723), II, p. 352; Chimalpáhin, op. cit., p. 195.
6. Tlilancalqui. Cf. Clark, op. cit., fol. 65. For tlilancalcatl, Torquemada, op. cit., p. 178, has cuvinan mayor.
7. Tlacatecatl. Cf. Clark, op. cit., fol. 67.
8. Achcauhtli. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., III — The Origin of the Gods, p. 33.
9. Tecuhtlamacazcatzin. Cf. Clark, op. cit., II, p. 117.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

Chilton later fell into the hands of Indians near Santiago de los Valles (Ciudad Valles), and was threatened with cannibalism, but they feared his leanness to be due to the pox, and spared him. Scalp-taking here is noted by Chilton:

> ...they take a great pride in killing a Christian; and to wear any part of him where he hath any haire growing, hanging it about their necks, and so are accounted for valiant men.

Native trade connections between the Valles area and distant Xalapa of Veracruz are also noted by Chilton.

In early pre-Hispanic times, Oxitipan was claimed, along with Tulancinco and other towns of the north, as part of the old domain of Xaltocan.*

Provincial borders in 1519.—In 1519, the province of Ctzicoac lay to the south; on all other sides, the province of Oxitipan lay open to Chichimec attack.

TRIBUTE

The town of Oxitipan, which probably included various subjects, gave the following tribute in the native period:

CLOTHING

2,010 bundles† of large mantles, each 2 varas long 806 bundles‡ of large mantles, striped red, blue, and yellow

FOOD*

400 loads of dried axi

OTHER TRIBUTE*

1 or more live eagles, as many as were caught

It is noteworthy that the same items of tribute, though in lesser quantities, were given annually in early colonial days to the Spanish masters of Oxitipan.

CLOTHING

9 "sauanas"

FOOD

30 loads of axi
9 jars of honey
... maize

* ENE, 10: 126. † Corrected from 2,000. ‡ Corrected from 800.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

721 the Mexicans telling them not to annoy or rob those towns, for their Lord Montezuma approved of our all being great friends, and that if they did so he would come against them and attack them. The Mexicans took no notice of that reply or of the threat, but said that we should find them in the field. Juan de Escalante who was a very competent man and prompt in his actions, summoned all our allies from the towns in the Sierra to come with their arms, that is bows, arrows, lances and shields, and he also called together the most active and healthy of his soldiers, (for I have already said that nearly all the settlers who had remained in Villa Rica were invalids and sailors,) and with two cannon and a little powder, three crossbows, two muskets, and forty soldiers and over two thousand Totonac Indians, he went in search of the Mexican garrison, who were already out robbing a town of our allies. They met in the fields at dawn of day, and as the Mexicans doubled in number our Totonac allies, and as the latter were always in terror of them on account of their former wars, at the first attack of the Mexicans with arrows, darts, stones and war cries, they took to their heels and left Juan de Escalante to fight the Mexicans alone, in such a manner that he and his poor soldiers barely reached a town called Almeria, which they set on fire and burned the houses. There he rested a little for he was badly wounded.

726

In those skirmishes and attacks, the Mexicans carried off alive a soldier named Argüello, a native of Leon, a man with a very large head and black curly beard, and he was very sturdy in appearance and a man of great strength. Juan de Escalante and six of his soldiers were very badly wounded and one horse was killed. They returned to Villa Rica and within three days Escalante and the six soldiers were dead.

It was in this way that what we call "the affair at Almeria"

796 sions, but their presence was obligatory, that they might see and 702 learn. Besides, as often as war was proclaimed, a general muster [721] and rehearsal was held at each quarter.[24] We have no detailed report of such exercises, of the evolutions, if any, carried out by the warriors, but an incident of the history of Mexico may furnish us with an approximate picture. When, in 1473, the tribe of Tlat-
702 ilulco, independent at that time from Mexico, agreed upon attacking the latter, they practised beforehand, and with as much secrecy as possible.[25] Setting up posts of hard wood, they beat against them with their swords and clubs; they sped arrows and threw darts at thick wooden planks, and lastly they went out into the lake and shot at birds flying.[26] This may be supposed an illustration of the manner in which the Mexicans practised at arms.

702 These exercises partaking, frequently at least, of a religious 726 character, they ordinarily took place at the squares surrounding 712 temples, more particularly in the great place of the chief "house of God" ("teo-calli") of Mexico.[27] Immediately preceding a foray or campaign, warriors and youth aggregated there also, not only to practice, but especially to receive their weapons out of the

"other times appointed, the latter caused the young men to practice at arms, that they "might be ready for war. He even set out premiums to those who would distinguish "themselves, and not only was present, but sometimes used the bow and sword, taking "part in the exercises." Also to Torquemada (Lib. X, cap. XIV, p. 256, of 2d volume, but especially cap. XI, p. 232. "En esta fiesta hacian alardes, y escaramuças todos los "Soldados y Hombres de Guerra, donde cada qual pretendia aventajarse al atro; y se "mostraban muy valientes, y esforçados; de donde nacia señalarse muchos, y aventu-"rarse à casos muy peligrosos"), and Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXI, p. 143).

[24] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXXIV, p. 147, and cap. XC).

[25] It is well known that the Mexicans had formerly divided into two tribes: the Mexicans proper, of Tenuchtitlan (Tenuchcas), and those of Tlatilulco. The latter never denied their common descent. At the time of their conspiracy to overthrow the Tenuchca they are said to have agreed upon: "that Mexicati-Tenuchtitlan should be ob-"literated, and Tlatilulco-Mexico should become head of the world" (Tezozomoc, cap. XLI). It is not devoid of interest to know that, as late as 1473 (the year 7 "calli"), or only 48 years previous to the Spanish conquest, the very existence of the Mexican power became seriously threatened by a small tribe, subsisting as an independent people within musket range of Mexico. This fact, and the negotiations of the Tlatilulca with the other tribes of the valley, at that period, furnish one of the best illustrations of the loose manner in which all the tribes subject to Mexico at the time of Cortés were bound to the Mexicans. After the overthrow of the Tlatilulcans by Axayacatl of Mexico, their pueblo became the fifth "quarter" (calpulli), and under Spanish rule it bore the name of "Santiago."

[26] Tezozomoc (Cap. XLI). Durán (Cap. XXXIII, pp. 259 and 260). According to the latter, they at first practised with the sling, throwing stones against a wooden image; he does not mention the use of the sword or club, only missiles. Otherwise, both authors agree perfectly.

[27] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXXIV, p. 147). Herrera (Dec. II, lib. VII, cap. II, p. 197, of 1st volume).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

702
712
726

public storehouses connected with the temples of each tribal subdivision.[28]

The name given to these public store-houses was "houses of darts" (tlacochcalco).[29] They were, probably, not limited to the immediate vicinity of the chief temple, but each subdivision of the pueblo had its "house of darts" as well as its central "teocalli."[30] The following description of an aboriginal Mexican "pueblo," furnished by a missionary who arrived in New-Spain as early as

712

[28] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXI, p. 121. Immediately preceding the foray against Xoconochco, "each day the youth went to the quarters, to practise at the school of arms, "telpuchcalco . . . . " Idem, cap. LXXVIII, p. 134). The Anonymous Conqueror, whose relation is contained in vol. I of Sr. Icazbalceta's "Col. de Documentos," both in the original Italian taken from Ramusio ("Relatione di alcune cose della Nuova "Spagna, & Della Gran Citta di Temestitan Messico, fatta per uno Gentil' homo del "Signor Fernando Cortese"), and in the Spanish translation by the distinguished Mexican scholar, says (p. 394, "Del tempii, é Meschite che havevano"): "Before they left "(for war), they all went to the principal mosque ("meschita maggiore"—main teocalli) "and provided themselves with the arms stored over the main entrances" (of the square around the temple). We have few positive indications as to the true situation of the store-houses, beyond that they were probably connected with the "school, houses" ("telpuchcalco"), and therefore with the temples. Torquemada, who gives an elaborate description of the chief temple of Mexico (Lib. VIII, of 2d volume), says (Cap. XI, p. 146): "and at each one of the four entrances to the court of the temple- "there was an extensive (very large) hall, connected with numerous rooms and closets, "high as well as low, which served as houses of arms, where these were kept together "with the ammunition. For, as they regarded the temples as their strongest places, "and their retreats in case of danger, they held there their arms and means of defence." He further mentions, under the uncouth name of "Tlacochcalcoscatlyacapan," "an- "other hall . . . . Here they kept a quantity of arrows (or darts, 'saetas') which "were made every year, and there deposited until wanted." See also Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXVII). Gomara (Vedia, I. "El templo de Méjico," p. 349). "At each door (of "the four) of the court of the principal temple there was a large hall surrounded by "high and low additions. These were filled with arms, like public and communal "houses, for the temples were the strongholds of each pueblo, and therefore contained "the arms and ammunition." Of course the square of the great "teocalli" of Mexico attracted principal attention.

[29] "Tlacochalco," or "Tlacochcalli," derives from "tlacochtli," dart, and "calli," house.

[30] Every author concedes that there were several "houses of arms" at Mexico. Bernal-Diez says there were two (Cap. XCI, p. 87, of vol. II, Vedia). Gomara ("Casas de armas," Vedia, I, p. 345) says: "Montezuma had some (rather 'several' 'algunas') houses of arms, whose blazon were a bow and two quivers over each door." Herrera (Dec. II, lib. VII, cap. XI, p. 186) says; "he had, not one, but many houses for the "keeping and storage of arms;" (Dec. II, lib. VII, cap. XVII, p. 197) he copies almost textually Gomara's statement about the halls over the entrances of the court to the temple of Mexico, and adds also, like Gomara, "porque los templos, allende de que "servian de casas de Oracion, eran las Fortaleças con que en tiempo de Guerra mas se "defendian, i tenian en ellos la municion, i Almacen." Previously he says (p. 196): "There were many temples in Mexico; according to the parishes, or quarters, of which "there were many." See also Motolinia (Trat. III, cap. VIII, p. 188): "porque tenian "muchas casas de varas con sus puntas de pedernal, etc., etc." It shows that the storehouses were distributed over the pueblo, and not only limited to the main temple. Cortés, when he burnt Quauhpopoca, emptied for that purpose the arsenals of the main

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

round, small, "target," worn by the "brave" on his left arm and 714 made of "canes netted together and interwoven with cotton 'two-
"fold,' covered on the outside with gilded boards and with feath"ers, and so strong that a hard cross-bow shot could alone pene-
"trate them . . . ."[54]

With this shield they warded off blows in close combat,[55] and even arrows and darts at full speed. Each warrior probably carried his own shield, although it is sometimes stated that the archers, while shooting, were shielded by others.[56] This, however, would necessarily imply a greater progress of the military art among the Mexicans than we may safely allow. [726]

The remainder of the protective armour of the Mexicans is intimately connected with their costume.

The ordinary dress of a Mexican consisted of a sleeveless jacket 291
("huepil") fastened on the right shoulder, and of the breechcloth 714
("maxtlatl"). The head, arms, and legs from the knees downwards, were bare. A mantle, short among the common Indians, longer among the chiefs, completed the costume.[57] Sometimes 714 they went to war without any other protection, but in most cases the warrior wore a frock of quilted cotton, about three-quarters of

[54] The "anonymous conqueror" (Col. de Doc., Vol. I, p. 373). Compare Torquemada (Lib. IV, cap. XXXI, p. 423), and Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXIII).

[55] See the description of a single combat between a Cempoaltecan and Tlaxcaltecan (Herrera, Dec. II, lib. VI, cap. VI, p. 143, and Torquemada, Lib. IV, cap. XXXI, p. 422).

[56] Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXIII) and the anonymous conqueror both assert, that each warrior had a shield. But Fray G. de Mendieta is still more positive (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 130): "Tras estos llegaban los golpes de espada y rodela, con los cuales iban "arrodelados los de arco y flecha, y alli gastaban su almacen." However, Fray Diego Durán says: (Cap. XIV, p. 121) "y llegados á un lugar que llaman Tecuitlatenco, hicie-"ron alto y esperaron la armada de Mexico que venian por la laguna, que eran mill "canoas, muy bien Aderegadas de gente y paueses con gran numero de fisgas y varas "arrojadiças, flechas y rodelas y de hombres para defensa de los flecheros, los quales "estauan tan diestros en desviar flechas con las rodelas, que era espanto, porque en "viéndola venir, luego la dauan con la rodela que la echauan à traves." This seems to indicate that there were special men detailed to protect the archers, and therefore a division into different arms, although there is no other evidence of such a fact. It may have been the case here, since the fight (against Cuitlahuac) was to take place on water chiefly, but nowhere else do we meet a division into kinds of arms, like archers, spearmen, swordsmen, etc., etc. All Mexican warriors were armed as nearly alike as possible. The Anonymous Conqueror, after mentioning the different weapons, says: "y "molti, ò la maggior parti di esse portano tutte queste sorti di armi con che combattone." ("Relatione, etc.," in Vol. I. of Col. de Doc., p. 374.)

[57] Gomara (Conquista de Méjico. Vedia, Tom. I. p. 449. "Calzan unos zapatos como "alpargates, pannicos por bragas. Visten una manta quadrada, aíudada al hombro "derecho como gitanas"). The Anonymous Conqueror (p. 376. "La maniera del ves-"tire de gli huomini"). Tezozomoc (Crónica, Cap. XXXVI, p. 56. "the macehuals "of lower grade, wore short mantles, plain, of cotton or nequen"). The "maxlatl" is described by the Anonymous Conqueror as follows: "a towel, like unto a sheet

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

646 The existence of this council as
642 a supreme authority, proves the Mexicans to have been, not subject to the despotic rule of a monarch, but organized after the principles of a military democracy. They were a barbarous but free and warlike community.

721 Legitimate causes for war were frequently furnished to the Mexicans. Their traders, or those of allied or subjected tribes, were often exposed to outrage and ill-treatment on the part of and among foreign "pueblos." Such acts were always regarded as justifying open warfare, and the opportunity was speedily improved. But pretexts[128] were eagerly sought for also, and the Mexicans therefore never at a loss to find some ground for pouncing upon any tribe which excited their cupidity. We have already stated that war was carried on by them for subsistence. It [782] was further required for the purpose of obtaining human victims, their religion demanding human sacrifices at least eighteen times every year.[129] Every important event, like an improvement of the "teo-calli,"[130] and especially the installation of a new war-chief of the highest degree ("Tlaca-tecuhtli"), had to be celebrated by a special butchery of men,—and these victims had to be obtained through war.[131] Therefore the well-known custom of the Mexi- [726] cans, on the battlefield, to look more to the capture than to the slaying of their foes.[132]

[128] The war which resulted in the conquest of Chalco, the foray against Ahuilizapan (Orizava) and Cempoal, were all brought about by the most wanton provocations on the part of the Mexicans (Tezozomoc, Cap. XIX, p. 30; cap. XXI, p. 33; cap. XXXI, p. 48). (Torquemada, Lib. II, cap. XL, p. 159.) (Clavigero, Lib. IV, cap. XIII.) Durán positively denies it, saying that the Mexicans never made war unless provoked, but this is too manifestly untrue (Gomara, p. 442).

[129] These were the regular monthly festivals only.

[130] Durán (Cap. XXXVII, p. 287), when the war against Mechoacan was determined upon: "and that the main reason why he wished to measure himself with their strength "was to try to celebrate with them (by the means of prisoners taken from them) the in-"auguration of the stone, that was similar to the sun, and to tinge his temple with the "blood of these nations." Gomara ("De las guerras," p. 442, Vedia, I, "y para, como "ellos dicen, haber esclavos que sacrificar à los dioses y cebar à los soldados").

[131] It was obligatory upon the chieftain to inaugurate his administration with a military exploit, and great importance was placed upon that the head-chief should make prisoners on that occasion with his own hands. Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXIV, p. 431). Tezozomoc (Cap. LVII, p. 93; cap. LXI, p. 101; cap. LXXXIV, p. 147). These three passages relate to Tizoczic, to Ahuitzotl, and to the last Montezuma, respectively.) Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVII, pp. 131, 132, and 133). Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LV, p. 172, and cap. LXIX, p. 195).

[132] This was a very fatal custom, as against the Spaniards. Had the Mexicans been intent upon killing instead of overpowering their white enemies alive, their resistance would have been more formidable. Thus, for the sake of capturing a single horseman, they recklessly sacrificed numbers of their own, when they thought to be able to surround him, and cut him off from his corps or detachment. The custom was, however, general among the Nahuatlac tribes.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

72 | country, had permitted their coming unmolested,[137] their return, once outside of the council-house, was not placed under any similar safe-guard. Oftentimes that return to Mexico was attended with the most imminent personal danger to the delegates.[138]

The cases, if any, are certainly few in number, where a tribe thus provoked or defied, voluntarily submitted to tribute. The Mexicans could be sure, almost, of war, whenever their supreme council had agreed upon it. Therefore, as soon as the meeting at the official house had concluded, war was proclaimed in the four quarters of the pueblo, and in case of great urgency, a monstrous [203] drum, with a specially dismal sound, called the whole tribe to arms from the top of the chief temple.[139]

72 Owing to the peculiar organization just discussed, a rapid mobilization of the forces of the whole tribe was very feasible. The minor subdivisions gathered under their "captains," and all together proceeded almost simultaneously to the store-houses of the four great quarters of the tribe, where the stewards dealt out the

[137] Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. I, p. 535): "que aunque estas Gentes eran de su "natural condition mas vengativas, que todas las del Mundo, respetaban a' los Embax-"adores de sus mortales enemigos, como a' Dioses, teniendo por mejor violar qualquier "rito de su Religion, que pecar contra la fé dada á los Embaxadores."

[138] For comparison with Loskiel on the northern Indians (Cap. XI, p. 187) see Tezozomoc (Cap. VIII, p. 15). When the "Atempanecatl Tlacaeleltzin" returned for the second time to Azcaputzalco, this time to challenge the Tecpanecas and defy them to open war, and after he had properly decorated their war-chief Tezozomoctli, the latter gave to him a sword, a shield, and a helmet, saying: "Take here, also, something to "protect your body, and this shield and sword, "maccuahuitl," and see if you may "return home safely." Atempanecatl was attacked by Tecpanecan scouts, pursued as far as upon Mexican soil, and escaped only through his swiftness and personal bravery. This episode is confirmed by Durán (Cap. IX, p. 74), and by Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XII, pp. 482 and 483), although they both say that the Mexican delegate escaped by avoiding the warriors of the Tecpanecas by circuitous paths. Still, it shows that his return was attended with great personal danger. Clavigero (Lib. III, cap. XVII) attributes this action to the first Montezuma. ("Huehue-Montezuma," or "Montezuma Ylhuicamina.")

[534] [139] Bernal-Diez (Cap. XCII, Vedia, II, pp. 90 and 91). On the top of the great temple: "y alli tenian un tambor muy grande endemasia, que cuando le tanian el sonido "del era tan triste y de tal manera, como dicen instrumento de los infiernos, y mas de "dos leguas de alli se oia; y decian que los cueros de aquel tambor eran de sierpes muy "grandes." Besides this drum they used conch-shells in great numbers, thus creating a horrid noise. The Spaniards grew intimately acquainted with these awful signals on the night of the 1st of July, 1520, when the various instruments called out the Mexican warriors to that pursuit which caused the slaughter on the dyke leading to Tlacopan. Every one reading the splendid descriptions of Mr. Prescott, of this bloody retreat ("History of the Conq. of Mexico," Book V, chap. III), will remember: "the "huge drum in the desolate temple of the war-god sent forth those solemn tones which, "heard only in seasons of calamity, vibrated through every corner of the capital" (p. 362, of Vol. II).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

armament.[140] Thus the largest bodies were assembled, furnished 726 with weapons, and organized under their respective leaders of all grades on very short notice, awaiting the signal from the chief commander to sally forth, either by canoes across the lake,[141] or along the causeways, to the mainland. Each warrior carried 726 mostly his own frugal provisions[142] which the women of each 724
household had prepared; "corn-bread, meal-cakes, ground beans, "corn-meal seasoned with pepper;"[143] but special carriers also accompanied the force, loaded with a surplus of food, with robes for tents, reeds for huts and bowers, and with cooking utensils like kettles, pans, baskets; also with mats.[144] Sometimes these [140] It also happened that an interval of twenty days (a Mexican month) elapsed between the proclamation of war and the final departure. At least, in most cases, a few days were spent in preparations, since the Mexicans had to give time to their outside allies or subjects to prepare, also. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI): "The Mexicans in "the interval prepared the arms in all the quarters,— shields, swords, and made and "finished many rods ("tlatzontectli"), also slings, and pebbles to be thrown with "cords." (Id., Cap. LVII) "Within twenty days they prepared and fitted out all kinds "of arms, first in the five quarters of Mexico-Tenuchtitlan: Moyotlan, Teopan, Ytza-"cualco, Cuepopan, and Tlatilulco, now called Santiago." In many cases, however, an instantaneous mobilization of the whole force became necessary. Mexico, in times of peace, had to be always ready for war. See, also, Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, pp. 49 and 50).

[141] Canoes, "acalli" (water-houses, from "atl," water, and "calli," house), were used [505]
for the traffic with the main land, but also largely for the carrying of warriors. It is well known what important part they played against the Spaniards during the siege. For the movements of the Mexicans against a hostile tribe, both on land and water, see Durán (Cap. XIV, p. 121), wherein he describes the attack upon Cuitlahuac, both by canoes and on dry land.

[142] Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369): "porque demas de lo que los reyes proueyan de sus "grandes trojes y graneros, cada soldado llevaua á questas su particular comida, "todo lo que podia llevar, atada á la carga el espada y la rodela, etc., etc."

[143] The women prepared the food, but it also occurred that the stewards dispensed it. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 49): "With this the stewards and calpixques of the tribes [262]
"gave to their quarters maize for to make biscuit, tlacactutopochtli, pinole, ground "pepper, chiau, beans, and all what pertained to it, providing themselves with every-"thing necessary for certain day stated." The "tlaxcaltotopochtli" (from "tlaxcalli," corn-bread, and "totopochtli," burnt-bread) would be biscuit of maize-meal, and it is therefore called "vizcocho." The pinolli, or pinole, corn-meal mixed with pepper, was an important victual. The food of the Mexicans, in general, outside of the meats (exclusively fowl and some game) and aquatic animals, consisted of maize in various forms, and of pepper, "chilli," as seasoning. Cacao furnished their main beverage, and stores of it were taken along. See, also, Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369: "maiz tostado "y otro molido y hecho harina, frijol molido, pan biscochado, tamales mohosos y cura-"dos al sol, grandes fardos de chile, cacao molido hecho en pellas"). They also used maize to compose a beverage called "yolatl," which possessed particularly vivifying [272] qualities (See note of Sr. Ramirez to p. 290 of Durán), and which they dispensed even on the battlefield (Durán, Cap. XXXVII; Tezozomoc, Cap. LII).

[144] These carriers are called "tamemes," and are generally regarded as having been [554 slaves. But they probably were outcasts from the bond of kinship, or the men of newly conquered tribes (like Tlatilulco for a time after its capture), upon whom this 558] degrading work (because woman-like!!) was imposed as a penalty. Slaves were not nu-

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 carriers were burthened with a surplus of arms, and even with or-
724 naments, designed to reward deeds of high valor on the battlefield itself. This "train" (if we may use the expression) was under the command of stewards, who accompanied the force for that purpose.[145] The Mexicans having no domestic animals besides small [231] dogs and fowls, it necessarily followed that their supplies and stores taken along by carriers were limited, and that consequently their expeditions could never be of long duration, partaking more of the character of forays or "raids" than of regular campaigns. As long as they moved among friendly tribes they expected these to furnish victuals; further on they relied upon what the enemy's country might possibly afford.

726 But the Mexicans, since their position in the middle of the la-
648 gune had been secured, and after they had once gained a foothold on its shores by overpowering successively some of the tribes scattered along the mainland, not any longer ventured out alone on their marauding expeditions. They required of those whom they conquered to join them in arms at their bidding.[146] What the exact relations were, which existed between the Mexicans and the other tribes of the valley, especially those of Tezcuco and Tlaco-

Slaves were not nu-

[567] merous among the Mexicans, if there were any at all beyond the prisoners of war. The latter they could not use for such a purpose. Some of the young people often accompanied the warriors, carrying their weapons and supplies, that they might see and learn (Tezozomoc. Cap. LXXI, p. 121). But the numbers of these carriers (100,000) are greatly exaggerated. Among the various objects mentioned by Tezozomoc as carried along by the Mexicans in their campaigns, there are "tents, low huts, reeds for the xacales." "Tent," in Mexican, signifies "Quachcalli," from "Quachtli," mantle, and "calli," house. Huts, "xacalli," of straw, or bowers, they certainly used, and the step is not very great, from the hut to the tent covered with what we call among northern Indians a "blanket." Durán mentions both tents and huts, "tiendas y xacales," frequently (Cap. XXI, pp. 183 and 186; cap. XXII, p. 190, etc.). The cooking utensils, like pans and kettles, had to go along, of course. Mats, "petlatl," for couches, and probably, also, for the covering of huts, were equally requisite and even indispensable. Lastly, mantles of "nequen" (Sisal hemp, "Jennequin"). This was the most ordinary [291] material composing the dress of Mexicans. The "huepil" of the ordinary Mexican was made out of "nequen." These mantles were used for protection against the sun; they were light and therefore convenient to wear and to have carried (See Tezozomoc, Cap. XXXII, pp. 49 and 50).

[145] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 50): "Y los mayordomos personalmente fuéron á "esta jornada" (against Orizava).

[146] Those tribes which had been made subjects to Mexico were compelled, whenever called upon, to join the armed forces of the Mexicans. Tezozomoc seldom speaks of any foray without mentioning that the subjected tribes took part in it, on the summons of the Mexicans to that effect. See Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 133); Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXI, p. 49; cap. XLVII, p. 77; cap. LI, p. 83). There is hardly any direct testimony, but the fact is abundantly proven that the Mexicans could call out, and did call out, to their assistance, any tribe which they had previously conquered. See Durán (Cap. XI. p. 313); and Zurita "Rapport, etc." p. 11.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

pan, we shall not attempt to discuss here, reserving it for a future opportunity;[147] it is sufficient to establish that all those tribes, whether regarded by history, as it now appears, as confederated or allied to the Mexicans, or as their subjects, were at any rate under the military supremacy of Mexico.[148] Whenever, therefore, from any cause whatever, the Mexican chief-council agreed upon war, delegates were sent to all tribes connected with Mexico,[149] calling upon them to send their forces, with supplies and ammunition, to a certain place where the Mexicans would meet them, and whence all together would proceed, under Mexican command, on the foray determined upon by the tribe of the lake-centre.[150]

Such notifications were never disregarded by the valley-pueblos,[151] still less by those of different stock-languages outside of the valley, and held by the Mexicans as tributary subjects.[152] The force, [147] It is not to our purpose to determine here whether a league or confederacy existed between Mexico, Tezcuco, and Tlacopan, or whether the latter two tribes were subjects of the former. There is a great deal of contradiction among the authors on the subject, and we intend, if possible, to make it the subject of a future discussion.

[148] Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 133): "Con Mexico estaban confederados "los Señores de Tezcuco, i Tlacopan, que hora llaman Tacuba, i partian lo que gana-"ban, i obedecian al Señor de Mexico, en lo tocante à la guerra." This is also confirmed by the fact that, when Cortés moved towards Mexico from the coast, he was everywhere told of the great power of the Mexicans only, without any reference to the others. On a joint expedition or foray, the Mexican chief commanded the others, even if he was inferior in rank to the "Tlacatecuhtli." (Zurita, p. 11).

[149] This fact is so numerously mentioned by Tezozomoc, that we forbear encumbering with detailed quotations. Almost every other chapter of the Cronica Mexicana, after the 20th about, has a reference to it. Also Durán.

[150] When the Mexicans sallied forth on their unlucky expedition against Mechoacan, in 1479, all the tribes were directed to meet at "Matlatzinco-Toluca" (Tezozomoc, cap. LI, p. 83). Durán (Cap. XXXVII, p. 288). Axayacatl: "mandó partiese el exercito de "la ciudad y que en sus capitanias fuesen à los términos de los Matlatzincas, y que alli "se hiciese junta de la gente entre estos terminos de Matlatzinco y Tlaximaloyan." On the foray against "Xiquipilco y Xilotepec,"—Chilocan was appointed meeting-place,—"commenced to move the Mexicans, all the others having set out already two or three "days before, for the same place of Chilocan" (Tezozomoc, cap. LXI, p. 102). Durán, speaking of the foray against Meztitlan (Cap. XL, p. 313): "El rey, que mientras le tu-"raua la uncion y estar velando salvo sus insinias y en ayuno y penitencia, que toda la "gente que estuviese aperceuida y aparejada se recogiesse en Atotonilco, y que alli "aguardasen todos al demas exercito y en Itzmiquilpan."

[151] There is not a single instance on record that, up to the time the Spaniards arrived, any pueblo had ever ventured to refuse such assistance to the Mexicans. Only when Cortés moved upon Mexico for the second time, did such acts of open rebellion occur.

[152] Some difference existed between the relations of the Mexicans with kindred tribes speaking the same ("Nahuatl") language, and with those of other stock. Thus, the "Totonaca" of the coast were held in great subjection, while the Chalca of the valley were treated almost like allies. It is not impossible that the so-called empire of Mexico (or of Anahuac, as it is very erroneously called) may yet prove to have been but a confederacy of the Nahuatlac-tribes of the valley, with the Mexicans as military leaders.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 therefore, that sallied out of Mexico was sure to find at the meet-
648 ing-place appointed, numerous reinforcements from various tribes, fully armed and equipped, with an organization similar to their own,[153] ready for the onward march, at the end of which, if successful, a certain share of human victims and of plunder would reward their efforts.[154]

As soon as the entire force was duly collected at the appointed meeting-place, it began to move forward speedily and swiftly, and in a straight line, if possible, towards the enemy's country. The various tribes, as well as their respective subdivisions, kept distinct from each other, led by their own native chiefs. The Mexicans were mostly in the rear. The approach of this body of warriors was not always pleasant to tributary or friendly settlements situated along the marchroute. These were expected to come out with reinforcements, with food and presents, and if any one of them failed or neglected to comply with these requisitions, it became exposed to the most barbarous violence. Such pueblos were sacked, plundered, the people ill-treated. In their fury the Mexicans sometimes went so far as to empty and destroy the stores of maize, and to kill wantonly the few domestic animals (dogs and fowls) of the unfortunate inhabitants.[155]

[724] The tribute which the valley pueblos paid to Mexico may yet, perhaps, prove to have been more a religious offering than anything else. They were certainly more on terms of equality, whereas the foreign tribes were held in subjection proper. The word "popoluca," stammerers, applied by the Mexicans to those of the coast, and which has induced Clavigero to adopt the erroneous idea of a "Popoluca" language, shows the disdain and hatred nourished by tribes of different stock towards each other.

[153] Each tribe had to prepare its own arms and supplies, it remained under its own chiefs and captains. Tezozomoc and Durán both agree on this point. Their organization was essentially the same as that of the Mexicans. Everywhere in the valley, and even in Matlaltzinco, we find the characteristic division of the Mexicans,—the two head-war-chiefs, the four quarters, and the minor captains and braves.

[154] Ixtlixochitl ("Histoire des Chichimeques," Cap. XXXVIII, p. 273) says that Mexico and Tezcuco had each two-fifths, Tlacopan one-fifth, of the spoils. Tezozomoc claims three-fourths for Mexico alone. The point is yet in doubt. (Zurita, "Rapport, etc.," p. 12.)

[724] [155] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 50): "The Mexicans never lacked food nor supplies," when on the march, since they "were so much feared by all the tribes, that as soon as "they arrived they were well received and treated. When their forces were on the "war-path neither man nor woman remained outside of their dwellings, out of fear of "the warriors, and if these perchance met any one, any laborer or trader, they robbed "him even up to his very clothes. Such tribes as did not go out to meet them they plun-"dered and robbed of everything, emptying their stores of maize, killing their fowls "and even their dogs." (Id. Cap. LXXXIV, p. 147.) Durán (Cap. XXI, p. 183): "porque "para el camino los pueblos y ciudades proveian de todo lo necessario, como tengo "dicho, so pena de ser destruidos." It thus appears that for the march the Mexicans did not have to provide any food, since the settlements along the route had to maintain

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

The objective point of this march was, as we have already 726 stated, the enemy's territory. There was no strict boundary-line [131] dividing the tribes of Mexico from each other; a belt of uninhabited or deserted land merely surrounded and thus isolated every tribe.[156] This neutral strip was the ground on which the enemy expected the Mexicans (provided they knew of their coming, and felt strong enough to meet them in the open field).[157] It was, therefore, commonly called "ground of war or battle" ("Yaotlalli"),[158] and as soon as the Mexican force approached this region, its movements grew less swift and proportionately more cautious. At dusk they halted on this dangerous area, selecting for their encampment, if possible, an elevated, open position, unfavorable for surprise. The huts (and perhaps tents) and bowers, for which some materials had been taken along, were hurriedly them, Duran positively saying, on the same page, after a lengthy enumeration of the [724] supplies and provisions prepared for the journey: "lo qual, luego fué en seguimiento "de la gente; lo qual no se proueia sino para el lugar donde se avia de asentar el real, "porque para el camino los pueblos y ciudades proueian de todo lo necessario, etc., "etc., etc." The same author continues (p. 184): "Hacianse seruir como dioses, y en "todos los caminos no parecia gente por donde iban los soldados y la gente de guerra, "todos se encerraban que no osauan andar por los caminos, porque los soldados les "quitaban quanto llevaban en sus cargas, y si acaso le queria defender, los apaleauan "y herian, y algunos mataban y iban robando las sementeras y matando quantas galli-"nas y perillos topaban; iban haciendo quanto mal podian, como lo hacen agora "nuestros españoles, si no los van a' la mano. . . . . y asi en sabiendo que auia "guerra, todos los vecinos de los pueblos, por donde auian de pasar los del exercito, se "escondian y escondian el maiz, el chile, las gallinas y los perros, finalmente escondian "quanto tenian." This shows a very simple mode of subsistance,—they lived upon the country through which they passed. But it also shows the barbarous condition of the Nahuatl tribes. Even on their march through a friendly country from whose annual tribute they partly subsisted, they behaved little better than a large horde of savages, or at least of cut-throats and highway robbers. The "civilized" troops of Europe were little better at that time, and even up to the close of the 17th century.

[156] Gomara ("De las guerras," Vedia, I, p. 442): "They call quiahtlali the space and "area which they left depopulated between the boundaries of each province for to fight "there, and it is like unto sacred." See Tezozomoc (Cap. LXVIII, p. 113; cap. LXXXVI, p. 151; cap. XCV, p. 167, etc., etc.). The delegates sent by Tlaxcallan, Huexotzinco, and Cholula, to assist at the festivals in Mexico, were always met "half way in the woods" ("la mitad del monte") separating the tribes. Ixtlilxochitl ("Histoire des Chichimèques," Cap. XXXIII, p. 125) mentions a boundary line between the territories of Mexico and Tezcuco, but the description of it is such that the statement remains more than doubtful.

[157] Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. III, p. 538: "Quando se admitia la Batalla, y venian "los unos, contra los otros, salian los de la Provincia, o' Pueblo a' un lugar particular, "que tenian entre sus terminos los quales llamaban Yauhtlalli, que quiere decir; Ter-"mino o' Lugar de la Guerra. Aqui salian los Proprietarios de la Tierra a' recibir a los "contrarios." Also, Gomara (Vedia, I, p. 442).

[158] From "yaotl," enemy, or "yaoyotl," battle or war, and "tlalli," ground or soil.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 erected, each tribe camping distinct from the other, the Mexicans occupying the centre of the entire camp.[159]

It was customary with the Mexicans to send out spies who, under different disguises, penetrated the hostile country ere the force had reached its neighborhood.[160] Besides, as soon as the latter halted on the "war-ground," numerous braves ventured out in advance, as scouts, stealthily creeping through the woods, as near the enemy as possible, to ascertain its position and numbers, as well as armament. The information gathered from these sources was reported during the night to the Mexican chieftain in command, who sat in council of war with the other principal leaders. This meeting, guided partly by the information thus obtained, devised the plan of attack for the coming day. The tactics of the [725] Mexicans were extremely simple: a decoy, in the shape of a precipitate retreat, and an ambush at the termination of it, seem to have been their highest conception. Therefore, during the night, they often dug pits far in advance of the encampment, wherein, at the close of the council, the most daring braves (and even the Mexican commander himself, occasionally) concealed themselves, their bodies covered with straw, branches, or foliage.[161] Meanwhile the warriors were overhauling their arms, painting them-

[159] Duran (Cap. XIX, p. 168): "Asi se partio' el exercito de Tulancingo y caminó "hasta llegar á vista de los enemigos, donde empeçaron a' hacer tiendas y xacales, "cada provincia y nacion para si." (Idem, Cap. XXI, pp. 183 and 184; cap. XXII, p. 190; cap. XXXVII, p. 288: "donde a' tercer dia se juntaron todos los soldados y gente de "guerra con toda la priesa posible y mandaron asentar el real, el qual asentaron con "muchas tiendas y casas de esteras, quellos usauan en sus guerras y oy en dia las usan "en los mercados, que son unos tendejones de juncos que echan las espadañas.") Tezozomoc (Cap. LI, p. 83; cap. LXXVIII, p. 135). This author contains so many details on this subject that we forbear quoting him further with reference to chapter and page. He distinctly says that each tribe camped by itself, the Mexicans in the middle.

[160] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 130): "enviaban delante sus espias muy disim-"uladas y pláticas en las lenguas de la provincia a' do iban a' dar guerra." Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. II, p. 538) copies almost textually.

[725] [161] Tezozomoc mentions this very frequently. (Cap. XLVIII, he relates how the chief Axayaca hid himself in such a pit, in the foray against the Matlaltzinca. This is confirmed by Durán, Cap. XXXV, p. 277: "Y quedandóse en celada el rey, metidos en-"tre las ramas y otros debaxo de la tierra escondidos todos los soldados viejos y princi-"pales valerosos.") He also mentions (Cap. XIX, pp. 169 and 170) a very extensive ambush of that kind against the Huaxtecas. Mendieta says (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 131): "They used ambushes, and often very artificial ones, since they laid down on the "ground, covering themselves with straw or herbs, etc., etc." Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. III, p. 539) agrees almost literally with the above. Also Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXV): "They used ambushes frequently, and concealed themselves in bushy places, "or even in pits made for that purpose, as the Spaniards often experienced it. Fre-"quently they took to flight in order to draw the enemy into dangerous positions, or to "assail his rear with fresh troops." We shall revert to this point hereafter.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

selves afresh, and the captains attended to their respective detach- 726
ments, exhorting the men to courage and endurance. Each tribe agreed upon its particular war-cry, to be used in action only. Finally, the whole encampment sometimes joined in an awful yell: the defiant war-whoop of thousands of Indians, and intended to mark, not their presence (which they supposed to be known), but their numbers and ferocity. This shout not unfrequently called forth a response from the enemy lurking in front of them.[162] Then the stillness of the night, of the gloomy and treacherous night preceding an Indian engagement, settled at last upon the "land of war."

This quietness did not last very long. Even if neither of the opposing parties attempted to surprise the other under cover of darkness, both were certainly alert before daybreak.[163] The Mexican force, preceded by a cloud of scattered braves as skirmishers or scouts, advanced cautiously, not in one solid body, but by tribes and subdivisions of tribes, as upon the march. Very soon their extreme outposts encountered those of the enemy, the war-whoop was raised on both sides, and a series of personal combats engaged along the whole line. Pebbles, carried along for that purpose, were hurled by means of the sling; stones picked up from the field were thrown at each other, accompanied by hideous yells and defiant epithets. Then followed darts and arrows, both parties dancing about to avoid the missiles. Meanwhile accessions from the main bodies moved up, the fight came to closer quarters, the sword and club being resorted to. If the enemy was sufficiently strong so as not to give way at once, the Mexicans feigned to retreat, rushing back towards the place where an ambush had been prepared. The pursuing foe, once caught in the trap, was roughly handled, their adversaries pressing upon them from all sides, and his efforts to disentangle himself were always accompanied with the heaviest loss, either in prisoners or in killed. At other points of the line similar snares were extended to the Mexicans by their opponents. Thus the fight progressed like an extensive skirmish, each party bent upon weakening the other by partial losses through rude stratagems, until the enemy, reduced in numbers and dis-

[162] The war-whoop ("alarido," or "la grita," as the Spanish authors call it) is distinct from the war-cry, the latter serving to identify the warriors of the same tribe or "quarter." The former is "tzatziliztli," the latter, "yaotzatziliztli."

[163] The usual time for such attacks was daybreak or dawn (Tezozomoc, Caps. LXXXIV, p. 148, and LXXXVIII, p. 185: "al amanecer del alva").

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 heartened by the death or capture of many principal warriors, gave way in an unmistakable manner.[164] Then a precipitate

[164] Besides Tezozomoc, who is so full of details on these fights that it is wasting space to quote him extensively, we find the most concise and reliable statements in Mendieta's "Historia Ecclesiastica Indiana." The descriptions of Mendieta agree perfectly with those of Tezozomoc (less with those of Duran), while the two authors had nothing in common, besides, Mendieta, the revered Franciscan father, terminating his work about 1596, and Tezozomoc, the simple Indian, his MSS. in 1598. Neither of these works were printed previous to this century. Mendieta says (Lib. II, cap. XXVI): "At "the outset they sped stones by slings, and rods like darts. . . . . They also threw "stones by hand. Thereafter they resorted to sword and shield, and the archers went "in at the same time well protected thereby, and thus they spent their ammunition. "The archers from Tehuacan sometimes were so dexterous that they sped two or three "arrows at once with the same precision as one bowman would shoot one alone. Af-"ter the vanguard had spent a good deal of their munition they charged with sword "and dart, the sword being of wood, long, and lined with cutting pieces of flint. It "was tied to the wrist, in order that dropping it they might seize an enemy (as "their main object was to capture men alive) without losing the weapon. They had no "style of fencing, neither did they charge directly, but skirmished and rushed back "and forth. At first one party would turn to flee, as it seemed, the others pursuing, "killing and wounding and capturing all those lagging in the rear. Then the party "fleeing would suddenly turn back upon the pursuers, which fled in turn. Thus they "proceeded as in a tournament ('juego de cañas'), until they were tired, when fresh "bodies moved up to take up the fight. They had well disposed and agile people to "care for the wounded, bringing them to the rear where their surgeons were with the "medicines, healing and nursing them." See also, Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXV), and the Anonymous Conqueror (Col. de Doc., Vol. I, p. 374): "during the fight they shout "and sing, uttering sometimes the most horrid shrieks." (Mr. Prescott speaks of hospitals which "were established in the principal cities." This is doubtful, at least.) The most detailed account of such an engagement is found in Tezozomoc (Cap. LII, p. 84), confirmed in the main by Durán (Cap. XXXVII, pp. 289 and 290), where he describes the disastrous fight of the Mexicans (1479) against the Tarasca of Michhuacan. It appears from the description of the former that during this bloody conflict, lasting a whole day, the different tribes moved up in succession and distinct from each other. There is but one instance of a higher tactical move, and this is found in Tezozomoc also (Cap. XCVIII, p. 93). When the Mexicans sallied against Tlaxcallan: "the gen-"eral Cuauhnochtli commanded that the Chalca should go by one road or path, those "of Aculhuacan by another, the Tecpaneca by another, and the Mexicans in the centre "where the Tlaxcallans were expected to be; all the other tribes extended in order to "take the Tlaxcalteca in the middle" (surround them). Notwithstanding the glowing descriptions of Clavigero, Torquemada, and Ixtlilxochitl, those engagements turn out to be ordinary Indian skirmishes on a large scale, in proportion to numbers, of course, but still after the same principle. These same authors even indicate, involuntarily, that there were less actions of masses, than individual exploits. For instance, Torquemada relates (Lib. II, cap. LXI, p. 183) that the principal chief, dressing himself in the garb of a common warrior, challenged the prominent chieftain of the enemy to single combat and overcame him, which deed decided the fortunes of the day. Ixtlilxochitl ("Hist. des Chichimèques," Cap. XLV) even tells us how a single Tezcucan brave alone fell upon the enemy while his own army was yet at breakfast, and put them all to flight. If such stories are true, they militate strongly against the impression which these same authors would convey to us, of formidable hosts, well organized, opposing each other. A commander, responsible for the fate of tens of thousands committed to his guidance, could not expose his own person in such a manner. Either these stories, or the representation of the numbers engaged, and their tactics, are untrue.

[759] "Surgeons" are mentioned both by Mendieta and Torquemada. The Mexican name of surgeon is "texoxotla ticitl" (Molina, I, p. 35). "Texoxqui" means a sorcerer, and retreat began on one side, and an equally rapid pursuit on the other.[165] The objective point of this retreat was the settlement or "pueblo" of the attacked tribe, but if the vanquished succeeded in placing between them and their pursuers some natural obstacle, like a river, or deep ravine, or if they took refuge upon a wooded range of steep hills, then the victors were arrested, as they seldom ventured to attack when this attack necessitated a strong simultaneous effort on the part of the whole force.[166] Still less could they execute rapid flank-movements. In course of time they might circumvent certain obstacles, but then their supplies were so limited that, if there was no positive indication of success, either in storming the position without great danger, or in carrying it within a very short time by some rude feint, they preferred to desist from further endeavors, and to return home with whatever spoils the battlefield alone had furnished. Thus they "collared"[167] their captives (which had been carefully watched behind the battle-front) and returned to Mexico in moderate triumph, leaving it to future times to proclaim: that such and such a tribe had been subdued by them, whereas they had only defeated it in one engagement, and the tribe had still preserved afterwards its complete independence.[168]

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

"ticitl" a physician or diviner. Both agree very well with the conception of an Indian "medicine-man." There are, besides, evidences that priests went to war also, and I would suggest that it may have been a part of their duties to care for the wounded. A certain class of priests were called "tlamacazqui," certainly derived from "tlama," physician or doctor.

[165] A slow and orderly retreat is a movement hardly known to Indians. They rush either way, advancing or retiring. Even the return of the Mexicans from the unsuccessful onslaught on the Tarasca (Tezozomoc, Cap. LII. p. 84) was as near to a disorderly flight as possible. Durán says (Cap. XXXVII, p. 291): "El rey Axayacatl mandó, "alçar su real, y asi como huyendo y medio afrentado, con la poca gente que le auia "quedada, todo desbaratado y lo mas de la gente herida."

[166] Mendieta (Lib. II, p. 131): "Those who gained the battle continued the pursuit "until the opponents reached some place where they could fortify themselves." Also, Tezozomoc (Cap. XXII, p. 34, and cap. LVII, p. 94).

[167] If, on the battlefield, a captive still resisted, they cut the tendons of his feet, thus rendering him incapable of motion. After the action the prisoners were secured by wooden collars ("cuauh-cozcatl") and thus they were led home in the van of the returning force. Arrived at Mexico they were conducted first to the chief-teocalli, and after prostrating themselves before the idol of Huitzilopochtli, were marched around the great stone of sacrifice. (Compare the relation of Adair, "History of the American Indians," Argument XVI, pp. 165 and 167.—Return of a Chikkasah war party from a foray into Illinois, in 1765.)

[168] Such was the case with Mextitlan (Cap. LVII, p. 94, of Tezozomoc, and Durán, Cap. XL, p. 314). Tizoczic made about 40 prisoners, and returned with the loss of 300 men ("Y que con aquello auian los contrarios recogidose a' sus lugares"). Still it is mentioned by Ixtlilxochitl as subject and tributary to the valley tribes.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 If the vanquished tribe found no such point of refuge, then the pursuit continued without relenting until the town or settlement itself was reached. Frequently both pursuers and pursued entered it almost at the same time. The torch was applied to the temple first, and an indiscriminate slaughter of non-combatants began.[169]

728 Nothing short of speedy submission to tribute could arrest this butchery. The vanquished, therefore, if not prepared to flee from their homes forever,[170] made signals of peace. A parley ensued, and to it succeeded a surrender on the part of the defeated tribe. Generally one year of tribute was paid in advance, and thus the Mexicans might return homewards loaded, both with the spoils acquired on the battlefield and with the first guarantee of future contributions from the vanquished tribe.[171]

726 It sometimes occurred, however, that the tribe attacked had provided its settlement with artificial defenses, and the Mexicans, victorious in the open field, found themselves in presence of the simple fortifications, which we shall hereafter describe, like palisades or even platforms of earth or stone surmounted by parapets. An attack upon these was only attempted if there appeared no doubt as to the result, in consequence of the superiority of the Mexicans, or of the great losses sustained by their defenders in the previous fights.[172] Then, but only then, ladders were con-

[346]

[169] The "teo-calli" or temple being in the centre of the settlement, and also its highest, and therefore, according to Indian notions, its strongest edifice, the destruction thereof by fire was the signal of decisive victory of the assailants. See Tezozomoc (Cap. XIX, pp. 30 and 31). Durán (Cap. XV, p. 129).

[170] In cases where the pueblo of the enemy had been completely deserted, either through flight of its inhabitants, or through their extermination, as was the case with Alahuitzlan, these sections were repeopled by colonies from Nahuatl stock. Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXIV, pp. 125 and 126) and Durán (Cap. XLV, p. 364, etc.) both relate in detail how it occurred. This may account in some degree for the presence of Nahuatlac stock at a distance from the valley, and may yet throw some light even upon the singular colonization of the Peruvian "Mitimaes."

[171] This suing for peace, where the tribe was of foreign stock-language, took place, sometimes through interpreters, "nahuatlats," sometimes merely by signs. The defeated generally fled to the top of a hill and from there beckoned to the pursuing Mexicans to stop the carnage, with humble and pitiful gestures. But the first parley did not always result in peace. The massacre of women and children recommenced often twice, ere the tribute offered by the vanquished satisfied the Mexicans. This tribute was exacted in proportion to the resistance offered and to the resources of the tribe. After peace was agreed upon the Mexicans still feasted from the food of those whom they had ruthlessly conquered. The prisoners, once taken, were never released nor exchanged. They had to carry the spoils and tribute to Mexico, but were generally well fed and cared for until the day when they were slaughtered to the idols.

[172] A good illustration is found in Tezozomoc (Caps. XC and XCI), describing the foray against Tututepec and Quetzaltepec. But Durán is still more explicit on the same events. According to him (Cap. LVI, p. 547), after the unfortified pueblo of Tu-

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Then, but only then, ladders were constructed,[173] and with due precaution and under cover of various [417] 726 feints, the walls were scaled.[174] A regular siege was out of the question, the Mexicans not being provided for a protracted stay outside of their territory. They might lie in wait or hover around the enemy's defenses for a short time, bent upon attempting a surprise of some kind, but if the place could not be carried at a rush in some way the assailants finally had to abandon the attack and return home.[175]

We have heretofore presupposed that the tribe assailed by the Mexicans had been formally challenged, or at least notified of their coming. But this was not always the case. In many instances the Mexicans made their attack without previous warning, and a nocturnal surprise was attempted which was almost sure to succeed.

It is next to superfluous to venture a description of such a nightly onslaught. The scene, like that of the surprise of any settlement whatever by Indians during the hours of darkness, may be faintly imagined, but not adequately told. The main sallies and entries were occupied by the assailants,—creeping up stealthily,—the chief "teo-calli" surrounded, then the war-whoop was raised, and the miserable inhabitants of the pueblo realized at once that they were doomed. Few survivors only remained on such occa- 726
sions, and even these, unless the tribe surrendered at the first on- 727

tutepec had been sacked, the Mexicans moved upon Quetzaltepec, which was well fortified, and whose people sallied forth to meet the Mexicans in the open field three days in succession, until the third day at last they were signally defeated, and the defenses scaled in a rush.

[173] Tezozomoc (Caps. XC and XCI). Durán (Cap. LVI, p. 448). The former describes these ladders ("escalas") minutely, giving their size and the number used.

[174] Tezozomoc speaks of archers posted outside, protecting by a shower of missiles the ascent of the scaling party or parties, while other bodies were burrowing through the wall. Durán gives a more plausible statement (p. 448): "Otro dia salió al campo la "gente tepaneca con toda su provincia, que era gran numero de gente, la qual se uvo "tan valerosamente, que no los pudiendo resistir los de la ciudad, se empeçaron a' re- "traer hacia el muro. Montecuma, viendo que los tepanecas peleaban tan valerosamente "y que hacian retirar al enemigo, mandó tocar al arma, y en un punto salió el Mexicano "al campo y por otra parte el tezcucano, y arremetiendo todos de trapel, apellidando "los unos Mexico, Mexico, los otros Tezcuco, Tezcuco, acudieron cada uno por su "parte rompiendo por el exercito de los enemigos; y aunque de las murallas recibian "gran daño de las piedras grandes y troços de palos que arrojaban, llegaron a' ella y "arrimando escalas, y otros, como gatos, subieron por ella, y otros cabando por el "cimiento ganaron la primera cerca." This shows that indeed it was carried at a rush.

[175] For this reason the wars with the neighboring tribes of Tlaxcallan, Huexotzinco, and Cholullan, took the shape of regular fights at stated times. A long campaign was out of all question. We may, in the course of this essay, investigate shortly the question of the wars between Mexico and Tlaxcallan, although it is not properly pertaining to the object of the present discussion.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 727 set, were all carried into captivity except such as could escape into the wilderness lying beyond their cultivated areas of soil.[176]

726 The Mexicans, however, were not exclusively successful on their 175 numerous forays and expeditions. More than once they met with severe defeats, and on one occasion even, in their attack upon Michhuacan, in 1479, they were so terribly beaten that they never afterwards renewed the attempt.[177]

726 Besides, in their constant wars against the rival confederacy, also of "Nahuatl" stock, at whose head was the tribe of Tlaxcallan or Tlascala, the fortunes of the day often turned against the Mexican invaders, or at least assailants.[178] In the first instance, that of the defeat in Michhuacan, the Mexicans actually fled from the battlefield in consternation, pursued by the victorious enemy across the "war-ground," but no further.[179] The engagements with the tribes of Tlaxcallan, Huexotzinco, or Cholula, were fought so near the valley that even if the Mexicans had been worsted during the day, they could retire quietly and mostly unmolested the next morning.[180] The manner in which such retreats were carried on is hardly known.

[176] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXXIV, p. 148) describes as follows the attack upon Nopallan and Yepatepec: "Arriving at midnight, they moved so secretly that they reached the "royal house, counted the entrances and sallies, ascended to the top of the temple," etc., etc. Then the scouts returned to the main temple, reporting upon what they had found, and when the morning star arose they fell upon the settlement, "each body "moving like a strong wall and with the swiftness of lightning, ... and they "began to slaughter so furiously that neither old people, nor women, nor children "were spared, and they set fire to the houses, also to the temple, so that the place "looked like a volcano." (Compare the reports upon the burning of Schenectady by the French and Indians, in 1689,—contained in vol. I, of "Documentary History of the "State of New York," pp. 297-312.)

[177] Tezozomoc (Cap. LII). Durán (Cap. XXXVII). The date is fixed by Señor Alfredo Chavero, of Mexico, in his valuable essay entitled "Calendario Azteca" (p. 4).

[648] [178] This confederacy consisted of Tlaxcallan and Huexotzinco,—perhaps also Atlixco. Cholula may, to a certain extent, have been included in it, but it was certainly not any longer the case when Cortés arrived. On the contrary, Cholula was then on friendly terms with Mexico. Cortés says ("Carta Segunda," Vedia I, p. 19): "por-"que los naturales della eran amigos de Mutecçuma;" and, further on (p. 21), "y fice "que los desta ciudad de Churultecal, y los de Tascaltecal fuesen amigos, porque lo "solian ser antes, y muy poco tiempo habia que Mutecçuma con dadivas los habia "aducido a' su amistad, y hechos enemigos de estotros."

[179] The pursuit lasted until they reached Tlaximaloyan (Tagimaroa), at the confines of Toluca. Tezozomoc (Cap. LII, p. 85): "Llego' el campo Tarasco hasta Tagi-"maroa, que dizen Tlazimoyalan: los otros que habian llegado hasta los terminos de "Toluca se volvieron, viendo que su campo ño llegava: al iva adelante." The pursuit of the Michhuacanese consisted in harassing the Mexicans with arthers, but no close combats are mentioned.

[648] [721] [180] The wars of the Mexicans against Tlaxcallan and its associates were a struggle for definitive supremacy, and not, as many authors have it, pre-arranged regular bat-

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Until now we have considered the Mexicans only when in con- 726 flict with tribes of their own country and race, inferior or equal to them in degree of culture, and proportionately in military resources. But we must necessarily cast a glance upon their wars against their subsequent conquerors, the Spaniards, and investigate how far our pictures of the organization and the military tactics of the Mexican tribe are confirmed by the events of the conquest. Ere, however, we enter upon this discussion, which 712 shall also furnish us with an illustration of defensive Indian warfare in Mexico, it is urgent that we should become acquainted with the nature of fortifications erected and used by the aborigines.

While there exists distinct evidence that walls of stone were erected occasionally for the defense of certain positions not directly connected with, or in the immediate vicinity of, settlements, such instances are very rare. Such is the famous wall by which the Tlaxcallans closed the valley of their eastern confines.[161] In general, the conception of the tribes of Mexico in fortifying any particular place, amounted to raising it above the surrounding level, and crowning this raised area with a parapet of stone or wood. It is not quite clear whether the elevation extended always to the ties, for the purpose of mutually obtaining victims for religious offerings, and for the [648 exercise of the young men in the art of war. The fact that these battles took place at fixed days and at certain places appointed, is no proof of the latter, but it simply re- 721] sulted from the custom of challenging an enemy, and meeting him therefore at a specified time and on the "war-ground." (Compare Durán, Cap. LIX, p. 465). The respective forces being quite evenly matched, these actions were renewed from time to time, each party hoping to tire out the other, until to be able to strike a decisive blow; but neither succeeded so far, so that in fact the battles remained practically undecided. Against Tlaxcallan the Mexicans made one great attempt, when the confederacy of the former with those of Huexotzinco was broken up for a short time, and the latter applied to Mexico for assistance against the Tlaxcallans, who had invaded the soil of Huexotzinco. There is as yet a great deal of contradiction and obscurity in regard to those inter-tribal wars, and the pompous descriptions thereof by many authors are scarcely trustworthy. One point appears positive, that however often the Mexicans may have been the worst sufferers in these fights, neither the Tlaxcallans nor their allies were ever able to threaten Mexico seriously. In course of time there is hardly any doubt but that the Mexicans would have tired out and conquered their adversaries, as they had previously tired out and finally subjugated the tribe of Chalco, in the valley. For a truly natural description of these engagements, I refer the reader to the pages of Durán, and especially of Tezcomoc.

[161] See Cortés ("Carta Segunda," Vedia I, p. 15): "E a' la Salida del dicho valle fallé "una gran cerca de piedra seca, tan alta como estado y medio, que atravesaba todo el "valle de la una sierra a' la otra, y tan ancha como veinte piés, y por toda ella un petril "de pié y medio de ancho, para pelear desde encima, y no mas de una entrada tan an- "cha como diez pasos, y en esta entrada doblada la una cerca sobre la otra a' manera "de rebelin, tan estrecho como cuarenta pasos . . ." Also, Bernal-Diez (Cap. LXII). Gomara (p. [illegible]. "El primer rencuentro que Cortés tobo con los de Tlaxcalan"). Torquemada (Lib. IV, cap. XXIX). Herrera (Dec. II, lib. VI, cap. IV).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

361 An attack by water could easily be repelled from the housetops, 312 and with the aid of the numerous canoes.[200] An Indian host, ad-
712 vancing upon the causeways, found serious impediments in the cuts converted into trenches by removal of the bridges. Against a sudden onslaught, a surprise, Indian fashion, Mexico was therefore amply secure,[201] nothing short of a siege might overcome its defenses. But no Indian force alone could attempt and carry out such an undertaking; it required the resources which the Spaniards, as European soldiery, possessed.

726 The effect of the first contact of the whites with the Indians of Mexico was to astonish, nay, to stupefy, the latter. They felt, rather than realized, that the few people who ventured so unconcernedly in appearance, among largely superior numbers, should possess superior resources to counterbalance their numerical inferiority. But the true nature of these resources was unconceivable to them, and they had no time to improve as the emergency would have required. Thus their warfare against the Spaniards became limited to all they might achieve according to their actual state of culture, and if they succumbed in the struggle, we need not be surprised. Besides the vast inferiority in armament, there existed a proportionate one in military tactics. In the words of the most celebrated author on the History of the Conquest: "They knew not how to concentrate numbers on a given point, "or even how to sustain an assault, by employing successive "detachments to support and relieve each other. A very small "portion only of their array could be brought into contact with "an enemy inferior to them in amount of forces."[202] We may add that their tactical conceptions did not go beyond the rude snares invented by savage cunning, and in their first encounters with the Spaniards (when they yet relied upon numerical superiority) beyond a fierce and disorderly onslaught.

726 It may not be misplaced here to review some of the principal 175 engagements fought between the Mexican Indians and their Spanish conquerors. For this purpose we select the campaign of Cor-

[200] These canoes, "acalli," were constantly in motion within and around the pueblo. They kept up communication with the shores, and also served to carry the warriors, if necessary. We refrain from repeating here the many exaggerating reports about their numbers.

[201] Besides, constant watch was held by the priests on the summits of the temple pyramids. These were the real "guards" of the pueblo, in the daytime as well as at every hour of the night.

[202] Prescott ("History of the Conquest of Mexico," 1860. Vol. I, Book III, p. 445).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

tés against Tlaxcallan, and the celebrated fight near Otumpan, 726 both of which have been so beautifully described by Mr. Prescott. 175 Although in the engagements against the Tlaxcallans the Mexicans proper were not concerned, we know that both tribes were so nearly alike in military resources and faculties, that we can easily substitute the one for the other, taking the action of the one as illustrative of the action of the other in a similar emergency. At Otumpan Mexicans and allied tribes opposed the Spaniards. Both examples will more particularly relate to offensive warfare, being combats in the open field.

Purposely we have used the term of "campaign" as connected with Tlaxcallan, avoiding the conception of "battles," or "great "battles" even, so liberally employed by the majority of authors. It is erroneous to admit that regular battles were ever fought during the time Cortés advanced against the pueblo of Tlaxcallan. As far as we can rely upon the testimony of eye-witnesses, they merely prove that the Tlaxcallans allured, so to say, by the numerical inferiority of the Spanish invaders, pounced upon them with all the fury of a wild horde and, being saluted by a well nourished fire of murderous effect, they returned to their primitive warfare of decoys, ambushes, and surprises, hoping to tire out the Spaniards through this constant and desultory skirmishing. The tactics of Cortés, on this occasion, were simply to hold out in defensible positions; a task of no small difficulty if we consider that his men during many days could obtain no rest, and scarcely any food. But by persevering in this attitude he "turned the tables" upon the Indians of Tlaxcallan by finally tiring out, and wearing out, their power of aggression. Then he took the offensive, and by successful dashes, both revictualled his people and brought the enemy to favorable terms.[203]

[203] The descriptions furnished by various authors of the 16th century, of this campaign against Tlaxcallan are most contradictory. Ixtlilxochitl says in his 13th Relation ("De la venida de los Españoles") that from Cempoalan to Tlaxcallan "the natives "received them with the greatest joy, feasted them, and there were neither fights nor "quarrels, beyond those which the Spaniards themselves provoked; if there were any at all." In the "Histoire des Chichimèques," however, the same author speaks of an action of two days, in which he estimates the numbers of the Tlaxcallans at 150,000 men (Cap. LXXXVIII, p. 189).—Tezozomoc (Cap. CX, p. 190) relates that the Otomies of Tecoac met together and spoke: "are we perhaps the vassals of those that have come? "did they overcome us in just war? come on, Chichimecas, to arms against them!—and "so, as like mountaineers, they forthwith armed themselves, and as they came shouting "and hurling darts, the camp armed also, and gave them a discharge of small arms "and fieldpieces, so that after an hour nothing more was left to do, the entire field "being covered with dead bodies." This agrees almost verbally with Sahagun (Lib. XII, Cap. X, p. 422).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 175 Of all the actions fought during the conquest none has taken so much the character of a regular battle as that of the 8th of July, 1520, and commonly named the battle of Otumpan. It was, however, but a "running fight," lasting a whole day or nearly. The Spaniards, without fire-arms, almost famished, reduced in numbers, and mostly all wounded, were pursued as soon as they left the pue-

Cortés ("Carta Segunda" Vedia I, p. 16 and 17) gives a clearer description from which we glean the following facts: On entering the Tlaxcallan grounds, the van-guard of the Spaniards fell into an ambush, which they soon forced. "E desque sintiéron que "los nuestros se acercaban se retiraron, porque eran pocos, y nos dejaron el campo." He then moved on to a small stream, one league further, where he established his camp. The next day the Spaniards proceeded further, and were soon assaulted by a number of Indians. "Muy armados y con muy gran grita, y comenzaron a pelear con nosotros. "tirándonos muchas varas y flechas." This attack was a feint, and drew the whites into an ambuscade ("hasta nos meter entre mas de cien mil hombres de pelea, que por todas "partes nos tenian cercados, y peleamos con ellos, y ellos con nosotros, todo el dia, "hasta una hora antes de puesto el sol, que se retrajéron."); they continued advancing however all day, and at night occupied the defensive position which Cortés thereafter held until the Tlaxcallans submitted. "Aquella noche me fice fuerte en una torricella "de idolos que estaba en un cerito." On the following day Cortés made a successful razzia upon five or six small settlements, and on the next morning the Tlaxcallans in turn attempted to attack the Spanish camp. This attack was speedily repulsed, the Spaniards fortifying their position so, "que en obra de cuatro horas habiamos fecho "lugar para que en nuestro real no nos ofendiesen, puesto que todavia hacian algunos "arremetidas." In other words, the Tlaxcallans rushed up against the encampment, were beaten back, and then hovered around during the remainder of the day, skirmishing, and attempting to draw their foes into ambushes which they held prepared. From this time on the Indians never assaulted, but Cortés made occasional sallies and forays, revictualling his men, and burning the houses and crops of the natives, until the tribe made proposals of peace.

Andrès de Tapia, another eye witness, an officer of high rank. ("Relacion, Col: "de Doc, II, pp. 567 and 568") fully confirms the statement of Cortés. The first day's engagement he describes as follows: "And about eight in the morning there sallied "forth against us so many men of war, that it strikes me as if there had been one hun-"dred thousand, while some are of opinion that there were many more. Some of them "expected us in certain deep ravines of streams crossing our path, and, traversing "them with much difficulty, we went in against them.....The Marquis always went in "the lead with the horsemen, fighting, and returning from time to time to concert his "men, keeping them close together....Some Indians would close up with the horsemen "so as to seize their lances, and thus while fighting they proceeded that day to a house "of idols near which were two or three huts. There the Spaniards established them-"selves during eighteen days, and went out fighting as the Marquis commanded. . ."

. . . . .

According to the above two eye-witnesses, the "great battle" of the 2d Sept: 1519. (Prescott Vol. I, p. 427) appears on the part of the Indians, to have consisted of a wild rush or dash (perhaps a feint) speedily repulsed, an ambush, soon forced, and for the remainder of the day constant skirmishing and harassing of the Spanish march, until the latter reached a strong position. The "decisive victory" of the 5th Sept: 1819 (Prescott, Vol. I, pp. 437-447) was a fierce onslaught upon the Spanish camp at daybreak ("Otro "dia en amaneciendo dan sobre nuestro real mas de ciento y cuarenta y nueve mil "hombres," Cortés, p. 16) which met with a prompt repulse, and the remainder of the day was also filled with more or less heavy skirmishing on both sides. These are the two prominent days of fighting during the entire two weeks of hostilities against Tlaxcallan, and they certainly were not pitched battles, as commonly admitted. An atten-

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

blo of Zacamulco in the morning. Harrassed in flank and rear by the Mexicans who, not any longer checked by the volleys of musketry, dashed up to closer quarters, the Spaniards toiled on, fighting and marching, until, in the plains of Apan, they were completely surrounded on all sides. This was the final ambush prepared for them by the Mexicans. The engagement there must have been of the most desperate character, but it was of short duration, the Spaniards, with the courage of despair, cutting their way out. The Indians had so firmly relied upon annihilating their foes on that day that they desisted from future pursuit.[204]

726 175

The engagements near Otumpan were the last conflicts occurring after the terrible night of the 1st of July, 1520, and previous to the resumption of the campaign by Cortés, from his headquarters at Tlaxcallan. The numerous actions which took place after-tive and critical reading even of the third eye-witness, the too much esteemed Bernal-Diez del Castillo ("Historia verdadera" in Vedia II, Caps. LXIII, LXIV, LXV, p. 55 to 58) confirms these views to the fullest possible extent, although the latter, bent upon recollecting personal incidents, and, from his subaltern position, less acquainted with general operations, enhances the importance of the action beyond the limits of truth.

It must not be inferred from the above that the achievements of the Spaniards are therefore less memorable. If the fighting was on a scale different from that of European wars, it was none the less exhausting. Any charge of a few horsemen could scatter the enemy, but the next moment a new attack, from some unexpected quarter might be looked for. The danger consisted less in injury on the battlefield, than in the gradual wearing out of the men by the never ceasing watchfulness required. The successful result reflects the highest credit upon the military capacity of the Spaniards, as well as upon their great commander.

[204] Cortés ("Carta Segunda") pp. 45, 46. "And it appeared as if the Holy Ghost had "enlightened me by this advice, after what occurred the next day. For, having moved "on in the morning, at the distance of one and a half leagues large numbers of Indians "came to meet us, so that in the van, rear and flanks the field seemed covered with "them, and they assailed us with such violence, that we hardly knew each other, from "being mixed up with them. . . . In this condition we remained much of the whole "day, until it pleased God that one of their number was killed, who appeared to be of "such quality, that with his death the fight ceased. Then we proceeded, somewhat "relieved, but nevertheless exhausted, until to a small house in the plain, where we "staid for the night." . . . . .

The ambush had been prepared for several days (Bernal-Diez, Cap. CXXVIII, p. 136), for during their incessant pursuit on the preceding days the Mexicans had shouted to them: "Thither you shall go where none of you will escape alive" (p. 136). Sahagun (Lib. XII, Cap. XXVII, p. 434) says the Spaniards halted: "Los Españoles como les "vieron ir tras si con gran prisa entendieron que querian pelear y pararonse y pusiéronse "en órden de guerra; y los mexicanos como eran muchos tomaron en media à los Espa-"ñoles y commenzaron à combatirlos de todas partes." See also Ixtlilxochitl ("Hist: "des Chichimeques" Cap. LXXXIX). It was certainly a hand to hand conflict, the Indians, feeling sure to overpower their foes, striving to capture as many of them as possible alive. This, and the few horses remaining, saved the Spanish troop.

It is upon the statement of Bernal-Diez, that when the emblem or token carried by or near one of the principal chiefs fell, the fight ceased, that the conception has arisen, as if the fall of the chief banner decided the fate of an engagement. But there is no other evidence of the existence of a central banner or emblem.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 wards are of minor interest to us up to the time when the siege of 175 Mexico began. A rapid sketch of the events of this siege, however, should illustrate the defensive warfare of the Mexicans.

648 It is well known how, by a shrewd policy, as well as by able 175 strategy, Cortés succeeded in dismembering, rather than overpow-
726 ering, the Nahuatl confederacy of the valley of Mexico. He thus isolated the Mexican tribe proper, cut off its sources of reinforcement, and, above all, cut off its subsistence, by depriving it of tribute and barter. The time came at last when even those pueblos on the lake shores nearest to Mexico could not, or would not, any longer recognize friendly connections with their former military head. The surface of the water-sheet and the causeways were alone left to the tribe and to such additional warriors as had joined them in their abode, from the outside, to share their fate. As long as the lake could be freely navigated by Mexican canoes, any point of the mainland was exposed to attack by their warriors. Therefore Cortés launched his boats or "brigantines," which soon cleared Lake Tezcuco proper, driving the canoes to shelter in the narrow canals which ran all through the pueblo. His land forces occupied three out of the four issues of the causeways on the mainland. Then the Mexicans were effectually hemmed in, without any outlet beyond the limited circulation on the ponds lying west of the chief causeways. Cortés' first step was to seize Chapultepec, and to cut off the supply of fresh water running thence along the causeway to Mexico.[205] Thus deprived of drinking water, almost, since that of the lagune was not wholesome, with limited supplies of food only, the Mexican tribe was surrounded by human enemies without, whilst two of the greatest plagues of mankind, thirst and famine, were sure to threaten them, ultimately, within.

[205] Mexico was provided with a constant supply of fresh water from Chapultepec. (Clavigero, Lib. VII, Cap. LIV.) The channels were constructed of stone, five feet high, and two feet broad (Cortés, "Carta Segunda"). It was one of the first moves of Cortés to seize the spring supplying these channels. The Mexicans, feeling the importance of the action, defended the position desperately. (Bernal-Diez. Cap. CL, p. 176.) "Acordamos que entrambas capitanias juntas fuésemos à quebrar el agua de chapultepeque "de que se proveia la ciudad, que estaba desde alli de Tacuba aun no media legua. "E yendo à los quebrar los caños, toparonnos muchos guerreros, que nos esperaban en "el camino; porque bien entendido tenian que aquello habia de ser el primero en que "los podiamos dañar; y asi como nos encontraron cerca de unos pasos malos, comen-"zaron à nos flechar y tirar vara y piedra con hondas, é nos hirieron à tres soldados; "mas de presto les hicimos volver las espaldas, y nuestros amigos los de Tlascala les "siguieron de manera, que mataron veinte y prendieron siete ò ocho dellos; y como "aquellos grandes escuadrones estuvieron puestos en huida, les quebramos los caños "por donde iba el agua à su cindad, y desde entonces nunca se fué à Mejico entre tanto "que duró la guerra." (Also Cortés. 1 Carta III, p. 71.)

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Cortés might have quietly waited for these two terrible allies to do their work almost alone, had it not been for two reasons: 174 726

The principal reason was, that his position was not secure among the fickle Indian tribes, which the thirst for revenge, the lust of spoil, and dazzling success on his part had temporarily attached to his fate. A protracted siege lay beyond the military conceptions, nay, beyond the military ability of the Indians. They could not remain outside of their homes for such a length of time.[206]

On the other hand, the Mexicans, equally unprepared for a lengthy defence, compelled him to aggressive action.

Resorting to their only mode of warfare where a sudden dash with overwhelming numbers was not any longer possible,[207] they made a number of feints, with the intention of drawing their enemies into an ambush. Moving against the Spaniards and their allies upon the causeways, they precipitately fled towards the first cut as soon as that onslaught was repulsed. When the pursuers arrived there, they would be charged in flank by heavy bodies of warriors, while in front it rained missiles of every kind upon them from behind the embankments erected on the inner side of the ditches.[208] The Spaniards, however, knew too well how disastrous [206] Bernal-Diez (Cap. CLIII, p. 188, Vedia II) "Dejemos de hablar de los grandes "combates que nos daban; y digamos como nuestros amigos los de Tlascala y de cholu-"la y Guaxocingo, y aun los de Tezcuco, acordaron de se ir à sus tierras." They were disheartened, says the old captain (p. 189), but there is no wonder, since the place had not been carried, Indian-fashion, at a rush, and thus they grew tired of waiting.

It is the most decisive testimony in favor of our views, heretofore already expressed, that the Mexican Indians were not able to carry on a protracted campaign, still less a siege of any duration.

[207] During the siege, there is hardly any doubt but that the Indian allies of Cortés outnumbered the Mexicans. It would be, of course, unsafe to rely upon the numerical statements of the old authorities. They all vary. But if we only recollect that Tlaxcallan, Huexotzinco, Cholula, Chalco, Tescuco, and some of the other main tribes joined the Spaniards, it necessarily convinces us that the numerical superiority was on the side of the besiegers. The great art of Cortés lay in consolidating the forces of these different tribes, which otherwise, in many cases, were enemies of long standing. With the Spaniards as their leaders, the fate of Mexico was sealed, provided they held out long enough. In all the engagements, the European soldiers formed but the nucleus around which their allies agglomerated. If they advanced, the others followed, occupying always so many of the Mexicans, and diverting them from falling too heavily upon the whites. In proportion, however, as the power of the Mexicans gave out, the deeds of the allies of Cortés grew more prominent, since there were more non-combatants to slaughter.

[208] The bridges had all been removed, and entrenchments constructed behind them. Besides, pits had been dug, with earthworks on both sides, for the express purpose of arresting the cavalry. Long lances, armed with sword blades captured from the Spaniards during the "Noche triste," were used by the Mexicans to attack the horsemen. Against the brigantines, rows of pointed piles had been rammed in below the surface of

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

174 a retreat would prove under such circumstances, so, followed by 726 their native allies, they persisted and overcame the obstacles by storm. The very Indian tactics intended for the destruction of the whites enabled the latter to gain a foothold on the causeways with less loss than a directly planned assault would have entailed.[209]

175 Until then, the Mexicans could make use of canoes, harassing 726 both flank and rear of their enemies. But Cortés speedily widened the first cut in the causeway, and sent his scows with artillery to the west side.[210] Thence on, while the brigantines could not effect anything against the pueblo itself, they still kept at bay the canoes of the Mexicans, and moving up along the causeways with the land force, they successfully sustained, by a lively cannonade, the efforts of the latter against the defences at the cuts and ditches.[211]

the water. Bernal-Diez (Cap. CL, pp. 176, 177) relates that, after the corps of Alvarado had occupied Tacuba, the Mexicans began to shout to them vociferously from the causeways and the water (then yet free to them). "Y aquellas palabras que nos decian eran "con pensamiento de nos indignar para que saliésemos aquella noche à guerrear, y herir-"nos mas á su salvo." Further on he says: "Y como aquello hubimos hecho, acordaron "nuestros capitanes que luego fuésemos á dar una vista y entrar por la calzada de Tacu-"ba y hacer lo que pudiésemos para les ganar una puente; y llegados que fuimos á la "calzada, eran tantas las canoas que en la laguna estaban llenas de guerreros y en las "mismas canoas y calzadas, que nos admirábamos dello; y tiraron tanta de vara y "flecha y piedra con hondas, que en la primera refriega hirieron treinta de nuestros "soldados é murieron trés; y annque nos hacian tanto daño, todavia les fuimos entrando "por la calzada adelante hasta una puente, y à lo que yo entendi, ellos nos daban lugar "à ello, por meternos de la parte de la puente; y como alli nos tuvieron, digo que car-"garon tanta multitud de guerreros sobre nosotros que no nos podiamos valer." The Mexicans always provoked the Spanish attack, until the brigantines were masters of the ponds lying to the west of Mexico, also. (See also Cortés, "Carta tercera," Vedia I, p. 71."

[209] The first attack of Alvarado was repulsed. But subsequently they captured "many works and bridges." The fighting was very obstinate, the Mexicans charging at every hour of the day and night. See Prescott (Vol. III, Book VI, Cap. p. 106 and 107). "During the first five or six days after their encampment, the Spaniards experi-"enced much annoyance from the enemy, who too late endeavored to prevent their "taking up a position so near the capital, and which, had they known much of the sci-"ence of war, they would have taken better care themselves to secure. Contrary to "their usual practice the Indians made their attacks by night as well as by day. The "water swarmed with canoes, which hovered at a distance in terror of the brigantines, "but still approached near enough, especially under cover of the darkness, to send "showers of arrows into the Christian camp."

[210] The brigantines were flat-bottomed scows, manned with small guns. Even on the water, the Mexicans resorted to ambushes. The vicinity of the pueblo was surrounded by rows of pointed piles, below the surface of the lake, and squadrons of canoes were sent to decoy the brigantines into such treacherous places. On one occasion they succeeded in capturing one of the vessels in this manner. (Prescott, Vol. III, p. 28, quoting from Bernal-Diez.)

[211] The points occupied by the three Spanish divisions were: Tepeyacac (Guadalupe Hidalgo), at the north, Tacuba at the west, and Cuyuacan to the southwest. It was originally intended to occupy Iztapalapan, but the position could not be carried, and

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

In this manner the favorite Mexican tactics of decoy and ambush were gradually overcome step by step, with little loss of life. Their treacherous sallies were not only not dreaded, they were even desired, since each of them procured a new basis to the assailants, who thus eventually reached, from three sides, the entrance to the pueblo. This pueblo lay before them seemingly open and unfortified. It was not a connected town, but a group of minor clusters, interspersed with gardens, through which water courses filtered in all directions. From large squares, massive truncated pyramids arose, crowned with houses of worship. A few wide thoroughfares led up to the main teo-calli, which the Spaniards regarded as the centre of the settlement. The Mexicans had again cut these thoroughfares, erecting bulwarks of stone and earth behind them. These defences could be carried by storm, and the heart of the pueblo reached. But once there, and far enough from their basis, the victorious Spaniards saw the flat housetops suddenly swarm with Indians, which showered all kinds of missiles upon them. Into their rear large bodies of warriors poured by alleys and cross-streets, occupying the very trenches they had just passed. Nothing remained for the assailants but to retreat upon the causeways; a movement not always easy, and certainly attended with loss. In order to avoid such dangerous ambushes, in which the temples served as decoys, and each communal dwelling as a hiding place for the enemy, Cortés was compelled to advance slowly and cautiously. No trench was left in the rear without being properly filled up, and in the end, seeing that the entire pueblo was but a complicated trap where every house was an eventual stronghold, he resorted much against his will, to the desperate expedient of levelling to the ground all constructions which might afford lurking places to the Mexicans.

Thus, step by step, the tribe of Mexico was driven into a narrower space. A constantly widening girdle of smouldering ruins closed upon them from all sides, and if, with the energy of despair, they dashed time and again upon this ghastly belt, they met at its inner limits their wary foes, which hurled them back, im-

thus Sandoval, who commanded, marched his corps to the north side. The division advancing from Cuyuacan soon seized Xoloc, where the dykes met, and cut off all communication with the south. The brigantines, after clearing the lake, and dislodging the Mexicans from some eminences arising above the water, where small "teo-calli" had been erected, kept up communication between the three divisions, and assisted them in their efforts against the trenches of the causeways.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

175 proving the opportunity to advance further towards them.
●726 Meanwhile, hunger was looming up in their midst, engendering pestilence. Their bodies were weakening day by day, there were no means of subsistence left, the women and children wandered about like living corpses, without fear of Cortés' ruthless Indian [645] allies. Still the tribe did not submit, and when, twice, the war-chiefs represented the futility of future defence, the "chief council," as supreme authority, sternly declared: "that it was better to die "fighting, than to remain in the power of those who would en-"slave and torture them."[212] At last, on the 13th of August, 1521, Cortés, advancing "across the black and blasted environs "which lay around the Indian capital," ordered a final onslaught upon the miserable remnants of the Mexicans: "huddled together "in the utmost confusion, all ages and sexes, in masses so dense "that they nearly forced one another over the brink of the cause-"ways into the water below. Some had climbed on the terraces, "others feebly supported themselves against the walls of the "buildings. Their squalid and tattered garments gave a wildness "to their appearance, which still further heightened the ferocity of "their expression, as they glared on their foes with eyes in which "hate was mingled with despair."[213] Exposed to a destructive fire from all sides, the half famished crowd attempted a feeble resistance, then scattered, preferring flight to surrender. But they were speedily overtaken and the principal chiefs captured, thus leaving Mexico definitively in the hands of the Spaniards.

726 We have purposely dwelt at some length on the events of the 642 siege of the pueblo of Mexico. It is because they illustrate, better than any other page of their history, Indian defensive warfare, carried to its highest point of development. The Mexicans, during this memorable defence, achieved the most that any Indian tribe could achieve, up to the Sixteenth Century. Their resistance, in that respect, stands unparalleled. Besides, its very tenacity, the fortitude with which they bore, without yielding, the greatest sufferings, are a further evidence that what they did, was not out of fear of a crushing despotism ruling them with an iron hand, but by free common consent. It is an additional proof of the facts we have advanced: that the Mexicans were not subject to a despotical power, but organized after the principles of a barbarous, but free military democracy.

[212] Bernal-Diez (Vedia II, cap. CLIV, p. 191, and CLV, p. 191). The Council opposed the advice of Quanhtemotzin, who was for surrender:—"poniendole por delante el fin de su tio el gran montezuma," p. 194.

[213] W. H. Prescott (Book VI, cap VIII, p. 200 and 201).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726
642

---

441 his statue spent in his tribal district [temple]. One 765 day it was [there]; one day it remained seated. And then, when it was midnight, they burned it there in 778 [the place] which they called the god's courtyard, at the eagle vessel, [or] on the skull rack.

But if the merchant had only died on the ground[3] — that is to say, if he had not died in battle, if perchance he had only taken sick, in the very same way they prepared his statue, but only in his home did it burn — not at midnight: while yet there shone a little sun, when he already was turning on his left side,[4] when the sun hung low, they burned it.

●726 Likewise it was said that at the time of the day sign One Serpent, if it was established precisely at that time, when war was declared and proclaimed among the people, when, it was said, war was announced, at that very time the war began. At that time all the eagle and ocelot warriors set out to battle; all followed, crowded, and filled the road. They arose, they set out, departed, marched, and hastened.

X-787 And if one were born upon the day sign One [Serpent],[5] they said, the readers of the day signs corrected it and bestowed gifts upon him. He would become a receiver of favors, worthy of good deserts and merit; he would prosper and have sustenance. But if he did not do his penances well, according to his day sign, his gifts and favors would not come upon him. He himself would harm and destroy it. It was said that by his own act he neglected it and destroyed it by vice, etc.

[851 He who was then born they did not yet bathe;
553] they bathed him later, on Three Deer, and then gave him a name, for the reason already many times told: the day sign of the third place, when they waited for the day, the readers of day signs considered favorable. So they took this following one for him; this time they arranged and postponed it in order to give him a very strong day sign.

And Two Death, which followed, so they said, was evil; at this time there was nothing of merit. But Three Deer, so they said, was a good day sign; this is already related. The third place was always a good time; it was a time of attainment of merit, as the readers of day signs told one. And Four auh intla çã otlalmjc ontomecatl, qujtoznequj: intlacamo oiaomjc, in aço çan ococolizcujc, çan ie no ivi in qujchichioaia icujllo, icce çan ichan in tlatlaia, amo ioalnepantla, oc achi tonatiuh, iquac in ie onmotzcaloa, onmopiloa tonatiuh qujtlatiaia.

No ioan mjtoa: in jquac ypan in ce coatl tonalli, intla ipanti, ipan motlalia, in jquac oiaotlatoloc, oteiaotlalhujloc, in omjto, in otecaqujtiloc iaoiotl, vel iqua ipan vnpeoaia in iaoc: vncan iaoqujxoaia, ipan otlatocoia, ipan vnneotemaloia, vnmotema, onmacocuj, onmolinja, eua, nẽnemj, icxiconana, in jxqujch quauhtlocelotl:

auh in aquin ipan otlacat ce oçelotl tonalli, qujtoaia, qujpãtiaia, qujnemactiaia in tonalpouhque, tlacnopilhujanj, ilhujle, mãcoale muchioaz, mocujltonoz, vnca qujquanj iez: auh intlaca mouellamaceoa, in iuhquj itonal in, amo ipan muchios in jnemac, in jcnopil: çan iehoatl qujmitlacalhuja, qujtlopopolhuja, mjtoa. iaeviian conmocaujlia, qujmotlãçolmjctilia. Eze.

yn aquin ipã otlacat in, aiamo caltiaia, quin ipã caltiaia in Ey maçatl: iquac qujtocamaca, ipampa ie mjieccan omjto: in eitionian tonalli, in jquac tlacemilhujtiltia, qujqualittaia in tonalpouhque: iehoatl ic contlastotoqujliaia, vmpa qujtlatequjniaia, vmpa contlachieltiaia, injc cenca qujtonalchicanaia.

Auh in qujtoqujlia, vme mjqujztli, iuh qujtoa: amo qualli, atle vncã ca mãcoalli. Auh in ey maçatl: iuh qujtoa qualli tonalli, ie omjto: in eitionia muchipa qualcan, vncan ca tlacnopilhujlizzli in iuh qujcilhujaia tonalpouhque. Auh in navi tochtli, in tlanauhcaiotia tonalli, in nauhcaiopa tlavica, tlacem-

3. Otlalmic: Ibid., "Y si el tal mercader moria, de su enfermedad."

4. Molina, op. cit. (Spanish-Nahuatl), Lado diestro.

5. The text reads ce oçelotl; it is correct in the Real Palacio MS.

Sixth Chapter, which telleth of drinking.[5]

As to drinking, there, also was a delusion of the ancients, somewhat like the account of stepping over one.

And in this wise was the account of it: when, perchance, one drank; if one yet a small child drank first, and afterwards one drank who was a little older, already grown, then [the elder] restrained and took the water from the small child. He said to him: "Why dost thou wish to drink first? Thou wilt not grow large, but remain small. Now let thy elder brother drink, for he is already bigger."[6]

Inje chiquacen capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in atliliztli. 271

In jtechpa atliliztli: no vncatca innezttlacaviliz in 856
vevetque: çan ie achi no iuhquj in jtlatlatollo in tecuencholhujlixtli.

Auh ivin in, ca itlatlatollo: in jquac tla ie atli, in tle ie achto atli oc piltontli: auh intla çaçepan atli in ie achi tachcauh, in ie quauhtic: njman qujtlacaoaltia, qujcujlia in atl in piltontli, qujlhuja: tle ipampa in achto tatliznequj, amo tiquauhtiez, çan ye tizqujchtontiez: ma oc ie conj in motiachcauh, achic ca ie quauhtic.

Seventh Chapter, which telleth of him who dipped into the cooking pot.

Of this there was also a delusion of the natives, known especially of the men. And in this wise was it known: when, perhaps, men ate, and one only dipped into the cooking pot — not into a sauce dish — then also the mothers and fathers restrained him. They said to him: "Do not dip into the cooking pot; there [in war] thou wilt leave thy captives. If thou goest to war, none wilt thou seize; no one will become thy captive."

Inje chicome capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa: in aquja zocco ontlapaloa. 264

In jtechpa in: no vncatca innetlapololtiliz, in nj- 726 can tlaca: oc cenca intechpa mocaquj in toqujchtin. Auh ivin in mocaquj: in jquac intla tlaqua toqujchti: auh çan zocco, in ontlapalotica, amo molcaxic: njman no qujtlacaoaltia in tenanoan, in tetaoan, qujlhvia: macamo zocco xontlatlapalo, vncan tiqujmoncaoa in momalhoan: intla tiaz iavc, aiac ticaciz, aiac momal muchioaz.

Eighth Chapter, which telleth of tamales stuck [to the cooking pot].

Concerning tamales stuck [to the cooking pot] as another deception of the natives, it was said that the men and women would not eat them. It was stated that if the men were to eat them, when they would shoot arrows in warfare, the arrow which was shot would not find its mark. Or perchance therefore they might die, or one's wife would with difficulty bear children.

And just so was it as to a woman. If she were to eat tamales which had stuck [to the cooking pot], she could not bear children. Her child would only adhere to and thus die in her womb. Therefore the mothers sternly forbade them to eat tamales which had stuck [to the cooking pot].

Inje chicuei capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in jxqujuhquj tamalli. 264

In jtechpa in jxqujuhquj tamalli: oc no centlamantli innezttlacaviliz in njcan tlaca, qujlmach amo vel qujquazque, in oqujchtin, ioan cioa: qujlmach intla qujquazque toqujchti, amo axcan in qujçaz mjtl, injc qujmjnazque iauc: auh anoçe ic mjqujz, yoan aixxcan tlacachioaz in juamic.

Auh çan ie no yuhquj in jtechpa cioatl: intla qujquaz ixqujuhquj tamalli, amo vellacachioaz: çan itech ixqujviz in jconeuh, ic mjqujz in ijti: ipampa cenca qujtecaoaltiaia in tenanoan, injc amo moquaz, in jxqujuhquj tamalli.

---

5. Corresponding Spanish text: "quiere decir, hacer al menor, como del mayor."

6. Ibid.: "si bebían dos hermanos, si el menor bebía primero, decíale: el mayor: no beas primero, que yo: porque si beas primero, no crecerás: mas quedarás chico, como eres agora." See also Garibay, op. cit., p. 516: "decir, es adscribir, con que se remedia . . . que al diferencia entre esta persona, o cosa, y otra."

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

648 when the Tenochcas reached the field of battle
175 they rushed to the attack and took no less than thirty pris-[304] oners, from each of whom they detached an ear with their obsidian knives before sending him to the rear. After the 175 battle Coxcox made a speech praising the valor of his forces
●727 in taking so many prisoners but denigrating the Tenochcas who came back empty handed. The vassals waited until their lord had finished speaking and then inquired of him why each captive was short an ear. The attention of the Culhuas being riveted to this extraordinary circumstance, the Tenochcas opened their pouches and displayed the missing ears, proving beyond cavil the measure of their prowess. Clearly [721] the war-sacrifice cult had reached the Valley by this time, for the emphasis set on the taking of prisoners indicates that this was one of the chief purposes of war. Furthermore, a drawing shows the later sacrifice of the prisoners, a cult practice the accomplishment of which was to make the Aztecs dreaded by other tribes throughout the length and breadth of Mexico.

175 So great had the prestige of the Tenochcas become that they went to their lord, Coxcox, and asked for his daughter as a wife for their chief so that they might found a dynasty. Coxcox granted their request, and the Tenochcas were so overcome with gratitude that they sacrificed the luckless girl and draped her skin on a priest to impersonate a nature goddess, Toci. Then with somewhat less than tact they invited the father to the ceremony. He, expecting a marriage celebration, was utterly horrified and summoned his warriors, to exterminate the Tenochcas who forthwith fled to the lake, rejoining their brethren already there.

There were two communities on the islands at the middle of the fourteenth century: Tenochtitlan, which seems to

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

793 nize a priesthood completely separate from civil officialdom; both were mutally dependent. There was a priestly hierarchy, it is true, but it probably operated in conjunction with civil position. Permanent positions may have existed, but in the chapters on religion we shall describe more fully how completely the realms of Church and State coalesced among the people of ancient Mexico, in contrast to the cleavage between them in our own society.

567 Mexican society existed for the benefit of the tribe, and each member was supposed to do his part in preserving the community. However, the bane of working social orders as well as hypothetical social schemes are those unfortunates who, by mischance, maladjustment or just plain deviltry, do not do their part. The Aztecs, too, had this problem to cope with, and there developed a social class of people who had lost their civil rights and become slaves. This they might do voluntarily or because they were prisoners of war or were punished for crimes or were sold by their parents. Their treatment differed according to the circumstances of their enslavement.[8] (See Plate 38, bottom left.)

Military captives usually were sacrificed, but those who [727] demonstrated some unusual skill were sometimes bought for domestic service or put to work on some communal enterprise. Criminal slaves lost their free status for such offenses as failure to denounce treachery, membership in a traitor's family, kidnaping for sale a free man, selling another's property without his consent, theft without restitution when over [672] ten years old or hindering a slave from gaining the sanctuary of a chief's house. Penal slaves were privately owned, usually to make restitution to those whom they had injured.

Voluntary slavery was assumed by the poor and landless

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

since that is what man most ardently strives to keep intact. 782
Thus instances of human sacrifices keep cropping up in the 174 world's religious systems, and we preserve in our own culture the concept of martyrdom, achieved by voluntary or involuntary means, as an act of virtue. The very beautiful example of the Saviour transmutes to the highest spiritual plane this idea of sacrifice for the good of humanity.

The Aztecs did not reach this spiritual level, but the symbolism of their sacrifice has, nonetheless, its own barbaric beauty. They reasoned that for man to survive, the gods who permit his existence must also live and wax strong. These gods, however, received their best nutriment from the most precious of offerings, the hearts of men. Thus a vicious circle became established which led to sacrifice on an increasing scale. The gods manifested their favor and their strength to the Aztecs by letting them prosper, but the Aztecs, on their part, had to sacrifice hearts to the gods to maintain their good will. A good part of the tribal prosperity emanated from military success, so that the most acceptable sacrifices were the hearts of adversaries, which were the hardest to acquire since prisoners could not be taken without military victory. A martial success, on the other hand, could only be achieved through the exercise of divine favor. Thus sacrifice led to war and war back to sacrifice, in an unending series of expanding cycles. The effect that this practice had on foreign affairs we shall describe in the next chapter. (See Plate 60, top.)

War captives were the most esteemed offering, and the 782 braver and higher in rank, the more valuable they were. [727] Slaves were killed for minor ceremonies, and in rare instances [567] women and children were slain in fertility rites to ensure growth in plants by the powers of sympathetic magic.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

have been an important religious center in Middle Culture times. However, neither trade nor religion broke down the sense of communal and political independence in Central Mexico. (See Plate 35, Fig. 2.)

Foreign relations centered around war, which, we have seen, was an important part of Aztec economy and religion. The same confusion of motives that we find in our modern culture affected the reasons for military action. We wage war for economic, territorial and politieal advantages and, while condemning the practice in our adversaries, justify our own participation by saying that we are fighting for freedom, to liberate someone, to extend civilization or to ensure peace. Soldiers on our own side are brave and attain glory, preserve our social virtues and sacrifice themselves for the public well-being. Those on the other side are aggressors, agents of evil and cowardly knaves. The Aztecs made war for defense, revenge and economic motives, which were inextricably confused with the need for the sacrificial victims requisite for proper adoration of their gods. Thus in warfare the great aim was to take captives, but behind this religious goal lurked the less holy urges of political and economic expediency.

The captive himself attained social status, since he went to a special warrior's heaven. A redonbtable Tlaxcalan chief, named Tlahuicol, was singled out for sacrifice to the sun and fought so successfully with his dummy weapons that he killed some of his adversaries and wounded a number of the others. He was pardoned and offered a chieftaincy in the Tenochcan army. Tlahuicol, however, rejected his pardon and gladly underwent sacrifice for the greater honor and glory in that death. This story illustrates the attitude of the individual warrior, which is not unlike that of the mediaeval knight or career soldier in our own culture.[8]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The Aztec reasons for fighting and their social and moral sanctions for war were not so very different from our own, except that we have many more, due to our superior rationalizations. The Aztec military technique, however, was definitely inferior, since it was not so completely developed a social tool as it is our own culture. The basic organization of the army required the participation of every able-bodied man under the direction of the war chief. However, as Aztec society grew more intricate and greater numbers of warriors took the field, the military structure became more rigid.

The unit of organization was an aggregation of twenty men, several of which were combined into larger bodies of two to four hundred, roughly corresponding to our platoons and companies. Special detachments of from four to six men, who did scouting and raiding, operated much as do the squads of our own military system. The clan commander marshaled the larger bodies, much as a colonel handles his regiment. The clan troops were banded together in four divisions under the heads of the four municipal quarters, and the tribal war chiefs had the supreme command. In a very numerous army the troops from a given quarter, or barrio, were sometimes divided into brigades, composed of the forces from two or three clans.[8]

The high tribal officers, the war chief, the chiefs of the quarters and the clan chiefs commanded the larger bodies. The ordinary chiefs and members of the warrior orders, the Knights of the Eagle and the Tiger and of a third infrequently mentioned order, the Arrow, according to their particular ability, took over the lesser units. In other words, fan-weapon; he carried a cape of yellow paper. Likewise he had conchs and sea-shells. His shield had pieces of turquoise and mirror-stone. He carried the staff with the device for seeing.

776

Fourteenth Chapter, which tells of the god named Five Flower (Macuilxochitl) and Flower Prince (Xochipilli).

Equally were they worshipped as gods of the palace folk.

When people feasted, if one of us men lay with a woman, or a woman with a man, it was said: "They brought to naught their fasting through sin."

Therefore [the god] gave them, as merited punishment, hemorrhoids, venereal sickness, boils, and piles.[72]

Therefore they would make vows to him, in order to quiet, remove, or abate the sickness.

And when his feast, which was called the Feast of the Flowers, was celebrated, first all fasted four days. Some fasted thus: they ate no chili, [and ate only] after midday, only once [a day]. Some went at midnight, and drank a gruel called "painted atoll," on which small flowers floated. [This was] "the feet of the flowers."

All who ate good things ate them only at midday. And some ate only one thing—tortillas of corn not softened by lime,[73] without chili; [this] also [they did] at midday.

On the fifth day, which was when the feast was celebrated, a man became the likeness [of the god], arrayed in [his] clothing, in which he danced; they beat the drum and sang for him.

And at midday, quail were sacrificed. All drew blood, passing arrows through the tongue; and they laid as offerings in his temple, five tamales which they had made for him. These were called [bread for] fasting, [and were] very large. On them stood the flowery arrow.

Some then offered their offering upon wooden plates, and followed it with five more small tamales with a sauce, and others [offered] two cakes made of a dough of amaranth seed and maize—one black, one red,—[instead of offerings of] rubber laid in wooden bowls.

And some [brought] toasted corn, or toasted corn mixed in honey; or S-shaped corn-cakes which were like notched arrows or lightning-bolts; [or] butterfly-tortillas, tortillas of ground corn which had not been softened in lime; cakes made of a dough of amaranth seed and maize, and shaped like shields, arrows, swords, and darts.

And here, as Mixtec, from everywhere, were brought capes, called "vulture-capes,"[74] [from] all warlike [places]

Jnic matlactli vnavi capitulo: inchpa tlatoa in teotl, yn ioca: macuilxochitl, yoan xochipilli.

Çan nemohque, ynjc netentilloia tecpantenca intech:
yn jquac neçaujtiloia, intla aca tequjchti ipan cioacochia, anoço cioatl, ipan oqujchocchic: mjtoaia, qujatlaçulnjctia yn jneçaualiz, ic quimmacoia, tetech qujtlaliaia, qujxillnujltiaia, qujxmacoaltiaia, in xochicuiztli, yn menenaualiztli, tlapalanaltilitli, quexilhuitlitli, yniepa temoua, nemotolilloia, ynjc qujçeuiz, ynjc qujçeuaia ynjc qujçeuaoaz, cuculiztli.
Auh yn jquac ilhujquiztililoia, ipan xochilhujtl: achtopa nevilhujtl nemochiçanalo: in cequjntin ic meçaoaia, chilcaoaia, qujnenpantla tomatiuh, in tlaquaia, cemtlaquaia, inelnepantla qujmattiuh, tlacujlolatulli in qujia, xochiouetli yn ipan ca, momochiçoa:

machi qujçqua in velic, çan no nepantla tomatiuh qujmattiuh. Auh yn aca çan qujçcaviaia, in ielaxcalli qujçqua, ayc chilli: no nepantla tomatiuh qujmattiuh:
yc tlamacujlti yn jlhujquiztililoia, iquac ce tlacatl qujmixiqelatiaia, commaqujaia yn jtlatqui, ipan mjtotiaia, qujtlatocamjliaia, qujcujcatiaia:

yoan in ie nepantla tomatiuh, tlacotonaloia, neçoaia, tlacuqujtiloia: yoã tlamanjliloia yn jteupan, macujltecl in qujchinjliaia, tamalli: mjtoaia tlacatlaqualli, cenca vevey ipan yeatiuh xochujtl:

yn aca quauhcaxitl ynjc commanjliaia, yoan contoquiliaia oc no macuiltecl tamalupinoan, mollotiuja: yoan vntecl tamalli yiel pewjia, no cecnj quauhcaxtica, mantivia, omitl tlitic, omitl tlatlauhqui.

Auh yn aca iuquitl, anoço necuquitl, anoço tomacujlli, papaloctaxcalli, ielaxcalli, tecoallaxcalli, tecoalchimalli, tecoalnjtl, tecoalnuquiauitl, tecoalnamitl:

yoan teujian oalcanaloia, in mamalti ajcan mexica, mamaoan malinquijna, yn jequjch tachiualoanc, yn

776
688
763 785
834 776
796
264
785
776
415
262
796
776
796
727

[72] Corresponding Spanish text reads: "heridas, como enfermedades, de las partes secretas, . . . almorranas, podredumbres del miembro secreto, dolores, tiñosidades, etc."

[73] In corresponding Spanish text: "pasar salvas."

776
796 surrounding us, brought by those [Nahua] living on the 727 borders of warring people. Those who had taken these prisoners, these "tribute-captives," brought them, [and] have guards watched them.

And if one of them fled and escaped, they replaced him, they brought a man to take the place of him [who had fled].

776 This the slaves died, when the feast was celebrated.
And the garb [of Macuilxochitl was thus]: on his lips there was the impiter of a hand. His face was red and burnt.
He had a crown of feathers. A wing was the burden on his back, on which was the sun-flag, with quetzal-feathers at the top. The cotton cloth, which was girt behind, had red edges.
He wore sun sandals.

Fifteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Two Reed (Omacatl).

[773] This Omacatl was god of Ultzanac.[74] It was said that he invented, created, and introduced banqueting—invitations to feasts, acceptance [of invitations], the feasting of people.
Though him it came to pass that men gathered together, that near relatives assembled. To one's house was brought his image, there to be held in esteem and cared for.

And also it was said that if he was not [so] held in esteem, like an invited [guest], he would become angered.
He chided one in his sleep or in a dream; he said to him who dreamed: "Thou! Why dost thou not esteem me? I shall depart from thee. Already I know what I shall do to thee."

[753] And if he was sorely enraged, when one ate he often caused him to swallow hair which was upon the water and the food. And when, [so] one said, he ate the god, often he sickened. Thus he afflicted him: food stuck in his throat;
the water wound about the roof of his mouth like a snake.
His gullet was troubled when he ate. And if he walked, he stumbled and fell.

776 And thus was his feast celebrated. Whoso are the image 796 of the god first made a sacred cylinder [of dough]: this was the home of the god. The chief man—the priest, the elder of the city—[made it], a cubit long—fat, round.

And before it was shared among them, first all ate and drank, drinking wine. And when they broke, they stabbed Omacatl in the stomach and killed him. Then the sacred roll was shared, broken in pieces, divided among them.

When it was eaten, [it was] as if a debt had been acquitted, as if one were commanded to a feast, and were forgiven [the debt]. And those who accepted, when the feast ended, had paid with their stomachs and were clean, because they had repaid [their debt].

776 And thus was he dressed: he had a crown of feathers—ixcuamapa, yn ixcuaca ximpa, quiyauhcaxia yn jamal-hua, yn jaltzintzun, in malmapilhua, xinchinxia: ajcan quijqujxia, yn calpixqui, in cuculpixqui.

Auh inda ica ximiki, inda tlachalohi, ypan tlacaquiztoca, motlacuecuejxia, quijxipehxiaxia, quijxipehxia:
in tlachcaui, yecan mixpijn, yn jquac ilhujqujxitilhia.

Auh yn jxochichiuhcal: xoxoquqali ixtlapalcuatzale, tlaxtlapalcuatzalijli, tlaxtlaqualtilli, yhujxoxocale, qquchichiquja, vixmapij yn jtlamacal, vixmacatlamacale, ypan icac, tzoalopanjtl, quetzalxaxaxa, quetzalxaxaxaxaxa, quetzalxaxaxaxa, quetzalxaxaxaxa, tzaclapalica motzinjjqui, motzinqua, yxmalocac, tzualocaqua.

Juic caxtolli capitulo, yuchqa tlamo yn ueuil, yn jnca Omacatl.

Jnjn omacatl, vizmanac, ueuil caxca, yn jnech tlamjlaia, in piqujlilaia, quijxnaia ca ichaual imactia, in cuaualtl, in tecuamatzalitzli, in tetlacamatilitzli, in tetlaqualtilitzli: ynmixjan machiaia yn jnacacatlalitia, yn jnacamaqujxtilia tzaualqua, tachi vicaia, vmpa macamachiaia, jlcujtlaujlaia yn jnjqula.

Auh no quijxnaia, yatlacamo mavizcalia, yn jnhujqujxa cuamocuala, tlavalcuja: uecchqa, amoqo uecchixpan tzoaia, quijlaujaia, yn aquja quijamjqui. Jn tehuatl tleyca yn amo tlaechmovizmati; ajmitztlalcaluia: auh ic ne ajcmati, in tlein mopan ajcchiuaz.

Auh inela caxca moçauia, yn jquac tlaqualo, mjecpa tzontli quijxnolaia, in atl, in tlaqualli ipan. Auh yn aquj yn mjtoa tzoqua, mincpa mocoxoa: yajc quijxilinja, malcima, yxcpac mjlacatzoa in atl: mahuqtlamja in jquac tlaqua:
auh yeela xoxonij momoqtlamja, motecujnja, motlavinqui.

Auh yajc ilhujqujxitilhia: yn aquja tzoqua, achtqua quichiuaia, tzontjnilli, yiamjja in uetl catca: qan tlacatl, tzopinqui calpole, can mahcpil yajc huivitac, vel tzoxmanac, mjmjlaic.

Auh yn xiamo tzoxmanca, oc achtqua tlatlaqualo, ollaia, tlacoxo: auh yn ololtlaujc cuujxtequinja, yn omacatl cuauhjctia: ajman ic tzoxmanca, motlatlaqueujlo, tzoxmilujlo, in tzonujujlli:

iquac quaqualo, iahujqujn ic tzoxmiztlaia, tzolacquujxilia, tetlilujlia, tzoxkacualtlia: ca yn aquiqui mocuia, yn iquac ic ilhujtlaujqujxi, cuccujlacuitlaxaxia, tzopqueuia, yyamqui ca cuahcuitlaxaxia.

Jn ixochichiuhcaxca: ilxiuxocale, quauhxocale, yxil

74. Probably the temple of Ultzanac (Ultzanac calmecac) in Acolmán. Cf. Seler: Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 1, p. 82. Sahagún describes it as the 24th temple (Historia general, Vol. I, p. 222). The name means suggests various other meanings—the south, the barrio or part of the city named Ultzanac, the people of that area, or the south house or south temple. See ibid., Vol. I, pp. 157, 197-99, 215, 221, 222, 229, and also Seler: op. cit., Vol. II, pp. 4, pp. 7-8, 9-10.

λ 796 priests] preceded playing [musical instruments], singing, and dancing before them.

[787] When they took the children to be slain, if they wept and shed many tears, those who carried them rejoiced, for they took [it] as an omen that they would have much rain that year.

λ 796 ● 727 Also in this month they slew many captives in honor of these same gods of the water. They slashed them first, [with their swords,] fighting them as they were tied upon a stone like a mill wheel; and when they threw them down, wounded, they carried them off to tear their hearts from them in the temple which was called Yopico.

When they slew these captives, their owners—they who had taken them—went gloriously arrayed in feathers, dancing before them and showing their valor. This continued through all the days of this month. In this feast were enacted many other ceremonies, which are set down at length in its telling (fol. 15).

10 g yuan adornadas con plumajes, y con g 11
11 A flores: yuan, taliendo, cantando, y bay- A 12
12 b lando delante dellos b 13
13 c Quando lleuauan a los niños a c 14
14 d matar: si llorauan, y echauan muchas d 15
15 e lagrimas, alegrauanse los, que los e 16
16 f lleuauan: porque tomauan pronostico, f 17
17 g de que auian de tener, muchas aguas g 18
18 A este año. A 19
19 b Tambien en este mes: matauan b 20
20 c muchos cautiuos, a honrra de los mismos c 21
dioses del agua: acuchillauanlos primero peleando cõ ellos, atados sobre vna piedra, como muela de molino, y desque los derrocauan acuchillados: lleuauanlos a sacar el coraçon al templo, que se llamaua, iopico.

Quando mataua a estos captiuos: los dueños dellos, que los auian captiuado, yvan gloriosamente atauiados cõ plumajes, y baylando delante dellos, mostrando su valentia. Esto passaua por todos los dias, deste mes. Otras muchas cerimonias, se hazian en esta fiesta: las quales estan escriptas a la larga, en su historia. fo. 15.

X796 Before they dismembered the captives, they flayed them; and others put on the skins, and, [wearing them,] fought mock fights with other youths, as if it were a war. And those [of one band] took captive [those of] the other [band].

[72] After what hath been set forth above, they slew other captives, battling with them—these being tied, by the waist, with a rope which passed through the socket of a round stone, as of a mill; and [the rope] was long enough so that [the captive] might walk about the complete circumference of the stone. And they gave him arms with which he might do battle; and four warriors came against him with swords and shields, and one by one they exchanged sword blows with him until they vanquished him. Etc.

Antes que hiziesen pedaços a los cativos: los desollauan, y otros vestian sus pellejos, y escaramoçauan con ellos, con otros mancebos, como cosa de guerra: y se prendian los vnos a los otros.

Despues de lo arriba dicho: matauan otros captiuos, peleando con ellos: y estando ellos atados por medio del cuerpo, con vna soga, que salia por el ojo de vna muela, como de molino, y era tan larga, que podia a andar por toda la circũferencia de la piedra, y dauanle sus armas, con que peleasse: y venjan contra el quatro, con espadas, y rodelas, y vno a vno se acuchillauan con el, hasta que le vencian. Etc.

4

X 796 Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of the honors paid, and of the blood offerings which were made, in the second month, which was called Tlacaxipeualiztli.[1]

[721] Tlacaxipeualiztli. This feast came and was thus celebrated; [it was] when all the captives died, all those taken in war—the men, the women, the children.[2]

Those who had taken captives, when, on the morrow, their prisoners were to die, then began the captives' dance, when the sun had passed noon. And they held an all-night vigil for their prisoners there in the tribal temple. And they placed [the captives] before the fire[3] and took hair from the top of the captives' heads, when half the night had passed and when they made offerings of blood from the ear.

And when the dawn came, then they made them leave, that they might go to die, they who were to die appropriately to this feast day. For during the entire festival they were all flayed. Hence they called [the feast] Tlacaxipeualiztli.

And the captives were called xipeme and tototecti.[4] Those who slew them were the priests. Those who had taken them captive did not kill them; they only brought them as tribute, only delivered them as offerings;[5] [the priests] went laying hold of their heads, and seizing [the hair of] their heads. Thus they went leading them up to the top of the temple.

And when some captive faltered, fainted, or went throwing himself upon the ground, they dragged him.

And when one showed himself strong, not acting

Jnic cempoali oce capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in tlamauiztlilizti, yoan in nextlaoalizti, in qujchioaia, yn jpan vel ic vnterl metztli, in mjtoaia, tlacaxipeualizti.

Tlacaxipeualizti: ynin ilhuitl qujçaia: auh inic muchioaia, iquac miquja, yn ixqujch malli, yn jxqujch tlaaxitl, yn ixqujch haxioac: yn oquichtli, in cioatl, yn ixqujch piltzintli.

Jn maleque, in ic iuh muztla miqujxque in malhoan, iquac peoa, in momalitotia, in ic onmotzcaloa tonatiuh: auh ceiocal qujtoçauja yn jmal, in vncan icalpulco: yoan vncan qujtzoncuj, iquaiolloco, tecuilixquac qujtlalia, iquac in ioalli xeliuj, neçaoalizpan.

Auh in ooallatuje, vncan coneoaltia, inic mjqujtiuh: in miquja vel ipan in jlhujtl: auh vel iuh cemjlhujtl muchinti qujnxipeoaia, xipeoaloia: ic mjtoaia tlacaxipeoalizti.

Auh in mamalti motocaiotiaia xipeme, yoan tototecti: in temictiaia, iehoantin in tlamacazque: amo iehoanti qujnmictiaia in maleque, çan tequjtl qujmoncaoaia, çan tequjtl temac qujmoncaoaia, qujnquatemotzultziztzqujtiuj, inquatla qujmantiuj, ymjcpac qujmantiuj, ynjc qujntlecauja teucalticpac.

Auh yn aca malli, vel çotlaoa, iolmiquj, ça chachapantiuh, ça qujvilana:

auh yn aca vel muchicaoa, amo mocioatlamachtia,

1. This most spectacular of ceremonies—the flaying of men—was said by Fray Diego de Durán to have been invented by Moctezuma I's general Tlacaélel. See Historia de las Indias de Nueva-España y Islas de Tierra Firme (José F. Ramírez, ed.; México: Imprenta de J. M. Andrade y F. Escalante, 1867), Vol. I, p. 174. Miguel Acosta Saignes, in Tlacaxipeualizti, un complejo mesoamericano entre los caribes (Caracas: Universidad Central, 1950), passim, argues that it is an ancient complex and in various aspects very widespread.

In México, its place as a spring festival, celebrated when the soil was prepared for planting, is well recognized. Those who wore the human skins represented the renewal of vegetation. Cf. Seler: Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 4, p. 71. See also Alfonso Caso: La religión de los aztecas (México: Imprenta Mundial, 1936), pp. 27-8, where, besides, origin of the ceremony in Guerrero or Oaxaca is suggested.

2. Clavijero (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 149) adds that "algunos de estos víctimas eran los ladrones de oro y plata que eran condenados por la ley del reino a ser juzgados sacrificados."

3. Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 62) translates thus: "legte ab"—the hair—"vor dem Feuerherde nieder"; Sahagún, in the corresponding Spanish text, says: "puesto al fuego hacían esta ceremonia."

4. "The flayed" (xipeme) and "those who die for the honor of our god Tezcatl" (tototecti). See corresponding Spanish text, which also says: "Todos los pellejos de los desollados, se ponían muchos manojuelos, a los quales llamaban tototecti." Francisco Pino y Troncoso, in Descripción Historia y Exposición del Codice Pictórico de los Antiguos Nahuatl. . . . (Florencia, 1899), p. 109, writes: ". . . Xipeme ó Tototecti; es decir: los que iban vestidos con la piel del dios Xipe Tótek puesta sobre la piel del desollado, la cual usaban al cuerpo desnudo, para colorirla después con el tinte y los adornos propios del dios. . . ."

[787] Besides hemp worn as described, the skins are said by Juan de Torquemada to have been used to forecast a wet or dry year, and the chiefs directed agricultural work accordingly.—George Kubler and Charles Gibson: The Tovar Calendar. Memoirs of the Connecticut Academy of Arts and Sciences, Vol. 20 (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1951), p. 22.

5. Sahagún, in the Spanish text, definitely states that the captive was delivered to the priest by the captor.

X 796 Sixth [Twenty-fourth] Chapter, which relateth the feast and blood sacrifices made during all the days[1] in the fifth month, which was called Toxcatl.[2]

In [the month of] Toxcatl, the great feast of Tezcatlipoca was [held]. At that time he was formed and set up. Wherefore died his impersonator, who for one year had lived [as Tezcatlipoca].

And at that time once more was offered [to the people] his [new] impersonator, who would again live for one year.

X 796 For many impersonators [thus] lived, whom guardians[3] kept and maintained. Perchance there were ● 727 ten. These were select captives, chosen when captives were taken. Then was one chosen if he was good to look upon and fair of body. Then such were taken, and the guardians cared for them. But one whom they destined to be a slave, the captor slew.

X 796 For he who was chosen was of fair countenance, 727 of good understanding and quick, of clean body—
832 slender like a reed; long and thin like a stout cane; well-built; not of overfed body, not corpulent, and neither very small nor exceedingly tall.

X 796 For anyone who was formed [thus] defective, who 832 was too tall, to him the women said: "Tall one; head-nodder; handful of stars!" He who was chosen impersonator was without defects.

[He was] like something smoothed, like a tomato, or like a pebble, as if hewn of wood. [He did] not [have] curly hair, [but] straight, long hair; [he had] no scabs, pustules, or boils on the forehead, nor skin growths on the forehead, nor [was he] large-headed, nor with the back of the head prominent; nor of a head shaped like a carrying-net, nor with the sutures of the crown yet soft; not broad-headed, nor with a square head; not bald, nor with Jnic chiquacen capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa, yn ilhujtl, yoã in nextlaoalli, in muchioaia, yn ipan ic cemjlhujtl ic macujlli metztli, in mitoaia, Toxcatl.

In ipan in toxcatl, vel yueiilhujuh catca in tezcatlipoca: vncan tlacatia, vncan moquetzaia: ipampa ca vncan miquja, yn jxiptla in cexiuhtica onen.

Yoan iquac njman noce vncan mixquetzaia yxiptla, yn oc no cexiuhtica nemiz:

ca miequjntin in nemja, teixiptlaoan in quinpia, in qujnnemjtiaia cacalpixque: aço quẽ matlactli in nenj: y ichoantin y, ca mamalti tlaqujxtilti qujxtiloia, yn iquac oalxitiloia mamalti, vncan pepenaloia, intla aca ce oqualittoc, in qualli ynacaio: njman onano, qujmonpialtiaia in calpixque: auh iece ipan qujoalixquetzaia tlacotli, ichoatl qujnictia in tlamanj:

ca ichoatl ic pepenalo, in qualli itlachieliz, in mjmatquj, in mjmatinj, in chipaoac ynacaio, cujllotic, acatic, piaztic, iuhqujn otlatl, ipanoca temjmjltic, amo tlacaçolnacaio, amo tomaoac, amo no tetepiton amo no cenca quauhtic:

ca yiaioca muchioa, yn aqujn cenca quauhtic, qujlhuja in cioa: quauhtitin, quauhchachalan, citlalmaololo: yn aqujn pepenaloia, in teixiptla, atle yiaioca:

iuhqujn tlachictli, iuhqujn tomatl, iuhqujn telolotli, iuhqujn, quaujtl tlaxixintli, amo quacocototztic, quacolochtic, vel tzõmelaoac, tzompiaztic, amo ixquachachaquachtic, amo ixquatotomonquj, amo ixquaxitontic, amo ixquaxiqujpiltic, amo quametlapiltic, amo cuexcochujtztic, amo quachitatic, amo quapatztic, amo quapatlachtic, amo quaoacaltic, amo quaxoxomalacqui, amo ixquamamalacachtic, amo ixquatolpopoçactic, amo ixquatolmemetlapiltic, amo

1. Cemilhuitl is usually translated as "one day" or "all day." Garibay ("Relación breve," p. 291) renders it "the first day." Simeón (op. cit.), in his extended discussion, admits a meaning of "the first day," or "all the days"; this latter appears to fit the events related in Chapter 24.

2. Of this name, Orozco y Berra (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 37) writes: "Toxcatl, Tepopochoiliztli. De todas las interpretaciones dadas á la palabra Toxcatl, la más grosera á nuestro entender, es la dada por Gama, tomada del P. Acosta: 'una soga gruesa torcida de sartales de maíz tostado.'"

Clavigero (op. cit., Vol. III, p. 402) explains that "La figura del mes quinto es la de una cabeza humana con una cadena debajo, para representar aquellas sartas de maíz tostado que se ponían al cuello, y con las cuales adornaban también al ídolo de Tezcatlipoca, por lo que el mes tenía el nombre Toxcatl"; and (p. 152) "unos sacerdotes vestidos de negro y vestidos del traje del ídolo, los bajaban en unas andas bien adornadas al pie de la escalera. Los mancebos y vírgenes del templo rodeaban las andas de una cuerda gruesa compuesta de sartas de maíz tostado y ponían al ídolo una sarta al cuello y una guirnalda en la cabeza. A esta cuerda por ser de grueso sartal y símbolo de la sequedad que pretendían evitar con sus plegarias, llamaban toxcatl, el cual nombre se dió por esta ceremonia al mes quinto de que hablamos."

Garibay (op. cit., p. 291) also suggests as a translation for the name "sun dryness, sun drought"—"sumatra secura."

3. Sahagún (Bulnes edition, Vol. II, p. 315) refers to "los mayordomos de las provincias, que llamaban calpixques de las provincias"; and (Vol. III, p. 122) adds: "Estos eran habla urbana y mandaban que mandaban a sus súbditos; había principales, personas conocidas, como son los que llamaban calpixque, que regían a los demás."

The white demon of the air was of gold, and had quetzal feather balls.

The yellow, Huaxtec, pointed, conical cap had a golden [disc] in front and was girt with quetzal feathers. And the shirt was of yellow parrot feathers [decorated with] hawk scratches. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate; gold were his ear pendants, with quetzal feather spindles.

The white, Huaxtec, pointed, conical, paper cap had quetzal feathers bound at the base and a [disc] of gold at the front; its spindles were of quetzal feathers and gold. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate, and gold were his ear pendants.

[For] the bi-colored Huaxtec, the shirt was half blue and half yellow. His conical, pointed cap was also bi-colored—half blue and half yellow, and it had quetzal feathers girt at the base and a golden [disc] at the front. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate; his ear pendants were gold; and his spindles were of quetzal feathers.

The golden conical cap had quetzal feather tufts held in cups. The silver conical cap had quetzal feather tufts held in cups.

[There were] shell trumpets and clay pipes which were blown in battle so that the warriors might set forth together to fight. The standard, [which was] of gold, and the quetzal feather banner dispatched the men to battle. When it was seen that already all the standards were raised, then the warriors set forth together to do battle.

The quetzal feather sun [consisted of] a golden sun, and in the middle of it was a circle of quetzal feathers. The young maize flower crest had, as its leaves, quetzal feathers, and [was ornamented] with flint knives [fashioned of] gold. On his temples went plate-like pieces of gold. The wooden sword [was provided] with obsidian blades [set in] a groove at its edge. The headdress of quetzal and heron feathers [ornamented] with gold, [had] single quetzal feathers, and many quetzal feathers rustled [from it. There was] the ocelot wine jar, whose foam had single quetzal feathers [set in it], and many quetzal feathers rustled [from it].

Iztac tzitzimjtl, coztic teucujtlaio, iquetzaltemal. 643 714 531

Coztic cuextecatl icopil ujtzauhquj, izquateucujtlaio, quetzaltica cujtlalpic: auh in ecatl, toçecatl motlotloujtec, coztic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol, coztic teucujtlatl, imamalacaquetzal.

Iztac cuextecatl iamacal ujtzauhquj, quetzaltica cujtlalpic, izquateucujtlaio, imamalacaquetzal teucujtlaio: coztic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol coztic teucujtlatl.

Chictlapanquj cuextecatl, çectlapal xoxouhquj, cectlapal coztic in ecatl, icopil ujtzauhquj, no chictlapanquj, cectlapal xoxouhquj, cectlapal coztic quetzaltica cujtlalpic, izquateucujtlaio, coztic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol coztic teucujtlatl, imamalacaquetzal.

Coztic teucujtlacopilli quetzaltecomaio. Iztac teucujtlacopilli, quetzaltecomaio, tlapitzalli teruçiztli, ioan qujqujztli in mopitza 534 isuc injc çemeca iauqujzque, injc mjcali: in quach- 727 panjtl, coztic teucujtlapanjtl: ioan quetzalpanjtl in teruçtia in isuc, in omottac ie meoatiquetza in jzquj quachpanjtl. Niman çemeca in iauqujzque, injc mjcali, quetzaltonatiuh, coztic teucujtlatl in tonatiuh ijtic 643 mantiuh in quetzalli iaoaltic. Xiloxochipatzactli, que- 714 tzalli in jizoaio, coztic teucujtlatl in jtecpaio, in jcanaoacân mamantiuh: coztic teucujtlatl in tlacomaltectli. Maquaujtl itztzo in jtenco tlatectli, quetzalaztatzontli, teucujtlaio, quetzalxixilquj: auh in jcuecuetlacacaio mjiec quetzalli, oçelotlachicomjtl, in jpoçonca quetzalxixilquj: auh in jcuecuetlacacaio mjiec in quetzalli. [41]

[p. 36 has no textual material]

532
[714
724 411]
[727
782]
[693]
[726
714
411]
[693] [695]

—Hist. Pueb. y Tenoch.

79. Warriors in battle array (Chapter 17). 80. Conquest of a city (Chapter 17). 81. Sacrifice of a war captive (Chapter 17). 82-84. Judges (Chapter 17). 85. A trial (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(K)]

[p. 36(J) is blank]

And when they already were to rise against the city to destroy it, first was awaited tensely the moment when fire flared up—when the priests brought forth [new] fire—and for the blowing of shell trumpets, when the priests blew them.

And when the fire flared up, then as one arose all the warriors. War cries were raised; there was fighting. They shot fiery arrows into the temples.

And when they first took a captive, one fated to die, forthwith they slew him there before the gods; they slashed his breast open with a flint knife.

And when the city had been overcome, thereupon were counted as many captives as there were, and as many Mexicans and Tlatilulcans as had died. Then they apprised the ruler that they had been orphaned for the sake of Uitzilopochtli; that men had been taken captive and been slain. And the ruler then commanded the high judges to go to tell and inform all in the homes of those who had gone to die in war, that there might be weeping in the homes of those who had gone to war to die. And they informed those in the homes of as many as had gone to take captives in war that they had received honors there because of their valor. And they were rewarded according to their merits; the ruler accorded favors to all—costly capes, breech cloats, chocolate, food, and devices, and lip rods and ear plugs. Even more did the ruler accord favors to the princes if they had taken captives. He gave them the offices of stewards, and all wealth without price—honor, fame, renown.

And if some had done wrong in battle, they then and there slew them on the battlefield; they beat them, they stoned them.

And if several claimed one captive, and one man said, "He is my captive," and another man also said, "He is my captive": if no man verified it, and also if no one saw how they had taken the captive, the lord of the sun decided between them. If neither had an advantage of the two who claimed the captive, then those who had taken four captives, the masters of the captives, decided that to neither one would the captive belong. He was dedicated to the Uitzalcoo[4] [or] they left him to the tribal temple, the house of the devil.

And when the city which they had destroyed was strained, at once was set the tribute, the impost. [To the ruler who had conquered them] they gave that ponja: injc tlequauhtlaça tlamacazque: ioã in tlapitzalli in tecuciztli, in oquipitzque tlamacazque: 726

ioan in ocuepon tletl, njman ic cemeoa, in jxquich iuquiuxquj, motempapauja, mjcali, qujtlemjna in teucalli.

Auh in achto in çaçi malli in maliacatl, çan njman vncan, imjxpan qujmjctia, in teteu, tecpatica quelitequj.

Auh in jcoac ompoliuh altepetl, njmã ie ic nemalpoalo, in quexqujch malli: ioan in quexqujch omjc mexicatl, in tlatilulcatl, njman muchi qujcaqujtia in tlatoanj, injc tepal oicnopiltic vitzilobuchtli injc otlamaloc, ioan omjcoac: auh in tlatoanj njman qujnnaoatia, in tecutlatoque: injc qujtemachtitiuj, injc qujtecaqujtititiuj, in jnchan in jxqujnti, oiaumjqujto, injc choqujliloxque in jnchachan, in oiaumjqujto: ioan qujtecaqujtia in jnchan, in quexquj otlamato iauc, ic vncan qujcujia in maujziotl, in jpampa oqujchiotl: ioan qujmomaceuiaia in jxquich iteicneliaia in tlatoanj, in tlaçotilmatli, in maxtlatl, in atl, tlaqualli, ioan tlaujztli, ioan teçacatl, nacochtli: oc cenca qujmjcneliaia in tlaçopipilti, in tlatoanj intla otlamato, qujmaca calpixcantli: ioan in jxquich tlaçotli necujltonolli, in mauziotl, in tleiotl, in teiotl. 727 [555]

Auh intla acame qujtlacoa iauiotl, njman vmpa qujnmjctia in iauc qujnviujtequj, qujntetepachoa. 687

Auh intla acame, qujmocujcujlia ce malli, qujtoa ce tlacatl, ca nomal, in oc ce tlacatl no qujtoa ca nomal: intlacamo ce tlacatl itech nelti, aiac no qujnjttac, in quezqui tlamaque: ichoantin qujntlatzontequjlia, in tonatiuh itlatocaboan: aiac tle onquiça in jmomextin in qujmocujcujlia in malli: iuh qujtzontequj, in quauhtlatoque, in mallatoque, aiac ce itech pouhquj iex in malli: vitzcalli qujpoaia, calpolco qujcaoaia, in jchan tlacateculotl. 727

Auh in jcoac oazioac altepetl in ovmpoliuh, njman icoac motlalia, in tequjtl, in tlacalaqujlli itech mana in tlein vmpa muchiua, auh njman no iquac inque- 728 651

4. Cf. ibid., pp. 301-302, referring to the barrio of Cuauhxa, where drawn fought and died in sacrifice: "Este era en el punto del templo que se dice Tlamacazco."

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

and finally all the people of the uplands and those of the swamp lands."[4]

And Moctezuma said to them: "You have tired yourselves; you have suffered affliction, O men dexterous in war. Rest yourselves. [But] perhaps you only fool me. Let me still behold the truth of your account."

And then he confined them. If the report which they had made were not true, Moctezuma jailed them and did away with them

And there in battle was when captives were taken. When it had come to pass that they went against and conquered the city, then the captives were counted, there, in wooden cages: how many had been taken by Tenochtitlan, how many had been taken by Tlatilulco, and by the people of the swamp lands and the people of the dry lands everywhere. The captives were examined [to determine] how many groups of four hundred were formed.

Those who counted were the generals and the commanding generals. And then they sent messengers here to Mexico. Those who were sent as messengers were seasoned warriors, who informed Moctezuma of the great veracity of the four-hundred count. They brought word of how many groups of four hundred had been made captive.

And then they declared to him how many of the noblemen had won their reward for having made captives; that haply a number [of them] had had their hair shorn as seasoned warriors, or that some [had been made] leaders of the youths. When Moctezuma heard this, he rejoiced exceedingly, because his noblemen had taken captives. And at that time he freed those whom he had cast in jail—the victory messengers—and he gave them gifts along with the others.

And if war should be proclaimed against Atlixco, or Uexotzinco, and if there once again they took captives, they won much glory thereby; Moctezuma accorded them great honor for it. For his noblemen had taken captives, and had gained repute, and had reached the station of nobility—the estate of the eagle and the ocelot warriors. From there they came to rule, to govern cities; and at that time they seated them with [the nobility], and they might eat with Moctezuma.

565
868
701

Auh qujmjlhujaia in moteçuma, oanquijçiauhque: oanqujhijoujque in oçeloqujchtle: xinotlalican açó çan annechiztlacahuja, ma oc njcchia in jneltica tlatolli:

auh njman qujmoncaltzaqua intlacamo melaoac tlatolli oquicaquitique moteçuma quintlatlatia quinpopoloa. [687]

Auh in vmpa iauc in iquac otlamaloc, in ie ihuqui in oia in oompoliuh, alteperl, njman ic mocempoa in mamalti, in vncan oncaltitla quezquj oaxioac in tenochtitlã, quezquj oaxioac in tlatilulco, auh inic noujian cenchinanpanecatl, centlalhoacpanecatl, mocemjtta in mamalti quezquitzontli onnuchiuh. 727

Jehoantin tlapoa in tlatlacochcalca, in tlatlacatecca: auh njman ic oallatitlanj, in njcan mexico, in oalmotitlanj iehoantin in tetequjoaque, in qujoalnonotza motecuçuma, in ie uel imelaoaca in jcentzontecca, in qujoalitquj tlatolli, in quezquitzontli onnochiuh malli: [202 701]

auh in qujmelaujliaia in, quezquintin otlacnopilhujque in pipilti in otlamaque, açó cequintin motequjoacaxima anoce cequintin telpuchiacati. Jn qujcaquja in motecuçuma cenca ic papaquja ipampa ca ipilhoan in ontlamaque: auh qujnjquac qujnquixtiaia, in qujncaltzaquaia in tequjpan titlanti qujmõtehoan motlatlauhtia. [431]

Auh intla oalmjtoz iaujotl in atlixco, açó vexotzinco, intla oc ceppa vmpa tlamazque, cenca ic vel panuetzi, ic cenca uel qujmmaujztilia in motecuçuma: ipampa ca ipilhoan in ontlamaque, in onmoteniotique in oconmjiaoaiotique in pillotl in quauhiotl, in ocelotl, ic oncan in quiça in tlatocati, in qujpachoa alteperl, auh qujnjquac intlan qujntlalia: ytlan tlaqua in motecuçuma 721 729 727

4. Chimalpanocatl: Sahagún's comment on fol. 53 of Book X of the Florentine Codex is descriptive: "y he de la tierra caca, que son los comunes de los chinampas."

Twenty-first Chapter, in which is told how all arose through the ranks until they became judges.

And behold how began the life of the young boy. At first, while still a small boy, his hair was shorn. And when he was already ten years old, they then let a tuft of hair grow on the back of his head. And when he was fifteen years old, then the tuft of hair became long. [This was] when he had nowhere taken captives.

And if he took a captive with the help of others —perchance doing so with the aid of two, or of three, or of four, or of five, or of six, at which point came to an end [the reckoning] that a captive was taken with others' help—then the lock of hair was removed. And thus was the division of their captive: in six parts it came. The first, who was the real captor, took his body and one of his thighs—the one with the right foot. And the second who took part [in the capture] took the left thigh. And the third took the right upper arm. The fourth took the left upper arm. The fifth took the right forearm. And as for the sixth, he took the left forearm.

And when the tuft on the back of his head was removed, he was shorn so that he was left [another] lock: his hair dress kept, on the right side, the hair hanging low, reaching the bottom of his ear; to one side [only] was his lock of hair set. When this [was done], he assumed another face, he appeared otherwise, so that it might be seen that he had made a captive with the help of others [and that] the tuft of hair on the back of his head had been removed.

And then his grandfather, or his beloved uncle, addressed him. He said to him: "My beloved grandson, the sun, the lord of the earth, hath washed thy face. Thou hast taken another face; and thou hast gone to throw thyself against the foe. Let them take thee if, without profit, once more thou takest a captive with the aid of others. What wouldst thou be? Wouldst thou have a young girl's lock of hair? Take care lest thou again take a captive with others' help. Cast thyself against our foes."

Injc cempoalli oce capitulo, vncan mjtoa, in iuhquima tlamamatlatl injc tlecoia in jxqujchica tecutlato muchioa. 302 855

Auh izcatquj injc ontzinti, in imemjliz in telpuchtontli, in iacachtó çan oc moquateçonoa in oc piltontli: auh in ie matlacxiujtl icoac mocuexpaltia, auh in caxtolxiujtl, icoac cuexpalchicacpul muchioa in acan tlama.

Auh intla tepal otlama aço oteoncaioti, anoço oteecaioti, anoço otenãuhcaioti anoço otemacujlcaioti, anoço otechiquacencaioti vncan tlantica injc otepal tlamalo injc necuexpallaçalo. Auh injc qujmoxexelhuja inmal chiquaceccã qujça. Injc ce vel iehoatl in tlamani quicui in itlac: ioan ce imetz: iehoatl in tomaiauhcãpa tocxi: auh inic teoncaiotia, quicui in topochcopa tometz. Auh inic tehecaiotia: quicui in tomaiauhcampa tahcul. Jnic tenauhcaiotia: quicui in topochcopa tacul. Jnic temacuilcaiotia: quicui in tomaiauhcampa tomatzotzopaz. Auh inic tlachiquacencaiotia iehoatl quicui in topochcopa tomatzotzopaz. 727 858

Auh in in icoac mocuespallaça, inic moxima motzotzocoltia quioallamachia in innexin imaiauhcãpa quioalhuilancaiotia inacaz itzintlan oalaci iioca motema initzotzocul: in icoac y oc centetl quicui inixaiac oc centlamantli ic tlachia inic ittoz ca otepallama omocuespallaz.

Auh niman ic quitlatlauhtia in icul anoço itlatzin quilhuia. Nosuiuhtze omitzmixamili in tonatiuh, i tlaltecutli ocentetl ticcuic in moxaiac, auh ça otia, inmicpa xonmomaiaui ma mitzuicacan in toiauoã intla nen oc ceppa tepal xitlania tle tiez cuis timatzomocoltiz, ma nen ie no cuel tepal titlama ça inca ximomotla in toiauhoan. 603 [604] 861

Appendix B

Continuation of the Twentieth Chapter[1]

. . . Then were rewarded the seasoned warriors who had brought word of the great veracity of the four-hundred count.[2]

And in this wise the messengers entered; if the flesh of men had been taken captive, it was thus soon made known—all came tying and binding their hair, for the flesh of men had been taken and they thus made it evident. And much did the common folk rejoice when the saw them [and noted] that they came binding [their hair]. They said: "And so[4] the flesh of men hath been taken captive; for all the messengers go with bound [hair]!" And if some came separate [from the others], and came no more with their hair tied and bound, but went with it quite loose, thus they made it known that [our men] had been made captive and that there had been losses in the war. And when the common folk saw them, then a cry of grief arose. Then they said: "And so[4] there have been losses!"

And the noblemen, when they had taken some captives, did not anoint themselves with yellow but rather stained themselves with red ochre, which they put on all over; and they were pasted with eagle down. And Moctezuma rewarded them all with princely capes and breech clouts of great value and high honor, and with preciously wrought quetzal feather devices [ornamented] with gold, and with shields with, perhaps, quetzal feather garlands—very rich shields.

And if one's captives came alive, then he had stewards guard them, and they took great care of them lest they take sick; perhaps it might be twenty or forty that they would guard.

And at the time when the captive was to die, then

. . . in iquac motlauhtia tequiuaqz,[3] y uel ymelauaca i ye ycentzontecca, oquiualitq'qz tlahtolli. 202 701

Auh inic ualcalaquia in titlanti intla otonacatlamaloc. ic monestiiuitze mochinti quihcuistiuitze in inquatzõ ontlalpihtiuitze. ypampa ca otonacatlamaloc, ic quitemachitiaya. Auh cenca ic pahpaqz im maceualti in q'mittaya. in ontlacuistiuitze. quitoua. anca otonacatlamaloc ca mochintin ontlacuistiui in titlanti. auh intla ceq'ntin ic xeliuhtiuitze in aocmo ontlalpihtiuitze, y aocmo. yhcuistiuitz inquatzõ y ça tontiuh. yc quinestiaya. ca otlamaloc, yuan omicouac ỹ yaoc. Auh in oq'mittaqz maceualtin nimã ic tlachoquiztlena. niman iuh quitoua, anca omicouac. 201 727

auh im pipilti in iquac tlaotlamahqz. amo motecoçauhaltia, çan tlauhtica mohçaya quicemaqz in nouia intech. auh mopotonia quauhtlachcayotica. auh in q'ntlauhtia moteccuiçoma moch yeuatl in tlatocatilmahtli. in tlatocamastlatl. y cẽca tlaçotli immauizço. yuan tlaçotlanq' quetzallauiztli teocuitlayo. yuan chimalli. aço quetzalcozcayo y uel tlaçotli chimalli. 565 302 727 431

auh ỹ yeoatl ymal intla oualyoltia niman q'mpieltia in calpisqz uel quimocuitlauia inic amo cocolizcuiz intla oc cempoualtiz anoço compoualtiz. in q̃piezque. 727

Auh i ye yquac miquiz malli. ỹ yehuatl tlamani 000

1. See ending of Chapter 20, above.

This passage originally, in the Real Academia MS, completed the section ending nikmati quinehtekaua mochilachtin. The remaining part of Chapter 20 there appears as an interpolation.

2. The abbreviation for the ending -qua in the original resembles -qz, and is thus reproduced here.

3. This phrase appears capable of more than one interpretation: cf. Molina, op. cit., tlaxcuacuepaliz, and cruelmente tequilia. Seler's translation of a similar passage in Chapter 20 (Einige Kapitel, p. 331)—iqc uel y melauaca ininmocuaxca—is "in richtiger Weise die Zahl der Vierhundertne."

4. Anca: cf. Angel María Garibay K.: Llave del Náhuatl (Oaxaca, Méx.: [Imprenta Mayó], 1940), p. 108; also Hernán Cortés: Arte de la lengua mexicana (México: Imprenta del Museo Nacional, 1892), p. 519.

And at the time when the captive was to die, then 782 Moctezuma presented the captor a device [with] 293 quetzal feather cups so that possessing it he might 727 slay him as a sacrifice. It did not belong to him; but having it he slew the victim, and he lanced with it. He had his rattle stick with him, or the obsidian butterfly or quetzal feather cup [device] set with gold, which he carried upon his back. Possessing it, he slew him as an offering.

nimã ye ic quimaca in motecçuiçoma in tlauiztli quetzalcomitl inic ypan tlamictiz. amo uel ytech poxia çan ipan tlamictia. ypan mitotia ychicauaz yetiuh. anoço itzpapalotl. anoço quetzalcomitl teocuitlayo in q'mama in ipan tlamictia.

796 And the captive he then took there where he was 727 to die, upon the round sacrificial stone; he proceeded to take the captive by the head, and lead him. up there where they would slay him in the gladiatorial sacrifice. The one known as Old Wolf led him by the hand—he in whose care lay the captives, as if they had become his sons. And then he gave [the victim] his four pine cudgels, which he would hurl at his adversaries. And he gave him his shield, and his war club—not edged with obsidian blades but only pasted with feathers.

auh i yeuatl malli. niman ic quiuica in ompa miquiz temalacac icpac cantiuh contlehcauia, in oncan q'uahuanazqz malli. ymac concaua ytoca cuitlachueue. in imac onacitimanca mamalti iuhq'nma ypilhuã quinchiuaya. Auh niman cõmaca ỹ yocotzonteuh nauhtetl inic q'momotlaz tlauauanq'. yuan q'maca ychimal ymacquauh. amo tenitzyo çan tlapotonilli.

[793] And those who contended against him in gladiatorial sacrifice were the fire priests and the [other] priests. And the captor remained standing below; he stood regarding his captive. He who died was indeed before [his captor].

Auh y yeuantin in teuauanaya in tletlenamacaqz in tlamacazqz. auh in tlamani çam moquetzticac tlatzintlan quitzticac in imal. uel ispã im miq'.

[273] And after this, when the Old Wolf had arrayed the captive, thereupon he went, and gave him to drink wine which was called the gods' wine. He took it to him [in] a vessel [painted like] reeds and edged with feathers. When [the victim] had drunk, then he raised [the wine] in dedication [toward] where the sun came forth. So [Old Wolf] did with all the shields and war clubs; he raised all of them as offerings which he gave the captive. When Old Wolf had offered the captive [wine] and made him drink it, thereupon the slayer of the sacrificial victim went forth in order to sacrifice him. [He had] his shield and his war club edged with obsidian blades and covered with feathers.

Auh ỹ ye iuhqui in oçe-ncauh malli in cuitlachueue, niman ye ic yauh quitiz in octli mihtouaya teooctli. inic quiiq' acatecomatl tlatempotonilli. in õya. niman ic coniaua in ompa ualquiça tonatiuh mochi iuh q'chiua in chimalli im macquauitl moch coniaua. inic cõmaca malli. auh in oconiti cuitlachueue. niman ye ic yauh in tlamicti inic q'uauanaz ychimal ymacquauh yetiuh tenitzyo tlapotonilli

And when he had drunk, then he struck at the captive, who likewise struck back. And if the captive were of stout heart, if he were verily a chieftain, really manly, perhaps three or four men fought him. Then, when he fell, they indeed slew him as a sacrifice. And if he were not manly, not a chieftain, then he cast himself there on the round sacrificial stone, and did not fight. Forthwith was he stretched out upon his back, and then they gashed open his breast, seized his heart, and raised it in dedication there [toward] where the sun came forth.

auh in õya. niman ic cõuiteq' im malli. auh no q'ualhuiterqui auh intla yollo chicauac im malli intla uel tiacauh y uel oq'chtli. aço yey tlacatl anoço naui tlacatl in q'moychecultia. q'niquac uel q'mictia in ouelhuetz. auh intlacamo oq'chtli intlaçamo tiacauh çan niman õmoteca in oncan temalacac amo ontlachecoua. çan icuahca onmaquetzteteca niman ic conelteq' conculia in iyollo coniaulia in tonatiuh. ompa ualq'ça

And after the sacrifice was offered, thereupon those who had made the sacrifice, who had slain [the victim], the priests, each one danced with the heads [of the captives], carrying them with them. And Old Wolf wept at this; he wept for his sons who had died.

Auh i ye iuhqui omnicouac. nimã ye ic mihtotia in tlauahuanqz in otemictiqz ⁊ yeuantin tlamacazqz. in ipan mihtotia cecentetl in tzontecomatl intlan caana. Auh i yeuatl cuitlachueue. niman ye ic choca q'nchoq'lia ⁊ yehuãtin ypilhuã in omicqz. 796 727 793

And the captive[s] they then flayed; when it was dawn they were already flayed. [They] stood wearing [their] skins. Of each captive who died, their skins were all worn. Then they assembled at Yopico, in the courtyard of the devil. They had their shields, their war clubs, and their rattle sticks. And also came together the great chieftains, the battle-drunk, all important personages. With them were their staves; the pine staves lay in their hands, and they went carrying them.

auh i yeuatl malli nimã ye ic q'xipeua in tlathui ye totec, [çan moquetzticacqui][3] in ieuayo. in isquichtin omicqz mamalti moch onneaquilo in imeuayo. oncan mocenquistia i yopihco in diablo itualco. inchimal immacquauh yetiuh inchicauaztopil. auh no mocenq'stiaya y ueuey tiacauan yetiui. i yaopan miuintiani. uel isquich tlacatl. inquauh yetoc. yeuatl in ocoquauitl immac onoc in quitquitoqz.

And when deep night was overspread, they did not take upon their wrists their shields, but took only their staves, as they awaited the time that the sun would burst forth. And when he came forth, thereupon the tototecsi placed themselves in order—verily, all of them. And the chieftains, upon this, also placed themselves in order and contended against the tototecsi. Perhaps they faced each other in the four directions. And then the chieftains started forth and fell upon the tototecsi; they tickled their navels. Very swiftly they tickled them, and then they took after them and went skirmishing with them there in the place where they were, a place called Totectzontecontitlan. There the chieftains turned back; their only task had been to leave them there.

oc uel youã im moteca immac tlacuistoqz atle inchimal çanio in quauitl quitq'toqz. quichistimani in quemmã ualquiçaz tonatiuh. auh in oualquiz niman ye ic motecpana in tototecti. uel isq'chtin. Auh in tiacaua nimã ye ic no motecpana q'mimamictimomana in tototecti. aço nauhmapa. in motztimani. auh nimã ye ic ompeua in tiacaua ỹuicpa õuetzi in tototecti q'moncotoniña in inxic ça uel yciuhca in oq'mocotoniliqz nimã ye ic q'ntoca q'micaltiui ompa q'mõmana in innemanaya in itocayocã totectzontecontitlã. oncan ualmocuepa in tiacaua. çan tequitl q'mõcaua. 796

And when this had taken place, thereupon the tototecsi visited house after house. Nowhere did they omit a house or one's home. Indeed everywhere they entered; and the common folk, seasoned to this, awaited them in order to offer them the things with which they expected them—bunches of ears of maize, tortillas made of uncooked maize, and tamales of maize, amaranth seed, and honey mixed together. For the whole day they went from house to house, [thus treated with] esteem.

Auh i ye iuhq' nimã ye ic ui in tepan cacalaquizqz in tototecti. acan quimocauia in calli in techã. uel nouian calaq̃ auh im macualli ye iuhca ỹyollo quinchie. in q'mmaca in inchiel. ocholli. uilocpallaacalli. yztocoyouh. nenepanolli. çan cemilhuitl in tepancacalaq' in ontlaçotlalo. 796 431 262

And the next day, or [during the next] twenty days, wherever [one of them] went, perhaps in the market place, he begged, and that which he begged he gave to the owner of [the dead] captive. He gave him his share, perchance, of chili, salt, or staves, or pine wood, or grains of maize—all which lay in the market place. Each day [he did] the same.

auh in imoztlayoc anoço y cempoualloc. ça campa quiquiça aço tianquizco. tlatlaeuã. in queheua cõmaca im male. q'xelhuia. aço chilli. iztatl. aço quauitl. aço ocotl. anoço tlaolli i ye mochi tianquizco onoc. momoztlae yui.

3. This phrase is almost illegible in the original. We have reproduced what the words appear to be.

000 smarteth. Where, in truth, [may we turn], O our lord?"

Then [the messengers] commanded those who watched; they said to those at the head of the guard: "Even though he sleepeth, tell him: 'Lo, they whom thou hast sent over the water have come!'"

And when they went to tell him, then he replied: "I shall not hear it here; I shall hear it in the Coacalli. There let them go." And he commanded and said: "Let two captives be covered with chalk."

727 782 [202]

And then the messengers went to the Coaralli,[1] and also the noble Moctezuma himself.

Thereupon, before them, were slain the captives; they slashed open their breasts; they sprinkled the messengers with their blood. For this reason did they so do: that they had traveled into very perilous places; that they had gone to see — had looked into the faces and at the heads of, and had verily spoken to — the gods.

Niman qujmõnaoatique in qujpia in jtzontlan tlapia qujmonjlhujque intla mocochitia xicmolhujlican ca ovallaque in tiqujnmotitlanj atl itic.

Auh in oconjlhujto: njman qujoalito. Amo njcan njccaquja, vmpa njccaquja in coacalco, ma vmpa vian, yoan oallanaoati: qujoalito: ma ontetiçavilo in mamalti.

Auh njman vmpa iaque in coacalco in titlanti: no ichoatl in motecuçomatzin, njmã ic ic imixpan mjcoa qujmeltetequj in mamalti, in jmezio ic qujmonatzelhujaia in titlanti (ipampa in juh qujchiuhque in, ca cenca ovican in ovia ca oqujmjttato, imixco imjcpac otlachiato, vel oqujnnotzque in teteu.

1. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., VIII — Kings and Lords, p. 44.

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955 NU7 Aztec NU7

Eighth Chapter, in which is told how Moctezuma sent the magicians,[1] wizards,[2] and soothsayers[3] so that they might do something to the Spaniards.

Then Moctezuma sent emissaries. He dispatched various evil men — soothsayers and magicians. And he sent the constables, hardy [warriors], chieftains, to purvey [to the Spaniards] all they might need of food: turkeys, eggs, white tortillas, and all they might ask for as well as whatsoever might satisfy their hearts' desire. They were to watch them well. He sent captives, so that they might be prepared if perchance [the Spaniards] would drink their blood. And just so did the messengers do.

And when [the Spaniards] beheld this, their stomachs turned. They spat; they blinked; they shut their eyes and shook their heads. For the food, which they had sprinkled and spattered with blood, sickened and revolted them. For strongly did it reek of blood.

And thus had Moctezuma provided, for he thought them gods; he took them for gods; he paid them reverence as gods. For they were called and named "gods come from the heavens." And the black ones were said to be black gods.

Later they ate white tortillas, grains of maize, eggs, turkeys, and all manner of fruit — sapotas,[4] red sapotas,[5] yellow sapotas,[6] black sapotas,[7] sweet pota-

Injc chicuei capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenju ie- 000
hoatl motecuçoma, qujmjoa in nanaoalti in tlatlacateculo, in tetlachivianjme, injc itla impan qujchioazque in Españoles.

Niman iquac tlaioa in Motecuçoma in qujmjoa 64-3 mocheoantin in atlaca, in tlaciuhque, in nanaoalti: 791 yoan qujmjoa in achcacauhti, chicaoaque, in tiacaoli 262 in jpan tlatozque in jxquich intech menequjx in qualonj in totoli in tototlteti, io jztac tlaxcalli: yol in tlein qujtlanjzque, yoan injc ca oc vel pachiviz in iniollo, vel qujmjtzazque, qujmjoa in mamalti, ic monemachti, cujx qujtque in jmezço: auh iuh qujchiuhque in titlanti. [727]

Auh in jquac oqujttaque: cenca motlaeltique, chi- 000 chicha, ixtetenmotzoloa, ihicopi, motzontecõvivixoa: auh in tlaqualli eztica catzelhujque, queezvique, cenca invic coac, qujntlaelti: ichica ca cenca xoqujiac in eztli.

Auh injc iuh qujchiuh motecuçoma, ca qujnteuma, teteu impan qujnma qujnteutocac: ic notzaloque, ic tocaiotiloque, teteu ilhujcac vitze: auh in tiltique teucacatzacti mjtoque, qujn ichoatl qujquaque iztac tlaxcalli, tlatzincujtl, 262 tototlteti, tototli, auh in ie ixquich xochiqualli, quauhtzaputl, teçontzaputl, atztzaputl, tototcujtlatzaputl,

1. Guthey, in "Parallelismus de Sahagún," Tlalocan, II, 2 (1946), p. 170, refers to the "'duplicación de la persona' o el 'desdoblamiento'" in regard to nanaoli. The term may be related etymologically to nani (4) — a quadruple personality, an archaic verb nanali, nanalo (to feed or disembalm, as in magic rites), or Maya-Quiché na, nan, nana (wisdom, science, magic). Guthey favors the second possibility (nanali, nanalo).

2. Tlachiaueloc: concerning the term tlachiaueloloni, Guthey refers to an arte de hombre peruicioso, and quotes Sahagún's phrase in Vol. III (Robredo ed.), p. 33 — "tiene pacto con el demonio" (diaueloloni) (ibid., p. 174). In op. cit., Tlalocan, I, 4 (1944), p. 389, he refers to diaueloloni as "brujo," "mago," "hombre que perjudica a la gente, hombre peruicioso"; "precipitaba y procuraba la muerte." There is a discussion of the etymology of the term.

3. Tlaiolque: we have previously used the term "soothsayer." In op. cit., Tlalocan, II, 2 (1946), Guthey, noting that Molina translates the term as astrólogo, states: "La rede exile, parece denotar fundamento astrológico," and notes the relationship of the term to tonalámatl, one who prevents hail from falling. He cites Lo poblanido del valle de Tonalámatlo, II, p. 494.

4. Quauhzapotl: sapota (Lucuma salicifolia HBK.) in Francisco Hernández: Historia de las plantas de Nueva España (México: Instituto Universitario, 1946), I, p. 274; same as tzapotl (genérico name), according to Francisco J. Santamarina: Diccionario general de americanismos (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1942), III, p. 314 — Lucuma mamosa, L. longipedi, Achras mammosa, A. sapota. Cf. also Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, p. 225.

5. Tzapotzapotl: mamey (Lucuma mamosa Gaertn.), sapotaceous (Santamarina, op. cit., pp. 314-316). In Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia general de las cosas de la Nueva España (D. Joaquín García Icazbalceta, ed.; Paris: G. Masson, 1880), p. 733, n. 2, this explanation appears: "Les premiers Espagnoles d'Amérique confondirent [with various sapotas] le fruit beaucoup plus gros du tzapotzapotl ou bananier sauvage, de la famille des sapots, qu'ils appellent aujourd'hui mamey. C'est probablement le même fruit que les dialogues commentaires nomment le mamey de tzapotzapotl." See also Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, p. 225.

6. Atzapotl: probably the same as atzapotl. In Hernández, op. cit., I, pp. 267-268, this is Lucuma salicifolia Kunth. It is also identified by Santamarina, loc. cit., as Lucuma salicifolia — caimito tropical or sapotillo. In Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, p. 224, it is identified as sapote sapotillo — fruta gruesa (redondo). The atzapotzapotl (yellow sapota) is now generally known as sapote harinoso (personal communication, Rafael García Granados).

7. Tzontecomatzapotl: sapote prieto (Diospyros ebenaster Retz — ebenáceas), in Sahagún, loc. cit.

648 Twenty-fifth Chapter, in which is related how the people of Teocalhueyacan quietly and peacefully came to meet the Spaniards and offered them food when they fled from Mexico.

Tlacatecutli was the name, and Otoncoatl the lordly title, of the one who led them away. There he came to leave food. White tortillas; birds, baked [262] and boiled; eggs; and some live birds; and some tuna cactus fruit he spread out before the Captain.

He said: "You have suffered fatigue. Our lords the gods have tired themselves. Let them rest. Let them find a resting place. Let them recover their breath."

Then Marina answered them and said: "My master, the Captain, saith: 'Whence have they come? Where [is] their home?'" Then they said to him: "May our lord hear: we have come from his home at Teocalhueyacan; we are the people of Teocalhueyacan." Then Marina answered: "It is well. They have shown us kindness. We shall go there tomorrow; there we shall sleep."

●727 And meanwhile, just as dawn broke, when the earth was visible, then [the Mexicans] carried away — there were carried out — all the men of Tlaxcalla and of Cempoalla, and the Spaniards, who had plunged into the Tolteca canal and [at] Petlacalco or Mictlantonco. In boats they carried them all away. In patches of rushes, among the rushes; in patches of reeds, among the reeds, they went to cast each one and lay them out. They went to throw out each one. And they went to cast out each woman; [302] naked, yellow[-skinned], anointed with yellow, painted yellow, were the women. All and each of them they stripped and despoiled. They removed all from them and left them bare.

And the Spaniards they placed, each one, apart, in rows; [like] white reed shoots, or white maguey shoots, or white maize ears, or white reed shoots were their bodies. And they removed each of the deer which bore men on their backs, called horses.

And all the goods [of the Spaniards and their allies], carried in their back packs — all was stolen, Injc cempoalli ommacujlli capitulo, vncã mjtoa in quenjn Teucalhujacantlaca, ivian, iocuica qujnamjqujco in Españoles yoan qujnmacaque in tlaqualli, in jquac choloque mexico.

Tlacatecutli itoca, otoncoatl in jpiltoca, in valteiacã, in vncan qujcavaco tlaqualli, iztac tlaxcalli, totolin, totollalevatzalli, totollaapoçonjlli, tototletl, yoa cequjn ioioli in tututin, yoan cequj nochtli contecaque ixpan in capitan:

qujtoque. Oanqujmjhioviltique, oqujmociaviltique in totecujovan in teteu, ma mocevitzinocan, ma tlaltitech maxitican, ma mjhiocujtican:

njmã qujnoalnãqujli in Malintzin: qujto. Notechiuhcavan, qujmjtalhuja in Capitan: campa vallaque, campa inchan: njmã qujlhujque. Ma qujmocaqujti in totecujo: ca vmpa tivallaque in jchantzinco in Teucalhujacan, ca titeucalhujaque: njmã qujoalito in Malintzin. Ça ic qualli otechmocnelilique, vmpa tiazque in muztla, vmpa ticuchizque.

Auh njmã vel iquac in otlatlavizcalli ieoac, in otlatlalchipaoac in teçacoc, in çaçacoque in ic ixqujch Tlaxcaltecatl, in cempoaltecatl, yoan in Españoles, in motepexivique in tulteca acaloco, yoan in petlacalcu, anoço mjctlantonco: acaltica in teçaçacoc, aztapilla, aztapiltitlan, tulla, tulitic in qujmamaiavito, qujmõtzotzopontitlaçato, inca vmmamaiavito, yoan in cioa qujntlatlaçato, pepetlauhtivi, cuztique, coztalanpopul, coztemjloltique in cioa, muchintin qujnpepetlauhq̃ qujntlacujcujlique, qujntlatepevilique, qujnpetztoccauhque.

Auh in Espanoles nonqua qujntetenque, qujuvivipanque, ic on tolcellome, ic õ mezttallome, ic on acaxilome ic on tolcellutl innacaio, yoan qujnçaçacque in mamaça in temamanj intoca cavallome.

Auh in jxqujch in intlatquj in tlamamalchichiuhtiuh muchi namoieloc, muchi maceoaloc, in aqujn ●727 all was claimed as booty. He who came upon something, took it, whatever it was; he appropriated it, carried it off on his back, and took it to his home. And on the very place where there were the killings, all—whatsoever it was—which they had gone from and left in fear, and much war equipment, were there stolen: the lombard guns, the arquebuses. And some lay there strewn: gunpowder, iron swords, iron lances, halberds, iron crossbows, and iron bolts lay scattered. And also there were looted iron helmets, corselets of iron and of chain mail, and leather, iron,[1] and wooden shields. And there were claimed as booty the bars and plates of gold, and gold dust, and golden necklaces with pendants.

And when all had been pillaged, thereupon all dispersed into the water and, severally, searched for things, some using their hands, some using their feet.

And as they had set forth, those in the lead had been able to escape. But those who had closed the march, those fell [into the canal] and sank in the water. All had died. It seemed as if verily mountains of [dead] men had been formed. They had pressed against one another and indeed slain themselves, smothered.

726 And while this was going on, there at Acueco [the Spaniards] had slept; still at night, yet well toward the dawn, they arose, bedight themselves, and girt themselves for battle. Each put on his war array. Thereupon they departed, moved on, and placed themselves in order. And the Mexicans took after them, shouting and crying out—following after them only at a distance, keeping after them from there. And when they reached another place, called Calacoayan, on top of a rounded hill, on a small rise, where there were rows of rocks,[2] there they set upon and slew the people, spearing them. The people there were unwarned, these Calacoayan folk. Without notice they were slain. [The Spaniards] vented and loosed their wrath upon them. And when they had put the people to death, thereupon they came down below and occupied the flat lands, the small plain called Tiçapan. After this they climbed up to Teocalhueyacan.

çaço tlein ipan oquijçato, quicuitivetzi, quimotechtia, quimoamaltia quitquj in jchan, yoan vel ipan nemjmjctiloc in jxquich in çaço tlein oquimauhcacauhtiquizque yoan mjec in iautlatquitl in vncan namoieloc in tomaoac tlequiquiztli in matlequiquiztli, yoan cequj vncan tepeoac, vncan tepeuh in tlequiquiztlalli, in tepuzmaquavitl, in tepuztopilli in tzinacantopilli, in tepuztlavitolli, in tepuzmitl: yoã no vncan macoaloc in tepuzquacalalatli, in tepuzvipilli, in tepuzmatlavipilli, in coachimalli, in tepuchimalli, in quauhchimalli: yoan vncan momaceuh in teucuitlatl in tlaxantectli, yoan teucuitlacomalli, yoan teucuitlatl tlaxaqualolli, yoan in chaiaoac coxcatl teucuitlaio.

Auh in ic ixquich in otlanamoieloc, nimã ie ic onnetepeoalo in atlan, netlatetemolilo, cequitin tlamatemoa, cequitin tlacuitemoa.

Auh inic quizque in iacattiaque, ie vel quizque: auh in ça tlatzacutiaque, iehoantin in motepetivique in matlanvique, mochintin mjcque vel iuhquj tlacatepetl motlali monenepanotoque, çan moetechmjctique, mjhiomjctiq̃:

auh in ie iuhquj in vncã acueco, in oncochque, oc veca iowan oc vellavizcalpan in meuhq̃, in mochichiuhque. in moiauchichiuhque, in õmaaquique in iautlatquitl: njman ie ic oneoa, onolinj, õmotema. Auh in mexica quimjcavatztivi quimoiovitivi, aocmo intech onaci, ça vecapa quimjtztivi ça quin vecapa vitivi, ça quinnachcapavitivi. Auh in onacique cecnj, itocaiocan calacoaian, tlamjmjlolticpac, tlacpactonco, in vncã tecuecuentla, vncã õtemjctitiquizque onteixilque, amo quimjmachitique in vncan tlaca, in calacoaiantlaca, amo innemachpan in mjctiloque, intech motlavelquixtique, intech mellelquixtique. Auh in ontemjctique: nimã ie ic ontemo in tlanj, connamjquj in tlalpechtli, in jxtlaoatontli: itoca, Tiçapan: njman ie ic ontleco Teucalhujacan.

1. Tepuzmitl: read tepuzmitl.
2. See Pl. 98.

726 slept at this time. Here was the place to which [the Mexicans] went in order to return, when the Spaniards showed their heels to and turned their backs upon them.

766 Upon this, then were identified the chieftains who
● 727 had died, who had been speared. There they burned all of them. And their charred [remains] they gathered up; they collected the bones of each of them. They heaped them all up and then buried them: they buried them in the earth.

Auh in ic iuhquj: njmã ic ic teiizimacho in tiacaoan in omjcque, in oxiziloaque, vncan qujntlatique in jaqujchtin: auh in intecullo qujpepena, in jmomjo qujnenechicoaia, coolokoaia, çatepã contocaia, contlaltocaia.

805 And these are all the days since the Spaniards came to and entered Mexico, on One Wind of the day count and One Reed of the year count, on the eve of the tenth day of Quecholli. And when they had tarried one day, Two House, at that very time it was the tenth day of Quecholli. And when they came to the end of Quecholli, when it was the actual feast day, thereupon after it followed Panquetzaliztli, with twenty days.[4] Then after it came Tititl, also with twenty days. Then followed after it Izcalli tlamj,[5] also with twenty days. Then, at that time, set in the five days known as Nemontemj. And when the five days came to an end, then began Atl caualo, or Quauitl eua, in which the year returned[6] —in which began the new year—also of twenty [days]. Then came after it Tlacaxipeualiztli, also of twenty [days]. Then followed after it Toçoztontli, also of twenty [days]. Then proceeded after it Uei toçoztli, also of twenty [days]. Then came after it Toxcatl, also of twenty days. This was when the chieftains perished: when they were cut to pieces, when the Mexicans were put to death. Then followed after it Etzalqualiztli, also of twenty days. Then came after it Tecuilhuitontli. This was when [the foe] set forth; upon an opportune day, the Spaniards set out, to disappear by night without the knowledge of [the Mexicans]; without its being their will, they set forth by night. And when the count of all the days is added, they are two hundred and thirty-five. And they had been our friends for one hundred and ninety-five days. And they were our foes for forty days.

Auh in ic iuhquj: njmã ic ic teiizimacho in tiacaoan in omjcque, in oxiziloaque, vncan qujntlatique in jaqujchtin: auh in intecullo qujpepena, in jmomjo qujnenechicoaia, coolokoaia, çatepã contocaia, contlaltocaia.

Auh in inquilhujtico in Mexico inic calaqujco in Españoles: ipã ce hecatl in cemjlhujtlapoalli: auh in xiuhtonalli ce acatl, oc muztla tlamatlactiz Quecholli: auh in cemjlhujtique vme calli: vel iquac in tlamatlacti quecholli: auh in oncic, tlamj quecholli in vel ilhujtl: njman ie ic qujoaltoqujlia in Panquetzaliztli, cempoalilhujtl: njmã qujvaltoqujlia Tititi no cempoalilhujtl: njman qujvaltoqujlia Jzcalli tlamj, no cempoalilhujtl: njmã iquac valmotlalia macujlilhujtl moteneoa Nemontemj: auh in ontzonquja macujlilhujtl: njmã ic vmpeoa in Atl cavalo, anoço quauitl eua, vncã xiuhqujtzqujlo, vncan peoa in iancujc xivitl, no cempoalli: njmã qujoaltoqujlia tlacaxipeoaliztli no cempoalli: njman qujvaltoqujlia Toçoztontli, no cempoalli: njman qujvaltoqujlia vei toçoztli, no cempoalli: vncan qujvaltoqujlia Toxcatl no cempoalilhujtl: ie vncan inpoliuhque Tiacaoan in xaxamacaque, in mexica in mjcoac: njmã qujvaltoqujlia Etzalqualiztli, no cempoalilhujtl: njman qujvaltoqujlia Tecuilhujtontli, ie vncan in qujzque, vel ipan in ilhujtl in qujzque in Españoles, in moioalpoloque, amo tenemachpan, amo iuh catca teiollo inic qujzque ioaltica. Auh injc mocempoa in jaqujlhujtique matlacpoalli oçe, oncaxtolli: auh in tocnjoan catca chicunapoalilhujtl on caxtolli. Auh in toiaovan catca vmpoalilhujtl:

And when the Spaniards had thus gone, it was therefore thought that in truth they had departed forever, that indeed once and for all they had left—

Auh in oiuh iaque in Españoles: iuh nemachoc in ca oiccen iaque, in ca iccen oiaque, aocmo cepa valmocuepaque, aocmo cippa imjlloch qujchiouaa-

4. The Aztec year skips Atemoztli.

5. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II—The Conversion, p. 134.

6. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., VII—The Sun, Moon, and Stars, and the Binding of the Years, p. 25; Sahagún, Bulmarda ed., II, p. 300.

726 Thirty-fourth Chapter, in which is told how the Mexicans took captive and seized fifteen[1] Spaniards.

"O Mexicans, onward!"

On this, the sentinel raised a war cry. [Shell] trumpets were sounded, and they charged with shield.

Thereupon they took after the Spaniards, they followed dispersing them and taking captives. Fifteen of the Spaniards were seized. Then they brought them in. And their boats [the enemy] withdrew, going to stand by in the middle of the lagoon.

●727 And when they had brought the eighteen where they were to die, there at the place called Tlacochcalco,[2] they thereupon stripped them; they took from them all their arms and their cotton armor, and all which was on them. All they tore from them. Then they were made slaves; they slew them. And their companions remained watching them from the middle of the lagoon.[3]

726 And at one time they put in two of their boats there at Xocotitlan.[4] When they had landed, thereupon they went looking in the settlement of the people of Xocotitlan. And Tzilacatzin and other chieftains, when they saw the Spaniards, set upon them and sent them fleeing, casting stones at them as they went. They came to chase the Spaniards into the water.

And another time [the Spaniards] brought their boats there to Coyonacazco[5] to wage war and give battle. And on arriving, then some Spaniards came out. Leading them came Castañeda Xicotencatl,[6] who walked wearing his [device of] quetzal feather Injc cempoalli onnauhtlactli onnavi capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn ichoantin Mexica tlamaque in qujmacique Españoles caxtolti.

Mexicae ma ic cuel:

njman ic ic tlacaoaca, yoan tlapitzalo yoan chimalloça in iautlachjaquj:

njman ic ic qujntoca in Españoles, qujmaiauhtivi yoã qujmantivi, caxtoltin in anoque in Españoles: njmã ic qujnoalhujcaque: auh in jmacal njmã ic qujtzinqujxtique, anepantla contecato.

Auh in oqujmaxitico caxtoltin omei in vncan mjqujxque itoca: tlacuchcalco: njmã ic ic qujnpepetlaoa, much qujncujlique in iniautlatquj, yoã in jmjchcavipil, yoan in jnqujch in intech catca, moch qujntepeoaltique: njman ic ic tlacoti qujnmjctia: auh in jmjcnjoan qujnvalizztoque anepantla.

Auh ceppa qujcalaqujque vnteti in imacal in vmpa xocotitll: in oconacanque, njmã ic ic vmpa itztivi in incalla xocotieca. Auh in Tzilacatzin, yoan oc cequjntin tiacaoan: in oqujmittaque in Españoles: njman intech oalietiqujzque, qujnoallalochtocaque, qujntepachotivi, atlan qujnteponaco in Españoles.

Auh ic no ceppa qujoalhujcaque in jmacal in vncan coionacazco injc tlaiecozque, injc mjcalizque. Auh in oacico njman ic valqujzque cequjntin Españoles, qujnvaliacan in castañeda xicotencatl: iquetzaltemal ietinemj. Nimã ic ic vallatepuzmjvia: auh

1. Eighteen are mentioned later. Cf. also Bustamante, op. cit., p. 189 (chapter heading). The corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex has fifteen.

2. Bustamante, loc. cit.: "en que estaba una casa que era como casa de audiencia, cerca de donde agora es la Iglesia de Santa Ana."

3. Corresponding Spanish text: "los caracoles los compusieron delante del pueblo que se llamaba Mixiffuacan y los otros españoles estaban enfrente donde los mexicanos estaban los mataban."

4. Bustamante, op. cit., p. 190: "que es agora [el barrio de] S. Francisco." Cano (op. cit.) says it is the same as Cihuatempan, in Mexico-Tlatelolco.

5. Bustamante, loc. cit.: "cerca del barrio de Sta. Lucía (que por otro nombre se llama Amaxac)." Cano (op. cit.) identifies Coyonacazco as a part of the barrio of Tlaxcoaltitlan, to the north in Tlatelolco. R. H. Barlow ("Cinco días de los años de Tlatelolco," Tlatelolco a través de los tiempos, IX [1947], p. 32) places it "en lo bajo de la ermita del Peñonzuelo de Hidalgo." A map in Armendáriz Espejo and R. H. Barlow: "El plano más antiguo de Tlatelolco," Tlatelolco a través de los tiempos, I (1944), shows it in the northeast part of the city.

6. Bustamante, loc. cit.: "Dadiego de Castañeda (él quiere los indios llamaban Xicotencatl, por nombre por sobrenombre)."

95

726 Thirty-fifth Chapter. Here is related how once again the Mexicans took captives and seized Spaniards, and, as counted, the captured Spaniards [were] fifty-three. And also [were taken] many men of Tlaxcalla, Texcoco, Chalco, and Xochimilco. Also [it is told] how they slew all in sacrifice there before those which were their gods.

And when this had come to pass, then the chieftains who had been crouched, together fell upon them; they fell upon them from their ambush in the spears among houses. And the Spaniards, when they saw this, [were] as if drunk. Thereupon were
727 captives made. Many men of Tlaxcalla, Acolhua-
726 can, Chalco, Xochimilco, etc., were taken. Verily, myriads of captives were made and men slain. Truly, they forced the Spaniards into the water, and indeed all the [allied] people.

And the road became very slippery. It could no longer be traveled; each one could only slip and slide. And the captives were dragged along. Here in this place the [Spaniards'] standard was taken. Here it was seized. Those of Tlatiluico took it. It was captured there where now is [the church] named San Martin. But [the Spaniards] showed no concern over it; they were not troubled over it.[1] And others escaped [the Mexicans'] hands. They went leaving them exhausted at Colhuacatonco,[2] at the edge of the canal. There they retired to establish themselves.

727 And after this they took the captives there to Yacacolco. They were urged forward; they went surrounding their captives. One went weeping; one singing; one crying war cries while striking the mouth with the palm of the hand. And when they had been brought to Yacacolco, thereupon they were placed in rows, in files. One by one they proceeded to the small pyramid, where they were slain. First went the Spaniards. They took the lead. But all those of the [allied] cities came only last, following. And when they had been slain, then they strung the Inje omppoalli on caxtolli capitulo: vncan motenecoa, in quenjn ie no oppa tlamaque mexica in quimacique Españoles, in jnh mopouhque in axivaque Españoles, ontecpátli onmatlactli omei; yoā no mjequjn tlaxcalteca, Tetzcuca, chalca, xuchmjlca. Auh in quenjn muchtin, vncā quinmjctique in injxpan in Teuoan catca./.

Auh in ie iuhquj in jxqujchtin tiiacuvan, nec quivalontlaça in ontopachotoca, caltzalanli quivalototocatiquijxque. Auh in Españoles in oquiztaque ça iuhquin tlavique: njman ie ic tlamalo, mjequjntin in axivaque in tlaxcalteca, in ácolhoeque, in chalca, in xuchmjlca, &c. vel tonacatlamaloc, tonácamjcoac, vel atlan quinnemjtique in Españoles, yoā in ie ixqujch tlacatl:

auh in vtli vel petzcauhtimoquetz, aoc vel nenemoa, ça nepepetzcolo, ça nexalanalo. Auh in mamaltin tevivilanoc ie vncan in, in axioac in vandera, vncan anoc: iehoantin cacić in Tlatiluica: vncan in macic, in ie xxcan sanct Martin moteneoa: çan atle ipā quittaque, amo ōnecujtlaviloc. Auh in oc cequjntin tematitlampa quijxque: vmpa quimōciauhcavato in colhoacatonco, acalotenco, vmpa valmomanato.

Auh njmā ie ic qujnvica in mamaltin in vmpa iacacolco, tetototzalo, quimololhujtivi in immālhoan, in aca chocatiuh, in aca cujcatiuh, in aca motenvitectiuh. Auh in onnexxitiloc iacaculco: njmā ie ic tevipano, tevipanolo, oceniaca oniatinanj in mumuxco, in vncan tlamjctilo, iacattiać in Españoles, coniacatique: auh ça vntlatzacujque, ontlatoquijlique in ixqujchtin altepeoaque. Auh in ontlamjctiloc, nec quinquaquauhço in ītzonteccon in Españōles: no quiçoçoque in cavalloome intzōtecon, tlatzintlan in quitecaque: auh in intzonteccon Españoles tlacpac

1. It was captured by an Indian from Tlatiluico named Tlapanecatl or Tlapanecatl Ixcuitin, according to the version in Bustamante, op. cit., pp. 191-192; here it is said that this captain preceded the capture of the fifty-three Spaniards.

2. A barrio in the Parroquia de Sta. María la Redonda Cuepopan or Tlaquetzalcuan; now bounded N. by Calle del Organo; E., República de Chile; S., Perú; W., Alhondiga (approximately). — Cano, op. cit.

●727 [severed] heads of the Spaniards, each one, on the [horizontal] stavas [of the skull rack]. They also strung up the heads of the horses, arranging them below, while the heads of the Spaniards were above.[9] It appeared as if they were strung facing the [rising] sun. But [as for] all the various [allied] people, they did not string up the heads of the people of distant provinces. And fifty-three Spaniards were captured, and four horses.

in onoca, in çopotoca, çonatiuh quiçanmijctoca. Auh in jnquijch nepapan tlacatl, amo quinçoçoqui: in innonacto in voca tlaca. auhqui xiuhmqui Españoles centecpanxili onmatlactli onei, yoan nauhtetl cavallos.

726 Nevertheless, in all places watch was kept. There was fighting. Not because of [this success] did posting of watchmen cease. Everywhere those of Xochimilco went hemming us in, in their boats. On both sides were captives taken; on both sides there was killing.

auh tel noviian tlatlapiclo, necaliuo: amo ic mocaoa in tlapiclizti, in noviian techiaoalotinemj ic xochmjlca in acaltica, nocochimpa tlamalo, nococampa mjoua.

722 262 And all the common folk suffered torments of famine. Many died of hunger. No more did they drink pure, clean water[4] — only brackish water did they drink. Of it many people died, and many people therefore [suffered from] a bloody flux, of which they died. And all was eaten — lizards and swallows; and maize straw,[5] and salt-grass.[6] And they ate calorin wood,[7] and they ate the glue orchid,[8] and the frilled flower;[9] and tanned hides, and buckskin, which they roasted, baked, toasted, or burned, so that they could eat them; and they gnawed sedum,[10] and mud bricks.[11] Never had there been

[137]

Auh in jnquijch macevalli, cenca tlaihiovizia mainoia, mjec in mapiztmjquijli aocmo quja in quallitl, in ecatl, çe tequjzquijtl in qtoja ic mjec tlacatl momjquijli, yoã mjec tlacatl ic tlaelli quijtlaz in mjc: yoan much qualoc in cuetzpolin, in cujcujtzcatl, yoan Eloçacatl, yoan in tequjzquijçacatl: yoan quijquaquaque in tzompanquavitl, yoan quijquaquaque in tzacuxchitl, yoan in tlaquijli, yoan in cuetlaxtli yoan in maçeoatl, quijtletoatzaia, quimocaqujaia quijtotoporzaia, quitotoponjaia inic quijquaia yoã in tetzmeti, yoan in xaxatl qujetzaoaia: aoc tle inhquj inic tlaihiovilloc, temamauhti in tzaqualoc, vel tonac

---

3. Corresponding Spanish text: "Los capitanes eran diez . . . los otros indios eran buenos . . . los caballos eran buenos."

4. Ibid., op. cit., p. 570, omits this passage.

5. Huapatl: leaves, or straw, of maize, which Mexicans cattle eat, green or dry; in other words, the plant itself after the maize grains have been harvested (personal communication, Rafael Garcia Granados). — In Sahagún (Bustamante ed.), III, pp. 271-272, it is described as "hierba . . . es muy verde y tiene parecido como el trigo, y es blanco, edionda las comejan y eran animales." Kennett, op. cit., p. 239, describing it as a diuretic and purgative, suggests "maize straw" as a name.

6. Tequizquipatl: probably pasture or, either lands, of the variety called "grama," creeps over the ground, putting forth small roots (personal communication, Rafael Garcia Granados). — For this, Sahagún, op. cit., p. 271, has "hierba muy dulzera y sabrosa, que se hace en tierra salitrosa . . . es buena para ganado." Kennett, op. cit., p. 223, citing Hernández (op. cit.), calls it "zacate grama or crecido grass, possibly Distichlis spicata (L.) Greene. Grama (tequizquipatl) in Molina, op. cit.). Bustamante (op. cit., II, p. 51) identifies as Paniceum repens L., very abundant in the Amazonas.

7. Tzompanquauitl. According to Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 273), "es árbol medianos, tiene ramas arrugadas, tiene la cepa redonda y de buen parecer, dicen unos flores que es Eritrina corallodendrón; son muy colorados y de buen parecer y no tienen olor ninguno; los hojas de este árbol es Eritrina corallodendrón"; p. 348: "Tzquauitl. árbol, flor y fruto del Colorín. Erythrina corallodendron. D.C. Leguminosas." Bustamante, op. cit., III, p. 321, giving the same botanical identification and E. americana Mill., adds the current common name (zompanxochitl), and observes of the bean (colorín) that it is "veneno de pajarillo cojo, dicen que envenena sus chichichis muy peligrosos."

8. Tzacuxchitl. Bustamante, op. cit., p. 300, calling it a "glue flower," identifies it as Bletia campanulata La Llave and Lex. (?), Epidendrum pastorio La Llave and Lex. (?), Gymnosiphon macrolepis Kunth (?) — all orchids. Hernández, op. cit., II, pp. 375-376: Tzacuxochitl o tzacuhili flexible. Bletia campanulata La Llave y Lex, or B. coccinea La Llave y Lex.

9. Tlaquilli. In Molina, op. cit., tlaquilli is glandé or stamen. Tlaquilli, however, is given by Kennett, op. cit., p. 224, as "frilled flower" — probably Mirabilis jalapa L., known as marvellis. It is conditional. Bustamante, op. cit., III, p. 346, adds these common names: San Diego de la noche, arrebolera, and trompadilla.

10. Tetzmeti. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 249, says it is like xamaitlin: "hojas muy verdes y carnosas y colorados, y sembrado encima hecho, y tiene las mismas colores. . . . olores . . . dulce, y aspera y burguillas . . . la hacen de una vara redondo" (conditional). Kennett identifies it as Sedum dendroideum Moçiño and Sessé—commonly, siempreviva (op. cit., p. 223). Bustamante, op. cit., III, p. 85, adds S. quitense H. B. K. and S. cremeum Benth.

11. Cf., however, Ibid., op. cit., p. 556: "and Stock and Leder und Hirschhaut, de bríncos, hojas, rámanos, brocanos, asaron se en, and Tzacuxtlaquia and Lehmziegel and asaron Tecuxal." Of tecuxal or tecuxil, Sahagún (op. cit., p. 289) says it is a hot country plant used for coloring. Bustamante, op. cit., III, p. 143 (tecuxcatl), says it is "semillas redondas de varios plantas medicinales, como el capulincillo o tlápan (Cornus sericea), el tecuxquite (Mimosa lacelgana, y otros."

100 -

Fortieth Chapter. Here is told how the men of Tlatilulco and Tenochtitlan and their leaders yielded to the Spaniards,[1] and what befell when they were among them.

And when they had betaken themselves to bring him and disembark him, thereupon all the Spaniards came to see. They drew him along; the Spaniards took him by the hand. After that they took him up to the roof-top, where they went to stand him before the Captain, the war leader. And when they had proceeded to stand him before [Cortés], they looked at Quauhtemoc, made much of him, and stroked his hair. Then they seated him with [Cortés] and fired the guns. They hit no one with them, but only made them go off above, [so that] they passed over the heads of the common folk.[2] Then [some Mexicans] took and got into a boat and guided it there to the house of Coyoueuetzin.[3] And when they arrived, then they climbed up to the roof-top, whereupon once again they slew men and many died there. But [the Mexicans] only fled. With this the war reached its end.

Then there was shouting; they said: "Enough! Let it end! Eat grass!" When they heard this, the common folk thereupon issued forth. On this, they went, even into the lagoon.

And as they departed, leaving by the great road, once more they there slew some,[4] wherefore the Spaniards were wroth that still some again had taken up their obsidian-bladed swords and their shields. Those who dwelt in house clusters went straightway to Amaxac; they went direct to where the ways divide. There the common folk separated. So many[5] went toward Tepeyacac, so many toward Xonoulitlán, so many toward Nonoalco. But toward Xolloco and toward Maçanintamalco no one went.

Inic ompoalli capítulo vnca mjtoa in quenjn ie- 728 hoantin tlatilulca yoã tenuchca yoan in intlatocauh in intlan oncalacque Espanoles: auh in tlein muchiuh in jquac ie intlã cate./.

Auh in oconaxitito in ocontlalhoacaquiztito: nj-man ie ic much vallachis in Españoles, quivalanque, inmatiech quivalanque in Españoles njman ie ic quitlecavia in tlapanco ixpan conquetzato in Capitan in iautachcauh. Auh in oixpan conquetzato, njmã ie ic quitta, quimoottitia, quipepepetla in Quauh-temoctzin: njman ic itlan quitlalique yoan contlanque in tlequipqujztli, aiac ic quimotlaque, çan impan quipqujztique çan jmjcpac quiz in macevalti: njman ic cẽtetl convicaque, concalaquique in acalli: vmpa cõvicaque in jchan Coioveuetzin. Auh in oacique:
njmã ic tlecoque in tlapanco: njman ie ic no ceppa temjctia mjec in vncan mjc: auh çã choloque, çan jc vmpolivito in iniiol:

nec valtzatzion: quiton. Ie inquich ma quiton, 727● xicmoquaktitin in quiltzintli: in oiuh quicacque in njman ie ic oneua in macevalli: njman ie ic vi, çan atlan.

Auh in oquijçato vei vtli ipan, ie no ceppa ocquin vmpa quinmjctia, ic qualique in Españoles in oc no çan ocquintin quitquj in iuamaquauh yoan inchimal:
in calla onoca quivalmelauhque in amaxac vallamelaoa, in vncain vei vmaxac: vncan xexelitiuh in mace-valli, inquich tepeiacac itztia, inquich xonoulititlã itztia, inquich nonoalco itztia. Auh in xolloccopa, yoan in maçatzintamalcopa, aiac vmpa itztia.

1. Reproduce the title is omitted in the MS.

2. Probably an auxiliary salvo, without projectiles; we know that Cortés used this ruse to impress the Indians. Perhaps this time it was to fire over the end of the war (personal communication, Rafael Ortiz Gonzalez).

3. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 765, implies that they brought a cannon (tlamaxac cuauhtli). What appears to be the corresponding Spanish text reads: "quando este cuauhtli salieron dos canones de manbarcar y entraron en la casa de un principal que se llamaba Coioueuetzin."

4. Corresponding Spanish text: "desde entonces se mataron algunos indios de los amigos de los españoles muchos."

5. So many: Barrera, op. cit. 62, however, Molina, op. cit.

727 481 And all who lived in boats and [in houses] on poles, and those at Tolmayecan,[6] went into the water. On some, the water reached to the stomach; some, to the chest; and on some it reached to the neck. And some were all submerged, there in the deeps. Little children were carried on the backs [of their elders]; cries of weeping arose. Some went on happy and rejoicing as they traveled crowding on the road. And those who owned boats, all the boatmen, left by night, and even [continued to] leave all day. It was as if they pushed and crowded one another as they set out.

Auh in jaquijch acalica onoca yoan in tlapechco catca, yoan in tolmaiecan çan ailan in iaque: in aca ixillan acitiuh in atl, in aca ielchiquipan, in aca iquechtlan acitiuh: auh in aca vel polaquj, in vacan vecatlan: in pipiltzitzinti temamamalo, tlachoquiztlesa: cequjnti mopapaquiltitivi, maaviehtitivi: in oonnacpanoto vtli Auh in acalaque, in jaquijch acale ça ioalica in quijs, yoã tel cemjlhujtl in çujaque iuhquijn moquequentivi injc vi.

727 And everywhere the Spaniards were seizing and robbing the people. They sought gold; as nothing did they value the green stone, quetzal feathers, and turquoise. [The gold] was everywhere in the bosoms or in the skirts of the wretched women. And as for the men, it was everywhere in their breech clouts and in their mouths.

Auh in jaquijcan antica tetlatlaçaltiaia in Españoles in teucujtlatl quijtemoa amo tle ipan quijtta, in chalchivitl, in quetzalli yoan in xivitl: novian nemja in ixtilla in incuetitlan, in cinatzitzinti. Auh in toquijchtin novian nemj ih imaxtlatitlan, yoan in iscamac yoan quijmanaia, quijnpepenaia in Cioa in chipavaque, in Cuztic innacaio in cuztique. Auh in cequjntin cioa injc motetlaçaltiaia, mjcoqujvique, yoan tatapatli in quijmocuetiq̃ tnotzomatli in quijmovipilhique, çan moch tnotzomatli in intech quijtlalique.

And [the Spaniards] seized and set apart the pretty women — those of light bodies, the fair[-skinned] ones.[7] And some women, when they were [to be] assaulted, covered their faces with mud and put on old, mended skirts and rags for their shifts. They put all rags on themselves.

And also some men were singled out — those who were strong, grown to manhood, and next the young boys, of whom they would make messengers, who would be their servants, and who were known as their runners. And on some they burned [brand marks] on their cheeks; on some they put paint on their cheeks; on some they put paint on their lips.

Auh no cequjntin pepenaloque in toquijchtin iehoantin in chicaoaque in iniolloco oquijchtin yoã in quijn telpupuchtotonti in qujntitlanjzque, in intitlanvan icaque, in motenoa intlamacazcaoan: cequjntin njmã quijncamatlatiq̃ cequjntin quijncamaicujloque: cequjntin quijntenjcujloque.

And when the shield was laid down, when we gave way, it was the year Three House and the day sign was One Serpent.

Auh in omomã chimalli: injc tiititinque, in xiuhtonalli ei calli. Auh in cemjlhujtlepoalli ce coatl:

728 And when Quauhtemoc went to deliver himself, up, they then took him, after nightfall, to Acachinanco. And on the morrow, when already a little sun shone, once more the Spaniards, a good many of them, came forth likewise to put an end [to the fray] — girt for war, [in] iron corselets and iron helmets, but not with their iron swords nor their shields. They all only pressed white linen cloths against their noses as they passed by; [for] the dead sickened them; they already smelled foul and stank.

Auh in jquac in ômotemacato in Quauhtemoctzin: njmã quijvicaque in acachinanco in ie ioa. Auh in jmantlaioc in ie achiton tonatiuh, ie no ceppa valaque in Españoles: vel mjequjntin, no çan iuh tlantivitze, in tlemuchichiu'tivitze, tepanvipilli, in tepanpacalaloti: auh aoc tle in intepanmaquauh, yoan aoc tle in inchimal, ça muchintin valmoiacapachotiaque intac canaoac ica quijtlaichtinia in mjmjoque in ie iyaia, in ie petenj:

6. Cinc, op. cit., mentions Tolmayecan (Tolmayecan?) as probably the same as Aquiaca.

7. Literally, of yellow bodies, the yellow ones.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

651 632 Tlacotepec gave "seeds" (chian ?) among other items, which are not specified.[28]

[567 721] Zompanco sent prisoners of war to Mexico as slaves.[29] These must have been Yope prisoners, destined to be sacrificed, like those sent from Anecuilco in the province of Çihuatlan. Prisoners taken on the Oztoma frontier were usually sacrificed in the temple of the fortress, we learn, but if captives were important, they were sent to Mexico to be sacrificed.[30]

3. Tlachco

SOURCES OF THE MAP

635 131 The province of Tlachco, now Taxco, is depicted on the fourteenth page of the Matricula, copied on folio 36' of the Codex Mendocino. This province was situated in territory now forming the northern tip of the State of Guerrero and contained ten towns. Whereas the Matricula annotator identified only the town of Tlachco, the Mendocino identifies all towns in roman letters. The present map is based on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México." Former and present place names as given in the Mendocino and on the modern map are listed below:

103

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Acamilyxtlahuacã, 6	Acamixtla
Chontalcoatlan, 9	[No change]
Nochtepec, 7	Noxtepec
Teotliztacan, 2	Huiztac
Tetenanco (? 5)	[See Remarks on Towns]
Teticpac, 8	Tetipac
Tlachco, 3	Taxco Viejo
Tlamacazapã, 4	Tlamacazapa
Tzicapuçalco, 1	Ixcapuzalco

One town has not been identified: Tepexahualco.

We may add the town of Çacualpã (10).

[28] "Moteçuma enbio un capitan ... para que coxiese el tributo y semyllas que le trebutavan" (PNE, 6: 123).

[29] "Estavan subjetos a Monteccuma ... y le serbia este pueblo de llevarle esclavos de los [que] tomavan en la guerra, y que est, le llevavan en rreconoçimiento" (PNE, 6: 317).

[30] "Relación de Acapetlahuaya" (1579), in PNE, 6: 117: "Dixeron que todos los presos que tomavan los sacrificaron en el templo prençipal del fuerte grande, y si era persona prençipal la que prendian la embiavan a Mexico presentada a su rrey para que alla la sacrificasen."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

Only in the northeast was there any contact with enemy terrain. 635
There Tetela and Hueyapan are described as frontier towns,[] while 131 memory of conflict with the dwellers of the plateau also persisted in Totolapan and adjacent towns well within the province.[]

Regional names.—The zone of the towns specified as Xochimilca, together with near-by Atlatlauca, was called Quauhtengo.[] South of Yacapichtla lay another district referred to as the Tlalnahuac, in which Tlayacac and Tecpaçinco were prominent centers.[]

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—In the Matricula we see, and in the 651
Mendocino we read of, the following opulent tribute which flowed to the Triple Alliance from the province of Huaxtepec:

CLOTHING [291]

400 bundles of loincloths
400 bundles of women's clothing
1,400 bundles of large mantles of "twisted" cloth
8,000 bundles of rich little mantles
46 warriors' costumes with shields (6 being fine pieces)* [714]

FOOD*

4 large wooden cribs (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli) [262]

OTHER GOODS

2,000 polished pottery dishes of various colors [323
8,000 reams of native paper 289]

Tribute of the component towns.—Rather curiously, no details are 632 available on the origins of the foregoing tribute, military aid and 651 prisoners alone being mentioned. [727]

[*] PNE, 6: 286.

[*] Atlatlauca, Totolapan, and Tlayacapan "trayan guerras" with "Chalco, Guexoçingo, Tazcala, Chelula; las quales heran sobre sus tierras" (PNE, 6: 9). We read in Lehmann, Die Geschichte der Königreiche von Colhuacan und Mexico (1938), §§ 1202–1203, how the people of Totolapan accompanied Nezahualpilli in a successful campaign against Huexotzinco in 11. Tochtli, 1490.

[*] "Estan las dichas tres cabezeras asentadas en tierra llana, çercadas de montes y sierras no muy altos: llamase la Probincia Quahutengo, y dixose asi porque los mas de sus subjetos estan poblados en montes, y en la dicha lengua se dize el monte quahutla o quahutengo" (PNE, 6: 10).

[*] RHE, 1: 224: "Los pueblos de la tlalnahuac son catorze cabeçeras caen casi todas desta villa [Yacapichtla] á la parte del sur dizen llamarse asi porque es tierra llana y mas caliente questa la una cabeçera dizen que antiguamante no abia mas de dos cabeçeras que heran tequepaçinco y tlayalaque y que los demas heran estançias y asi agora se nombran catorze cabeçeras."

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

651 Atlatlauca, Totolapan, and Tlayacapan gave no tribute because they 632 were near the frontier, as mentioned above.[80]

[727] Yacapichtla seems to have made a tribute of prisoners.[81]

24. Tlalcoçauhtitlan

SOURCES OF THE MAP

635 Page 18 of the Matricula depicts three provinces, their town glyphs 114 and tribute being ranged in vertical sections. The left-hand section, in which the cabecera is identified in roman letters, sets forth the province of Tlalcoçauhtitlan. This part of the page is copied in the Codex Mendocino as the top section of folio 40'. The province lay in central-eastern Guerrero and consisted of eight towns, four of which have [128] been identified—chiefly on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society (sheet "Ciudad de México"). Former and present name forms are listed below:

103

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Ahuaçiçinco, 4	Ahuacuotzingo
Mitzinco, 3	Mitlalcingo
Tlalcoçauhtitlã, 2	Tlalcozotitlán
Tolimani, 1	Tulimán

Four other towns remain to be located: Quauhtecomaccinco, Tepuztitlã, Ychcatlan, and Çacatla.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

632 Quauhtecomaccinco, according to one lone reference, was four leagues
131 from Olinalá.[82]

Tepuztitlan may be a Tepuztlan San Miguel, subject to Chiautla, from which it lay eight leagues distant.[83]

Ychcatlan was four leagues from Tlalcoçauhtitlan "de muy mal camino de sierras"[84] and eighteen leagues from Tlapan, being an estancia of Tenango.[85]

---

[80] "El señor natural ... fue Montezuma, al qual no tributaban, porque solo le servian en las guerras" (PNE, 6: 8).

[81] The "Relación de Yecapichtla," after stating (RHE, 1: 225) that "aunque motençuma los quiso señorear no pudo vençellos y asi estuvieron siempre de por si y sobre si," admits (p. 227) that "los que de aquellos prendian los llevaban a presentar a motençuma."

[82] PNE, 5: 210.

[83] GPM, p. 112.

[84] PNE, 5: 250.

[85] GPM, p. 104.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

happened, and not as the historian Gomara has written it, for he says in his history that Pedro de Ircio went to settle at Panuco with certain soldiers. I do not know how, owing to a misunderstanding, so eloquent an historian could make such a statement. All the soldiers that Cortés had with him in Mexico did not number four hundred, and most of them had been wounded in the battles at Tlaxcala and Tabasco and we had not sufficient men to keep a good watch, much less for sending to settle at Panuco. Moreover he says that Pedro de Ircio went as their captain, when he was not a captain and not even an officer at that time, and they did not employ him nor take any notice of him, and he remained with us in Mexico. The same historian also says many other things about the imprisonment of Montezuma. I do not understand his writing, and stare at it when he writes such things in his history, for there must be conquistadores alive who were there at the time, who when they read it will tell him, that this did not take place in such a manner. In this other matter he says what he likes, so let us leave him there and return to our story.

The Mexican Captains after the battle with Escalante that I have spoken about, sent the news of it to Montezuma, and even sent and presented to him the head of Argüello, who it seems died of his wounds on the road, for they had carried him off alive. We heard that when they showed the head, which was large and strong looking and had a large curly beard, to Montezuma, he was terrified and feared to look at it, and ordered that it should not be taken as an offering to any temple in Mexico, but to some other Idol in another town. Montezuma asked his Captains how it was that having such thousands of warriors with them, they had not conquered such a small number of Teules, and they replied that their darts and arrows and hard fighting availed them nothing, and they could not drive their enemy

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

727 to flight because a great Teleçiguata[1] of Castile marched before them, and this Lady frightened the Mexicans and said words to encourage the Teules. Then Montezuma thought that great Lady must be Saint Mary who we had told him was our protector, and whose image, with her precious Son in her arms, we had given to him some time before. However, I did not see this myself, for I was in Mexico, but certain conquistadores who were present say so, and pray God that it was so, and certainly all the soldiers who were with Cortés believed it and so it is true, and the divine pity of Our Lady the Virgin Mary was ever with us, for which I give her many thanks. I will leave off here and go on to narrate what happened about the seizure of the Great Montezuma.

CHAPTER XCV.

Of the Seizure of Montezuma and what was done about it.

000 As we had determined the day before to seize Montezuma, we were praying to God all that night that it would turn out in a manner redounding to His Holy service, and the next morning the way it should be done was settled.

Cortés took with him five captains who were Pédro de Alvarado, Gonzalo de Sandoval, Juan Velásquez de Leon, Francisco de Lugo and Alonzo de Ávila, and he took me and our interpreters Doña Marina and Aguilar, and he told us all to keep on the alert, and the horsemen to have their horses saddled and bridled. As for our arms I need not call them to mind, for by day or night we always went armed and with our sandals on our retreat began on one side, and an equally rapid pursuit on the other.[165] The objective point of this retreat was the settlement or "pueblo" of the attacked tribe, but if the vanquished succeeded in placing between them and their pursuers some natural obstacle, like a river, or deep ravine, or if they took refuge upon a wooded range of steep hills, then the victors were arrested, as they seldom ventured to attack when this attack necessitated a strong simultaneous effort on the part of the whole force.[166] Still less could they execute rapid flank-movements. In course of time they might circumvent certain obstacles, but then their supplies were so limited that, if there was no positive indication of success, either in storming the position without great danger, or in carrying it within a very short time by some rude feint, they preferred to desist from further endeavors, and to return home with whatever spoils the battlefield alone had furnished. Thus they "collared"[167] their captives (which had been carefully watched behind the battle-front) and returned to Mexico in moderate triumph, leaving it to future times to proclaim: that such and such a tribe had been subdued by them, whereas they had only defeated it in one engagement, and the tribe had still preserved afterwards its complete independence.[168]

---

[1] Tequeçihuata in the text.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

"ticitl" a physician or diviner. Both agree very well with the conception of an Indian "medicine-man." There are, besides, evidences that priests went to war also, and I would suggest that it may have been a part of their duties to care for the wounded. A certain class of priests were called "tlamacazqui," certainly derived from "tlama," physician or doctor.

[165] A slow and orderly retreat is a movement hardly known to Indians. They rush either way, advancing or retiring. Even the return of the Mexicans from the unsuccessful onslaught on the Tarasca (Tezozomoc, Cap. LII. p. 84) was as near to a disorderly flight as possible. Durán says (Cap. XXXVII, p. 291): "El rey Axayacatl mandó, "alçar su real, y asi como huyendo y medio afrentado, con la poca gente que le auia "quedada, todo desbaratado y lo mas de la gente herida."

[166] Mendieta (Lib. II, p. 131): "Those who gained the battle continued the pursuit "until the opponents reached some place where they could fortify themselves." Also, Tezozomoc (Cap. XXII, p. 34, and cap. LVII, p. 94).

[167] If, on the battlefield, a captive still resisted, they cut the tendons of his feet, thus rendering him incapable of motion. After the action the prisoners were secured by wooden collars ("cuauh-cozcatl") and thus they were led home in the van of the returning force. Arrived at Mexico they were conducted first to the chief-teocalli, and after prostrating themselves before the idol of Huitzilopochtli, were marched around the great stone of sacrifice. (Compare the relation of Adair, "History of the American Indians," Argument XVI, pp. 165 and 167.—Return of a Chikkasah war party from a foray into Illinois, in 1765.)

[168] Such was the case with Mextitlan (Cap. LVII, p. 94, of Tezozomoc, and Durán, Cap. XL, p. 314). Tizoczic made about 40 prisoners, and returned with the loss of 300 men ("Y que con aquello auian los contrarios recogidose a' sus lugares"). Still it is mentioned by Ixtlilxochitl as subject and tributary to the valley tribes.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Then, but only then, ladders were constructed,[173] and with due precaution and under cover of various [417] 726
feints, the walls were scaled.[174] A regular siege was out of the question, the Mexicans not being provided for a protracted stay outside of their territory. They might lie in wait or hover around the enemy's defenses for a short time, bent upon attempting a surprise of some kind, but if the place could not be carried at a rush in some way the assailants finally had to abandon the attack and return home.[175]

We have heretofore presupposed that the tribe assailed by the Mexicans had been formally challenged, or at least notified of their coming. But this was not always the case. In many instances the Mexicans made their attack without previous warning, and a nocturnal surprise was attempted which was almost sure to succeed.

It is next to superfluous to venture a description of such a nightly onslaught. The scene, like that of the surprise of any settlement whatever by Indians during the hours of darkness, may be faintly imagined, but not adequately told. The main sallies and entries were occupied by the assailants,—creeping up stealthily,—the chief "teo-calli" surrounded, then the war-whoop was raised, and the miserable inhabitants of the pueblo realized at once that they were doomed. Few survivors only remained on such occa- 726
sions, and even these, unless the tribe surrendered at the first on- 727

tutepec had been sacked, the Mexicans moved upon Quetzaltepec, which was well fortified, and whose people sallied forth to meet the Mexicans in the open field three days in succession, until the third day at last they were signally defeated, and the defenses scaled in a rush.

[173] Tezozomoc (Caps. XC and XCI). Durán (Cap. LVI, p. 448). The former describes these ladders ("escalas") minutely, giving their size and the number used.

[174] Tezozomoc speaks of archers posted outside, protecting by a shower of missiles the ascent of the scaling party or parties, while other bodies were burrowing through the wall. Durán gives a more plausible statement (p. 448): "Otro día salió al campo la "gente tepaneca con toda su provincia, que era gran numero de gente, la qual se uvo "tan valerosamente, que no los pudiendo resistir los de la ciudad, se empeçaron a' re-"traer hacia el muro. Montecuma, viendo que los tepanecas peleaban tan valerosamente "y que hacian retirar al enemigo, mandó tocar al arma, y en un punto salió el Mexicano "al campo y por otra parte el tezcucano, y arremetiendo todos de trapel, apellidando "los unos Mexico, Mexico, los otros Tezcuco, Tezcuco, acudieron cada uno por su "parte rompiendo por el exercito de los enemigos; y aunque de las murallas recibiar "gran daño de las piedras grandes y trocos de palos que arrojaban, llegaron a' ella y "arrimando escalas, y otros, como gatos, subieron por ella, y otros cabando por el "cimiento ganaron la primera cerca." This shows that indeed it was carried at a rush.

[175] For this reason the wars with the neighboring tribes of Tlaxcallan, Huexotzinco, and Cholullan, took the shape of regular fights at stated times. A long campaign was out of all question. We may, in the course of this essay, investigate shortly the question of the wars between Mexico and Tlaxcallan, although it is not properly pertaining to the object of the present discussion.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 727 set, were all carried into captivity except such as could escape into the wilderness lying beyond their cultivated areas of soil.[176]

726 175 The Mexicans, however, were not exclusively successful on their numerous forays and expeditions. More than once they met with severe defeats, and on one occasion even, in their attack upon Michhuacan, in 1479, they were so terribly beaten that they never afterwards renewed the attempt.[177]

726 Besides, in their constant wars against the rival confederacy, also of "Nahuatl" stock, at whose head was the tribe of Tlaxcallan or Tlascala, the fortunes of the day often turned against the Mexican invaders, or at least assailants.[178] In the first instance, that of the defeat in Michhuacan, the Mexicans actually fled from the battlefield in consternation, pursued by the victorious enemy across the "war-ground," but no further.[179] The engagements with the tribes of Tlaxcallan, Huexotzinco, or Cholula, were fought so near the valley that even if the Mexicans had been worsted during the day, they could retire quietly and mostly unmolested the next morning.[180] The manner in which such retreats were carried on is hardly known.

[176] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXXIV, p. 148) describes as follows the attack upon Nopallan and Yepatepec: "Arriving at midnight, they moved so secretly that they reached the "royal house, counted the entrances and sallies, ascended to the top of the temple," etc., etc. Then the scouts returned to the main temple, reporting upon what they had found, and when the morning star arose they fell upon the settlement, "each body "moving like a strong wall and with the swiftness of lightning, ... and they "began to slaughter so furiously that neither old people, nor women, nor children "were spared, and they set fire to the houses, also to the temple, so that the place "looked like a volcano." (Compare the reports upon the burning of Schenectady by the French and Indians, in 1690,—contained in vol. I, of "Documentary History of the "State of New York," pp. 297-312.)

[177] Tezozomoc (Cap. LII). Durán (Cap. XXXVII). The date is fixed by Señor Alfredo Chavero, of Mexico, in his valuable essay entitled "Calendario Azteca" (p. 4).

[648] [178] This confederacy consisted of Tlaxcallan and Huexotzinco,—perhaps also Atlixco. Cholula may, to a certain extent, have been included in it, but it was certainly not any longer the case when Cortés arrived. On the contrary, Cholula was then on friendly terms with Mexico. Cortés says ("Carta Segunda," Vedia I, p. 19): "por "que los naturales della eran amigos de Muteczuma;" and, further on (p. 21), "y fice "que los desta ciudad de Churultecal, y los de Tascaltecal fuesen amigos, porque lo "solian ser antes, y muy poco tiempo habia que Muteczuma con dadivas los habia "aducido a' su amistad, y hechos enemigos de estotros."

[179] The pursuit lasted until they reached Tlaximaloyan (Tagimaroa), at the confines of Toluca. Tezozomoc (Cap. LII, p. 85): "Llego' el campo Tarasco hasta Tagi-"maroa, que dicen Tlaximoyalan: los otros que habian llegado hasta los terminos de "Toluca se volvieron, viendo que su campo ño llegava: al iva adelante." The pursuit of the Michhuacanese consisted in harassing the Mexicans with archers, but no close combats are mentioned.

[648] 721 [180] The wars of the Mexicans against Tlaxcallan and its associates were a struggle for definitive supremacy, and not, as many authors have it, pre-arranged regular bat-

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

174 648 the Mexican tribe in a more direct manner. It was the overthrow and capture, after a short but bloody struggle, of the pueblo of Tlatilulco.[56] Owing to the close connection of the latter with the Mexicans both had remained on a non-hostile footing; for the suspicious watchfulness with which each viewed the other did not comport with any more intimate relations, those of trade and exchange excepted. When the confederacy came into existence, Tlatilulco was counted in as a part of Mexico, since its people acknowledged themselves to be Mexicans; but there is no evidence authorizing the conclusion that the Tlatilulca played any other role, beyond that of auxiliaries to their kindred of Tenuchtitlan.[57] The rash attempt of the former at the organization of a conspiracy to become "Mexico alone" terminated fatally; their place was taken and barbarously sacked, their leaders were killed in the fray or sacrificed afterwards, and the Mexicans, exasperated at the conduct of their treacherous kinsmen treated them in an unusually severe manner. We have seen already that, in any conquest, the conquered tribe, if not exterminated, was only subjected to more or less heavy tribute. But the Tlatilulca were dealt with far worse: [562] 174 648 727 they were degraded to the rank of "women," their public market was ordered closed, their council-house left to decay and their young men, expressly debarred from the privilege of carrying arms in aid of the Mexicans, were required to become the carriers of supplies to their captors. Such a punishment was unknown in the annals of Indian conquest, and appears even to militate against our views of aboriginal society in Mexico; still it was in perfect harmony with the institutions of the latter. The Tlatilulca were, as we should never forget, not only a tribe

[56] The "Codex Telleriano-Remensis" (Plate XIV, also explanation Vol. VI, p. 138), concurs in this date, or the year seven "calli" which is indeed 1473.

[57] This acknowledgment—"to be Mexicans"—on the part of the inhabitants of Tlatilulco, was in the nature of a claim, and with a spirit of jealousy and envy. Although Durán says (Cap. XXXII, p. 257), "aviendo estado hasta entonces sujetos á la corona real de Méjico," this affirmation is utterly disproven, not only by all the other sources, but by his own statements (Cap. V, pp. 43 and 46). The confused and contradictory tales about the state of war preceding the formation of the confederacy still make the Tlatilulca always appear as assisting their neighbors of Tenuchtitlan, more or less. Sometimes they were neutral only, and at times they may have felt inclined to foster attempts at destruction of their rivals by outsiders, but they still were afraid of the consequences of it for their own independence. Durán (Cap. V, p. 46). The singular statement that the Tlatilulca even attempted, though fruitlessly, to withdraw the Tezcucans and Tlacopans from Tenuchtitlan, inducing them to become their associates in the work of its overthrew, is significant. See Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LVIII, p. 176) "Quisose aliar con los de Tlacupa, y Tetzcoco, los quales no le acudieron."

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

connected, through stock-language or even dialect, with the Mexicans, but they were actually "kin of their own kin." Their punishment therefore was that of a crime committed against kinship and tribe. As we shall hereafter attempt to show, such delicts entailed death. Instead of exterminating a whole settlement however, the Mexicans treated the survivors as outcasts from the bond of kinship, degrading them to manual, therefore female labor.[58]

174 648 727 [558]

"The descriptions of the capture of Tlatilulco by the Mexicans, while "Face in the Water" (Axayacatl) was the latter's head war-chief, are so numerous, and in their features as far as the subject of this paper is concerned, so generally concordant, that I may be permitted to forego quotations. I simply refer to the best known authors on ancient Mexico in general. Still, these authors seem to report but the "Tenuchcan" side of the story. Although Boturini ("Idea" "Catalogo del Museo Indiano," p. 23), mentions the copy of "Un Mapa en papel Européo, donde estan pintados los Reyes de Tlatilulco, y de México" as the only specifically "Tlatilulcan" document of which he knows, there still is preserved to us a tale of the overthrow of the pueblo of Tlatilulco, which bears distinctly the stamp of a genuine Tlatilulcan version. We owe it to Oviedo y Valdés ("Historia general y nat. de Indias," Lib. XXXIII, cap. XLVI, pp. 504 and 505). "Avia dos parcialidades ó bandos en aquella república, la una se decia Mexicanos, é la otra Tlatebulcos, como se dice en Castilla Oneçinos i Gamboinos, ó Giles é Negretes. Y estos dos apellidos tenvieron grandes diferencias: é Montecuma, como era mañoso, fingió grande amistad con el señor principal del bando Tlatebulco, que se decia por sus nombre proprio Samalce, é tomóle por yerno, é dióle una su hija, por le asegurar. Con este debdo, en cierta fiesta é convite á este Samalce, é á todos sus capitanes é parientes é hombres principales, hizolos embeodar: é desque estuvieron bien tomados del vino, hiçolos atar é sacrificarlos á todos, sacándoles los coraçones vivos, como lo tienen por costumbre. E los que padescieron esta crueldad passaban de mil hombres, señores principales; é tomóles las casas é quanto tenian, é poblólas de sus amigos é de los de la otra parçialidad Mexicana. É á todos los que tuvo por sospechosos, desterróles de la ciudad, que fuéron mas de quatro mil hombres; y en los bienes é moradas destos hiço que viviessen los que quiso enriquesar con bienes agenos. É aquellos que desterró, hiço que poblassen quatro leguas de alli, en un pueblo que de aquella gente se hiço, que se llama Mezquique, é que le sirviessen de perpétuos esclavos. É assi como la cibdad se deçia, y es su proprio nombre Temistitan, se llamó é llama por muchos México dende aquella maldad cometida por Montecuma." This story is repeated by him with less detail (Cap. I, p. 533). Although manifestly incorrect, it is still interesting to compare with the current version.

The punishment which the Tlatilulca received, is also mentioned by a number of authors. The prominent sources, however, are: Durán (Cap. XXXIV, pp. 270 and 271), Tezozomoc (Cap. XLVI, pp. 74 and 75). Both of these relate that, besides, the great market place of Tlatilulco about which the latter says: "that the tianguis (market) was esteemed beyond, as if they had gained five tribes." The Tlatilulca were, as we shall hereafter see, mostly traders and, as one of their old men is made to say to "Face in the Water," by Tezozomoc (p. 74): "We are traders, merchants, and will give you (follows a long list of articles promised) . . . . . since by force of arms this tianguis has been gained." Durán, (p. 270): "After this was done, the King commanded that this place and market which they had gained should be distributed among the lords, since the Tlatilulca had no other soil." Compare also the statements in regard to trading and bartering in aboriginal Mexico, and to the beginning of the traders at Tlatilnco, in Sahagun (Lib. IX. cap. I, pp. 335 and 336). [441]

"Kin of their own kin." In regard to this statement I beg to refer to one made by Veytia (Lib. II, cap. XV, p. 135): "Some modern national writers say that this separation did not occur precisely as between nobles and plebeyans, but that eight families

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

population of "hangers-on to the tribe." This class was yet not very numerous; still it grew slowly and steadily. Prohibited from carrying arms, and therefore from taking any part in warfare other than that of carriers and, perhaps, runners, the heavy drudgery of work was at their charge.[89] Even the tillage of lots appears to have been frequently assigned to them, and it may be that what is commonly termed the class of "macehuales" consisted of the outcasts who improved "tlalmilpa" for the benefit of members of the kin.[90] Besides, it is distinctly implied, if not stated, 565

(Lib. II, cap. XLV, pp. 154-157; cap. LXII, p. 184; Lib. XIII, cap. XII, p. 436). H. H. 595
Bancroft (Vol. II. p. 276) admits two classes of concubines for married people, one of which he calls "the less legitimate wives." Among other authorities, he adduces in evidence Oviedo (Lib. XXXIII, cap. I, p. 200): "Tenia esto Olintech treynta mugeres dentro de su casa, con quien el dormia, á las quales servian mas de ciento otras." The same statement is also found in Gomara ("Conquista," etc., Vedia I. p. 336) and others. (The name for the mistress ("manceba") of a married man is "teichtacamecauh" (Molina, I, p. 81), which means literally "thy secret tie," from "Tehuatl"—"thou, "ichtaca"—secretly (II, p. 38), and "mecatl"—rope or cord (II, 56). See in a further note.

The most significant statements, however, are those already reported, of Motolinia 595 and of Gomara, that the Indians explained their polygamy by the fact that they kept 567 these women for their work. In other words, they were purchased hands. This is indicated by the following authorities: Gomara ("Conquista," etc., Vedia I, p. 441), "Las malas mujeres de su cuerpo, que lo daban de balde si no las querian pagar, se vendian par esclavas por traerse bien, ó cuando ninguno las queria, por viejas ó feas ó enfermas; que nadie pide por las puertas." Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XVI, p. 563): "Havia tambien mugeres, que se daban á vivir suelta, y libertadamente; y para proseguir este mal Estado, que tomaban, tenian necessidad de vestir curiosa, y galanamente, y por la necesidad, que pasaban, porque no trabajaban . . . . llegaban à necesitarse mucho, y haciansse Esclavas;" and the same authority adds (Cap. XVII, p. 566): "y muchas veces los Amos se casaban, con Esclavas suias," without any closer definition however. Finally, the Anónimo says (p. 367): "Nelle nozze di questa patrona principale fanno alcune cirimonie, il che non si osserva nelle nozze dell' altre."

There is no evidence that a married man could increase the number of his women even with the consent of the parents, in other words, marry a girl. But if the latter had, through her own lewd conduct, become abandoned and cast off, then he could associate with her as his mistress without regard to his wife proper. Also he might purchase (or rather barter for) a female and afterwards make a concubine of her, even if she was of a foreign tribe. Prisoners of war (females) may occasionally have [727] been spared also, but this suggestion rests on very slight evidence (compare "Anónimo," p. 373), and may apply only to prisoners of war purchased from other tribes (Sahagun, Lib. I, cap. XIX. p. 39).

[89] They were the "tamenes," carriers. The Mexican word is "tlamama," from [482]
"tlacatl"—man, and "nitla-mama"—to carry a load (Molina, II, p. 51). Don Antonio de Mendoza ("Avis sur les Prestations personelles," etc., p. 336, Ternaux, Recueil). Zurita (pp. 250, 251, and 260) "Lettre des auditeurs Salmeron, Maldonado, Ceynos et Quiroga a l'Impératrice." (Mexico, 20 March, 1531, in 2d Recueil, etc., pp. 143 and 144): "Les Indiens ont de tout temps porté des fardeaux, ils y sont accoutumés . . ."

[90] This is a mere suggestion. The majority of descriptions, however, are such that the "macehual" may have been, and probably was, a member of the kin. Still, in such cases, when that member could not improve his lots himself, families of "bondsmen" may have done the work for him, and thus become included in the general picture. Quotations are superfluous, since the information is not, as yet, positive enough.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

618 only established within that kin's territory, but it is also recog-
346 nized even at the central medicine-lodge of the tribe.

727 A further evidence of it is found in the manner of distribution of the captives, upon the return of a successful war-party. It is known that prisoners were always offered up to the idols. Such a person, therefore, as soon as secured, became an object of "medicine;" he was so to say a sacred object. Well treated as long as he was not needed for the slaughter-block, nothing could in the end save him from sacrifice. But this sacrifice itself was not made in behalf of his captor, but on behalf and for the kin to whom the captor belonged. Therefore upon arrival at the pueblo, the prisoners of war were turned over to the respective calpulli as their share thus furnishing another illustration of "Separate Rites of Worship" of the kins composing the ancient Mexicans.[118]

000 Having already discussed, in a former paper, the tenure of Lands and customs of Inheritance[119] we now pass on to one of the most essential features of tribal society, and one which involves some of the vital points of organization and customs.

618 The kin was obligated to protect and defend the persons and prop-
631 erty of its members, and to resent and punish any injury done to them, as if it were a crime committed against the kin itself.[120]

The impression justly prevails, that the so-called "penal code" of the Mexicans was simple but severe, death being, in most instances, the punishment of offenders. This resulted, in a great measure, from the fact that any offence against an individual [118] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVII. p. 128), rather contradicts himself when he says first: that the captive belonged to his captor, but at the same time, that this captor was even killed if he gave away his prisoner to another man. Second: that each one had to watch his own prisoners, and at the same time they were guarded in common, and at the risk of the "barrio" or kin, which was responsible for their safe keeping. Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. III, p. 540) copies this almost literally. Much more positive and clear is Durán (Cap. XIX. pp. 172 and 173): "mandó Tlacaelel repartir los cautivos, porque eran muchos, por todos los barrios y que cada barrio se encargase de guardar y sustentar tantos . . . . . Los mandones de los barrios repartieron los presos á cada barrio, á como les cauia." (Cap. XXI, p. 186): "Montoçcuma los mandaua vestir y adereçar y llamanava á los Calpixques, que son los mandoncillos de los barrios, y entregananlas, para que tuviesen cuidado dellos, diciendo que eran la merced del sol, Señor de la tierra, que los dana para el sacrificio." (Id., cap. XXII, p. 192. Cap. XXVIII, p. 257): "luego fuéron repartidos entre los barrios y encomendados á los mandoncillos." (Cap. XLII, p. 343, etc.). Tezcomoc ("Cronica," cap. XXIX, p. 45; XXXII, p. 51; XXXIII, p. 58; XXXVIII, p. 61; XLIX, p. 69, etc.), confirms Durán as might be expected.

[119] "Tenure of Lands and Customs of Inheritance," 11th Report of Peabody Museum, 1878.

[120] "Ancient Society," (pp. 76 and 77). Compare H. Luden ("Geschichte des teutschen Volkes," pp. 361 and 362), among the ancient Germans.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

him with downcast eyes was not so much a mark of particular 643 644 respect, as a thoroughly Indian habit of shy suspicion, common

A third eye-witness, Andrés de Tápia ("Relación," etc., Col. de Doc's, II, p. 579), 114 simply says: "The said Moteczuma went in the middle of the street, and all the rest of the people were along the walls, close to them, as such is their custom."

The version of Bernal Diaz is corroborated by Oviedo ("Hist. general," etc., Lib. XXXIII, cap. XLV, p. 500), from information derived by him of "some knights and soldiers who had taken part in the conquest of New Spain" (Title of Chapter XLV, p. 494). But the old chronicler does not give the names of his informants.

The same question recurs here, which we have already discussed in regard to the fights with the Tlaxcaltecs ("Art of War," p. 155, note 231), and here again we reach the same conclusion namely: that Bernal Diaz de Castillo, "bent upon recollecting personal incidents, and, from his subaltern position" less able to see closely, in this instance, magnifies the importance of the action beyond the limits of truth.

It is easily noticed, how much more sober, and therefore less pompous, are the statements of the Spanish commander and of his lieutenant, than those of the common soldiers, including Oviedo's anonymous informants. And it should be remembered that Cortés, who was the chief actor in the scene, certainly saw more of it and saw it far better than any of the others. Furthermore, at the time he wrote his report (the 30 of October, 1520, or only about one year after the date of the occurrence), Cortés had personal and political motives to magnify and embellish the picture. If his statements, therefore, fall far below those of his troopers in thrilling and highly colored details, there is every reason to believe that they are the more reliable and trustworthy.

Referring, therefore, to the description by Cortés, we find, on the whole, nothing but a barbarous display common to other Indian celebrations of a similar character. Of the Mexicans themselves, a number of such receptions are related by aboriginal authors. I particularly refer to Tezozomoc ("Crónica," etc., Cap. XXVII, pp. 41 and 42). 727
Upon the return of the Mexicans from their successful raid on Tecalaachalco and 114 Tepeaca: "the Mexicans were received in triumph, with horns, trumpets (?), flowers, and frankincense. The old men of the tribe, carrying censers and roses, stood in two rows on each side of the way, their hair tied on the back of their heads with strips of red leather, called cuauhtlalpiloni, with shields in their hands, rods—cuauhtopilli,—and rattles, in token of old age and of being fathers to such braves. Between them the Mexican troop had to pass,—and these are called cuacuacuilizin,—taking in the middle the captains, and the prisoners which they had brought from the four pueblos;" also (Cap. XXIX), though it is less explicit, about the return from the foray against the Huaxtecas; (Cap. XXXVIII p. 62), speaking of the return from the foray against Huaxaca: "Then Moctezuma commanded to all the old men and to the principal Mexicans to go out and receive the returning warriors with much mirth and joy. They met them in the road, and greeted them, incensing them with much copal, which is like unto myrrh, and a mark of great honor, token of triumph in war;" (Cap. XLIX, p. 79): "At Mazatzintamalco (which has since become garden of the Marquis del Valle), the old men, Cuauhnelnequas, and the Mexican council were arrayed in line to receive him, each one with his calabash-rattle, and armed with shields and macanas, wearing ichcahuipilas, and with the hair tied up on the back of the head with straps of red leather. Along the road there were, at intervals, bowers and huts decked with roses, and the old men joined the procession which moved into Mexico-Tenuchtitlan, directly up to the temple of Huitzilopochtli." This was when "Face in the Water" returned from the raid against the Matlatzincas;—(Cap. LII, p. 85) when the same "chief of men" returned, beaten and defeated by the Tarasca of Michhuacan, the same reception was made to him, only with groans, and wails of grief and mourning; also (Cap. LVIII, p. 96, Cap. LXII, p. 104, etc., etc.). It follows from the above that the reception of Cortés and whatever barbarous display attended it, was strictly according to established custom. Similar receptions were made to trading companies returning with particular success. Sahagun (Lib. IX, cap. II, p. 302). "They went in pro- 114 cession like two files, one of priests and the other of chiefs, and they met them in 576

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

648 nate results. It certainly required men of capacity and experience
651 to fill such a position, and we need not wonder, therefore, if the "calpixca," whom Cortés met among the Totonacas of the coast, wore the distinctive tokens of chiefs.[299]

648 The conditions of tribute were various. Some tribes delivered 651 their contributions every eighty days, whilst others sent them in 202 annually.[300] In most cases, they had to be carried to Mexico-
727 Tenuchtitlan by the tributaries, or at least, the delivery was at their charge.[301] This was done frequently by prisoners of war, made by the tributary pueblo and sent as part of the tribute itself.[302] The "calpixqui" superintended this intercourse, he verified the articles received, and again dispatched them, properly, to the "seat and home" of the Mexicans. All this necessitated [299] Bernal Diez de Castillo (Cap. XLVI, pp. 40 and 41).

[300] The most complete record of tributes which we possess, until now, is contained in the so-called Codex Mendoza (Parte Segunda, plates XIX to LVII, inclusive). A full discussion of the multifarious details thereof is impossible here. It would require an essay by itself, which, however instructive it might be, would largely exceed the limits of this paper. Of course, not all the authorities agree with them. I merely refer, in addition, to Durán (Cap. XXV), Oviedo (Lib. XXXIII, cap. LI, pp. 535, 6 and 7), Clavigero (Lib VII, cap. XV). Ixtlilxochitl ("Hist. des Chichimèques," Cap. XXXV), the latter as well as Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LIII, pp. 167 and 168) confining himself to the Texcucans and their tributaries exclusively. See furthermore, Zurita (pp. 246, 247 and 248), Ramirez de Fuenleal (Letter, p. 251). It is also interesting to consult the statements gathered on the tribute question, from tribes subject to the Mexicans. See, on Chalco, Fray Domingo de la Anunciacion (Letter dated: Chalco, 20 Sept., 1554, 2d "Recueil" of Mr. Ternaux-Compans. pp. 223 and 224): on Matlatzinco, Zurita (pp. 394-397), Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XVIII, p. 140). The latter mostly copies from Zurita. Finally, much information as to the details can be gathered from the "Codice Ramirez" (pp. 63 and 65), and especially from the traditions on the forays and dashes of the Mexicans contained in the specifically Mexican sources already quoted.

[301] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXVII, p. 41, Cap. XXXIII, p. 52, Cap. LXI, p. 102, etc., etc.). Durán (Cap. LXIX, p. 171): "Pues miré que lo sacais de llevar á México vosotros mesmos. Ellos respondiéron que les placia de lo llevar allá y servillos, ..." (Cap. XXII. p. 291): "y que se obligasen á traello á México. . . ." (Cap. XXIV, p. 206, Cap. XXV, p. 208, etc., etc., etc.)

567 [302] Durán (Cap. XXV, pp. 212 and 213). Such female slaves became concubines. The various tribes exchanged also their prisoners of war, one tribe buying (exchanging for products of the soil or for manufactures) of another those prisoners which it had received as such tribute, and also presenting each other on solemn occasions with such prisoners. There are many illustrations of this to be found. Thus the markets of aboriginal Mexico also had "slaves," for sale, who were obtained in this manner. They were not numerous, and did not form a class, only an object of medicine subject to exchange and barter. Cortés ("Carta Segunda," p. 35, Vedia I) only speaks of "bonded people" standing in the markets" or "outcasts" ready to "bind" themselves—"to let." But Bernal Diez de Castillo (Cap. XCII, p. 88, Vedia II), evidently describes such unfortunate people: "é traianlos atados en unas varas largas, con collares á los pescuezos porque no se les huyesen, y otros dejaban sueltos." The same author (Cap. XLVI, p. 41) mentions the demand made upon the "Totobaca's" of the coast by the Mexican "calpixca" for "twenty Indians of both sexes to pacify their Gods therewith." This is confirmed in a general way by Cortés ("Carta Segunda," p. 13, Vedia I).

Twelfth Chapter, which telleth of still other houses. Some were only indifferent and some were in no way good.

The time of the day sign Four Wind was said to be good and bad. For then were slain those called doers of evil, the adulterers. They placed their heads in a noose and choked, strangled, or hanged them, or struck them on the back of the head, or crushed their skulls under a rock. Only at night were they killed; when it dawned, and they were already bloated, they cast them each into the water. Likewise then died some of the captives. Through them, so it was said, Moctezuma received new life (as hath been told) on [the day sign] One Rain, when [the Goddesses] descended. And this was also the time that the [aforementioned] demons and sorcerers destroyed people. And since there was fear on this day sign, Four Wind, everywhere they put cardoon[1] into the smoke openings [of the houses]. They stuffed and crammed it in. Thereby, so it was said, they frightened them away.

But the merchants,[2] those known as distinguished traders[3] and vanguard merchants,[4] who were rich, greatly esteemed and honored this [day sign]. For then they laid out in the sun[5] all the precious things which they had hidden away—the green stone, the objects made of [ordinary] green stone and resplendent green stone; the round ones, round like

Injc matlactlomoxtlí capitulo: itechpa tlatna, in oc cequj calli, cequj çan tlanepantla ca, cequj vel njman amo qualli. 787X

In jpan nauhecatl tonalli, mjtoa qualli, ioan amo qualli, ca vncan mjctiloia, qujnquechmecanjaia, qujnquechtzonviaia, qujnmecanjaia, qujnpiloa, qujncuexcochvivitequj, qujnquatepipitzinja, in moteneoa tlaçolchiuhque, in tetlaxinque, çan iooan in mjctiloia, in oallatvi ie tlacujtlapoçaoa, atlan qujmoonmamaiavi. No ioan cequjn vncan mjquja in mamalti, iuh mjtoa: ca ichoan iuca mozcaltiaia in Motecuçoma (in iuh omoteneuh) ipan oc qujauitl in vncan temoa: auh ie no vncan tepopoloaia, in omoteneuhque tlatlacateculo, in nanaoalti, auh injc imacaxoia, in ipan in tonalli nauecatl in tlecalco noujian caaqujaia, in tlacateculoxocovitztli, qujpopotxaqujaia, qujcacacatztzaia: iuh mjtoa ca ic qujnpeviaia. 681 684 727 761 789 824

Auh in ichoantin pochteca, in moteneoa: acxoteca, in oztomeca, in motlacamati, iê quivetimatia, qujmavizztiliaia, ca vncan qujtotonjaia, in ixquich tlaçotli qujtlatiaia, in chalchiujtl, in chalchiuhtli, in quetzalchalchiuhtli, in ololiuhqujj, in tomatic, in acatic, in ie ixqujch cozcatl, in cozcapetlatl, in patlaoac, in pitzaoac, xiujtl: auh in ixqujch nepapan ivitl, in quetzalli 441 527 556

1. Xuxuxtli. — Francisco J. Santamaría: Diccionario general de americanismos (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1942), Vol. II, p. 154: jocoque — Bromelia pinguin L. "En México, nombre vulgar de una planta de las regiones tropicales, que crece como un manojo de alfiler y crece hasta remejantes a las de la piña. . . . propiedad antiescorbútica."

2. Tenochtitlán also as "town of Pochtlan," a barrio of Tenochtitlan occupied by merchants, whose gods were Tlaloque, Macuilxochitl, Xiuhtecuhtli, Tlazolteotl, Xilo, Tepetzintecuhtli, Coyolinchauhqui, Chicomecóatl, Xochiquetzal, Tlazoteotl (Arturo Monzón, op. cit., p. 50). See also Alfonso Caso: Instituciones indígenas precortesianas (México: Instituto Nacional Indigenista, 1954), pp. 23-24, for a résumé of the social and economic importance of the pochteca.

3. Atcuitlaxtli se pochtecatlahtoani, "mayor o principal entre los mercaderes . . . tanto como si dijéramos que es gobernador de los mercaderes, y entre dos mercaderes . . . se entiende el que es mayor principal, gobernador, o señor, o que es casi padre y madre de todos los mercaderes" (Sahagún, Codex, Lib. X, 14, 5).

Jens, op. cit., p. 248 (citing Seler, Ges. Ab., II, 69): "eine eigentümliche Volksnamen in der eigentlich der Sinn von Mexiko gelegenen Landschaft Chalco." Acxoteca was a merchant's barrio in Tenochtitlan; gods were Nosi Eheca, Chicomecóatl, Xoxoutzi, Cochinoti, Yacapitzauac, Nacxit, Chalmecatzinti (Monzón, loc. cit.).

4. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, "The Gods," p. 18 and n. 5. Jens, op. cit., p. 328, citing Seler, Ges. Ab., II, 1070: "Neben den Grar Gaumann . . . , der auf Wanderschaft gehende Kleine und Marktsteuller zuweilen als der auf seiner Reisen gehende Grosskaufmann, auch Kaufmann i. A."

5. Ibid., p. 148.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

311 578 achieved by the relatively unlimited possibilities of chinampa agriculture.

729 The Tenochcas supplemented their land hunger by an-
●728 other means. In conquered territories successful warriors
471 received grants of land which were worked by members of the defeated tribe. Small colonies sometimes lived off this [428] land to guard against revolt in the subjugated area. Such property passed from father to son, but if there were no heir it reverted to the tribal authority, not the clan in which the tenant had membership. Other such land must have been held for the benefit of the religious organization. Thus the central authority of Tenochtitlan, and presumably Texcoco as well, held considerable property to support the elaborate pomp of Church and State without straining the resources of the tribesmen. The relative fluidity of such real estate gave the tribal authority a wherewithal to adjust inequalities and dissatisfactions among the more ambitious tribal members. Naturally, as the Aztec peoples were less highly developed socially than ourselves, they did not attain our own elaborate system of rewards and adjustments by means of federal, state and municipal appointments.*

651 A powerful Aztec tribe had another source of support: tribute. The levies often consisted of foodstuffs and raw materials, both native and foreign to the Valley, and also included warriors' and priests' costumes, mantles, pottery and other articles of craftsmanship. Distributed throughout the community these goods enriched both communal enterprise and private convenience.* (See Plates 62, bottom right; 64.)

436 Manufacture and trade were beginning to play an im-
438 portant part in Aztec economy, although not to the extent
32 of societies which have developed media of exchange, like

And when they already were to rise against the city to destroy it, first was awaited remotely the moment when fire flared up—when the priests brought forth [new] fire—and for the blowing of shell trumpets, when the priests blew them.

And when the fire flared up, then as one arose all the warriors. War cries were raised; there was fighting. They shot fiery arrows into the temples.

And when they first took a captive, one fated to die, forthwith they slew him there before the gods; they slashed his breast open with a flint knife.

And when the city had been overcome, thereupon were counted as many captives as there were, and as many Mexicans and Tlatilulcans as had died. Then they apprised the ruler that they had been orphaned for the sake of Uitzilopuchtli; that men had been taken captive and been slain. And the ruler then commanded the high judges to go to tell and inform all in the homes of those who had gone to die in war, that there might be weeping in the homes of those who had gone to war to die. And they informed those in the homes of as-many as had gone to take captives in war that they had received honors there because of their valor. And they were rewarded according to their merits; the ruler accorded favors to all—costly capes, breech cloths, chocolate, food, and devices, and lip rods and ear plugs. Even more did the ruler accord favors to the princes if they had taken captives. He gave them the offices of stewards, and all wealth without price—honor, fame, renown.

And if some had done wrong in battle, they then and there slew them on the battlefield; they beat them, they stoned them.

And if several claimed one captive, and one man said, "He is my captive," and another man also said, "He is my captive": if no man verified it, and also if no one saw how they had taken the captive, the lord of the sun decided between them. If neither had an advantage of the two who claimed the captive, then those who had taken four captives, the masters of the captives, decided that to neither one would the captive belong. He was dedicated to the Uitzilopochtli[6] [or] they left him to the tribal temple, the house of the devil.

And when the city which they had destroyed was attained, at once was set the tribute, the impost. [To the ruler who had conquered them] they gave that ponia: inic tlequanchilaca tlamacazqueq: ioã in tlapiz- 726 alli in tonacatli, in oquiqizaqueq tlamacazqueq:

ioan in ocuepon tlel, ninan ic omoua, in jaquich iaxquiuqui, motemquaqueuja, mjcali, quitlemjna in tocalli.

Auh in achen in caqi malli in malinacatl, can ninan vncan, inixpan quimjctia, in teteu, tecpatica quehe-tequj.

Auh in jcoac ouqcalioh ahcpetl, ninã ic ic nemal- 727
peuio, in quexquich malli: ioan in quexquich omic mexicatl, in tlatilulcatl, ninan muchi quicaquijtia in tlatoanj, inic tepal oicnopiltic vitzilobuchtli inic otlamaloc, ioan omjcnac: auh in tlatoanj ninan quijnaoaia, in tecutlatoque: inic quitemachtitiuj, inic quitecaquijtitiuj, in jochan in jaquijoti, oiaxmj-quijo, inic choquilitaqueq in jochachan, in oiaxmj-quijo: ioan quitecaquijtia in jochan, in quexquj otlamato iaoc, ic vncan quicuja in mauiztiel, in ipampa oquichiol: ioan quinomacecujaia in jaquich teicnelhuia in tlatoanj, in tlaçotlmatli, in maxtlatl, in itl, tlaqualli, ioan tlaujtli, ioan teçacatl, nacochtli:
oc ceuca quijnjcnelhuia in tlaçopipiltj, in tlatoanj intla otlamato, quinaca calpixcauh: ioan in jaquich tlaçotli necujhtomolli, in mauiztiel, in teiztl, in teiztl. [555]

Auh intla acamo quitlacoa iauiztl, ninan vnqa 637 quinmjctia in iaoc quinvicuiqequi, quinteteqachoa.

Auh intla acamo, quinecujcujlia ce malli, quitoa 727 ce tlacatl, ca nemal, in oc ce tlacatl no quinoa ca nemal: inelacamo ce tlacatl iech nelti, aiac no quinjtlac, in quenjn tlamaqueq: ichoantin quintlatzonte-quilia, in tonatiuh itlacatlaoan: aiac ce onquiça in jmamextin in quinecujcujlia in malli: iuh quinontequj, in quauhtlatoque, in mallatoque, aiac ce iech pouhqui ica in malli: vitzcalli quipoiaia, cilpoiaia quicaoaia, in jchan tlacatecatl.

Auh in jcoac oaxiaac ahcpetl in ouqcalioh, ninan 728 iaoac motlalia, in tequitl, in tlacalaquilli iech mana 651 in tlein vnqa muchiua, auh ninan no iquac iaqua-

6. Cf. ibid., pp. 301-302, referring to the dawn of Creation, when divine Knight and God in sacrifice: "Blue are we of pain del sangre que se dió Dios."

728 651 which was there made. And likewise, forthwith a steward was placed in office, who would watch over and levy the tribute.

SECOND PARAGRAPH, in which it is described how they chose judges.

643 693 565 The ruler watched especially over the trials; he heard all the accusations and the complaints, the afflictions, and the misery of the common folk, the orphans, the poor, and the vassals.

And in order that the ruler might verify one's accusations and guilt, there were placed in office, and [the ruler] chose, as his judges,[1] the princes, those who were endowed with the necessities of life, those provided with drink and food—the rich; and the brave warriors and men [at arms], who had been reared in war and had gloried in all kinds of suffering and misery. In all things had their upbringing, their rearing, been round. In their infancy they had been taught [according to] the upbringing in the priests' house, or the rearing by the masters of the youths, growing up with others, living in the [same] houses as others, engaging in war, taking captives.

And likewise the ruler thus chose and placed in office judges of the Mexicans who were not noblemen—those of sound and righteous upbringing, who had been reared in war: brave warriors and men [at arms] who in many ways had won glory by the favor of the ruler. By his grace they drank and ate. He gave them contentment and he gave them gifts; he bestowed upon them whatsoever they needed.

[577] Such as these the ruler gave office and chose as his judges—the wise, the able, the sage; who listened and spoke well; who were of good memory; who spoke not vainly nor lightly; who did not make friends without forethought nor were drunkards; who guarded their lineage with honor; who slept not overmuch, [but rather] arose early; who did nothing for friendship's or kinship's sake, nor for enmity; who would not hear nor judge a case for a foe. The ruler might condemn them to death;

[681] hence they performed their offices as judges righteously. For otherwise, these judges could find excuse for the wrongs which they might do.

And when the ruler placed his judges in office, he gave them two court rooms, the Teccalli, where they tzalo in calpixcqui, in quimocuitlauia, in ipan tlatoa in tlacalaquilli.

INIC VME PARRAPHO: ipan mixua, in quenin quinpepenaia luezes.

In tlatoani oc cenca quimocuitlauiaia in tetlamontequilliztli, quicaquia in iaquich in ineteilhuiil: ioan in ichocuiia, in inentlamachiliz in inetolinjliz in cuitlapilli, atlapalli in icnotlacatl, in motolinja in macrcoalli:

auh inic uel quinelitiliaia in tlatoani in tenetelhuiil anoço tetlatlacul quimixquetzaia, quinpepenaia in iteculatocahoan: ichoantin in tlaçopipilti, in tlaiecultilo in oncá in quinj, in quiquani, in mocuiltonoa, ioan tiacaoan, oquichti, in iauc omoncaltique, mijec tlamãtli tecoco netolinjlizti, oquimauiçoque: auh in iaquij tlamantij qualli neoapaoaliztli, nezcaltiliztli, in inpiltian oquimomachtique, in calmecac neoapaoaliztli, in tiachcapa neoapaoaliztli, in tetlan neoapaoaliztli, in calpan tetlan [illegible]nijliztli, iauquiçaliztli, tlamaliztli.

Auh çan no iuhq[illegible], inic quinpepenaia tlatoani, inic quimixquetzaia in tecutlatoque, in mexica, in amo pipilti ichoantin in qualli iectli, inneoapaoaliz, innezcaltiliz, in iauc omoneapacuhque, in tiacahoan in oquichti, in mijec tlamantli oquimauiçoque, iteicnelilia tlatoani, in ipal ili, tl[illegible]ia, in quinpaquiltia, in quintlaubtia, ioan in quimaca, in iaquich intech monequi:

iuhque in in quimixquetzaia, in quinpepenaia tlatoani, in iteculatocahoan, in mimatini, in mozcaliani, in tlanemjlianj, in vellacaqui, in vellatoa, in motlaiolloiani, in amo ahauiltatoa, in amo cacamanalos, in amo iliuix moocuiubtia, amo tlaoanani, cenca quimauizpia in tecuiod, amo cochini, cenca cochiçani amo tle quicnjubchioa: amo tle quiosiolcachioa: amo tle quitecocolicachioa, amo tlaxtlauiltica quicaqui, anoço quitonbtequi: quimixquiznaoetiaia, in tlatoani: inic mclaoac quichioaque in intequiuh, in tecutlaulli: auh intlacamo, ca ichoantin conmotracuiliniaque in tecutlatoque, in tlein quitlachiaque.

Auh in iceac, oquimixquetz in tlatoani: in iteculatocahoan quimacaia vuetl in tlatocacalli, in tec-

5. [illegible] cf. ibid., p. 321 (for [illegible]) and p. 321 ([illegible]).

Twelfth Chapter. Here is told how Moctezuma sent a lord, a great nobleman, and still many other noblemen, in order that they go to meet the Spaniards; and that with which each gave salutations as they greeted the Captain between Iztactepetl and Popocatepetl.

And Moctezuma thereupon sent and charged the noblemen, whom Tziuacpopocatzin led, and many others besides of his henchmen, to go to meet [Cortés] between Iztactepetl and Popocatepetl, there in Quauhtechcac. They laid before them golden streamers, quetzal feather streamers, and golden necklaces.

And when they had given them the gift, they appeared to smile, to rejoice exceedingly, and to take great pleasure. Like monkeys they seized upon the gold. It was as if then they were satisfied, sated, and gladdened. For in truth they thirsted mightily for gold; they stuffed themselves with it, and starved and lusted for it like pigs.

And they went about moving the golden streamer back and forth, and showed it to one another, all the while babbling; what they said was gibberish.

And when they saw Tziuacpopocatzin, they said: "Is this one perchance Moctezuma?" They spoke to those who came with them, their spies, those of Tlaxcalla and Cempoalla. Thus in secret they questioned them. [These] said: "Not this one, O our Lords." This one was Tziuacpopocatzin, who was appearing in place of Moctezuma.

[The Spaniards] said to him: "Art thou perchance Moctezuma?" He replied: "I am your henchman; I am Moctezuma."

And these said to him: "Go thou hence. Why dost thou lie to us? Whom dost thou take us to be? Thou canst not fool us; thou canst not mock us. Thou canst not make us stupid, nor flatter us, nor become our eyes, nor trick us, nor misdirect our gaze, nor turn us back, nor destroy us, nor dazzle us, nor cast mud into our eyes, nor place a muddy hand over our faces. Thou art noh he. Now Moctezuma cannot hide from us. He cannot take refuge. Where can he go? [Is he] perchance a bird that he can fly? Or can he set out on his way under the earth? Is

Injc matlactli onume capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn Motecuçoma, qujoa ce tlacatl vei pilli: yoã oc cequjntin mjequjntin pipilti in qujnnamjqujto Españoles: yoan in tlein ic tlatlapaloque, injc qujtlapaloque Capitan, in jtzalan iztactepetl, yoan popocatepetl. 643 728

Auh in Motecuçoma: njmã ie ic qujmonjoa, qujmonjaquetza in pipilti, qujniacana in tzioacpopocatzin, yoan oc ceq'ntin cenca mjequjntin itechiuhcaoan cõnamjqujto, intzalan in popocatepetl, yoan iztactepetl, vncan in quauhtechcac, qujmõmacaque teucujtlapanjtl, quetzalpanjtl, yoã teucujtlaconecatl. 431 301

Auh in oqujmõmacaque iuhqujn yixvetzica, cenca papaquj, ahavia, iuhqujn cooçomatzitzquja in teucujtlatl, iuhqujn vncan motlatlalia, iuhqujn iiztaia, iuhq'n cecelia yiollo: ca nel iehoatl in cença camjquj, qujpoçaoa, qujteucivi, qujpitzonequj in teucujtlatl.

Auh in teucujtlapanjtl qujhiiauhtivitze, qujtlatlavitzotivitze, qujmoortititivitze, iuhqujn tlapopoloca, in tlein qujmolhuja in popolochcopa.

Auh in jquac oçujttaque Tzioacpopocatzin: qujtoque. Cujx iee hin in Motecuçoma: Qujmjlhujque, in intlan mantivitze in intlachixcaoan, in tlaxcalteca, cempoalteca, injc qujmõichtacatlatlanjque: conjtoque ca amo ie iehoatl totecujioane. Inin tzioacpopocatzin, qujmjxiptlatica in Motecuçomatzin:

qujlhujque. Cujx ie te in tiMotecuçoma? Conjto. Ca nehoatl in namotechiuhcauh in njMotecuçoma.

Auh njmã qujlhujque. Nepa xiauh, tleica in titechiztlacavia, ac titechmati, amo vel titechiztlacavix, amo vel toca timocaisoaz, amo vel titechquamanaz, amo vel titechixmamatilos, amo vel titechichchinaz, amo vel titechixcuepaz, amo vel titechixpatiliz, amo vel titechtlacuepiliz, amo vel titechixpopoloz, amo vel titechixmjmjctiz, amo vel titechixçoqujvix, amo vel titechixçoqujmatocaz? amo tehoatl ca vnca in Motecuçoma, amo vel technetlatiliz, amo vel mjnaiaz? campa iaz? cujx tototi, cujx patlanjx? cuj noço tlallan qujquetzaz yiovi, cujx cana ca tepetl 648 728 there somewhere a mountain pierced by a hole that he may enter? For we shall see him; for we shall not fail to look into his face. We shall hear his words; we shall listen to that [which cometh] from his lips."

Thus they only despised and belittled him. Thus came only to nothing still another of their welcomes and greetings.

Then they hurried straight and took the road direct [to Moctezuma].

coinoquj yiuic calaquiz ca tiquijtazque, ca amo maca ixco titlachiezque, ticcaquizque in jtlatol, itenco titlacaquizque, ic çan contelchiuhque, atle ipan coojtaque ic çan onnenpoliuh in oc çequj in intenamjc, in intetlapalol:

ic njmã quioalmelauhtivetzque in melaoac vtli.

T:Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

—After Paso y Troncoso

29. The road to Tenochtitlan is sown with magury plants (Chapter 14). 30. Spaniards receive the submission of two of the Four Lords (Chapter 14). 31-36. Spaniards on the march from Iztapalapan to Tenochtitlan (Chapter 15).

727 And all who lived in boats and [in houses] on 481 poles, and those at Tolmayecan,[6] went into the water. On some, the water reached to the stomach; some, to the chest; and on some it reached to the neck. And some were all submerged, there in the deeps. Little children were carried on the backs [of their elders]; cries of weeping arose. Some went on happy and rejoicing as they traveled crowding on the road. And those who owned boats, all the boatmen, left by night, and even [continued to] leave all day. It was as if they pushed and crowded one another as they set out.

Auh in jxqujch acaltica onoca yoan in tlapechco catca, yoan in tolmaiecan çan atlan in iaque: in aca ixillan acitiuh in atl, in aca ielchiquipan, in aca iquechtlan acitiuh: auh in aca vel polaquj, in vncan vecatlan: in pipiltzitzinti temamamalo, tlachoquj-tlesa: cequjnti mopapaqujltitivi, maavicltitivi: in oconnepanoto vtli Auh in acaleque, in jxqujch acale ça ioaltica in quja, yoã tel cenjlhujtl in qujxque iuhqujn moqueqexxtivi injc ui 727 And everywhere the Spaniards were seizing and robbing the people. They sought gold; as nothing did they value the green stone, quetzal feathers, and turquoise. [The gold] was everywhere in the bosoms or in the skirts of the wretched women. And as for the men, it was everywhere in their breech clouts and in their mouths.

Auh in jxqujcan antica tetlatlaçaltiaia in Españoles in teucujtlatl qujtemos amo tle ipan qujtta, in chalchivitl, in quetzalli yoan in xivitl: novian nemja in inxilla in incuetitlan, in cioatzitzinti. Auh in toqujchtin novian nemj in imaxtlatitlan, yoan in incamac yoan qujmanaia, qujnpepenaia in Cioa in chipavaque, in Cuztic innacaio in cuztique. Auh in cequjntin cioa injc motetlaçaltiaia, mjçoqujvique, yoan tatapatli in qujmocuetiq tzotzomatli in qujmovipiltique, çan moch tzotzomatli in intech qujtlalique.

And [the Spaniards] seized and set apart the pretty women — those of light bodies, the fair[-skinned] ones.[7] And some women, when they were [to be] assaulted, covered their faces with mud and put on old, mended skirts and rags for their shifts. They put all rags on themselves.

And also some men were singled out — those who were strong, grown to manhood, and next the young boys, of whom they would make messengers, who would be their servants, and who were known as their runners. And on some they burned [brand marks] on their cheeks; on some they put paint on their cheeks; on some they put paint on their lips.

Auh no cequjntin pepenaloque in toqujchtin iehoantin in chicaoaque in iniolloco oqujchtin yoã in qujn telpupuchtotonti in qujntitlanjxque, in intitlanvan iexque, in moteneoa intlamacazcaoan: cequjntin njmã qujncamatlatiq cequjntin qujncamaicujloque: cequjntin qujntenjcujloque.

And when the shield was laid down, when we gave way, it was the year count Three House and the day count was One Serpent.

Auh in omomã chimalli: injc tixitinque, in xiuhtonalli ei calli. Auh in cemjlhujtlapoalli ce coatl:

● 728 And when Quauhtemoc went to deliver himself up, they then took him, after nightfall, to Acachinanco. And on the morrow, when already a little sun shone, once more the Spaniards, a good many of them, came forth likewise to put an end [to the fray] — girt for war, [in] iron corselets and iron helmets, but not with their iron swords nor their shields. They all only pressed white linen cloths against their noses as they passed by; [for] the dead sickened them; they already smelled foul and stank.

Auh in jxquac in ômotermacato in Quauhtemoctzin: njmã quivicaque in acachinanco in ie ioa. Auh in jmuxtlaioc in ie achiton tonatiuh, ie no ceppa vallaque in Españoles: vel mjequjntin, no çan iuh tlantivitze, in moiauchichiu-tivitze, tepuzvipilli, in tepuzquacalaladi: auh aoc tle in intepuzmaquauh, yoan aoc tle in inchimal, ça muchintin valmoiacapachotiaque iztac canaoac ica qujntlaieltiaia in mjmjeque in ie iyaia, in ie potonj:

6. [illegible], etc., translates Tolmayecan (Tolmayecan?) as probably the same as Apanco.

7. Literally, of yellow bodies, the yellow ones.

Fortieth Chapter. Here is told how the men of Tlatilulco and Tenochtitlan and their leaders yielded to the Spaniards,[1] and what befell when they were among them.

And when they had betaken themselves to bring him and disembark him, thereupon all the Spaniards came to see. They drew him along; the Spaniards took him by the hand. After that they took him up to the roof-top, where they went to stand him before the Captain, the war leader. And when they had proceeded to stand him before [Cortés], they looked at Quauhtemoc, made much of him, and stroked his hair. Then they seated him with [Cortés] and fired the guns. They hit no one with them, but only made them go off above, [so that] they passed over the heads of the common folk.[2] Then [some Mexicans] took and got into a boat and guided it there to the house of Coyouacuetzin.[3] And when they arrived, then they climbed up to the roof-top, whereupon once again they slew men and many died there. But [the Mexicans] only fled. With this the war reached its end.

Then there was shouting; they said: "Enough! Let it end! Eat greens!" When they heard this, the common folk thereupon issued forth. On this, they went, even into the lagoon.

And as they departed, leaving by the great road, once more they there slew some,[4] wherefore the Spaniards were wroth that still some again had taken up their obsidian-bladed swords and their shields. Those who dwelt in house clusters went straightway to Amaxac; they went direct to where the ways divide. There the common folk separated. So many[5] went toward Tepeyacac, so many toward Xoxouiltitlan, so many toward Nonoalco. But toward Xolloco and toward Maçatzintamalco no one went.

Injc oempoalli capitulo vnca mjtoa in quenjn ie-hoantin tlatjlulca yoã tenuchca yoan in intlatocaiuh in intlan oncalacque Espanoles: auh in tlein mu-chiuh in jquac ie intlã cate./. 728

Auh in oconaxitito in ocontlalhoacaqujxtito: nj-man ie ic much vallachia in Españoles, qujvalanque, imatitech qujvalanque in Españoles njman ie ic qujtlecavia in tlapanco ixpan conquetzato in Capitan in iautachcauh. Auh in oixpan conquetzato, njmã ie ic qujtta, qujmoottitia, qujpepepetla in Quauh-temoctzin: njman ic itlan qujtlalique yoan contlaz-que in tlequjqujztli, aiac ic qujmotlaque, çan impan qujquijxtique çan jmjcpac qujz in macevalti: njman ic cẽtetl convicaque, concalaqujque in acalli: vmpa cõvicaque in jchan Coiovevetzin. Auh in oacique: njmã ic tlecoque in tlapanco: njman ie ic no ceppa temjctia ẽjec in vncan mjc: auh çã choloque, çan jc vmpolivito in iauiotl:

nec valtzatzioa: qujtoa. Ie ixqujch ma qujxoa: xicmoqualtitin in qujltzintli: in oiuh qujcacque in njman ie ic oneoa in macevalli: njman ie ic vi, çan atlan. 727

Auh in oqujçato vei vtli ipan, ie no ceppa cequjn vmpa qujnmjctia, ic qualãque in Españoles in oc no çan cequjntin qujtquj in immaquauh yoan inchimal: in calla onoca qujvalmelauhque in amaxac vallame-laoa, in vncan vel vmaxac: vncan xexeliuh in mace-valli, ixqujch tepeiacac itztia, ixqujch xoxovilxitlã itztia, ixqujch nonoalco itztia. Auh in xollocopa, yoan in maçatzintamalcopa, aiac vmpa itztia.

1. Repeated: the title is contained in the MS.

2. Probably an auxiliary salvo, without projectiles; we know that Cortés used this system to impress the Indians. Perhaps this time it was to pay over the end of the war (guerrand ceremonialidad, Rafael García Granados).

3. Seler, op. cit., p. 303, implies that they brought a cannon (cañonazo, quemó). What appears to be the corresponding Spanish text reads: "quando este domonicio salieron dos cosas de mentiras y entraron en la casa de un principal que se llamaba Coiouacuetzin."

4. Corresponding Spanish text: "donde quedaron [illegible] muchos indios de los amigos de los españoles matandolos."

5. So many: Sandoz, op. cit. Cf., however, Seler, op. cit.

701 565 general[10] Coyouecatzin; the commanding general Temilotzin; the army commander[11] Topantemoctzin; the chief justice[12] Auelitoctzin; the captain of the armies[13] Uitzilinitzin; the Tlacopan ruler Uitzitzin. All of these rulers were assembled at Tolmayecan; they appeared to consult among themselves how this should be done: what we should offer as tribute, and how we should yield to [the Spaniards].

●728 Thereafter only two [men] took Quauhtemoc in a boat. The two who took him and went with him were the seasoned warrior Teputzitoloc, and Yaztachimal, Quauhtemoc's page. And the one who poled [the boat] was named Cenyaotl.

And when they carried Quauhtemoc off, then there was weeping among all the common folk. They said: "Now goeth the young lord Quauhtemoc; now he goeth to deliver himself to the gods, the Spaniards!"

cateccatl. Temjlotzin. Ticociavacatl. Topantemoctzin. Miscoatlailotlactzin. Auelitoctzin, vitznaoatl. vitzilivitzin. tepanecatl vitzitzin: in machintin in tlatoque, in ocentlaliticatca tolmaiecan mononotztoca in quenjn muchioaz in tlein tictequjtizque: auh in quenjn intlan toncalaqujzque.

Niman ic ic qujvica in Quauhtemoctzin, acaltica, çan ommote: vmẽtin in convicaçque, itlan ietiaque. Teputzitoloc tequjoa, yoan Jaztachimal ixolouh in Quauhtemoctzin. Auh ce qujtlanelhujtia itoca Cenjautl:

auh in jquac ie qujvica in Quauhtemoctzin: njmã ie ic mochoqujlia in iaqujch macevalli qujtoque. Je iauh in tlacatl xocoiotl in Quauhtemoctzin ic iauh qujnmomacaz in teteu in Españoles.

10. Tlacochcalcatl. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, loc. cit.

11. Tlacatecatl. Cf. Clark, op. cit., I, fol. 65. The codex is contained in the Florentine Codex.

12. Mixcoatlailotlaca. Cf. Clark, op. cit., fol. 68.

13. Tepanecatl. Cf. Chimalpahin, op. cit., p. 242. Cervantes de Salazar, op. cit., III, p. 288, mentions captains at the same time as Quauhtemoc of the ruler of Tacuba (Tlacopan); so does Ixtlilxochitl, op. cit., p. 68.

All went forth afoot holding, by their capes, Quauhtemoc, Coanacotzin, and Tetlepanquetzatzin[9] — grasping only these three: [And also appeared] the ruler's vicar Tlacotzin, the lords' judge Petlauhtzin, the captain of the armies Motelchiuhtzin, the constable of Mexico, the lord priest Coatzin, the keeper Tlaçolyaotl — the men who guarded all the gold.

Then they went straightway to Atactzinco,[9] to the house of the chieftain and commanding general Coyoueuetzin. The Spaniards came in files; they stretched out in two rows, which went to their ends at a distance and extended far. And when they had reached the house of Coyoueuetzin, then they climbed up to the roof-top, on to a platform. Then they sat down. With a many-colored cloth they made a canopy for the Captain. Then the Marquis sat there, and with him stood Marina.

And Quauhtemoc was by the Captain. He had bound on the cape of quetzal feathers, each half of different color, with humming bird feathers, after the manner of those of Ocuillan. It looked soiled. He had only this. Then, after him, came Coanacotzin, ruler of Texcoco, who had bound on only a maguey fiber cape bordered with flowers and with a design of radiating flowers. It also seemed dirty. Then after him came Tetlepanquetzatzin, ruler of Tlacopan. He likewise was covered by a cape of maguey fiber, also very dirty — much soiled. Then, next, came the chief justice Auelitoctzin, and last walked Yopicatl Popocatzin, a prince. On the other side were the men of Tenochtitlan — Tlacotzin, Petlauhtzin, Motelchiuhtzin, the constable of Mexico, the lord priest Coatzin, and the keeper Tlaçolyaotl.[10]

muchintin vallacxipanvitiaque, quivalquitzquitia- 728 que itilmatitech in Quauhtemoctzin, Coanacotzin, Tetlepanquetzatzin, çan icixtin valmantiaque. Auh in Cioacoatl tlacutzin: Tiillancalquj. petlauhtzin, vitznaoatl, motelchiuhtzin mexicatl. Achcauhtli, Tecutlamacazquj, Coatzin, tlatlati, tlaculiautl, in ie-hoantin in quipiaia in jxquich tescujtlatl:

njman vmpa tlamelauhque in atactzinco, in vncan ichan in tiiscauh in tlacuchcalcatl, in Coioveetzin: pipilivi in Españoles, ie vmmecatl motilinja, veca tlantivi, veca acitivi: auh in oacito in jchã coioveetzin, njmã ic tlecoque in tlapanco, in tlapechco: njman ic motlalique, tlatlapalquauhtli in quicevalcatique capitan, njmã ic oncã ommotlali in Marques, itlan ommotlali in Malintzin:

auh in Quauhtemoctzin itlan ca in Capitan: in [292] quimolpilia quetzalichpeztli, tlatlacuhujtectli, vitzitzilin hivio injc ocujlinecaio, omach catzaoac, çan quizcavitica: njmã contoquilitica in Coanacutzin, tetzcucu tlatoanj: in quimolpilitica, çan vel ichtilmatli, xoxochitcio, xochimoiiaoac, omach no catzaoac: njmã cõtoquilitica. Tetlepanquetzatzi, tlacuban tlatoanj, çã no itubquj in quimolpilitica in ichtilmatli, ono vel catzactix, ouel catzaoac: njmã contoquilitica. Mixcoatlailotlac, avelitoctzin: tlatzacutica Jopicatl, pupucatzin, pilli: cectlapal onoque in tenochca. Tlacutzin. Petlauhtzin. Motelchiuhtzin mexicatl, achcauhtli, tecutlamacazquj, coatzintlatlati, Tlaculiautl. [292]

9. Rulers of Tlacopan and of the Tlaxpanec, respectively, according to Buenaventura, op. cit., p. 222.

9. "Donde abrea una ediffiçada la iglesia de Santa Leuda, aqui en el Tlatelolco" — loc. cit.

10. Tlacochcalcatl: the cedilla is omitted in the MS. In this passage, coatzintlatlati appears to be run together in the MS. Cf., however, Molina, op. cit., and Simeon, op. cit. (Anales).

[p. 120 is blank]

648
728

Forty-first Chapter, in which are told the words with which Don Hernando Cortés addressed the rulers of all the cities, here in Mexico, in Tezcoco, and in Tlacopan, when the shields had been stilled, and [how] he questioned them as to the gold which [the Spaniards] had in haste scattered there at the Tolteca canal, when they escaped and fled from Mexico.

Thereupon the Marquis, the Captain, addressed the rulers. He said to them: "What of the gold which was stored in Mexico?" On this, all the gold was taken from the boats — the golden banners, the golden conical caps, the golden arm bands, the golden bands for the calf of the leg, the golden hatds, the golden discs. All [these] they had laid out before the Captain, [and] indeed all of it the Spaniards had taken up.

Then, the Captain said: "Is this all the gold which was stored in Mexico? Have you brought all of it forth?" For our lords sought it diligently.

Then Tlacotzin spoke: "May our lord, the god, hear! That which was brought to our palace we walled up, all of it, with adobes. Did not, in truth, our lords take it all with them?"

Then Marina said to him: "The Captain saith, 'It is so. We took all of it. All was gathered together, and all was marked. And they caused us to cast away all of it there at the Tolteca canal, there where they all set upon us. They must bring forth all!'"

Thereupon the ruler's vicar Tlacotzin answered: "May the god, the Captain, hear! The men of Tenochtitlan rise not [to battle] in boats; it is not their wont. Only the men of Tlatilulco have made it their way of doing. In boats they gave battle and set forth to stem the advance of our lords. Did not in truth those of Tlatilulco take it all?"

After this Quauhtemoc spoke and said to the ruler's vicar: "What dost thou say, O ruler's vicar? Even if the men of Tlatilulco took it, were not the guilty imprisoned therefore? Did they not produce all of it? Was it not gathered together at Texopan? And what took our lords with them [if] not this?" Quauhtemoc pointed to the gold with his finger.

Inic omopeuhti ocn capitanlo vncã mjtoa in tlatolli inic quijnonotz do hernando Cortes in jaquijchtin altepetl ipã tlatoque in njcan Mexico: auh tetzcoco, tlacopa, in jquac ic omoman chimalli, in quijtemolinia in cuaitic teucujtlatl, in vncan quijcemanxiquijquc tulteca acalco, in jquac quijquc, choloque mexico.

Niman ic ic quijnonotza in Marques in Capitan in tlatoque: quijmjlhuja. Catli in teucujtlatl? in omopiaia Mexico: njman ic ic vallaquixtilo in acalco in jaquijch in teucujtlatl, in teucujtlapanjtl, in teucujtlacopilli, in teucujtlamatemecatl, in teucujtlacotevatl, in teucujtlaquacalaladi, in teucujtlacomalli: muchi ixpan contecaque in capitan, çã much ichoan in Españoles in vallaquixtique:

njman ic ic quijtoa in Capitan, çan ic iaquijch in in teucujtlatl? in omopiaia Mexico, muchi anquijnextiaque? ca vel quijcemoa in totecujovan:

Nimã ic ic ontlatoa in Tlacutzin. Tla quijmocaquijti in totecujo in teutl, ca oipan maxitico in totecpan, ca much ticxxxantzacque, amo nel much quijmotequjlique in totecujovan?

njman quivalito in Malintzin, quijmjtalhuja in Capitan, Quemaca ca much ticcujque, muchi omocentlali, yoan muchi omumachioti: auh ca much techtlaçaltique in vncã tulteca acalco, much oncã techtepevaltique, much quijnextizque:

njmã ic ic tlanaquijlia in Cioacoatl tlacutzin, tla quijmocaquijti in teutl in Capitã. Ca vel acalco moquetza in tenuchcatl, ca amo ichivil, ca çan incincavil quijchiuh in tlatilulcatl, in acaltica tlaicocque, in quijnecatzacujlito in totecujovã amo nel ichoantin muchi quijcujque in tlatilulca:

njmã ic ic vallatoa in Quauhtemoctzin: quivalilhuj in Cioacoatl, tlein tiquijtoa Cioacoatle: maço quijcojq in tlatilulca, amo ic çaçaque in tlamacoubque? amo muchi quijnextique? amo ixpan in mocochico? auh tlein oconmocujlique in totecujovan amo ichoatl in? oconmapilhuj in teucujtlatl in Quauhtemoctzin:

648 728 Then Marina spoke to him: "The Captain saith, 'Is this all?'"

Then the ruler's vicar spoke: "Purchance some commoner took it. But it will be sought; our lord the Captain will behold it."

Then once again Marina spoke: "The Captain saith, 'Ye will find all two hundred [pieces] of gold.'" She measured off [the size] with her hands; her hands described a circle.[1]

Again the ruler's vicar answered; he said: "Doubtless some poor woman put it in her skirt. It shall be sought out. He shall behold it."

Upon this the chief justice Auelitoctzin spoke; he said: "May the lord, our lord Captain, hear! When Moteçuma yet was [alive], when somewhere there was to be a conquest, the men of Mexico and of Tlatilulco, the Tepaneca and the Acolhua, moved together. All the Tepaneca, all the Acolhua, and all the dwellers in the swamp lands — we set out together when we conquered. And when the city fell, thereupon all turned back. Each man returned to [his] city. And thereafter came the masters of the city, the conquered ones. They brought their tribute, which had become the goods of [the victors]: green stone, gold, quetzal feathers, and the other precious stones — fine turquoise; and blue cotinga feathers, and red spoonbill feathers. They offered this to Moteçuma. All together it reached there. All together, there to Tenochtitlan, came all the tribute, all the gold."

njmã quivalilhuj in Malintzin quimjtalhuja in capitan. Çan ie ixquich in?

njman ic conjto in cioacoatl, aço aca quiçquizti in Macevalli, atel motlazemoliz, a quimottilia in totecujo in capitan:

njmã ie no ceppa quivallito in Malintzin, quimjtalhuja in Capitan Matlacpoalli anquinextiaque in teucujtlatl ixquich in: quivalxamachiuh imatica, quivaliavallali in jma:

ie no ceppa ontlananquijli in civacoatl: quijto. Aço ça aca ipan mocueti in civatzintli, a motemolia, a quimottilia:

njman ie ic ontlatoa in Miscoatlailotlac, avelitoctzin: quijto. tla quimocaquijti in tlacatl in totecujo in Capitan, in oc vnca Motecuçoma, in jquac ontrepevaloia cana, ca cemolinj in Mexicatl, in tlatilulcatl, in tepanecatl in aculhoa: in jxquich tepanecatl, in jxquich aculhoa yoan in jxquich chinampanecatl, ca ticemolinj, in tontepeva: auh in onia altepetl, ca njmã ie ic valnecuepalo, ceceniaca cõmati in jmaltepeuh. Auh çatepan valhuj in altepevaque in ie pevallaca, quivalitquj in intlacalaquijl, intlatquj valmuchiuhtiuh in chalchivitl in teucujtlatl, in quetzalli yoan in oc cequj tlaçotetl, in teuxivitl, in xiuhtototl, in tlauhquechol: quijtõlmacaia in Motecuçoma, çan cẽ vmpa valaci, çã vmpa valmocemaci in tenuchtitlan in jxquich tlacalaquijli in teucujtlatl.

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "Otra vez dice Marina: 'El capitán dice que buscarán doscientos escudos de oro sin quedar, como sale y enhelaba con las manos, el grosor de una pulgada de ancho.'"

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 If the vanquished tribe found no such point of refuge, then the pursuit continued without relenting until the town or settlement itself was reached. Frequently both pursuers and pursued entered it almost at the same time. The torch was applied to the temple first, and an indiscriminate slaughter of non-combatants began.[169]

728 Nothing short of speedy submission to tribute could arrest this butchery. The vanquished, therefore, if not prepared to flee from their homes forever,[170] made signals of peace. A parley ensued, and to it succeeded a surrender on the part of the defeated tribe. Generally one year of tribute was paid in advance, and thus the Mexicans might return homewards loaded, both with the spoils acquired on the battlefield and with the first guarantee of future contributions from the vanquished tribe.[171]

726 It sometimes occurred, however, that the tribe attacked had provided its settlement with artificial defenses, and the Mexicans, victorious in the open field, found themselves in presence of the simple fortifications, which we shall hereafter describe, like palisades or even platforms of earth or stone surmounted by parapets. An attack upon these was only attempted if there appeared no doubt as to the result, in consequence of the superiority of the Mexicans, or of the great losses sustained by their defenders in the previous fights.[172] Then, but only then, ladders were con-

[346]

[169] The "teo-calli" or temple being in the centre of the settlement, and also its highest, and therefore, according to Indian notions, its strongest edifice, the destruction thereof by fire was the signal of decisive victory of the assailants. See Tezozomoc (Cap. XIX, pp. 30 and 31). Durán (Cap. XV, p. 129).

[170] In cases where the pueblo of the enemy had been completely deserted, either through flight of its inhabitants, or through their extermination, as was the case with Alahuitzlan, these sections were repeopled by colonies from Nahuatl stock. Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXIV, pp. 125 and 126) and Durán (Cap. XLV, p. 364, etc.) both relate in detail how it occurred. This may account in some degree for the presence of Nahuatlac stock at a distance from the valley, and may yet throw some light even upon the singular colonization of the Peruvian "Mitimacs."

[171] This suing for peace, where the tribe was of foreign stock-language, took place, sometimes through interpreters, "nahuatlats," sometimes merely by signs. The defeated generally fled to the top of a hill and from there beckoned to the pursuing Mexicans to stop the carnage, with humble and pitiful gestures. But the first parley did not always result in peace. The massacre of women and children recommenced often twice, ere the tribute offered by the vanquished satisfied the Mexicans. This tribute was exacted in proportion to the resistance offered and to the resources of the tribe. After peace was agreed upon the Mexicans still feasted from the food of those whom they had ruthlessly conquered. The prisoners, once taken, were never released nor exchanged. They had to carry the spoils and tribute to Mexico, but were generally well fed and cared for until the day when they were slaughtered to the idols.

[172] A good illustration is found in Tezozomoc (Caps. XC and XCI), describing the foray against Tututepec and Quetzaltepec. But Durán is still more explicit on the same events. According to him (Cap. LVI, p. 547), after the unfortified pueblo of Tu-

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

174 in the lagune, they were confined to their original area and to such
648 artificial garden-beds as they accumulated around it. Meanwhile their allies on the mainland, the Tecpanecas, were making themselves formidable in warfare to the other tribes; the Mexicans assisting. The moment arrived however, when the latter, having secured a defensive position, acquired military experience and greater strength, sought to free themselves from the tax which had heretofore burthened their trade and barter. War ensued, and the Mexicans, now in turn supported by enemies of the Tecpanecas, completely overthrew the power of the latter tribe. By this victory, they not only secured a foothold on the mainland, but became at once one of the ruling tribes of the western valley of Mexico.[54]

728 The only territorial accession gained by the Mexicans, in fact the only one claimed by them, appears to have been the hill of Chapultepec. They already had the use of the springs rising there, now they acquired their full and unincumbered possession.[55] The remainder of Tecpanecan territory was left to that tribe intact, and in no manner annexed to that of Mexico. The organization of the tribe, its government, and distribution of the soil, remained equally undisturbed. No Mexican representatives were delegated to rule Azcaputzalco or Cuyuacan. But the Mexicans in turn subsequently controlled the military power of the conquered tribe, and, besides, it was thereafter held to tribute. This

[54] Durán (Cap. IX and X). Tezozomoc (Cap. VII. VIII. IX. X. XI, XII, XIII. XIV and XV). Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XIII and XIV). Herrera (Dec. III, lib. II, cap. XII and XIII). Ixtlilxochitl (Hist. des Chichim.," Cap. XXX, XXXI and XXXII). Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. XXXV, XXXVI and XXXVII). Veytia (Lib. II, cap. I, LI. LII. LIII and LIV). Clavigero (Lib. III, cap. XVII, XVIII and XIX). Bustamante (Part I. cap. XXIII). Prescott ("History of the Conquest of Mexico," Book I, cap. I, pp. 15 and 18).

721 [55] It is even stated that the petition of the Mexicans for stone and wood to construct therewith a channel leading from Chapultepec to their pueblo, was the cause of the war. See Durán (Cap. VIII, p. 63). Tezozomoc (Cap. V, pp. 11 and 12). Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. II, p. 476. "Con esta ocasion, ora sea que ellos de propósito lo buscassen, para romper con los Tepanécas, ora que con poca consideracion se moviessen, al efecto embiaron una embaxada al Rey de Azcapuzalco muy resoluta diziendo, que del agua que los auia hecho merced, no podian aprovecharse, por auerseles desbaratado el caño por muchas partes. por tanto le pedian los proviniésse de madera, y cal, y piedra, y embiasse sus oficiales que con ellos hiziessen un caño de cal y canto que no se desbaratasse.") Chapultepec remained specifically Mexican soil thereafter, it being the source of fresh water for the pueblo of Mexico. When Cortés moved against the tribe the second time, he seized the hill after a short but desperate struggle. (Cortés "Carta Tercera," p. 71, Vedia I. Bernal-Diez, cap. CL, p. 176, Vedia II. Clavigero. Lib. X. cap. XVII). See also Icazbalceta, in his Introduction to the 3d Dialogue of Cervántes-Salazar ("Mexico in 1554," pp. 236 and 237). Veytia (Lib. III, cap. I, p. 142, of 3d vol.). Bustamante ("Tezcoco en los últ. Tiempos." Parte IIa, cap. I, p. 148).

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

tribute was gathered by stewards, the only Mexicans permanently residing on Tecpanecan soil, and it was distributed in accordance with the tribal organization: among the calpules for the use of their public households and of their individual members, and to the "tecpan" for the maintenance of the tribal government and business; out of the former, a certain share was reserved for the purpose of religious worship.[56]

This tribute consisted of objects held and acquired by the Tecpanecas through trade, war and their own manufacture. But it also included the products of their horticulture. These had to be raised annually either on their own garden-beds, or on a certain expanse reserved in each "calpulli" for the production of tribute. The Tecpanecas having the same system of distribution of the soil as the Mexicans, and the hundred group being the unit of their organization also, the latter method was naturally resorted to. Therefore in each one of the areas held by the calpules of the conquered tribe, a certain plot was set off, to be tilled in common by the members of the kin, for the benefit of their conquerors.

[56] Acosta says (Lib. VII, cap. XIII, p. 485), that they took all the lands for themselves: "with this, those of Azcapuzalco were left so poor, that they had not even crops of their own." Durán (Cap. IX, p. 79. "They went to Azcaputzalco and seized ('se entregaron') its lands and distributed them among themselves.") Tezozomoc (Cap. IX. p. 16 and 17). It is difficult to connect these and similar statements with the positive facts asserted by Zurita (Rapport sur les différentes classes de chefs de la Nouvelle Espagne.") "The sovereign of Mexico had beneath him, in all matters relating to warfare, those of Tacuba and of Tezcuco; in regard to all others, their powers were equal, so that neither of them intervened in the government of the others" (p. 11),—by Veytia (Lib. III, cap. III, p. 161), and even by Ixtlilxochitl ("Hist. des Chichim.," Cap. XXXIV; p. 235), which establish the complete territorial independence of the Tecpanecas from the Mexicans; even after their defeat. Durán also says (Cap. IX, p. 77): that the Tecpanecas promised tribute and lands. Tezozomoc (Cap. IX, p. 16) confirms, stating that they offered tribute, personal service, and assistance in war. We cannot concilate these different reports except by admitting that the Tecpanecas submitted to the ordinary manner of Indian conquest, namely: to tribute, to military aid, and for the purpose of tribute, to the reservation of certain tracts whose crops were to go exclusively to the conquerors. Of the latter we have positive proof. See Durán (Cap. IX. p. 79). Tezozomoc (Cap. IX, p. 17). Only these authors mention that these tracts went to persons or individuals. But how is this possible, since no individual possession of land appears in Mexico, at the time of the conquest even; as we shall see further on. The tracts in question must, therefore, have been given to such persons as representatives of certain kinships, or "calpules," as Tezozomoc intimates, saying (Cap. XV, p. 21): "and let us distribute the lands among all of us, in order to hold of them some pastime and sustenance for us, our children and heirs." Besides, Durán asserts: that the division took place for the benefit of the chiefs, and of the quarters ("barrios," or calpules), which tends to prove that there were "official lands" and "lands of the kinship" set off for the conquerors on the conquered territory. That a portion of the latter provided for religious purposes, is established by Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XIII, p. 485), and by Durán (Cap. IX).

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

651 The crops raised thereon were again apportioned by the latter among themselves as we have explained previously, but they did not acquire any title to the possession, still less to the ownership of the soil itself.[37] Once started on their career of conquest, the

728 [37] See Durán (Cap. IX. p. 79 and 80). Tezozomoc (Cap. IX, p. 16. "Para amansar y traher á paz á los Mexicanos que tan pujantes y orgullosos estavan contra los Tecpanecas, digéron estos: señores Mexicanos, como vencidos que somos de vostros, y os tenemos dadas nuestras hermanas y hijas que os sirvan y nuestras mugeres, y nos preferimos á vassallage, y de todas las veces que fuéredes en guerras y batallas con estrañas, irémos nosotros como vassallos, y llevarémos à cuestas vuestro matalotage, y llevarémos á cuestas vuestras armas, y en caso que en las guerras, algunos, à alguno de los Mexicanos muriere, nos proférimos á traheros los cuerpos cargados á vuestra tierra, ciudad, á ser con honra enterrados, y vencidos que seais de las guerras, y antes y despues barerémos, y regarémos, vuestras casas, tendrémos cuidado de vosotros con nuestro servicio personal, pues asi estamos obligados conforme á usanza de guerra, y nosotros de servidumbre." The Mexicans then spoke to themselves and said: "you now have heard the promises, subjection, and domination to which the Tecpanecas of Ascaputzalco submit, offering to give us wood, planking, stones and lime for our houses, to plant for us maize, beans, calabashes, spices of the country, chile, and tomate, and to be our servants, and the principals of them to become our stewards . . . .") This expresses about the amount and measure of subjection of one tribe to another. Zurita further informs us (pp. 66 and 67). "When the Kings of Mexico, Tezcuco and Tacuba conquered a province, they used to retain all the native chieftains in their offices; whether they were supreme or but inferior. The people always kept its property, finally the usages and customs of the established government were respected. These sovereigns designated territories proportionate to their conquests: the vanquished tilled them in common and made plantings appropriate to the soil. This kind of tribute, or homage ("homage-lige"), was paid to officers ("des intendants") established by the sovereigns of Mexico, of Tezcuco, or Tacuba, according as the vanquished had become vassals of one or of the other prince. Besides, they were liable to military service, which obligation rested indiscriminately on all the conquered provinces. The chiefs remaining Lords as before the war, preserved civil and criminal jurisdiction in the full extent of their domain." Nevertheless, we have detailed reports about certain lands having been applied by the Mexicans to certain chiefs (Tezozomoc, cap. XV, p. 24): it was done at the time that such chiefs received certain titles or dignities. These titles and dignities, however, were not hereditary, but elective (Durán, cap. XI, p. 103). "To these four chiefs and titularies, after they were elected princes) they made them belong to the royal council as presidents and members ("oydores?) of the supreme council, without whose opinion (or consent, advice "parecer") nothing could be done, and the King being dead, from these and no others his successor had to be chosen, and neither could they be placed in such positions unless they were sons or brothers of Kings, and thus, if one of these four had been promoted, they put another one in his place, and it is to know that they never chose a son of him whom they elected for King, or of him who died, because as I have said, the sons did not obtain the titles through inheritance, but by election. Thus, whether son, brother, or cousin, if the King and his council elected him to any title, it was given to him,—it being sufficient that he belonged to that lineage and was a near relative, and thus the sons and brothers went succeeding little by little, and the title and Lordship remained in that generation (descendancy), being elected successively. These Lords had vassals who to them paid tribute, small pueblos, rented lands ("estancias terrazgueros") that gave them all kinds of supplies and clothing . . . . ." It is also stated that the Mexicans, when they conquered the Tecpanecas, distributed of their lands to the quarters (Cap. IX. p. 79. Durán,—and Alvarado, Lib. VII, cap. XIII, p. 460. "Señalaron tambien tierras de comun para los barrios de Mexico a cada uno las suyas, para que con ellas acudiesen al culto y sacrificio de sus dioses.")

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Mexicans, supported by their allies, sought to extend their power. The tribes of the southeast, the Xochimilcas, the Chinampanecas, (also called the four chieftaincies: "Nauhteuctli") were the first to become their prey. Their fate, after they had once submitted, was the same as that of the Tecpanecans. The territory was not annexed, neither was the organization changed. But they were held to military assistance, and especially to tribute. The latter drew forth, as a consequence, the establishment of tribute-lands, like those which we have already met with at the close of the Tecpanecan war.[58]

When finally, after a contest of unusual length and bitterness, the tribe of Chalco also had to submit to the same conditions of tribute and warlike control,[59] — the Mexicans were really the leading power of the valley.[60] Their means of subsistence, besides, had greatly increased through tribute, among which the crops of the tribute-lands were most conspicuous — as well as through trade. One single tribe of the "Nahuatl" of the valley remained unsubdued, the Aculhuas of Tezcuco. Instead, however, of engaging in a deadly conflict, the result of which might have been equally

If we attentively consider the above, we find:

(1). That no change was made in the tenure of lands, and no conversion of the Tecpanecan territory into a Mexican domain was effected by the conquest.

(2). That certain expanses were set aside, which continued to be held by the conquered, and worked by them after the usual communal plan, but whose crops went exclusively towards the tribute.

(3). That these crops were divided, corresponding to the organization of the Mexicans, — between the official requirements — ("tecpan" —) ("calpulli" as official house for the quarters) — the people (quarters "barrios,") and worship. The analogy with Peru (Inca, worship and people), is striking.

The distribution of lands to certain chiefs therefore, mentioned in connection with the conquest of the Tecpanecas, simply indicates that these lands were applied to the maintenance of such offices, and not an hereditary "fief" to a certain family. Durán positively expresses, that the office belonged in the "kin" ("lignea" — "generacion,") and was not hereditary. The lands therefore pertained to the office as a governmental feature of the kinship or calpulli, and not to the person or offspring of any incumbent. In the same way, certain tracts (or rather their crops), went to the tecpan or its occupants, as a governmental feature of the tribe (Bustamante, Parte III cap. V, p. 233).

[58] Durán (Cap. XII. Id. XIII, p. 1[illegible]. XIV, p. 122). Tezozomoc (Cap. XVII, p. 28, XVIII, p. 29), and Acosta.

[59] Durán (Cap. XVII, p. 152). Tezozomoc (Cap. XXVI, pp. 39 and 40). Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XVI, p. 468), etc. etc.

[60] Out of the five Nahuatl tribes who had originally settled in the valley of Mexico, three were then subjected to the Mexicans. Consequently the Tezcucans or Aculhuacans alone remained. Territorially, the latter probably covered the larger expanse, but the Mexicans and their allies had the advantage in position and numbers.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

631 of social organization. The confederacy of tribes, as we have 648 already shown, carried no influence whatever on the organization.

no era menor señor el Caconci de Mechuacan, y otros que reconoscian al uno ni al otro." We quote this passage merely as a general illustration.

Fray Bernardino de Sahagun. Historia general de las Cosas de Nueva-España, published by Sr. C. M. de Bustamante, in 1829 (Vol. II. lib. VIII. cap. III. p. 276), "El cuarto señor de Tezcoco se llamó Netzahualcoiotzin, y reinó setenta y un años, y en tiempo de esto se comenzaron las guerras, y tuvo el señorio de Tezcoco siendo señor del de México Itzcoatzin, y estos entrambos hicieron guerra á los de Tecpaneca, de Atzcaptzalco, y á otros pueblos y provincias, y el fué fundador del señorio de Tezcoco in Acuihoacan." (Id. Vol. III. lib XII. cap. XLI, page 59, close of chapter.)

Fray Diego Durán. Historia de los Yndias de Nueva España é Islas de Tierra Firme. Published by Sr. José Fernandez Ramirez at Mexico, in 1867, (Cap. XIV, p. 123). "El rey Itzcoatl, aunque mal dispuesto, holgó de la victoria y dió las gracias á todos los señores y principales, al qual, agravándosele la enfermedad, entendiendo de se acertarególe la muerte, mandó llamar al Señor de Tezcuco, Neçaualcoyotl, pariente cercano suyo, y aconsejóle que no tuviese guerra con los Mexicanos, sus parientes y amigos, sino que antes se hiciese con ellos y fuese en su favor siempre: y dexó ordenado que desde en adelante fuese de Tezcuco el segundo rey de la comarca y el tercero el de Tacuba, á quien llamauan el rey de Tlaluecpan. . . ." (p. 124). ". . . y solo estos tres reynos mandaron y governaron la tierra, de hoy en adelante, siendo el de México sobre todos ellos, y casi como emperador y monarca del nueuo mundo." Nearly the whole of Cap. XV is devoted to the formation of the confederacy, but cannot be inserted here. The editor, Sr. J. F. Ramirez, appears to incline to the opinion, however, that there was a confederacy on equal terms, (note 2, p. 130). The same author also [796] states repeatedly that the head-chiefs of Tezcuco and Tlacopan sacrificed (slaughtered) captives at the chief teo-calli of Mexico, on very solemn occasions, together with the head-chief of Mexico, thus showing equal rights. (Cap. XXIII, p. 197 and others.) But his plainest statement is found (Cap. XLIII, p. 317), and reads as follows: "Algunos han querido decir quel reyno de Tezcuco era libre de todo reconocimiento y parias al monarca, y que en nada le era sujeto, lo qual allo al contrario en esta ystoria Mexicana; porque aunque á la verdad no tributauan á Mexico mantas ni joias ni plumas ni cosas de comida, como otras provincias tributauan, hallo empero á los Mexicanos metidos en las tierras tezcucanas donde sembraban y cogian, y algunos dellos hechos terrazgueros de los señores de México; y allo que en ofreciéndose estas fiestas y solenidades, daban tributo descianos para ella, de lo qual ninguno estaua esento ni reservado. Tambien allo que ofreciéndose dar guerra á alguna ciudad y provincia, al primero que llamauan y acudian para que apercibiese sus gentes, era al rey de Tezcuco, y como abemos, notado en esta ystoria, le hacian venir á Mexico todas las veces que se ofrecia ocasion, loqual no era poca sujecion, dado que tuviese sus préeminencias y libertades de rey y señor de aquella provincia de Aculuacan; . . . ."

Fernando de Alvarado Tezozomoc. Crónica Mexicana. (9th Vol. of Lord Kingsborough's "Antiquities of Mexico.") This author agrees so closely with Durán in most instances, that we can dispense with full quotations. See Cap. XIX and XX, on the pretended conquest of Tezcuco by the Mexicans. Tezozomoc is very positive on the question of joint sacrifice (Cap. LXIX. p. 117). A singular remark is, however, found (Cap. XCVII. p. 173). After the Huexotzincas had sent delegates to Mexico to sue for [728] peace, the Mexican council was called together: "dijo zihuacoatl resoluto: Señor, como será esto, si no lo saben vuestros consegeros de guerra los reyes de Acuihuacan-Nezahualpilli, y el de Tecpanecas Tlaltecatzin? hagase entero cabildo y acuerdo: fue acordado asi." This important incident shows that not even the Mexicans had the right to treat alone with a power hostile to the three tribes, consequently that the other two were their confederates, and not their feudal vassals. Fray Durán confirms the incident in chapter LX, p. 473, of his work, precedingly quoted.

Joseph de Acosta, Historia natural y moral de las Indias, Madrid, 1608, derives his information from the same source as the two preceding, namely: the Codex Rami

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

311 578 achieved by the relatively unlimited possibilities of chinampa agriculture.

729 The Tenochcas supplemented their land hunger by an-
728 other means. In conquered territories successful warriors
471 received grants of land which were worked by members of the defeated tribe. Small colonies sometimes lived off this
[428] land to guard against revolt in the subjugated area. Such property passed from father to son, but if there were no heir it reverted to the tribal authority, not the clan in which the tenant had membership. Other such land must have been held for the benefit of the religious organization. Thus the central authority of Tenochtitlan, and presumably Texcoco as well, held considerable property to support the elaborate pomp of Church and State without straining the resources of the tribesmen. The relative fluidity of such real estate gave the tribal authority a wherewithal to adjust inequalities and dissatisfactions among the more ambitious tribal members. Naturally, as the Aztec peoples were less highly developed socially than ourselves, they did not attain our own elaborate system of rewards and adjustments by means of federal, state and municipal appointments.[8]

651 A powerful Aztec tribe had another source of support: tribute. The levies often consisted of foodstuffs and raw materials, both native and foreign to the Valley, and also included warriors' and priests' costumes, mantles, pottery and other articles of craftsmanship. Distributed throughout the community these goods enriched both communal enterprise and private convenience.[9] (See Plates 62, bottom right; 64.)

436 Manufacture and trade were beginning to play an im-
438 portant part in Aztec economy, although not to the extent
32 of societies which have developed media of exchange, like

X 796 292 And all the men, whether leaders of youths, or youths, had only black net cloaks, all with eyelets on the border, and all had turquoise [ear plugs].

Auh in ixquich tlacatl in çaçan tiiacaoã, telpopuchti: çan tiltic yn jncuechin, muchi tenjzo, yoan muchintin inxixiuh:

301 And those who led had only bell-shaped ear plugs.[4]

auh in tlaiacatia, çan incocoiolnacoch: auh in cocoiolnacoche: auh yn jntenpilol, qujnamictia, cequj aujtlatezli, cequj itzcujntenpilolli, cequj apatlactli, anoço tlaxantectli.

304 And those who had bell-shaped ear plugs, also had lip plugs. Some were like lizards, some like dogs, some like a broad-leafed water plant, some rectangular.

[729] And the youths who already wore [their] hair long [in token of war exploits] had lip plugs which were rounded.

Auh yn telpopuchtin, in ie tzotzocoleque, ymaachichilacachtempilol:

And all the [others] who were only youths [had] only circular lip plugs, which they set in place.

auh yn ixquich tlacatl in çan telpopuchti, çan iehoatl yn aiaoaltempilolli in contlalia.

[701] And the leaders of the youths bore breast plates made of small, white, sea shells. And those with shorn hair, the Otomí, wore their neck bands with round pendants.[5] These were shells.

Auh in teachcaoan, ymelpancuzquj, ymeelpancuzquj, cilin in tlachioalli: auh in quaquachictin, yn otomj, incuzcachachapac: iehoatl in chipulin.

And the shorn ones were provided with bird-formed lip plugs; and the Otomí were decked with lip plugs formed like the broad leaf of a water plant.

Auh yn quaquachicti qujnamjctia, iehoatl in tototenpilolli: auh yn otomj qujnamjctiaia, iehoatl yn apatlactli tenpilolli.

And those who were diligent to be leaders of the youths bought themselves real sea shell neck bands, all clear and limpid. And the lower class bought themselves [common] shell-fish for their neck bands, [which were] only yellow, not hard, and not very costly.

Auh yn aquijque in momocenmati, in tiacaoan, qujmococouja teuchipuli in cuzcatl, cenca chipaoac: auh in ça tlatzacuja in ça tlatoquaia, iehoatl yn achipulin qujmocoujaia, yn incuzquj, çan cuztic, amono tlaquaoac, amono cenca patio.

X 796 293 And those who had taken captives, the leaders of the youths, carried their feather shoulder devices in the form of birds. They carried them upright over their heads.

Auh in tlamanjme, in telpuchiaque, intototlamanal, in cõquequetztinemj yn imicpac.

[301 714] And the captains carried upon their shoulders feather devices [formed like] trees, tied in three places with eagle feather clusters bound with ocelot skin. And at the base they were wound in three places with red string.

Auh in tequjoque, quauhtzontli in qujmamaia, ezcan yietiuh, quauhtlalpilonj, ocelueoatica in tlaqujmilolli: auh in itzintlã ezcan in chichilicpatica tlacujxtli.

And some raised up quetzal feathers in the form of corn silk; some a forked heron feather ornament; some set up the head plumage in bird form; some the device made of diverse quetzal feathers.

237 X 796

Auh in cequjntin, xiloxochiquetzalli in conquetza in cequjntin uztaxelli, in cequjntin quatototl in conquetza, in cequjnti yntlatlachichioalquetzal.

293 And upon their legs, upon their left legs, they placed hooves, real deer hooves. And the thong was of real deer skin, cut thin, cut into narrow strips.

Auh yn imicxic ymopuchcopa in cõtlaliaia chocholli, vel iehoatl in maçachocholli: auh yn jmecaio, çan no iehoatl yn maçaeoatl, tlapitzaoacatectli, tlapitzaoacaxotlalli.

X 796 302 And thus were they variously painted: Some placed a black stain upon their cheeks, called "black cheek ash vase," and laid pyrites [upon the stain]. And some had a black [stripe] upon their foreheads, [in

Auh ynic mjchioaia, ẽjiec tlamantli, cequjtin tlilli incamapan contlaliaia, itoca tlilcamanexcomjtl, ca petzujaia: auh in cequjntin ymixquac qujujca in tlilli, in nacaztitlan conaxitia, motocaiotia tlilzotl,

4. In the corresponding Spanish text, Sahagún mentions copper, which may have been the material of which the bells were made.
5. Seler (op. cit., p. 144) hält dieses Perlenhalsband für [illegible]

and finally all the people of the uplands and those of the swamp lands."[4]

And Moctezuma said to them: "You have tired yourselves; you have suffered affliction, O men dexterous in war. Rest yourselves." [But] perhaps you only fool me. Let me still behold the truth of your account."

And then he confined them. If the report which they had made were not true, Moctezuma jailed them and did away with them

And there in battle was when captives were taken. When it had come to pass that they went against and conquered the city, then the captives were counted, there, in wooden cages: how many had been taken by Tenochtitlan, how many had been taken by Tlatilulco, and by the people of the swamp lands and the people of the dry lands everywhere. The captives were examined [to determine] how many groups of four hundred were formed.

Those who counted were the generals and the commanding generals. And then they sent messengers here to Mexico. Those who were sent as messengers were seasoned warriors, who informed Moctezuma of the great veracity of the four-hundred count. They brought word of how many groups of four hundred had been made captive.

And then they declared to him how many of the noblemen had won their reward for having made captives; that haply a number [of them] had had their hair shorn as seasoned warriors, or that some [had been made] leaders of the youths. When Moctezuma heard this, he rejoiced exceedingly, because his noblemen had taken captives. And at that time he freed those whom he had cast in jail—the victory messengers—and he gave them gifts along with the others.

And if war should be proclaimed against Atlixco, or Uexotzinco, and if there once again they took captives, they won much glory thereby; Moctezuma accorded them great honor for it. For his noblemen had taken captives, and had gained repute, and had reached the station of nobility—the estate of the eagle and the ocelot warriors. From there they came to rule, to govern cities; and at that time they seated them with [the nobility], and they might eat with Moctezuma.

565
868
701

Auh qujmjlhujaia in moteçuma, oanqujçisuhque: oanqujhijoujque in oçeloqujchtle: ximotlalican açoçan annechiztlacahuja, ma oc njcchia in jneltica tlatolli:

[687]

auh njman qujmoncaltzaqua intlacamo melaoac tlatolli oqujcaqujtique moteçuma qujntlatlatia qujnpopoloa.

727

Auh in vmpa iauc in iquac otlamaloc, in ie ihuquj in oia in oompoliuh, altepetl, njman ic mocempoa in mamalti, in vncan oacaltitla quezquj oaxioac in tenochtitlã, quezquj oaxioac in tlatilulco, auh inic noujian cenchinanpanecatl, centlalhoacpanecatl, mocemjtta in mamalti quezqujtzontli omuchiuh.

[202
701]

Jehoantin tlapoa in tlatlacochcalca, in tlatlacatecca: auh njman ic oallatitlanj, in njcan mexico, in oalmotitlanj ichoantin in tetequjoaque, in qujoalnonotza motecuçuma, in ie uel imelaoaca in jcentzontecca, in qujoalitquj tlatolli, in quezqujtzontli omochiuh malli:

auh in qujmelaujliaia in quezqujntin otlacnopilhujque in pipilti in otlamaque, açoçequjntin motequjoacxima anoce cequjntin telpuchiacati. Jn qujcaquja in motecuçuma cenca ic papaquja ipampa ca ipilhoan in ontlamaque: auh qujnjquac qujnqujxtiaia, in qujncaltzaquaia in tequjpan titlanti qujmõtehoan motlatlauhtia.

[431]

721
729
727

Auh intla oalmjtoz iaujotl in atlixco, açoçe vexotzinco, intla oc ceppa vmpa tlamazque, cenca ic vel panuetzi, ic cenca uel qujmmaujztilia in motecuçuma: ipampa ca ipilhoan in ontlamaque, in onmoteniotique in oconmjiaoaiotique in pillotl in quauhiotl, in oceloiotl, ic oncan in qujça in tlatocati, in qujpachoa altepetl, auh qujnjquac intlan qujntlalia: ytlan tlaqua in motecuçuma

4. Chinampanecatl: Sahagún's comment on fol. 13 of Book X of the Florentine Codex is descriptive: "y lo de la tierra seca, que son los cercados de las chinampas."

729
[643]
431
301

He gave them long, yellow labrets; or curved, yellow lip plugs; or long, blue labrets; or curved, blue lip plugs; or curved, green stone lip plugs; or green stone lip plugs; or lip shafts.[6] Then [he gave them] head bands with two quetzal feather tassels [intertwined] with flint knives [fashioned] of gold and with golden pendants; or head bands with two trupial feather tassels; and cured leather ear plugs; and costly capes—the one [known as] the lord's cape, with the obsidian serpent design; or the ashen gray one with red eyes on the border; or with earthen jars designed in feathers; or with the obsidian arrow step design; and costly breech clouts[6]—perhaps the breech clout with twisted ends, [or] with cotton at the ends—various kinds of costly breech clouts; and devices—perchance [the one with] the quetzal feather comb; or the golden banner; or the yellow Xolotl head; or the golden hood; or the golden conical cap; or the quetzal feather banner; or the obsidian butterfly with quetzal feathers and eyes of gold; and costly shields—perhaps [the one of] the skin [and feathers] of the blue cotinga; or of yellow parrot feathers—verily, all the costly shields. And he gave them stewardships: possibly in two places or in three he gave them [such offices]. For truly they had taken [captives].

643 And if the ruler should die, from these one was chosen to govern the city. And likewise from these, some were placed at the feet [of the judges] who pronounced judgments and meted out death sentences. [These were] the Tlacochcalcatl tecutli, or the Ticociauacatl tecutli, or the Cioacoatl tecutli, or the Tlillancalqui tecutli.[7] in qujnmaca coztic teçacatl, anoço coztic tencololli, anoço xoxouhquj teçacatl, anoço xoxouhquj tencololli, anoço chalchiuhtencololli, anoço calchiuhtenteetl, anoço tlanjtenteetl: njman ic quetzallaipilonj teucujtlatica tecpaio, ioan teucujtlatl in jpepeiocic, anoço çaquan tlalpilonj, ioan cuetlaxnacochtli, ioan tlaçotilmatli, ichoatl in tlatocatilmatli in jtzcoaio, anoço ixnextentlapallo, anoce iujticatetecomaio, anoço itzmjxicalcoliuhquj, yoan tlaçomaxtlatl, anoçe tzicoliuhquj maxtlatl, aiacaichcaio, içaço quesquijch tlaçomaxtlatl, ioan tlaujztli, aço quetzalpatzactli, anoço teucujtlapanjtl, anoço tozquaxolotl, anoço teucujtlaquacalalatli, anoçe teucujtlacopilli, anoço quetzalpanjtl, anoçe itzpapalotl quetzallo teucujtlatl in ixtelolo, ioan tlaçochimalli, aço xiuhtotoieoatl, anoçe tozeoatl in ie uel ixqujch tlaçotlanquj chimalli, ioan qujnmaca calpixcantli, aço ooccan, anoço eexcan in qujnmaca: ipampa ca nel ocaçique.

Auh intla mjqujz tlatoanj: ichoantin ceme anaiola, injc ichoantin qujpachqizque altepetl. Auh çan no ichoantin, cequjntin ontlalilo tlacxitlan, in vncan tecutlatoa, in tlatzontequj, in qujtzõtecticate mjqujztli: tlacochcalcatl tecutli, anoço ticociaoacatl, tecutli, aço çioacoatl tecutli, anoço tlillancalquj tecutli.

5. Tlaujztzotl: Seler, op. cit., p. 332, has tlaquistzotzotl.

6. After yoan tlaçomaxtlatl, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has the following, omitted from the Florentine Codex: quetzcomaxtlatl—Kolchopfschmuck, according to Seler, op. cit., p. 332.

7. A passage omitted from the Florentine Codex but included in the Real Academia de la Historia MS, ending this chapter, has been placed in Appendix B.

577 And he who took no captive with others' help
578 when, perchance, he had returned three or four times
701 to the wars, they called "Big tuft of hair over the back of the head." And if this was so said of him, he was much ashamed of it. Wherefore he cast himself [into the fray] in order to take a captive with others' aid.

Auh in aquin amo tepallama in açe ic espa anoço ic nappa yloti in inoc quitocaiotia cuespalchicacpul auh in iuh ipan mitoa y ic pinaoa, quin iconac teca momotla inic tepallama.

●729 And if he made a captive with the help of others, 577 then his head was pasted with feathers. And he who then did not take a captive with the aid of others might not remove his lock of hair; neither was his head pasted with feathers. Thus was his hair shorn: it was cut like a ring-shaped carrying pad; they shaved only the crown of his head.

Auh intla tepal otlama iconac mopotonia, auh in aquin çan niman amo tepallama, amo uel mocuespallaça amono mopotonia, inic moxima moquaiacalxima çaniio inicoa nepantla quichichiqui.

And [whether] worldly goods and riches were his lot, or he was only poor, yet if his back tuft of hair had been removed, he never took, and never did they [292] place upon him, an embroidered cape, [but] only another small, white, maguey fiber cape, and his small breech clout.

Auh im açe ie imaceoalti in tlalticpacaiotl, in necuiltonolli, auh anoço can motolinia auh inomocuespallax aic tle quicui, aic tle itech quitlalia tlamacho tilmatli çan oc ce in iztac in ichtilmaton iztac in imastlaton,

And he who had acted indeed alone and had taken captives, if he took one, was therefore named a leading youth and a captor. And when this came to pass, then they took him before Moctezuma, there at the palace. And by his command he was then stained [302 with yellow ochre; his face was colored with red 336] ochre. They applied it to all of his face. And the majordomos of Moctezuma anointed his temples with yellow ochre.[1] auh ĩ aquin uel oquimiscaui otlama in oce cacic ic motocaiotia telpochiiaqui tlamani. Auh in iquac y quinicoac ispan quiuica in motecoçoma in umpa tlatocãn. Auh itencopa inic motecuçauhtiltia mistlapalhoatzalhuia quicemaqu.ia in ixaiac, auh in icanaoacan quitecoiztauhtuia in icalpiscaboan motecuçoma.

And at that time Moctezuma granted him favors;
[431 he gave him an orange cape with a striped border
242] and a scorpion design to bind on, and a carmine colored breech clout with long ends, and a breech clout of many colors.[2] And then he began to wear capes with designs.

Auh quinicoac quitlauhtia in motecuçoma in quimaca camopaltenoaoanqui ioan centetl colotlalpilli ioan centetl nochpalmastlatl iacauiac ioan centetl centzonmastlatl tlatlapalli, auh iconac compeoaltia in tlacuilolxilmatli quiquerini.

And when he had taken two, likewise they took him there before Moctezuma, at the palace, and likewise his gifts were provided as hath been told.

Auh inic ome caci çan no vmpa quiuica in ispan motecuçoma in tlatocan auh çan no iuhquj in inetlauhtil mochioaia in omito.

624 And when he captured three, likewise his gifts 729 were provided, and he took [the office] of, and they 861 established him as, a master of the youths, a leading 561 youth. He entered a place of dignity, the young men's house, there to nurture and rear [them]. There he reared the young men, there where there was song and dance at night, there in the song house.

Auh inic ei caci çan ie no iuhqui in inetlauhtil mochioa, auh oncan canaia in quitiachcauhtecaia in telpochiiaqui quicalaquiaia inuchican in telpochcali inic vmpa tlacaoapaoa tlacazcaltia vmpa quimizcaltia in telpopochti, on cuicoiamocoaia in ioaltica in vmpa cuicacali.

1. Following quitecoaxcuahuia, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has yoan ompa quimpotoniqui—and there they pasted feathers on their heads. This passage is missing in the Florentine Codex.

2. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "vna manta cuadrada de color morado: y otra manta labrada, de otras diversas labores de colorado que se llamaua colotlapalli: y . . . vn mantle labrado de colorado, largo que estuuiesse hasta colgado, y otro mantle labrado de todos colores."

565 651 priests tribute receivers. But there are still some other very important complementary data: on one hand that "painters, whom they called tlaculoca (sic: tlácuiloque), were exempted from contributions and from some services... also the singers... and the players of instruments... neither did the instructors contribute..." (27). On the other hand we know that all who contributed were called macehuales (28)

27. Fuenleal, p. 249.

28. Fuenleal, p. 249.

and that the relatives of rulers and some lords did not contribute (29), 29. Oviedo, III, p. 535.

from which we can infer that the musicians, singers, instructors, etc. who did not contribute, were people from among the rulers and lords, and not from the macehuales; although such a conclusion is not absolutely necessary or compelling.

There are, nevertheless, within the scheme of the tributary [729] macehuales and the tribute-exacting lords some exceptions: those who distinguished themselves in war were exempted from taxation (30),

30. Fuenleal, p. 249.

which obliges us to think that they were macehuales who enjoyed a privilege which the other macehuales did not have. Certainly these macehuales were the ones who were made nobles by favor (31) and about whom there are no data to indicate that they received tribute, that is that they were "nobles," lords by inheritance, nor could they have "tenants" ["terrasgueros"] (32), that is, could live from tribute, 32. Torquemada, II, p. 546.

31. Sahagún, II, p. 308.

and /p. 28/ who for that reason, like the common macehuales, personally worked their lands: their distinctive character was simply that 423 and apparently not "for life," that is, the members of one calpulli did not really pass to another calpulli. (In part this does not happen either in the calpullis studied by Redfield in 1920 (23), thus suggest-

23. Redfield, 1920, p. 288.

ing that the calpulli was a property-holding group rather than a ward). In any case we must assert that in general the majority of the people must have had land in their calpullis and that possibly the leaving for other calpullis was an exception. (We could also think that among the Tenochcas the same happened as among the Maoris, where it was possible /p. 40/ for a person from one group to pass to another, in which he was adopted (24). Thus it appears that the calpulli was a true proprietary group, the use of the land being proof of its ownership. These were the lands pointed in yellow, their existence clearly recognized.

24. Goldenweisser, 1922, p. 382. Mishkin, N. 1937, p. 429.

There was, besides the land given to the common macehuales of the calpulli of which we have just talked, a mode of distribution of the calpullis' lands which was of fundamental importance: the land
• 729 given to those courageous in battle [henceforth "valiants"]. These lands were given by favor for heroic deeds in war (25). But they were lands, and this is the fundamental thing, used for sustenance and where one could not have tenants (26); that is, they were lands

25. Torquemada, II, p. 545, 546; Vetancourt, I, p. 273.

26. Torquemada, H. [sic. 1] p. 545. Zurita (p. 116) tells us that the tenants pay rent "To the master of these," a statement which does not appear to refer to macehuales or even to the nobles, that is to say not contradicting the former affirmation of Torquemada.

which they worked and which yielded them fruits, but which did not

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175 ceremonial contest between warriors of two tribes or groups of tribes, in order that prisoners might be taken for sacrifice without the economic dislocation of formal war. This practice was known long before in the Valley, the Tenochcas participating in such struggles with the Chalcas in 1376–84, but the Tenochcas had been so continuously at war that they were accustomed to take their prisoners the hard way.[6]

175 The crops failed from 1451–56, owing to severe storms
●731 and frost. Many people died, and others, unable to support themselves, adopted voluntary slavery in order to share the bounty of the more fortunate. Usually a famine led to increased military activity to replenish the empty larders with supplies exacted as tribute. But in this case the situation was so severe and the Tenochcas so weak that they had to be content with a War of Flowers.

175 Axayacatl* succeeded his father Montezuma I in 1469. He extended Tenochcan domination over a still-wider area, spreading west into the Matlatzinca country and south to Oaxaca and Tehuantepec. He conducted a campaign into the Tarascan territory and met with a dreadful defeat which ensured the independence of these tribes of Michoacan up to their conquest by the Spaniards. This was the only serious Tenochcan military disaster until the grim days of 1519.[7]

Neither Axayacatl nor his successors were able to transform domination of a region into dominion. He did succeed, nevertheless, in reducing the neighboring town of Tlaltelolco, killing its chief and denying its council the right to meet with the Tenochcas in matters of tribal importance. Tlaltelolco up to that time had maintained its independence

*Ash-ay-a'h-catl.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175 pilli and Ahuitzotl began the grisly work of tearing out the 796 victims' hearts. Lesser dignitaries succeeded each other according to rank, until the awful immolation was completed.[13]

175 Ahuitzotl's military campaigns extended south into Guatemala and as far north as the Huaxteca in Vera Cruz. He was [669] constantly engaged in putting down revolts, especially in Puebla, where the Tlaxcalans* and Cholulans had resisted Tenochcan domination. His capital, meanwhile, had grown so enormously that he had to construct another aqueduct, a fact which indicates that sheer pressure of population was an important cause for the military exploits of Tenochtitlan.
[731] An unusually disastrous flood beset the city in 1503, so that Ahuitzotl had to send to Texcoco for aid in restoring the dikes. While superintending these public works he received a head injury which proved fatal. Ahuitzotl's personality was strong and vicious. He was passionately fond of war, being a vindictive and relentless foe. Likewise he had those traits which so often accompany military character, lust for women and fondness for display.

The luckless Montezuma II, surnamed Xocoyotzin† (the Younger), son of Axayacatl, succeeded his uncle. Not only had he to keep the conquered tribes in order, but also he had constantly to provide captives for sacrifice. This bloody cult, which to the Tenochcan mind had brought such eminence, [782] had to be maintained lest disaster ensue. He approached his uncle's piety on one occasion when twelve thousand captives from a rebel province in Oaxaca were delivered up to the War God.[14]

The last New Fire Ceremony took place in 1507. The years immediately preceding, with their threat of an ending

*Tlash-ca'-lans. †Sho-coy-ot-se'en.

The Seventh Chapter telleth of the year counter and the year sign.

One Rabbit

It is said [that this was] the year sign and year counter of the south. For thirteen years it carried, set on its path, took with it, and bore the burden [of the year]. Always, during each [of the thirteen] years, it was the first, the one which led, began, made the start, and introduced as many year signs as there were: Reed, Flint, and House. Of the one [known as] Reed, it was said [that it was] as it were the sign of the east; that is, the year sign of the sun. For from there issued the light which shone forth.

And the third year sign, the one [known as] Flint, was called the sign of the north. For [the north] was said to be toward the land of the dead. Thus have the old people spoken: it is said that when one died, to that place set out, went straightway, and proceeded the dead. Therefore, when someone died—when [the sextons] adorned him, when they wrapped him in his mantle and bound him [in wrappings]—they made him look toward and seated him looking to that place.

And the fourth year sign, the fourth in order, [was] the one known as House—the sign of the west. For this reason they named it Ciuatlampa: it is said that there dwelt but women; none of us men were there.

These four year signs, year count[ers], as many times as they came to appear, [so many times] they came to be the beginning year signs.

When all the thirteen-year [periods]—all four of them—had concluded, ended, and finished, thus proceeding around, to give and leave their works from year to year, this [last] one came to, stopped at, jogged, knocked against, and ended at Thirteen House, the sign of the west. That is, now it approached [the end of its] thirteen years of labor.

And then One Rabbit came to settle itself as the sign of the south. When this occurred and it established itself and began its work, thus to bear a year

Inic chicome capitulo, itechpa tlatoa: in xiuhtlapoalli, in xiuhtonalli.

Ce tochtli.

moteneoa: uitztlampa xiuhtonalli, xiuhtlapoalli: matlacxiuitl omei tlauica, tlaotlatoctia, tlatqui, tlamama. In muchipa cecexiuhtica, vel tlaiacatia, tlaiacana, quipeoaltia, ipeuhca muchioa, quitzintia in izquitetl xiuhtonalli in acatl, in tecpatl, in calli. In iehoatl acatl, mitoa: tlapcopa tonalli, iuhquinma, q. n. tlauilcopa xiuhtonalli: ipāpa ca umpa oalneci in tlauilli, in tlanestia. 805 823

Auh inic ei xiuhtonalli, iehoatl in tecpatl: moteneoa mictlampa tonalli, ipampa in mjtoa mictlampa: iuh quitoaia in veuetque, quilmach in icoac micoa: vmpa itztiui, vmpa tlamelaoa, vmpa tlatotoca in mimicque. Iehica, in icoac aquin miquia, in oconchichiuhque, in oconquiquimiloque, in oconiilpique: vmpa quitlachialtiaia, vmpa quitztiltitimotlaliaia. [775] [764]

Auh inic naui, tlanauhcaiotia, xiuhtonalli: iehoatl in calli moteneoa, cioatlampa tonalli. Ipāpan iuh quitoaia, cioatlampa: quilmach, çan muchi cioa umpa onoque, socaque toquichtin.

Inin nauhteme xiuhtonaltin, xiuhtlapoaltin: izquiteme ceceppa moquetztiui, tonalpeuhcaiome muchiuhtiuj. 805

Inic muchi matlatlacxiuitl omeei, quitlamja, conaxitia, quitzonquistia nauhteistin: inic tlaiaoalotiui, quimomacatiui, quimocauilitiui, intequiuh, cecexiuhtica: iehoatl itech onaci, itech ōmocaoa, itech ontzopi, itech ontlatzotzona, ontlatzonquistia in matlactlomei calli, cioatlampa tonalli. q. n. ic ocaxiti in matlacxiuitl omei itequiuh.

Auh niman ic oalmoquetza in ce tochtli: uitztlampa tonalli. In icoac, y, moquetza, in quipeoaltia itequiuh, inic ce xiuitl tlauicaz, tlaotlatoctiz: cenca 805 731 and set it upon its way, all were much frightened and there was apprehension; all were filled with dread because in this [year] occurred the famine called Necetochuiliztli. All were exceedingly terrified and in awe when [the year] One Rabbit came—when they reached and came to it; though not [when it was] Two or Three [Rabbit]. Etc.

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

825
731

nemauhtiloia, tlatẽmachoia, netẽmachoa: ipampa, in ipan muchioaia maianaliztli, moteneoa necetochuiliztli: Çaniio uellamauhtiaia, uel imacaxoia: in icoac on omoquetz ce tochtli, in onoitech axioac, onoiterh onpachiooac: amono ie in ome, anoço ey. etc.

And in his reign there came a great 173 famine, which spread over the land for four years.
648 Hence was it said that the year One Rabbit had come.
[731] All the people of Mexico, and the Tepaneca and those of Acolhuacan dispersed among other [people].

manca injc mjtoa Necetochuiloc tepan moiaoac in jxquich mexicatl ioan tepanecatl, ioan acolhoacatl.

The sixth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Axayacatl was the sixth, and ruled Tenochtitlan fourteen years. It came to pass in his reign that there was war between the people of Tlatilulco and those of Tenochtitlan. As a result of the struggle, the reign of Tlatilulco then came to an end. For forty-six years no one else reigned in Tlatilulco. And when the war was waged, he who was ruling Tlatilulco was named Moquiuixtli.

And this Axayacatl conquered Tlacotepec, and Callimaya, and Metepec, Callixtlauacan, Ecatepec, Cozcaquauhtenanco, Teotenanco, Malinaltenanco, Tzinacantepec, Coatepec, Cuitlapilco, Teoxaualco, Tequaloian, and Ocuillan.

Injc chicoacen, tenochtitlan tlatoani.

Axaiaca ic chicoacen tlatocat in tenochtitlan: matlacxiuitl ipã nauhxiuitl. Ipan mochiuh inic moiaochiuhque tlatilulca, ioan tenochca: inic mjxnamjque, vncan poliuh in tlatocaiotl tlatilulco: vmpoalxiujtl ipan chiquacenxiujtl in aocac tlatocat tlatilulco. Auh in jcoac mochiuh iauiotl: tlatocatia in tlatilulco, itoca moquiuixtli.

Auh in ieboatl axaiaca, quipeuh in tlacotepec, ioan callimaia, ioan metepec, callixtlaoaca, hecatepec cozcaquauhtenanco, teutenanco, malinaltenãco, tzinacantepec, coatepec, cujtlapilco, teoxaoalco, tequaloia, ocujllan.

The seventh ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Tiçocicatzin was the seventh, and ruled Tenochtitlan four years. No wars were made in his reign.

Injc chicome, tenochtitlan tlatoanj.

Tiçoçicatzin, ic chicome tlatocat in tenochtitlan nauhxiujtl. Atle ipan mochiuh in iaviotl.

The eighth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

[312] Auitzotl was the eighth, and he ruled Tenochtitlan for eighteen years. When he was ruler, Mexico was flooded. By his command it was done; five springs were opened, known as Acuecuexatl, Tilllatl, Uitzillatl, Xochcaatl, and Coaatl, which were in the territory of Coyoacan and Uitzilopochco.[1] When Mexico was flooded, four years were still to pass before Auitzotl died. And when the Spaniards came here, it was already twenty-two years before that Mexico had been flooded.

And it came to pass in his time that the sun was eclipsed, at midday. For about five hours the darkness was overspread; the stars appeared. All were much terrified. It was said: "The demons of darkness will descend; they will eat people."

And he conquered those of Tziuhcoac, and Mollonco, Tlapan, Chiapan, Xaltepec, Izoatlan, Xochtlan, Amaxtlan, Mapachtepec, Xoconochco, Ayotlan, Maçatlan, and Coyoacan.

Injc chicuej, tenochtitlan tlatoanj.

Auitzotl, ic chicuej tlatocat in tenochtitlan: caxtolxiujtl ipan exiuitl. Icoac tlatocati in apachiuh Mexico: itencopa mochiuh, inic motlapo macujltetl oztotl in jntoca Acuecuexatl, tilllatl, Vitzillatl xochcaatl, coahatl, inma in coioacã ioan ujtzilupuchco: oc nauhxiujtl qujtztia, injc apachiuh mexico, in aiamo mjqui aujtzutl. Auh in jcoac oallaque Españoles, ic iuh cempoalxiujtl omome, oapachiuh in mexico:

ioan ipan mochiuh in tonatiuh qualoc, nepantla tonatiuh: aço macujlli horas in tlaioatimanca, nezque in cicitlalti, cenca nemauhtiloc, mjtoaia: ca oaltemozque in tzitzimime, tequazque:

. ioan quinpeuh in tziuhcoaca, ioan mollanco, tlapan, chiapan, xaltepec, izoatlan, xochtlan, amaxtlan, mapachtepec, xoconochco, aiotlan, maçatlan, coioacan.

175 The ninth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Moctezuma was the ninth, and he ruled Tenoch-

Injc chicunauj, tlatoanj tenochtitlan.

Motecuçuma ic chicunaui tlatocat in tenochtitlan

1. Inma in coioacã. The Real Academia de la Historia MS has ỹ mani for inma.

titlan for nineteen years. In his reign there came a famine; for two years[2] it spread over the land, during which it rained no more. Because of it the people of Mexico dispersed everywhere, and there was great suffering from hunger.

In the reign of this same [ruler] it happened that there in the song house which was in Tenochtitlan, a beam, which pierced the walls which held it, sang.[3] It intoned, "Woe, my evil rump! Dance well, for thou shalt be cast into the water!" This came to pass when [the fame of] the Spaniards came to be known.

In the days of this same [ruler] it happened that [the demon] Ciuacoatl went about weeping, at night. Everyone heard it wailing and saying: "My beloved sons, now I am about to leave you."

In the reign of the same [ruler] this came to pass. A woman of quality, whose home was in Tenochtitlan, died of a sickness. She was buried then in her courtyard, and they laid stones over [her grave]. Four days after the dead woman had been buried, she came to life at night. Greatly were all frightened. There, where she had been buried in her grave, it was burst open, and the stones which had been laid over it went to scatter at a distance. And this woman, after she had returned to life, then went to converse and speak with Moctezuma about what she had seen. She informed and said to him: "For this reason have I returned to life: I have come to tell thee that thou art come to the end. With thee the reign of Mexico ceaseth; for in thy time the city of Mexico will end. They who come, lo, these have come to subjugate the land; these will occupy Mexico." And this woman who had died lived another twenty-one years, and once more bore a son.

And many [were] the cities which Moctezuma conquered. Their names [were] Icpatepec, Cuezcomaixtlauacan, Çocollan, Tecomaixtlauacan, Çacatepec, Tlachquiauhco, Iolloxonecuillan, Atepec, Mictlan, Tlauapan,[4] Nopalan, Iztec tlalocan, Cuextlan, Quetzaltepec, and Chichiualtatacalan.

In the days of this same [ruler] it befell that, eight years before the Spaniards came to arrive, it was seen, and taken as an omen, that by night a very great brilliance arose, like a flame. All night it stood shining. It appeared at the place where the sun came caxtolxiuitl ipan nauhxiuitl, ipan muchiuh maianaliztli oxiujtl in manca in aocmo qujauja, ic noujian tepan cenman in mexicatl cenca netolinjloc in maianaliztica. 175 [731]

Çã no ichoatl ipan muchiuh, in oncan cujcacali catca in tenochtitlan, cuicac ce nepantla tecoc in tlaelnapaloa, queuh veiah noqueztepole uel xomjtotia, atlã tiuetztoçe. In muchiuh, y, ie iuh oalmachizti in Españoles. [787]

Çã no ichoatl ipan mochiuh cioacoatl chocatinenca ioaltica, mochi tlacatl qujcaquja in chocaia qujtoaia. Nonopilhoantzitzi ic çan ie namechnocaujlia.

Çan no ichoatl ipan mochiuh. Çe tlacatl çihoatl ichan tenochtitlan mjc ica cocoliztli, njman motocac yitoaico ipan qujtemanque, ie iuh nauilhuitl motocac in cihoatl micquj mozcali ioaltica, cenca tlamauhti in vncan motocaca tlatlatacco motlapo, auh in tetl ic motemanca vêca veuetzito: auh in ichoatl cihoatl in oiuh mozcali, njman qujnonotzato, qujlhujto in motecuçuma in tlein qujttac qujpouili, qujlhuj. Ca inic onjnozcali njmjtzilhujco. Ca ie izqujch ca tehoatl moca tzonqujça in tlatocaiotl in mexico ca tehoatl mopan mantiaz in altepetl mexico. Aqujque in ie uitze ca ichoantin tlalmaceoaqujuj, ichoantin onozque in mexico: auh in ichoatl mjcca çihoatl ie no cempoalxiujtl oçe inen ioan oc ce qujchiuh iconeuh oquichtli: 175 787

Ioan miiec in altepetl qujpeuh motecuçuma in jtoca, icpatepec, cuezcomaixtlaoacan, çocollan, tecomaixtlaoacã, çacatepec, tlachqujauhco, iolloxonecuillan, atepec, mjctlan, tloapan, nopalan iztec tlalocan, cuextlan, quetzaltepec, chichioaltatacalan. 175 648 [103]

Çan no ichoatl ipan muchiuh, oc iuh chicuexiujtl aciqujui españoles mottaia netetzahujloa, in ioaltica oalmoquetzaia cenca tomaoac in tlanextli iuhqujn tlemjiaoatl iceoal tlanextiticaca tonatiuh iquiçaiampa oalmoquetzaia vmpoliuja in ie oalqujça tonatiuh, 175 787

2. The corresponding Spanish text mentions three years of famine.
3. Cuicar es repantle tocar. The Real Academia de la Historia MS has ení panti. Nepantle is clearly an error.
4. Tlauapan. Cf. corresponding Spanish text.

175 787 forth, and vanished when the sun was about to rise. For four years this always was to be seen at night. And when it disappeared, it was still four years before the Spaniards came to arrive.

nauhxiujtl in mochipa mottaia ioaltica auh in jcoac polihuh oc iuh nauhxiujtl açiqujui in españoles 175 646 And it came to pass that in his time the Spaniards came to arrive—they took and vanquished [the city of] Mexico here where the Spaniards now are, as well as all about here in New Spain. [This conquest was] in 1519.

ioan ipan mochiuh injc ipan açico españoles injc caçique injc qujpeuhque Mexico in vncan axcan onoque Españoles ioan in noujian in nican iancujc españa de mjll e qujnjentos y dezinueue.

175 The tenth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Injc matlactli tenochtitlan tlatoanj.

●731 646 Cuitlauac was the tenth, and he ruled eighty days after the Spaniards reached Mexico. In the time of this one, it happened that a great plague came, and that many died of it everywhere in the cities. It was said that it was the smallpox, the great raising of blisters. Never once had this been seen; never had it been suffered in Mexico. Indeed, it smote the faces of everyone, so that pits and roughnesses were formed. No longer were the dead buried; they could only cast them all into the water[5]—for in those times there was much water everywhere in Mexico. And there was a great, foul odor; the smell issued forth from the dead.

Cujtlaoa, ic matlactli, tlatocat in tenochtitlan: nappoalihujtl oiuh açico in Españoles mexico. Iehuatl ipan muchiuh in oalla vei cocoliztli, i cenca ic mjcoac in noujian altepetl ipan: mjto ca vej çaoatl, vej totomonaliztli: in aic ceppa omottac inin aic onecocoloc in mexico, vel mochi tlacatl, qujtlacalhui in jtzaiac: injc qujquiztic, chachaquachtic muchiuh, aocmo motocaia in mjmjcque, ca muchi atlan qujmontlaçaia: ca in jcoac cenca noujian atlan catca in mexico, ioã cenca tlaiaxtimomã, injc hijaxque mjmjcque.

175 646 797 The eleventh ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Injc matlactli oce, tenochtitlan tlatoanj.

Quauhtemoc was the eleventh, and he ruled Tenochtitlan four years. It came to pass in his reign that these Spaniards conquered and took the city of Mexico; and all the cities which lay surrounding. When he ruled, twelve priests, sons of Saint Francis, came and proceeded to reach [here]. They came to free men from idolatry and to teach the Faith.

Quauhtemoc, ic matlactli oce tlatocat in tenochtitlan: nauhxiujtl, ipan muchiuh: injc ichoantin españoles qujpeuhque, caçique in altepetl in mexico, ioã in noujian ic qujiaoalotoc ixquich altepetl. Icoac tlãtocati in oallaque, açico matlactin omomen teupixque in ipilhoan Sanct frãcisco, in qujtecaoaltico tlateotoquiliztli: ioan qujtemachtique tlaneltoquiliztli.

175 The twelfth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Injc matlactiomome, tenochtitlan tlatoanj.

Don Andrés Motelchiuh was twelfth, and he ruled Tenochtitlan three years in the time of[6] the Spaniards, who went forth everywhere to conquests—to Caextlan, to Honduras. And Nuño de Guzmán took him [in conquest] to Colhuacan, where he met his death.

Don Andres, motelchiuh ic matlactli omome tlatocat in tenochtitlan exiujtl iepan españoles noujian iauqujçato in caextlan, huduras, auh in ichoatl nonum de guzman, qujuicac in vej culhoacan vmpa mjqujto.

The thirteenth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Injc matlactli omej, tenochtitlan tlatoanj.

Don Pablo Xochiquen was thirteenth, and he ruled Tenochtitlan three years.

Don pablo, xochiquen ic matlactli omej tlatocat in tenochtitlan: exiujtl.

5. Ça muchi atlan. The Real Academia de la Historia MS has en lar ga.
6. Iepan: ye iaupan in ibid.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

The fourteenth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Don Diego Vanitl was fourteenth, and he ruled Tenochtitlan four years.

Injc matlactli onnauj tenochtitlan tlatoanj. 175

Don Diego vanjtl, ic matlactli onnauj tlatocat in tenochtitlan: nauhxiujtl.

The fifteenth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Don Diego Teuetzquiti was fifteenth, and he ruled Tenochtitlan for thirteen years. It came to pass in his time that a great sickness came to be prevalent, known as a plague. From people's noses, blood issued; there was much death everywhere because of it, and there was death from famine. Very many were buried every day, everywhere. And in his time it was that the Chichimeca—those of Xochipilla—and the people of Cibola were destroyed and conquered.

Injc castolli tenochtitlan tlatoanj. 175

Don Diego teuetzquiti, ic castolli tlatocat in tenochtitlan: matlacxiujtl ipan exiujtl; ipan mochiuh inic momañaco vei cocoliztli mjtoa pestilencia teiacapa quiz eztli cenca ic mjcoac in noujian ioan apizmjcoac cenca mjec in motocaia cemjlhujtl in noujiã. ioan ipan muchiuh injc poliuhque, peoaloque chichimeca, xochipilteca ioan Scipola tlaca. 731 [648]

The sixteenth ruler of Tenochtitlan.

Don Cristóbal Cecepatic was sixteenth, and he ruled Tenochtitlan four years.

Injc caxtolli oce, tenochtitlan tlatoanj. 175

Don xpoual cecepatic, ic caxtolli oce, tlatocat in tenochtitlan: nauhxiujtl.

[p. 6 is blank]

175 648 reign, when the Spaniards took and conquered the City of Mexico. The Spaniards, who had come from afar, went taking him with them everywhere when they conquered Coextlan, Honduras, and Guatemala.

conaçique compeuhque Españoles in altepetl mexico, noujian qujuicatinen in vêca españoles injc tepeuhque in coextlan, hunduras, quauhtemallan.

Don Martín Ecatl [was] the second who governed Tlatilulco. He ruled three years in the time of the Spaniards. In his time, it came to pass that [the demon] Ciuacoatl ate a small boy [as] he lay in his cradle there in Azcapotzalco. And in his time it happened that two eagles were[1] in separate wooden [231] cages there in Tlatilulco. When for eight years they had been in wooden cages, eggs were laid; each eagle laid two eagle eggs.

Don Martin hêca ic vme tlatocat in tlatilulco: exiujtl ic impan in españoles. Ipan muchiuh, i çioacoatl qujqua piltzintli coçolco onoca vmpa azcapuitzalco: ioan ipan muchiuh, vnteme quaquauhti quauhcalco manca no manca in vncã tlatilulco ic iuh chicuexiuitl mani quauhcalco motetique tlatlazque, oontetl in quauhtetl qujtlazque icecentetl quauhtli.

Don Juan Auelittoc [was] the third, and he ruled Tlatilulco four years.

Don Iuan avellittoc ic ei tlatocat, in tlatilulco nauhxiujtl.

Don Juan Quauic onoc [was] the fourth, and ruled Tlatilulco seven years. And at the same time Don Pablo Xochiquen ruled Tenochtitlan. There came to pass in Tlatilulco a great marvel, a great example, [showing] how the world was to come to an end.

Don Iuan quauje onoc, ic nauj latocat in tlatilulco chicoxiujtl ioan icoac tlatocati Don pablo xochiquen in tenochtitlã, in muchiuh tlatilulco vej tlamaujçolli vej neixcujtilli injc tlamjz cemanaoac

Don Alonso Quauhnochtli [was] the fifth, and he ruled Tlatilulco two years.

Don Alonso quauhnochtlj, ic macujlli tlatocat in tlatilulco oxjujtl.

[731] Don Martín Tlacatecatl [was] sixth; and he ruled Tlatilulco for six years. In his time there came to pass the aforementioned great plague and a war in which were conquered the Chichimeca—people of Nochtlan,[2]—and Cibola, in the time of Don Antonio de Mendoza, Viceroy here in New Spain.

Don Martin tlacateccatl, ic chiquacen tlatocat in tlatilulco chieoacexiujtl. Ipan muchiuh in omoteneuh vej cocoliztli ioan in iaoiutl injc peoaloque chichimeca, nochtlan tlaca, Scibola, ipan Don Antonjo de mendoça visorrej in njcan jancujc españa [731] Don Diego Uitznauatlailotlac [was] the seventh to rule in Tlatilulco. In his time there was a great plague, known as the swellings of the neck, and many were the deaths from it. And this one ruled ten years.

Don diego vitznaoatlailotlac ic chicome tlatocat in tlatilulco. Ipan muchiuh vej cocoliztli, itoca quechpoçaoaliztli cenca ic mjcoac, auh in ichoatl matlacxiujtl in tlatocat.

1. For manca no manca, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has manca no nonqua.
2. In ibid., xochipilteca, ynon tenotlan tlaca, ynon follows nochtlan tlaca.

175 648 Moctezuma's elder[s] delivered his message. And they offered him all [the gifts with which] they greeted him. They extended to him the gold and still other [goods].

And [the Spaniards] came straight here to Mexico. When Don Hernando Cortés came to arrive, he readied himself for war. And Moctezuma went to meet him there by the houses [of the outskirts of Mexico], there at Xolloco. He went to receive him in peace. And he offered him adoration and greeted the Captain, Don Hernando Cortés. Then he took him there to the great palace. There all the Spaniards remained.

And after some days, the Captain imprisoned Moctèzuma.

And when word arrived from the coast that still more Spaniards had arrived, the Captain went to meet them; he took some Spaniards with him, and [some] natives. And he left here Don Pedro Alvarado and still other Spaniards to guard the palace.

And when came the feast day of Uitzilopochtli, Don Pedro Alvarado and the Spaniards who were with him slew many Mexicans while they were observing the feast day of Uitzilopochtli. Thus war began.

And when the Captain returned from the coast, he brought many Spaniards. Not on this account did the Mexicans defer; they spread the war considerably.

[731] And the year 1520 was when Moctezuma died. And the Spaniards arose and went to Tlaxcala. And there befell a great plague here in Mexico; there was smallpox; and very many of the natives died.

In the year 1521, the Spaniards came once more. They stayed there in Texcoco. After some time they made war, and they vanquished and fought the Mexicans.

In the year 1522, once again the Mexicans gathered themselves and came together, those who had been dispersed and broken up because of the war.

[797] And the year 1524 was when the twelve Franciscan Fathers arrived to convert the natives of New Spain.

çuma: ioan qujmacaque in jxqujch in jntetlapaloaia, injn tetech açia, in teucujtlatl, ioan oc cequj.

Auh çan oallamelauh, in njcan mexico, injc açico in iehoatl, don hernando cortes, çan oalmoiauchichiuhtia, auh in motecuçuma, vmpa in qujnamjqujto in caltenco, in vmpa xolloco, çan qujpaccanamjqujto: ioan qujtlatlauhti, qujtlapalo in capitan don hernando cortes, njman qujujcac in vmpa vej tecpan vncan motlalique, in jxqujchtin españoles.

Auh in jquezqujlhujioc, in iehoatl capitan oqujlpi in motecuçuma:

auh in jcoac oaçico tlatolli, in vmpa atenco: injc oc centlamantin oaçic españoles: in iehoatl capitan oqujnnamjqujto, cequjntin qujnujcac españoles, ioan njcan tlaca: auh njcan qujcauhtia in don pedro alvarado, ioan oc cequjntin españoles in tecpan tlapiaia.

Auh in jquac in oqujz ilhujuh vitzilobuchtli, in iehoatl don p° aluarado, ioan in espanoles in jtlan catca, mjiequjntin, qujnmjctique in mexica, in qujlhujqujxtiliaia vitzilobuchtli, ic vmpeuh in iauiotl.

Auh in jcoac in ooalmocuep, in capitan: in vmpa atenco, mjiequjntin, qujnoalhujcac españoles, amo ic motlacaoaltique in mexica, cenca qujtototzaia in iaujutl.

Auh in jpan xiujtl 1520 icoac omjc in motecuçuma, auh in iehoantin españoles, oqujzque tlaxcallan iaque: auh uej cocoliztli muchiuh in njcan mexico, çaçaoatioac: ioan cenca mjiequjntin mjcque, in njcan tlaca.

In jpan xiujtl 1521, oc ceppa oallaque in españoles, ompa omotlalique, in tetzcuco, uecauhtica qujniauchiuhque, qujmpeuhque, qujmjcalque, in mexica.

In jpan xiujtl 1522, oc ceppa oalmonechicoque, oalmocentlalique in mexica: in moiaoaca in xitinca in jpampa iauiutl

Auh in jpan xiujtl 1524, icoac açico in matlactin vmomen sãct francisco padreme, in qujntlaneltoqujtique in njcan nueua españa tlaca.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

Fourteenth Chapter: here are described the palace and the houses of the lords: how were kept the houses of the lords [and] the great palace where the ruler dwelt; [how] all the lords[1] were disposed there, and there were determined the tributes or warfare; and in that place there was eating and drinking when the ruler assembled the people there.

Injc 14. capitulo vncan mjtoa in tecpancalli in tlatocacalli, ic mopia tlatocacalli, vej tecpan in vncan ca tlatoanj, ixqujch tlacatl vncan tecpanoa, vncan motzontequj in tlein tequjtl, anoçe iauiotl: ioan vncan atlioa tlaqualo, injc vnca tecenqujxtia tlatoanj. 000

FIRST PARAGRAPH, in which is described the court of justice, the high court, [in which], when something was harmed, when some did evil, there they passed judgment on them.

INJC CE PARRAPHO ipan mjtoa in vncã tlatoloia, in audiençia in jqüac itla itlacauija, in aqujque tlatlacoa, vncan qujntlatzontequjliaia. 692

Tlacxitlan:[2] there were the rulers, the princes, and the high judges. All the complaints of the lower classes and common folk they there heard and judged. And all death [sentences] they there meted out; either they would strangle one with a cord, or stone him to death, or slay him under wooden staves,[3] beaten; or some nobleman or judge was to be shaven [as a disgrace], or driven [out of the land], or confined, or made a commoner; or one would be seized and jailed in a wooden cage.[4] And there they delivered slaves from [undeserved] bondage.

Tlacxitlan, vncan catca tlatoque tlaçopipilti, tecutlatoque: in jxqujch tlamantli in jneteilhujl cujtlapilli atlapalli maçeoalli: vnca qujcaqujliaia, vncan qujtlatzontequjliaia; ioan ixqujch tlamantli mjqujztli vncan qujtzontequja aço aca quimecanjzque, anoço aca qujtetepachozque, anoço aca quauhtica mjqujz qujujujtequjzque, anoço aca pilli, anoço tecutlato, ximaloz, totocoz, callaliloz, maceoalcuepaloz, anoço aca ilpiloz quauhcalco tlaliloz: ioan vncan qujntlatlacollaçaia, in tlatlacoti. 693 696

[When] Moctezuma was lord, there was famine for two years, and many noblemen sold their young sons and maidens. When Moctezuma heard of this, he commanded that all [these] noble youths be brought together, and that their masters be told that their goods [which they had paid for them] were to be restored and returned to them. With large capes and mantles, and dried maize grains he paid the price for the noblemen. And a double forfeit he then paid in order to redeem and deliver the noblemen from bondage.

Tlatocati in motecuçuma, oxiujtl in maianaloc, in pipilti mjiequjntin, in qujnnamacaque in jntelpuchoan, ioan in jmjchpuchoan, in jcoac in oqujcac motecuçuma: tlanaoati injc nechicolozque, in jxqujchtin tlaçotipipilti, ioan notzalozque in jntecujioboan, injc macozque, injc cuepiliozque in jntlatquj. Veuej tilmatli, ioan quachtli, ioan tlaolli, injc qujmpatiotica pipilti, ioã oppamjxtlapan injc qujntlaxtlaujli, injc qujntlatlacollaz pipilti. 731 567 643

In that place, the Tlacxitlan, they did not delay the hearings. At once, forthwith, a judgment was pro-

In oncan jn tlacxitlan amo tle vecaoaia in neteilhujlli, çan njman iciuhca motzontequja, in tlein 692 695

1. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., III, pp. 22-23: "Este nombre, tlacatl, quiere decir, persona noble, 'grande o magnífico. . . . Y los compuestos de tlacatl que se componen con nombres numerales, significan personas grandes, como diciendo de tlacatl, una persona hombre, o mujer." Also cf. Leonhard Schultze Jena: Gliederung der Alt-Azteckischen Volks in Familie, Stand und Beruf, aus dem Aztekischen Urtext Bernardino de Sahagun's (Stuttgart: W. Kohlhammer Verlag, 1952), p. 32.

2. Clark, op. cit., I, p. 97, defines the term as the highest criminal court, meaning "those placed below, at the feet."

3. See Pl. 66.

4. See Pls. 67, 87.

787 A second omen came to pass here in Mexico: quite of its own accord fire broke out in the house of the demon Uitzilopochtli, and flared greatly. No one had set fire to it; only of itself it burst into flames. It was called Itepeyoc,[4] at the place named Tlacateccan. When [the fire] appeared, already the [335] squared, wooden pillars were flaring; from within them[5] emerged the flames, the tongues of fire, the blaze [which] speedily ate all the house beams. Thereupon there was an outcry; [the priests] said: "O Mexicans, hasten here to put out [the fire! [415] Bring] your earthen water jars!" And when they cast water upon it, when they sought to smother it, all the more did it flare. It could not be put out; it all burned.

[346] A third omen: a temple was struck by a thunder bolt. It was only a straw hut, a place called Tzonmulco, Temple of Xiuhtecutli. It was raining not heavily; it only sprinkled, so that it was considered a bad omen. For, it was said, there was a mere[6] summer flash; nor did thunder sound.

A fourth omen: there was yet sun when a comet fell. It became three parts. It departed from where the sun set and traveled toward where he came forth. As if sprinkling live coals, [so] its tail went extended a great distance. Far did its tail reach. And when it was seen, great was the uproar; like [the din of] shell rattles [the outcry] was overspread.[7]

A fifth omen: the water [of the lake] foamed up. No wind stirred it up. It was as if the water swirled, as if it boiled up with a cracking sound. Very far ● [731] did it go, as it rose upward. And it reached the bases of the houses, and flooded them, and crumbled the houses.[8] This was the great lake which stretcheth about us here in Mexico.[9]

A sixth omen: often a woman was heard [as] she went weeping and crying out. Loudly did she call out at night. She walked about saying: "O my Injc vntetl tetzavitl muchiuh, njcan mexico: çan monomavi in tlatlac, cuetlan, aiac ma qujtlecavi, çan monoma tlecavi in jcal diablo vitzilobuchtli: mjtoaia, iteioc itocaiocan Tlacateccan: in nez ie tlatla in tlaquetzalli, in jtec, oalqujca in tlemjiaoatl, in tlenenepilli, in tlecueçalutl, cenca çan iciuhca conpalo in ixiqujch calquavitl: njman ie ic tlacaoaca, qujtoa. Mexicae ma vallatotoca, tla cevilor, amaapilol: auh in jquac caatequjaia, in qujcevizneçuja, çan ie ilhujce mopitza, aocmo vel ceuh, vel tlatlac.

Injc ce[illegible]tzavitl: vitecoc ipan tlatlatzin teucalli, çan xacalli catca, itocaiocan tzũmulco: iteupan in xiuhtecutli, amo tilaoaia, çan aoachqujavia in juh tetzammachoc: iuh mjtoa in ça çan tonalhujtecoc, amono caqujztic in tlatlatzinjliztli.

Injc nauhtetl tetzavitl: oc vnca in tonatiuh in xivitl vetz ietetetia, vmpa oalpeuh in tonatiuh icalaqujampa; auh vmpa itztia in jqujçaianpa, iuhquj in tlesuchtli pipixauhtiuh, veca mocujtlapiltitiuh, veca acitiuh in jcujtlapil: auh in oittoc cẽca tlacaoacac, iuhqujn oiovalli õmoman.

Injc macujltetl tetzavitl: poçon in atl, amo iehecatl qujpoçonalti, iuhqujn momomoloca, iuhqujn xixittemomoloca, cenca veca in ia, injc macoquetz: auh in calli tzitzintla cacic, auh capapachiuh, xixitin in calli: ichoatl in vei atl totlan manj njcan mexico.

Injc chiquacentlamantli tetzavitl: mjecpa cioatl cacoia chocatiuh, tzatzitiuh, ioaltica cenca tzatzi; qujtotinemj. Nonopilhoantzitzin, ie ic çan ie tonvi: in

4. Probably Itepeyac is meant for itoior. See Chapter 19 of this Book; also Memoriale en 3 columnas, in Francisco del Paso y Troncoso: Fr. Bernardino de Sahagún—Historia de las cosas de Nueva España (Madrid: Hauser y Menet, 1906), VII, p. 93; Fr. Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia General de las cosas de Nueva España (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1938) I, pp. 215, 229; and Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II—The Ceremonies, p. 161.

5. Book VIII of the Florentine Codex has ioic in a similar passage. In the Real Palacio MS it reads: yoic ỹ calqujca.

6. Ce can appear in loc. cit.

7. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book VIII—Kings and Lords, p. 18, n. 5.

8. In the Real Palacio MS, this passage reads: "auh ỹ calli ximimoloa cajic dioh ocq' papachioh ocqui xixitin."

9. In loc. cit., manj is followed by "dioh yoic mocecep yoic cecenoh çã no ompa ye ỹ ompa oaiaio ỹ ocq apãjan."

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
[346]
[766]

[731]

—Ajuer Fuse y Trovarso

111. Burning of bodies of Mexicans slain in battle at Mt. Tonan (Chapter 27). 112, 113. Refurbishing of a temple in Tenochtitlan on the departure of the Spaniards (Chapter 28). 114. Smallpox plague (Chapter 29). 115-117. Return of the Spaniards to attack Tenochtitlan (Chapter 29). 118. Spanish brigantines (Chapter 30).

Twenty-ninth Chapter. Here is related how the plague[1] came, named smallpox, of which the natives died, when the Spaniards set forth from Mexico.

And [even] before the Spaniards had risen against us, a pestilence first came to be prevalent: the smallpox. It was [the month of] Tepeilhuitl when it began, and it spread over the people as great destruction. Some it quite covered [with pustules] on all parts—their faces, their heads, their breasts, etc. There was great havoc. Very many died of it. They could not walk; they only lay in their resting places and beds. They could not move; they could not stir; they could not change position, nor lie on one side, nor face down, nor on their backs. And if they stirred, much did they cry out. Great was its destruction. Covered, mantled with pustules, very many people died of them. And very many starved; there was death from hunger, [for] none could take care of [the sick]; nothing could be done for them.

And on some the pustules were widely separated; they suffered not greatly, neither did many [of them] die. Yet many people were marred by them on their faces; one's face or nose was pitted. Some lost their eyes; they were blinded.

At this time, this pestilence prevailed sixty days, sixty day signs. When it left, when it abated, when there was recovery and the return of life, the plague had already moved toward[2] Chalco, whereby many were disabled—not, however, completely crippled. When it came to be prevalent, [it was the month of] Teotl eco. And when it went, weakened, it was Panquetzaliztli. Then the Mexicans, the chieftains, could revive.

And after this, then the Spaniards came; they marched from Tezcoco. By way of Quauhtitlan they set out, and quartered themselves at Tlacopan. There then the task was divided; their routes were there separated. Pedro de Alvarado's charge became the road leading into Tlatilulco. And the Marquis went

Injc cempoalli on chicuacuaxi capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn valla Totomonjztli, injc mjcque njcã tlaca: in jtoca vei çavatl, in jquac oquijzque Españoles in Mexico. 731

Auh in aiamo totechmoquetza in Españoles: achtopa momanaco vei cocoliztli, totomonaliztli, ipan tepeilhujtl in tzintic, in tetechmotecac vevei tepopul: cequj vel pepechtic, novian in motecac in teixco, in teicpac, in teelpan, &c. vellaixpolo, vel mjequjntin ic mjcque, aoc vel nenemja, ça onoc in jmonoian in incuchian, aoc vel molinjaia, aoc vel mocuechinjaia, aoc vel mocuecuetzouia, aoc vel monacacicteca, aoc vel mjxtlapachtecaia, aoc vel maquetztitecaia. Auh in jquac mocuechinjaia, cenca tzatzia: cenca tlaixpolo, in pepechtic, in pepechiuhquj in çoatl, vel mjec tlacatl, ic momjqujli, yoã mjequjntin çan apizmjcque, àpizmjcoac, aocac motecujtlaviaia, aocac teca muchivaia.

Auh in cequjntin çan veveca in intech motlali in çavatl, amo cenca qujmjhioti, amo no mjequjntin ic mjcque: yoã mjec tlacatl ic itlacauh in jxaiac, ichachaquachiuhque, iacachachaquachiuhque, cequjtin yixcueponque, ixpopoiotque:

iquac in manca inin totomonjliztli, vel epoalilhujtl, epoaltonal in qujz in cuetlan, in necmachoc, in iolioac: ic chalcopa vatztia in totomonjliztli, yoã mjec injc cocototzauh: amo tel iccen cocototzauh. In momanaco Teutl eco: auh in cuetlanjto ipan in Panquetzaliztli: vncan vel caxavaque in Mexica, in tiacaoan.

Auh in ic iuhquj: njmã ic vitze, valelinj in Españoles in vmpa Tetzcoco: quauhtitlampa in quiçato omomotlalico Tlacuban: nec vncan motequjmaca, vncã mozcloa: in Pedro de Alvarado, itequjppã muchiuh in vtli vallaticac tlatilulco. Auh in Marques coioacan motlalito: auh itequjuh muchiuh in mar- 600

1. Corresponding Spanish term: pestilencia. Sahagún (op. cit., p. 531) has matlatzahuatl for this term, and "great rash" for vei cocoztli. Chimalpahin (op. cit., p. 192, n. 3, has matlatzahuatl for cocoztli.—The term is spelt matlatzahuatl in the Codex.

2. Probably either cuitlaxia or cuitzia should be read.

10:Deevey N-4 (no date)1957 NU7 Aztec NU7

823 neighbors demonstrated practical control over the lacustrine as well as other components of their environment.

127 133 At the time of the Conquest, according to extensive researches summarized by Orozco y Berra (1864), Maudslay (1908, 1910, in the 2nd and 3rd volumes of the Hakluyt Society edition of Bernal Diaz del Castillo), and especially by Schilling (1939) and Linné (1948), the Valley lakes were more or less one continuous sheet of water. Schilling's series of sketch maps is reproduced in Figure 1. Cortés, in his second [312] letter to Charles V (MacNutt edition, 1908, vol. 1), speaks of two lakes, because Lake Texcoco, the lowest-lying and most saline body of water, was separated from the freshwater portions by a great dike, the albarradón of Nezahualcóyotl. The Valley lakes of course were without outlet to the sea, and the drainage operations that began in the late 16th century and were made effective only in 1900 were devoted to the northward diversion of Lake Zumpango, regarded as the source of the most dangerous floods, to the Río Tula. The 16th-century historians believed that Texcoco had a subterranean outlet to the sea by way of a spring in the valley of Tula. Pomar (García Icazbalceta's edition, 1891, p. 58) claimed to have seen it, while Sahagún (Robredo edition, vol. 3, [782] p. 298) described the "whirlpool" in the center of the lake as the scene where small boys were sacrificed every year. It is reasonable to suppose that the legend of the outlet was believed by the acculturated Indians, but it does not follow that the educated Aztecs believed it.

127 133 312 The "Lake of Mexico" of the historical sources is usually the freshwater part that surrounded the Aztec capital, Tenochtitlán. This part is now dry, as is the southernmost lake of Chalco. Dikes that served as causeways connected Tenochtitlán with the mainland, but the most important dike from the hydrographic standpoint was that of Nezahualcóyotl, which lay to the east of the city. According to tradition, the dike was built by the king of Texcoco in 1446, during the reign of Montezuma I. It was 16 km long, and required the labor of 20,000 men. The reason given for its construction was to protect the Aztec capital from floods, though it is not clear why a Texcocan king should have contributed so generously to his rival's advantage. Of the advan- [241] tage, however, there can be no doubt. All of the southern valley floor, from Chalco to Tenochtitlán, was doubtless covered with chinampas, 127 the artificial islands that have been called "floating gardens" since the 133 days of the imaginative 18th century historian Clavijero. Floods along 731 the course of this drainage would on the whole have been beneficial, though inconvenient; the real danger threatened from the Texcoco side, whence salt water, driven by freshets or seiches,[1] might disastrously drown the chinampas. Freshets, that brought large river fish through

[1] [i.e., an oscillation of the surface of a lake lasting from a few minutes to several hours, thought to be due to inequalities of atmospheric pressure. — Analyst]

10:Deevey N-4 (no date)1957 NU7 Aztec NU7

133

Fig. 1. Sketch maps of the lakes of the Valley of Mexico, (1) during the Ice Age, (2) at the beginning of the 16th century, (3) at the beginning of the 19th century, (4) in 1889. Reproduced from Schilling (1939).

the salt lake from the streams on the eastern side of the Valley, were described by Motolinía in 1540 (Steck edition 1951, p. 263). That seiches also occurred may be inferred from Cortés' reference to "tides" (MacNutt edition, 1908, vol. 1, p. 256). Moreover, Sahagún records in Book Eight a tradition, regarded later as an omen of the coming of the Spaniards, to the effect that "the water of the lake foamed up, and

127
133
731

10:Deevey N-4 (no date)1957 NU7 Aztec NU7

127 the wind did not stir it up. It was as welled up .... and it reached the 133 lower parts of the houses" (1954 edition, p. 18). There appear to ●731 be no modern observations of seiches, but the extraordinary Gómara remarks (1940 edition, pp. 195–196) that "the salte water ebbeth and floweth, accordyng to the wynde that bloweth".

127 Whether irrigation was practiced in Middle America is a question 312 that has never been adequately considered (Millon, 1954; Palerm, 1955). Clearly it would not have been necessary in Aztec times in the Valley of Mexico; chinampa agriculture, which substituted for irrigation, has an ancient history in the Valley (Apenes, 1943), but it is not known elsewhere nearer than the Vale of Kashmir (West and Armillas, 1950). At other times and in other places it seems certain that the dense population could not have been maintained without irrigation. The great ceremonial center of Teotihuacán lies in a subdivision of the Valley that receives less precipitation than Mexico City, and some irrigation is practiced there today. We know from the work of Apenes (1943) and Sears (1952) that just prior to Teotihuacán times (about 500 B. C.) the Valley lakes were appreciably lower than today, and the conclusion is inescapable that Teotihuacán culture was founded on high ground and flourished during a dry time when irrigation must have been essential. Deforestation (Vaillant, 1941) complicates the hydrographic picture for Teotihuacán times but it is evident that the rise and spread of Aztec culture was related to increased moisture, reflected in high lake levels during the 14th to 16th centuries. The high levels would doubtless have continued through the 18th century, in agreement with climatic oscillations elsewhere, if sporadic attempts to drain the Valley had not been partially successful in the early 17th century (they were not completely successful until 1900).

Aztec control of hydrography, then, did not include irrigation where it was unnecessary, but was devoted, in the last centuries before the Conquest, to regulating the levels of the lakes. Before the Aztecs entered the Valley, however, they lived in many places, not all of 127 which were lacustrine. So far archaeology has made little progress in reconstructing the details of their history during the migration period. The problem is exceedingly complicated, and four centuries of scholarship have not made it less so. The Aztecs were interested in their own history, and attempted to draw it together in pictorial manuscripts. These have been lost, and what have come down to us are copies, made, probably from memory, by hispanicized Indians under the prodding of the 16th-century friars. In the interpretation and verbalization of these pictorial histories we have to contend with ideas implanted by the friars, and the result is a picture of the migration period that is strongly reminiscent of the wandering of the Israelites, joined to a

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

241 Iztapalapa and Xochimilco, and at the present day a similar form of cultivation, although the gardens are no longer floating, may be seen at Xochimilco and along the banks of the Viga Canal, the water-way connecting Xochimilco with the City of Mexico.

These gardens are divided into long narrow strips with canals running between just wide enough for the passage of a dug-out canoe. The Indian cultivator poles his canoe along the narrow channels and scoops up the soft mud from the bottom to spread it over the land, and splashes the water over the growing plants with his paddle. It was probably this method of cultivation which gave [361] the mainly rectangular arrangement of the streets of the City of Mexico, the more unsymmetrical canals showing the original water ways between the mud banks, while the aggregation of chinampas may have left an irregular margin of outlying houses and gardens.

363 503 The very slight difference in level between the Lake of Texcoco and the site of the City made the latter liable to frequent inundations, and this difficulty was met by the inhabitants by engineering works of considerable importance. A causeway was built passing through the island town of Tlahuac, dividing the Lake of Chalco from that of Xochimilco, and a second causeway separated the waters of Xochimilco from those of Texcoco. The City of Mexico had probably already been joined to the mainland, for purposes of communication, by the causeways of Tlacopan (Tacuba) and Tepeyac (Guadalupe), and a third and longer causeway was added by connecting the City with the barrier holding back the waters of Xochimilco; this third causeway was known as the causeway of Iztapalapa. The lakes of Zumpango and Zaltocan were also traversed by causeways, but it is not now possible to locate their position.

363 503 731 These various causeways did much to control the movement of the waters of the lakes during the rainy season, but they were not sufficient to prevent serious inundations, and native tradition and a picture in a Mexican codex[1] go to prove that during the reign of Motecuhzoma (Montezuma) Illhuicamina, between the years 1440 and 1450, a very wet season caused the waters of Lake Texcoco to rise so much that the City was almost destroyed and the inhabitants had to take refuge in their canoes and piraguas. Montezuma applied for assistance and advice to his friend Netzahualcoyotl the King of Texcoco, and under his sage direction a great dyke was constructed, known as the "Albarradon of Nezhualcoyotl."

731 503 "This gigantic dyke started from Atzacualco on the North and followed a straight line to the South as far as Ixtapalapa at the foot of the hill called la Estrella. This great work, which was sixteen kilometres[2] in length, was constructed of stone and clay and crowned with a strong wall of rubble masonry, and was protected on both sides by a strong stockade which broke the force of the waves.

[1] "Codex Telleriano Remeusio." [2] Ten miles.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

"The dyke divided the lake into two parts, the larger to the East was known as the Lake of Texcoco, from the city situated on its shores, the lesser to the West was called the Lake of Mexico because the capital was surrounded by its waters on all sides. From this arrangement Mexico derived an aggregate of inestimable benefits. The great lake, like all lakes having no outlet for their waters, was salt, notwithstanding the volume of all the rivers which flowed into it, or in fact it owed its saltness to this very flow which carried in its current the soluble salts which the falling rain has robbed from the land. The salt water saturating the soil has little by little rendered it sterile, and in addition, the carbonate of soda and the thousand other impurities with which it is charged are hostile to animal life to such an extent that fishes could not live in it, neither to-day nor at the time of the Conquest, as was stated by the writers at that epoch, although the water was then less salt than it is at the present. As the lakes of fresh water to the south poured their surplus water into the lake of Mexico through the narrows of Culhuacan and Mexicaltzingo, those waters spread through the western lake, the Lake of Mexico, and completely filled it, separated as it was from the salt lake by the dyke of Netzahualcoyotl. In this way the basin of fresh water was converted into a fish pond and a home for all sorts of aquatic fowl. Chinampas covered its surface, separated by limpid spaces which were furrowed by swift canoes, and all the suburbs of this enchanting capital became flowery orchards."[1]

It will be noticed in the Upsala map that within the dyke men are depicted catching fish, while no fishermen are shown in the Lake of Texcoco, which was, however, then, as it is now, the home of numberless wild fowl. The great dyke was provided with numerous openings for the passage of canoes, but these openings were furnished with sluice gates which could be closed during the rainy season when the water of Texcoco rose and threatened to flood the City, and could be opened again to let out the fresh water from Mexico when the rapid evaporation during the summer months had lowered the level of Texcoco.

The fluctuations of level in the lakes of Chalco and Xochimilco were probably always less than in Lake Texcoco owing to the great number of copious springs of beautifully clear water which well up around their margins, especially on the west side, as well as in the lake of Xochimilco itself.

[1] Francisco de Garay, El valle de Mexico, apuntes historicos sobre su hidrographia, pp. 13 & 14.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

565 doms, had other ways to make slaves) we say: that many condi-
567 tions were lacking, to create them actual slaves. For of these slaves of this New-Spain, some had means, might own and possess them of their own, and they could not be sold again except under the conditions mentioned hereafter. The service rendered to their master was limited, not for always, nor ordinary. Some, upon marrying, became released, their relatives or brothers taking their place. There were also skilful slaves who, besides serving their masters, still kept house, with wife and children, purchasing and holding slaves themselves. The children of slaves were born free."[84]

567 The Mexican term for slave was, literally a "purchased man" ("tlacotli.") He was in fact but a "bondsman." Through a special contract, made before authorized witnesses, his services, the proceeds of his labor, and not his person, became pledged to another. The member of a kin had no direct ownership in him whom he employed, he could not sell him again without that employer's consent, nor could he take his life in punishment of crime. If the latter broke his contract through repeated [685] evasion he might finally be "collared," that is, his neck was enclosed in a wooden yoke, by means of which he was fastened to a wall at night. If the man still contrived to escape, then he was turned over to worship and sacrificed; but in case he succeeded in secreting himself in the official house without being intercepted by his master or one of that master's people, then he was spared, and even liberated from his bonds.[85] In addition to the supply furnished to the class of outcasts in the manner above indicated, there were accessions to it from outside. Fugitives were of rare occurrence, since such, if from a tribe against which war was waged, were regarded as precious additions, too important to be ranged among the outcasts.[86] But we have several instances, in the ancient history of Mexico, of destructive [731] drouths as well as of disastrous inundations, depriving the inhabi-

[84] "Monarchia Indiana" (Lib. XIV, cap. XVI, p. 564).

[85] I have gathered these details mostly from Torquemada (Vol. II, pp. 564-566). Compare besides others, Velancurt (Vol. I, pp. 483, 484, and 485) and nearly all modern writers.

[86] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 130): "Y si de la parte contraria salia alguno á descubrir y dar aviso cómo su señor ó su gente venian sobre ellos, al tal dábanle mantas y pagábanle bien." Copied by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. II, p. 538), and Velancurt (Parte II, Trat. II, cap. III, p. 394).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

tants of the valley of their annual crops. In order to escape 567 threatened famine, fathers bartered their services and those of their 731 children for food, to such tribes as possessed sufficient stores.[87]

If the consequence of expulsion from the bond of kinship or 562 of voluntary abandonment of the rights as members, were, for 565 the male, a degradation to work for others, it was altogether 837 different for the female. The position of women was, as we have already intimated, little better than that of a costly animal, and protection was awarded them only in so far as they represented a part of their husbands' property. This the kin itself was obligated to defend and protect. The wife, however, had no other right than that. She could not complain if her lord and master increased his "family-stock" by the addition of one or more concubines, nor if he strayed about to satisfy his desires with other females. Such acts were even subservient to the kins' interest, since they led to an increase of numbers. But the women themselves who gave their persons away for such [684] purposes could only belong to the class of outcasts; for illicit intercourse with wives and daughters of the kins was, as we shall hereafter see, severely punished. Through the formation of the class of outcasts, or at least along with it, prostitution became [548 tolerated among the ancient Mexicans, while polygamy in 595]
the shape of concubinage was introduced as a legitimate custom.[88]

[87] Besides the famines recorded since the conquest, the older authors and sources in general notice several (at least two) previous to 1520. It is not to our purpose to discuss their dates. They are given with the usual variation and discordance. Thus for instance, the "Codex Telleriano Remensis" (Kingsborough, Vol. I, plate VII, and Vol. VI, p. 136) mentions one in 1404 (1 Tochtli), which is evidently incorrect, since 1 Tochtli would be 1402. The Ce-Tochtli thus mentioned, is 1454. In that year, Durán (Cap. XXX, p. 245) places the beginning of the great drouth which, after three years duration, so completely exhausted the Mexican stores and supplies that "wrathy chief" the older, ("Huehue Motecuzuma") told the people "que cada uno vaya á buscar su remedio" (p. 247). In consequence of it, it is reported that many people "sold their sons and daughters to the merchants and principals (señores) of the tribes that had wherewith to give them to eat, and they gave for a baby (or boy rather, "niño") a small basket of corn (maiz) to the father or mother, obligating themselves to sustain the child as long as the famine might last, for that if afterwards the father or mother might wish to redeem it, they should be obligated to pay these aliments." This is, as usual, also stated by Tezozomoc (Cap. XL, p. 64), though with less details. Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LXXIII, p. 203) reports the same, but placing it fifty years later, under the last "wrathy chief" (Cap. CX, p. 235) in 1505, A. D. Sahagun (Lib. VIII, cap I, p. 269), agrees with Durán and Tezozomoc, so does Clavigero (Lib. IV, cap. XII, p. 263): "Many sold themselves for food." This date is also 1451–1454. It is singular that Torquemada (Lib. II. cap. XLVII, p. 158) also relates the famine under the older "wrathy chief," and his words are almost textually copied by Clavigero.

[88] The possession of more than one woman, or rather the enjoyment of more than

732

732 DEFECTIVES--incidence of serious physical defects (e.g., blindness, deaf-mutism, crippling infirmities and deformities, feeblemindedness); interpretation of deformities and defects; care and treatment of defectives (e.g., neglect, persecution, euthanasia, home care, charity, institutionalization); organization, operation, and financial support of special institutions for defectives; adjustments to defects (e.g., seeing-eye dogs, prosthetic devices, hearing aids); sterilization of defectives; etc. See also:

Incidence of insanity 158
Sign language 201
Guardianship 429
Aids to locomotion 481
Care of war veterans 739
Begging 735
Care of the insane 758
Interpretations of physical abnormalities . . . 926
Infanticide 847
Care of aged 737, 889

175
787

seen there, like a number of people coming massed?" And when they were about to answer, that which they looked at vanished. They could say nothing.

[As] eighth omen, often were discovered mis-shapen people. They had two heads, but only one body. They took them there to the Tlillan calmecac, where Moctezuma beheld them. When he had looked at them, then they vanished.

Injc chicuetetl tetzaujtl, mjiecpa motenextiliaia tlaca, tlacanetzolti, ontetzontecomeque, ça ce in jntlac vnpa qujmonujcaia in tlillan calmecac, vmpa qujmjttaia in motecuçuma: in oquijttac njman poliujia. [732]

[p.20 is blank]

524 525 won[2] all the costly goods: golden necklaces, green stone, fine turquoise, bracelets on which were round, green stones or fine turquoise, quetzal feathers, slaves, houses, fields, precious capes, mats, large capes, green stone lip plugs, golden ear plugs, duck feather capes. And he who played patolli, who cast the beans, if then he made one [of them] stand, if the bean stood up there on its thicker end, it was taken as a [787] great omen; it was regarded as a great marvel. Then he won all the costly goods. [The other] lost even though he had not yet attained the specified number of throws. Thus were all agreed; thus all came to the end [of the game].

ololiuhquj anoço teuxiujtl, quetzalli, tlacotli, calli, mjlli, tlaçotilmatli, pepechtli, veuej tilmatli: chalchiuhtenteti, teucujtlanacochtli, xomoiujtilmatli. Auh in aqujn patoanj, in qujchaiaoa in etl, intla centetl etl ic teequechili, in moquetzticaz etl, in vmpa ic tiinmjmjltic: cenca tetzammachoia, cenca tlamaujçolli ipan mottaia: njman muchi qujtlanj, in jxqujch tlaçotli, in motlanjtoa in macanel aiamo açi in quezqujtetl aquilli, injc netennonotzalo, injc netzopalo.

526 411 They shot with bow and arrow—with a bow, with a shaft, with bird arrows, with darts. With this belonged a bracelet on which were large, round, green [301] stones or fine turquoises. The ruler placed it about [643] his wrist.

Tlatlamjna tlaujtoltica, tipontica, totomjtica, tlacochtica: itlaujcallo, matzopetztli ipan ca, uej chalchiujtl, ololiuhquj, anoço teuxiujtl in jmaquechtlan qujtlalia tlatoanj.

They used a sling, and cast stones with the sling. With these belonged a net for the small stones, rounded so that the small stones were polished. With [223] these they cast stones at small birds. They hunted with a bird net; with it they captured various birds.

Tlatlacaloazuja, tlatlamotla ican tlacalhoaztli, iujcallo telolomatlatl mjmjltic injc mopetlaoa telolotli, ic qujmotla tepitoton totome, tlatlapechmatlauja in jca totomatlatl: injc qujmaçi nepapan totome, 351 Flower gardens were laid out; flower beds were laid out. They put in them all the various flowers.

mozochimjltia, mozochitepantia, caquja, in jxqujch nepapan xochitl, 522 524 There were their jesters who provided them solace and gave them pleasure. And [there were those] who rolled a log with their feet thus bringing pleasure in many ways. Their deeds were laughable and marvelous; for with the soles of his feet one man [lying] below this did—he made a thick, round log dance with the soles of his feet [while] he lay upon his back and cast the log upward. With only the soles of his feet he did this.

vncatca intelaveuetzqujticahoan in qujmellelqujxtiaia, in qujcecemelti: ioan quaujlacatzoque in qujpaqujltia mjiec tlamantli in jntlachioal teuetzqujti, ioan maujztic, in jca ixocpal tlanjpa injc tlámati çe tlacatl, tomaoac in quanmjmjlli in qujtotia ica ixocpal aquetztoc acopa in conmaiauj quammjmjlli ça ichoatl in jxocpal ic tlamati, 517 Many things they did to bring men pleasure. There [732] were their servants, their pages who attended them and gave them solace; dwarfs, cripples, hunchbacks, [231] servants. They kept eagles, ocelots, wolves, mountain cats, and various birds.

mjiec tlamãtli, in tececemelti in qujchioa, vncatca imaachoan, ixoloan in qujnujcatinenca in qujmehellelqujxtiaia, tzapame, villame, tepotzome, teachme, qujnpiaia quaquauhti, oçelome, cujcujtlachtin, ocotochtin, nepapan tototl.

2. The Real Academia de la Historia MS reads quidamino (he wagered) instead of quitlamjlia.

532
[175
782
● 732]

[524]

[231]

[533
524
732]

[695
694]

[696]

[533
534]

[534
535]

[231]

—After Paso y Troncoso

Omens (concluded). 61. Two-headed men (Chapter 6).

62. Spaniards landing on the coast (Chapter 7). 63. Game of patolli (Chapter 10). 64. Rolling a log on the soles of one's feet (Chapter 10). 65. Animals kept by the ruler (Chapter 10). 66. Judgment and punishment of malefactors—Tlacatlan (Chapter 14). 67. Same—Quauhcalco (Chapter 14). 68. Same—Tecpilcalli (Chapter 14). 69. Musicians (Chapter 14). 70. Array and equipment for the dance (Chapter 14). 71. The ruler's animals (Chapter 14).

[p. 36(G)]

[p. 36(F) is blank]

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

Sixteenth Chapter, in which it is told how the women were trained.

[Theirs were] the device with which [the loom] was held; the divided cord; the skein; the shuttle; the cane stalks; the wide batten, which swished [as it was used]; the thin batten, one made of bone; the small batten with which they worked designs; the heddle; the flail; the spindle whorl; the spinning bowl; chalk; the shallow spindle whorl when they spun with feathers; the basket for unspun cotton, one for rabbit hair, one for cotton thread, the basket for feathers, and the earthen bowl for feathers; the rack for yarn; the colored wood[1] with which they dyed cotton when they wove; the bowl for colors in which they dissolved pigments; the paper patterns from which they took the shape of whatsoever they made; maguey spines, with which they picked the cotton threads.

They took personal charge of preparing food and chocolate. There were their older women, who had reared them; and their hand-maidens were hunchbacks and dwarfs, who sang and played the [small ground] drum to amuse them.

Injc caxtolli oce capitulo, vncan mjtoa, injc mo-ichecoaia çioa. 286 462

Neanonj, mecamaxalli, quatzontli, xiiotl, otlatl, tzotzopaztli cacalaca, patlaoac: tzotzopaztli pitzaoac, omjtzotzopaztli, tzotzopaztepiton, ic tlamachioa: teçacatl, tlaujteconj, malacatl, tzaoalcaxitl, tiçatl, xaxalmalacatl ic iujtzaoa: ichcatanatli, tochomjtanatli, icpatanatli, iujtanatlj, iujtecomatl: tzatzaztli, tlacujlolquaujtl injc qujcujloa icpatl in qujqujti: tlapalcaxitl, in vncan qujpatla intlapal: amamachiotl, in vncan cana tlein tlamachtli qujchioa; vitztli injc quj-uitzcuj icpatl: [386] tlaqualchioa, achioa, qujnomauja: vncate in jnnahoan in qujmjzcaltia, ioan in cocoa tepotzoine çihoa, tzapame, cujca, tlatzotzona: injc melelqujxtia. 462 732 [534 522]

[1] Tlaxilquauitl: Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 222) describes the tree as "Iaxcuyo, y tienen los otros mayor que parecen pinitos sobre el Iaxcuyo, es dedal muy provechoso, porque de él se hacen tapaxuntos, sombreros y cilindros. . . ." One is pictured in Hernández, op. cit., VI, 68.

[p. 50 is blank]

beloved sons, now we are about to go!"[10] Sometimes she said: "O my beloved sons, whither shall I take you?"

A seventh omen: at one time the fisher folk who hunted or snared with nets took captive an ashen hued bird like a crane. Then they went to show it to Moctezuma, [who was] in the Tlillan calmecatl.[11] It was past noon, and still daytime. On its head was as it were a mirror, round, circular, and as if pierced in the middle,[12] where were to be seen the heavens, the stars—the Fire Drill [constellation]. Arid Moctezuma took it as an omen of great evil when he saw the stars and the Fire Drill. And when he looked at the bird's head a second time, a little beyond[13] [the stars] he saw people who came as though massed, who came as conquerors, girt in war array. Deer bore them upon their backs. And then he summoned the soothsayers and the sages.[14] He said to them: "Do you not know what I have seen there, which was as if people came massed?" And when they would answer him, that which they looked at vanished. They could tell [him] nothing more.[15]

An eighth omen: often were discovered men of monstrous form, having two heads [but] only one body. They took them there to the Tlillan calmecatl, where Moctezuma beheld them; but when he looked at them, they then vanished.

quenmanjan qujtoa. Nonopilhoantzitzin, campa namechnovisqujliz. 787

Injc chicuntlamantli tetzavitl: ceppa tlatlamaia, manoço tlamatlaviaia in atlaca; centetl cacique tototl nextic, iuhqujn tocujlcoiotl: njmã qujtitito in Motecuçoma, tlillan, calmecac: ommotzcalo in tonatiuh, oc tlaca, iuhq'n tezcatl icpac manj, malacachtic, tevilacachtic, iuhqujn xapotticac: vmpa onnecia in ilhujcatl, in cicitlaltin, in mamalhoaztli. Auh in motecuçoma, cenca qujmotetzavi in jquac qujmjttac cicitlaltin, yoã mamalhoaztli. Auh injc vppa ontlachix in jcpac tototl, ene qujttac, iuhquj on in ma acame, moquequetztivitze, tepeuhtivitze, moiaochichiuhtivitze, qujnmama mamaça. Auh njman qujnnotz in tlaciuhque, in tlamatinjme: qujmjlhuj: Amo anqujmati in tlein onoconjttac, iuhqujn acame moquequetztivitze: auh ie qujnanqujlizquja, in conjttaque, opoliuh, aoc tle qujtoque. 788

Injc chicuetetl tetzavitl: mjecpã motenextiliaia, tlaca, tlacanetzolti, ontetzontecomeque, çan çe in intlac, vmpa qujmõvicaia in tlillan calmecac, vmpa qujmjttaia in motecuçoma, in oqujmjttac njmã polivia. 789

---

10. Cf. loc. cit., where yã yoã tiui appears.

11. In Bustamante, op. cit., p. 10, this is explained: "Se llamaban á presencia de Moctheuzoma, el cual por entonces estaba en unos palacios que le llamaban Tillancalmecatli (quiere decir, palacios negros de negro) y parece que como tenia otros palacios para alegrarse, recrearse edificados, este Tillancalmecatli tenia para recogerse en el tiempo de adversidad y tristeza."

12. A tlachiloni (instrument for sewing), attribute of Tezcatlipoca and the fire god (Seler, op. cit., p. 455, n. 4).

13. In the Real Palacio MS, a similar phrase is written: "Zoc q'mitzac, yoãq'n acamac mocquequeztivitzac." On mocquequeztivitzac, see Rémi Simeon: Dictionnaire de la langue nahuatl ou mexicaine (Paris: Imprimerie Nationale, 1880) — quequeztic. In corresponding Spanish passages, Sahagún translates as "marchadamente de gente junta" or "marcha gente junta."

14. Tlamatinjme: see Angel María Garibay K.: "Teotlamatinime de Sahagún," Tlalocan, II, 2 (1946), p. 171. Amoãqui is favored as translation: "La vida cierta, parece denotar fundamento metaviológico."

15. In the Real Palacio MS, following opoliuh, we read: "aoc tle ual q'mopã. ac oppa q'mitlani ỹ tlacuilaque in tlamatinime, tle yoan tonal quilhuiqu ceno ual yohual yn quatocuati." (In the original, the abbreviation for -que resembles -qz; hence it is thus reproduced here.)

[p. 4 is blank]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

dishes and food which Montezuma gave them they ate 643 standing up with much reverence and without looking at 264 his face. He was served on Cholula earthenware either [415] red or black. While he was at his meal the men of his guard who were in the rooms near to that of Montezuma, never dreamed of making any noise or speaking aloud. They brought him fruit of all the different kinds that the land produced, but he ate very little of it. From [415 time to time they brought him, in cup-shaped vessels 832 of pure gold, a certain drink made from cacao which 272] they said he took when he was going to visit his wives, and at the time he took no heed of it, but what I did see was that they brought over fifty great jugs of good cacao frothed up, and he drank of that, and the women served this drink to him with great reverence.

Sometimes at meal-times there were present some very [522 ugly humpbacks, very small of stature and their bodies 732] almost broken in half, who are their jesters, and other Indians, who must have been buffoons, who told him witty sayings, and others who sang and danced, for Montezuma was fond of pleasure and song, and to these he ordered to be given what was left of the food and the jugs of cacao. Then the same four women removed the table cloths, and with much ceremony they brought water for his hands. And Montezuma talked with those four old chieftains about things that interested him, and they took leave of him with the great reverence in which they held him, and he remained to repose.

As soon as the Great Montezuma had dined, all the men 643 of the Guard had their meal and as many more of the other house servants, and it seems to me that they brought out over a thousand dishes of the food of which I have spoken, and then over two thousand jugs of cacao all frothed up, as they make it in Mexico, and a limitless quantity of fruit, so that with his women and female

Fourth Chapter, which telleth of the second house, when it was the time of this sign, named Two Rabbit; and those then born in it did nothing but drink wine.

Injc navi capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, injc ontetl calli, in jpan, y, machiotl, in jtoca vme tochtli: auh in vncan tlacatia, iehoan in çan qujxcavia tlatlaoana.

And of Two Rabbit, which followed, it was said that he who was then born was a great drunkard. Indeed, he required, lusted for, and used wine like a pig, he gorged himself and was a glutton with wine. Only to it did he dedicate himself; he depended upon it, consumed it to excess, and overindulged himself in it. He took it to himself inhumanly and needed it immoderately. Only his drinking did he consider. With it he awoke, with it he arose; never did he arouse himself, take notice, or sober up.[1]

Auh in qujoaltoqujlia vme tochtli: mjtoa, in aqujn ipan tlacatia, cenca tlaoananj, vel qujtolina qujztlaquj, qujpitzonequj in vctli, vel ocpoça, ocxixicuj: çan iee in qujmotequjuhtia, ipã mjxpoa, qujmotequjmaca, qujmotlaelmaca, âqujmotlacamaca, qujtlaelnequj, çan jauh povi, ipan oaliiça, ipan oalmeoa, aic mozcalia, aic tlachia, aic ix qujcuj:

In truth, sometimes he no longer took food. At such a time he only became a slave to it. No longer did he take to his bed. Night after night, when he arose, he visited various wine makers' houses begging wine. Never did he come to his right mind. He was not well even when he drank nothing. And he did not bother about it, nor abhor it, nor become distressed nor nauseated by it even though it were only the dregs, which indeed were like spoiled clots, with dirt, or full of gnats — full of filth and rubbish. So he swallowed it, sucked it in, and gulped it. Like a dog he licked his lips.

in nel quenman, aoc qujtlaquallotia, ça iuhcapan in conmomaca, aocmo qujpepechtia, ioiooac in moquetza, tlachicque inchã cacalaquj, tlatlapevia, aquenmã tlapohuj in jiollo, âvel ca in maca tle conj: auh aoc quen qujmati, amo qujtlatzilhuja, amo yvic eoa, amo qujtlaeltia, in manel ça xaiocujtlatl, in çan iuhquj tetzacpol, chapantica, anoce moca çaioli, çaiollo, moca tlaçolli, tlâtlaçollo, ça iuhquj qujtoloa, iuhquj qujçolotza, qujltequj: iuhqujn chichi motempapaloa.

If he did not find wherewith he could become drunk, in order to buy wine he hurriedly seized his cape, or his breech clout, thereby finding for himself poverty. He could not abstain or steel himself.

Intlaca oc tle qujtta, qujtlaoanaz, ic moccoviz, qujcujtivetzi in jtilma, yn jmaxtli: icnoiotl ipampa qujmottitia, aocmo vel motlacaoaltia, moiollotechioa:

Nevermore thereafter did he live in bliss and contentment. Still, when indeed he passed a calm day, once again he was quite drunk, very drunk, lying stupefied, filthily drunk. No longer did he take heed. He pitched forward upon his face; he fell head first. He went wallowing in ordure,[2] with blanched or reddened face, debauched, with hair tangled, uncombed, twisted, and matted; no more did he tend njman aoqujc vellacaconemj, tlacaco tlamati, in ma oc ivian oncemjlhujti, onocuel ivintic, tequjzocomjc, onocuellapolo, tlaelivintic, aocmo qujmati, ça mjxicquetza, motzonjcquetza, cujtlanexiuhtinemj, ixtenexiuhtinemj, ixchichilivi, ixchichilpul, quapôpoliuhtinemj, quatzomaiuhtinemj, quapôpolpol, quatzômapol, aoc onmomatoca, aoc onmopepetla, aoc onmoquapepetla, intlanel cana momaiavi, mjx-

1. Ic qujnej. See Ixnicuel in Molina, op. cit., and Simeon, op. cit.

2. Cf. Olmos, op. cit., p. 236: yya tzompachpul, yya cuitlanexpul momamiqui.

X 787
●733

it with his hands, or comb and arrange it. If somewhere he threw himself down, and fell on his face, or his nose, or his knees — if he fell and skinned his knees; or he broke a hand or a foot, etc., — no longer did he heed or note the pain. Nowhere was there peace or virtue in his face.

And his hands only quaked, quivered, and shook. And his speech was no longer prudent; it only quavered. He only spoke as a drunkard; intemperate words emerged from his lips, which he should not have said. Continually he shouted at others, harangued them, affronted them, and quarreled with them. All that he said was not fit to be repeated. He went howling and shouting, boasting that he was a brave man. He danced in a circle, opening wide his mouth as he sang. He was disrespectful and impudent. He seized everything to brandish and raise as a threat — the beast, the stone, the club.[3] He went carrying his stone or his piece of wood with him, constantly troubling and threatening people, and blocking the way.

He brought poverty to his children — always causing them fear, constantly terrifying them, scattering them.

Never did he sleep or rest easily. In time he fell exhausted, consumed by pain and affliction. No more did he say: "Wherewith will my home appear attractive?" — [for] he thought of nothing but his wine. Only rubbish prevailed and ashes were strewn throughout. In his home, no one swept; no fire burned. It remained in darkness. Misery reigned.

It mattered not where with others he slept and lay down to sleep. [For] his heart was only there in the taverns, the wine shops. When he found no wine, he seemed anguished of heart, as if he hung high, or tumbled into a pitfall, like a vagabond.

And if somewhere he found a drinking place, there he satisfied his longing, quieted his anguish, as if gladdened and calmed.[4] There he sat firmly and fast, dedicated to sitting, seated happily. No more did he think to depart.

And if he were bidden to drink somewhere, as never before did he spring up to run and take pains to enter. As if spontaneously,[5] he suddenly ran, toxaoa, moiacatoxaoa, motlanquatoxaoa, motlanquaxipeoa, momapoztequj, mocxipuztequj. Etc. aocmo qujmati, aocmo qujtecococamati, aoccan tlacacemelle, aoccan tlacaiectli yn jxaiac:

auh in jma ça cuecuechca, ça viviioca, papatlaca, ioan in jtlatol aocmo mjmati, ça cuecuechca, çan tlatlaoancatlatoa, ça much tlacaçollatolli in jcamacpa qujça, in qujcacamacaoa, çan jc nemj in tetzatzilia, in tetlacaqujtia, in tepinauhtia in teaoã: much qujtoa in aitolonj oiouhtinemj, tzatzitinemj, moqujchitotinemj, momamantinemj, mocamatzaiana in cujca, atle qujmauhcaitta, atle qujmamati, much qujcujtivetzi, cacocuj, cacoleoa in tequanj, in tetl, in quavitl: iteuh iquauh ietinemj, tlacatl qujcocomonja, tlacatl qujcuecuetlanja, vtli qujtzatzacutinemj:

icnoiotl qujmjttitia in ipilhoan, muchipa qujnmamauhtia, qujmjiçavia, qujncecenmana, aic tlacacochi, motlacateca: qujnjquac quauhtenvetzi, in jellel onacic in onmellelaxiti, aocmo qujtoa, in tlein ic ontlavelneciz nochan: ça mache in jvc qujmati, ça tlaçolli qujztoc, tequjxqujtl coxontoc, in jchan, aiac tlachpana, amo tlatla, tlaioaticac, icnoiotl qujztoc, ça canjn tetlan cocochi, tetlan mocochteca, ça vmpan ca iiollo tlachiccan, vctlaliloia, in atle qujtta vctli, iuhqujn nentlamati yiollo, iuhqujn aco pilcac, iuhqujn ãactiuetzi, iuhqujn avic iauh.

Auh intlacana otlaipantili tlaoanoia: iuhqujn vncan motlatlalia yiollo, iuhqujn iioiolipan, iuhqujn iiollo yizztaia, yiollo cecelia. vncan motetcuhtlalia, motepitztlalia, mocentlalia, mopaccatlalia, aoc tlacaoalizztlamati.

Auh intlacana tlaoancanotzalo: iuhqujn aoc ie choloteoa, ie çomocacaquj, iuhqujn ce inacaz, iuhqujn onvicinj onmotlaloa, mjçiuhcatlaloa, momama-

3. Cf. Simeón, op. cit. (tepuzmi) and Olmos, op. cit., pp. 240, 242, and elsewhere (tetl, quauitl), where the terms tepuzmi, tetl, and quauitl are used metaphorically for "chastisement." Sahagún, however, renders them literally.

4. Cf. Sahagún, Florentine Codex, Book VI, cap. xii, fol. 193r.

5. Cf. Sahagún, "Memoriales con escritos," p. 204 (glosa 8).

15: Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

428 their husbands. Single-blessedness, among the Mexicans, appears [589 to have occurred only in case of religious vows, and in which case 734] they fell back for subsistence, upon the part allotted to worship, or in case of great infirmities, for which the calpulli provided.[111]
No mention is made of the widow participating in the products of the "tlalmilli," still it is presumable that she was one of those whom the oldest son had to support. There are indications that the [587] widow could remarry, in which case her husband, of course, provided for her.[112]

428 The customs of Inheritance, as above reported, were the same 764 with chiefs as well as with the ordinary members of the tribe. Of the personal effects very little remained since, the higher the office was which the deceased had held, the more display was made at his cremation, and consequently the more of his dresses, weapons and ornaments, were burnt with the body.[113] Of lands, the chiefs 428 only held each their "tlalmilli" in the usual way, as members of their kin, whereas the other "official" lots went to the new incumbents of the offices. It should always be borne in mind, that none of these offices were hereditary themselves. Still, a certain "right of succession" is generally admitted as having existed. Thus, with the Tezcucans, the office of head war-chief might pass from father to son,[114] at Mexico from brother to brother, and from uncle to nephew.[115] This might, eventually, have tended to perpetuate the

[793]

[111] Such unmarried females were the "nuns" frequently mentioned by the old writers. We shall have occasion to investigate the point in our paper on "the ancient Mexican priesthood." As attendants to worship, they participated in the tributes furnished towards it by each calpulli, of which we have spoken.

[112] Oviedo ("Hist. gen. y nat de Indias," Lib. XXXIII, cap. LIV. pp. 547–553), reports a conversation with Don Juan Cano, held at San Domingo, 8 of Sept., 1514, in which the said Cano asserts that he married Montezuma's daughter, widow of Quauhtemotzin. There is an indefinite report that, when she married Quauhtemotzin, she was already the widow of Cuitlahuatzin. Intermarriage of widowers and widows took place in Yucatan, but without any ceremony. See Landa, "Relacion de las cosas de Yucatan." Paris, 1864, by Mr. Brasseur de Bourbourg, p. 142, §XXV.

[113] See note No. 108, the same quotations apply to this case. Besides, we refer to the numerous descriptions of funeral rites, or rather cremations, contained, for instance, in Durán, Tezozomoc, Ixtlilxochitl, Veytia, and in Bustamantes "Tezcoco en los Ultimos Tiempos, etc." Also to the cremation of the head chief of Michhuacan, as related by Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XLI. pp. 164–167). We abstain from special quotations, the subject being amply discussed in all the authors just mentioned.

[114] Zurita (p. 12). Gomara (Vedia I, p. 434). Torquemada (Lib. IX, cap. IV. p. 177. Lib. XI, cap. 27, p. 256, etc. etc.).

[115] This fact is too amply proven to need special references. We reserve it for final discussion in our proposed paper on the chiefs of the Mexicans, and the duties, powers and functions of their office.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

531

Rich Man

[482]

PLATES 34-35

AZTEC SOCIETY AND COSTUME FROM

During the mid-sixteenth century the Spanish friar Bernardino de Sahagún made a famous study of the Aztecs, Historia General de Nueva España, which was not published until 1829. He had the Indians prepare copious illustrations to clarify his text, but they did not reach public circulation until 1905. The selections here show, besides the social division

Poor Man

Beggar Man

[735]

Goldsmith

Thief

[326]

[685]

Feather Worker

[286]

Warriors

[701
441
714]

[p. 112(B)]

X 796 The eighth month they called Uei tecuilhuitl. On the first day of this month they observed a feast to [805] the goddess named Xilonen (goddess of the tender 776 maize). On this feast they gave food to all the poor men and women—old men, old women, boys, girls— ● [735] in honor of the goddess. They slew a woman, on the tenth day of this month, arrayed in the ornaments with which they represented the same goddess.

Al octauo mes llamauã Vei tecujlhujtl: En el primero dia deste mes, haziã fiesta a la diosa llamada Xilonen (diosa de los xilotes) en esta fiesta dauã de comer a todos los pobres hombres y mugeres, viejos y viejas, njños y njñas, a honrra desta diosa: matauã a vna muger a diez dias deste mes, compuesta cõ lõs ornamẽtos con que pintauã a la mjsma diosa.

Chapter 8
Uei tecuilhuitl

X 796 For eight uninterrupted days before the feast, they 735 fed men and women, young and old. Then, very 262 early in the morning they gave them to drink a kind of gruel which they call chienpinolli. Each one drank as much as he wished. And at noon they placed all in order, seated in their rows, and they gave them tamales. He who gave them [out], gave each one as many as he could hold in one hand. And if one of them exceeded the bounds of custom so much as to take [tamales] twice, they mishandled him and took from him those which he had, and he went with nothing. This [feasting] the lords brought about in order to give comfort to the poor; for at this time, ordinarily, there is a want of the necessities of life.

X 796 All these eight days they danced and moved in rhythm, men and women together performing the 536 ceremonious movement, all heavily adorned with rich vestments and jewels. The women wore their [302] hair unbound; they went with hair down, dancing and singing with the men. This dance began at sundown, and they continued in it until nine o'clock. [373] They carried many lights (like great torches) of resinous wood, and there were many braziers or bonfires which burned in the same courtyard in which they danced. In this dance or solemn movement they went with hands joined [to those of other dancers], or embraced—the arm of one grasping the body of another as in an embrace, and the other likewise [holding still] another, men and women [alike].

Cap. 8.

1	e	KL	Vei tecujlhujtl	e	22[1]
2	f		Dauan de comer a hombres y mu-	f	23
3	g		geres chicos y grãdes ocho dias con-	g	24
4	A		tinos, antes de la fiesta luego muy de	A	25
5	b		mañana dauãles a beuer vna manera	b	26
6	c		de maçamorra que llamã chienpinolli:	c	27
7	d		cada vno bueja quãto queria: y al	d	28
8	e		medio dia ponjãlos todos por orden	e	29
9	f		en sus rencleras sentados, y dauanlos	f	30
10	g		tamales: el que los daua, daua a cada	g	1[2]
11	A		vno quãtos podia abarcar con vna	A	2
12	b		mano: y si alguno se desmãdaua a	b	3
13	c		tomar dos vezes maltrataualle, y to-	c	4
14	d		mauanle los que tenja, y yvase sin	d	5
15	e		nada. Esto hazian los señores por con-	e	6
16	f		solar a los pobres: porque en este	f	7
17	g		tiempo ordinariamente ay falta de	g	8
18	A		mãtenjmjentos.	A	9
19	b		Todos estos ocho dias baylauan, y	b	10
20	c		dançauã: haziendo areyto hombres y	c	11[3]

mugeres todos juntos todos muy ataujados con ricas vestiduras y joyas: las mugeres trayan los cabellos sueltos, andauan en cabello baylando y cantando cõ los hombres començaua este areyto en ponjendose el sol, y persueruauan en el, hasta ora de las nueue: trayã muchas lumbreras (como grãdes hachas) de tea, y aujan muchos braseros o hogueras, que ardian en el mjsmo patio dõde baylauan. En este bayle o areyto andauã trauados de las manos, o abraçados, el braço del vno asido del cuerpo como abraçado, y el otro asimjsmo del otro hombres y mugeres.

1. Marginal notation: Xuxuxi quaiz; Efi or xuxi.
2. Marginal notation: Pij papar or Mort.
3. Marginal notation: Julius he diar xuxi.

The Eighth Chapter telleth how they held in dread hunger and famine when One Rabbit ruled the year count, and what they first did when the year count of One Rabbit had not yet begun.

And [even] when [the year] One Rabbit had not yet set in, first provision was made; our food was hidden away, stored, saved up, and placed in bins. Nothing was thrown away; all then was saved—wild seeds not commonly eaten; musty maize; corn silk; corn tassels; pulp scraped from maguey tappings, tuna cactus flowers; cooked maguey leaves; heated maguey sap.

Everything was taken into account: [with] amaranth, even the weeds[13] were threshed; [as for] the beans, likewise were stored and put away unripened ones and the dried, withered ends of the green beans. And when they had used all, they satisfied and quickened themselves [with] bird seed, bitter amaranth or bright red amaranth, and yacacolli maize.[13]

This was the time when they bought people;[14] they purchased men for themselves. The merchants were those who had plenty, who prospered; the greedy, the well-fed man, the covetous, the niggardly, the miser, who controlled wealth and family, guardians, the mean, the stingy, the selfish. In the homes of [such men] they crowded, going into bondage, entering house after house—the orphan, the poor, the indigent, the needy, the pauper, the beggar, who were starved and famished; who just as they went to sleep, just so awoke; who found nothing and got nowhere; who in no place found their rest, relief or remedy. At this time one sold oneself. One ate oneself; one swallowed oneself. Or else one sold and delivered into bondage his beloved son, his dear child.

Inic chicuey capitulo, itechpa tlatoa: inic quimacacia apiztli, in maianaliztli, in icoac tlauicaia, in xiuhtlapoalli in ce tochtli: yoan in tlein achtopa quichioaia, in aiamo vmpeoa xiuhtlapoalli, ce tochtli.

Auh in icoac, aiamo moquetza ce tochtli: achtopa nenemachtiloia, netlatlatililo, netetzontilo, netecatilo, mocuezcomatema in tonacaiotl: soc tle motlaça, muchicoac netlatililo in polocatl, in popoiotl, in xilotzãtli, in miiaoatl, in metzolli, in nochzochitl, in mescalli, in necutlaxoeuilli.

Auh inic muchi temachiloia, in ouuhtli çan yoã mocoonoa in ipolocaio: in etl çan yoan motlatiaia, mocalaquiaia in iazaoacaio, yoan in jexococoloio in opatzaoac. Auh icoac, muchi tlaiecoa, tlaxcotlaça tlahiiocuitia in petzicatl, in chichic ouuhtli, anoço teuouuhtli, iacacolli:

ie icoac tecoã, motlacacouia, in vnca quicoani, in mocuiltonoa, in motlacamati, in tlãtlametl, tlaiztotiani, atle quiacaoa, tlaistamachiuhqui, tlaçaloani, tlapachoani, tlamalhuiani, teuie, tzotzoca, motzol: ichan maaquia, mihitoa, mocacalaquia in icnotlacatl, in motolinja, in quiciaui, in quihiiouia: in aoneoztinemi, in aonmacitinemi, in apizmicqui, in teuciuhque: in iuhqui cochi, in iuhqui meoa, in aualnecini, in aoccan vitz, in aoccan quitta ihiiocuiia, iceuhca, ipatica: ie vncan in monamaca, in moqua, in motolia: anoço quinamaca, quimonamaquilia in ipiltzin, in iconetzin:

805
262

805
567
565
735

12. In xuuhtli yan yoã in ipolocaio: cf. Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1950), II, p. 268: "xuuhtli yolocayo, es la semilla de las cosas que se siembran, con todas sus inmundicias." Jones, op. cit., p. 69. Jones "ipolocaio was aquel donde lo desechado sale."

13. Some of these terms are identified in Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 63. Yacacolli is described in Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia de las cosas de la Nueva-España (D. Jourdanet and Rémi Simeón, eds.; Paris: G. Masson, Editeur, 1880), p. 118, n. 2, as "cogollo de maíz." See also the Robredo edition, Vol. I, p. 139.

14. The translation of this passage differs in some details from that of Jones (op. cit., pp. 68-71), q. v.

Quinonoa appears in the Real Palacio MS as quiqinoni. The term could be translated, "those who are people." Cf. in onoque (see ne oneuil), toward the end of the paragraph.

532
[687]

[625]

[689]

[526]

[533
534]

• [735]

[482]

—After Paso y Troncoso

o 86. Punishment of an erring official (Chapter 17). 87. Punishment of a careless musician (Chapter 17). 88-90. Keeping watch in the city against enemies (Chapter 17). 91. The game tlachtli (Chapter 17). 92. Gifts of the ruler to the poor (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(M)]

1/A [This caption is in error. - Analyst]

[p. 36(L) is blank]

X 796 264 bore [food], who carried [food] in their cloaks, who served at table; [and] the pages. Beginning with the first-comers, he who served at table thus served them X 796 262 as many tamales as they could take in one hand. He gave them perchance tamales made of maize treated with lime; or else made with fruit; some [he gave] tamales of maize blossoms; or with twisted ends, or sweetened with honey. Of the tamales, some had twisted ends and were filled with grains of maize; some took the twisting forms of green beans and were filled with grains of maize.[2] in tetlamacazque, in tetlamamacazque, yiacac valpeoa in tetlamacac, injc tetlamaca, in quexqujch veliti qujtzitzquja tamalli, ixqujch qujtemaca, in aço tenextamalli, in anoço xocotamalli, cequj mjisoatamalli, cequj iacacoltamalli, cequj necutamalli: auh in tamalli, cequj iacacollaoio, cequj ixxococolotlaoio:

X 796 264 And they who served [food] looked to the small children, serving them well, with much concern. And some of the table-servers offered tamales only to those whom they knew. They offered them to such familiars as their kin or their friends. Twice or thrice they offered them [food].

auh in tetlamacaia in qujmittaia pipiltzitzinti, cenca vel qujntlamacaia, cẽca tlatlaocultiaia, auh in cequjnti tetlamacaque, çan qujteixiximatcamaca in tamalli: qujmjximatcamaca in aço ivaniolque, in anoço injcnjoan, aço vppa, expa in qujntlamaca.

And none might deceive in taking tamales. And any whom they saw trying to take tamales dishonestly, such, when they saw him, they punished, striking him, leaving bloody welts, with a cord made of reeds. What had been given him, they took from him all; they took all his tamales, his own which he had set aside, those which had fallen his lot.

[68 283]

Auh aiac motamalaixcuepaia: auh in aquin qujttaia motamalixcuepaznequj, in tlaittva, qujvivitequj, qujtatacapitzvitequj tolmecatica: in quexqujch omacoca mochi qujcujlia, qujcencujlia in jtamal, inevian conmocavilia, inevian ōmonexotla.

And some they did not come to—[those] with whom [the line] broke off, those who came last, at the end, at the tail [of the line], even though they crowded their way forward, going up among the throng. Nothing at all was offered them, for at first there was much crowding and violent forcing, because they feared that with them [the line] might break.

Auh in cequjnti aoctle intech aci impan tlacotonj, iehoantin in ça tetzacuticate, in ça tlatzacuticate, in ça tlacujtlapiloa, in manel vel tetlamopitzmamali in temaxelotiuh, injc tetlan calaquj: çan njman aoctle maco: ipampa in acachto, cenca nemamaliva, cenca netotocholo, in mjmacaci, in maca ipan tlacoton.

And those with whom [the food supply] ended all wept. They said:

"What shall we do, we who are ill-fated? Evilly hath the feast day come! To what vain end is our ill fortune? Unhappy are our little ones!"

Auh in quexqujchtin impan tlacotonj, nechoqujlilo: qujtoaia, quennel titotolinja, onenvetz in cemjlhujtl, tle nen totlaihiiovilitz motolinja in topilhoantzitzin.

And if they saw that, apart, perchance, [tamales] were still being eaten, then they hurried over there. All ran; there they betook themselves; there they jostled them, like clamoring [beggars]. Although [those who ate] came against them and beat and struck their heads, yet they went on breaking in among [the eaters], crowding among them roughly.

Auh intla ontlachia in oc cecnj, in açoc tlaqualo, ie ne vmpa motlaloa, netlalolo, vmpa motquj, vmpa onxoqujvi, iuh qujnamopevilmatque, in manel qujnoaltoca, qujnvalhujtequj, in qujnvalquavitequj: ça cenca tevic mopetlativi, ça cenca tetlamopitzmamali.

X 796 ● 736 And this feasting went on for seven days. And for this reason was this done—purely that the chief might show benevolence to others by giving his bounty to

Auh inin chicomjlhujtl in muchioaia, in tlatlaqualoia: auh injc mochioaia y, çan jc tetlaoculiaia in tlatoanj, in qujntlaoculiaia in maceoaltzintli: ichica ca

2. "Ces tamalli étaient faits avec . . . , tamalli, chaux; xocotl, fruit; mizzitl, fleur de maïs; yuacalli, espèce de maïs, et necutli, miel. Les deux autres étaient composés, le premier avec le maïs appelé yuacalli, et le second avec des fleurs (mizzitl) sèches (cocoltic)" (Jourdanet and Simēon translation of Sahagún, p. 118, n. 2).

his vassals. Because verily there was much hunger; when dried maize was costly, then there was much want, [and] it was hard to gain a livelihood; [and] many then were our dead.

And until the time that the Feast Day of the Lords came, upon every day there was song. When singing and dancing began, [it was] toward evening, when only little sun shone. Thereupon fire was laid in the braziers; flame was put upon the braziers.

And the braziers were arranged and ordered in six rows, and in each row were ten [braziers] and [each] brazier was two fathoms thick; and each was as tall as one's hip.[3]

And thereupon all went forth from the house of song, coming singing and dancing. Between [pairs of men] came the women. Light women, harlots, chosen —picked out, set apart.

And they went together, they went taking by the hands the honored ones—the young chieftains, the leaders of the young men, and those with shorn hair, the Otomí, and the noblemen [not warriors. These last] were not arranged in order; of their own free will they placed themselves near the others.

And richly were the women arrayed and bedight; all good were the skirts and shirts which they had put on. Of their skirts, some had [designs of] hearts, some were [embroidered] with a mat design like birds' gizzards, some were ornamented like coverlets, some had spiral or leaf [designs], some were of plain, fine weave. All had borders and fringes; all [the women] wore skirts with borders.

And of their skirts, some had brown [streamers] hanging, some had smoke symbols, some had black [streamers] hanging, some had house designs, some had fish [patterns], some were of plain, fine weave. And the neck [openings] were all large, and their borders were also deep and wide.

And when they danced, they unbound their hair; their hair covered them like a cloak. But they brought braids of their hair across their foreheads.

And they were not decked with feathers; neither were their faces adorned with paint.

And thus were bedecked the chieftains: their array consisted of the cloak of netting. And the brave warriors, they who had straw lip plugs, they had white net cloaks with shells set in fish patterns. [These] were called their vermillion net cloaks.

cenca maianaloia, in jquac cenca tlaçoua in tlaolli, 796 cenca oncã mjhiioviaia, inociavia: cenca vncã tomj- 736 qujan catca.

Auh in jxqujchica oalaci tecujlhujtl, izqujlhujtl cujcoia: im peoaia cujcoanaliztli, cenca çã achiton tonatiuh, cenca çã pepetzcatica in tonatiuh: njman ie ic tleteco tlaviltec, ipan in tlaviltetl motlatlalia tletl.

Auh in tlaviltetl viuipantoca, tetecpantoca, chiqua- [372] cenpantitoca: auh in cempantli, matlatlatetl, actimanca: auh ynjc totomaoac catca tlaujltetl, hoontlacujtlanaoatectli: auh ynjc quaquauhtic catca, cecen quapantli:

auh in ie iuhquj, mec oalqujxoa, in cujcacali, cuj-catiujtze, mjtotitiujtze, intzatzalan actiujtze in cioa: [548] iehoantin in mazujltia, yn aujenjme: iehoantin in tlatzonanti, in tlapepenti, in tlacenquixtilti:

auh yn qujnnanamictia, yn inmatitech qujmantiuj, çan iehoantin in mauiztililonj in teachcaoan, yoan [302 in telpochtequjoaque, yoan in quaquachicti, yn 565] otomj, yoan in pipilti: amo tehoan motecpana, çan jllotlama, incãpa onmoquetza tetlan.

Auh in cioa uel mocencaoa, vel moiecchichioa, 796 much qualli in conmaquja, yn jncue, yn jvipil: yn incue cequj iollo, cequj totolitipetlaio, cequj cacamo- 292 liuhquj, cequj ilacatziuhquj, anoço tlatzcallotl; cequj çan petatic, muchi tene, muchi tlatenio, muchi cuetenio.

Auh yn invipil, cequj quappachpipilcac, cequj pocuipilli, cequj pocujpilli, cequj iapalpipilcac, cequj cacallo, cequj mjmjchcho, cequj çan petztic. Auh yn jtozquj much uetuei: yoan yn iten cenca no papatla-oac, papatlactic.

Auh yn iquac mjtotia, qujtoma yn jntzon, çan intzon qujquequntinetnj: auh yn jntzon ipiloaz, [302] ymixquac qujoalteca.

Auh amo mopotonja, amono mozaoa.

Auh ynic muchichiotia in teachcaoan, yn jnnechi- [622] chioal catca, iehoatl in cuechintli: auh in tiacaoan, in teçacaoaque, ymiztaccuechin cilin ynic mjmjchcho, [301 motocaiotia innochpalcuechin. 394 701]

3. Cf. corresponding Spanish text. Literally, hombros[illegible] may be rendered "two can take [it] in their embrace." For cerca quapantli, Sahagún has "un estado."

S: Sahagún M-S (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

821
843

into mice; each of their children might turn into a mouse.

And because they feared evil, in order to protect themselves, in order that this might not befall [them], they placed obsidian in their mouths or in their bosoms, because with this their children would not be born with mouth eaten away—lipless; or they would not be born with noses eaten away or broken off; or with twisted mouths or lips; or cross-eyed, squint-eyed, or with shrunken eyes; nor would they be born monstrous or imperfect.

This moon those of Xaltocan worshipped as a god, and they laid offerings before him and paid him honor.

821
751
843

Auh inic quintemmatia: inic mopatiaia, inic amo iuhqui impã muchioaz: itztli incamac, anoço inxillã quitlaliaia: ipãpa inic amo tencoaiuizque, tencoatizque impilhoan: anoço iacacoatizque, iacacotonizque, anoço tempatziuizque, tennecuiliuizque, ispatziuizque, innecuiliuizque, iocaliuizque: in anoço atlacacemele tlacatiz, in amo tlacamelaoac.

782

Inin metztli, iehoan quimotutiaia in xaltocameca: quitlamaniliaia, quimauiztiliaia.

[p. 10 is blank]

539 After the sun had set, the moon began to move. Thus the one got away from the other. And thus they come forth at different times. The sun endureth one day, and the moon worketh at night (or illuminateth at night). From this cometh what is said: that Tecuciztecatl would have been the sun if he had cast himself first into the fire, because he was named first, and offered precious things in his penance.

Despues que el sol se puso començo la luna a andar: desta manera se desuiaron el vno del otro: y ansi salen ẽ diuersos tiempos. El sol dura vn dia y la luna trabaia en la noche o alumbra en la noche. De aqui parece lo que se dize q̃ el tecuciztecatl avia de ser sol si p'mero se ouiera echado en el fuego porque el p'mero fue nõbrado y ofrecio cosas preciosas en su pñia.

Eclipse of the Moon.

821 When the moon is eclipsed, he becometh almost dark; he becometh blackened; he turneth a dark brown. Then the earth darkeneth. When this cometh to pass, women with child feared miscarriage. A great dread seized them that that which they had in their bodies would become mice. And as a remedy for this they took a piece of obsidian in the mouth or they placed it in the girdle over the belly and [did so] in order that the children [whom they carried] in the womb would not be born lipless or noseless or wry-mouthed, or cross-eyed, or that [one] might not be born monstrous.

[843 751]

Quando la luna se eclipsa parase casi oscura, ennegrecese, parase hosca: luego se escúrese la tierra. Quando esto aconteçe las prefiadas temian de abortar, tomauales gran temor que lo q̃ tenian en el cuerpo se a de boluer raton. Y para remedio desto tomavan vn pedaço de ytztli ẽ la boca o ponianle en la çintura sobre el vientre y para que los ninos que en el vientre no saliesen sin beços o sin narizes, o boquituertos, o bizgos: o porq̃ no naciese monstro.

The people of Xaltocan held the moon as a god and made him special offerings and sacrifices.

Los de xaltoca tenian por dios a la luna y le hazia particulares ofrendas y sacrificios.

846 Thirty-fourth Chapter, in which are told and mentioned what they did when they visited women recently delivered, and other things which were done where a woman recently delivered dwelt.

And here it is told that when a child was born, and when [the mother's] relatives knew of it, and it was known and the news spread and was noised abroad, her family and blood relations were assembled and brought together. They set forth, and came and proceeded to visit the much revered child.

When they entered, at the very first, they took ashes; they anointed their knees with ashes; they rubbed themselves. And also they put ashes on the knees of their children yet in the cradles; or those still crawling, going on all fours; those who stood, who already took to their feet; the boys, girls, youths, young men, unmarried girls, and young women. Everywhere, on all parts of the body they placed ashes; on every joint and articulation: their ankles, their elbows, their buttocks, over the kidneys, the napes of their necks, their shoulders, but especially their knees.

[751] And it was so said and averred that thereby they would not become lame. But if this were not so done, they would become lame, and all the joints, in every place, would creak.

846 And also for four days they carefully watched the fire. It never went out. It continued to flare up, to 372 grow and increase, to flare red. They thus carefully started it; it was well set. And no one might take the fire. And if anyone wished to take the fire, or a light, they would not give it to him, lest he take renown from the child who had been born, until the [851] four days had ended, or for still a few days, when they bathed him.

Injc cempoalli ommatlactli onnavi capitulo, vncan mjtoa, motenecoa: in tlein qujchioaia in qujmontlapaloaia in mjxiuhque: yoan in oc cequj in muchioaia, in vncan onoca mjxiuhquj.

Auh njcan mjtoa: in jquac aqujn tla otlacat piltontli: in oconmatque yoaiolque, in onmachoc, in otepan ocenman, in otepan onmotecac. Niman ic nenechicolo, necenqujxtilo, in jtlacaiooan, in jcujtlaxcolloc eoa, viloa, pipiliooa in qujtlapalozque, in jxco, ijcpac, tlachiazque piltontli.

In iquac oncalacque, oc ie achto concuj in nextli: ic onmotlanquanexvia, onmomamatiloa: yoan no qujmontlanquanexuja in inpilhoan, in oc coçulti, anoço in ie movilana, coionenemj, in ie moquequetza, in ie imjcxi caana in oqujchpipiltotonti, in cioapipiltotonti, in telpupuchpipil, telpucatoton, ichpupuchpipil, ichpucatoton: novian qujntlatlalilia in nextli; in jzqujcan inçaçaliuhian, in jmjhilpicaiocan, in jnquequeiultitech, in jnmolicpi ytech, yn jntzintenpan, in incujtlacaxiuhian, in jnquechtepultitech, in jmacolpan: oc cenca ichoatl in jntlanquac.

Iuh mjtoa, qujlmach ic amo tlanquananatzinjzque: auh intlacamo yuh muchioa, tlanquananatzinjzque: yoan nanatzinjz, in jzqujcan in çaçaliuhian.

Auh yoan navilhujtl in vel qujpia tletl aquĕman cevi, xotlatica, oalantica, oacalantica, mopipitztica, vel qujcpeoa, vel ic peuhtica: yoan aiac vel ontlecuj. Auh intla aca ontlecujznequj tletlecujc: amo qujmaca, injc amo qujtleiocujlizque piltontli, in otlacat: ixqujchica in ontlamj navilhujtl: anoço in oc izqujlhujtl caltizque.

[p. 112 is blank]

843 And when the swelling appeared, upon his back was as it were a small, blue bump. Or [he might ●752 catch] inflammation of the groin.[22] And when the inflammation of the groin appeared, the child cried every night; and on the groin and armpits were formed small, round or long [welts of] flesh. And in order to cure it, they cut them off and removed the little [welts] of flesh.

Auh injc neci aiomama, ycujtlapan ca, iuhquin posatontli, iuhquin texotic: anoçc cuetzpalicivitli. Injc neci cuetzpalicivi piltontli: cecicoal in choca, yoan yquexilco, yciacac motlatlalia nacatotonti, olototonti, melactotonti. Auh injc pati: quiznotla, quiquiquixtia in nacatotonti.

843 And as for the pregnant woman: before her child had been formed as a being, they restrained [any of]
821 them, when the moon arose, from looking up at it. They said to them: "Do not look at the moon! Your children will suffer sickness of the heart, or else will be harelipped!"

Ioan in ozztli: in jquac aiamo vel tlacatl motlalia in jconcuh, quintlacaoaltiaia, in jquac calmomana metztli: injc amo conacopaitzazque, quimjlhuiaia: macamo xoconjttacan in metztli, mjmjquiz, anoçc tenquaiviz in amoconcuh.

825 Twentieth Chapter, which telleth of the monkey's hand.

Injc cempoalli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa: in oçomatli ymacpal.

777 The merchants sought and cherished greatly a 441 monkey's hand when they trafficked and sold goods anywhere. There they spread it out. It was said that thereby goods quickly were disposed of and soon all which they sold was bought. It was stated: "That which bringeth this about is the monkey's hand" — so foolish were they.

In oçomatli imacpal: in puchteca oncca quitemoaia, quimopialtiaia: in jquac in campa tiamjquia, in tlanamacaia: vncan quitecaia, quijlmach ic iciuhca aquj, iciuhca muchi coalo in tlein quinamaca: quijl ichoatl iuh quichios in oçomatli yma: ynjc motlapololtia.

777 Also of the sellers of mantles — when nowhere
264 was disposed of that which they sold, when no one 824 bought either mantles, or shifts or skirts — it was said: "They make them eat chilis that the goods may be disposed of." And thus did they do it. When they returned to their homes, they said: "Our goods are nowhere disposed of. Give them chilis to eat." Then in their midst they placed perhaps two or three chilis. It was averred that thereby the goods were disposed of. When they so did this, they said that they had made [their mantles] eat chilis.

No ichoantin in tilmanamacaque: in jquac acan aquj in quinamaca, in aiac quicoa: in aço tilmatli, in anoço cueitl, anoço vipilli, quijlmach: quichilquaqualtia, injc aquj. Auh injc quichioaia: in jquac calvia inchan, quitoaia: acan cac in totiamjc: ma xoconchilquaqualtican: njman ic ijtic contema, aço vme, anoço Ey in chilli: quijlmach ic aquja, injc iuh quichioaia in, ic quitoa: quichilquaqualtia.

777 Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of the pestle and the griddle.

Injc cempoalli oce capitulo, itechpa tlatoa in texolotl, yoan comalli.

525 When one who played patolli[23] placed his pestle, and his griddle, and his grinding stone upside down in his home, and hung his pestle somewhere in a corner, it was said that thereby the householder would not lose, but only win.

In jquac aquin patoaia, in jchan, in jtexolouh, ioan in jcomal, ioan in jmetl: ixtlapach quimanaia: auh in texolotl cana xomoloco quipiloaia; quijlmach: ic amo quitlanizque in chane, çan ic tlatlanjz.

22. Corresponding Spanish text: "otra enformedad, que llaman cuetzpalicivitli, o que hebenillar en la ingle." Note also Codex Rios (El manuscrito mexicano Vaticano 3738 llamado El Codex Rios [Roma: Biblioteca Danesi, 1900], p. 54).

23. The corresponding Spanish text refers to patolis, which is an error.

776 Tenth Chapter, which telleth of the goddesses [called] the Princesses (Cihuapiltin).[45]

[753] These were five devils, whose images were of stone. Of them it was supposed, and men said: "They have people; they laugh at them." When one was under their spell, possessed by them, one's mouth was twisted, one's face was contorted; one lacked use of a hand; one's feet were misshapen—one's feet were deadened; one's hand trembled; one foamed [at the mouth]. Whence it was said, one had met and contended with the Cihuapiltin, who dwelt on the cross-roads. Wherefore fathers or mothers told their children: "Go not forth; the Cihuapiltin arrive on earth; they descend [upon us]."

776 796 And for this reason, when it was their feast day, they made them offerings of soft, folded tortillas called tlamatzoalli, butterfly-shaped tortillas called papalotlaxcalli, [others shaped like] sacrificial notched sticks (xonecuili),[46] small tamales called xocuichtlamatzoalli,[47] and toasted grains of corn.

And then they offered all these, sometimes at the temple of the goddesses, sometimes at crossroads.

776 And they were thus bedight: they had their faces whitened with chalk, and, over this, darkened with liquid rubber. Their paper garments were covered with pointed figures. They had sandals decked with feathers.

Jnic matlactli, capitulo: ynchpa tlatua, yn cioatetua, cioapipiltti:

Diablome catca y, macujltia, tenne yn jniziptlaoan; inmch tlamjloia, qujlmach tetlauelia, teca mocaiaoa, ynjc aca itech qujnecoia tlauelilocati, tennecujliuj, innecujliuj, matsicoliuj, icxicopichouj, icxinjmjquj, momacoecuetza, tenqualacquica: ic mjtoaia omotenamictl, ypan oquinque cioapipiltti, vmaxac chanequa. Jpampa y yn tetaoa, anoço tenaoa, qujmilhujaia yn jnpilhoan: maca xonequjca tlalpan aci, temo in cioapipiltti.

Auh ipampa y, yn iquac ymjlhujuh, ynjc qujntlamanjliaia: tlamatzoalli, papalotlaxcalli, xonecujli, xocuichtlamatzoalli, inqujtl.

Auh yn vncan momaza y, in quenman vncan yn cioatecalco, in quenman, vmaxac.

Auh yn jnnechichioal catca, mjztiçauique: auh panj tlaolxacalti, tlaitzcopeualtectli, tlaitzcopeoalli, yn jmamatlaquen, potoncacaquique.

Eleventh Chapter: which telleth of the goddess named the Jade-skirted (Chalchiuhtli ycue), who was [goddess of] the waters.

She was considered a god[dess]; her likeness was that of a woman. It was said that she belonged among the rain-gods, as their elder sister.

Hence she was esteemed, feared, and held in awe; hence she terrified men. [For] she killed men in water, she plunged them in water as it foamed, swelled, and formed whirlpools about them; she made the water swirl; she carried men to the depths.

She upset the canoe, she emptied it; she lifted it, tossed it up and plunged it in the water.

And sometimes she sank men in the water; she drowned them. The water was restless: the waves roared; they dashed and resounded. The water was wild.

When it calmed, when it quieted, it heaved to and fro; it was said, "It playeth; it billoweth, it splasheth like the stamping of feet; the water striketh the shore, spraying water and foaming."

Jnic matlactli vce capitulo: ynchpa tlatua, yn cioatutl, yn jtoca chalchiuhtli ycue: iahoatl yn atl.

Teutl ipan machoia: iuhquin cioatl qujziptlatiaia, inh mjtoaia, qujlmach ynvan pouj, inurltiuh in tlaloque:

ynic mauirtililoia, ynic imacazoia, ynjc mauhcaittoia, ynjc tlamauhtiaia, teatoctiaia, teatlanmjctiaia, tepolactiaia, tepan poçonja, motepanaça, maziciotia, tepan motsujlacachoa, ynjc tecentlanjujca:

yn acalli qujcuepa, qujztlapachcuepa, queoatiquetza, ca aco maiauj, ca tema.

Auh in quenma tepachoa, teapotzauja, mocuiciotia, titicujca xazamacatimanj, cocomocatimanj, hatlacamanj:

yn jquac ocruh, yn ie cruj, aujc iaiauh: qujtoa, maujltia, xiniquipiliuj, cocomotzauj, atentli itech cemotlatlatoa, cemochachaquanja, mapopoçequillotia.

se have descender lluvia. . . . El chiamauith es el por símbolo de las fertilidad y, sin duda, también instrumento mágico con que se obtenía lluvia" (pp. 179-80).

45. See Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, pp. 324-5; Vol. II, pp. 181-5. Seler (Collected Works, Vol. I, pt. 2, p. 38, and pt. 3, p. 100, and Vol. II, pt. 3, pp. 69, 80) ibid., holds that Cihuapiltin (the princesses) are the same as Cihuateteo (the goddesses)—women who died in childbirth (mocuiaquetzque) or at the sacrificial stone, and hence were the equivalent of warriors killed in battle or offered up as sacrifices. Seler describes them as spectral earth-goddesses who descended to the earth in the guise of eagles. As equals of warriors, they were arrayed in certain warriors' symbols—eagle feathers and down sandals, for instance. They were thought to dwell in the west, and to incite men to sin and crime.

46. An S-shaped cake, made to resemble lightning.—Seler, op. cit., Vol. III, pt. 2, p. 47.

47. Braided tortillas in the form of agave-fibers, according to Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 8.

776

fire-serpent earplugs; he carried a cape of yellow paper. Likewise he had rattles and sea-shells. His shield had pieces of turquoise and mirror-stones. He carried the staff with the device for seeing.

Fourteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Five Flower (Macuilxochitl) and Flower Prince (Xochipilli).

Equally were they worshipped as gods of the palace folk.

When people fasted, if one of us men lay with a woman, or a woman with a man, it was said: "They brought to naught their fasting through sin."

Thereupon [the god] gave them, as merited punishment, haemorrhoids, venereal sickness, boils, and piles.[72]

Therefore they would make vows to him, in order to quiet, remove, or abate the sickness.

And when his feast, which was called the Feast of the Flowers, was celebrated, first all fasted four days. Some fasted thus: they ate no chili, [and ate only] after midday, only once [a day]. Some went at midnight, and drank a gruel called "painted atolli," on which small flowers floated. [This was] "the fast of the flowers."

All who ate good things ate them only at midday. And some ate only one thing—tortillas of corn not softened by lime,[73] without chili; [this] also [they did] at midday.

On the fifth day, which was when the feast was celebrated, a man became the likeness [of the god], arrayed in [his] clothing, in which he danced; they beat the drum and sang for him.

And at midday, quail were sacrificed. All drew blood, passing straws through the tongue; and they laid as offerings in his temple, five tamales which they had made for him. These were called [bread for] fasting, [and were] very large. On them stood the flowery arrow.

Some thus offered their offering upon wooden plates, and followed it with five more small tamales with a sauce, and others [offered] two cakes made of a dough of amaranth seed and maize—one black, one red,—[instead of offerings of] rubber laid in wooden bowls.

And some [brought] toasted corn, or toasted corn mixed in honey; or S-shaped corn-cakes which were like notched staves or lightning-bolts; [or] butterfly-tortillas, tortillas of ground corn which had not been softened in lime; cakes made of a dough of amaranth seed and maize, and shaped like shields, arrows, swords, and dolls.

And here, to Mexico, from everywhere, were brought captives, called "tribute-captives," [from] all warlike [places]

Jnic matlactli vnnavi capitulo: itechpa tlatoa in teutl, yn itoca: macuilxochitl, yoan xochipilli.

Çan neneuhque, ynjc neteutiloia tecpantzinca intenuh:
yn jquac neçaujliloia, intla aca tocujchti ipan cioacochiz, anoço ciostl, ipan oqujchcochiz: mjtoaia, qujntlaçulojctia yn jneçaoaliz, ic quitemacaia, tetech qujtlaliaia, qujteilhujltiaia, qujtemacoaltiaia, in xochiciuiztli, yn menexoaliztli, tlapalanaltilitli, quexiliuiltiztli, yuicpa netolua, nenetoltilaia, ynjc qujceuia, ynjc qujquaniz ynjc qujcaxaoaz, cuculiztli.

Auh yn jquac ilhujqujxtililoia, ipan xochilhujtl: achtopa navilhujtl nexochiçaoalo: in cequjntin ic moçaoaia, chilcaoaia, qujnnepantla tonatiuh, in tlaquaia, centlaquaia, ioalnepantla qujmattiuh, tlacujlolatulli in qujia, xochitontli yn ipan ca, mozochiçaoa:

muchi qujqua in velic, çan no nepantla tonatiuh qujmattiuh. Auh yn aca çan qujscaviaia, in iotlaxcalli qujquaia, atle chilli: no nepantla tonatiuh qujmattiuh:

ye tlamacujlti yn jlhujqujxtililoia, iquac ce tlacatl qujmixiptlatiaia, conmaqujaia yn jtlatquj, ipan mjtotiaia, qujtlatzotzonjliaia, qujcujcatiaia:

yoan in ie nepantla tonatiuh, tlacotonaloia, neçuoaia, tlacoquixtiloia: yoã tlamanjliloia yn jteupan, macujltetl in qujchiujliaia, tamalli: mjtoaia tlacatlaqualli, cenca vevey ipan ycatiuh xuchujtl:

yn aca quauhcaxitl ynjc conmanjliaia, yoan contoqujliaia oc no macuiltetl tamalnepitoton, molloctiujia: yoan ventetl tzoalli yiol poujia, no cecnj quauhcartica, mantivia, centetl tilitic, centetl tlatlauhquj.

Auh yn aca izquitl, anoço necunquitl, anoço xonecujlli, papalotlaxcalli, iotlaxcalli, tzoallaxcalli, tzoalchimalli, tzocalmjtl, tzocalmaquauitl, tzocalnenetl:

yoan noujian ualtaoaloia, in mamalti njcan mexico, moteneua maltequjme, yn jtequjch techiaoalotoc, yn

776 688 753 785 834 776 796 264 785 776 415 262 796 776 796 727

omo quamamalhuaztli—two arrow shafts or wooden drills, projecting forward above the frontal band on the side of the temples and exhibiting the omo acatl ("2 reed") or the mamalhuaztli (fire-drill) (see illus.). Seler: The Tonalamatl of the Aubin Collection, p. 75. Tlacoxtzouac, in the Aztec text, should probably be tlacochtzouac.

72. Corresponding Spanish text reads: "heria, con enfermedades, de las partes secretas, . . . almorranas, podredumbre del miembro secreto, dolores, incordios, etc."

73. In corresponding Spanish text: "panes crudos."

776
796 surrounding us, brought by those [Nahuas] living on the borders of warring people. Those who had taken these pris-727 oners, these "tribute-captives," brought them, [and] here guards watched them.

And if one of them fled and escaped, they replaced him, they bought a man to take the place of him [who had fled].

776 Then the slaves died, when the feast was celebrated. And the garb [of Macuilxochitl was thus]: on his lips there was the imprint of a hand. His face was red and burnt. He had a crown of feathers. A wing was the burden on his back, on which was the sun-flag, with quetzal-feathers at the top. The cotton cloth, which was girt behind, had red edges. He wore sun sandals.

Fifteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Two Reed (Omacatl).

[773] This Omacatl was god of Uitzmauac.[74] It was said that he invented, created, and introduced banqueting—invitations to feasts, acceptance [of invitations], the feasting of people. Through him it came to pass that men gathered together, that near relatives assembled. To one's house was brought his image, there to be held in esteem and cared for.

And also it was said that if he was not [so] held in esteem, like an invited [guest], he would become angered. He chided one in his sleep or in a dream; he said to him who dreamed: "Thou! Why dost thou not esteem me? I shall depart from thee. Already I know what I shall do to thee."

●[753] And if he was sorely enraged, when one ate he often caused him to swallow hair which was upon the water and the food. And when, [as] one said, he ate the god, often he sickened. Thus he afflicted him: food stuck in his throat; the water wound about the roof of his mouth like a snake. His gullet was troubled when he ate. And if he walked, he stumbled and fell.

776 And thus was his feast celebrated. Whoso ate the image
796 of the god first made a sacred cylinder [of dough]: this was the bone of the god. The chief man—the priest, the elder of the city—[made it], a cubit long—fat, round.

And before it was shared among them, first all ate and drank, drinking wine. And when day broke, they stabbed Omacatl in the stomach and killed him. Then the sacred roll was shared, broken in pieces, divided among them.

When it was eaten, [it was] as if a debt had been assumed, as if one were summoned to a feast, and were forgiven [the debt]. And those who accepted, when the feast ended, had paid with their stomachs and were clean, because they had repaid [their debt].

776 And thus was he decked: he had a crown of feathers—iuuenoaque, yn iuomco onoque, qujnealcaqaia yn jnmalhoan, yn jntlaaxioan, in maltequjhoan, muchioaia: njcan qujnpiaia, yn calpixque, in cacalpixque.

Auh intla aca tlaielti, intla tlacololti, ypan tlacaquetzaia, motlacacnujaia, qujxiptlaioctiaia, qujxiptlatiaia:
in tlatlacuiti, vncan miqujia, yn jquac ilhujqujxtililoia.

Auh yn jnechichioal: tenmacpale istlapaloatzale, tlaiztlapaloatzalujlli, tlaiztlapalvilli, yhujtonncale, quachichiqujle, vitonquj yn jtlamamal, vitoncatlamamale, ypan icac, tenalopanjtl, quetzaltzonio, quetzaltzontecomaio, quetzaltzontecome, quetzaltzontecomio, tentlapaltica motzinjlpi, motzinapa, ytonalocac, tenalocaque.

Jnic caxtolli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn teutl, yn jtoca Omacatl.

Jnja omacatl, vitzmauac, teutl catca, yn jtech tlamjloia, in piqujliloia, qujtooaia ca ichoatl imactia, in cooaiutl, in tecooanotzalizti, in tetlacamatilizti, in tetlatlaqualtilizti: ymatijan muchioaia yn jnnecentlaliliz, yn jnnecenqujxtiliz teoaiolque, techã vicoia, vmpa mac:imachoia, necujtlaujloia yn jxiptla.

Auh no qujtooaia, yntlacamo mavizitilo, yn juhqujma cooanotzalo, tlavelcuja: tecochpa, anoço tecochizpan teaoaia, qujlhujaia, yn aquja qujtemjquj. Jn ichoatl tleyca yn amo tinechmavizmati; njmitztlalcahuiz: auh ie ne njcmati, in tlein mopan njcchioaz.

Auh intla cenca moçuma, yn jquac tlaqualo, mjecpa tzontli qujtztololtia, in atl, in tlaqualli ipan. Auh yn aquj yn mjtoa tzuqua, miecpa mococoa: ynjc qujtolinja, melcima, ycopac mjlacatzoa in atl: meltepotlamja in jquac tlaqua: auh yntla nezemj motepotlamja, metecujnja, motlavizequj.

Auh ynjc ilhujqujxtililoia: yn aquja tzuqua, achtopa qujchioaia, tzumjmilli, yiomjio in teutl catca: çan tlacatl, tzupizquj calpole, cen molicpitl ynjc hujviiac, vel totomaoac, mjmjltic.

Auh yn aiamo nemamaco, ec achtopa tlatlaqualo, atlioa, tlaoano: auh yn otlathujc tenjtitzopinja, yn omacatl conmjctia: njman ic nemamaco, netlatlapanjlo, nezezelhujlo, in tzumjmjlli:
iquac quaqualo, iuhqujn ic tetzoiotiloia, tetlacaqujtilo, tetlalhujlo, temolcaoaltilo: ca yn aquique macoia, yn iquac ie ilhujuhqujçaz, mocujtlaxcolizitlaoaia, mopopooaia, ypampa ca entlaxtlaoaia.

Jn inechichioal catca: ilhvitzoncale, quauhtzoncale, yoã

74. Probably the temple of Uitzmauac (Uitzmauac calmecac) is meant. Cf. Seler: Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 82. Sahagún describes it as the 24th temple (Historia general, Vol. I, p. 222). The name omoze suggests various other meanings—the south, the barrio or part of the city named Uitzmauac, the people of that area, or the south house or south temple. See ibid., Vol. I, pp. 137, 197-99, 215, 221, 222, 229, and also Seler: op. cit., Vol. II, pt. 4, pp. 7-8, 9-10.

776 white clay. He had a spray of flint knives, with quetzal feathers.[79] The burden on his back had [a fan of] red arara feathers. His sun flag was upon it. The sun sign was on his paper vestment,[80] and on his shield. Red was his staff, which had a heart. He had a necklace of the claws of an animal. He had a paper breech-clout. He had rattles and shells. He had sun-shoes.

çançalvitonquj yn jtlamamal, ytonalopan ipan icac, totonaloio yn jmaneapan, totonaloio yn jchimal, tlauhio yiollotopil, xopilcuxque, yamamazcli, tzitzile, coiole, itonalocac.

Seventeenth Chapter, which telleth of the god whose name was Left (Opochtli), whom anciently men here worshipped as a god.

This Opochtli was one of the Tlalocs. He was the god of those who lived on the water, who worshipped him.

[773] They said that he made and revealed his creations and inventions—the net, the dart-thrower, the three-pronged harpoon,[81] the pole for propelling boats,[82] [and] the bird-snare.

776 And when his feast was celebrated, offerings of water,
796 food, [and] wine were made; and the cane of corn plants,
[273] scented smoke, incense, and sweet-smelling herbs. These they spread before him, thus welcoming him. They shook their rattle-beards at him. They strewed toasted [pop-]corn grains like hailstones, or like scattered dice. And also his old men, his old women, and the city elders made music for him.

776 As his garb, he wore a paper crown; he was covered with black unguent—a liquid rubber covering; he had a heron-feather spray with single quetzal feathers. He wore a paper breech-clout [and] had a paper vestment [over his shoulders] with the sun-emblem.

Jnic castolli vmome capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa, yn teutl, yn itoca catca opuchtli: jn qujmotutiaia ie tocauh, nican tlaca.

Inin opuchtli, ipan mizoaia, tlaloc: atlaca intuh catca, qujmotutiaia.

Juh qujtoaia, ca ichoatl itlatzintil, ytlamextil, qujnezti, qujtzittii in matlatl, yn atlatl, yn mjnacachalli, yn avictli, tzonoaztli.

Auh yn iquac ilhujqujtzililoia, atl, tlaqualli, vctli, in ventli muchioaia: yoan cintopilli, xuchitl, yietl, copalli, yiauhtli, qujtepevilioia, ic qujnanamiquja: chicaoaztli concacalachiliaia mumuchitl qujchaiavilioia: iubqujn tecivitl povia: no yoã qujcujcatiaia, yn iveviooan, yn jlamaiooan, çalpoleque.

Eighteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Our Lord the Flayed One (Xipe totec).[83]

He was the god of the sea-shore people, the proper god of the Zapotecs.

776 His gifts, [which] he dealt out, his particular creations, his
● 753 attributes, with which he visited people, which he gave them, [were] blisters, sores, smallpox, ophthalmia, maladies causing watery eyes, infected eyelashes, lice about the eyes, fogging of the eyes, filling of the eyes with flesh, withering of the eyes,[84] cataracts, glazing of the eyes.[84]

776 Those who were affected, we men thus sickened, would 796 thereupon vow to him, saying [that] therefore we would keep on, having donned it, his skin, on the celebration of the Feast of the Flaying of Men.

All hastened pursuing in a company, wrapped in skins [of men], [blood-]stained, dripping [blood], gleaming [with Jnic caxtolli vmey, capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa, in teutl: yn itoca, xipe totec.

Anaoatl itouh: tzapoteca in vel intuh catca, yn itequinh pouja, yn itcuian ytlachioal, yn inetzcavil: ic temotlaia, ic tezozaia, ichoatl qujtemacaia, in totomonjlizcli, papalaniliztli, çaçaoztilizcli, itcoculizcli, ixchichitinalizcli, intzapipinqujlizcli, intamaçoliciuizcli, intzauhpachiuilizcli, intzacapachiuilizcli, itoxocivizcli, intzotolicivizcli, intzcaycivizcli.

Jn aquin ipam muchioaia, yn cuculizcli toqujchti, yuicpa monetoltiaia, yujcpa mjtoaia: ynjc onmaquiz yn jieoaia, ynjc itlan aquiz, yn jquac ilhujqujztililo: motocaiotia, tlacaxipeoalizcli:

tlapainaltiaia, tetocaia, mjequjztin momanaia, muchinti euiotiuj, chichiinoatiuj, chichipic-tiuj, tocxotlantiuj in 79. Cf. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. II, p. 388 (tecpaquachichiquilli).

80. Cf. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 531) for explanation of manto del sol.

81. ". . . un dardo de tres puntas que se llama minacachalli."—Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 172. The corresponding Spanish text on Opochtli, contains the same information: ". . . es como fuga, aunque no tiene, sino tres puntas, [marginal insertion, partly missing: (of?) triangulo (or?)mo tridente] con que hace, a los peces; y tambien es el mantan azul."

[501] 82. Standing in the boat, they propelled it with a long pole. The Spanish text uses the verb remo, oar, which is technically inaccurate.

83. Seler (Tonalamatl of the Aubin Collection, p. 103) cites Herrera (Hist. gen., Lib. III, cap. 13) to indicate that Xipe enjoyed special honor in the Tuxtlan district. A close discussion of the "yepimez y chapanez" is given in Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. III, p. 133. See also note 89.

84. Meaning problematical.

well-matured, the gray-headed, the white haired; and the old women.

Of these it was the exclusive privilege that they should drink wine.

And when they had drunk their fill, thereupon all went to their houses, dispersed and scattered.

Some went off weeping; some danced the warriors' dance; they danced the ceremonial dance; some walked weak-kneed; some went shouting.

And first the wine-makers were entertained; they rested from their office.

It was explained that for four days they should fast and abstain during their work, lest [the wine] sour.

They should look to their strict abstinences; no man might lie with a woman, nor a woman with a man.

[And] none might taste the wine, nor the syrup [from which it was made], while it was being prepared.

One might not even dip one's finger into it; one paid it reverence and treated it delicately, until the wine was tapped.[120]

And of him who secretly tasted it, who in secret drank some, even tasting only a little, it was said that his mouth would become twisted, it would stretch to one side;[121] to one side his mouth would shift; it would be drawn over.

And if one were lame in one hand, or if his arm or leg quivered, or a hand or foot became misshapen, or the foot shook, or his eyes trembled, or his lips quivered, or if one were possessed by a devil, it was said that the green mountain gods had been angered by him.

And when the day broke, thereupon took place the disposal of the remains. At the distribution, only the relatives, the people of the household—his family, they of the same parentage, of the same womb, those of the same clan [took part].

They called it the distribution of the leftovers; then all the food and drink were consumed, used up—all finished.

And they left nothing of what still remained of the dregs in the vessel, of the wine, of watered wine,[122] of fruit wine,[123] of white wine, of sleep-producing wine.

And he who had the images made, if he had the gout, as was said above, he was thus cured. And he who was to have drowned but did not die, when he caused the images to be made thus paid his debt and thus fulfilled his vow.

And all their adornment—their paper garlands worn over one shoulder [as a sign of death or of one to be slain before the gods], their staves of round thick reeds, and their flame-sticks,[124] their cloud-bundles;

and the turquoise cups and their little sauce bowls with calhujque, in ie quaitaque, in ie tzonitaque, yoan ilamatlaca yn jlamatque: 273 782

ixhoan vel innemac catca, in vctli in quinque. 755

Auh in otlaivintic, niman ie ic viujloa, cecenmanoia, xititinjoa:

yn aca mochoqujlitiuh, yn aca moqujchitotiuh, mjtotitiuh, mmmamatiuh: yn aca tetzatilitiuh.

Auh in vctlali, achto molcaxaltiloia: çan no onmeca yn inequjuh, yn jchiujl:

tlacaqujtiloia, navilhujtl maçaoaia, qujneçaujliaia yn inequjuh, ynic amo xocniaz:

vel mopiaia, vel motlacaxaltiaia, amo cioacochia, amo [834] equjchcochia, intla cioatl:

çan niman aiac vel ontlapaloaia yn vctli, yoan in necutli, ynic muchioaia:

aiac inmanel imapil, conaqujaia, vel ymacaxna, vel mallujlioia, yn inequjchica, moiacaxapotlaz yn vctli.

Auh yn aequja, ichtaca tlapaloaia, yn tlachtaca yia inmanel çan tepitzon ocompalo: iuh mjtoaia tennecujlivia tepantiliviia, avic mmamana avic xoqujvi yn ite: 753 yoan in aca matricolinjia, yma qujcuecuetza, icxi quicnecuetza, macopichauj, icxicopichauj, icxicuecuechca, yhixatonco, tempapatlaca, tenviviioca, itech qujneoa: mjtoa, equjtlaveliique in xoxouhque tepicme.

Auh yn otlathujc, njman ie ic apenalo: iyn apeoa çan ixhoan, yn ioniolque, in vel icalloc, in centlaca, cemeca, in vel icujtlaxcolloc, yn vel imecaioc: 782 592 755 motenoua apeoalo, iquac cempoliuja tlatlamj, in quezqujch mocaoaia, in atl, in tlaqualli:

yoan in oc quezqujch omocauh xaiocmejc in vctli, in aiuctli, in tlachiualvctli, in intac vctli, in cuchvctli. [273]

Auh yn tepiqujnj, in tepicquj: intla cuacivi, yn juh omjto tlacpac, ic patiz: yoan yn aequja atlan miquinquja ynjc amo mjc: ixhoatl, ynjc tepiquj, ynjc mentlaoa, ynjc qujneltilia ymetzal. 755 782

Auh yn jaqujch, yn jmechichioal, yn jntlaquen, yn jmamanoapan, yn jmomapil, yn jntlapetlanjliquauh, yn jmaisuhcocul:

yoan yn jochalchiuhtzinl, yoã yn jntlaquaia molcaxtoaxti, 120. Cf. Seler, op. cit., p. 39, citing marginal gloss in MS Biblioteca del Palacio. Cf. also explanation in Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 38.

121. Probably inexplicable in nature. It also appears in MS Biblioteca del Palacio (Cf. Seler, loc. cit.)

122. Possibly atoli.

123. See Molina (Vocabulario).

124. Alfonso Toussaint, Histoire de Musique (M. Tornero-Campana, ed.; Paris: P. Jamet, 1853), Vol. I, p. 300, describes this as a light flame-colored disks ". . . en ala dit qu'il en avoit des flammes et des étincelles." Seler (op. cit., p. 30) calls it a lightning stick (Blitzholz).

And afterwards, at night, they ate and drank, and held flowers and those canes of perfume. And they sat in their seats. And each one began to boast of what he had gained, and of the distant parts which he had reached. And he belittled the others for their counting for little; [for] neither did they have as much as he, nor had they gone to distant places, as he had. In this the ones made a great mock of the others for a long space of the night.

mauan flores: y aquellas cañas de perfumes, y assentauanse en sus assientos: y començaua cada vno a jactarse, de lo que auja ganado, y de las partes remotas, donde auja llegado: y valdonaua a los otros de que eran para poco, nj tenjan tanto, como el, nj aujan ydo a partes remotas como el: en esto tenjan gran chacota, los vnos con los otros, por gran rato de la noche.

The Tenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they named ce malinalli, in the second house, named ome acatl, they celebrated a great festival; for they said that this was Tezcatlipoca's sign. In this feast they fashioned the image of Omacatl, and one who felt devotion took it to his house that it might bless him and cause his goods to increase. And when this took place, he kept it and preferred not to let it go. He who would let this image go, waited until the next time when the same sign reigned. Then he returned it whence he had taken it.

La decima fiesta mouible

En el signo que llamauan ce malinalli: en las segunda casa llamada vme acatl, hazian gran fiesta: porque dezian que esto sino era de Tezcatlibuca: en esta fiesta hazian la ymagen de Omacatl, y alguno que tenja deuocion, lleuauala a su casa: para que le bendiziesse, y le hiziesse multiplicar su hazienda, y quando esto acontecja tenjala, y no la queria dexar: el que queria dexar esta ymagen esperaua, hasta que otra vez, reynasse el mjsmo signo: entonce la lleuaua adonde la auja tomado.

The Eleventh Movable Feast

In the sign called ce tecpatl, in the first house, they brought forth all the ornaments of Uitzilopochtli; they cleaned them and shook them out; and they put [them] in the sun. They said that this was his sign and that of Camaxtli. This they did at Tlacatecco. Here they set out, on this day, many kinds of food, very well cooked, like that which the lords eat. They presented all of them before his image. After they had remained there a while, the officials of Uitzilopochtli took them up and divided them among themselves, and ate them. And they also incensed the image and offered it quail. They struck off their heads before it, so the blood should be shed before the image. And the lord offered all the precious flowers which the lords used, before the image.

La onzena fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce tecpatl. En la primera casa sacauan todos los ornamentos de Vitzilobuchtli, los linpiauan, y sacudian, y ponjan al sol: dezian que este era su signo, y el de camaxtle: esto hazian tlacatecco: aquj ponjan, en este dia, muchas maneras de comjdas, muy bien gujsadas, como las comen los señores: todas las presentauan, delante de su ymagen, despues de auer estado vn rato alli, tomauanlas los officiales, de Vitzilobuchtli, y repartianlas entre si, y comjanlas, y incensauan tambien a la ymagen, y ofrecianla codornizes, descabeçandolas delante della: para que se derramasse la sangre delante la ymagen: y ofrecia el señor todas las preciosas flores, que vsan los señores, delante la ymagen.

The Twelfth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce oçomatli they said that the goddesses called Ciuapipilti came down to the earth and [that] they harmed the boys and girls, afflicting them with palsy. And if anyone, at this time, sickened, they said that [the Ciuapipilti] had caused it; that he had come upon them. And the fathers and mothers on these days did not let their children go outside the houses, so that they might not come upon these goddesses, whom they held in great dread.

La dozena fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce Oçumatli: dezian que decendian las diosas llamadas cioapipilti, a la tierra: y dañauan a los njños, y njñas, hiriendolos con perlesia. Y si alguno en este tiempo enfermaua, dezian que ellas lo aujan hecho, que se auja encontrado con ellas: y los padres, y las madres, estos dias no dexauan salir a sus hijos, fuera de casa: porque no se encontrassen, con estas diosas, de las quales tenjan gran temor.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

776

Second Chapter, which telleth how they considered a god one named Titlacauan or Tezcatlipoca; even as an only god they believed in him.

Of this one who was called Titlacauan they said that verily his were the heavens and the earth. All these in truth he made. And he gave to men all that which was necessary; that by which all live; that which can be drunk. He gave riches to men; he made them prosper.

And also of Titlacauan they said [that he was] invisible—like the darkness; [like] the wind.[1] When sometimes he called out to one, he spoke like a shadow. Verily, what one knew within one, [that] he knew. There was much calling out and praying [to him]. It was said to him:

"O protector of all, O giver of life, O Titlacauan, pity me, give me what is necessary for my life and for my strength—of thy gentleness and sweet essence. For now there is want; there is fatigue in gaining one's needs. [This] now there is upon earth. Take pity upon me; incline thyself to me. For I am thy orphan, I am poor, I am in need. Do I, perchance, serve thee in nothing? For I sweep, I sweep up rubbish, I lay fires there where I attend thee, there in thy poor house. Ah! Quickly slay me, trample me with thy feet! Ah! May my body come to rest!"

776
753

And also they said of Titlacauan that he gave woe and affliction. And men he burdened and scourged with plagues which were great and grave —leprosy, boils, dropsy, cancers, the itch, haemorrhoids, piles, chilblains,[2] and other sicknesses.

And when he laid these upon men, it was when he was wroth—that someone had forsaken his vows and promises, and that he had mishandled the fasting; that a man had lain with a woman [or] a Injc vme capitulo, itechpa tlatoa in quenjn Dios vel ipã qujmatia in iehoatl in mjtoa Titlacaoan, anoço Tezcatlipuca in juhqujma ipan qujmatia ce dios.

In ichoatl in motenesa titlacaoa qujtoaia ca ichoatl ilhujcaoa tlalticpaque, ichoan muchi vel quichioa: yoan muchi quitemaca, in ixquich in tetech monequj, in nemoalonj, yn ioalonj, ichoatl tecuiltonoa, ichoatl tetlamachtia:

auh yoan in Titlacaoã qujtoaia, amo hitonj, çan iuhqujn ioalli, i ehecatl in quẽmã aca qujnotzaia, çan iuhquj ceoalli tlatoaia, vel teitic tlamati, mati, cenca tzatzihloia, tlatlauhtiloia, ilhujloia, Tloquee, naoaquele, ipalnemoanje, titlacaoane; xinechmotlaocolili, ma xinechmomaquili, in notechmonequj in nonenca, in nochicaoaca, in motzopelica, in maviaca ca ie mihiiovia, ca ie mociavi, ie vmpa õqujça in tlaticpac, ma xinechmocnoitili, ma xinechmocnomachiti, in njmocnotlacauh in nitoxonqui, in nioaçonqui. Cuix atle nimjtznochivililia, ca nitlachpana, ca nitlacuicui, nitletlalia, in vncan nimjtznotlatolchialia, in vncan mocnochã. auh manoço cuele xinechmotlatlatili, xinechõmocxipachilvi, ma cuele nicceujto in nonacaio.

Auh yoan in titlacaoan, qujtoaia, ca no ichoatl in qujtemacaia in netolinjliztli, in cooac teupouhquj: yoan tetech qujtlaliaia, ic temotlaia in cocoliztli, in vey, in ouj, in teucocoliztli, in nanaoatl, in tlanquaalaualiztli, in qualocatl, in xiiotl, in xochiciuiztli, in quexiliujliztli, in xoteuconaujliztli: yoan in oc cequj cuculiztli.

Auh in jquac tetech qujtlaliaia, iquac in iolitlacoloia: yn aquin amo qujnehtiliaia, yn jnetol, yn jtlacemitol: yoan in qujtlacoaia in necaçaliztli, yn ac ipan

1. Tezcatlipoca, according to Caso (op. cit., p. 19), signified the seasonal cycle and was associated with the moon and all the earlier gods. Hence he brought misfortune, death, and destruction, and was associated with witchcraft. Always young (xilpachtli), he was regarded as patron of warriors, and sometimes called Yaotl (war). For this reason he was also associated with Huitzilopochtli. See also Edward Seler: Collected Works (J. Eric S. Thompson and Francis B. Richardson, eds.; Cambridge, Mass.: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1939), Vol. I, Pt. 2, p. 29, and Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, p. 2.

2. Problematical; possibly to be related to xoxoquauhtli (Simeon, Diccionario de la lengua nahuatl o mexicana [Paris: Imprimerie Nationale, 1885]; Sahagún, Rubendo ed., III, p. 166).

4: Sahagun M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
753 woman with a man, or that otherwise the fasting had been broken.[3]

776 And when the sick man suffered greatly, he prayed much to him, he cried out to him, he reached his 755 hand toward him.[4] He said to him:

"O Titlacauan, abate [my suffering] for me. May I do no more for thee—may I no longer hear nor serve [thee]! But if now thou shalt heal me, I vow to thee that I shall serve thee. If I shall gain something for myself, I shall not eat of it of a morning,[5] but do thou come to set it at thy foot. I shall bring it [to thee]."

And the sick man [who was] in sore straits, who might not recover, who could not now end [the suffering], who could now endure no more, sometimes berated [Titlacauan]. He said to him:

"O Titlacauan, thou sodomite! Now that thou takest thy pleasure [with me], slay me quickly!"

Some Titlacauan then healed, not angered by this. And some nevertheless then died for this.

776 And Titlacauan they also named Tezcatlipoca, and Moiocoiatzin, Yaotzin, Necoc-iaotl, and Neçaualpilli. And hence was he called Moiocoia[tzin]: that which was in his mind, that which he thought of, he forthwith made. No one invented [anything for him]; none might prevent him. And in the heavens and all the earth around, whomever he wished he might endow; he would enrich him. And whomever he wished, he might afflict. And whenever he might be wroth, or might so wish, or when he was neglectful, he would bring down the heavens above us, and we should perish.

And Titlacauan, [who] extended throughout this [778] world, was therefore besought, called to, and prayed to. And everywhere they set up his sanctuaries, shrines[6] by the road, at crossroads. Everywhere he was awaited. And in the shrines they had fir branches laid on the five days with which the twenty-day [month] ended.[6] Always they went to do this on each of the [five] days with which each month ended.

Enough.

cioacuchi oquichtli, yn ac ipan oquichcuchi cioatl: yoan anocz monecaoalujlhequj.

Auh in jquac in cenca tlaihiiouja cucuzquj, cenca qujtlatlauhtia qujtzatzilia, ymac tlatetoloc; qujlhuja.

Titlacaoane, ma oc xinechmocazzujli, macaocmo iuh njnochioaz, ma onjcac, ma oc notlaiecul: auh intla oc tinechmopatilix, moujctzinco njnonetoltia, ma njmjtznotlatlaiecultiliz: intla itla njcnonenextilix, camo njctlacaquaz, çan mocxitzin ic ticmoquechiliqujuh, nican: njcujcaz.

Auh in cucuzquj cenca tlanauj, yn amo vel pati, yn aoc ontlaiecoa yn aoc vel i: in quenmanjan cahoaia: qujlhujaia.

Titlacaoane, cujlonpole: ie tonmotlatlamachtia, manoço cuele xinechtlatlati:

in cequjntin njman qujnpatiaia amo ic qualanja, y cequjntin tel njman ic miquja.

Auh in titlacaoan, no qujtocaiotiaia tezcatlipoca, moiocoiatzi, iaotzi, necoc iaotl, neçaoalpilli: auh ynjc motenecoa, moiocoia, in tlein qujioccoia, in tlein qujlnamjquj, njman qujchioa: aiac qujiocoia, aiac quelleltia: yoan yn ilhujcatl, yoan in jaqujch anaoatl tentica, yn aqujn qujnequj qujcujltonoz, qujcujltonoa: yoan yn aqujn qujttitiz, in cococ teupouhquj, qujttitia. Auh yn iquin moçomaz, immonenequiz, yn jqujn tlatziuiz, qujoalpachoz yn ilhujcatl topan manj, tipopoliuinque.

Auh yn titlacaoa, qujcentzacutimanca yn njca ynic notzaloia, in tlatlauhtiloia in tzatzililoia: auh noviian qujtlalilia yn jchial, in mumuztli in vtlica, in vmazac, noujian chialoia. Auh in mumuzico acxoiatl qujtlaliliaia, ynjc tlamacujlti ilhujtl, ynjc tzonqujça cempoalilhujtl: muchipa iuh mochiuhtiuja, yn jpan cecentetl ilhujtl, ynjc tlantiuh cecempoalilhujtl.

ie inquijch.

---

3. The corresponding Aztec text of this passage has [illegible] and [illegible], probably means for [illegible] and [illegible].
4. See Pl. 7.
5. In "Postlapsarians de Sahagún" (p. 171, n. 7), Godfrey notes that [illegible] may also be seen literally rendered "[illegible]; a sin 'cause ([illegible]) a mother, etc.'"

In this paragraph, we have read nijnjnoc as ni-i-noc; it might equally well be ni-noc (I shall sing).

So, "Yo cantaré," in the corresponding Spanish. See, however, Molina, op. cit. ([illegible]), and Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, pp. 16, 102. The term [illegible] is variously rendered.
6. See Pl. 8.

X 787 776 753 784

Twenty-second Chapter, which telleth of the eleventh sign, called One Monkey, and of its fortune. It was said of those then born that one was a man of good standing, friendly, amiable, and happy, given to music and the other arts. And it was said that at this time descended to earth those who were the "Goddesses"; and that those whom they met on the road or in paths between houses they injured and visited with sickness. And for this reason, when it was this day sign, no one could fare forth. And one who then sickened the physicians forthwith abandoned.

Injc cempoalli vnoome capitulo, itechpa tlatoa, injc matlactetl oce machiotl, in jtoca ce oçomatli: ioan in jtonallo, quijlmach in aquijque vncan tlacatia qualli iiollo catca, teicnjoan, tlaçotlalonj, papaquijnj, qujmocujtlaviaia in cujcatl, ioan in oc cequj tollecaiotl: auh quijl in jquac oaltemoia, in aquijque cioateteu in tlalticpac: auh quijl in aquijque quijnnamjquija, in vtlica, in anoço caltzala qujtlaueliaia cocolizzli itech qujtlalia: auh ipampa in jpan in tonalli catca, aiac vel quiçaia: auh in aquijn iquac mococoaia, çan njman qujxnaoatiaia in titici.

787 One Monkey set in. This Monkey [day sign] they regarded as favorable.

Moquetza ce oçomatli: inin oçomatli, quijqualittaia:

776 784 855

But also they said that at that time the so-called "Princesses" or "Goddesses" descended. It was the time when they were expected, the time of their arrival. At this time they looked upon the children with much apprehension. They simply shut them in the houses; they did not wish them to appear at the entrances or on the road, so that [the Goddesses] would not come upon or harm them. Perhaps one of them would have twisted lips, or a shrunken mouth; or be cross-eyed or of weak vision; or his lips would quiver or quake; or he would be maddened—a devil would possess him and he would foam at the mouth; or he would have withered, twisted arms; or be lame, etc.

auh ioan qujtoa, no uncan temoaia inchielpan, imaçia, in motenecoaia cioapipilti, cioateteu, cenca vncã qujntlamauhcaittiliaia in tepilhoan, çã qujntzatzaquaia calitic, amo qujmonequjxtitlanja, in qujaoac, in vtlica, injc amo motenamjctizque, qujmjtlacozque, aço aca tennecujliviz, temputziviz, ixnecujliujz, ixvitzaliviz, iten papatlacaz, iten viujiocaz, iollotlauelilotiz, itech qujneoaz, tenqualacoujçaz, matzicoliujz, macopichaujz, icxi qujujlanaz. Etc.

776 753

And if someone began to sicken, the physicians told him that he would become dangerously sick; he would not recover. For he had come upon the Princesses, and they had set upon him; it was the time of their descent and arrival when [this sickness] began. For it was [so] willed.

auh intla aca ipan opeuh mocoona, qujteilhujaia in titici, ca tlanauiz, aocmo qujçaz, ca omotenamjcti, ipan oquijaque in cioapipilti, ca intemoian, imẽcoian in opeuh, ca oelcujloc:

And likewise it was said that if someone were of good standing, of a good day sign, and able, if at this time they injured him, they said that the Princesses had indeed willed it upon him and that he had contended with them.[1] auh no ioan mjtoa, intla aca qualli yiollo, in qualli itonal, ioan qualli itlachielix: vncan qujtlacalhujaia, qujtoaia: ca çan oquelcujque, oquijnmonamjcti in cioapipilti.

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "Y si alguno que era bel diapasonte, enfermaua en aquel dia, decian: que les dauan la mujer durmiendo la hermosura, y se la mujer quedaba."

BEHOLD THE APPENDIX OF THE FIFTH BOOK. HERE ARE TOLD THE DIFFERENT THINGS WHICH GOD'S CREATURES, THE IDOLATERS, WRONGLY BELIEVED.

IZCATQUJ YANCA INJC MACUJLLI AMUXTLI: VNCAN MJTOA, YN JZQUJTLAMĀTLI ITECHPA CHICOTLAMATIA IN JTLACHIVALOAN DIOS, IN TLATEOTOCANJME.

824
753

First Chapter, which telleth of the white amaryllis.[1]

This kind of flower was thus called — white amaryllis (omixochitl). And also a kind of sickness — decaying of the genitals — was also called omixochitl, because indeed in some such manner as [the flower], so was [the member] scarified. And so did the ancients invent, and so deceive themselves. It was said of him upon whom this sickness, which they called omixochitl, settled, that it began thus: perhaps one had urinated or stepped upon it; or one had smelled it many times. It was as if it had thereby bewitched him. In such manner did they deceive themselves.

Injc ce capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in omixuchitl.

Injn centlamantli xuchitl: iuh motocayotia in omixuchitl. Auh no centlamantli cocoliztli, tlapalanaltiliztli: no motocayotia omixuchitl: ichica ca çan vel iee injc ca, injc tritziquijltic: auh injc compiquj, in juh mozcalacavixia venetque: quijlmach in aquin ytech motlalia, injn cocoliztli, in motocayotia omixuchitl: ic peoa, in aço ypan omaxix, anoço oipan moquetz: in anoço mjiecpa oquinecu, iuhquj injc quixoxa, in juh mozcalacavia.

Second Chapter, which telleth of the poinsettia.[2]

This kind of flower [was] fragrant. And yet another kind of sickness of the genitals was called cuetlaxochitl (poinsettia). And this sickness was especially the lot of women — particularly their sickness; not of men. And of this ill it was said that thus did it begin — so were the ancients deceived: they had perchance stepped over it, or smelled it, or else sat upon it. Therefore it then cast a spell upon her; thus it befell her. And hence mothers restrained and scolded their daughters; they said to them: "Do not smell it; do not jump over this flower; [the sickness] will be settled upon you."

Injc vme capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in cuetlaxuchitl.

Injn centlamantli xuchitl, iseconj. Auh oc no centlamantli tlapalanaltiliztli, no motocayotia cuetlaxochitl: auh ynin cocoliztli, oc cenca inpan muchioa in cioa, oc cenca incocolix: amo no yehoan in toquichtin. Auh injn cocoliztli: quijlmach ic peoa, in iuh mozcalacavia vevetque: in aço oquicuencoilhuj, in anoço oquinecu, in anoce oipan motlali: ipampa in juhquj ic quixoxa, ic itech motlalia. Auh ipāpa in tenancan quintlacavaltiaia, quimauaya in jmichpuchoan, quimjlhujaya: macamo xiquinecuican, ma ypan ancholoti injn xuchitl, amotech momanaz.

1. Omixochitl, according to Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 354, is the same as omixquilitl (Polianthes tuberosa L., P. mexicana Zucc., P. gracilis Link), a fragrant flower appearing in July and August, used as a fabrifuge. Sahagún (Gurdley ed.), Vol. IV, p. 347: Polianthes tuberosa, P. mexicana. Seler, op. cit., Vol. II, Pt. 2-4, p. 89: "'bone flower' — 'a white flowering Amaryllidaceo or Iridaceo.'"

2. Cuetlaxochitl. Francisco Hernández: Historia de las plantas de Nueva España (México: Imprenta Universitaria, 1943), Vol. III, p. 970: Euphorbia (poinsettia) pulcherrima Willd. Paul C. Standley: "Trees and Shrubs of Mexico," Contributions from the United States Herbarium, Vol. 23 (Washington: Government Printing Office, 1923), Part 3, p. 680: cuitla-cuchil, used in a decoction for nursing women to increase lactation. Sahagún (Gurdley ed.), Vol. IV, p. 331: Euphorbia pulcherrima.

252 it over." Or if, perchance, her husband had gone somewhere distant, she said: "Now he cometh, for he hath kicked over my tortilla."

napa veca oya, qujtoaia: ca ye hujtz, ca qujoaltilicçac yn notlaxcal.

861 Fifteenth Chapter, which telleth of small children who licked the surface of the grinding stone.

Injc caxtolli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn pipiltotonti qujxpalos metlatl.

When small children licked the surface of the grinding stone, the mothers chid and scolded their young ones for it, and restrained them from it, saying to them: "Do not lick the grinding stone; your teeth will thus quickly break and fall out." Because of this, they filled their small children with great fear, so that this would not befall them.

In jquac pipiltotonti qujxpapalos metlatl: yc teaoaia, yc qujmaoaia, yc qujntlacaoaltiaia in tenanoan yn jnpilhoan, qujmjlhujaia: macamo ximcpapalocan in metlatl, yc icihca cocotoniz, yciuhca vevetziz in amotlan. Ipampa yn, cenca qujmjmacaxiltiaia in pipiltotonti: injc amo iuh ynpan muchiouz.

Sixteenth Chapter, which telleth of him who leaned against a square pillar.

Injc caxtolli oce capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa: yn aquin itech motlaxticac tlaquetzalli.

When they saw one who leaned against a square pillar, there also was folly of the natives;[14] they chid him for it, and restrained him from doing so; they prevented their children from doing it. They said to them: "Do not lean against the pillar; it is a liar." Thus did they speak: "It giveth one lies; it is like unto one who lieth." [With] this, they terrified the children lest such might befall them and they tell lies.

In jquac aca qujttaia, in jtech motlaxticac tlaquetzalli: no vncatca innetlapololtiliz, in njcan tla: yc teaoaia, ic tetlacaoaltiaia, ic qujntlacaoaltiaia in ynpilhoan, qujmjlhujaia: macamo ytech ximotlaxtica in tlaquetzalli, yhjztlacati: iuh qujtoaia: ca iehoatl qujtemaca in jztlacatilizttli, itech qujcuj: in aquin ihiztlacati. Injn, cenca qujmjmacaxiltiaia in tepilhoan: injc amo iuh inpan muchiouz, ynjc amo yhiztlacatizque.

861 264 Seventeenth Chapter, which telleth of the maidens who ate standing.

Injc caxtolli omome capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn jchpopuchti in çan moquequetztimanj tlaqua.

In times past, when the natives saw their maidens eat standing, they also restrained them from it. They prevented their children from doing so. They said to them: "Eat not while thou art standing. Thou wilt marry far from here.— Who will follow thee?" It was said that it would befall one that she would marry in a distant place; she would be taken somewhere far away, not in her own city where she lived.

In ie vecauh in njcan tlaca: in jquac in qujmjttaia in jmjchpuchoan ꝗ çan moquequetztimanj tlaqua: no yc tetlacaoaltiaia, ic qujntlacaoaltiaia in jnpilhoan, qujmjlhujaia: macamo ximoquetztica in titlaqua, veca timoochotis, ac mjzicxitocaz: qujlmach iehoatl ipan muchiouia, in veca moquijchvatia, in cana veca vico: in amo yalteperuh ipan nemj.

846 ●753 Eighteenth Chapter, which telleth how maize cobs were burned.

Injc caxtolli omey capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa: in quenjn motlatia olotl.

When one had just given birth to a child, she who, residing there, had given birth should not then burn maize cobs. It was said that if there [maize cobs]

In jquac aca mjxivia, avel vncan qujtlatiaia in olotl: in vncan omoc mjxiuhquj, qujl intla vncan tlatlaz: yc ichchichitinjz in piltontli. Auh intla ça were to be burned, because of it the child's face would be pock-marked.[16] And if maize cobs were to burn there, first she passed and carried them before the child's face,[17] so that such would not befall him — so that his face would not be pock-marked.

15. In mjnac ihcac read ihcac.

vncan tlatlaz in olod: achtopa ijxco conquijquijxtilia, ijxco convivica in piltontli: injc amo iuh ipan muchioaz, injc amo ichichitinjz. 846 753

Nineteenth Chapter, which telleth of the woman with child.

Injc caxtolli onnavi capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa: yn cioatl otztli. 843

The woman with child might not look at one whom they had hanged, because, it was said, when she gave birth, the child would come forth with a cord of flesh wrapped about his neck. Wherefore in times past they frightened pregnant women from doing so.

In cioatl otztli, amo vel qujttaz in aqujn ie qujpilloa: yehica, qujlmach in jquac mjxtiviz, nacatica oalquechmecaiotiaz in piltontli. Ipampa yn, ic qujmjmacaxiltiaia in ie vecauh in ootzti.

Likewise, when a woman was with child during an eclipse of the sun or moon, she might might not look at it. It was said that if she saw it, her child would be harelipped. But in order to forestall this, the woman with child placed an obsidian knife in her bosom; it was said that thereby her child would not be harelipped.

No yoan yn jquac otztli cioatl, in jquac qualo tonatiuh, anoço metztli: amo vel qujttaia, qujlmach intla qujttaz: tenquatic iez in jconeuh. Auh injc qujpaleviaia otztli: ytztli ixillan contecaia, qujl ic amo tenquaiviz in piltontli. [821]

Neither might she chew asphalt,[18] it was stated, lest the child be harmed in suckling[19] when he was born. And she could not walk about at night; it was felt that her child would be one who cried much. Likewise men might not walk about by night; perhaps they would come upon a ghost; perhaps the child would suffer a sickness of the heart. And so that this would not happen, the woman with child placed a pebble, or ashes from the hearth, or wormwood,[20] in her bosom. And the men [carried] a pebble, or tobacco [on the chest]; for it was said that also, at that time, [the child] might acquire what they called a swelling.[21]

Amono vel qujquaquaz in chapuputli, qujl ic amo motentzoponjz in piltontli: in jquac otlacat. Yoan amo vel iooal nenemiz, qujl cenca chocanj iez in jconeuh: no iuhquj in toqujchtin: amono vel iooal nenemjz, anoçe itla qujmonamjctiz, aço mjmjquijz. Auh injc amo iuh ipan muchioaz otztli: xaltetl, anoço tleconextli ixillan qujtema, anoço iztauhiatl. Auh in toqujchtin xaltetl, anoço picietl: ichica qujl no vncan qujcuj, in qujtoa: aiomama. 843 753

---

16. Corresponding Spanish text: "la cara del niño, que saja manida; sería pecosa o hoyosa."

17. Ibid.: "mazorcas primero en la cara del niño, llamándolas por ensima: sin tocar en la cara."

18. Chapopotli: "betún de asfalto; betún de judeo. . . . Los indios le usaban antiguamente como masticatorio" (chapopote — Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 468). The corresponding Spanish text has "aquel betún, que llamó mastic." On the relationship between mastic and chapopotli, see Sahagún (Garibay ed.), X, 24, 18 and 27; and also Vol. IV, pp. 333, 344, for definitions.

19. Corresponding Spanish text: "ocasionaría asfixia, que llamaba mastecimiento, que muerte della, los criaturas recién nacidos; y cuando de que quando nacen la criatura, si es macho de pecho le sale la sea, de la boca, lastimase en el paladar; y luego quedo muerto." Cf. also Sahagún (Garibay ed.), Vol. IV, p. 344; and Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (Carlos María Bustamante, ed.; México: Alejandro Valdés, 1829), Vol. II: "mastecimiento (hay mastecimiento) o sea embarazo en la respiración, que muerte de ello los criaturas recién nacidos."

20. Iztauhiatl: "ceniza parece de almoraz" (corresponding Spanish text); ceniza (Artemisia mexicana Willd.) — "los hojas despidiendo fuerte olor aromático y tienen sabor amargo. Estas cenizas antihelminticas poderosas" (Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 426).

21. Cf. Sahagún (Garibay ed.), Vol. IV, p. 324.

753
264

Thirty-second Chapter, which telleth of green stalks of maize.

Of green stalks of maize, it was said that no one should chew them at night. One who chewed them at night, it was said, would thereby have toothache.[33] Whosoever had toothache had done this: he had chewed green stalks of maize at night. But if one were to chew a little, first he heated it in the fire. It was said that in this way nothing would befall him.

Injc cempoalli ommatlactli omome capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in ooatl —

In ichoatl ooatl: qujlmach aiac vel iooaltica qujquaquaz: in aqujn iooaltica qujquaquaz, qujlmach ic tlanqualoz: ichoatl iuh qujchioa in aqujn tlanqualo: in iooaltica oqujquaqua ooatl. Auh intlaca qujquaquaz tepiton: achtopa qujtotonja tleco, qujl ic amo iuh ipan muchioaz.

787

Thirty-third Chapter, which telleth of creaking roof beams.

When during the day, or at night, the roof beams creaked, like the snapping of sticks, or, indeed, the roof beam itself broke, they said and it was thought that it indicated that perhaps the householder would die; or he would be sick, or else his children and kin living there in his house.

Injc cempoalli ommatlacomey capitulo, itechpa tlatoa: in calquavitl nanatzca.

In jquac cemjlhujtl, anoço iooaltica in tlatlatzca, in juhquj popoztequj: anoce vel poztequj in calquavitl, qujtoaia: qujl ichoatl qujnezcaiotia in aço ic mjqujz in chane, anoce ic mococoz, anoce ypilhoan, anoce yoajulque in vel vncã nemj ichan.

Thirty-fourth Chapter, which telleth of grinding stones.

The grinding stone was an omen of evil to the natives, when someone was grinding there, and it broke. Thus it appeared, it was said, that she who ground would die; or else the householder, or[34] their children, or some of their household would die.

Injc cempoalli ommatlactli onnavi capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in metlatl.

In ichoatl metlatl, qujmotetzaujaia in njcan tlaca: in jquac aca vncan tezttoc in oalpuztequj: ic necia: qujlmach ic mjqujz in otecia, anoce ichoatl in chane, anoco inpilhoan, anoce cenc mjqujzque in jnchantlaca.

372

Thirty-fifth Chapter, which telleth of drilling a new fire in the house.

When someone made himself a house, when he drilled a new fire for it, he assembled all the old men, and before them he drew the new fire. If quickly he made a fire—if it did not take long—they said and it was believed that the householder who had erected the house would rejoice and be content. But if with difficulty the fire fell, it was said that thus the old men saw that the householder would not be happy and content.

[787]

Injc cempoalli on caxtolli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn calmamalilizttli.

In jquac aqujn mocaltiaia: in jquac calmamali, muchintin qujcentlalia in vevetque, imjxpan in tlequauhtlaçaia. Intla iciuhca qujtlaça, in amo vecauhtica, qujtoa: qujlmach mopaqujltitiez, vellamattiez in chane: in omocalti. Auh intlacaizzcan vetzi in tletl, qujlmach ic qujttaia in vevetque: amo pactiez, amo vellamattiez in chane.

---

33. Cf. Molina, op. cit.: "tener resquilmo, o gusano en los dientes y muelas."

34. Amoxo. The cedilla is omitted in the MS.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

[532]

FIG. 6. Aztec sorcerers, sent from the highland, offer bewitched food to Cortes and his staff, who disdain the viands. Codex Florentino

[726] foreign to Indian principles of war. The simple Indian methods of mass attack were of little avail against the maneuvering of a well-drilled force, for the native tactics could only bring the merest fraction of their fighting force in direct contact with the enemy.

[754] The Spaniards also resisted witchcraft on the occasion when Montezuma seriously applied it. However, scorcery, according to native standards, was at best a two-edged weapon, so that it is doubtful if this failure had any other than a confirmatory bearing on the Indian attitude of mind toward the supernatural quality of the Spaniards. The problem that beset Montezuma was not that the invaders were themselves gods, but that they were the symbols, the vicars on earth, as it were, of vast unearthly forces bent on establishing a new social order. As such the Spaniards required the most gingerly handling.[8] (See Fig. 6.)

175 669 When the Spaniards were approaching the capital a political problem entered to complicate the spiritual one. The only misery, poverty, vanity, misfortune, and a life of woe.[4]

And if one were born at that time he was looked upon with fear; he was shunned. And if he were a man, they named him Nemon, Nentlacatl, Nenquizqui. Nowhere was he counted; he was not a man. And if it were a woman, [they named her] Nencioatl.

And when [these days came], nothing was done; the palaces and courts were empty; no suits were judged. All stayed at home. None swept with brooms; they only fanned [the dust] with a fan, or a turkey quill, or with the wing of a bird; or they beat and cleaned with a cloak.

And no one might then quarrel; [for] this was strongly forbidden to people; it was severely forbidden to them. They were charged that none might wrangle. Neither might one sleep during the day. [If so,] it was said: "[So] shalt thou always."

Nor should anyone fall, or trip, or stumble. All walked softly. And to one who stumbled, they said: "Thou hast the Nemontemi; so shalt thou be. Be thou careful."

And whosoever then took sick and was ill, [of him] everyone said: "He hath sickened. Never more will he rise; no more may he have hope. That he will recover there is no hope." No longer had they hope for him.

And if one yet escaped [death], neither would any pay heed to him nor speak to him. It was said: "For it is only that he by whose grace we live hath acted and determined of his own will."

None, therefore, were comforted nor moved. His kin forgot him and laid him on the ground. No more might he be able to leave, to some degree get up [again], and take nourishment. For the setting in of the Nemontemi was terrifying.

For he had no day sign; he had no name; wherefore no one might, in truth, practice medicine and heal one, nor read the meaning of the days. For verily the days were not numbered; they had no count in all these four days.

linjliztli, nenqujzcaiotl, nenqujçaliztli, ßoneoutinemjliztli.

Auh in aqujn vncan tlacatia, cenca tlamauhcaittililoia, tlatêmachililoia: auh intla oqujchtli qujtocaiotiaia Nemõ, nentlacatl, nenqujzqui, acan ompouhquj acã, ompovi nenoqujch. Auh intla cioatl: Nencioatl.

Auh in jquac y, atle aioaia, çan cactimãca in tecpan inteccãli, amo tecutlatoloia, çan calonooaia; aiac tlachpanaia, ochpaoaztica: çan tlaiecapeviloia, ecaceoaztica, anoço totolmamaztica, totolaavitztica, anoço tlavivitequja, tlapopovaia tilmatica:

yoan aiac vel vncan maoaia, cenca tetlacaoaltiloia, cẽca tetlaquauhnaoatiloia, tetepitznaoatiloia, tecocoltiloia injc aiac maoaz: ano ac cemjlhujcochia: vncan teilhujloia. Centicujz:

ano ac vel motlavitequja, motícujnjaia, motepotlamjaia; nematca, nenemoaia: auh in aqujn motepotlamjaia: qujlhujaia. Otimonemovi, ocenticcujc, ma ximjmati.

Auh in aqujn ipan y, cocoliztli qujcuja mococoaia: muchi tlacatl qujtoaia, Concocolizcuj, aocmo qujçaz, aocmo motemachiz, in aço patiz, aocmo teumeiolloti, aocmo itech ca netemachilli:

auh intla aca oc maqujça, aoc ac itlamatian aoc ac itlatmaian: mjtoa. Ca ça oicnotlama, in jpalnemoanj, ça oqujmonomavili, oqujmoioculili:

aocmo iuh catca teiollo, ca oica netlapaloloc, neellaquaoaloc, oqujzcauhque injoaiolque, ca oiqujtecaque: aocmo iuhcan qujzoaiã inon oquẽteltzin, meoatiquetz, inon oihiio qujcujc, ca temauhti in jpan opeuh ilhujtl Nemõtemj:

ca atle itonal, ca atle itoca: ipampa aiac vel vncã ticitoca, tepatia, tetlapovia: ca nel amo vmpouhquj, atle ipoaallo in jzqujlhujtl navilhujtl.

4. The Tovar Calendar (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 36) adds that people did not gather in the temple, and that the priests performed no sacrifices nor other ceremony rite.

262 toes,[8] manihot,[9] white[10] and yellow[11] sweet potatoes, colored sweet potatoes, jícamas,[12] plums,[13] jobos,[14] guavas,[15] guajilotes,[16] avocadoes,[17] carob fruit,[18] tejocotes,[19] American cherries,[20] tuna cactus fruit,[21] mulberries,[22] white[23], yellow,[24] and whitish-red cactus fruit,[25] pitahayas,[26] water pitahayas.[27] And the food for the deer [was] pipillo[28] and tlachicaztli.

754 And it is told why Moctezuma sent magicians and 648 soothsayers — that they might behold what kind [of men] they were, and that perchance they might bewitch and cast a spell over them. Perhaps they might blow them away, or enchant them. Mayhap they might cast something at them, or they might, with some words of the Evil One, utter an incantation over them, so that they might sicken and die, or else because of it turn back.

But these, when they performed their charge and commission upon the Spaniards, were at once powerless. Nothing could they do.

Then they quickly returned and came to tell Moctezuma what they were like and how strong they were: "We cannot contend against them; we are as nothing."

camutli, quauhcamutli, poxcauhcamutli xochicamutli, tlapalcamutli, xicama, maçaxocotl, atoiaxocotl, xalxocotl, in quauhxilotl, aoacatl, oaxi, tezocotl, in capoli, in nochtli, in amacapuli, iztac nochtli, coznochtli, tlatocnochtli, tzaponochtli, anochtli: auh in maçatlaqualli, pipillo, tlachicaztli:

Auh qujl injc qujmjoa Motecuçoma in nauaoalti, in tlaciuhque, injc qujmjttazque in quenamjque in aço vel qujntlacateculovizque, qujntlachivizque, in aço vel qujmjpitzazque qujnxoxazque in aço oc itla ic qujnmotlazque, in aço itla tlacateculotlatolli, ic qujntlanonochilizque, injc aço cocolizcujzque, mjmjquizque, in ainoce ic ilotizque.

Auh in iehoantin in qujchiuhque in intequjuh, in innaoatil in intechpa españoles, çan njmã avelitque, atle vel qujchiuhque:

niman ic oalmocueptivetzque qujnonotzaco in Motecuçoma injc iuhque, injc chicaoaque, amo titenamjcoan, iuhqujn atitleme:

---

8. Camotli: sweet potato, batata (Ipomoea batatas Poir, in Hernández, op. cit., II, p. 521; I. batatas Lam., in Sahagún, op. cit., p. 336).

9. Quauhcamotli: guacamote or cassabe (Manihot utilissima Pohl. —euforbiáceas) in ibid., p. 334; yuca in Santamaría, op. cit., II, p. 36, and in Hernández, op. cit., II, p. 524 (M. aculeata Crantz).

10. Poxcauhcamotli: probably sweet potato of white skin and interior, Hernández, op. cit., II, p. 521).

11. Xochicamotli: reddish or yellow sweet potato (loc. cit.).

12. Xicama (jícama): in ibid., II, p. 522, Pachyrhizus angulatus Rich.; P. palmatilobus H. B. K. in Sahagún, op. cit., p. 336.

13. Maçaxocotl: plum — Spondias sp. (anacardiáceas) (Sahagún, op. cit., p. 334).

14. Atoyaxocotl: Spondias lutea L. (anacardiáceas: loc. cit.). Jobo (Spondias mombin, or S. luteus, or purpurea) in Santamaría, op. cit., II, pp. 153, 155. See also Sahagún (Bourbourg and Simeón w.), p. 734, n. 6.

15. Xalxocotl: Psidium pomiferum L. (mirtáceas), in Sahagún (Rubredo ed.), III, p. 335; guava.

16. Quauhxilotl (guaxilote): Parmentaria edulis D.C., in Hernández, op. cit., II, p. 451; Bonplandia palmeri S. Wats, according to Santamaría, op. cit., p. 45.

17. Aoacatl (ahuacate, aguacate): Laurus persea in Sahagún (Jourdanet and Simeón w.), p. 734, n. 1.

18. Oaxin (guaje): Leucaena esculenta Benth. (leguminosas), in Sahagún (Rubredo ed.), III, p. 335.

19. Tezocotl (tejocote): Crataegus mexicana Moc. & Ses., in Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 150.

20. Capoli (cerezo indígena): Prunus capuli Cav. (rosáceas), in Sahagún (Rubredo ed.), III, p. 334.

21. Nochtli: Nopal opuntia, in op. cit., p. 335.

22. Amacapuli: moral indio (Chlorophora tinctoria Gaud.; var. mexicana), in loc. cit. Black mulberry or blackberry in Santamaría, op. cit., I, p. 88.

23. Iztac nochtli: white cactus fruit (Opuntia sp.), in Hernández, op. cit., III, pp. 934, 936; tuna blanca (cf. Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 230).

24. Coznochtli: cuauchinanchi (Opuntia pseudo-tuna Salm. Dyck; cardona), in Sahagún, op. cit., p. 335. Tuna amarilla?—cf. Santamaría, loc. cit. Opuntia sp. of yellow fruit in Hernández, loc. cit.

25. Tlatocnochtli: "tuna blanca tirando a bermejo"; Opuntia sp., in loc. cit.

26. Tzaponochtli (zapotonchi, pitahaya — Santamaría, op. cit., p. 314).

27. Anochtli: possibly tuna de agua, pitahaya del agua (Peresquiopsis opuntia Britt. & Rose); cf. Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 229.

28. Pipillo: possibly Arabopsis mandoni Ph.; cf. Santamaría, op. cit., II, p. 495.

681 And then also at that time died those who were in jail, who were there for something which de-
696 manded the supreme penalty: perhaps an adulterer, or a thief, or a fire priest of whom something had been found out — perchance he had had a paramour — and who was known as an evildoer; or whatsoever sin he had committed. Also of the captives some then died.

Auh yoan no iquac vncã mjquja in quaubcalco onoca, in jtla ic cate, in vei qujtzacuticatca, aço tetlanxinquj, anoço ichtecquj, in anoço tlenamacac, itla oittililoc, aço momecati, in moteneoa tlaçolchiuhque in çaço catle in ovi oqujtlaco: no ichoan in mamaltin, cequjntin vncan mjquja,

643 It was said that through these Moctezuma received life. By them his fate was strengthened; by them he 761 was exalted, and on them he placed the burden. So it was said that it was as if through them once more he were rejuvenated, so that he might live many years. Through them he became famous, achieved honor, and became brave, thereby making himself terrifying.

mjtoa: ca ichoan inca mozcaltiaia in motecuçoma, inca motonalchicaoaia, inca moquetzaia, inca moquixtiaia, iuh mjtoa: iuhqujn oc ceppa inca mopilquixtiaia, ynjc vecaoaz, inca motleiotia, momaujzçotia, motequantlalia, ic motlamauhtilia.

* 787 And when someone was then born,[3] they feared that the [Goddesses] might at that time descend.
851 But later, on Three Crocodile, he was bathed; then they made his fate somewhat better, for, so it was said, Three Crocodile was a good time.

Auh in aqujn ipan tlacatia, qujmacacia injc vncan temoa: auh qujn jpan in ei cipactli, maltiaia, vncan achi qujqualtilia in jtonal, iuh mjtoa: ca qualcan in jpan ey cipactli.

* 787 And also it was said that he who was then born
● 754 a nobleman became a sorcerer, an astrologer.[4] That is to say, he was inhuman. He changed himself into 791 something [else]: because of it he turned himself into something [else]. Perchance he had as a disguise a wild beast,[5] etc.

No yoan mjtoaia: in aqujn ipan tlacatia pilli, naoalli mochioaia tlâciuhquj, qujtoznequj: amo tlacatl, itla qujmonaoaltiaia, itla ic mocuepaia, aço tequannaoale. Etc.

And if [he were] a commoner, likewise it was his work to turn himself into perhaps a turkey, or a weasel, or a dog. Whatsoever was his guise became his magic form. All his task was to assume and accumulate all manner of evil. He influenced women; he bewitched and was clever with women;

auh intla maceoalli, no iuhquj itequjuh catca, aço totoli, aço coçamatl, anoço chichi, ipan moquixtiaia, in çaço tlein inecuepaliz, ynaoal mochioaia, muchi itequjuh, qujcenmama, qujcemololoa, in jxqujch tlauelilocaiotl, cioanotzquj, xochioa, cjoatlatole, tempachioace, tetlatlacuepili, teiolmalacacho, tiioiolmala-

---

3. An additional phrase in the Real Palacio M3 will change the meaning somewhat: ayamo maltiaya, ypampa — and when someone was then born, not then was he bathed for they feared. . . .

4. Angel María Garibay K.: "Paralipómenos de Sahagún." Tlalocan, II, 2 (1946), p. 171.

5. Ibid. pp. 170-172: "en primer término significó . . . algo así como un 'demonio familiar,' o un 'doble' del alma, a manera del egipcio [citing a passage in La leyenda de los soles] . . . De este primario significado pasó a la de la 'duplicación de la persona,' o el 'desdoblamiento.' . . . Se concibe el brujo capaz de tomar las formas que él quiera, de aparecer en diversos modos y lugares, de ejercitar obras que no son del hombre común: hay en él algo más que hombre: hay un nahualli poderoso y malintencionado." Derivation of the word stay be from nahuali, nahuala, "verbo arcaico, que encontramos en muchos compuestos. Su sentido es en general 'engañar, disimular' y conviene muy bien al prestidigitador, como al mago, que con embustes, fundados o sólo subjetivos, embauca a las gentes. En léxicos hallamos, entre otros, los verbos: nahualcaqui, entrar disimulado, con cautela, secretamente; nahualtcuitia, tomar algo a otro con cautela o disimulación; nahuallachia, acechar mirando, etc. Cabe dudar, sin embargo, si este verbo es el primitivo de nahualli o un derivado suyo."

In Hernando Ruiz de Alarcón, Pedro Sánchez de Aguilar, and Gonzalo de Balsalobre: Tratado de las idolatrías, supersticiones, dioses, ritos, hechicerías y otros costumbres gentílicas de las razas aborígenes de México (México: Ediciones Fuente Cultural, 1953), pp. 24 ff., it is said that "se dedicaban al animal que el demonio les señalaba para que fuesen lo que llamaban nahualli. . . .

". . . cuando el niño nace, el demonio por el punto expresado o tacito que sus padres tienen con él, le dedica o sujeta al animal, que el dicho niño ha de tener por nahual, que es como decir por dueño de su voluntad y señor de sus acciones o lo que los gentiles llamaban hado, y en virtud deste punto queda el niño sujeto a todos los peligros y trabajos que padeciere el animal hasta la muerte.

". . . advierte la denominacion y significacion del nombre nahualli, que puede derivarse de una de tres raizes que significan: la primera, mandar; la segunda, hablar con imperio, la tercera, ocultarse o rebozarse, y aunque de conocimiento para que se acomoden las dos primeras significaciones, me quedo con la tercera, que es del verbo nahualtia que es acomodarse quebrandose con algo, que viene a ser lo mismo que rebozarse, y asi, nahualli dira rebozado, o disfrazado debajo de la apariencia del tal animal, como ellos comunmente lo creen."

See also Chap. 31, n. 1, infra.

1/A [i.e., the day One Rain. – Analyst]

787x
754
791

he knew their secrets. He recovered things for people. He provoked and incited people, and caused them to believe diverse things. And [he was] a demon; he caused demons to enter one; he destroyed people and brought them to ruin. He swept people's paths for them [indicating sins which they must confess];[6] he set up ceremonial wooden figures of those killed in war, and caused them to burn for people.[7] He was a magician, one who removed his leg.[8] These were only the works of this person.

He hired and lent himself to others in order to make his living. When at night he went forth somewhere to ruin people, he changed himself into, perhaps, a turkey, or a weasel, or a dog. He who hated someone hired him to destroy his enemy, when he wished and willed death upon him. Four times, on four nights, he performed his task when he destroyed people.

This same one sought out an evil day sign; then was the time to destroy someone. When he had done his task well on one, when already four times he had returned to the victim's home, it was said: "He hath drawn him forth." But sometimes [the evildoer] fell into [his victim's] hands; he fell and was taken into the hands of others, and was seized and quickly captured. The brave one who was to be destroyed, who was hated, vigilantly stalked him in order to catch him. He seized his hair; from the top, the crown, he pulled hair from his head. He jerked off his hair; he seized, wrenched, and tore it off; he removed his hair. No more did he escape. Forthwith he died; he could only reach his home to die.

And if in vain he tried to remedy, or, indirectly, to palliate [the situation], so that he might not die, still seeking to follow his work and control and establish his fate, in vain he contrived to take or borrow something — perchance water or fire, or a bowl, which he borrowed from the house of the one he had gone forth to destroy, who had there seized him. But if the one to be destroyed were indeed wise, prudent,[9] and well advised, he gave nothing at all to anyone. All during the day, until [the next] dawn came, he lent nothing to anyone. On the morrow, cacho, teiollapan, teioiollapan, tetlatlaneltoqujti, ioan tlacatecolotl, tetlatlacatecolovia, tepoloa, tlâtlalpoloa, tecacalochpana, teevillotlatia, tetlatlatoqujlia, tlaujpuchtli, mometzcopina, çan vel iê itequjuh, ic tlaqueoalo, ic motetlaqueoaltia, ic motlaiecoltia, in cana iooaltica tepolotiuh, aço totoli, aço coçamatl, anoço chichi, ipâ mocuepa, in aqujn tecocolianj qujtlaqueoa, injc qujpolotiuh itlacocolil, in qujmjqujtlanj, qujmjqujztemachia, nappa nauhiooal in ontepoloa, in qujchioa itequjuh:

çan no iê qujtztiuh, in aqualli tonalli, in vncan itepoloaia, in aca ouel qujchiuh, in ic nappa oilo ichan, mjtoa: ocontlaqujxtili, auh in quenman temac vetzi, temac aquj, temac maquja, axioa, cujtiucchio, in aqujn iolchicaoac pololonj, cocolilonj, uel quimopachiuia injc caci, qujtzoncuj, iquaccpantla, yquaiolloco qujmomotzalhuja in jtzon, qujquatemotzoltzitzquia qujquavivitla, qujtzoncopina, aocmo qujça, njman iquac mjquj, ça onmjctaci in jchan:

auh in oc nen, ic mopatiznequj, ic mopaiaoalochtiznequj, injc amo mjqujz, oc motlaiecoltia, motonalanaznequj, motonallalilizznequj, oc nen itla qujmocujcujcachioa, qujmotlatlanevia, aço atl, aço tletl, aço caxitl, in conmotlaneuja ichan in oquipoloto, in vmpa ocacique: auh in vel qujmati, in tlaueuemachtilli, in tlanonotzalli in pololonj: njman aoc tle qujtemaça, in iuh cemjlhujtl in oallatvic, aoc tle qujtetlaneuhtia, yn jmoztlaioc: ic vncan vel tematlac maquja, in tlacatecolotl, onmjquj, ca nel ie oncan ca itequjuh, ca iê in qujtetemoa, ca ic vncan ca ipoliujz:

6. Cf. Leonhard Schultze Jena: Weltreligionen, Himmelskunde und Kalender der alten Azteken (Stuttgart: W. Kohlhammer, 1959), p. 350: "Das Fest des Weggefegens wurde zu Ehren der Göttermutter veranstaltet, deren Priester die Beichte derer entgegennahmen, die sich geschlechtlich versündigt hatten. Der Wort besagt also: Er fegt den Leuten den Zugangsweg zu den Häusern wieder sauber; in übertragenem Sinn: Er bewirkt dass die Leute geschlechtliche Sünden zu beichten haben und dadurch ihrer ledig werden."

7. Cf. infra, Chap. 19, where a full description appears.

8. Cf. variant translation in Jena, op. cit., p. 141: "Und hinter ihm kommt eine Hexe her, eine vom Monde, die genau so gut jener Arbeit tut."

9. Tlamelmachtilli in the Real Palacio MS.

787
754
791

then, indeed, the demon was enclosed in one's net. He died. For in truth this was his destiny, for they sought him continually, and it then was the time of his ruin. For he knew in his heart, while yet he lived, that perchance somewhere he might be seized. For so had he been born only to die.[10] Never was he content nor happy; he went about in rags, poorly clothed. And he lived only in suffering. He raged over drink and food. Everywhere was he feared; nowhere could he enter among people. No one was his friend.

But although he were seized and taken, he was not frightened, nor did he therefore cease. He paid no heed. If he had children, always he lived the same, never wishing to mend his ways. There he went to his end, and they punished him. Thus all went; thus all was destroyed.

Just so if it were a woman, all evil were her works. She lived in great misery. Nowhere was her home. Even though she were a noblewoman, nowhere was she favored or noticed. Just as if dead, she lived in affliction. It was said that just so was her day sign one of misery.

ca njmã iuh iiollo qujmatia in oc nemj, in aço cana axioaz: ca njman iuh ipan tlacat içan miquiz: njman aic avia, aic vellamati, itzotzoma, itatapa ietinemj auh çan moxixicotinemj, maçoma, motlaqualçoma, noviian imacaxo, acan vel tepan calaquj, aiac icnjuh:

auh in manel ie oanoc, oaxioac, amo ic momauhtia, amo ic motzaqua, amo ic qujcaquj, intla oncate ipilhoã, çan mochipa iuh nemj, amo qujcaoaliztlamaci, vncan activi quitzacutiuj, much iuh vi, much iuh polivi, çan no iuhquj itequjuh catca intla çioatl, muchi amo qualli in jtequjuh catca, cenca motolinjuinenca, âcan ichan, in manel cioapilli, âcan ixtona, âcan motztica, can iuhquj onmjquj, totoneoatiuh in jiollo, mjtoa ca nel iuhquj itonal in jcnoiotl.

10. Ya que con mágicas lo ataó.

Thirty-first Chapter, which telleth of the eighteenth sign, named One Wind, and the evil, the bad, which was with it. It was said that those then born gained as reward an evil day sign.

— One Wind. This One Wind, they said, was evil. At this time they made offerings to the one called Quetzalcoatl, who was the representative of the wind, the whirlwind.

And of him who was then born, they said that, if he were a nobleman, he would be a wizard,[1] inhuman; an astrologer,[2] one who had spells to cast.[3] It was evident to them that he was a man; nevertheless he was evil, corrupt, one who deluded, laid enchantments — the devil's works. He breathed [evil] on people, or cast the evil eye at them, or said spells over them, brought harm on them, or invoked the god [to do evil] to one. All his doings he mastered — all. Perhaps his was the disguise of a fierce beast, or a coyote, etc.

And if it were a commoner, in just the same way it was said of him that he was a demon: he caused one to be possessed, or to become demented; he danced with the arm taken from a woman dead in first childbed; he was a destroyer of men; he burned images for one.[4] Likewise, if it were a woman, she could enchant by taking apart or disarticulating the bones of the foot,[5] etc.

Injc cempoalli on matlactli oce capitulo: itechpa tlatoa injc caxtolli vmei machiotl, in jtoca ce hecatl: ioan in amo qualli, in amo iectli in jtech ca: qujl amo qualli tonalli qujmáceoaia, in vncan tlacatia. 787X

In ce hecatl: inin ce hecatl, qujtoa amo qualli, vncan qujtonaltitizia, in moteneoa quetzalcoatl, in jxiptla catca hecatl, hecamalacotl:

auh in aqujn vncan tlacatia, qujtoa intla pilli, naoalli iez, amo tlacatl, tlaciuhquj, nenonotzale, impanj neçi ca tlacatl, içcé amo qualli, itlacauhquj, itla qujmati, tlacatecolotlatolli, tlacatecoloiotl, teipitzanj, texoxanj, tetlachiujanj, tetlanonochili, tetlateononochili, much ichiujl much qujmati, aço tequannaoale, coionaoale. Er[a]. 787X 754 auh intla maceoalli çan ie no iuhquj iehoatl in mjtoa: tlacatecolotl, tetlatlacatecolouja, tepupuxquavia, temamacpalitotia, tepoloanj, teruijllotlatia: no iuhquj intla cioatl mometzcopinquj, mometzcopinanj. Er[a].

---

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "sería embaydor . . . se transfiguraría en muchas formas . . . sería nigromantico, y hechicero, y malefico." Seler (Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 1-2, p. 53) describes the nanahli as a magician and sorcerer of high class. His attributes marked him since his youth; he knew the hidden things of heaven and hell; he had supernatural powers, such as of forecasting rain, dispersing hail and pestilence, and protecting against wicked magicians; he lived unmarried, as a priest, in a temple, and advised the king and the people; he fasted, and for his arts used tobacco and such narcotics as ololiuhqui and peyote.

See also Chapter 11, n. 4, supra.

2. "Nombre más o menos valorizando con [nainhiliztqui, nechiuhtz, gramiuhtz, hail-thrower]. La raíz cinh, parecer demonio familiarizar manejadiguiar." (Garibay, "Paralipómenos de Sahagún," Tlalocan, II, 2 (1946), p. 171). Simeón, op. cit., defines tlacinhqui as "familiar en parecer del demonio, que dentro más parecemos chico los Demonios al que l'ven menos consulta de hacer bien (Sub.)."

3. Cf. Molina, op. cit., tlacinhcihlia. Nenemiztia, however, could imply a pact or an understanding with the demonio as in Chapter 11, n. 4.

4. Cf. supra, Chapter 19.

5. Matanepina, in Harold Key and Mary Richie: Vocabulario mixteno de la Sierra de Zacapoaxtla, Puebla (México: Instituto Lingüístico de Verano and Dirección General de Asuntos Indígenas, 1953), is defined as se mata (el pie): matiyar, in Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 388, is "Descoyuntar, disarticular los huesos."

Seler, op. cit., p. 56, describes one who "cuts himself up. He lays his hands and feet in separate places. He dismembers all the joints. Then he covers the mangled members with a light cloth, and then they begin to sprout and to grow again, so that it seems as if he had not been cut up, and thus he proves that this too is a juggler's trick."

See also Matanepinqui in Sahagún (Garibay ed.), Vol. IV, p. 344.

X 787 754 And when he brought destruction on one, then he chose an evil day sign; he sought and searched it out. They said that he did great evil to one on Nine Dog, or Nine Death, or Nine Grass, and indeed on all the ninth positions, and the other bad day signs mentioned—each of the different positions named.[6] auh in jpan tepoloaia, vncan qujmattiuja in aqualli tonalli, ichoatl contotocaia, contlatotoquiliaia, qujtoa cenca ipan tepoloaia in chicunauj itzcuintli, anoço chicunauj mjquiztli, chicunauj malinalli: ioan in ic muchi chichicunanauj, ioan in oc cequj moteneua aqualli tonalli, in jaquican omoteneuh,

X 787 And of such different positions, it is told that he who had work of this sort, whose labors became these separate tasks, who undertook these various burdens, was never content. He had no food. He lived only in poverty, destitute, without a house or home; nowhere was he a householder; nowhere was he of a happy home, a householder of tranquility. He went looking forward only to misery. He went eating and consuming food for himself only if somewhere something were given him, if he were offered something in order to destroy people as a reward for doing evil to them. Perhaps somewhere he was seized when already he became negligent, slothful, or developed an aversion [to evil]. Then he was seized, and they cut hair from the crown of his head; they took his renown from him and damaged his day sign for him. Thus he was abandoned to his death by the hands of others.

auh in iuh quezquican omjto, in aquin iuhquj in itequjuh, itezequjuh muchioa, qujmotezequjlia, aic auja, atle qujquanj, çan motolinjtinemj, aoneoatinemj, ácan ichã, ácan chanca, amo chane caca, acan chantlamattica: acan chane ca tlamattica, çan icnosotl qujtztinemj, çan ic conquatiuh, çan ic onmotlamjtiuh, intla cana itla maco, nemaqujlilo injc tepoloa, injc netlaquvilo: ánoce ~~cem~~ axioa in jquac ie otlatlatziujti, ie ontlaxujti, ie otlatlatzilhuj, vncan ano. qujtzonçuj, qujtleiocujlia, qujtonalitlacoa: ic ça tmac onmomjqujzacacoa:

X 787 754 [778] 674 And the ones known as men who danced with a dead woman's forearm, who crazed people,[7] when perhaps they would commit a robbery somewhere and spirit something from someone's home, would adorn the image of One Wind [Quetzalcoatl]. It went as their guide, at their head, guiding, marching in front. And they went bearing with them the forearm[8] of a woman who had died in childbed, and could not give birth to what was in her womb. When they took it from the one who had died, they only stole it during the night: they cut it off at midnight.

auh in ieboantin moteneoa, temamacpalitotoque, tepupuxaquauiqque, in jquac tla cana ichtequjzque, techan tlaqujxtizque, qujchichioaia in jxiptla oc hecatl: qujniacantiuja iniacac, imjxpan icatiuja. ioan qujtqujtiuj in jmacpal moçionquetzequj, in iti ic iauh in axel mjxtiuj iquac qujcujliaia in qujn onmjquj, çan oqujchteccacuja, ioaltica in quitequjliaia, iooalli itic.

And so did they bury her, not at her home, but only leaving her there in the road; there at the very crossroads they buried her. They went skirmishing, fighting over her, and howling as they carried her. And as they brought her out of her house, it was not from the front; only at the back of the house, auh injc qujtocaia amo ichan, çan vmpa concaoaia in vtlica, vncan in uel omaxac contoca, qujnêcalihtitiuj, ipan necaloatiuh, coiovitiuj injc qujujca: auh injc qujoalqujxtia ichan, amo ixcopa in jcal, çan qujcujtlacoionja in calli, vmpa qujqujxtia injc concaoa vmaxac:

6. Omoteneuh in the Real Palacio MS.

7. Corresponding Spanish text: "temazpalitotoque, o por otro nombre tepupuxaquauiqque."

8. Ibid.: "Un brazo desde el codo, hasta la mano, de alguna mujer; que muriese muerta, del primer parto: las curiosas, a horas, el brazo yaquando." Sahagun, loc. cit., describes hypocritical "who handling on the threshold of a house with the hand of a woman who died in childbed, send the entire household into a paralysed and immovable state, and then plunder with impunity the whole house and commit every possible infamy upon its inmates."

787x
754
674

they broke a hole, through which they removed her so that they could leave her at the crossroads.[9]

And when those who danced with the forearm would somewhere destroy or rob people, one person carried and bore the forearm of the woman who had died in childbirth, on his shoulder. It was the one on her left, her left forearm. When he came to reach one's house, but had not yet entered the house, first of all he struck the mid-point of the courtyard with the forearm. Twice he struck. On reaching the entrance of the house, he struck the portal, the lintel, and then he passed by the square, wooden pillar. Then he once again struck there before the hearth.

When such came to pass, it was said, no more did one speak out. No one could be aroused. Verily, the householders had swooned with fear. And some of them were in a deep sleep, snoring and rumbling: there was sleeping as if one's nose were broken. And if now some only in vain sat looking, they could not move, nor stir, nor resist. They were stunned; their arms and legs were deadened. For verily they were spread out gazing upward with unseeing, glassy, and staring eyes.

And these great, evil thieves thereupon lit up the torches and sought out the food. First of all they ate; they took it for themselves. None could restrain them. For in truth they had overcome and bewitched the people. When they had satisfied themselves, then they entered the storerooms, the storage chambers, and bundled up and removed all the capes; the large, cotton blankets; the green stone; the gold. Indeed, everything that had been hidden away — the treasures, the guarded things, — all was laden on their backs; all was appropriated and sorted out. Whatsoever it was, they placed as much on their backs, and with it arrayed themselves.

And in very truth, so it is said and so it is known, they did not leave them having done nothing; nor, with no result, did they take their pleasure with them taking advantage of their sleep, of the sleep into which the common folk had been thrown, to hang on to [the women], line them up, rolling them aside and enjoying another's place. There where each one lay apart, where she was stretched out, they simply rolled her over to another place. How much the wicked ones made sport of them cannot be said.[10] auh in ieoantin in temamacpalitotique, in jquac cana tepolozque, ichtequjzque, ce tlacatl conquechpanoa conmoquechpanoltia in jmacpal, mocioquetzquj, iehoatl in in jopoch, iopuchma, in jquac oacito techan, in aiamo calaquj calitic: oc ie achto iqoalnepantla ic tlaujtequj in macpalli, ic oppa tlaujtequj, in oacique, caltempan, qujujtequj in calixquatl, in tlaixquatl: njman iee in tlaquetzalli, ic conmocaoa in tlecujlixquac, oc eppa oncan tlaujtequj, in jquac in iuh mjtoa njman aocac naoati, aocac uel mopoçaoa, vel ioiolmjquj in chaneque, auh in cequjn çan vel cocochmjquj, tlacotaliuj, tlaquaqualaca, iuhqujn neacatzaianalocochioa, auh intla ça oc aca nenitztoc, aoc vel molinja, aoc uel mocuechinja, aoc vel momapatla, vel çoçotlaoa, çoçotlacmjquj yn jnma, in jmjcxi, ca nelli mach in acopa teiitztoque, ixtepepetzme, ixpepetzteme onoque, ixpepetzintoque:

auh in iehoantin ichtecpatlachpopul, njman ie ic tlepitza, qujtemoa in tlaqualli, achtopa tlaqua, vel motlacauja aiac qujmelleltia, ca nel oontepoloque, ontepuxaquaujque in jquac onmoiollalique njman ic calaquj in tlecopa, in tlatlatilcali, tlamaololoa, tlaqujxtia in jxqujch tilmatli, in quachtli, in chalchiujtl, in teocujtlatl, in ie ixqujch tlatilonj, in tetzontli, in pielli, netlacujtlaputzmamaltilo, netlanêuectilo, netlatlattililo, in çaço ac quexqujch ic conmotlamamaltia, ic onmuchichioa:

auh in nel cenca iuh onmjtoa, in iuh onmachiztl, amo nentecaoa, amo nenquijça, teca mauhjtiteoa in iuh cochioa, necochitilo maceoalpan pilcoatoc, ejpantoatoc, teiiquanja, tepapatla, in vncan ceceiaca ionoia, inetecaia, oc ie cecni conteca, amo vel mjtoz, in quexqujch ic teca manjltia tlaueliloque:

9. Cf. account of the [illegible] in Sahag, Rimjr Kapital, pp. 316 ff.

10. Corresponding Spanish text: "[illegible] y desvaneciéndose en los suyos, de aquella suerte."

X 787 ●754 674

And as they went along the road, nowhere did they rest or refresh themselves. They immediately sought out their homes. It was so said and affirmed that if any of them rested by the road, he could no longer go, rise up, nor travel. There the dawn would overtake him. He would betray his fellow thieves. They would be seized; each one seized and imprisoned, despoiled, and firmly bound.

-auh injc vi otlica acan mocetuja, ꞗcan mjzquacevia, ça qujn cẽ vmpa qujmattiuj in jnchan: inh mjtoa, qujlmach intla aca moceviz vtlica: aioc vel yaz, aio uel meoaz, aioc vel otlatocaz: vncan ipan thathujz, qujnnenotlaz in jchteccaicnjoan, anouque, çaçacoque, namoiaiouque, tecácatzilpiloz.

825 And when it appeared that indeed all the chicks
235 fell upon their backs so that they died,[27] upon this they said: "They died of filth; perchance someone came to go in among them; or looked upon them; or indeed it was the householder who slew them by filth." Because of this, they believed, indeed all the turkeys had fallen upon their backs so that they died.

Auh injc neci çan muchintin aaquetztiuj injc mjquj totolpipil, ic qujtoa: ca tlaçolmjquj: aço aca inpan ocalaqujco, anoço oqujmjttac, anoço aca vel chane in oqujntlaçolmjcti: ic qujmatia, in çan muchin aaquetztivi totolme, injc mjquj.

825 It was said that also the same befell those who 236 were married. If perchance somewhere one's spouse, whether woman or man, fell into adultery, they then 837 believed that those which had fallen upon their backs or stumbled over, indeed accused him.

Qujl no iuh inpan muchioa in namjqueque: in aço cana qujtlaxima inamjc, in aço cioatl, anoço toqujchtin: injc qujmati, çan qujpiqui in aaquetztivetti, anoce cana motlavitequj.

286 Twenty-fifth Chapter, which telleth of her who wove with yarn.

When [a woman] wove with yarn perhaps a mantle, or a shift, or a skirt, which came out awry, unevenly disposed, with crooked edges, they said and it was thought that the weaver of the mantle or shift was not generous. Just like a crooked seam, perverse [would she be]; not generous.[28]

Injc cempoalli onmacujlli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa: in icpatl qujqujti.

In jcpatl, in aço tilmatli, anoço vipilli, anoço cueitl: in jquac qujqujti in chicopatilivi, in chicoviaqujxtiuh, in tennecujliuhtiuh, qujtoaia: qujlmach amo tlacaiollo yn tilmaoa, yn vipilli: çan cueciuhquj, çan tlatlaveliloc: amo tlacaiollo.

821 Twenty-sixth Chapter, which telleth of hail.

When it rained, and much hail fell, one who there [had] his maize, chili, bean, or chía field scattered ashes from the hearth out of the entrance into the courtyard. It was said that thus his maize field would not be hailed out; it was thought that thus the hail would disappear.

Injc cempoalli on chiquacen capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in tecivitl.

In jquac qujavi, in cenca tecivi: in aquin vnca imjl, anoço ychilcuen, anoço yiecuen, ychian: tleconextli qujiaoac qujoaltepeoa, itvalco: qujlmach yc amo teciviloz in jmjl, qujl ic poliui in tecivitl.

● 754 Twenty-seventh Chapter, which telleth of sorcerers.
776
789 At night walked demons — perchance wizards and sorcerers — where they harmed one in one's home. When the householders saw them, when perhaps some [demon] so [would] harm them, they then placed an obsidian knife in water, behind the door, or in the courtyard. They laid it down at night. They said and it was believed that there the demons and sorcerers would look at their reflections when they would harm one, or there would be death, or sickness would come upon the people.

Injc cempoalli on chicome capitulo, yntechpa tlatoa in tlatlavipuchti.

In iocaltica nemj tlatlacateculo: aço manacalti, tlavipuchtin in canjn ontepoloa in techan: in oqujmjttaque in aço itla ic qujnpoloa in chaneque: mjman atlan conteca ytztli puertatitlan, anoço itoalco qujmana in iocaltica, qujtoaia: qujlmach vncan onmotencavia in tlatlacateculo, yn tlavipuchtin in tepoloa: aço mjcoaz, anoce cocolizztli tepan muchioaz.

27. Corresponding Spanish text: "los pollos se cayan muertos, los ponen arriba: y esto, llaman daçolmjqui."

28. Corresponding Spanish text: "or perverse, or que la tela, or puntas biscornuda." Cuenoyo, in Simeon, op. cit., is to make a false seam.

754 776 789

At once they fled; nevermore would they come to harm one when they had seen the obsidian knife resting in the water.

Ic njman choloa, aiocmo ceppa tepolotivi: in jquac oqujttaque itztli, atlan onoc.

Twenty-eighth Chapter, which telleth of the gnawed leavings of a mouse.

825

Whatsoever a mouse had gnawed none might eat. It was said that he who ate what a mouse had left would be falsely accused. For it was said that the mouse came to steal it; he came to eat it in stealth. Wherefore no one might eat gnawed leavings of a mouse. Likewise it was said of it that he who ate the gnawed leavings of a mouse would be accused falsely of some sort of story or of that which might be missing.[29]

Injc cempoalli on chicuei capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in qujmjchin ytentlacaoal.

In qujmjchin in çaço tlein qujqua: aiac vel qujqualiaia, qujlmach in aqujn qujqualia yn q'caoa qujmjchin, itech tlatlamjz, ca mjtoa: oqujchtequjco in qujmjchin, oqujchtacaqua. Ipampa y, in aiac vel qujqualiaia in itentlacaoal qujmjchin. No yuh ipan mjtoz: in aqujn qujqua itentlacaoal qujmjchin, itech tlatlamjz, in çaço tlein tlatolli, anoço in tlein poliviz.

Twenty-ninth Chapter, which telleth of nails.

826 776

It was said that, when nails were pared, they cast them into the water. It was thought that this was because the water dog[30] would make good [nails] grow out — not broken; they would be sound. For when it drew someone into the water, [the water-dog] tore away his nails and eyes.

Injc cempoalli on chicunavi capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in jztitl.

Qujlmach in tozti, in jquac motetequja, atlan contepeoaia, qujlmach ipampa: in ichoatl avitzotl, qualli qujxoaltiz: amo papatzaoaz, qualli yez. Ipampa: in jquac aqujn qujlaqujaia, qujqujxtiliaia in jzti, ioan ixtelolo.

Thirtieth Chapter, which telleth of sneezing.

827

When someone sneezed, they said, in times past: "Someone speaketh of me; someone saith well of me." Or they said: "Someone speaketh ill of me." Or they said: "Some people discuss me." It was thought that they made it evident, and knew, when they sneezed, that someone far away mentioned them.

Injc cempoalli ommatlactli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in acucholiztli.

In jquac aca acuchoa, qujtoaia in ie vecauh: aqujn nechitoa, aqujn nechteneoa: anoce qujtoaia: aqujn nêchicoitoa, anoçe qujtoa: aqujque in noca mononotza. Qujl ichoatl qujnezcaiotiaia, ichoatl ic qujmatia: in jquac acuchoa, in aca canapa veca qujnteneoa.

Thirty-first Chapter, which telleth of small children.

853

When small children still lay in the cradle and something was eaten or drunk,[31] first they placed it upon [their] foreheads.[32] It was said that in this way [the child] would not hiccough or be afflicted by what he ate or drank.

Injc cempoalli ommatlactli oce capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in pipiltotonti.

In ichoantin in pipiltotonti: in jquac yn oc coçolco onoque: in jquac tlaqualo, anoço itla mjz, achto ijxquac contlaliaia, qujlmach ic amo tritzicunoz, amo moenlinjz in tlein moqua, anoço mj.

29. Corresponding Spanish text: "de harto, o de sabidoria, o de otra cosa."

30. Animal: Seler, in Collected Works, Vol. IV, 2. 21, refers to it as a spectral water animal or sprite "which drew men down into the water and ate off the nails and hair of immersed men" (citing Sahagún, XI, cap. 4, § 2, and V, App., cap. 29). Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 66 (ahuizotl), calls it nutria o perro del agua (Lutra felina).

31. Corresponding Spanish text: "quando comejan, o bevjan en presencia de algun niño."

32. Ibid.: "en la boca."

776 Quetzalcoatl, Chalchiuitl ycue, Tlaloc, Popocatepetl, Iztac
782 tepetl, Poiauhtecatl,[117] and any other mountains of which they had vowed to make representations.

And they represented the mountains, they made their 532 images, only in a dough of amaranth seed and maize,[118]
782 made in human form, made to look like men.

● 755 They gave them teeth of squash seeds; they provided them eyes of fat black beans. With whatever adornment [the mountains] were represented, thus when they made them, they thereupon arrayed them.

[314 And they made papers, and they spattered them with 289] liquid rubber.[119] And they laid these over them as mantles.

And some of these papers, which were spattered with drops of liquid rubber, they hung on a cord, tied and fastened together, so that they were held in a row before the small molded ones [Tepicme].

They rustled, quivered, and flew in the breeze. Canes of fat, round reeds [held the cord] at both ends; [the canes] were stuck into and supported by the ground. On this were held the rubber-spotted papers.

[415] And a green spotted gourd was split in two and cored. Before [the Tepicme] they set this, which they called the turquoise cup, for the wine, in which the wine was. Thus they offered [them] wine.

793 And it was the office of the priests alone, who were experi-
532 enced, to make [the Tepicme] and set them in place. None of the householders dared make or adorn them.

And on the fifth [day], when they feasted the priests, it was said, they caused them to forget.

782 When the Tepicme were fashioned, thereupon they held
755 a vigil and made music for them.

During the night, they made offerings four times; they set before the priests, before them who sang the songs for the Tepictoton, round tamales which they gave them.

And four times they offered them food during the night, and they made music for [the Tepictoton].

[198 They whistled with their fingers, they made music for 533] them with shells, with flutes, and with fifes.

Young jesters, in their cups, who cut capers, and amused
[273 people, blew the flutes. They also were offered food.

463] And on the next day they slew the Tepictoton [images]: they slew them, like sacrificial quail, twisting their necks. Then they gathered up and carried away the Tepictoton figures made of a dough of amaranth-seed and maize to the priests' house, where dwelt the priests.

And he who [caused to be] fashioned the Tepicme thereupon returned to his guests, where they were entertained.

273 And in the evening, toward nightfall, then all the old 782 people set drinking wine—those already advanced in age, the 755 popocatepetl, iztac tepetl, poiauhtecatl: yoan in çaço quenõjuztel tepetl in quintenouaz in quijpiqui.

Auh in quijpiquja, in quimiztplatiaia in tetepe, çan tzoalli, quintlacatlaliaia, quintlacatlachieltivia, tlacatlachistiçaca:

quintlantiaia xiouachili, auh in quimjttelolotiaia xiecutli: in quenamj yntlatequj in quimiztplatiaia, in quipipiquja çan no iuhqui ynic quinchichioaia.

Auh yoan quichioaia, amatetenjtl, colchachapatrvia, colchipiniaia, quinquequentiaia:

auh in cequj amatetenvitl, tlaolchipinjlli, tlaolchachapatzalli, tlecatitech quipipiloaia, tlecatitech quinenetochilpiaia, quinnetetechçaloaia, ymjxpan antec, ic itzacutoque in tepicme:

hiçamacatec papapatlacatec, papatlantec, ostepilquanjtl, necoc, nenecoc, necocampa tlatlalacticac, tzinzonotiçac, yn itech antec tetenjtl.

Auh tzilacaiutli, tlaiztlapantli, tlaiztitatzcli: ymixpan mamanca, chalchiuhticalli ipan poujia, vcili vnca ca, vcili ic mamanca.

Auh çan iehoan in tlamacazque, yn jovequith, in machiceque catca, yn quinchichinaia, in quintlaliaia: aiac çan moiocuiaia, in calla in quinchichioaia.

Auh tlacujtica in quintlalhujaia, mjxia: quinmolcaxaltiaia in tlamacazque:

yn o ic cauhque tepicme, njman ic ic quinnençavia, quincuiaxtia:

in cricoal napa in quintlamanjlia, tamalololli in quinmacaia, quinmanaia ymjxpa, in tlamacazque, in tepiccujca:

no napa in quintlamacaia cricoal, yoan quintlapichilia, çuinmaquiquixiliaia tecuicitli in quipipichiliaia, yoan vilacapiztli, cocuujlotl, vilacapitzoaia, çan tulpepochtli, papaquinj, haxivinj, mihivintinj, tecomeltinj, cocoloque, no tlamacoia.

Auh yn otlatvic njman quinnictia yn tepicme, quinquechcotona, quinquechcuj, quinquechilacatzoa, çaiepan quinxemololoa, conececuj, in tepictzoalli, quiquj yn calmecac yn vmpa onoque, tlamacazque.

Auh in tepiquinj, njman ic yc calaquih yn itlacatzontlahoan, yn jovecoen, vecan mopia, mopiztoque:

auh in ic iooctinh, in ic tevtlac njman ic ic tlaxana, motlaxancatlalia in vecutlaca, yn ic chicaxoque, yn otlachi-

117. Gods of the air, of water, and of rain (cf. corresponding Spanish text). Popocatepetl and Iztac tepetl (Iztac chief) are mountain-peaks in the Valley of Mexico; Poauhtecatl is Mt. Orizaba.

118. Made of dough (vez masica), in the Spanish columns; Sobre cuerdas de cruzecillas de Samen der Stachelmelone (Einige Kapitel, p. 27).

119. ". . . unos papeles llenos de goma de tule, a los cuales papeles llamaban amatetenxil" (Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. 1, p. 120).

well-matured, the gray-headed, the white haired; and the old women.

Of these it was the exclusive privilege that they should drink wine.

And when they had drunk their fill, thereupon all went to their houses, dispersed and scattered.

Some went off weeping; some danced the warriors' dance; they danced the ceremonial dance; some walked weak-kneed; some went shouting.

And few; the wine-makers were entertained; they rested from their office.

It was explained that for four days they should fast and abstain during their work, lest [the wine] sour.

They should look to their strict abstinence; no man might lie with a woman, nor a woman with a man.

[And] none might taste the wine, nor the syrup [from which it was made], while it was being prepared.

One might not even dip one's finger into it; one paid it reverence and treated it delicately, until the wine was tapped.[129]

And of him who secretly tasted it, who in secret drank some, even tasting only a little, it was said that his mouth would become twisted, it would stretch to one side;[130] to one side his mouth would shift; it would be drawn over.

And if one were lame in one hand, or if his arm or leg quivered, or a hand or foot became misshapen, or the foot shook, or his eyes trembled, or his lips quivered, or if one were possessed by a devil, it was said that the green mountain gods had been angered by him.

And when the day broke, thereupon took place the dispensing of the remains. At the distribution, only the relatives, the people of the household—his family, they of the same parentage, of the same womb, those of the same clan [took part].

They called it the distribution of the leftovers; then all the food and drink were consumed, used up—all finished.

And they left nothing of what still remained of the drugs in the vessel, of the wine, of watered wine,[131] of fruit wine,[132] of white wine, of sheep-producing wine.

And he who had the images made, if he had the goat, as was said above, he was thus cured. And he who was to have drowned but did not die, when he caused the images to be made thus paid his debt and thus fulfilled his vow.

And all their adornment—their paper garlands worn over one shoulder (as a sign of death or of one to be slain before the gods), their sprays of round thick reeds, and their flame-sticks,[134] their closed-bundles;

and the turquoise cups and their little sauce bowls with calhuyque, in ie quintaque, in ie tzonintaque, yuan 273 ilamatlaca yn ilamatque: 782

ichoan vel intemac cazca, in vetli in quinque. 755

Auh in otlaiviniz, ninan ie ic viujlos, cocoxmeuia, xititiujos:

yn ace mochoquijlitiuh, yn ace moquichiuitiuh, mjutitiuh, tzomomoctiuh: yn ace tetzetzilitiuh.

Auh in vetlali, achto molcaxaltilois: çan no cemoca yn inquijuh, yn jchiujl:

tlacaquijtilois, nevilhujtl maçaxaia, qujnçaujlisia yn inquijuh, ynic axo xocoias:

vel mopisia, vel motlacaxaltisia, axo cioxochia, axo [834] equjchocchia, intla cioxtl:

çan ninan ninc vel ontlapaloaia yn vetli, yuan in nocutli, ynic mochinaia:

ninc inmanel inapil, cenaqujaia, vel ynacazoa, vel mallaujlaia, yn inquijchica, moiacazapotlas yn vetli.

Auh yn aquja, ichtaca tlapaloaia, yn tlachtaca yia inmanel 753 çan tepitoa ocompolo: inh mjtoaia tenaccujlivia tepantilivia, avic momamana avic xoquivi yn itz:

yuan in ace matzicolinjia, yma qujcuecuexa, icxi quicuecuexa, macopichauj, icxicopichauj, icxicuecuechca, yhixaxoxoca, xopopotlaca, onvivitoca, inch qujxoxa: mjtoa, equjtlavelique in xoxohqui tepicme.

Auh yn otlathuje, ninan ie ic apenalo: yn apeoa çan 782 ichoan, yn iconiolque, in vel icalloc, in centlaca, cemeoa, in 592 vel icujtlaxcalloc, yn vel imocaioc: 755

moxmoxa apenalo, iquac compolinja tlatlamj, in quexquijch mocoxaia, in atl, in tlaqualli:

yuan in oc quenquijch omocauh xaiocomjc in vetli, in 273
aiactli, in tlachioalvetli, in intac vetli, in cochvetli.

Auh yn tepiquijnj, in tepiequj: intla coaciri, yn juh omjxo 755 tlacpac, ic patiz: yuan yn aquja atlan miquinquja ynjc amo 782 mjc: ichoatl, ynjc tepiquj, ynjc mextlaoa, ynjc qujnelilia ynactzl.

Auh yn jnquijch, yn jnnochichinal, yn jntlaquen, yn jnnomamaquen, yn jnnomapil, yn jntlaqueilanjlquauh, yn jnnianhocxal:

yuan yn jnchalchiuhxinal, yuã yn jntlaquaia molcaxxonxal,

129. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 29, citing mangled phrase in MS Bibliotheca del Palacio. Cf. also explanation in Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 38.
131. Probably tecquilitlaxcalli in source. It does appear in MS Bibliotheca del Palacio (Cf. Seler, loc. cit.)
132. Possibly ocoxtli.
133. See Molina (Vocabulario).
134. Adriano Tarcovsky, Histoire de Mexique (M. Tarcovsky-Cazapous, tr.; Paris: P. Jouve, 1931), Vol. I, p. 300, describes this as a light flame-colored stick: ". . . un cône de papier en forme de flammes et de tentacules." Seler (op. cit., p. 36) calls it a lightning stick (Blitzstab).

755
782 which [the celebrants] ate, the little wooden bowls and the clay bowls, all these they left at Tepetzinco: they threw them into the water, off shore, at a place called Panxitlan.

776 Twenty-second Chapter, which telleth of the god with the mirror in his hair (Tezcatzoncatl), who also was held to be one of the four hundred rabbits (centzontotochtin).

He [was] the wine, in times past[120] considered full of sin. For he hurled people off crags, he strangled people, he drowned people, he killed them.

He was an awesome being. One did not affront him: one did not speak lightly of him.

And this Tezcatzoncatl was also considered one of those called the four hundred rabbits, who are the substance of wine—Ijouhtecatl, Acolhua, Tlilhoa, Panucatl, Izquitecatl, Tolucatl, Papaztac, Tlaltecaiouo, Ome tochtli, Tepoztecatl, Chimalpanecatl, Colhuatzintecatl.[121]

And as for the array of Tezcatzoncatl, he had the white heron feather headdress; he had a crescent-shaped ornament through the septum of his nose and a paper ear-plug. He had a fan-shaped ornament of red arara feathers and a neck piece with flecks scattered over it. He had the knotted cloth with [representatives of] scorpions. He carried the pulque gods' shield, the obsidian staff, and the flint staff. And also he had rattles.

quauhcaxtotomi, çoçojocototomi, ouchi vuqui cuecueuia tepetzinco: atlan contepeuia, vuqui ouquatila, yuocuiccan panxitlan.

Juic cempoalli vnume capitulo, yuchqui tlatoa in tezcatzoncatl, yn jnoan pouj centzontotochtli.

Jehoatl in vctli, ieppa tlatlacolli ipan machoia: ca tetepeximja, tequechnecanja, tentlauja, temjctia; tetzavitzinj, amo pinavilonj, amo chicoitalonj.

Auh yuju tezcatzoncatl, ynoan pouj, ynoan ora, yn motenoua, centzontotochtli, yn vctli innacaio, yn iJauhtecatl, Acolhoa, tlilhoa, panucatl, Jzquitecatl, Tolucatl, papaztac, Tlaltecaiouo, vme tuchtli, tepuztecatl, chimalpanecatl, Colhoatzincatl.

Auh yn jnchichioal Tezcatzoncatl, ezzatzone, iacametzo, amanacuiche, cvçalvizocaoa, chaiaoac cuaqui, colotlalpile, vuetuchchimale, itztopile, tezpatapile, no cuitzile.

fin del libro

---

120. Yeppa: formerly, in times past (Molina: op. cit.). The meaning also could be "drain."
121. See Sahagun: op. cit., Vol. I, pp. 112, 311, 314; Vol. III, p. 139; Vol. V, p. 67, for explanation of the names.

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1950
NU7 Astec NU7

776
532

[782]

[796
467]

[782 755]

—After Paso y Troncoso

29—Tzapotlan temo (Chap. 9), Chalchihuitl ynac (Chap. 11). Chicome ozotl (Chap. 7). 30—Tlapitzauli—Coatlaxian (Chap. 12). 31—Xopa tecuitl (Chap. 28). 32—Tepiztoton (Chap. 21). 33—Pantitlan (Tepiztoton) (Chap. 21). 34—Appendix, Chap. 12. 35—Appendix, Chap. 12.

The third month they called Toçoztontli. On the first day of this month they observed a feast to the god named Tlaloc, who is the god of rain. On this feast they slew many children upon the mountains. They offered them as sacrifices to this god and to his companions, so that they would give them water.

Al tercero mes, llamavan toçoztontli: en el primer dia deste mes, hazian fiesta al dios llamado Tlaloc: que es dios de las pluujas. En esta fiesta, matauã muchos njños, sobre los montes: ofrecianlos en sacrificio a este dios, y a sus compañeros, para que los diessen agua. 796^ [852 776]

Chapter 5
Toçoztontli

On this feast they offered the first fruits of the flowers which had bloomed earliest that year, on the pyramid named Yopico. And before they had offered them, none dared smell a flower.

Those in charge of the flowers, who are called xochimanque, celebrated a feast to their goddess, named Coatl icue, or by another name Coatlan tonan.

Likewise in this month, those who had worn the skins of the dead [sacrificial victims] whom they had flayed the previous month, took [them] off. They went to cast them into a cave in the pyramid which they called Yopico; they went in procession to do this, and [performed] many ceremonies. They went stinking like dead dogs. And after they had left them [in the cave], they washed themselves, [performing] many ceremonies. A number of the sick made vows to attend this procession, in order to recover from their sickness, and they say that some [of them] recovered.

The masters of the [sacrificed and flayed] captives, with all those of their households, did penance for twenty days: neither did they bathe nor wash their heads until the skins of the dead captives were deposited in the cave mentioned above. They said that they did penance for their captives.

After they had ended the penance, they bathed and washed themselves, and summoned all their kin and friends, and gave them food. And they performed many ceremonies with the bones of the dead captives.

1. Marginal notation: Apollo habet flos suos.

Cap. 5.
Toçoztontli.

1 c KL. c 14
2 d En esta fiesta: ofrecian las prjmicias d 15 [824
3 e de las flores, que aquel año primero e 16 346]
4 f nacian en el cu, llamado iopico: y f 17
5 g antes que las ofreciessen, nadie osaua g 18
6 A oler flor. A 19
7 b Los officiales de las flores, que se b 20
8 c llaman xochimanque: hazian fiesta, a c 21
9 d su diosa llamada Coatl ycue, y por otro d 22
10 e nombre coatlã tona. e 23
11 f Tambien en este mes: se desnu- f 24
12 g dauan, los q̃ trayan vestidos, los g 25
13 A pellejos de los muertos, q̃ aujan des- A 26
14 b ollado el mes pasado: yuanlos a echar b 27
15 c en vna cueua, en el cu, que llamauan c 28
16 d iopico: yuan a hazer esto, con pro- d 29
17 e cesion: y cõ muchas cerimonjas, yuan e 30
18 f hediendo, como perros muertos: y f 31
19 g despues que los aujan dexado: se g 1[1] [755]
20 A lauauan, con muchas cerjmonjas: A 2[2]
Algunos emfermos hazian voto, de hallarse presentes, a esta procesion, por sanar de sus emfermedades: y dizen, que algunos sanauan.

Los dueños de los catiuos, con todos los de su casa, hazian penjtencia, veynte dias: que nj se bañauan, nj se lauauan las cabeças: hasta que se ponjan los pellejos, de los captiuos muertos, en la cueua arriba dicha: dexian que hazian penjtencia, por sus captiuos. 796^ 785 783

Despues que aujan acabado la penjtencia: bañauanse, y lauauanse, y combidauan a todos, sus parientes, y amigos, y dauanles comida: y hazian muchas cerjmonjas, con los huesos, de los catiuos muertos.

2. Marginal notation: Mortui egipciorum.

X 796 [279] Any who wished, to whom it was pleasing, who wanted to, of the youths who had been drunk, [did so].

in çaço aquijn connequja, conmonectiaia, ontlaelcuiaia in mihiuintia telpopochti.

[755] And some of them had so made vows that they would hide away the skins; because perchance they were covered with sores, or perhaps had an infection of the skin, or had maladies of the eyes, since for some this was successful and thus they recovered. Some did not recover.

Auh cequjntin ic monetoltia, yn eoatlatiaque: ipampa aço papalanja, aço çaçaoati, anoço ixcococia: tel in aca, ipanti, ic pati, in aca amo pati:

Each one of the captors came forth from his house, and appeared in and went wearing the [captive's] skin. They went with paper streamers[6] upon their shoulders and upon the calves of their legs.

[301 289] ceceiaca inchan in tlamanjme oalpeoa, oaleoa conmaquitiuj in eoatl, amateteujtl, ymacolpan mamãtiuh, yoan in tlanitzco.

And so they went jumping, pressing on, arriving together. So [foul] did they smell [that verily] the stench wounded the head. [It was] repellent. All men held their noses when they were met, when they went among people.

[515] Auh ynic vih, chocholotiuj, hiixtiuj, centlalli mantiuh, ynjc yiaque, vel tetzonujtec, ainamjquiztli: çan neiacapacholo ynjc namjco, ynic tetla quiça.

And the skins, crumpled and crackling, were hardened. And some carried them in baskets—dried up, frayed, stiffened.

Auh yn eoatl, ocototzauh, ocacalachoac, oquaoac: auh in cequj ça chiqujuhtica quinapaloa, yn ouehepioac, yn oquelochauh, oquappitzoac.

And the captors came in lead of the tototeci. They bore their incense-ladles. They went with their gifts tied up in bundles—mantles perchance painted with designs, or in dark brown,[7] or crimson, or in two colors diagonally divided,[8] or with edges adorned with feathers—with feathers surrounding the edge.

[431 531 291] Auh in tlamanjme, qujniacan.uj in tototecti, intletlema, intletlema ietiuh: quimoolpilitiuj yn innetlauhtil, tilmatli, aço tlacujlolli, anoço camopalli, anoço nochpalli, anoço nacazminquj, anoço teniujoaoanquj, yhujtenoaoanquj, yhujtentlaiaoalo.

And when they had arrived at the place where the skins were hidden away, on the top of the Temple of Yopitli, Yopitli's Temple, each one dedicated [incense] to the four directions; the captors offered incense, raising [toward the sky] their incense-ladles, and shaking them.

Auh yn oaxioac, yn eoatlatiloian, yn icpac teucalli iopitli, iopiteucalli: nauhcampa ceceiaca ontlaiiaouia, in tlamanjme ontlenamacaia, conjiaoa yn jntlema, conujujxoa.

And those who stood clothed in the skins then undid them, and stood divested [of them]. And when they had taken the skins off, they cast them down, they threw them into a cave. And the captors went down to the bottom [of the temple pyramid] and quickly left and poured out the coals into the incense-burner.

Auh yn onacticac eoatl, ojman mototoma, mototonticac: yn oquioalcopin eoatl, eontlaça ica onmaiauj yn oztoc. Auh in tlamanj, oaltemo tlatzitla, quioalcauhtiquiça, quioaltentiquiça, tlehquazco in tecolli.

X 796 515 And they who had come to dispose of the skins, which they had gone about wearing, washed themselves not with water, but with flour—with corn meal, with which they rubbed their faces. They scrubbed their faces with flour.

Auh yn oquicaouto eoatl, yn onmaquitiuja, amo mixamja atica, çan iotextli, tlaoltextli, inic onmixxaxaqualoua, ynic onmjxmamatiloa, mixiotexuja:

---

6. See Chapter 20, n. 4.

7. In Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Amerikanischen Sprach- und Alterthumskunde (Berlin: A. Asher & Co., 1902-23), Vol. II, p. 325, Seler translates cuacapalli as kastanienfarbene or in orange-farbener Decke. In Einige Kapitel, p. 79, he has "kastanienfarbenen (von der Braunen Farbe der Kandles der Rauten schale)." Molina (op. cit.) has color morado oscuro.

For nochpalli, Seler (loc. cit.) writes "karmoisinfarbenen (von der Farbe des Nochtzetli, der Kakteu-Schildläuse)."

8. Cf. Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, loc. cit., and Ibid., p. 331.

And when this was done, then he scattered incense. And when he had scattered it, then they gave him his mist rattle board, and he rattled it, he shook it, he raised it as an offering [to the god].

And when they finished, then all departed, [the crowd] broke up, all dispersed and scattered, each one going to his priests' dwelling. [But] the novice priests, them they only took to their houses.

And when they had entered the priests' dwellings, then all put off [their adornments], and sat in order.

And at night, thereupon began and took place a feast, on the top of the Temple of Tlaloc.

The horizontal drum was beaten, flutes were played, conch shells and reed pipes were blown. There was song. The horizontal drums croaked, growled, and droned, and rattles were rattled.

They caused those who were to be slain, the likeness of the rain gods, to spend the night in vigil.

And when midnight came, when night divided in half, then began the slaying. First to be slain were the captives. They became as the fundament [of those who followed]. And when [these] died, thereupon died [the impersonators of] the rain gods.

Then also [was the time] when they burned all the paper offerings, and the quetzal feathers, and various [other] precious feathers; and some of the green stones—well-formed, those which were in no way blemished, which had no defects, as well as some of the green stones which were rough and brown, or dark.

And when they slashed open the breasts [of the victims], when they opened the breast of one of them, they seized his heart; they placed it in a vessel, painted blue, named the cloud vessel, which was painted with liquid rubber on four sides. And it was decked with paper dotted with drops of liquid rubber, with much rubber,—full of rubber.

Thus they did to all the impersonators, and they cast all their hearts there [into the cloud vessel].

And when this was done, at midnight, when they were slain, all the bystanders, who were watching, all had in their hands their wormwood flowers.[27] They walked thrusting [these], hanging with them to and fro, and fanning their children [with them]. It was said that thus they frightened away the worms, that their [children's] eyes might not become wormy. Some put [the flowers] in their ears. Some just walked carrying them gathered in their hands.

Auh in ic iuhquj, njman contepeoa yn jiauhtli: auh yn ocontepeuh, njman conmaca yn aiochicaoztli, concacalatza, conujujxoa, coniyiaoa. 796x

Auh ỹ ontzonquiz, njman ic viujlooa, cecenmanoa, momoiaooa, xitinooa, viuj yn jncacalmecac: auh yn tlamaztoton, çan qujnujujca yn inchachan.

Auh yn onnetecoto calmecac, mec nexixitinjlo, netlatlalilo:

auh yn oniooac njman ic ic peoa, in tlalhujmãmanj, in teycalticpac tlalocan:

teponaçolo, tlapitzalo, ichoatl in mopitza tecciztli, yoan acatecciztli: cujco, yn teponaztli, mjmjlcatoc, nanalcatoc, iuhqujn qujqujnacatoc, yoan aiacacholo: [534] qujntoçauja in miquizque yn imixiptlaoan tlaloque.

Auh yn oacic ioalnepantla yn iquac xeliuj ioalli: mec peoa in micoa, iacattiuj in mamaltin miquj: iuhqujn inpepechoan muchioa: auh yn onmjcque, njman ie ic miq' in tlaloque:

njman no yquac tlatla, yn ixqujch nextlaoalli amatl, yoan in quetzalli, yoan in nepapan tlaçoihujtl: yoan cequj chalchiujtl yn jcucic, yn atle itlaciuiz, yn amo tlaciujce: yoan cequj olchalchiujtl, iaiauhquj, iaiactic, anoço yiauhtic.

Auh yn iquac qujmeltetequj, in ce onpeti yiechiqujuh, conanjlia yn iiollo, contlalitiuj comjc, tlatexoujlli motocaiotia, mixcomjtl, nauhcampa in tlavlxaoalli: auh yn itlaquen amatl tlavlchipinilli, cenca vllo moca vlli: [415] much iuh qujnchioa yn ixqujntin teixiptlaoan, much vmpa contlaztimanj yn jniollo.

Auh yn iquac muchioa ioalnepantla, ynjc mjcoa: yn ixqujchtin tlatlattaque, in tlatlachia, muchi imixtauhiaxochiuh, inmac tetentinemj, qujtlatlaujtzotinemj, sujc qujtlaztinemj, ic mẽcapeujtinemj, yn inpilhoã, qujlmach ic qujnpeujaia in ocujlti, ynic amo yxocujlloaxque: cequjntin in nacaztitlan caaquja, cequjn çan qujmamapictinemj. [755 278]

27. Ixnacatlaoaliztli: ixnacatlaoal is wormwood or salt wort, according to Sahagún, Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 3, p. 79.

776
753

woman with a man, or that otherwise the fasting had been broken.[3]

776
755

And when the sick man suffered greatly, he prayed much to him, he cried out to him, he reached his hand toward him.[4] He said to him:

"O Titlacauan, abate [my suffering] for me. May I do no more for thee—may I no longer hear nor serve [thee]! But if now thou shalt heal me, I vow to thee that I shall serve thee. If I shall gain something for myself, I shall not eat of it of a morning,[5] but do thou come to set it at thy foot. I shall bring it [to thee]."

And the sick man [who was] in sore straits, who might not recover, who could not now end [the suffering], who could now endure no more, sometimes berated [Titlacauan]. He said to him:

"O Titlacauan, thou sodomite! Now that thou takest thy pleasure [with me], slay me quickly!"

Some Titlacauan then healed, not angered by this. And some nevertheless then died for this.

776

And Titlacauan they also named Tezcatlipoca, and Moiocoiatzin, Yaotzin, Necoc iaotl, and Neçaualpilli. And hence was he called Moiocoia[tzin]: that which was in his mind, that which he thought of, he forthwith made. No one invented [anything for him]; none might prevent him. And in the heavens and all the earth around, whomever he wished he might endow; he would enrich him. And whomever he wished, he might afflict. And whenever he might be wroth, or might so wish, or when he was neglectful, he would bring down the heavens above us, and we should perish.

And Titlacauan, [who] extended throughout this world, was therefore besought, called to, and prayed [778] to. And everywhere they set up his sanctuaries, shrines[6a] by the road, at crossroads. Everywhere he was awaited. And in the shrines they had fir branches laid on the five days with which the twenty-day [month] ended.[6] Always they went to do this on each of the [five] days with which each month ended.

Enough.

cioacuchi oqujchtli, yn ac ipan oqujchcuchi cioatl: yoan anoce monecaoalujltequj.

Auh in jquac in cenca tlaihiiouja cucuxquj, cenca qujtlatlauhtia qujtzatzilia, ymac tlatetoroc; qujlhuja.

Titlacaoane, ma oc xinechmocaxaujli, macaocmo iuh njnochioaz, ma onjcaç, ma oc notlaiecul: auh intla oc tinechmopatiliz, moujctzinco njnonetoltia, ma njmjtznotlatlaiecultiliz: intla itla njcnonenextiliz, camo njctlacaquaz, çan mocxitzin ic tiemoquechiliqujuh, nican: njcujcaz.

Auh in cucuxquj cenca tlanauj, yn amo vel pati, yn aoc ontlaiecoa yn aoc vel i: in quenmanjan cahoaia: qujlhujaia.

Titlacaoane, cujlonpole: ie tonmotlatlamachtia, manoço cuele xinechtlatlati:

in cequjntin njman qujnpatiaia amo ic qualanja, y cequjntin tel njman ic miquja.

Auh in titlacaoan, no qujtocaiotiaia tezcatlipuca, moiocoiatzi, iaotzi, necoc iautl, neçaoalpilli: auh ynjc moteneoa, moiocoia, in tlein qujiocoia, in tlein qujlnamjquj, njman qujchioa: aiac qujiocoia, aiac quelleltia: yoan yn ilhujcatl, yoan in jsqujch anacatl tentica, yn aqujn qujnequj qujcujltonoz, qujcujltonoa: yoan yn aqujn qujttitiz, in cococ teupouhquj, qujttitia. Auh yn iqujn moçomaz, immonenequiz, yn jqujn tlatziuiz, qujoalpachoz yn ilhujcatl topan manj, tipopoliuizque.

Auh yn titlacaoa, qujcentzacutimanca yn njca ynic notzaloia, in tlatlauhtiloia in tzatzililoia: auh noviian qujtlalilia yn jchial, in mumuztli in vtlica, in vmaxac, noujian chialoia Auh in mumuzco acxoiatl qujtlaliliaia, ynjc tlamacujlti ilhujtl, ynjc tzonqujça cempoalilhujtl: muchipa iuh muchiuhtiuja, yn jpan cecentetl ilhujtl, ynjc tlantiuh cecempoalilhujtl.

ie ixqujch.

---

3. The corresponding Aztec text of this passage has [illegible] and [illegible], probably means for [illegible] and [illegible].
4. See Pl. 7.
5. In "Tratado de Sahagún" (p. 171, n. 7), Garibay notes that [illegible] may also be more literally rendered "[illegible]; o sea 'comer (durmiendo) a madrugada, etc.'"
In this paragraph, we have [illegible] as [illegible]; it might equally well be [illegible] (I shall sing).
5a. "Vs [illegible]," in the corresponding Spanish. See, however, Molina, op. cit. ([illegible]), and Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, pp 16, 182. The term [illegible] is variously translated.
6. See Pl. 6.

They were painted with white chalk, and with [marks like] hawk scratches. They went naked, with a rope for a breech-clout. They carried on their backs a paper miter-shaped cap, which had a protruding spindle, cotton flowers, and quetzal feathers.[36]

They brought him to Toci's temple where they had placed [the impersonator's] skin upon a wooden bench.[37]

And the costume [of Tetes innan] was as follows: there was liquid rubber on her lips and a circle [of rubber] on each cheek. She had cotton flowers.[38] She had a ball with palm strips. She had a shell-covered skirt, called a star-skirt. She had the star-skirt. Eagle feathers were strewn over her skirt—it was strewn with eagle [feathers]; it had white eagle feathers, painted eagle feathers. Her shield had a golden disc in the center. She carried the medicinal herb, tetzitzilit. She used a broom; she carried a broom.

motiçanique, motolonjuneque, çan papatlaubtiuj, in 776 itetecomatzli: amacalli in quimama, mahualacaquetzalle, 796 ichcauchtlo, hinjquetzalle: [302]

vnqa concaca, in tocitilan: quachtlapecho cuitlalitzia yn 776 jeuxin.

Auh ynjc nechichiouale, motemolcopi, tlaxapuchtli quimodatlalili yn jcamapá ichcauchtlo, çuiatemale, cuchcueie, mocuechcueti: ic mjtoa, citlalli ycue, citlalcueie, quavivih, tetzelitlahquj yn jxipil, quauhtzetzelitlahquj, itzac quavihujio, quauhtuitaçq; yn jchimal, tzucujtlaytizaqo, tetzicxio, popoa, iaquijon.

Ninth Chapter, in which one hundred of the goddess named the Goddess of Zapotlan (Tzapotlan tenan).

[She was] represented as a woman. From her substance was made turpentine.

She healed man's bodies; those with itch of the head;[39] they who were hoarse used the turpentine unguent on the throat; [they used it] who had sores or pimples on the head;[40] or cracks in the skin of the feet, lips, face, hands, or legs; and when it was warm, [it was used for] the tortilla-sickness.[41]

Its oil and its heat were used to advantage in indeed many places.

And when the feast day was celebrated, they who sold the turpentine unguent bought slaves and slew them. They fashioned her image of a dough of amaranth [seeds] and maize.[42] Her old men sang for her; they beat the two-toned wooden drum, and the turtle-shell drum; they rattled rattles shaped like dried poppy-seed pods,[43] and they rattled bone rattles.

Thus was she arrayed: two spots were painted on her face; she had a paper crown; large drops of liquid rubber and small drops were sprinkled over her paper crown, and it had quetzal feathers arranged to resemble corn-tassels. She carried the miter-cardboard.[44]

Jnjc chicunauj capitulo: vncan mocuepa, yn cioatzul, yn jueca Tzapotla tenan.

Ce cioatl, ipan mjtoaia, yn ozitl yuacaio muchioaia:

776 quipalouia yn tonacaio, yn aquja quauocociuj, tonca- 278 mjuocoiuj, motencacoxiuja: chaquachiuj, çuaçoati, tozta- 757 ianj, tontzaianj, iztetçonauj, matetçonauj, ictitzatzaianj, yoan in quaio, yn tlaxcaliciuj:

yn jchiouaca yn jumal vel miecan monequj.

Auh yn jquac ilhujquitilouia, yn ozinamacaqui, motlaca- 776 cauiaia, tlacamjctiaia, qujtocaillotiaia yn jxipda, quicuja- 796 tiaia, yn iuvcioean, qujtepanacilhujaia, caiocuocuaqlia, caiouiaquqlia, caiacachilhuja, oamjchicaocilhuja.

Jnjc nechichiouale omexaoale, amacala, olchachapanqui, tlaolchipinilli yn jumacal, yoan quetzalmjuoaio, xinchicuaco.

36. See Plate 8.
37. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 182, calls it parlor.
38. Cf. text and illus. in MS Biblioteca del Palacio, cited in Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, pp. 482-3, in which these are described as a hand-bread of amaranth seeds.
39. ". . . ueue mazaua, de Indios, o ueruas, que tuuo, en la cabeça" (corresponding Spanish text).
40. ". . . otra enfermedad . . . cui ueuas, que tuuo en la cabeça que se nomo bubas" (loc. cit.).
41. See p. 41, n. 130.
42. Cf. Diego de Durán: Historia de las Indias de Nueva España e islas de Tierra Firme (México: J. M. Andrade y F. Escalante, 1867-80), Vol. II, p. 197.
43. "Ayacachli, semejar hechas a manera de sonajitas" (Molina, op. cit.).
44. Cf. Eduard Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 474; and Einige Kapitel, p. 7—Nahui-Ramillete (cloud-cardboard). The same author, cited in Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. V ("Los cantares de los dioses"), says: "Esta voz (ayachicauali) significa ordinariamente la maraca y, manejada a una sola variedad en el modo de pronunciar, tenia origen de ayachichica-cuali. Servia al instrumento para encantamiento de la lluvia. . . ." (pp. 47-8); "El chicauali, bastón de sonajas, instrumento musical que traen en la mano los dioses de . . . la Lluvia y del Agua. . . . En la procesión de los sacerdotes en la Huitzilpuchli, llevan delante el ayachicauali, sonajas de tecolote. Es el instrumento mágico, con que

the eagle-warrior's crown, the eagle-warrior's dress bordered in red eyes, and a cape of netting with snail-shells.[75] His breast ornament had snail-shells. A mirror-stone in two parts [was painted] upon his face. He was [also] arrayed with a chalky ear-plug; his shield was chalk-covered and had paper streamers. The device for seeing was in his hand. [He sat upon] his stool of reeds and rushes.

yquauhpanteuchil, nacaxix, yxcuchin, ielpaxcuqui cyli 776 tzacatlatlapanqui yn jxaiac: yn jnechichinal, ytiçanacoch, ytiçachinal, amapaio, ytlachiaia ymac catca, ytolicpal, acacpalli.

Sixteenth Chapter, which tells of the god named Little Black Face (Ixtlilton), the earth-stamper (Tlaltecuani).[76]

Jnic castolli vce capitulo ytechpa tlatoa, in teutl yn jxtca, catca, ixtlilton, tlaltecuja.

He was a god, whose temple was made entirely of wood, at a place named Tlacuilocan. Here in his temple were many earthen bowls, covered over. These were called "his black water."

Teutl catca, çan quavitl yn jtenpan catca, ytocaiocan tlacujlocan: in vncan ytenpan, mjec yn apaztli, tzatzacutimanca, motocaiotia ixlilauh. [346]

And whenever a child sickened, they brought him to the temple of Ixtlilton. They uncovered one of the jars and had him drink "his black water." Thereupon the child became whole.

Auh yn aquijn mococoaia, piltontli, vmpa qujujcaia yn jtenpan ixtlilton: centel, qujtlapoaia yn apaztli, conjtiaia yn jtlilauh; ic patia in piltontli. 776 757

When one wished [to arrange] a dance, amid incense, he went and brought [Ixtlilton's] impersonator to his house. It was only a man, who was arrayed [like the god].

Auh yn aquijn qujtotia, copaltica in conanaia, ynic qujvicaia ychan yn jxiptla: çan tlacatl in nuchichionia. 776 535

When they had arrived at his house, where there was to be a dance, food was eaten and thirst was quenched. After eating, Ixtlilton danced. After he had danced, he entered into the house; he uncovered the wine [which] for four days had been covered. This was called the first opening or tapping of the new wine.[77]

Jn oacic ychan, tlatotia, teytotia: njman tlatlaqualo, atlixo: yn otlaqualoc, njman mjtotia, yn jxtlilton: yn omjtoti, yn omonacruh, calitic oncalaquj: ishuxtl qujtlapoa in vctli, navilhujtica tzacuimica: ic mjtoaia, tlaiacazapoela, vitzmana. 776 [273]

Then they began to drink. Again they went out into the court, [and] uncovered "his black water," which also had been covered for four days. On the fifth day they uncovered it.

Niman ye vmpeoa, yn ic tlaoano: oc cepa oalquiça itoalco, qujtlapoa yn jxlilauh, no tzacutimanca navilhujtica: ic macujilhujxtl in qujtlapoa:

If dirt, cobweb, straw, charcoal [were found] upon it, then it was said perchance he was either an adulterer or a thief; or he lived dissolutely, or he lived in vice; or he was a monster, he who had the dance. Thus they confronted and reproached him openly. Thus they said [the god] scowd discord because he revealed and reproached people to others for their sins.

ic mjtoaia, ic motemoaia, intla tlaçolli, yntla tocatzaoalli, yntla tzontli, intla tecolli, vncan vetztoc: ic mjtoaia, açe tetlaxima, açe ichtec, anoço ahavilnemj, mahavilnia: ac açe tlacacemelle, in tlatotia, ic qujmotlaia, qujacomacaia, qujpantia: ic mjtoaia tetzalan, tenepantla motecca: ichica, ca qujteixcomaca, qujteixpantia, ic tuixmotla, yn tetlatlacul. [187]

And when he departed for his house, they gave him a large mantle called ixquen (face-covering).[78]

Auh ynjc oalquiça tachá, quachili yn qujmacaia motocaiotia, ixquen. [292]

Thus was [Ixtlilton] bedight: he was spread over with unguent; his face was covered with soot; about his lips was

Jnic muchichionia, moçac, mocemjxtlilpopotz, mjxticçatlatlali, yn jcamapa: tetepoquachichiquijle, quetzallo, 776

75. For description, see illustrations and text in Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, pp. 515 and 523; and also illustration (Omacatl) —Plate 13.

The term cuachili means the natural cape or mantle, with one small shell located where the cords crossed. The chalcuayal and the macuayal were presumably the same or similar. Seler: Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 5, pp. 79, 82, citing, in the first instance, Sahagún's Historia general, Lib. III, Apendice, cap. 5. In Lib. II (Florentine Codex, fo. 37v), Sahagún refers to "un ornamento de un palmo en quadro, hecho en tela rala, al qual llamavan yxcuchin, creo son unas cuerdas de algodon o las puchas. . . ."

76. God of medicine. Tlaltecuani (or tlaltecuani) is probably formed from tlalli and tecuanini. Cf. Seler: Ewige Kapitel, Vol. I, p. 16.

77. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. I, p. 314: ". . . los que mocomonaxtic hacedaban los magueyes y hacian vino nuevo, que se llamaba octzpli." The Spanish text of the Florentine Codex explains that "es este abrimiento, llamavan tlaiacazapoela, quiere decir, este abrimiento primero, o vino nuevo." On the meaning of omonacruh, see Sahagún, op. cit., p. 37, for a definition of macujilhujxtl.

78. ". . . demanda mihan: los quales llamavan ixquen: que quiere decir, cubrimiento de la cara: porque quedava, amorçagado, aquel que anjo hecho, de fuera. . . ." Loc. cit.

15-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

531

[622
441]

THE CODEX FLORENTINO

expressed in our nursery rhyme: "Rich man, poor man . . ." various other activities, caught with a fresh and humorous eye. Although some of the background details indicate that Spanish influence was already strongly felt a generation after the Conquest, the general details disclose a strong persistence of the Aztec way of life.

[441]

Chief

Merchant

[463]

Lawyer

Doctor

[759]

Women

Sailor, boxer

[502
501]

Ant Bite

[p. 112 (c)]

776 cape-like over-garment. She carried a turquoise-colored weaving-stick.

Seventh Chapter: here is named the goddess called Seven Snake[29] (Chicome coatl).

Chicome coatl—this one represented [and] had in her charge our food,[30] men's livelihoods of whatever sort; their food and drink.

And in this manner was she adorned: her face was painted with red ochre; she had a paper headdress; she wore a shirt [ornamented with] water-flowers[31] and a skirt [ornamented with] water-flowers; also she had foam-sandals;[32] she carried a sun flower shield, a sun shield.

Eighth Chapter: here is named the goddess called the Mother of the Gods (Teteu innan), who is also named Heart of the Earth (Tlalli yiollo) and Our Grandmother (Toci).

She was the mother of the gods. Her devotees were [759] physicians, leeches, those who cured sickness of the intestines, those who purged people, [and] eye-doctors.

[791] Also women, midwives, those who brought about abortions, who read the future, who cast auguries by looking upon water or by casting grains of corn, who read fortunes by use of knotted cords, who cured sickness by removing stones or obsidian knives from the body, who removed worms from the teeth, who removed worms from the eyes.[33]

Likewise owners of sweat-houses prayed to her; wherefore they caused her image to be placed in the front of the sweat-house. They called her "Grandmother of the Baths."

776 And when there was a feast, when it was time for the 796 slaying, the physicians were good to her who impersonated Teteu innan, that she might not weep [nor] whine. They solaced her; they flattered her; they satisfied her caprices; they amused her. They wished her not to weep. They bid [her fate] from her;[34] they made merry with one another about slaughter; they battled; they made war; they cried war-cries as if in battle. There was an array of warriors; insignia were given [and] gifts; the valiant soldiers, adorned with mantles, painted with white chalk, adorned with feathers, surrounded her and took her up.

And when she who was the likeness [of the goddess] was slain, then a man put on her skin as a shirt, and stood between two of his Huitznaua,[35] who accompanied him on either side.

Jnic chicome capitulo: vacua mocemoa, yn cioatzotl: yn jtoca, chicome coatl.

Chicome coatl: ichoatl ipan mjaccaia, qujmjxiptlatiaia, in tonacaiotl: yoan in çaçe tlein yonnoc, yiolca macoualli, ynjoa, ynquale.

Auh yuja ynnochichioale catca; ixtlauhxacale, amacale, axochiavipile, axochiacuaie, no poçulcaque, tonalchimale, tonatiuhchimale.

Jnic chicuei capitulo: vncã mocemoa, yn cioatzotl, yn jtoca: Teteu yonna: no motocaiotia, Tlalli yiollo, yoan Toçi.

Jnnã catca yn teteu, qujmotetutiaja, in titici, in teixtamjnque, tetzinanque, tetlanocujlique, teixpatique.

Auh yn cioa, temjxiouhque, tepillalilique, tetlatlatilique, tlapouhque, atlan teixtanj, tlaolchaiauhque, mocatlapouhque, tetlacujcujlique, tetlanocujlanque, teixocujlanque.

No ichoantin qujtlatlauhtiaia, in temazcalque; ypampa y, quitlalilaia yn jxipela, in temazcalixquac, qujmocaiotiaia, temazcaltoci.

Auh yn jquac, in ie illujqujxtililoia, in ie imjquixtequippa: in ichoantin titici, yn jxipela catca teteu yonna, qujtlaoculpopoloaia, amo vel chocaia, quetelqujxtiaia, qujtlaocnectiaia, qujtlaccnequjltiaia, qujcaceltiaia, haqujchectlaaja, qujtlatlahtitiaia, momjquixquequeloaia, qujnecaliliaia, qujiacchioaia, qujtlacaocnchiliaia, cuiaujaia, tlauimcuilloia, netlauiztmacoia, netlauhtiloia: in qujmjlinhca muchioaia in tiiacaoa, ic quintiçanjaia, ic qujpotonjaia, qujmotmacujlitiuja, ic panj mixquetzaia.

Auh yn jquac omojc, yn jxipda: ujnan ce tlacatl omomqujaia, yn jeoaia, yoanpantla ualmoquetzaia, vnontin ycuexoa, qujujcaia, qujxxtmacuiujia:

29. See Plate 29, which explains the name.
30. Since Chicome coatl was goddess of maize, this section may refer to the various uses of maize, which was basic to Mexican civilization.
31. Cf. Edward Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 446.
32. Although Seler (op. cit., p. 444) uses the term "foam," he cites Sahagún as referring to flowers. Illustrations show the gods wearing, in fact, feathered sandals.
33. Sahagún describes these words in detail. See Angel María Garibay K: "Paralipómenos de Sahagún," in Tlalocan, Vol. II, No. 3 (1947), pp. 233-54.
34. Cf. also Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, pp. 100, 178.
35. Seler, Ewige Kapitel, p. 6. Cf. also Sahagún, op. cit., p. 178, referring to the Tozi festival: "dan delante de ella aquellos sus devotos que se llaman tzontlatlaua."

The eleventh month they named Ochpanizitli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast to the mother of the gods, named Teteo innan, or Toçi, which meaneth "Our Grandmother." They danced in silence for the honor of this goddess, and in great silence slew a woman dressed with the ornaments with which they represented this goddess.

Al vndecimo mes llamauan Ochpanjztli: El primero dia, deste mes, haziã fiesta a la madre de los dioses llamada Teteu inna o Toci, que qujere dezir nuestra abuela: baylauan a honrra desta diosa en silencio y matauan vna muger en gran silencio vestida con los ornamentos que pintauan a esta diosa.

796X [805 776]

Chapter 11
Ochpanizitli

Five days before this month began, all the feasts and merry making of the previous month ceased. Entering this month, they danced eight days without singing and without beating the two-toned drum. These past, there came forth the woman who was the likeness of the goddess whom they name Teteo innan, arrayed with the ornaments with which they pictured the same goddess; and a great number of women came forth with her, especially the medicine women and midwives. And they split into two bands and fought, pelting each other with balls made of tree parasites and from the leaves of the tuna cactus and with balls made from the leaves of reeds, and with flowers which they call cempoalxochitl. This merry making lasted four days.

These ceremonies and others of like kind ended, they brought it about that that woman should not know she was to die, so that she should neither weep nor be saddened; for they held that to be an omen of evil. The night when she was to die having fallen, they decked her very richly, and persuaded her that they were taking her so that some great lord might sleep with her; and they bore her in great silence to the pyramid where she was to die. Having taken her up, one [of the priests] took her upon his back, shoulder against shoulder, and swiftly they struck off her head, and then they flayed her. And a stout youth put on her skin.

This one who wore the skin of the woman whom they had slain they then bore off with great solem-

1. Marginal notation: September 1st this one.

Cap. 11.
Ochpanjztli.

1 b KL Ochpanjztli. b 21
2 c Cinco dias antes que començasse este c 22
3 d mes: cesauan todas las fiestas y regozi- d 23
4 e jos del mes pasado entrando este mes, e 24
5 f baylauã ocho dias sin cantar, y sin f 25
6 g teponaztli: los quales pasados, salia la g 26
7 A muger que era ymagen de la diosa q̃ A 27
8 b llaman teteu inna, compuesta con los b 28
9 c ornamẽtos con que pintauan a la c 29
10 d mjsma diosa, y salian grã numero de d 30
11 e mugeres con ella: especialmente las e 31
12 f medicas y parteras: y partiansе en dos f 1' 13 g vandos y peleauan apedreandose con g 2
14 A pellas de pachtli y con hojas de tunas A 3
15 b y cõ pellas hechas de hojas de espa- b 4
16 c dañas, y con flores que llamã cempoal- c 5
17 d sochitl. Este regozijo duraua quatro d 6
18 e dias. e 7
19 f Acabado estas cerimonjas y otras f 8
20 g desta calidad: procurauan que aquella g 9
muger no entendiesse que auja de morir porque no llorasse nj se entristeciesse porque lo tenjan por mal aguero: venjda la noche en que auja de morir, atauja uanla muy ricamente, y haziãla entender que la lleuauan para que dormjesse con ella algun gran señor: y lleuauanla con grã silencio al cu, donde auja de morir: subida arriba, tomauala vno a cuestas espaldas con espaldas, y de presto la cortauan la cabeça, y luego la desollauan: y con mancebo robusto vestiase el pelejo.

Este que vestia el pelejo desta que matauan: lleuauanle luego con mucha solenjdad y acõpañan-

[534 535] [759] [524 137] [787]

The Thirteenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they called ce itzcuintli, [which] they said was the sign of fire, they held a great festival in honor of Xiuhtecutli, god of fire. In it they offered him much copal [incense] and many quail. They arrayed his image in many kinds of papers and with many rich adornments. Among the rich and powerful, they celebrated a great feast in honor of the fire, in their own houses; they held dinners and banquets in honor of the fire. In this same sign they held elections of lords and consuls, and in the fourth house of this sign they enacted the formalities of their elections, feasts, dances, and gift [giving]. After these feasts, they forthwith proclaimed war against their foes.

La tresena fiesta mouible.

En el signo que llamauan ce itzcuintli: dezian que era el signo del fuego: hazian gran fiesta a honrra de xiuhtecutli, dios del fuego: en ella le ofrecian mucho copal, y muchas codornizes: componjan su ymagen, con muchas maneras de papeles, y con muchos ornamentos ricos: entre las personas ricas y poderosas, hazian gran fiesta, a honrra del fuego, en sus mismas casas, hazian combites, y vanquetes, a honrra del fuego. En este mismo signo: hazian la election de los señores y consules, y en la quarta casa deste sino: hazian la solẽnjdad, de sus elecciones, combites, y areytos, y dones. Despues destas fiestas apregonauan luego la guerra contra sus enemigos.

796x [314] [289 778] [565] [666 431 721]

The Fourteenth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce atl, in the first house of this sign, they celebrated a feast to the goddess of water, named Chalchiuhtli icue. All those who dealt in water celebrated the festival—those who sold water, as well as those who fished, and those who gained other livelihoods which there are in the water. These arrayed her image and laid offerings before her, and revered her in the house called calpulli.

La catorzena fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce atl: en la primera casa deste signo, hazian fiesta, a la diosa del agua llamada chalchiuhtli ycue: hazian la fiesta, todos los que tratauan en el agua: ansi vendiendo el agua, como pescando, como haziendo otras gragerias, que ay en el agua. Estos componjan su ymagen, y la ofrecian, y reuerenciauan, en la casa llamada Calpulli.

[776] [463]

The Fifteenth Common Movable Feast

The lords, leading men, nobles, and rich merchants, when a son or daughter was born to them, paid much heed to the sign, the day, and the hour in which he was born. And of this they forthwith set out to inform the judicial astrologers, and to ask as to the good fortune or ill of the child who was born. And if the sign in which he was born was propitious, they had him baptized at once; and if it was adverse they sought the most favorable house of that sign [in which] to baptize him. When they baptized him, they banqueted the kinsmen and friends, so that they would be present at the baptism, and then they gave food and drink to all the guests, and also to the children of the whole suburb. They baptized him at sunrise in the house of his father. The midwife baptized him, uttering many prayers and performing much ceremony over the child. This [same] feast they also observe today in the baptism of their children, as to feasting, eating, and drinking.

La quinta decima fiesta mouible comũ.

Los señores, y principales, nobles, y mercaderes, ricos quando les nacia algun hijo o hija; tenjan gran cuẽta con el signo en que nacia; y el dia, y la hora en que nacia: y desto yuan luego a ynformar a los astrologos, judiciarios: y a preguntar por la fortuna buena o mala de la criatura que nacia. Y si el signo, en que nacia era prospero, luego le hazian baptizar, y si era aduerso buscauan la mas prospera casa de aquel signo para le batizar. Quando le batizauan, combidauan a los parientes, y amigos: para que se hallassen presentes al batismo: y entonce dauan comjda, y beujda, a todos los presentes, y tambien a los njños, de todo el barrio: baptizauanle, a la salida del sol, en casa de su padre, baptizauale la partera, diziendo muchas oraciones: y haziendo mucha cerimonja sobre la criatura. Esta fiesta, tambien la vsan agora, en los baptismos de sus hijos, en quanto al combidar, y comer, y beuer.

777 787 565 852 [759]

The Sixteenth Movable Feast

As soon as the parents saw that their son was of La sexta decima fiesta mouible.

Despue los padres vian que su hijo era de edad para

584

X 796 Thirtieth Chapter: here are related the feasts and the ceremonies which were performed on the days of the eleventh month, which was named and known as Ochpaniztli.

The eleventh feast was known as "The Sweeping of the Way."[1] At this time the actual feast had not yet arrived. For another five days nothing was done; there was then no activity. And when five days had X 796 passed, then began the hand-waving dance—when there were fifteen days before Ochpaniztli. It was 535 carried on for eight days.

And thus they danced the hand-waving dance: All were arranged in order; four rows were formed; all formed four lines. Thus they danced: They went marching only in circles; their hands were filled with Tagetes flowers and branches, which they went grasping in either hand.

They did not sing; none called out; they went in complete silence.

[273] But if some mischievous youths became drunk, they imitated the ground drums. As the ground drums roared, just so they went about doing. [The dancers] went moving their hands here and there; they moved in equal rows. None broke ranks; none turned [another] from his course; none went astray.

And when the hand-waving dance began, it was already near sundown. And when all ceased, the sun had already set. And when eight days had passed, then began the mock-battle [of the medicine women], which they carried on for four days before the house of song and dance.

X 796 In this manner and in this way proceeded all the [159] medicine women—old women, maidens, and some of the harlots:

They were divided [into two bands. The likeness of] Teteo innan went with a certain number [of them, and] as many more went opposing her, skirmishing against her, [that] thus they might banish her sad thoughts, her sorrow; [that] they might amuse her and cause her to laugh; that she might not be sad. For if she should weep, it was said, it would be an omen of evil. It was said that many men who were dexterous as warriors would die in Injc cempoalli on matlactli capítulo: vncã moteneoa in ilhujtl, yoã in tlamaviztililiztli: in muchioaia in jpã ic cemjlhujtl, ic matlactetl oce metztli: in mjtoaia, in moteneoaia: Ochpanjztli.

Injc matlactetl oce ilhujtl: ichoatl in moteneoa, Ochpanjztli: in aiamo onaci, in vel iquac vel ilhujtl: oc macujlilhujtl, in aiatle muchioaia, in çan oc cactimanj: auh in õquiz macujlilhujtl njmã ic vmpeoa in nematlaxo, iquac in tlacaxitolti ochpanjztli: chicuelhujtl in muchioaia.

Auh injc nematlaxo, netetecpanaloia, nappantioa, nenappantililo: injc mitotiaia, çan nenentivi, tlatlaiaoaloa, cempoalxuchitla mapoxtectli in immac tetẽtiuh, nenecoc in immac qujzitzitzequjtivi:

amo cujcaia, aiac naoatia; çan nõ .ivi:

tel intla cequjntin in telpuchtlaveliloque, in mjrvintia contlaccalhuja in vevetl: in juh caqujzti vevetl, çan no iuh quçhiuhtivi, necoccampa in conjauhtivi imma, çan tecpantivi, çan cemonotivi, aiac chicopetonj, aiac tepatilia, aiac onchicoquiça.

Auh in penaia in nematlaxo, ie teutlac: auh in necacaoaloia ie õcalaquj tonatiuh. Auh in otzonquiz chicuelhujtl: njmã ic vmpeoa in çonecali, navilhujtl in muchioaia: vncan in cujcacalli ixpan.

Ivin in muchioaia, iuhquj in, in muchioaia: in jxquçhtin cioatitici, in jlamatque, yoan in jchpupuchti, yoan cequjntin avienjme:

moxeloaia, monepãtlaxeloaia, iaquj intlan mãtivi, in teteu innan, no iaquj in quinamjctivi, in quçtiiaiavtla, ic quçpopoloftiaia in jtlaocul, quçtlatlacaavileoaia, quçvevetzquçtiaia, injc amo tlaocuiaz; auh in tlachocaz, quçlmach tlatetzaviz: quçl mjec iaumj-

1. Barrendero de caminos, or Guthey's rendering (op. cit., p. 306); der "Wegkehrer," according to Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 171); fiesta barrenderos, in Durán, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 198.

war, or that many women would die in child-bed, when from their wombs [children] would come.

And in this wise did they proceed in the mock-fight: First began [the party of the woman who was the likeness of] Teteo innan to pursue the others. With her were the great medicine [women]. The [first] one [was named] Aua; the second, Tlauitecqui; the third Xoquauhtli. These three were her old women.

In this manner they pursued and pelted the others. Thus they proceeded hurling at them matted tree parasites[2] gathered into balls, and reeds pressed into balls, and cactus leaves, and Tagetes flowers. And all carried tobacco gourds girt to their waists. Once again they fell upon [the others], pelting them as they went. [And] not for long, but for only a few times, were they pursued.

And thereupon they took [her in the likeness of] Toci[3] where she was guarded. For four days they proceeded with their skirmishing.

And when the four days of skirmishing had ended, then, upon the morrow, she tramped over her market place toward sundown. As she came forth, the medicine [women] encircled her. When she was surrounded, then [the priests of] Chicome coatl[4] came out to receive [her who impersonated Toci]. And when they had come forth to receive her, they made a great circle [about her]. And when she was surrounded, then she came into the midst of them. Then she scattered, there, cornmeal. Thereby she tramped over her market place[5] for the last time, as if taking leave of the market place.

And when she had tramped over it, then they took her where she was guarded, at her temple. Much did the medicine [women] console her.

They said unto her: "My dear daughter, now at last the lord Moctezuma will sleep with thee. Be thou happy."

They told her not that she was to die. For verily she was to die unaware. Then they adorned and completely arrayed her.

And when it was midnight, then they led her forth [to the temple]. Then none spoke, none talked, none coughed; [it was] as if the earth lay dead, late at night. And everyone gathered round in the darkness.

And when they came to the place where she was qujx, in quauhtli ocelutl: anoço mjequjntin mocioa- 796 X quetzazque in cioa in jmiti ic iazque.

Auh ivi in, in muchioaia injc çonecalia: achto peoa in teteu innan in tetoca, itlan mantivi in vevei titici. [759] Iehoatl in Aoa: Jnjc vme Tlavitecquj. Injc ei xo-quauhtli. In iehoantin im eirtin y, ilamaiooa:

injc qujntoca, qujntepachotivi: injc qujntepachoa, papachtli ica, tlaolollalilli, tlaoolollalili, yoan toltapa- [824] iolli, yoan nupalli, yoã cempoalsuchitl: yoã muchin-tin imjietecõ ic mocujcujtlalpia: enocuele qujnteputztia, qujntepachotivi: amo vecaoa çan quezqujpa, in ommototoca.

Auh in ie iuhquj, njmã ic qujvica in toci, in vmpa pielo: inin navilhujtl in qujchioaia in mjscali:

auh in otzonqujx in çonecali, navilhujtl: njmã imuztlaioc in qujoalicça itianqujx, ie teutlac: injc oalqujça cololhujtivitze in titici: auh in ie iativitz, njmã ic qujoalnamjquj in chichicomecoa: auh in oqujoalnamjcque njmã ic oallaiaoaloa: auh in ontla-iaoalo, vncã vmmoquetza, in tlanepantla: njmã vncã contetepeoa, tlaoltextli: njmã ic conjcça in jtianqujx, ça iiopa, ça ie cõnaoatia in tianqujztli.

Auh in oconjcçato, njman ic qujvica, in vmpa pielo, in jteupan, cenca qujiollalia in titici:

qujlhuja. Nochputzin, ca iequene axcã motetzinco aciz in tlatoanj Motecuçoma, ma ximopapac-tzinn:

amo qujmachitiaia in jmjqujx, çan iuhquj in ichtaca mjquja: mec qujchichioa, qujcencaoa.

Auh in jquac ie onaci iooalnepantla njmã ic qujvica, çan njmã aiac naoati, aiac tlatoa, anoac tlatlaci, ça iuhqujn tlalli mjctoc: auh ixqujch tlacatl, cenqui-çaia in iooaltica.

Auh in oconaxitique vncã mjqujx: njmã ic qujoal-

2. Spanish bejuco; Tillandsia usneoides L. (Check, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 106).
3. Text: identical with Teteo innan and with Tlaquimil. Cf. Seler, Collected Works, Vol. I, p. 14; Vol. II, Pt. 4, p. 45.
4. Cf. corresponding Spanish text.
5. "A este pasaron llamando amancebajiste del tiempoar porque nunca mas anja de holver a el" (corresponding Spanish text).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

726 heartened by the death or capture of many principal warriors, gave way in an unmistakable manner.[164] Then a precipitate

[164] Besides Tezozomoc, who is so full of details on these fights that it is wasting space to quote him extensively, we find the most concise and reliable statements in Mendieta's "Historia Ecclesiastica Indiana." The descriptions of Mendieta agree perfectly with those of Tezozomoc (less with those of Duran), while the two authors had nothing in common, besides, Mendieta, the revered Franciscan father, terminating his work about 1596, and Tezozomoc, the simple Indian, his MSS. in 1598. Neither of these works were printed previous to this century. Mendieta says (Lib. II, cap. XXVI): "At "the outset they sped stones by slings, and rods like darts. . . . . They also threw "stones by hand. Thereafter they resorted to sword and shield, and the archers went "in at the same time well protected thereby, and thus they spent their ammunition. "The archers from Tehuacan sometimes were so dexterous that they sped two or three "arrows at once with the same precision as one bowman would shoot one alone. Af-"ter the vanguard had spent a good deal of their munition they charged with sword "and dart, the sword being of wood, long, and lined with cutting pieces of flint. It "was tied to the wrist, in order that dropping it they might seize an enemy (as "their main object was to capture men alive) without losing the weapon. They had no "style of fencing, neither did they charge directly, but skirmished and rushed back "and forth. At first one party would turn to flee, as it seemed, the others pursuing, "killing and wounding and capturing all those lagging in the rear. Then the party "fleeing would suddenly turn back upon the pursuers, which fled in turn. Thus they "proceeded as in a tournament ('juego de cañas'), until they were tired, when fresh "bodies moved up to take up the fight. They had well disposed and agile people to "care for the wounded, bringing them to the rear where their surgeons were with the "medicines, healing and nursing them." See also, Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXV), and the Anonymous Conqueror (Col. de Doc., Vol. I, p. 374): "during the fight they shout "and sing, uttering sometimes the most horrid shrieks." (Mr. Prescott speaks of hospitals which "were established in the principal cities." This is doubtful, at least.) The most detailed account of such an engagement is found in Tezozomoc (Cap. LII, p. 84), confirmed in the main by Durán (Cap. XXXVII, pp. 289 and 290), where he describes the disastrous fight of the Mexicans (1479) against the Tarasca of Michhuacan. It appears from the description of the former that during this bloody conflict, lasting a whole day, the different tribes moved up in succession and distinct from each other. There is but one instance of a higher tactical move, and this is found in Tezozomoc also (Cap. XCVIII, p. 93). When the Mexicans sallied against Tlaxcallan: "the gen-"eral Cusuhnochtli commanded that the Chalca should go by one road or path, those "of Aculhuacan by another, the Tecpaneca by another, and the Mexicans in the centre "where the Tlaxcallans were expected to be; all the other tribes extended in order to "take the Tlaxcalteca in the middle" (surround them). Notwithstanding the glowing descriptions of Clavigero, Torquemada, and Ixtlilxochitl, those engagements turn out to be ordinary Indian skirmishes on a large scale, in proportion to numbers, of course, but still after the same principle. These same authors even indicate, involuntarily, that there were less actions of masses, than individual exploits. For instance, Torquemada relates (Lib. II, cap. LXI, p. 183) that the principal chief, dressing himself in the garb of a common warrior, challenged the prominent chieftain of the enemy to single combat and overcame him, which deed decided the fortunes of the day. Ixtlilxochitl ("Hist. des Chichimêques," Cap. XLV) even tells us how a single Tezcucan brave alone fell upon the enemy while his own army was yet at breakfast, and put them all to flight. If such stories are true, they militate strongly against the impression which these same authors would convey to us, of formidable hosts, well organized, opposing each other. A commander, responsible for the fate of tens of thousands committed to his guidance, could not expose his own person in such a manner. Either these stories, or the representation of the numbers engaged, and their tactics, are untrue.

[759] "Surgeons" are mentioned both by Mendieta and Torquemada. The Mexican name of surgeon is "texoxotla ticitl" (Molina, I, p. 35). "Texoxqui" means a sorcerer, and retreat began on one side, and an equally rapid pursuit on the other.[165] The objective point of this retreat was the settlement or "pueblo" of the attacked tribe, but if the vanquished succeeded in placing between them and their pursuers some natural obstacle, like a river, or deep ravine, or if they took refuge upon a wooded range of steep hills, then the victors were arrested, as they seldom ventured to attack when this attack necessitated a strong simultaneous effort on the part of the whole force.[166] Still less could they execute rapid flank-movements. In course of time they might circumvent certain obstacles, but then their supplies were so limited that, if there was no positive indication of success, either in storming the position without great danger, or in carrying it within a very short time by some rude feint, they preferred to desist from further endeavors, and to return home with whatever spoils the battlefield alone had furnished. Thus they "collared"[167] their captives (which had been carefully watched behind the battle-front) and returned to Mexico in moderate triumph, leaving it to future times to proclaim: that such and such a tribe had been subdued by them, whereas they had only defeated it in one engagement, and the tribe had still preserved afterwards its complete independence.[168]

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

"ticitl" a physician or diviner. Both agree very well with the conception of an Indian "medicine-man." There are, besides, evidences that priests went to war also, and I would suggest that it may have been a part of their duties to care for the wounded. A certain class of priests were called "tlamacazqui," certainly derived from "tlama," physician or doctor.

[165] A slow and orderly retreat is a movement hardly known to Indians. They rush either way, advancing or retiring. Even the return of the Mexicans from the unsuccessful onslaught on the Tarasca (Tezozomoc, Cap. LII. p. 84) was as near to a disorderly flight as possible. Durán says (Cap. XXXVII, p. 291): "El rey Axayacatl mandó, "alçar su real, y asi como huyendo y medio afrentado, con la poca gente que le auia "quedada, todo desbaratado y lo mas de la gente herida."

[166] Mendieta (Lib. II, p. 131): "Those who gained the battle continued the pursuit "until the opponents reached some place where they could fortify themselves." Also, Tezozomoc (Cap. XXII, p. 34, and cap. LVII, p. 94).

[167] If, on the battlefield, a captive still resisted, they cut the tendons of his feet, thus rendering him incapable of motion. After the action the prisoners were secured by wooden collars ("cuauh-cozcatl") and thus they were led home in the van of the returning force. Arrived at Mexico they were conducted first to the chief-teocalli, and after prostrating themselves before the idol of Huitzilopochtli, were marched around the great stone of sacrifice. (Compare the relation of Adair, "History of the American Indians," Argument XVI, pp. 165 and 167.—Return of a Chikkasah war party from a foray into Illinois, in 1765.)

[168] Such was the case with Meztitlan (Cap. LVII, p. 94, of Tezozomoc, and Durán, Cap. XL, p. 314). Tizoczic made about 40 prisoners, and returned with the loss of 300 men ("Y que con aquello auian los contrarios recogidose a' sus lugares"). Still it is mentioned by Ixtlilxochitl as subject and tributary to the valley tribes.

761

761 LIFE AND DEATH--theories about life and death; notion of a life force; conception of death (e.g., as natural, as unnatural); beliefs about the causes of death; attitude toward death (e.g., confidence, fear, fatalism); etc. See also:

Theories of health and disease 75
Conception of fate, animistic beliefs, eschatology, and myths about origin of death . 77
Mortality statistics 165
Prescriptions for longevity 886

only misery, poverty, vanity, misfortune, and a life of woe.'

And if one were born at that time he was looked upon with fear; he was shunned. And if he were a man, they named him Nemon, Nentlacatl, Nenquizqui. Nowhere was he counted; he was not a man. And if it were a woman, [they named her] Nenciuatl.

And when [these days came], nothing was done; the palaces and courts were empty; no suits were judged. All stayed at home. None swept with brooms; they only fanned [the dust] with a fan, or a turkey quill, or with the wing of a bird; or they beat and cleaned with a cloak.

And no one might then quarrel; [for] this was strongly forbidden to people; it was severely forbidden to them. They were charged that none might wrangle. Neither might one sleep during the day. [If so,] it was said: "[So] shalt thou always."

Nor should anyone fall, or trip, or stumble. All walked softly. And to one who stumbled, they said: "Thou hast the Nemontemi; so shalt thou be. Be thou careful."

And whosoever then took sick and was ill, [of him] everyone said: "He hath sickened. Never more will he rise; no more may he have hope. That he will recover there is no hope." No longer had they hope for him.

And if one yet escaped [death], neither would any pay heed to him nor speak to him. It was said: "For it is only that he by whose grace we live hath acted and determined of his own will."

None, therefore, were comforted nor moved. His kin forgot him and laid him on the ground. No more might he be able to leave, to some degree get up [again], and take nourishment. For the setting in of the Nemontemi was terrifying.

For he had no day sign; he had no name; wherefore no one might, in truth, practice medicine and heal one, nor read the meaning of the days. For verily the days were not numbered; they had no count in all these four days.

linjliztli, nenquizçaiotl, nenquizçaliztli, ãoneuti-nemjliztli.

Auh in aquin vncan tlacatia, cenca tlamauhcaitihlóia, tlatẽmachililoia: auh intla oquichtli quinca-iotiaia Nemõ, nentlacatl, nenquizquj, acan ompouhquj acã, ompovi nenoquich. Auh intla cioatl: Nencioatl.

Auh in iquac y, atle aioaia, çan cactimãca in tecpan inteccali, amo tecutlatoloia, çan calonoosia; aiac tlachpanaia, ochpaoaztica: çan tlaiecapeviloia, ecaca-oaztica, anoço totolmamaztica, toiolaavitztica, anoço tlavivitequja, tlapopovaia tilmatica:

yoan aiac vel vncan maoaia, cenca tetlacaoaltiloia, cẽca tetlaquauhnaoatiloia, tetepitznaoatiloia, tecocoltiloia injc aiac maoaz: ano ac cemjlhujcochia: vncan teilhujloia. Centicujz:

ano ac vel motlavitequja, moticujnjaia, motepotla-mjaia; nematca, nenemoaia: auh in aquin motepotla-mjaia: quilhujaia. Otimonemovi, ocenticcujc, ma timjmati.

Auh in aquin ipan y, cocoliztli quicuja moco-coosia: muchi tlacatl quitoaia, Concocoliscuj, aocmo quiçaz, aocmo motemachiz, in aço patiz, aocmo tru-meiolloti, aocmo itech ça netemachilli:

auh intla aca oc maquiça, aoc ac itlamatian aoc ac itlatoaian: mjtoa. Ca ça oscnotlama, in jpalnemoanj, ça oquimonomavili, oquimoioçulili:

aocmo iuh catca teiollo, ca oica netlapaloloc, neel-lasquaoaloc, oquizcauhqoc injoaiolquc, ca oiquitecaque: aocmo, iuhcan quizoaiã inon oquẽtelxin, meoatiquetz, inon oihiio quicujc, ca temauhti in ipan opeuh ilhujtl Nemõtemj:

ca atle itonal, ca atle itoca: ipampa aiac vel vncã ticitoca, tepatia, tetlapovia: ca nel amo vmpouhquj, atle ipocallo in jzquilhujtl navilhujtl.

4. The Twenty Calendar (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 36) adds that people did not gather in the temple, and that the priests performed no sacrifices nor other ceremony rite.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

HERE BEGINNETH THE ADDITION TO THE THIRD BOOK, CALLED THE APPENDIX, WHICH TELLETH OF THE SOULS OF THOSE WHO DIED AND OF STILL OTHER SERVICES [RENDERED] THE RULERS.[1]

NICAN VMPEOA IN JANCA, INJC EY AMOXTLI IN ICOTŌCA APENDIZ IN ITECH TLATOA IN JMANJMAOĀ IN OMJCQUE. YOAN OC CEQUJ IN ITLAECOLTILOCA, IN TLACATECUTL.

775 First Chapter, which telleth of the souls of those who died, who went there to the land of the dead; and of how they were buried.

Injc ce capítulo: itechpa tlatoa yn imanjman in miquja in vmpa vía mjctlan, yoan in quenjn tocoia.

[This is] what the natives knew: the old ones and the chiefs. For all who died went to [one or another of] three places when they died.[2]

In juh qujmatia in nican tlaca in vevetque; yoan in tlatoque ca in jxqujchtin miquja. Ezcan in vi, yn iquac miquj.

The first place was there to the land of the dead[3] where dwelt, and was, Mictlan tecutli or Tzontemoc, and Mictecaciuatl, consort of Mictlan tecutli.

Jnjc ceccan vmpa in mjctlan, auh in vncan mjctlan, vncan onec, vncan ca mictlan tecutli, anoço Tzontemoc, yoan in Mictecacihoatl, yn icioauh mjctlī tecutli.

And there, to the land of the dead, went [the souls of] all of those who died here on earth, who died only of sickness—the chiefs, the vassals.

auh in vmpa vi, mjctlī ichoantin, in jxquichtin tlalmiqui, in çan coculiztli ic miqui in tlatoque, in macemalti.

764 And when one died—man, or woman, or child—they thus prayed to him who had died, who had met his end. They spoke to him when still he lay couched and stretched out:

auh in iquac miquia in oquichtli, anoço cihoatl, anoço pilhōtli. auh injc quitlatlauhtiaia in miquja, in moniquiliaia, quilhujaia, in çan oc vezztoc, in çan oc acantoc.

"My son, thou hast known sorrow; thou hast suffered. Our lord hath been good to thee. For in truth [761] here on earth the abode of all of us is not always to be, but it is only for a little time, only a moment, as we warm ourselves [in the sun]. Only through the grace of our lord do we come to know ourselves.

Nopiltze oyhjiotl ticmomachiti, oticmociavilti, omitzmocnelili in totecujo, canel amo njcan tocenchan in tlalticpac, ca çan achitzin ca, ca çan cuel achic, ca çan titotonio ca, çan ipaltzinco titiximatico in totecujo.

"And now, verily, Mictlan tecutli receiveth thee 764 there—Acolnauacatl, Tzontemoc; and Mictecaciuatl. For he hath placed thee in this place; he hath provided thee a seat. 775 Lo, there is the abode of all of us; there is the place where we all come to our fate—there where the earth groweth wide, where forever [all things] end.

auh in azcan ca omitzalmanili in mjctlan tecutli, in Aculnaouacatl in Tzotemoc, yoan in Mjctecacihoatl, ca omitzalmotetzonti, ca omjtzalmoçpalti, canel vmpa tocenchan, vmpa tocenpopolivjian, vmpa tlatlalpatlaoa, ca oiccen onquiz,

"For thou hast removed to the abode of the dead, to the place of descent, to the end of journeys, and to the place of no outlets and no openings.[3] For

ca otonmovicac in quenamjcan, xinocoaian in viloaian, in apochqujiaoaiecā, in atlecalocan, ca ocmo cppa miloch mononcsepol tiechiaua, ca ocmo tiosilla-

1. Tlatoa-ca, in the Aztec column, is probably to be read chocoaca.
2. Not mentioned in the Appendix to Book III is the concept of a special place for women who died in childbirth. See Book IV.
3. Although Sahagún invariably translates ocicioc as infierno, the literal meaning is hard or place of the dead.
3a. The terms apochqujiaoaiecā and atlecalocan might literally be rendered "place without a smoke hole" and "place without a chimney." For elaboration see here and tonquipan.

764 no more mayest thou make thy return, thy way back. Yea, no more mayest thou bethink thyself of what [775] thou hast left behind thee. For much time thou leavest bereft and orphaned thy children and grandchildren. Yea, no more mayest thou bethink thyself how they may end. We go to join with and rejoice with thee after many days."

And behold how they addressed the kin of the dead:

761 "My son, take to thyself and exert all thy force; apply thyself that thou take maize gruel and [thy]
764 half-tortilla.[80] Take courage. Of what avail is what we say? Is it that [our lord] feeleth ill will toward us?—that he mocketh us? Verily, [it is that] our lord hath willed and commanded that he hath already fulfilled his office and reached his end here. What? Couldst thou in truth yet bring it about that he might borrow a little, a day, [here] on earth?

"And although thy heart and body feel affliction and pain, although it is dark there where he lieth alone and awaiteth the commandment of our lord, be of good cheer, and henceforth be sure of thy orphanhood.

764 "What canst thou do, that thou art bereft? My son, use all thy strength; let not thy head hang, like one in grief. For now we have come to strengthen thy heart and thy body by a little. For here is the purpose and office of motherhood, of fatherhood. For our lord hath destroyed [the household]; for thy mothers and fathers have gone, they who well uttered and recounted their consolations and lamentations. And this is enough. Thus [we who are as] thy mothers and fathers have entreated thee. Go in peace."

Then the old men whose office it was prepared the paper vestments. They shredded, cut up, and bound the paper. And when they had prepared the paper adornment, thereupon they arrayed the dead one; they flexed [his limbs]; they poured water upon his head.

They said to him: "Behold that which thou hast enjoyed, that by which thou hast lived on earth."

And then they poured a little water into a bowl, and offered it [to him], and said to him:

"Behold wherewith thou shalt travel."

Then they put [the bowl] in with him, and thereupon they bound him well; they bound firmly upon him [the wrappings for the dead]; they wrapped them round and round him and tied them firmly matiz in monica motepotzco, in macujl in matlac, ca otiquimonjcnocauhteoac, otiquimontlacacauhteoac, in mopilhoan, in mexvioan, ca ocmo tihoallamatiz y çaço quen popoliviaque, ca motech tonacitivi, motech tonpachivitivi, in macujl in matlac.

Auh izcatquj ic qujtlatlauhtiaia in mjccaoa.

Nopiltze ma ixquich xicmanili, ma ixquich motlapal xjcmochivili, ma ximochicaoa, ma ticcauh yn atolatl, in tlapãqui, ma ximelaqtiaoa, quennel tiquitoanj, cujx çan aca ic techcocolia, cujx çan aca ic techqueloa, ca oquimonequilti oquimjtalhuj in totecujo, ca ie vncan ca itzqujuh, ca ie vncã ca itzonqujçaia, quen xoconchioa in ma oc achitzin ca in ma oc cemilhujtzintli conmotlanevianj in tlalticpac.

Auh ynjn tlacuelchoatl ontoneoa, onchichinaca in moiollotzin in monacaiotzin, tlacuelchoatl ontlaioatica in vncan ontlacauhteoac, in vncan ocontlatolchiaia in totecujo, tlacuele centlamjquoconmomachiti in jcnopilotl, quennel timotolinja, nopiltze ma ixquich motlapal, xicmochivili, ma nocuele iuhqujn tlaocoli tocontolo, ca çan nican achitzin, ic ticchicauhtivitze in moiollotzin, in monacaiotzin, ca nican popovi ixtlavi, in naniotl, in taiotl, ca otlanemiuhiantili in totecujo, ca oiaque in monanoa in motsoa, in vel quiteneoaia in vel quijpoaia in choquizio, in ixaioiotlatolli. auh ca ie ixquich, injc mitzmotlatlauhtilia yn monaoa, in motaoa tle ticmatcatzintli.

Niman qujntlachichiviliaia yn amatlamatque, in veveique in machiceque catca: yn amatl quixototlaia, quitetequja quihilpiaia. auh in oquicencauhque in amatlatqujtl, njman ie ic quichichioa in mjcqui, quicocototztlalia, icpac contecca atl, quilhuja. Jzcatquj yn oticmotlamachtico ino ic tinenca tlalticpac.

auh njmã achi contenco contecca in atl, conmaca quilhuja.

Yacatquj injc tonotlatocaz, njman itic conaqueja niman ie ic quiquiquimilloa, quitecuhquimilloa, quitecuhilpia, quicacazilpia in mjcqui njman ie quimamaca, in tamatlaqui, auh in

80. Cf. Seler, op. cit., p. 295. This is the small child's ration as given in Codex Mendoza.

681 And then also at that time[1] died those who were in jail, who were there for something which de-
696 manded the supreme penalty: perhaps an adulterer, or a thief, or a fire priest of whom something had been found out — perchance he had had a paramour — and who was known as an evildoer; or whatsoever sin he had committed. Also of the captives some then died.

643 It was said that through these Moctezuma received life. By them his fate was strengthened; by them he was exalted, and on them he placed the burden. So 761 it was said that it was as if through them once more he were rejuvenated, so that he might live many years. Through them he became famous, achieved honor, and became brave, thereby making himself terrifying.

A 787 And when someone was then born,[2] they feared that the [Goddesses] might at that time descend.
851 But later, on Three Crocodile, he was bathed; then they made his fate somewhat better, for, so it was said, Three Crocodile was a good time.

A 787 And also it was said that he who was then born a nobleman became a sorcerer, an astrologer.[4] That 754 is to say, he was inhuman. He changed himself into 791 something [else]; because of it he turned himself into something [else]. Perchance he had as a disguise a wild beast,[5] etc.

And if [he were] a commoner, likewise it was his work to turn himself into perhaps a turkey, or a weasel, or a dog. Whatsoever was his guise became his magic form. All his task was to assume and accumulate all manner of evil. He influenced women; he bewitched and was clever with women;

Auh yoan no iquac vncā mjquja in quauhcalco onoca, in jtla ic catz, in vei qujtzacutocatca, aço tetlanxinquj, anoço ichtecquj, in anoço tlenamacac, itla oittililoc, aço momecati, in motenecoa tlaçolchiuhque in çaço catle in ovi oqujtlaco: no ichoan in mamaltin, cenpjntin vncan mjquja, mjtoa: ca ichoan inca moncaltiaia in motecuçoma, inca motonalchicaoaia, inca moquetzaia, inca moqujxtiaia, iuh mjtoa: iuhqujn oc ceppa inca mopilqujxtiaia, ynjc vecaoaz, inca motleiotia, momauhçotia, motequantlalia, ic motlamauhtilia.

Auh in aqujn ipan tlacatia, qujmacacia injc vncan temoa: aüh qujn jpan in ei cipactli, maltiaia, vncan achi qujqualtilia in jtonal, iuh mjtoa: ca qualcan in jpan ey cipactli.

No yoan mjtoaia: in aqujn ipan tlacatia pilli, naoalli mochioaia tlâciuhquj, qujtoznequj: amo tlacatl, itla qujmonaoaltiaia, itla ic mocuepaia, aço tequannaoale. Etc.

auh intla macecoalh, no iuhquj itequjuh catca, aço totoli, aço coçamatl, anoço chichi, ipan moqujxtiaia, in çaço tlein inecuepaliz, ynacol mochioaia, muchi itequjuh, qujcenmama, qujcemololoa, in jxqujch tlauelilocaiotl, cioanotzquj, zochica, cjoatlatole, tempochioace, tetlatlacuepili, teiolmalacacho, teiololmala-

---

3. An additional phrase in the Real Palacio M1 will change the meaning somewhat: oyamo mahuiya, ypampa — and when someone was then born, one then was he bathed for they feared. . . .

4. Ángel María Garibay K.: "Paralipómenos fin Sahagún." Tlalocan, II, 2 (1946), p. 171.

5. Ibid., pp. 170-172: "en primer término significó . . . algo así como un 'demonio familiar,' o un 'duende' del alma, a manera del epípolo [sitting a passage in La leyenda de los soles]. . . . De esa primaria significación pasó a la de la 'duplicidad de la persona,' o el 'desdoblamiento.' . . . Se consulta el brujo cuyas de tomar las formas que él quiera, de aparecer en diversos sitios y lugares, de ejercer otras que no son del hombre común: hay en él algo más que hombre: hay en tahuelli poderoso y multiplicado." Derivation of the word may be from tahuali, tahuale, "verbo arcaico, que encontramos en muchos compuestos. Su sentido es en general 'engañar, disimular' y conserva muy bien el significado, como el mago, que con embustes, fundados o sólo subjetivos, embauca a las gente. En Molina hallamos, entre otros, los verbos: tahualoaqui, matar disimulado, con cautela, secretamente: tahualtzitlia, tomar algo a otro con cautela o disimulación; tahualhuchia, sorbar mirando, etc. Cabe dudar, sin embargo, si este verbo es el primitivo de tahuelli o un derivado suyo."

In Hernando Ruiz de Alarcón, Pedro Sánchez de Aguilar, and Gonzalo de Balsalobre: Tratado de las idolatrías, supersticiones, dioses, ritos, hechicerías y otras costumbres gentílicas de las razas aborígenes de México (México: Ediciones Fuente Cultural, 1953), pp. 24 ff., it is said that "se dedicaban al oficio que el demonio les ordenaba para que fuesen lo que llaman tahuelli. . . .

". . . quando el niño nacía, el demonio por el padre expresaba o hacía que sus padres tuvieran con él, le dedica o nombra al animal, que el dicho niño ha de tener por tahual, que es como dicen por duelo de su natividad y orbar de sus acciones o lo que los gentiles llamaban hado, y en virtud deste parto quedó el niño sujeto a todos los peligros y trabajos que padecerá el animal hasta la muerte.

". . . advierte la denominación y significación del nombre tahuelli, que puede derivarse de una de tres raíces que significan: la primera, mandar, la segunda, hablar con imperio, la tercera, ocultarse o robarse, y aunque es conveniente para que se acomodan las dos primeras significaciones, me quedo con la tercera, que es del verbo tahualtia que es amonestar embrujando con algo, que viene a ser lo mismo que robarse, y así, tahuelli dice robaquito, o disimulado debajo de la apariencia del tal animal, como ellos comunmente lo creen."

See also Chap. 31, n. 1, infra.

1 A [i.e., the day One Rain. – Aun'lyst]

Twelfth Chapter, which telleth of still other houses. Some were only indifferent and some were in no way good.

Inje matlactiomome capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, in oc cequj calli, cequj çan tlanepantla ca, cequj vel ujman amo qualli. 787X

The time of the day sign Four Wind was said to be good and bad. For then were slain those called doers of evil, the adulterers. They placed their heads in a noose and choked, strangled, or hanged them, or struck them on the back of the head, or crushed their skulls under a rock. Only at night were they killed; when it thawed, and they were already bloated, they cast them each into the water. Likewise then died some of the captives. Through them, so it was said, Moctezuma received new life (as hath been told) on [the day sign] One Rain, when [the Goddesses] descended. And this was also the time that the [aforementioned] demons and sorcerers destroyed people. And since there was fear on this day sign, Four Wind, everywhere they put cardoon[1] into the smoke openings [of the houses]. They stuffed and crammed it in. Thereby, so it was said, they frightened them away.

!n jpan nauhecatl tonalli, mjtoa qualli, ioan amo qualli, ca vncan mjctiloia, qujnquechtnecanjaia, qujnquechtzonviaia, qujnmecanjaia, qujnpiloa, qujncuecochvivitequj, qujnquatepipitzinja, in moteneoa tlaçolchiuhque, in tetlaxinque, çan iooan in mjctiloia, in oallatvi ie tlacujtlapoçaoa, atlan qujmonmamaiavi. No ioan cequjn vncan mjquja in mamalti, iuh mjtoa: ca iehoan inca motzcaltiaia in Motecuçoma (in iuh omoteneuh) ipan oc qujauitl in vncan temoa: auh ie no vncan tepopoloaia, in omoteneuhque tlatlacateculo, in nanacoalti, auh injc imacaxoia, in ipan in tonalli nauecatl in tlecalco noujian caaqujaia, in tlacateculoxocovitztli, qujpopotzaqujaia, qujcacacatztzaia: iuh mjtoa ca ic qujnpeviaia. 681 684 727 761● 789 824

But the merchants,[2] these known as distinguished traders[3] and vanguard merchants,[4] who were rich, greatly esteemed and honored this [day sign]. For then they laid out in the sun[5] all the precious things which they had hidden away—the green stone, the objects made of [ordinary] green stone and resplendent green stone; the round ones, round like

Auh in iehoantin pochteca, in moteneoa: acxoteca, in oztomeca, in motlacamati, iê qujvetimatia, qujmaviztiliaia, ca vncan qujtotonjaia, in ixquich tlaçotli qujtlatiaia, in chalchiujtl, in chalchiuhtli, in quetzalchalchiuhtli, in ololiuhquj, in tomatic, in acatic, in ie ixqujch cozcatl, in coxcapetlatl, in petlaoac, in pitzaoac, xiujtl: auh in ixqujch nepapan iviitl, iê quetzalli 441 527 556

1. Xocopitzli. — Francisco J. Santamarina: Diccionario general de americanismos (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1942), Vol. II, p. 154: pitzitzin — Bromelia pinguin L. "En México, nombre vulgar de una planta de las regiones tropicales, que crece como un manto de alfombra y crece hasta convertirse en las de la piña. . . . propiedad embarazadora."

2. Tenochtitlán also as "town of Pochtlan," a barrio of Tenochtitlán occupied by merchants, whose gods were: Tlipana, Macuilmalinali, Xihui, Tlaxi, Xilo, Tepanitzinli, Cuyuilitzinli, Chicome xochitl, Xochiquetzal, Yacatecuhtli (Arturo Monzón, op. cit., p. 50). See also Alfonso Caso: Instituciones indígenas precortesianas (México: Instituto Nacional Indigenista, 1954), pp. 23-24, for a résumé of the social and economic importance of the pochteca.

3. Acxotecatl or pochtecahtlahtoani, "mayor o principal entre los mercaderes . . . tanto como si dijéramos que es gobernador de los mercaderes, y entre los mercaderes . . . se entiende el que es mayor principal, gobernador, o señor, o que es casi padre o madre de todos los mercaderes" (Sahagún, Garibay ed., X, 14, 5).

Jens, op. cit., p. 248 (citing Seler, Ges. Ab., II, 68): "eine eingeborene Volksstamm in der südlichen der Seen von Mexiko gelegenen Landschaft Cholco." Acxotlan was a merchant's barrio in Tenochtitlan; gods were: Nosi Ehecatl, Chicomquiauitl, Xoxoucatl, Cochimeti, Yacapitzauac, Macuitl, Chalmecatecuhtli (Monzón, loc. cit.).

4. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, "The Gods," p. 18 and n. 5. Jens, op. cit., p. 328, citing Seler, Ges. Ab., II, 1070: "Mawo ear dem Gros Oztomecatl . . . , der auf Wanderschaft gehende Kleine und Marktschreier zusamt ab der auf quer Reisen gehende Grosskaufmann, auch Kaufmann i. A."

5. Ibid., p. 195.

175
648

Second Chapter, which telleth of the rulers who governed in Tlatilulco when the reign had not yet perished and when, later, once again the Spaniards gave back and restored [it] to them, until the year 1560.

Injc vme capitulo itechpa tlatoa in tlatoque in otlatocatque tlatilulco, in aiamo poliuj tlatocaiotl, ioan in çatepan oc ceppa oqujnmacaque oqujncuepilique españoles in ixqujchica ipan xiujtl de 1560.

The first ruler of Tlatilulco, Quaquapitzauac, who first began [the reign], governed Tlatilulco for sixty-two years. He conquered the people of Tenayuca, and Coacalco, and Xaltocan. When this one then ruled, two rulers of Tenochtitlan came together [one after the other], who were named Acamapichtli and Uitziliuitl.

Injc ce tlatilulco tlatoanj Quaquappitzaoac achto compeoalti tlatocat in tlatilulco iepoalxiujtl omome, qujmpeuh in tenaiocan tlaca, ioan coacalco ioan xaltocan, in iehoatl, y, ic tlatocat qujnnamjcticatca vmentin tlatoque in tenochtitlan in omoteneuhque Acamapichtli ioan vitziliujtl.

The second ruler of Tlatilulco.

Tlacateotl [was] the second, and ruled Tlatilulco for thirty-eight years. It came to pass in his time that all the people of Acolhuacan and those of Coyoacan were conquered.

Injc vme tlatilulco tlatoanj.

Tlacateutl ic vme, tlatocat in tlatilulco, cempoalxiujtl ipan caxtolxiujtl omej, ipan muchiuh injc peoaloc ixqujch aculhoacatl ioan coioacatl.

The third ruler of Tlatilulco.

Quauhtlatoa [was] the third, and ruled Tlatilulco for thirty-eight years. Two rulers, also, came together [one after the other], in Tenochtitlan. These [were] Itzcoatl and Moctezuma the Elder. It came to pass in his reign that the people of Azcapotzalco, and Coaixtlauacan, and Cuetlaxtlan, and Quauhtlinchan, and Xochimilco and all the people of Quauhnauac were destroyed and conquered.

Injc ei tlatilulco tlatoanj.

Quauhtlatoa, ic ei tlatocat in tlatilulco cempoalxiujtl ipan caxtolli omej xiujtl, qujnnamjcticatca no vmentin tlatoque catca in tenochtitlan, iehoatl itzcoatl, ioã veue motecuçuma. Ipan muchiuh injc poliuh injc peoaloc, azcaputzalcatl ioan coaixtlaoacã, ioã cuetlaxtlan, ioan quauhtlinchan, ioan xochmjlco ioan in jxqujch quauhnaoacatl.

The Fourth ruler of Tlatilulco.

Moquiuixtli [was] the fourth, and ruled Tlatilulco nine years. In his time the reign of Tlatilulco came to an end; for he and his brother-in-law, Axayacatl, ruler of Tenochtitlan, quarreled. [The latter] then made war upon Moquiuixtli and the people of Tlatilulco. And this Moquiuixtli of his own will quickly ascended to the summit of a [pyramid] temple, that he might cast himself from there; wherefore he then died.

[762]

Injc nauj tlatilulco tlatoanj.

Moqujujxtli, ic nauj tlatocat in tlatilulco: chicunauhxiujtl, ipã impoliuh tlatocaiotl tlatilulco, inic çan mococolique in jtex axaiaca tlatoanj tenochtitlan, injc qujiauchiuh moqujujxtli ioan tlatilulca. Auh in iehoatl moquiujxtli çan jnoma in tlecotiuetz iicpac teucalli injc vmpa calmomaiauh injc vncan mjc.

Don Pedro Temilo: when he was made ruler of Tlatilulco, he was the one who again started the

Don pedro temjlo icoac omotlatocatlali in tlatilulco, iehoatl ic no compeoalti in tlatocaiotl, in oiuh

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952
NU7 Aztec NU7

539
532
764

—After Paso y Troncoso

13. Roasting maize attracting the Toltecs (Chapter XI)
14. Quetzalcoatl in a drunken sleep (Chapter XIII)
15. Preparation of corpse (Appendix, Chapter I)
16. Burning of corpse (Appendix, Chapter I)
17. Conference with masters of the youths, upon birth of a child (Appendix, Chapter IV)
18. Taking children to the young men's house (Appendix, Chapter V)
19. Tending fires in the song house (Appendix, Chapter V)

[p. 36(E)]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

HERE BEGINNETH THE ADDITION TO THE THIRD BOOK, CALLED THE APPENDIX, WHICH TELLETH OF THE SOULS OF THOSE WHO DIED AND OF STILL OTHER SERVICES [RENDERED] THE RULERS.[1]

NICAN VMPEOA IN JANCA, INJC EY AMOXTLI IN ICOTŌCA APENDIZ IN ITECH TLATOA IN JMANJMAOĀ IN OMJCQUE. YOAN OC CEQUJ IN ITLAECOLTILOCA, IN TLACATECUTL.

115 First Chapter, which telleth of the souls of those who died, who went there to the land of the dead; and of how they were buried.

[This is] what the natives knew: the old ones and the chiefs. For all who died went to [one or another of] three places when they died.[2]

The first place was there to the land of the dead[3] where dwelt, and was, Mictlan tecutli or Tzontemoc, and Mictecaciuatl, consort of Mictlan tecutli.

And there, to the land of the dead, went [the souls of] all of those who died here on earth, who died only of sickness—the chiefs, the vassals.

●164 And when one died—man, or woman, or child—they thus prayed to him who had died, who had met his end. They spoke to him when still he lay couched and stretched out:

[161] "My son, thou hast known sorrow; thou hast suffered. Our lord hath been good to thee. For in truth here on earth the abode of all of us is not always to be, but it is only for a little time, only a moment, as we warm ourselves [in the sun]. Only through the grace of our lord do we come to know ourselves.

164 "And now, verily, Mictlan tecutli receiveth thee there—Acolnauacatl, Tzontemoc; and Mictecaciuatl. For he hath placed thee in this place; he hath pro-
115 vided thee a seat. Lo, there is the abode of all of us; there is the place where we all come to our fate—there where the earth groweth wide, where forever [all things] end.

"For thou hast removed to the abode of the dead, to the place of descent, to the end of journeys, and to the place of no outlets and no openings.[4] For Injc ce capitulo: itechpa tlatoa yn imanjman in miquja in vmpa via mjctlan, yoan in quenjn tocoua.

In juh qujmatia in nican tlaca in vevetque; yoan in tlatoque ca in jxqujchtin miquja. Excan in vi, yn iquac miquj.

Jnjc ceccan vmpa in mjctlan, auh in vncan mjctlan, vncan onoc, vncan ca mictlan tecutli, anoço Tzontemoc, yoan in Mictecacihoatl, yn icioauh mjctlā tecutli.

auh in vmpa vi, mjctlā ichoantin, in jxquichtin tlalmiqui, in çan coculiztli ic miqui in tlatoque, in macegualti.

auh in iquac miquia in oquichtli, anoço cihoatl, anoço piltōtli. auh injc quitlatlauhtiaia in miquja, in momiquiliaia, quilhujaia, in çan oc vetztoc, in çan oc acantoc.

Nopiltze oyhjotl ticmomachiti, otitmociavilti, omitzmocnelili in totecujo, canel amo njcan tocenchan in tlalticpac, ca çan achitzin ca, ca çan cuel achic, ca çan titotonio ca, çan ipaltzinco titiximatico in totecujo.

auh iñ axcan ca omitzalmanili in mjctlan tecutli, in Aculnaouacatl in Tzotemoc, yoan in Mjctecaciuatl, ca omitzalmotetzonti, ca omjtzalmocpalti, canel vmpa tocenchan, vmpa tocenpopolivjian, vmpa tlatlalpatlaoa, ca oiccen onquiz, ca otonmovicac in quenamjcan, ximoouian in viloouian, in apochquijiaouiocā, in atlecalocan, ca ocmo oppa miloch monecuepal tiechioua, ca ocmo tioalla-

1. Tlacatecutl, in the Aztec column, is probably to be read tlacatecuhtli.
2. Not mentioned in the Appendix to Book III is the concept of a special place for women who died in childbirth. See Book IV.
3. Although Sahagún invariably translates mictlan as infierno, the literal meaning is land or place of the dead.
3a. The terms apochquijiaouiocā and atlecalocan might literally be rendered "place without a smoke hole" and "place without a chimney." For discussion see land mesopan.

764 no more mayest thou make thy return, thy way back.
[775] Yea, no more mayest thou bethink thyself of what thou hast left behind thee. For much time thou leavest bereft and orphaned thy children and grandchildren. Yea, no more mayest thou bethink thyself how they may end. We go to join with and rejoice with thee after many days."

And behold how they addressed the kin of the dead:

761 "My son, take to thyself and exert all thy force; apply thyself that thou take maize gruel and [thy]
764 half-tortilla.[20] Take courage. Of what avail is what we say? Is it that [our lord] feeleth ill will toward us?—that he mocketh us? Verily, [it is that] our lord hath willed and commanded that he hath already fulfilled his office and reached his end here. What? Couldst thou in truth yet bring it about that he might borrow a little, a day, [here] on earth?

"And although thy heart and body feel affliction and pain, although it is dark there where he lieth alone and awaiteth the commandment of our lord, be of good cheer, and henceforth be sure of thy orphanhood.

764 "What canst thou do, that thou art bereft? My son, use all thy strength; let not thy head hang, like one in grief. For now we have come to strengthen thy heart and thy body by a little. For here is the purpose and office of motherhood, of fatherhood. For our lord hath destroyed [the household]; for thy mothers and fathers have gone, they who well uttered and recounted their consolations and lamentations. And this is enough. Thus [we who are as] thy mothers and fathers have entreated thee. Go in peace."

Then the old men whose office it was prepared the paper vestments. They shredded, cut up, and bound the paper. And when they had prepared the paper adornment, thereupon they arrayed the dead one; they flexed [his limbs]; they poured water upon his head.

They said to him: "Behold that which thou hast enjoyed, that by which thou hast lived on earth."

And then they poured a little water into a bowl, and offered it [to him], and said to him:

"Behold wherewith thou shalt travel."

Then they put [the bowl] in with him, and thereupon they bound him well; they bound firmly upon him [the wrappings for the dead]; they wrapped them round and round him and tied them firmly matiz in monica motepotzco, in macujl in matlac, ca otiqujmonjcnocauhteoac, otiqujmontlacacauhteoac, in mopilhoan, in motxvioan, ca ocmo tihoallamatiz y çaço quen popolivizque, ca motech tonacitivi, motech tonpachivitivi, in macujl in matlac.

Auh izcatquj ic qujtlatlauhtiaia in mjccaoa.

Nopiltze ma ixquich xiccnanili, ma ixquich motlapal xicmochivili, ma ximochicaoa, ma ticcauh yn atolatl, in tlapâqui, ma ximelaquaoa, quennel tiquitoanj, cujx çan aca ic techcocolia, cujx çan aca ic techqueloa, ca oquimonequilti oquimjtalhuj in totecujo, ca ie vncan ca itequjuh, ca ie vncã ca itzonquçaia, quen xoconchioa in ma oc achitzin ca in ma oc cemilhujtzintli conmotlanevianj in tlalticpac.

Auh ynjn tlacuelehoatl ontoneoa, onchichinaca in moiollotzin in monacaiotzin, tlacuelehoatl ontlaioatica in vncan ontlacauhteoac, in vncan ocontlatolchiaia in totecujo, tlacuele centlamjc xoconmomachiti in jcnopilotl, quennel timotolinja, nopiltze ma ixquich motlapal, xicmochivili, ma nocuele iuhqujn tlaocoli tocontolo, ca çan nican achitzin, ic ticchicauhtivitze in moiollotzin, in monacaiotzin, ca nican popovi ixtlavi, in naniotl, in taiotl, ca otlanemiuhiantili in totecujo, ca oiaque in monanoa in motaoa, in vel quiteneoaia in vel quipoaia in choquizio, in ixaioiotlatolli. auh ca ie ixquich, injc xnitzmotlatlauhtilia yn monaoa, in motaoa tle ticmatcatzintli.

Niman qujntlachichiviliaia yn amatlamatque, in vevetque in machiceque catca: yn amatl quixozotlaia, quitetequja quihilpiaia. auh in oquicencauhque in amatlatqujtl, njman ie ic quichichioa in mjcqui, quicocotoztlalia, icpac conteca atl, quilhuja. Jzcatquj yn oticmotlamachtico ino ic tinenca tlalticpac.

auh njmã achi contonco conteca in atl, conmaca quilhuja.

Yzcatquj injc tonotlatocaz, njman itic conaquja niman ie ic quiquiquimiloa, quitecuhquimiloa, quitetcuhilpia, quicacaxilpia in mjcqui njman ie quimamaca, in iamatlatqui, auh in [20] Cf. Seler, op. cit., p. 395. This is the small child's ration as given in Codex Mendoza.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

about the dead one. Then they laid out his paper adornment in order. And when they had arranged it in order, then they gave it all to him. They placed it as an offering before him and said to him:

ocontlamamacaque, njman ie conmaca centlamantli ixpan cõmana quilhuja. 764

"Behold wherewith thou shalt pass there where the mountains come together.

Yzcatquj inic tonqujçaz in vncan tepetl imonamiquja. 764

"And behold how with this thou shalt pass the road which the serpent watcheth.

auh izcatquj ic itla tonquiçaz in vtli qujpia yn coatl. 775

"And behold wherewith thou shalt pass the green lizard, the xochitonal.

auh izcatquj iqu itlan tonqujçaz, in xoxouhqui cuetzpalin in xochitonal.

"And behold wherewith thou shalt cross the eight deserts.

auh izcatqui ynjc tocontocaz chicuey ixtlaoatl.

"And behold wherewith thou shalt go over the eight hills.

auh izcatquj ic tonquiçaz in chicue tiliuhcan.

"Behold wherewith thou shalt travel the place of the obsidian-bladed winds."

Yzcatquj ic tonquiçaz in itzehecaian.

For there, in that place, the place of the obsidian-bladed winds, it was said that all suffered much. By winds were all the obsidian blades, and stones, borne. And hence, when valiant men died, [their kin] burned all of their baskets with insignia, their shields, their obsidian-bladed swords, and all the things [which they had wrested from] their captives; and all their capes, and all their clothing of whatever sort.

auh in vncan y, ytzehecaian, quil cenca netolinilo, muchi hecatoco in jtztli, yoan in xaltetl, auh ipampa in miquja in oquichtin in jntlavizpetlacal yn jnchimal, yn jnmaquauh, yoã in ixqujchtin ymalteooan, yoã in ixqujch in itilma, yoan in jxqujch in tlein itlatlatqui, muchipan quitlatiaia;

Likewise, [if it were] a woman, all her baskets, her waist bands, her divided cords for holding up the textile, her skeins, her shuttles, her battens, her cane stalks, her combs—also all [this] burned with her.

ça ie no ivi in cihoatl in ixqujch in itana, in ineanaia, yn imecamaxal, yn iquatzõ, yn ixiiouh in itzotzopaz, in ivtlauh, yn iteçacauh ytziquaoaz, no muchi ipã tlatla,

It was said that they would encircle themselves [with these things] and thus be protected in the place of the obsidian-bladed winds, and not suffer greatly. And he who had nothing among his wretched belongings, who went bare, underwent much pain and suffered much in order to pass the place of the obsidian-bladed winds.

quilmach quimotenãtiz, ic mehecatzacuiliz yn itzehecaiã, amo cenca motoliniz. auh yn aq'n atle itlatquitzin içan iuh iauh, cẽca tlaihjiovia cenca motolinja, inic quiça itzehecaian.

And also they caused him to carry a little dog, a yellow one; they fixed about its neck a loose cotton cord. It was said that [the dog] bore [the dead one] across the place of the nine rivers in the land of the dead.

Auh yoã centetl chichiton quivicaltia ieh in coci, concozcatia potonqui icpatl, quilmach quipanaviz chicunaoapan in mjctlan.

And when Mictlan tecutli was reached, he offered up all with which they had adorned the dead ones on earth—the ceremonial papers,[4] the pine incense burners, and bundles of canes [for perfume], loose cotton thread, and red cotton thread, or his cape

auh in iquac onaxioa in jterh mjctlan tecutli, quitlamamaca I tlaticpac in tlein qujnchichivilia mimicque in evilotl, ocotlenamactli, yoan quiqujmiloaia acaquavitl, yoan potonqui, yoan chichilicpatl, aço yulma, anoço ymaxtli. auh in cihoatl icue, ivipil. yoa

4. Ihiltoli: meaning is problematical. In Seler's Einige Kapitel (p. 287, n. 3) this is collected: "ihiltoli—Bekleidung, vgl. Molina ceilolaia— hier eine Bedeutung."

764 775

or his breech clout. And a woman, her skirt [or] her shift, and indeed all her clothing she had left they bound together.

in ie muchi itlathtquj, in oquicauhteoac muchi quiquimiloa,

And when eighty days [had passed], then they burned [these]. Likewise was this done after a year, and after two years, and after three years. And when four years had passed, [then was] the last time that they did [this].[5] in iquac nappoaltica iquac tlatla, no iuh muchioaia yn iquac cexiuhtica. yoan in iquac oxiuhtica, yoan in iquac ieziuhtica: auh in iquac nauhxiuhtica ça cen in conchioa.

And all this, it was said, came to Mictlan tecutli. And when the four years had ended, thereupon [the dead one] went to the nine lands of the dead,[6] [where] lay a broad river.

auh injn quilmach much itech onaci, in Mictlan tecutli: auh in otzonquiz nauhxivitl, njman ie ic iauh in chicunauhmjctlan, icac atl patlaoac,

There the dogs carried one across. It was said that whosoever came walking [to the bank] looked over to the dogs. And when one recognized his master, thereupon he came to throw himself into the water in order to carry his master across. Hence the natives took pains to keep the dogs.

ie vncan in tepanavia chichime, quil in aquin oquiçato ivic oalachia in chichi. auh in oquioalixima yn itecujo njman ie ic oalmomaiavi in atlan injc quipanaviz in itecujo, ipampa in njcan tlaca cenca qujnnemjtiaia in chichime.

And it was said that the white dogs and the black ones, those which were black, could not carry one over the river to the land of the dead. It was said that the white dog said: "I have just washed myself." And one which was black said: "I have just stained myself black." Only a yellow [one][7] could bear one across.

auh quil in iztac chichi. yoã in tliltic, in tlilca quil avel tepanavia yn mjctlan, quil quitoa in iztac ca quin ononnotlapaquili. auh in tlilca quitoa ca quin ononnoçac, çan ye yio in coci vel tepanavia.

And there at the nine lands of the dead, the [dead] were completely destroyed.

auh in vncan chicunamjctlan ẽcã ocempopolioca.

764

And when it came to pass that [the old men] had ornamented [the dead one], then they took him to the fire. And first they slew the little dog; thereupon they burned [the dead one and the dog].

Auh in ie iuhqui yn oquicencauhque, njmã ie quivica in tleco, yoan in chchiton achto conmjctia, njman ie ic tlatla,

Two old sextons took great care of [the dead one]. And some of the sextons stayed singing. And when the body of [the dead one] already was burning, they took great pains with it, they kept packing it down. And the body crackled and popped, and smelled foul. And when it came to pass that they had burned it, thereupon they gathered and heaped up the coals. And they said: "Let him be bathed"; and thereupon they bathed him—they cast water upon him; they sprinkled and poured the water on him. When [the coals] grew cold, once more they gathered up the charred remains, and thereupon dug a round hole in which to place it—a pit, and this they called a cave.

cenca quimocuitlavia in tlalhoaque vmentin, auh in cequjntin tlalhoaque cujcatoque: auh in iquac ie tlatla inacaio cenca qujmocuitlavia quixixiliinemj. auh in tonacaio, tzotzoioca, cuecuepoca, yoan tzoiaia: auh in ie iuhquj in ocontlatique, njmã ie ic collolalia, quitepeuhtitlalia in tlexochtli. Yoan qujtoa ma onmalti, njman ie ic caltia catequja capapachoa, capapatztza, in oceceuh, ie nó ceppa collolalia in tecolli, njman ie ic tlatataca iaoaltic in quitlalia, tlatatactli,

5. Cf. also Seler: Collected Works, II, Pt. 3, pp. 144f. Gómez gives the priests of the underworld were a false mummy bundle of various wood, clothing, and a mask. Similar rites were performed for those who died far from home, or had been taken captive and sacrificed. Seler adds that if query fell in an expedition, the ruler prepared a public feast, in which there were singing and dancing in honor of the dead, and the burning of a mummy bundle, gifts, and belongings of the dead. The feast lasted four days.

6. The nine lands or regions of the dead were thought of as arranged in tiers, or layers, the ninth being the deepest. See Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, IV, pp. 178. The heavens likewise rose in tiers.

7. Red, according to Seler (Collected Works, II, Pt. 3, pp. 144f.). See, however, Kingsborough, p. 298 (yellow).

Thereupon they swiftly filled the pit with the charred remains. There they covered it with earth.

And [this was done with] the noblemen as well as peasants.

When they had burned, they gathered and heaped up the bones, filling a small jar or small bowl [with them]. Upon the bones they laid a green stone. They buried [the bowl] in the home or the tribal temple [of the dead one].[9]

And where they buried [the ashes], they always laid offerings for them.

And when the chiefs and princes died, they laid in their mouths green stones.[9] And those who were only peasants [they provided] only a [common] greenish stone or [a piece of] obsidian. It was said that these became their hearts.

And the chiefs with many things they thus bedizened: their paper adornment which they made [was a] princely paper streamer of either four fathoms' or three fathoms' [length] of papers which they glued one to another. And upon it they hung various feathers—[those of] the heron and the trupial; dark yellow parrot breast feathers; the red arara; quetzal breast feathers; hawk feathers,[10] and yet other feathers.

And some were made [their] companions—the beloved slaves, perchance a score of the men and as many of the women. Thus they said that they were those who cared for their master, and still made chocolate and prepared food for him. And the men they sent as servants, likewise to care for him in the land of the dead.

And when the chief already burned, thereupon they slew the slaves, driving only bird arrows through their throats. They did not burn [with] the chief. Quite separately they buried the slaves, and quite alone the chief burned.[11]

ynjn quitocaiotia ontetl njman ie ic contentiquetza in teculli, tlatatactli vncã contoca. 764 auh yoan in pipilti, yoan in maceoaltin, yn iquac otlatlaque, quipepena quicenquixtia in jnomio, contõco, xoctonco quitentiquetza, in omitl ipan contlalia chalchivitl, quitoca ichan icalpolco.

auh in vncan qujntoca muchipa qujntlamanilia.

Yoan in iqẽ ĩ miquia in tlatoque, yoan in pipilti qujntololtiaia chalchivitl. auh in çan maceoalti, çan texoxoctli, anoço iztli, quilmacia iniollo muchioa. 764 766

auh in tlatoque mjec tlamantli, injc qujnchichioa, yn amatlatquitl quichioaia tecpanitl anoço nãmatl, anoço iẽmatl, amatl quiçaçaloa. yoan itech quipipiloa, in nepapan ihujtl, aztatl çaquan, xollotl, cueçali, tziuhtli, cuixihujtl, yoan oc cequi ihujtl. 766 auh cequjntin tevicalti muchioa in tlatlacotzitzintin, aço cen tecpantli yn oquichtli, no izqui ĩ cihoatl iuh quitoaia in quenjn oquimocuitlavique in jntecujo, yn oc achiviliaia, yn oqu itlaqual chiviliaia, auh in oquichti qujntititlani, çan no iuh quimocuitlavizque in mjctlan:

auh in iquac ie tlatla tlatoanj, njman ie ic qujmomjctia in tlatlacoti, çan totomjtl in quechtlã conaquia, amo yoan tlatla in tlatoanj, çan nonqua qujntoca in tlatlacoti, çan vel yioca tlatla in tlatoanj.

8. Corresponding Spanish text: "en una camara de su casa."

9. See Pl. 15. Quimolotiaia: more literally, "made them swallow."

10. Xolloti: cf. Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, p. 165. See also Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 299, n. 3: "Vergeblich versuchten auptsächlich 'ala' in einer Arara." Tzuihuli and cuquihuitl are identified in the same place in the text.

11. Torquemada (op. cit., pp. 521 ff.) thus describes the funeral ceremonies for a chief: Neighboring towns were notified of the death, and the ceremonies were scheduled usually for four or five days later. Chiefs of nearby towns brought gifts (mantles, feathers, slaves). The body of the deceased was wrapped in mantles and adorned with gold, silver, and jewels. A green stone was laid in the mouth, as heart. Hair was cut from the crown of the head of the deceased and kept in a wooden box with a painting of the god (ornament); a slave was killed in honor of the god. On the mourning bundle were placed the ornaments of the god. A solemn procession, including neighboring chiefs, relatives, friends, wives of the deceased, and dancing priests marched (without beating of drums) to outer other priests at the temple. At the foot of the pyramid, they ignited the pyre of wood and some incense. As the body burned, as many as one or two hundred slaves were sacrificed in the usual manner, and burned in another pyre. These were household slaves (including dwarfs, jesters, and the like) and others presented by visiting dignitaries. Next day, the ashes were gathered, along with the remaining bone previously cut. Friends, relatives, and wives laid offerings before the box. There were four days of such ceremony, after which fifteen or twenty more slaves were sacrificed, since, it was thought, the soul of the deceased had undertaken its travels and was in need of aid. Other slaves—up to a dozen or so—were later killed at the end of twenty, forty, sixty, and eighty days. Yearly observance, for four years, quail, rabbits, birds, and butterflies were offered before the box, along with incense, food, wine, flowers, and some of tobacco. These ceremonies were accompanied by feasting, drinking, and dancing.

[p. 44 is blank]

S: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

The Seventh Chapter telleth of the year counter and the year sign.

Inic chicome capítulo, itechpa tlatoa: in xiuhtlapoalli, in xiuhtonalli.

One Rabbit

It is said [that this was] the year sign and year counter of the south. For thirteen years it carried, set on its path, took with it, and bore the burden [of the year]. Always, during each [of the thirteen] years, it was the first, the one which led, began, made the start, and introduced as many year signs as there were: Reed, Flint, and House. Of the one [known as] Reed, it was said [that it was] as it were the sign of the east; that is, the year sign of the sun. For from there issued the light which shone forth.

And the third year sign, the one [known as] Flint, was called the sign of the north. For [the north] was said to be toward the land of the dead. Thus have the old people spoken: it is said that when one died, to that place set out, went straightway, and proceeded the dead. Therefore, when someone died—when [the sextons] adorned him, when they wrapped him in his mantle and bound him [in wrappings]—they made him look toward and seated him looking to that place.

And the fourth year sign, the fourth in order, [was] the one known as House—the sign of the west. For this reason they named it Cioatlampa: it is said that there dwelt but women; none of us men were there.

These four year signs, year count[ers], as many times as they came to appear, [so many times] they came to be the beginning year signs.

When all the thirteen-year [periods]—all four of them—had concluded, ended, and finished, thus proceeding around, to give and leave their works from year to year, this [last] one came to, stopped at, jogged, knocked against, and ended at Thirteen House, the sign of the west. That is, now it approached [the end of its] thirteen years of labor.

And then One Rabbit came to settle itself as the sign of the south. When this occurred and it established itself and began its work, thus to bear a year

Ce tochtli.

moteneoa: uitztlampa xiuhtonalli, xiuhtlapoalli: 805
matlacxiuitl omei tlauica, tlaotlatoctia, tlatqui, tlamama. In muchipa cecexiuhtica, vel tlaiacatia, tlaiacana, quipeoaltia, ipeuhca muchioa, quitzintia in 823 izquiteri xiuhtonalli in acatl, in tecpatl, in calli. In ichoatl acatl, mitoa: tlapcopa tonalli, iuhquinma, q. n. tlauilcopa xiuhtonalli: ipāpa ca umpa oalneci in tlauilli, in tlanextia.

Auh inic ei xiuhtonalli, ichoatl in tecpatl: moteneoa mictlampa tonalli, ipampa in mjtoa mictlampa: [775] iuh quitoaia in veuetque, quilmach in icoac micoa: vmpa itztiui, vmpa tlamelaoa, vmpa tlatotoca in mimicque. Ichica, in icoac aquin miquia, in oconchichiuhque, in oconquiquimiloque, in oconilpique: [764] vmpa quitlachialtiaia, vmpa quitztiltitimotlaliaia.

Auh inic naui, tlanauhcaiotia, xiuhtonalli: ichoatl in calli moteneoa, cioatlampa tonalli. Ipāpan iuh quitoaia, cioatlampa: quilmach, çan muchi cioa umpa onoque, aocaque toquichtin.

Inin nauhteme xiuhtonaltin, xiuhtlapoaltin: izquiteme ceceppa moquetztiui, tonalpeuhcaiome mu- 805 chiuhtiuj.

Inic muchi matlatlacxiuitl omeci, quitlamja, conxitia, quitzonquixtia nauhteixtin: inic tlaiaoalotiui, quimomacatiui, quimocauiliciui, intequiuh, cecexiuhtica: ichoatl itech onaci, itech ômocaoa, itech oncaopi, itech ontlacxotoaua, ontlamonquixtia in matlactlomei calli, cioatlampa tonalli. q. n. ic ocaxiti in matlacxiuitl omei itequiuh.

Auh niman ic oalmoquetza in ce tochtli: uitz- 805
tlampa tonalli. In icoac, y, moquetza, in quipeoaltia 731
itequiuh, inic ce xiuitl tlauicac, tlaotlatoctia: cenca

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726
[764]

[502]

[764]

—After Paso y Troncoso

86. Burning of Moctezuma's body (Chapter 23). 87. Itzquauhtzin's body is carried away (Chapter 23). 88. Burning of Itzquauhtzin's body (Chapter 23). 89. Spaniards set forth from their quarters in Tenochtitlan (Chapter 24). 90. Spaniards are detected leaving (Chapter 24). 91-93. Flight from Tenochtitlan (Chapter 24). 94. People of Tenochtitlan comfort the Spaniards (Chapter 25).

[p. 44(N)]

Twenty-first Chapter. Here is told [how] war first began, when the Mexicans gave battle to the Spaniards here in Mexico.

And the Spaniards fortified themselves. And the Spaniards also shot at the Mexicans with iron arrows, and fired the guns at them. And then they put Moctezuma in irons.

And all the chieftains who had died [in the temple courtyard] were thereupon taken out and brought forth, and identified. And the mothers and fathers raised a cry of weeping; all wept over them; there was wailing. First they took them to their homes. Later they carried them to the temple courtyard, brought them together there, and burned them together there at the place called Quauhxicalco.[1] But some [were] burned only at the various young men's houses.

And when the sun was about to enter his house, [but] a little sun still [shone], thereupon Itzquauhtzin cried out; on the [palace] roof-top, he called out and spoke: "O Mexicans, O men of Tenochtitlan and Tlatilulco, your ruler, the lord of men, Moctezuma, beseeceth you and saith: 'Let the Mexicans hear! We are not the equals [of the Spaniards]![2] Let [the battle] be abandoned! Let the arrow and shield be stilled! Unhappy [are] the poor old men and women, the common folk, those not yet of understanding — who toddle, who crawl, who lie placed in cradles or on [cradle] boards, those yet untrained!' For this reason doth your ruler say: 'We are not the equals [of the Spaniards]; may [the strife] cease' — because they have shackled him; they have had irons placed on his feet!"

And when he had said this, then they raised a clamor and chid him. The Mexicans became more and more enraged. One, much inflamed by anger, said: "What saith Moctezuma, O fool? [Art thou] not one of his warriors?"[3] Whereupon there was

Inje ompoalli oce capitulo: vncan mjtoa iancuj- 726
can peuh iauiotl, injc qujmjcalque Mexica in Españoles in njcan mexico.

Auh in ichoantin Españoles: njman valmotepetlatzatzacoque. Auh in Españoles no qujnvalmjna in Mexica in jca tepuzmjtl, youan ic qujnvalmotla in tlequjqujztli. Auh njman tepuztli contlatlaliique in Motecuçoma:

auh in jxqujchtin tiacavan in omjcque: njmã ie ic 764
tequjztilo, teçaçaco, teiiximacho. Auh in tenanvan in tetaoan tlachoqujztleua tetchoqujlilo, nechoqujlilo, oc inchachan qujnvicaca, çatepan qujnoalhujcaque in teuitvalco, qujncentlalique: vmpa qujncentlatique, cecnj in jtocaiocan: Quauhxicalco. Auh in cequjntin tlatlaque çan tetelpuchcali.

Auh in ic oncalaqujz tonatiuh, in oc achiton tona- 648
tiuh: njman ie ic valtzatzi in Jtzquauhtzin, tlapanco valtzatzi: qujoalito. Mexicae, tenuchcae, tlatilulcae, amechtlatlauhti in amotlatocauh, in Tlacatecutli in Motecuçoma: qujoalitoa. Ma qujcaqujcan in Mexica, ca amo titenamjcvan, ma motlacavaltican, ma momana in mjtl in chimalli, motolinja in jcnoveve, in jcnoilama in cujtlapilli, in atlapalli in aiamo qujmati in moquequetza, in movilana, in coçultentoc, in vapaltentoc, in aiamo qujmomachitia: ipampa conjtoa in amotlatocauh. Camo titenamjcvan, ma netlacaoaltilo, ca oconteputziotique, tepuztli icxic ocontlatlalilique:

Auh in oconjto in, njmã ie ic conchachalatza, conaoa, çan ie ilhujce tlavelcuj in Mexica qualanj, ce ilhujce poçonj: conjlhuja. Tlein qujoalitoa Motecuçoma neçne? amo ce yioqujchoan? Nimã ie ic tlacaoaca, niman ic maantimoquetz in tlacaoaca:

1. Four places named Quauhxicalco, in the temple square, are mentioned in Book II — The Ceremonies, pp. 168, 170, 171.
2. Corresponding Spanish text: "¿qué somos hombres que somos fuertes como que somos?"
3. Ibid.: "¿Que dice el pues de Moctezuma? Y no soldado eres el, no compañero de guerra?" Hermano, literally, "my friend."

landings of the temple [pyramid];[6] like black ants they tumbled down. And the Spaniards[7] hurled indeed all of them from the temple [pyramid]; none then escaped. And when they had come from dealing death, thereupon [the Spaniards] entered [the palace] and quickly barricaded themselves.

And this happened during the hour of eating.

And when this had come to pass, then it was made known to the people, and [the dead] were taken forth; and when all who had been cast from the temple [pyramid] had been taken out, then all were burned at the various young men's houses.[8] noles vel mochintin qujnteucalhujque in jxqujchtin tlecoca in tiiacoan, vel mochinti moteucalhujque, njman aocac maquijx. Auh in ontemjctico, njman ie ic callacõ valmotzatzacutivetzque. 726

Auh inin muchiuh ie tlaqualizpan: [264] 764

auh in ie iubquj njmã ie ic teixtimacho, teçaçaco: auh in ie muchintin oçacoque in moteucalhujõ, njmã ie ic tetlatilo in tetelpuchcali.

6. See Pl. 83.

7. The slide is omitted in the Nahuatl text.

8. Corresponding Spanish text: "Y luego de dia dio en, comdujerõ a barlo y matar a los que estauan arriba, y muchos dellos se despeñaron por el cu abajo, finalmente todos murieron los que estaua subido al cu turnaronse los españoles a su fuerte y barricaronse muy bien. Los mexicanos enterraron a los que alli murieron porque todo era gente principal y de muchos cuidos en la guerra."

[p. 62 is blank]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955 NU7 Aztec NU7

000

Twenty-third Chapter, in which is told how Moctezuma and a great nobleman of Tlatilulco had died, and how [the Spaniards] had cast their bodies out before the gate — before the gate of the dwelling in which the Spaniards were.

And when four days had passed since all [the chieftains] had been hurled from the [pyramid] temple, [the Spaniards] came out and cast forth [the bodies of] Moctezuma and Itzquauhtzin, who had died,[1] at the water's edge at a place called Teoayoc. For here was a carved stone image of a tortoise;[2] like a tortoise was the representation in stone. And when they were seen and recognized as being Moctezuma and Itzquauhtzin, they then took up Moctezuma in their arms and carried him there to a place called Copulco.[3] Thereupon they laid him on a pyre and then kindled and set fire to it. After this, the flames blazed up; it was as if they roared, as the fire formed tongues which rose like tassels of fire. And Moctezuma's body seemed to lie sizzling, and it smelled foul as it burned.

E32
764
643

Injc cempoalli vmei Capitulo vncan mjtoa in quenjn Motecuçoma, yoan ce vei pilli tlatilulco mjcque: auh in innacaio qujvallazque iqujiaoaioc in calli in vncan catca Españoles.

Auh ie iuh navilhujtl netucalhujloc in qujmontlaçaco in Motecuçoma, yoan Itzquauhtzin, omjcque, atêco itocaiocan, Teoaioc: ca vncan catca in jxiptla aiotl, tetl in: tlaxixintli, iuhqujn aiotl ipan mjxeuhtica in tetl.

Auh in oittoque, in oiximachoque in ca ie Motecuçomatzin, yoan Itzquauhtzin: in Motecuçomatzin njmân qujoalnapalotiqujzque, qujoalhujcaque in vncan itocaiocan Copulco: njman ie ic qujquaquauhtlapachoa, njman ie ic contlemjna, contlequechia: njman ie ic cuecuetlaca in tletl, iuhqujn tetecujca, iuhqujn nenenepiloa tlecueçalutl, iuhqujn tlemjmjiavatl moquequetza, in tlenenepilli: auh in jnacaio Motecuçoma, iuhqujn tzotzoiocatoc, yoan tzoiaia injc tlatla.

---

1. Rafael García Granados points out, in a personal communication, that "concerning the death of Moctezuma various versions exist, but all of them may be included in two large groups: those emanating from the natives and those emanating from the Spaniards. The former maintain that Moctezuma was killed by the Spaniards, and the latter that his death was due to being struck by a rock as he tried to calm his subjects. Among reports of indigenous origin we consider the opinions of Durán, Hist. de las Indias de Nueva España, II, 50 — '. . . le hallaron muerto con una cadena a los pies y con cinco puñaladas en el pecho'; Alva Ixtlilxochitl, Décimo Tercia Relación de la venida de los Españoles, p. 12 — '. . . en donde dicen que uno de ellos le tiró una pedrada de la cual murió, aunque dicen sus vasallos que los mismos españoles lo mataron, y por las partes bajas le metieron la espada'; Acosta, Hist. de las Indias, p. 588 — 'Al rey Moctezuma hallaron los mexicanos muerto, y pasado, según dicen, de puñaladas; y es su opinión que aquella noche le mataron los españoles con otros principales'; Códice Ramírez, p. 199 — estaba muerto, y no faltó quien dijo que porque no le dieron la herida le habían metido una espada por la parte baja'; Orozco y Berra, Hist. Ant. y de la Conquista, IV, 436 — 'Sea cual fuere el modo con que hemos discurrido, lo cierto fué que Cortés mandó dar gracias a los reyes y señores que en su poder estaban'; Sahagún, op. cit., III, 51 — 'hallaron los mexicanos muertos a Moctezuma y al Gobernador de Tlatilulco — echados fuera de las casas reales. . . .' Reports of Spanish origin are given by Díaz del Castillo, Hist. Verdadera, II, 83 — '. . . y le dieron tres pedradas, una en la cabeza, otra en un brazo y otra en una pierna, y puesto que le regalaban se curaba y comiese y le daban cabo ello palabras, no quiso, antes cuando no nos catamos sintimos a decir que era muerto'; López de Gómara, Hist. de la Nueva España, I, 301 — 'que de una [pedrada] que le acertó en las sienes le derribaron y mataron sus propios vasallos'; Cortés, Cartas de Rel., I, 233 — '. . . le dieron una pedrada las mujeres en la cabeza, tan grande, que de allí a tres días murió'; Vázquez de Tapia, p. 39 — '. . . tanto que no le dieron con una piedra, tirada con honda, arremetió de la frente, que luego se sintió muerto'; Aguilar, op. cit., p. 77 — '. . . entre otras piedras que venían determinadas, una redonda como una pelota, la cual dió a Moctezuma cuando entre los dos metido, entre las sienes y cayó'; ibid., p. 78 — 'Moctezuma herido en la cabeza, dió al cuerpo a tres días' . . . y en el aposento donde él estaba había otras muy grandes señores detenidos con él, a los cuales el dicho Cortés con parecer de los capitanes mandó matar, sin dejar ninguno.' Besides these, we have the opinion of Clavijero, which we consider the most reasonable (Hist. Ant. de México, II, 211) — 'Los historiadores mexicanos atribuyen su muerte a los españoles y los españoles a los mexicanos. — Yo no puedo creer que los españoles se determinasen a quitar la vida a un rey a quien debían tantos bienes y de cuya muerte ellos podían esperar grandes males.' Muñoz Camargo, Hist. de Tlaxcala, p. 234, says that he died baptized and that his gaolkeepers were Cortés and Alvarado. — Chimalpahin (op. cit., p. 191 — quimmiquac Españoles y Motecuçomatzin quipoctlaquilitlacuaqueac, the Spaniards killed Moctezuma, strangling him), agrees with the source used by Orozco y Berra.

2. The corresponding Spanish text: un buey, lo cual, galapago — fresh water tortoise. According to Ignacio Alcazar, Apuntes sobre la antigua México-Tenochtitlan (Tlatelolco, D.F.: Instituto Panamericano de Geografía e Historia, 1925), p. 86, it was where now is "la capilla de Guadalupe en Tacuba."

3. Corresponding Spanish text: en oratorio. — The version of this report, in Anales, loc. cit., differs considerably from that of the Florentine Codex.

Cotes, op. cit., identifies Copulco (Copulco) with a barrio adjacent to Tlatilulco, bounded now N. by Calle de Mosquera; E., Gabriel Leyva; S., Mosquera; and W., Landa (formerly a canal).

764 And as it burned, with pure hatred, with little good will, some chid him, and said: "This evildoer! He terrorized the world! In all the world there was dread [of him]; in all the world there was fear and fright before him; this man, when anyone offended him only a little, he then slew. Many he punished for imagined evil, which was not real but only a fabrication of words."[4] And still many who cursed him, grumbled in their teeth, chattered, and shook their heads.

But Itzquauhtzin they went off with in a boat. They proceeded to take his body in a boat, to arrive here at Tlatilulco. They were deeply saddened; their hearts were desolate. All burst into tears.[5] None chid him; none belittled him. They said: "The lord, the commanding general Itzquauhtzin, suffered torments. He, with Moctezuma, underwent fatigue and affliction. How much pain he endured for us since we have come here and tarried during all the time that Moctezuma was [alive]!" Thereupon they set in order the palace flag and the rest of the paper array with which they bedight him, and they laid food before him.[6] And then they took him in order to burn him in the Temple Courtyard at a place called Quauhxicalco. With great honors his body burned.

726 And for four days there was fighting. For only seven more days the Spaniards were contained in their quarters. And when the seven days had passed, [some Spaniards] again sallied forth, going to observe, look about, and arrive there at Maçatzintamalco.[7] They went to gather stalks of green maize; they went to secure green ears of maize. Even as enemies they went to gather the green maize. They were in great haste; they no more than got there, and then quickly returned to enter [the palace]. And when they set out, the sun was high; [on their return, the sun] was setting.

Auh injc tlatlac, çan tlavelpan, aocmo cenca teiollocopa: cequj caoa: qujtoa. Inin tlapalpul: cemanaoac in otlamamauhtiaia, cemanaoac in ooalimacaxoia, cemanaoac in oivic valnemamauhtiloia, valneiçaviloia: in ichoatl in, in aqujn çã tepitzin, injc qujiolitlacoaia, njman contlatlatiaia, mjec in tlapictli oqujtzacujlti in amo nelli in çan tlatolchichiouilli: yoan oc mjectin in caoaia, qujqujnacaia, ôoiovaia, moquaquacuecuechouia.

Auh in Itzquauhtzin conacaihujto, acaltica conanato in jnacaio, injc caxitico njcan tlatilulco, cenca motlaocultique, cenca icnoioac in iniollo, teixziovi-ton, aiac ma cavaia, aiac in ma qujtelchioa: qujtoaia. Oqujniovi in tlacatl, in tlacuchcalcatl in Itzquauhtzin, ca ivan otlaihiovi, yoã omotolinj in Motecuçoma, quexqujch oqujhiovi in topampa in vmpa otivallaque, otioalitztiaque in isqujch cavitl in ocatca in Motecuçoma: njman ie ic qujchichioa in tecpanjtl, yoan oc cequj amatlatqujtl ic qujchichiuhque: yoan qujtlamamacaque: auh njman ic qujvicaque in qujtlatito in teuitvalco, itocaiocan quauhxicalco: cenca tlamaviztililiztica injc tlatlac in jnacaio.

Auh iuh navilhujtl necalioac, ça on chicomjlhujtique in caltzacuticatca in Españoles. Auh in oncic chicomjlhujtl: oc valqujzque ommotlachielito, ommotlatlachielito, vmpa onacito in maçatzintamalco: concujto ovatl, valxiloiocia, çan conisucujto in tequjzvatl, cenca çan onjciuhtivia, çan tequjtl onacito: njma ic valcalactivetzque: auh in oncujzca ie vmmeczcaloa, ie vncalaquj in tonatiuh.

4. Corresponding Spanish text: "dijeron dentro eso de Motecuçoma porque mujo sido muy cruel."

5. Corresponding Spanish text: "los del Cabildo Tlatelolco [illegible] a su gouernador porque no muy bien quisto."

6. See Pl. 82.

7. "Bueno Pequeño y Chiquitopo," according to R. H. Barlow: "Anales de la conquista de Tlatelolco en 1473 y en 1521," Tlatelolco a través de los tiempos, V (1945), p. 40, n. 7; it is also noted that "Tetilolchiel (?) [illegible] la colina en 'el sitio de Almendro.'" The Anales de Tlatelolco (Heinrich Berlin, ed.; México: Antiguo Librería Robredo, 1948), p. 45 (§111), mentions the place in connection with Moctezuma. —In this paragraph, as in many others, is to be noted a great similarity between Sahagún's translation and the Anales de Tlatelolco (§§102, 103). — Rafael García Granados, personal communication.

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

423 they had originally settled, the solid surface was eventually much 311 too small for their numbers, and they themselves put an efficient stop to further growth thereof by converting, as we have seen elsewhere, for the purpose of defence, their marshy surroundings into water-sheets, through the construction of extensive causeways.[80] While the remnants of the original "tecpantlalli" and of the "tlatocatlalli" still remained visible in the gardens, represented to us as purely ornamental, which dotted the pueblo of Mexico,[81] the substantial elements wherewith to fulfil a purpose for which they were no longer adequate had, in course of time, to be drawn from the mainland. But it was not feasible, from the nature of tribal condition, to extend thither by colonization. The soil was held there by other tribes, whom the Mexicans might well overpower and render tributary, but whom they could not incorporate, since the kinships composing these tribes could not be fused with their own. Outposts, however, were established on the shores, at the outlets of the dykes, at Tepeyacac on the north, at Iztapalapan, Mexicaltzinco, and at Huitzilopochco to the south, but these were only military positions, and beyond them the territory proper of the Mexicans never extended.[82] Tribute, therefore, had to furnish the 651 means for sustaining their governmental requirements in the matter
423 of food, and the tribute lands had to be distributed and divided, so as to correspond minutely to the details of their home organization. For this reason we see, after the overthrow of the Tecpanecas, lands assigned apparently to the head war-chiefs, to the military chiefs of the quarters, "from which to derive some revenue, for their maintenance and that of their children."[83] These [80] "Art of War" (pp. 150 and 151). L. H. Morgan ("Ancient Society," Part II, cap. VII, pp. 190 and 191).

[81] Humboldt ("Essai politique sur la Nouvelle Espagne," vol. II, lib. III, cap. VIII, [351] p. 50). Nearly all the old authors describe the public buildings as surrounded by pleasure-grounds, or ornamental gardens. It is very striking that, the pueblo having been founded in 1325, and nearly a century having been spent in adding sufficient artificial sod to the originally small solid expanse settled,—the Mexicans could have been ready so soon to establish purely decorative parks within an area, every inch of which was valuable to them for subsistence alone!

[82] The Mexican tribe proper clustered exclusively within the pueblo of Tenuchtitlan. The settlements at Iztapalapan, Huitzilopochco and Mexicaltzinco were but military stations—outworks, guarding the issues of the causeways to the South. Tepeyacac (Guadalupe Hidalgo) was a similar position,—unimportant as to population,—in the [312] North. Chapultepec was a sacred spot, not inhabited by any number of people, and 764 only held by the Mexicans for burial purposes, and on account of the springs furnishing fresh water to their pueblo.

[83] Tezozomoc (Cap. XV, p. 34). See note 57.

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Granada.[105] It was different, however, in Mexico, where we meet 428 with traces of a decided progress. Not only had descent been changed to the male line,[106] but heirship was limited, to the exclusion of the kin and of the agnates themselves, to the children of the male sex.[107] Whatever personal effects a father left, which were [768 not offered up in sacrifice at the ceremonies of his funeral,[108] they 764] were distributed among his male offsprings, and if there were none, they went to his brothers. Females held nothing whatever, beyond [562] their wearing apparel and some few ornaments for personal use.

The "tlalmilli" itself, at the demise of a father, went to his oldest son, with the obligation to improve it for the benefit of the entire family until the other children had been disposed of by marriage.[109] But the other males could apply to the chief of the calpulli for a "tlalmilli" of their own:[110] the females went with

[105] Gomara ("Historia de las Indios," Vedia I, p. 201). Garcia ("Origen de los Indios," Lib. IV, cap. 23, p. 247). Piedrahita (Parte I, lib. I, cap. 5, p. 27). Joaquin Acosta ("Compendio historico del Descubrimiento y Colonisazion de la Nueva-Granada," Cap. XI, p. 201). Ternaux-Compans ("L'ancien Cundinamarca," pp. 21 and 38).

[106] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120). Gomara (p. 434). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XIII). Zurita (pp. 12 and 43).

[107] Letter of Motolinia and Diego d'Olarte, to Don Luis de Velasco, Cholula, 27 Aug., 1554 ("Recueil, etc., etc.," p. 407). "The daughters did not inherit, it was the principal, wife's son . . . ." Besides, nearly every author designates but a son, or sons,—as the heirs. There is no mention made of daughters at all. In Tlaxcallan, it is also expressly mentioned that the daughters did not inherit (Torquemada, Lib. XI, cap. XXII, p. 348). In general, the position of woman in ancient Mexico was a very inferior one, and but [562] little above that which it occupies among Indians in general. (Compare the description of Gomara, p. 440. Vedia I, with those of Sahagun. Lib. X, cap. I, p. 1; cap. XIII, pp. 30, 31, 32 and 33. The fact is generally conceded). H. H. Bancroft, "Native Races." Vol. II, Cap. VI, p. 234, etc.

[108] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120). Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XLII to XLVIII, pp. 515 to 529). Acosta (Lib. V, cap. VIII, pp. 320, 321 and 322). Gomara (pp. 436 and 437. Vedia, I). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XI., pp. 102 and 103). Clavigero (Lib. VI, cap. XXXIX. "They burnt the clothes, arrows, and a portion of the household utensils . . . . .")

[109] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120), "el cual hacer de testamento no se acostumbraba en esta tierra, sino que dejaban las casas y heredades á sus hijos, y el mayor, si era hombre, lo poseia y tenia cuidado de sus hermanos y hermanas, y yendo los hermanos creciendo y casándose, el hermano mayor partia con ellos segun tenia; y si los hijos eran por casar, entrábanse en la hacienda los mismos hermanos, digo en las heredades, y de ellas mantenian á sus sobrinos y de la otra hacienda." Gomara ("Conq. de Méjico," p. 434). "It is customary among tributary classes that the oldest son shall inherit the father's property, real and personal, and shall maintain and support all the brothers and nephews, provided they do what he commands them. The reason why they do not partition the estates is in order not to decrease it through such a partition . . . . . Simancas M. S. S ("Recueil, etc., etc.," p. 224). "Relative to the calpulalli . . . . the sons mostly inherited."

[110] Zurita (p. 55). "He who has no land applies to the chief of the tribe (calpulli), who, upon the advice of the other old men, assigns to him a tract suitable for his wants, and corresponding to his abilities and to his strength." Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 125).

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

428 their husbands. Single-blessedness, among the Mexicans, appears to have occurred only in case of religious vows, and in which case [589 784] they fell back for subsistence, upon the part allotted to worship, or in case of great infirmities, for which the calpulli provided.[111] No mention is made of the widow participating in the products of the "tlalmilli," still it is presumable that she was one of those whom the oldest son had to support. There are indications that the [587] widow could remarry, in which case her husband, of course, provided for her.[112]

428 The customs of Inheritance, as above reported, were the same ● 764 with chiefs as well as with the ordinary members of the tribe. Of the personal effects very little remained since, the higher the office was which the deceased had held, the more display was made at his cremation, and consequently the more of his dresses, weapons and ornaments, were burnt with the body.[113] Of lands, the chiefs 428 only held each their "tlalmilli" in the usual way, as members of their kin, whereas the other "official" lots went to the new incumbents of the offices. It should always be borne in mind, that none of these offices were hereditary themselves. Still, a certain "right of succession" is generally admitted as having existed. Thus, with the Tezcucans, the office of head war-chief might pass from father to son,[114] at Mexico from brother to brother, and from uncle to nephew.[115] This might, eventually, have tended to perpetuate the [793] [111] Such unmarried females were the "nuns" frequently mentioned by the old writers. We shall have occasion to investigate the point in our paper on "the ancient Mexican priesthood." As attendants to worship, they participated in the tributes furnished towards it by each calpulli, of which we have spoken.

[112] Oviedo ("Hist. gen. y nat de Indias," Lib. XXXIII, cap. LIV. pp. 547-553), reports a conversation with Don Juan Cano, held at San Domingo, 8 of Sept., 1544, in which the said Cano asserts that he married Montezuma's daughter, widow of Quauhtemotzin. There is an indefinite report that, when she married Quauhtemotzin, she was already the widow of Cuitlahuatzin. Intermarriage of widowers and widows took place in Yucatan, but without any ceremony. See Landa, "Relacion de las cosas de Yucatan." Paris, 1864, by Mr. Brasseur de Bourbourg, p. 142, §XXV.

[113] See note No. 108, the same quotations apply to this case. Besides, we refer to the numerous descriptions of funeral rites, or rather cremations, contained, for instance, in Durán, Tezozomoc, Ixtlilxochitl, Veytia, and in Bustamantes "Tezcoco en los Ultimos Tiempos, etc." Also to the cremation of the head chief of Michhuacan, as related by Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XLI. pp. 164-167). We abstain from special quotations, the subject being amply discussed in all the authors just mentioned.

[114] Zurita (p. 12). Gomara (Vedia I, p. 434). Torquemada (Lib. IX, cap. IV. p. 177, Lib. XI, cap. 27, p. 336, etc. etc.).

[115] This fact is too amply proven to need special references. We reserve it for final discussion in our proposed paper on the chiefs of the Mexicans, and the duties, powers and functions of their office.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

582 It is beyond our purpose, at present, to dwell on the [562] ritual details themselves, but we must lay particular stress on the fact, that the wife became the property of her husband and that she was, as such, placed under the direct protection of his kinsmen. Such marriages could be annulled by mutual consent, [586] provided the kin gave its approbation. In such a case the woman was at liberty to marry again, and also to return to the calpulli from which she issued.[110]

● 764 We might now be expected to cast a glance at the funeral rites of the ancient Mexicans since it was one of the attributes of the kin to enjoy common burial.[111] But this question is so intimately connected with that of creed and belief that we refrain from trespassing too much on that field. The Mexicans practised cremation and, in the case of warriors slain in battle, at least, it is known that the exercises were conducted by the officers and leaders of each kin, all its members, and not the special relatives and friends only of the deceased, attending the ceremony.[112] Our knowledge of the burial places of aboriginal Mexico is still very indefi-

583 was given by their hand, out of which there arise great discomforts, and marriage 584 among free persons is not as free as it should be, therefore, we ordain and command: that no Indian principal of whichever condition or rank ("estado,") shall of his own accord or authority give away any wife to anybody whatsoever, nor shall he prevent any Macegual from marrying freely the woman whom he may wish, and who may like him,—under penalty of thirty days of imprisonment, and other penalties which the Judge may determine upon."

("Concilios Provinciales, Primero y Segundo, celebrados por la muy noble, y muy Leal ciudad de México etc., etc. Dedos á Luz el Ilmo Sr. D. Francisco Antonio Lorenzana Arzobispo de esta Santa Metropolitana Iglesia Año de 1769). The "principales Indios" are the officers of the "Kina," and thus we have, thirty five years after the conquest, a formal recognition of the custom among the Mexican Indians that marriage was controlled by the Kin. How the "encomenderos" subsequently interfered with that custom, in order to conceal their own criminal doings, is plainly told by Fray Antonio de Remesal "Historia de la Provincia de San Vicente de Chyapa y Guatemala, etc., etc." Madrid, 1619 (Lib. VII, cap. XV, p. 327).

[110] It is singular that some of the earliest ecclesiastical writers imply that there was no rule of repudiation or divorce among the ancient Mexicans. Mendieta (Lib. III, cap. XLVIII, p. 303). The same authority, however, attributes this to the baneful effects of contact with the Spaniards, in consequence of which the customs of the natives grew more or less dissolute and immoral (p. 304). Burita (p. 97) confirms, and Torquemada (Lib. XVI, cap. XXIV, p. 196), copies Mendieta literally. For the customs of divorce see Burita (p. 97), Mendieta (Lib. III, cap. XLVIII, p. 304), Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XV, pp. 441 and 442). Gomara (Vedia I, p. 440), Herrera (Dec. III, Lib. II, cap. C, XVII, pp. 72 and 73), Bustamante ("Tezcoco," p. 196), and others. The division of property mentioned as accompanying the divorce, applies only to personal effects, since the wife brought nothing else. See "Tenure of Lands" (p. 429, and note 107).

The matrimonial customs of the ancient Mexicans will be more thoroughly discussed by me in another monograph, subsequent to one on "Religious Beliefs."

[111] "Ancient Society" (pp. 71 and 83).

[112] Compare Durán (Cap. XVIII, pp. 154 and 156), and Tezozomoc (Cap. XXV, pp. 37 and 38).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

nite, owing, in part, to the treasure-seeking propensities of the 764
Spanish immigrants as well as to the diligence of the clergy in obliterating all objects to which the aborigines attached superstitious notions.

For the same reason we refrain here from entering into a de- 771 tailed account of the customs of worship. Still we feel obliged to state that the feature of "separate religious rites"[113] so characteristic of society based upon kin, is plainly visible among the ancient Mexicans. There are some very remarkable evidences of this, to which we must allude.

It has already been established at the outset, that each calpulli 618 had "its particular god," which was worshipped, as a tutelar deity, 346 within the territory of that calpulli. Consequently each kin had its particular medicine-lodge or temple.[114] Besides, the last one of the seventy-eight places into which Father Sahagun subdivides the great central "teo-calli" of the tribe, is described by him as follows:

"The seventy-eighth edifice was named calpulli, these were small buildings enclosing the inside of the square, these little houses they called calpulli, and there the principals and officials of [782]
the republic gathered, to do penance for four days preceding each festival occurring at twenty days interval. Their vigils thus lasted four days, during which time some of them ate at midnight and others at noon."[115]

This statement, which is confirmed (according to the learned Jesuit John Eusebius Nieremberg)[116] by the celebrated physician and naturalist Francisco Hernandez, is followed by another one, not less important, also of Sahagun:

"They offered up many things in the houses which they called "calpulli," which were like churches of the quarters, where those of the same gathered, as well for to sacrifice, as for other ceremonies they were wont to perform."[117]

Thus the right of the kin to "separate worship" appears not

[113] "Ancient Society" (p. 71).

[114] Besides the positive assertions of Sahagun (Lib. II, Appendix, p. 211. Lib. I, cap. XIX, p. 31): "se ponian en una de las casas de oracion que tenian en los barrios que ellos llamaban calpulli, que quiere decir iglesia del barrio ó parroquia" and (Lib. II, cap. XXXVII, etc.), we have also the testimony of Durán (Cap. V, pp. 43 and 45, and Cap. IX, pp. 79 and 80), and Oviedo (Lib. XXXIII, cap. X, p. 302).

[115] "Historia general," (Lib. II, Appendix, p. 211).

[116] "Historia naturae," (Lib. VIII, cap. XXII, p. 146).

[117] "Historia general," (Lib. II, Appendix, p. 211. See note 114).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

643 even now to much ruder tribes;[250] and the ornaments and peculiar 644 garments, like the head-dress so very appropriately designated by the Spaniards as a "half-mitre," and other articles already described by us on a former occasion were not worn by him alone, as the "Cihuacohuatl" enjoyed the same privilege.[251] This, and the burial-rites to which we cannot, here, refer in detail,[252]

114 the pueblo of Acachinanco," to the south of Mexico, in the direction of San Antonio
576 Abad, says Bustamante (note a). This was while "Water-Rat" was "chief of men." That the "chief of men" moved alone, or with a small escort only, in the middle of the street, is very natural. He was the head of the official household and the chief war-captain of the confederacy. His particular duty it was, therefore, to greet the strangers. On any ordinary occasion it would have been misplaced, and against all rules of Indian etiquette, for the chief-officers of a tribe to go out to meet them; but in this case, wavering between fear and curiosity, an exception was made. It is worthy of remark that even when the "chief of men" returned at the head of a victorious war-party, the "snake-woman" is not mentioned as sallying forth to greet him in person.

576 [250] This custom of addressing people to whom some deference is due, has been 171 noticed among numerous tribes of America. Among the Mexicans it was not at all an exclusive mark of deference towards the chief-officer. His interlocutors did not look at him, neither did he look at them. See Bernal Diaz (Cap. XCI, p. 96, Vedia II), Clavijero (Lib. VII, cap. XI, p. 479). The latter is particularly important, although he but copies Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. I, p. 388) in the main. As far as other tribes are concerned, I but recall here the Peruvian "Inca." See Francisco de Jerez ("Verdadera Relacion de la Conquista del Perú y Provincia del Cuzco llamada la Nueva Castilla," etc., etc., in Vedia, Vol. II, p. 251), when Hernando Pizarro met Atahualipa for the first time: "los ojos puestos en tierra, sin los alzar á mirar á ninguna parte." Of the Indians of the gulf states of North America, it is said by James Adair ("History of the American Indians," p. 4): "They are timorous, and consequently cautious, ... exceedingly modest in their behaviour." See also on the Northern Indians, Loskiel ("Geschichte der Mission der evangelischen Brüder," Barby 1789, pp. 17 and 18). It would be superfluous to add further quotations.

764 [251] Durán (Cap. XXVI, p. 215, cap. XLIV, p. 357). Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI, p. 87, cap. LXIX, p. 115, etc.). Durán (Lámina 8, Trat. I°).

[252] That the burial of the "Cihuacohuatl" took place after the same manner as that of the "Tlaca-tecuhtli," is proven by the "Codice Ramirez" (p. 67): "Hizieronse obsequias solemnísimas y un enterramiento mas sumptuoso que el de los Reyes pasados, porque todos lo tenian por el amparo, y muro fuerte del gran imperio Mexicano." Durán (Cap. XLVIII, pp. 381 and 382): "el qual despues de muerto, su cuerpo fué quemado y sus cenizas enterradas junto á los sepulcros de los Reyes, haciéndole las exequias conforme á persona tal se debian, de la mesma manera que á los reyes se hacian y sus grandezas pedian." Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XVIII, p. 406): "le hizieron exequias los Mexicanos, con mas aparato y demostracion que á ninguno de los Reyes avian hecho."

In connection with the burial rites it may be in place, here, to refer to a custom easily interpreted in favor of the assumption, that the "Tlaca-tecuhtli" was a monarch. It is the carving, in the live rock at Chapultepec near Mexico, of human shapes commemorative (or at least said to be) of each of these officers, towards the close of each one's lifetime. There can be no doubt as to the existence of such carvings. The last of them, representing "Wrathy chief," was seen by Don Antonio de Leon y Gama ("Descripcion Histórica y Cronológica de las dos Piedras que con ocasion del Nuevo Empedrado que se está formando en la Plaza principal de México, se hallaron en ella el Año de 1790," Segunda Edicion; 1832, Parte Segunda, pp. 60 and 61), as late as 1788 or 1784, when it was destroyed ("picada") by order of the authorities. Another figure, intended for again establishes the equality in rank of both officers, and it also 643 644 dispels the notions of royal etiquette and magnificence with which, more particularly, the figure of "Wrathy chief" (Montezuma) has been surrounded in history.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

The "chief of men" as head of the official household needed 644 many assistants and subordinates. He required stewards for the care of the stores and their daily apportionment.[253] Especially [202] did he need runners for the delivery of his messages. Such officers could be chosen by him and thus far, but no farther, did he enjoy the right of appointing subordinates.[254] But the appointment to a certain duty by the "chief of men," did not confer any hereditary rank or office. On the contrary, it is even probable that most of these posts were filled by outcasts, since this was, properly, the group from which the inferior servants for the transaction of tribal business could be selected without disturbing the balance of power between the kins.

The "Tecpan" being, as we have already stated, the "house of 643 the community," that is the place where the business of the entire 644 344 social cluster (as far as the tribe could represent it) was transacted, and, furthermore, it being proven that the same "tecpan"

"Face in the Water," existed a few years previous to that date. According to Señor Don J. F. Ramirez ("Durán," p. 231, note 1 to Cap. XXXI), disfigured remnants, among which the sign "1 cane" (re-acatl) is plainly visible, can yet be noticed in the rock at Chapultepec on the eastern side of that celebrated hill or isolated bluff. 764

Now it is equally certain, that such carvings were not only commemorative of the "Tlaca-Tecahtli," but also of the "Cihuacohuatl." See Durán (Cap. XXXI, pp. 250, 251). A somewhat different version, is given by Tezozomoc ("Crónica," Cap. XL., p. 68). It is remarkable, however, that comparatively little importance was attached to these funeral monuments. The place of Chapultepec itself, a very striking and conspicuous object and one with which many reminiscences were connected, was viewed as an object of "mellicine." Torquemada (Lib. III, cap. XXVI, p. 303). That particular attention should be paid to the remains of an officer of high rank is very natural. It is found among the Iroquois, L. H. Morgan ("Ancient Society," Part II, Cap. III, pp. 95 and 96. also, "American aboriginal Architecture" in Johnson's Cyclopedia). It would be useless to dwell further on the subject since it will be fully treated of in one of my subsequent monographs.

[253] It is not devoid of interest to notice, that this official household, in full "blast," appears only after the formation of the confederacy. Codice Ramirez (p. 65): "Puso asi mismo este Rey por consejo y industria del sabio Tlacaelel en muy gran concierto su casa y corte, poniendo oficiales que le servian de mayordomos, maestresalas, porteros, coperos, pajes y lacayos. los quales eran sin número. . . . . ." This is not only confirmed by Durán (Cap. XXVI), Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXV and XXXVI), but even by Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LIV, p. 189).

[254] This can easily be inferred from the fact, already established, that all the other kinds of officers of anything like important rank, were elected and not appointed. See also the passage, already quoted elsewhere, of Durán (Cap. LXIV, p. 498), which is very interesting in a general way.

The fourteenth month they named Quecholli. They observed a feast to the god name Mixcoatl. And in this month they made arrows and darts for war. They slew many slaves in honor of this god.

Al quarto decimo mes llamauan Quecholli: hazian fiesta al dios llamado Miscoatl: y en este mes hazian saetas y dardos para la guerra: matauã a honrra deste dios muchos esclauos.

411
796x
[805
776]

Chapter 14
Quecholli

When they made the arrows, for a space of five days all took blood from the ears, and [with] the blood which they pressed out of them they anointed their own temples. They said that they did penances in order to go to hunt deer. From those who did not bleed themselves, they took their capes as punishment. No man lay with his wife on those days; neither did the old men nor the old women drink wine; because they did penance.

At the end of the four days during which they made the arrows and darts, they made a number of very small arrows, and bound them in four's with each [bundle of] four torches. And, a small bundle of the four torches and the four arrows being made, they offered them upon the graves of the dead. They placed also, along with the arrows and torches, two tamales. All this remained for a whole day upon the grave, and at night they burned it and performed many other ceremonies for the dead on this same feast.

On the tenth day of this month, all the Mexicans and Tlatelulcans went to those mountains which they call Çacatepec. And they say that this mountain is their mother. On the day that they arrived, they made huts or cabins of grass, and they lit fires, and nothing else did they do that day.

Next day, at dawn, all forthwith broke fast and set out for the country and formed a great wing, wherewith they surrounded many animals—deer, rabbit, and other animals—and little by little they kept coming together until they rounded up all of them. Then they attacked and hunted, each one what he could.

1. Marginal notation: Necessidad de dar sus.

Cap. 14
Quecholli.

1 f KL. Quando hazian las saetas por espa-
2 g cio de cinco dias: todos se sangrauan
3 A de las orejas y la sangre que exprimjan
4 b dellas: vntauanla por sus mesmas si-
5 c enes. Dezian que hazian penjtencias
6 d para yr a caçar venados: los que no se
7 e sangrauan, tomauanles las mantas en
8 f pena: njngun hombre se echaua con
9 g su muger en estos dias, nj los viejos ni
10 A viejas beujan polcre: porque hazian
11 b penjtencia.
12 c
13 d Acabados los quatro dias en que ha-
14 e zian las saetas y dardos: haziã vnas
15 f saetas chiquitas y atauanlas de quatro
16 g en quatro con cada quatro teas: y assi
17 A hecho vn manogico de las quatro teas,
18 b y de las quatro saetas, ofrecianlas so-
19 c bre los sepulchros de los muertos: pon-20 d jan tambien juntamente con las saetas
f 20
g 21
A 22
b 23
c 24
d 25
e 26
f 27
g 28
A 29
b 30
c 31
d 1'
e 2
f 3
g 4
A 5
b 6
c 7
d 8

y teas dos tamales: estaua todo esto vn dia entero sobre la sepultura, y a la noche lo quemauan: y hazian otras muchas cerimonjas por los defũtos en esta mesma fiesta.

A los diez dias deste mes yvan todos los Mexicanos y Tlatelulcanos a aquellos montes que llaman Çacatepec: y dizen que es su madre aquel monte, el dia que llegauan hazian xacales o cabañas de heno, y hazian fuegos y njnguna otra cosa hazian aquel dia.

796x
[778
342]

Otro dia en amaneciendo luego almorçauan todos, y salian al campo y hazian vna ala grande: donde cercauan muchos anjmales, ciervos, conejos, y otros anjmales y poco a poco se yvan juntando hasta acorralarlos todos: entonce arremetian y caçauan cada a qual lo que podia.

796x
224

796x
[785]

765
796x

Thirty-second Chapter, in which are related the feasts and sacrifices which they made, in the days of the thirteenth month, which was known as, and named, Tepeilhuitl.

The thirteenth feast was known as the "Mountain Feast."

All the digging sticks which were kept in men's houses, and the heavier sticks,[1] made as [representations of] mountains, they covered with a coating of dough of [ground] amaranth seeds.

And their bones were likewise fashioned of a dough of [ground] amaranth seeds, long and cylindrical in shape. Either fish amaranth[2] or chia [was used].[3]

And also they fashioned [images in the form of] mountains for, perchance, one who had died in the water—having drowned—or had been struck by lightning.

And for whosoever had been [thus] slain and not burned but only buried,[4] [to honor him] they also made images of the mountains; they made them all of the dough of [ground] amaranth seeds.

And upon the eve of the feast, toward sundown, they were bathed, their faces were washed.[5] When they [went to] wash them, they went blowing and sounding little clay whistles and little sea shell whistles for [the images].[6]

And they bathed them there at the Mist House; [with] fresh cane shoots they washed their faces. And some [men] washed them only at nearby shores.[7]

And when they had been washed, then the return was made whence they had come; in the same manner they came blowing whistles, with a great din as of shouting. Thereupon were given human form

Inic cempoalli on matlactli omome capitulo: vncan moteneoa in jlhujtl, yoan in nextlaoalli, in muchioaia in jpã ic cemjlhujtl, ic matlactetl omei metztli in moteneoaia, in mjtoaia Tepilhujtl. 796X

Injc matlactetl omei ilhujtl iehoatl in moteneoa tepeilhujtl:

in jzquichtin cocoa im pipialo techachan, yoan in ecatotonti, qujtetepetlaliaia, tzoalli injc qujnpepechoaia: [241] 796X 778

auh in jmomjo muchioaia, çan no tzoalli, mjmjmjltic, aço mjchioauhtli, anoço cócotl:

auh no qujtepetlaliaia, in açaca atlan mjc, in jlaquijlo, in anoçe viteco: [765 778]

yoã in aquin omomjquili, in amo tlatilo, in çan qujtoca, no tepetl ipan qujquixtiaia, çan moch tzoalli in qujnchichioaia: 796X

Auh in oquiuh muztla ilhujtl teutlacpa in teaaltilo, anoço teixamjlo: injc qujmonaltia qujntlapichilitivi, in qujnpichilitivi, cocovikotl, yoan tecciztotonti. [534]

Auh in qujmonaltiaia, vmpan aiauhcalco, acatzontli iehoatl in celtic ic qujmjxamja: auh in cequjntin çan imatenco in qujmonaltia.

Auh in ontealtiloc, mec oaltecuepalo, çã no ivi, [534] 796X 778

1. See corresponding Spanish text. Cap. XIII has: "Amidl ellieron unos trapos de palo grandes como la medida larga Immonadas Estatuas." Of these and of cocoa, Tezozomoc (op cit., Lib. II, p. 279) writes: "Para esta solemnidad, la primera era, hacer unos colodros de palo, ó de cuero de Ardillas, labrandolos las cabezas lo mas pudidamente que sabian. Hacian tambien de trapalos pequeños unos figurillas, á manera de los Muñecos, que acostumbran los Niños, en manera Mexica Española, las quales llamaban Immonas." . . . . Chavigero, op. cit., pp. 166-7, wrote similarly.

2. Mexican Mexicana in Molina, op. cit., Spanish-Nahuatl vocabulary. In this chapter, however, Sahagún refers to mexicanamaranth as yellow amaranth. See also p. 63, n. 28.

3. In the Bolognian ed. of Sahagún, Vol. III, p. 344, Mariano Leon has defined cocoatl as "Tiriesia (Chia de)"; in his study he used the numerical illustrations in Pozo y Tezozomoc's reproductions. Cocoatl is No. 955.

4. Tezozomoc (loc. cit.) further explains: ". . . en necessario de algunos difuntos, en especial de los que se avian ahogado en Agua, ó avian muerto de muerte, que no pudieron ser quemados sus cuerpos, ó fueron enterrados por algunos tiempo."

5. Both Sahagún (corresponding Spanish text) and Seler (op. cit., pp. 198-91) differ from this version. In Sahagún, the people wash the cane upon which the images stood; in Seler, the people are washed.

6. Though the entirely serious to refer to the images, in the Spanish text Sahagún writes: "La cuylla de cada fiesta lavaban a lavar como vasos al rio o a la fuente. . . ."

7. Sahagún (loc. cit.) has: "al agua que pasaba junto a su casa."

[X 776 778] and adorned [the figures]; they molded them [with amaranth seed dough].

And some molded them well into the night. Thus did they fashion them: they daubed liquid rubber upon the faces [of the figures][8] and they laid [a spot of] fish amaranth seed paste upon [each of] their cheeks;[9] they covered them with banners of white paper spattered with liquid rubber, and they fitted upon them paper headdresses and their forked heron feather ornaments. [314 289] qujntlapíchilitivitze, iuhqujn tlacaocativitz, njmã ic ic tetlacatililo, techichioalo qujmpepechoa:

auh in cequjnti oc vecaioan, in qujnpepechoa, injc qujntlacatilia, qujmizolhuja, yoan mjchiouhtli in quimõtlalilia incampan, qujmõquentia in tetevitl, yoan qujmõaquja imamacal, yiaztatzon.

[765] And of those who had died in the water, they placed images only upon circular mats,[10] and made them of a dough of amaranth seed.[11]

Auh in atlan mjquja, çan iaoalco in qujntlaliaia, in jmjxiptla, tasalli in qujnchichioaia.

And when it dawned, then they were set in each one's house, upon reed resting places made of thin, fine reeds; or wide ones; or large, white ones; or hollow reeds.[12] Upon these they placed them.

Auh in otlatvic: mec tetlatlalilo in techachan, tolpepechpan, aço tolpitzaoac, aço tolpatlactli, aztapili, aço axali in impã qujtlaliaia:

And when this was done, when they had set them in order, thereupon they laid offerings before them. They offered them fruit tamales, and chili sauce, or else dog meat, or turkey. And they offered incense to them. [262]

Auh in ie iuhquj, in otecencaoaloc: njman ie ic qujntlamanjlia: in qujnmaniliaia xocotamalli, yoan tlatonilli, anoço itacuinnacatl, anoço totolin: yoan qujntlenamaqujlia.

When this was done, one said [of the figures]: "They are seated in the houses." And if one was rich, there was singing and wine was drunk in their honor; and elsewhere they only brought them offerings.

In jquac in moteneoa cali onoac: auh in netlacamachoia, cujcatilo, yoan tlatlaoanjlilo: auh in cana çan iuquich in qujntlamanjliaia.

And upon the feast day, there died some women, [who were] representations of the mountains.

Auh in jpan in ilhujtl, mjquja cequjntin cioa, imjxiptlaoan Tetepe.

The first was named Tepeuoch; the second, Matlalcueie; the third, Xochtecatl; the fourth, Maiauel, representing the magueyes; the fifth was named Milnauatl. This [last was] a man, representing a serpent. [776]

Injc ce itoca Tepeuoch. Injc vme: Matlalquae. Injc ei: Xochtecatl. Injc navi, Maiavel: ixiptla metl. Injc macujlli: itoca Milnauatl: inin oqujchtli, ixiptlan coatl:

Their array [consisted of] paper headdresses and paper vestments daubed with liquid rubber—with much rubber; a great deal of rubber. And the array and adornment of Milnauatl were in the same manner. [314 289] in jnechichioal, in jmamamacal, in jmamatlaqujj: tlaolhujlli, cenca ollo, moca olli: auh in Milnaoatl, çan no iuhquj in jnechichioal, in jtlatquj:

Early in the morning they started to go, carrying them upon their shoulders on litters. It was said: "They provide them with litters." They went carrying them there. They went there in litters; they carried them in a roundabout procession. Only the women carried [the litters] on their shoulders. They went singing for them. [493] ioatzinco in qujmpeoaltia in qujnnapalotinemj, tlapechtica: moteneoa, qujntlatlapechvia, vncan mamantivi, vncan yicativi in tlapechco, qujntlatlaiaoalochtia: çan no cioa in tlanapaloa, qujncujcatitivi.

8. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "Lo cabaqo de cada un monstro tenia dos caras, una de persona, y otra de caballo. . . ."
9. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 2, n. 15.
10. According to Sahagún (loc. cit.), "vsaban o vsaron hombres de barro, sembrados con yuyos de amaranto."
11. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 22, n. 118.
12. In the Robredo ed. of Sahagún, Vol. III, p. 239, otzalli is explained: "Hay otro que se llama tecuapilli, es muy verde y dicen unos caballeros llamaron como espadillo hombre que se llama otzalli y otros otros dicen que, y cuando se vendo entre los dichos caballeros la entienden."

who did not draw his blood, they stripped him, never more restoring his cape to him. The overseers took it from him for good.

And when the arrows were being formed, no [man] lay with a woman. And the old men drank no wine; they became not drunk; they abstained and left the wine alone.

And when arrows were made, they brought out their measure; all were made of equal length. And the arrow-points were of equal length. None were larger than others; nothing was joined to them.

Thereupon, [when] the reed [shafts] were cut, they went to put them into the hands of those who fitted and put on the arrow-points. Securely they tied the [ends of] the reeds, binding them well with maguey fibres, so that the arrow shafts would not split back. They set [the points] in glue,[1] so that they were held fast, so that they were well embedded.

And when they had [thus] prepared them, then they applied pine pitch to the heads and the ends. This was done quite quickly.

And when they were finished, thereupon they were bound together; they tied them in [bundles of] twenty. And when they were assembled, then everyone was arranged in rows, all ordered in line, in procession, to leave [the bundles] there at the foot of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli. There they heaped [the bundles] together. And when they had come to make [this] offering, then all departed [to their homes].

And the fourth day was called "Arrows are made for the homes." All men made arrows in their homes. Thus all passed the time; thus all tried [their skill] and practised, having set up, at a distance, [the leaf of a] maguey plant, which they shot with arrows. Hence were apparent those who were good marksmen, the able bowmen, those who could well wield the bow.

And upon the fifth day, one was concerned only with the dead. For them they made small arrows, each one measuring a hand's length, and put upon them only a little resin. And their points were only sticks. They bound four arrows and four pine torches with loose cotton thread, and laid them where the dead lay buried. And they placed [there] two sweet tamales. There [they remained] all day. And at sundown they thereupon burned them for [the dead] in the same place. There they set them on fire.

in amo mjçe quipepetlaoaia, socmo quimaca in jtilma, iccen quitquilia in tepãmanj. 796[x]

Auh in jquac tlacatia mjtl, aiac cioacochia: auh in vevetque, amo quja in vctli, amo tlaoanaia, motlacoaltiaia, quimocaoaltiaia in vctli. [834] 273]

Auh in muchioaia mjtl, oalquiça itamachiuhca, çan muchixquich, in muchioaia: auh in tlaxichtli, çã muchixquich, atle chicoviac, atle tlapaniliaia:

njmã ie ic tlateco in acatl, inmac quioallaztivi, in tlatlaxichaquia in quitlaxichaquia, vel quichtecuja in acatl, vel ichtica quitetecuja, injc amo cuitlatzaianjz in tlaxichtli: tzacupã in cõquetza, injc vel tilinja, injc vel tzitzicas. 796[x] 411 [283] [381]

Auh in ocõcencauhque: njmã ie ic cocotzovia, in jquac, yoan itzintlan, çan icinhcã muchioa. [314]

Auh in oiecauh, njmã ie ic tlacuitlalpilo, cecempoalli in mocuitlaipia: auh in otlacenquiz, njmã ie ic onnetecpanaka, onnevipanolo, oncempanoioa in mocaoaz in vmpa icxitlan Vitzilobuchtli, vncan concentecpichoa: auh in õmomamanato, njmã ic vivilioa.

Auh injc navilhuitl, mjtoaia, calpãnemjtilo, iquich tlacatl momjtiaia intechachan, çan iuhquj injc navilticlo, tel ic neiciecoloia, ic nemamachtiloia: ce veca quioalquetzaia metl, quimjmjna, vncan neci in aquiçue vel quimaiavi, in vel momaimati, in vellamjna. 796[x] 526

Auh injc macuilhuitl, çe mjacaviaia in mjmjcque, quimchichiviliaia, mjtotonti, çeçemjatitl, no achitonn ic conococtzovia: auh in jtlaxichio, çan tlacotl: navi mjtl, no navi ocotl, concuitlalpia ica petonquj, impã contetema, in vncan tocxitoque, mjmjcque: yoan ontetl tzopelic tamalli, contetema, vncan omjlhujtia: auh in ie oncalaquj tonatiuh, njmon ie ic quintlatlaxilia, in çan ie no vncan: vncan contlecavia: 796[x] 765

1. Cf. Sahagún (Bulmarde ed.), Vol. III, pp. 341, 399.

I 796 And when they had burned, they there buried their [766] charcoal and ashes.

And of those slain in battle, their streamers, their costly banners, their shields, and their capes, and their breech clouts they placed upon a dry maize stalk, tied on. From it hung loose twisted, red cotton [237] thread. At its end there hung a [dead] hummingbird, and four hundred [white] heron [feathers]. Many cords were pasted with feathers. At the ends hung heron [feathers]. They left these in the eagle bowl, where they burned.

And the sixth day was named "They come upon the grass."[3] And for this reason they named it "They come upon the grass," [that] grass was scattered [in the Temple of Mixcoatl]. This [was] grass from un-[793] der the pine trees. Here were ranged in their places the old women [who served the temple]. Before them lay a mat.

Thereupon came forth women with children. Each one heaped upon the mat five sweet tamales. All together, by fives, they laid them [there]. They came to give their children to the old women. And the old women came to take the children; they then dandled them in their arms. Then, those who danced their children in their arms gave them [back] to their mothers.

Then [the mothers] departed to their homes. This began in early morning. And it was time to eat when they finished. And when this was done, then all departed to hunt. They went to Çacatepec, there by Ixillan tonan.

And when ten days still remained in this month, as hath been said above, they then celebrated a feast [776] in honor of the god of the Otomí, who was named Mixcoatl, in the manner which will be set forth.

And when they had arrived there at Çacatepec, [342 513] nothing was done. Only when they arrived, they all made grass shelters, in which to sleep; all lit fires, to warm themselves.

And at dawn, thereupon food and drink were eaten and drunk. Then all arrayed and wrapped mantles about themselves.

I 796 Then all departed; all were ordered and disposed in a row, stretching like a rope nowhere broken. All,
224 in this manner, encircled all the deer, coyotes, rabbits, and hares; cautiously they closed in upon them.

And when they had come upon them, then all

. auh in omtlatlac, in jtecollo, yoan inezo, vncã contoca.

Auh in oiacomjxque in inmecapan, yoan intlaçopan, yoan inchimal, yoã intilma, yoan inmaxtli, oonquauhtitech in qujtlaliaia, qujlpiaia, itech pilcatiuh chichilicpatl, potonquj ic tlamalintli, yiacac pilcatiuh vizitzilin, yoã cẽtzonaztatl, mjec in mecatl, qujpotonjaia hivitica, yiacac pilcatiuh aztatl, vmpa concaoa in quauhxicalco, vmpa tlatlaia.

Auh injc chiquacentlamantli: moteneoa, çacapã qujxoa: auh injc moteneoa, çacapan qujxoa, motzetzeloa, çacatl: ichoatl in ocoçacatl, vncan motecpana in jlamatque, oc petlatl imjxpan onoc.

Nimã ie ic oalmoiacatia in pilhoaque çioa, contentimanj petlapan mamacujltetl in tzopelic tamalli: ceniauh, in mamacujltetl contema: qujmõmacativi in impilhoan, in ilamatque: auh in jlamatque, qujnoalantimanj in pipiltotonti, njmã qujmonjxotia inmac: njmã ic qujmõmaca, in tenanoan, in oqujmonjxotilique inpilhoan:

njmã ic iatimanj in inchachan, oc iocotzinco in peoaia. Auh in ie tlaqualizpan in necaoalo: auh in ic iuhquj, njman iecviloa in amjoaz, vmpa tlamattivi in çacatepec, vmpa in jxillã tonan:

Auh in jmatlacioc metztli y, in tlacpac omoteneuh: vncan qujlhujqujxtiliaia, in intecuh otomj: in mjtoaia Mixcoatl in jpanjn moteneoaz.

Auh in onaxioac in vmpa çacatepec aiatle muchioaia, çan oc qujxqujch haxtioa nexxacaltilo, in vncan cocochioa, tlatlatlatilo, nexxcolo.

Auh in oclatvic, njman ie ic tlatlaqualo ãtlicoa: njmã ie ic nechichioalo, nehaapanalo:

mec viloa, netecpanalo, nevipanolo: iuhqujn mecatl motilinja, acan cotonj: muchi tlacatl im juh, qujniaoalo in jxqujchtin mamaça, in coiotl, in tochtli, in citli: çan jvian impan ommonamjquj.

Auh in ovel impan ommonamjc, mec tenamoialo,

3. "Ils sont allés à la grosse" ([illegible]), according to Guillay (loc. cit.).

000 Ninetenth Chapter. Here are told the offerings which they made for the sake of those who traveled to far places, and how respect was paid for the sake of those who died.

Injc caxtolli vnnavi capitulo: vncan motecheoa, in ventli in qujchioaia, im impãpa vecanemja ioan injc mortlacoaia in jpampa in mjquja.

441 And his household thereupon began the penances. They let themselves become dirty. No longer did 984 they wash their heads with soap, though they could bathe their bodies. Nevertheless, no more did they 585 submerge in water. But every eighty days they arranged the washing of heads with soap. Thus they showed and made it known that they did penance for the sake of their children, their young men, who were still absent. All the time they thus went about doing, however long he was gone.

Auh in jchantlaca: njman iquac compeoaltia in tlamaçeoaia, motzoiotia, aocmo mãmovia, tel vel maltia yn jntlacapa, iece, aocmo polaquj: auh nanapoaltica qujmattiuj, in mamovitiuj: injc qujnextia, qujtemachitia, ca ipampa tlamãçeoa in jxiconeuh, in jntelpuch, in oqu jxcauhque, ixujcti caujtl iuh qujchiuhtinemj, in jqujn qujçaqujuh:

441 And if, perchance, he had gone to die, first were notified the old merchants. Their task was to inform ●765 and break the news to the people. These introduced a time of mourning into the home of the deceased. Thus they made it known that during four days there would be remembrances; his household would mourn. So they would be visited and consoled, and there would be a burial ritual[1] for their child.

auh intla noce omjqujto, iehoan achto caqujtilo, in puchteca veuetque, intequjuh in teiolmelaoazque, in teiolpachiujtizque, iehoantin qujcalaquja in choqujztli, in jxaiotl, in jchan omjqujto, ic qujtemachitia, injc naujlhujtl ilnamjcoz, mjccaoatizque in jchantlaca, injc tlapalolozque, ellaquacolozque, qujmjlloz in inconeuh:

[515] And when four days had gone by, then his household washed their heads with soap. Thus it was said, the deceased was bathed; and thereby they destroyed and banished their grief.

auh in oquiz navilhujtl: iquac mamovia in jchantlãca: ic mjtoa, momjccaaltia injc compopolcia, conjilcaoa intlaxcol:

441 And if somewhere he had died in battle, they set up an image of him made of pine torches bound 765 together.[2] They made and formed his image; they adorned his likeness. This evillotl was only a statue 778 of pine logs which they split into sections and afterwards bound together. And they placed upon it all the paper ornaments, the paper array, the paper jacket, the paper neck-band, the paper stole. They piled up, strewed about it, and distributed them so that they would burn all of them with it. When this was done, when they had adorned the statue, when the one dead in battle had been wept, one more day auh intla cana oiaomjc, qujtlaliaia ieujllo, quetujllotia, queujllotlalilia, ixiptla qujchichiujlia, injn Evillotl: çan ocoquavitl in qujtzatzaianaia, çatepan qujcujtlalpia: auh ixujch itech qujtlalia, in amatlatqujtl, in amanechichioalli, in amaxicolli, in amacozcatl, in amaneapantli, qujtlaolololtia, qujtlatepeoaltia qujtlamamaca, injc mochi ioan qujtlatizque: in ie iubquj in oqujcencauhque evillotl, in jquac ie choqujlilozoiaomjc, oc cemjlhujtica, in jeujllo icalpulco, cemjlhujtl in ca, cemjlhujtl in eostica: auh qujnjquac in ioalnepantla, qujtlatiaia, vmpa in qujtocaiotiaia, tevitoalco, quauhxicalco, tromjpantitlan:

1. Qujmjlloz: possibly this refers to wrapping of the dead or clothing of a statue.
2. Evillotl: Corresponding Spanish text: "se ponen de ocote, atados unos, con otros."

441 his statue spent in his tribal district [temple]. One ●765 day it was [there]; one day it remained seated. And 778 then, when it was midnight, they burned it there in [the place] which they called the god's courtyard, at the eagle vessel, [or] on the skull rack.

But if the merchant had only died on the ground[3] — that is to say, if he had not died in battle, if perchance he had only taken sick, in the very same way they prepared his statue, but only in his home did it burn — not at midnight: while yet there shone a little sun, when he already was turning on his left side,[4] when the sun hung low, they burned it.

726 Likewise it was said that at the time of the day sign One Serpent, if it was established precisely at that time, when war was declared and proclaimed among the people, when, it was said, war was announced, at that very time the war began. At that time all the eagle and ocelot warriors set out to battle; all followed, crowded, and filled the road. They arose, they set out, departed, marched, and hastened.

X787 And if one were born upon the day sign One [Serpent],[5] they said, the readers of the day signs corrected it and bestowed gifts upon him. He would become a receiver of favors, worthy of good deserts and merit; he would prosper and have sustenance. But if he did not do his penances well, according to his day sign, his gifts and favors would not come upon him. He himself would harm and destroy it. It was said that by his own act he neglected it and destroyed it by vice, etc.

[851 He who was then born they did not yet bathe;
553] they bathed him later, on Three Deer, and then gave him a name, for the reason already many times told: the day sign of the third place, when they waited for the day, the readers of day signs considered favorable. So they took this following one for him; this time they arranged and postponed it in order to give him a very strong day sign.

And Two Death, which followed, so they said, was evil; at this time there was nothing of merit. But Three Deer, so they said, was a good day sign; this is already related. The third place was always a good time; it was a time of attainment of merit, as the readers of day signs told one. And Four ꝏ intla çã otlalnjc ontomecatl, quijtoznequj: intlacamo oiacanjc, in aço çan occoliuczujc, çan ie no ivi in quichichiuaia ieujlla, iece çan ichan in tlatlaia, amo ioalnepantla, oc achi tonatiuh, iquac in ie onmotzcaloa, onmopilua tonatiuh quijtlatiuia.

Nõ iosn mjtoa: in jquac ypan in ce coatl tonalli, intla ipanti, ipan motlalia, in jquac oiaotlatoloc, oteiaotlalhujloc, in omjto, in otecaqujtoloc iaoiotl, vel iqua ipan vnpeoaia in iaot: vncan iaoqujxoaia, ipan otlatocoia, ipan vnneotemaloia, vnmotema, onmacocuj, onmolinja, eoa, nẽnemj, icxiconana, in jaquich quauhtlocelotl:

ꝏ in aquin ipan otlacat ce oçelotl tonalli, quitoaia, quijpãtiaia, quinemactiaia in tonalpouhque, tlacnopilhujanj, ilhujle, mõcenale muchiuen, mocujltonoz, vncã quiquanj ie: ꝏ intlaca mocellamocoua, in iuhqui itonal in, amo ipan muchioa in jnemac, in jcnopil: çan ichoatl quinitlacalhuja, quinnepopolhuja, mjtoa: iieviian conmocauilia, quinotlãçolmjctilia. Er.

yn aquin ipã otlacat in, aiamo caltiaia, quin ipã caltiaia in Ey maçatl: iquac quitocamaca, ipampa ie mjiccan omjto: in citiouian tonalli, in jquac tlacemilhujtiltia, quiçualittaia in tonalpouhque: ichoatl ic contlatotoquiliaia, vmpa quijtlateçujniaia, vmpa contlachichtiaia, injc cenca quitonalchicacoia.

Auh in quitoquilia, vme mjquiztli, iuh quitoa: amo qualli, atle vacã ca mõcenalli. Auh in ey maçatl: iuh quitoa qualli tonalli, ie omjto: in citiouian muchipa qualcan, vncan ca tlacnopilhujlintli in iuh quitcilhuaia tonalpouhque. Auh in nauj tochtli, in tlanauhcaiotia tonalli, in nauhciopa tlavica, tlacem-

3. Ordoñez: ibid., "Y si el tal mercader muriese, de su enfermedad."
4. Molina. op. cit. (Spanish-Nahuatl), Lado diestro.
5. The text reads ce oçelotl; it is correct in the Real Palacio MS.

Thereupon they swiftly filled the pit with the charred remains. There they covered it with earth.

And [this was done with] the noblemen as well as peasants.

When they had burned, they gathered and heaped up the bones, filling a small jar or small bowl [with them]. Upon the bones they laid a green stone. They buried [the bowl] in the home or the tribal temple [of the dead one].[8]

And where they buried [the ashes], they always laid offerings for them.

And when the chiefs and princes died, they laid in their mouths green stones.[9] And those who were only peasants [they provided] only a [common] greenish stone or [a piece of] obsidian. It was said that these became their hearts.

And the chiefs with many things they thus bedizened: their paper adornment which they made [was a] princely paper streamer of either four fathoms' or three fathoms' [length] of papers which they glued one to another. And upon it they hung various feathers—[those of] the heron and the trupial; dark yellow parrot breast feathers; the red arara; quetzal breast feathers; hawk feathers,[10] and yet other feathers.

And some were made [their] companions—the beloved slaves, perchance a score of the men and as many of the women. Thus they said that they were those who cared for their master, and still made chocolate and prepared food for him. And the men they sent as servants, likewise to care for him in the land of the dead.

And when the chief already burned, thereupon they slew the slaves, driving only bird arrows through their throats. They did not burn [with] the chief. Quite separately they buried the slaves, and quite alone the chief burned.[11]

ynjn quitocaiotia ostoc njman ie ic contentiquetza in tecuilli, tlatzacutli vncã conauca. 764 auh yoan in pipilti, yoan in macecaltin, yn iquac otlatlaque, quipepena quicenquiztia in jmomio, coentõco, xocoxoco quicentiquetza, in omitl ipan contlalia chalchivitl, quitoca ichan icalpoken.

auh in vncan quintoca muchipa quintlamanilia.

Yoan in iqẽ i miquia in tlatoque, yoan in pipilti quintololtiaia chalchivitl. auh in çan macecaltl, çan texoxoctli, anoço iztli, quilmacia iniollo muchioa. 764 766

auh in tlatoque mjec tlamantli, injc quinchichioa, yn amatlatquitl quichioaia tecpanitl anoço nãmatl, anoço iẽmatl, amatl quiçaçaloa. yoan iecb quipipiloa, in nẽpapan ihujtl, aztatl çaquan, xolloel, cuecçali, tziuhtli, cuixihujtl, yoan oc cequi ihujtl. 766 auh cequintin tevicaltl muchioa in tlatlacozizintin, aço cen tecpantli yn oquichtli, no iztqui i cihoatl iuh quitoaia in quenjn oquinocuitlaviquc in jntecujo, yn oc achiviliaia, yn oqu itlaqual chiviliaia, auh in oquichti quintitiulani, çan no iuh quimocuitlaviztque in mjctlan:

auh in iquac ie tlatla tlatoanj, njman ie ic quimomjctia in tlatlacoti, çan totomjtl in quechtlã conaquia, auo yoan tlatlã in tlatoanj, çan nonqua quintoca in tlatlacoti, çan vel yioca tlatla in tlatoanj.

8. Corresponding Spanish text: "en una ossuario de su casa."

9. See Pl. 35. Quetzalchiuhtl: more literally, "tender green emblem."

10. Xolloel: cf. Sahagún (Bustamante ed.), III, p. 149. See also Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 299, n. 1: "Vielleicht vielleicht 'the' or 'some' drawn." Tzuhtli and cuixihuitl are identified in the same place in the text.

11. Torquemada (op. cit., pp. 521 ff.) thus describes the funeral ceremonies for a chief: Neighboring towns were notified of the death, and the ceremonies were scheduled usually for four or five days hence. Chiefs of nearby towns brought gifts (mantles, feathers, slaves). The body of the deceased was wrapped in mantles and adorned with gold, silver, and jewels. A green stone was laid in the mouth, or heart. Hair was cut from the crown of the head of the deceased and kept in a wooden box with a painting of the god (unnamed); a slave was killed in honor of the god. On the ceremony benches were placed the ornaments of the god. A solemn procession, including neighboring chiefs, relatives, friends, wives of the deceased, and dancing priests marched (without beating of drums) to meet other priests at the temple. At the foot of the pyramid, they ignited the pyre of wood and some incense. As the body burned, as many as one or two hundred slaves were sacrificed in the usual manner, and burned in another pyre. These were household slaves (including dwarfs, jesters, and the like) and others presented by visiting dignitaries. Next day, the ashes were gathered, along with the remaining hair previously cut. Friends, relatives, and wives laid offerings before the box. There were four days of such ceremony, after which fifteen or twenty more slaves were sacrificed, since, it was thought, the soul of the deceased had undertaken its travels and was in need of aid. Other slaves—up to a dozen or so—were later killed at the end of twenty, forty, sixty, and eighty days. Yearly thereafter, for four years, quail, rabbits, birds, and butterflies were offered before the box, along with incense, food, wine, flowers, and cones of tobacco. These ceremonies were accompanied by feasting, drinking, and dancing.

[p. 44 is blank]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

[Second Chapter][1]

775 The second place [where] they went [was] there to Tlalocan. And in Tlalocan all prospered greatly; all enjoyed much wealth. Never did one suffer. Never was there lack of ears of green maize, [nor] squash, squash blossoms, heads of amaranth,[2] green chilis, tomatoes, green beans, [nor] the Tagetes flower.

Injc vecan vilos vmpa in tlalocan. auh in tlalocan cenca netlamachtilo, cenca necuiltonolo, aic mihjiovia, aic polivi in elotl, in aiotetl, yn aioxochquilitl, in ouuhtzontli, in chilchotl, i xitomatl, yn exotl, in cempoalxochitl:

And there dwelt the Tlaloca, who were like priests, the long haired ones;[3] who were like the fire priests.

auh vmpa nemj in tlaloque, iuiqui in tlamacazque, pipipanque, iuhque in tlenamacaque çatca:

●76b And there went those who had been struck by thunderbolts, and those who had been submerged in the water, and those who had died in the water. And those who were leprous, or affected by venereal sickness, or by boils, or by the itch, or by sores, or by the gout; and those full of tumors, [those] they took [there], and those swollen by the dropsy,[4] [who] thus died.

auh in vmpa vi ichoantin in viteco, yoã in ilaquilo, yoan in atlan miqui, yoan ichoantin in teococoxque, yoan in nanaoti, yoan in xochicjpj, yoan in xixjioti, yoan in papalani, yoan in coaciui, yoan in popoçaoaliztli quinvica, in teponaoacivi ic miquj.

These, when they died, they did not burn, but only buried. They applied liquid rubber to their faces; and with fish amaranth [paste] they covered their cheeks; and they colored their foreheads blue [with blue papers]. And they gave them [each] a paper lock of hair at the back of the head. Mountain images they placed before them. And they placed paper capes over them, and in their hands they placed for them large staves of wood.

in ichoãn jn, yn iquac miqui, amo tlatla, can qujntocaia, quimixoiviaia, yoan michiouuhtli, incamapan conpachoca, yoan quimjxquixeuiaia, yoan quimahamacuexpaltiaia, tepeiotl, in qujntlalilaia yn imixquac: auh amatl in qujnquequentiaia, yoan inmac qujntequiliaia ontepil quavitl:

775 And so they said that in Tlalocan all is ever green, always in growth, always spring; it is always spring time.

auh qujtoa in tlalocan, muchipa tlacelia, muchipa tlatzmolini, muchipa xopantla tlaxopãmaxanj.

---

1. Chapter heading is omitted in the Wolfrat[illegible] version.
2. [illegible]. Sahagún (Hist. Kapital, p. 308) has [illegible]. The corresponding Spanish text has [illegible] de Maíz.
3. Sahagún version (Bulmalo ed., II, p. 321): "Cuando [illegible] el cabo o rey, para elegir aquí [illegible] los sacerdotes que llamaban [illegible] y también los viejos del pueblo que llamaban [illegible]; y también los capitanes, soldados viejos de la guerra, que llamaban [illegible] y otros capitanes que eran principales en las cosas de la guerra, y también los ancianos que llamaban [illegible]."
4. Identification of diseases is problematical. Sahagún (loc. cit.) has sickness of the genitals for aiotzin, skin disease for papalani, infected sores which did not heal for coaciui, swelling of the body for popoçaoaliztli, and infectious disease for teponaoacivi.

[p. 46 is blank]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
[346]
[766]

[731]

—After Paso y Troncoso

111. Burning of bodies of Mexicans slain in battle at Mt. Tonan (Chapter 27). 112, 113. Refurbishing of a temple in Tenochtitlan on the departure of the Spaniards (Chapter 28). 114. Smallpox plague (Chapter 29). 115-117. Return of the Spaniards to attack Tenochtitlan (Chapter 29). 118. Spanish brigantines (Chapter 30).

[p. 44 (Q)]

726 slept at this time. Here was the place to which [the Mexicans] went in order to return, when the Spaniards showed their heels to and turned their backs upon them.

766 727 Upon this, then were identified the chieftains who had died, who had been speared. There they bugged all of them. And their charred [remains] they gathered up; they collected the bones of each of them. They heaped them all up and then buried them: they buried them in the earth.

805 And these are all the days since the Spaniards came to and entered Mexico, on One Wind of the day count and One Reed of the year count, on the eve of the tenth day of Quecholli. And when they had tarried one day, Two House, at that very time it was the tenth day of Quecholli. And when they came to the end of Quecholli, when it was the actual feast day, thereupon after it followed Panquetzaliztli, with twenty days.[4] Then after it came Tititl, also with twenty days. Then followed after it Izcalli tlami,[5] also with twenty days. Then, at that time, set in the five days known as Nemontemi. And when the five days came to an end, then began Atl caualo, or Quauitl eua, in which the year returned[6] —in which began the new year—also of twenty [days]. Then came after it Tlacaxipeualiztli, also of twenty [days]. Then followed after it Toçoztontli, also of twenty [days]. Then proceeded after it Uei toçoztli, also of twenty [days]. Then came after it Toxcatl, also of twenty days. This was when the chieftains perished: when they were cut to pieces, when the Mexicans were put to death. Then followed after it Etzalqualiztli, also of twenty days. Then came after it Tecuilhuitontli. This was when [the foe] set forth; upon an opportune day, the Spaniards set out, to disappear by night without the knowledge of [the Mexicans]; without its being their will, they set forth by night. And when the count of all the days is added, they are two hundred and thirty-five. And they had been our friends for one hundred and ninety-five days. And they were our foes for forty days.

000 And when the Spaniards had thus gone, it was therefore thought that in truth they had departed forever, that indeed once and for all they had left—

Auh in ie iuhquj: njmã ie ic tziximacho in tiacaoan in omjcque, in oxiziliosque, vncan qujotlatique in jxqujchtin: auh in intecullo qujpepena, in jmomjo qujonenechionaia, coololoaia, çatepã contecaia, contlaitocaia.

Auh in izquilhujtico in Mexico inic calaqujco in Españoles: ipã ce hecatl in cemjlhujtlapoalli: auh in xiuhtonalli ce acatl, oc murtla tlamatlactiz Quecholli: auh in cemjlhujtique vme calli: vel iquac in tlamatlacti quecholli: auh in oçic, tlamj quecholli in vel ilhujtl: njman ie ic qujoaltoquijlia in Panquetzaliztli, cempoalilhujtl: njmã qujvaltoquijlia Tititl no cempoalilhujtl: njman qujvaltoquijlia Izcalli tlamj, no cempoalilhujtl: njmã iquac valmotlalia macujlilhujtl mõtenenoa Nemontemj: auh in ontzonquiz macujlilhujtl: njmã ic vmpeoa in Atl cavalo, anoço quavitl eua, vncã xiuhquitzquijlo, vncan peoa in iaçujc xivitl, no cempoalli: njmã qujoaltoquijlia tlacaxipeoaliztli no cempoalli: njman qujvaltoquijlia Toçoztontli, no cempoalli: njman qujvaltoquijlia vei toçoztli, no cempoalli: [illegible] qujvaltoquijlia Toxcatl no cempoalilhujtl: ie vncan izpoliuhque Tiacaoan in xaxamacaque, in mexica in mjcoac: njmã qujvaltoquijlia Etzalqualiztli, no cempoalilhujtl: njman qujvaltoquijlia Tecujlhujtontli, ie vncan in qujzque, vel ipan in ilhujtl in qujzque in Españoles, in moioalpoloque, amo tenemachpan, amo iuh catca teiollo inic qujzque ioaltica. Auh injc mocempoa in jzquilhujtique matlacpoalli oçe, omcaxtolli: auh in tocnjoan catca chicunapoalilhujtl on caxtolli. Auh in toiaovan catca vmpoalilhujtl:

Auh in oiuh iaque in Españoles: iuh nemachoc in cã oiccen iaque, in ca iccen oiaque, aocmo cepa valmocuepanque, aocmo ceppa imjloch qujchiuaz-

4. The Aztec see chipe Atemoztli.

5. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II — The Ceremonies, p. 134.

6. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., VII — The Sun, Moon, and Stars, and the Binding of the Years, p. 25; Sahagún, Bulmolo ed., II, p. 268.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

apart from the great Cue there was another small tower 346 which was also an Idol house, or a true hell, for it had at the opening of one gate a most terrible mouth such as they depict, saying that such there are in hell. The mouth was open with great fangs to devour souls, and here too were some groups of devils and bodies of serpents close to the door, and a little way off was a place of sacrifice all blood-stained and black with smoke, and encrusted with [415] blood, and there were many great ollas and cántaros and tinajas[1] of water inside the house, for it was here that they [782 cooked the flesh of the unfortunate Indians who were 266] sacrificed, which was eaten by the priests. There were also near the place of sacrifice many large knives and [412] chopping blocks, such as those on which they cut up meat in the slaughter houses. Then behind that cursed house, some distance away from it, were some great piles of firewood, and not far from them a large tank of water [312] which rises and falls, the water coming through a tube from the covered channel which enters the city from Chapultepec. I always called that house "the Infernal Regions."

Let us go on beyond the court to another Cue where the [766] great Mexican princes were buried, where also there were many Idols, and all was full of blood and smoke, and it had other doorways with hellish figures, and then near that Cue was another full of skulls and large bones arranged in perfect order, which one could look at but could not count, for there were too many of them. The skulls were by themselves and the bones in separate piles. In that place there were other Idols, and in every house or Cue or oratory 793 that I have mentioned there were priests with long robes of black cloth and long hoods like those of the Dominicans, [292] and slightly resembling those of the Canons. The hair

[1] Names of various large pottery vessels for holding water and cooking.

The second month they named Tlacaxipeualiztli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast in honor of the god called Totec—[or], as another name, called Xipe—when they slew and flayed many slaves and captives.

"Al segundo mes, llamauan tlacaxipeualiztli. En el primero dia deste mes: hazian vna fiesta a honrra del dios llamado Totec, y por otro nombre se llamaua xipe: donde matauan, y desollauan muchos esclauos y captiuos.

Chapter 2
Tlacaxipeualiztli

From the captives whom they were to slay the owners themselves tore off the hair of the crowns of their heads and kept it as a relic. This they did in the tribal temple before the fire.

When the masters of the captives took their slaves to the temple where they were to slay them, they took them by the hair. And when they took them up the steps of the pyramid, some of the captives swooned, and their masters pulled them up and dragged them by the hair to the sacrificial stone where they were to die.

Having brought them to the sacrificial stone, which was a stone of three hands in height, or a little more, and two in width,* or almost, they threw them upon it, on their backs, and five [priests] seized them—two by the legs, two by the arms, and one by the head; and then came the priest who was to kill him. And he struck him with a flint [knife], held in both hands and made in the manner of a large lance head, between the breasts. And into the gash which he made, he thrust his hand and tore from [the victim] his heart; and then he offered it to the sun and cast it into a gourd vessel.

After having torn their hearts from them and poured the blood into a gourd vessel, which the master of the slain man himself received, they started the body rolling down the pyramid steps. It came to rest upon a small square below. There some old men, whom they called Quaquacultiz, laid hold of it and carried it to their tribal temple, where they dismembered it and divided it up in order to eat it.

Cap. 2.
Tlacaxipeualiztli

1 d KL. Tlacaxipeualiztli d 22°
2 e A los captiuos que matauan: arran- e 23
3 f cauallos, los cabellos de la coronilla, y f 24
4 g guardauanlos, los mismos amos, como g 25
5 A por reliquias: esto hazian en el calpul A 26
6 b delante del fuego. b 27
7 c Quando lleuauan los señores de los c 28
8 d cativos a sus esclauos al templo: donde d 1°
9 e los auian de matar, lleuauanlos por e 2
10 f los cabellos: y quando los subian, por f 3
11 g las gradas del cu, algunos de los cap- g 4
12 A tiuos, desmayauan, y sus dueños los A 5
13 b subian arrastrando por los cabellos, b 6
14 c hasta el taxon donde auian de morir. c 7
15 d Llegandolos al taxon: que era vna d 8
16 e piedra de tres palmos de alto, o poco e 9
17 f mas, y dos de ancho o casi: echauanlos f 10
18 g sobre ella de espaldas: y tomauanlos g 11
19 A cinco, dos por las piernas, y dos por A 12
20 b los braços, y vno por la çaluça: y venia b 13°
luego el sacerdote, que le auia de matar, y douale con ambas manos, con vna piedra de pedernal: hecha a manera de hierro de lançon por los pechos, y por el agujero que hazia: metia la mano, y arrancauale el coraçon, y luego le ofrecia al sol, echauale en vna xicara.

Despues de auerles sacado el coraçon, y despues de auer echado la sangre en vna xicara: la qual recebia el señor del mismo muerto: echauan el cuerpo a rrodar por las gradas abaxo del cu, vna a parar, en vna placeta abaxo: de alli le tomauan, vnos viejos, que llamavan quaquacujhti, y le lleuaua a su calpul: donde le despedaçauan, y le repartian pa comer.

* Antolínez palmo is defined as the span between thumb and end of little finger, hand outspread. In Webster's Dictionary, the Portuguese palmo is 0.27 m.; in the Encyclopædia Britannica (1946 ed.), the Spanish palmo is 0.229 m. A handbreadth is estimated as 3-4 in.

1. Marginal numbering: Cabellos como parte.
2. Marginal numbering: Sacrificio hecho delante del fuego.
3. Marginal numbering: Llegando al taxon.

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Granada.[103] It was different, however, in Mexico, where we meet 428 with traces of a decided progress. Not only had descent been changed to the male line,[106] but heirship was limited, to the exclusion of the kin and of the agnates themselves, to the children of the male sex.[107] Whatever personal effects a father left, which were [765] not offered up in sacrifice at the ceremonies of his funeral,[108] they 764] were distributed among his male offsprings, and if there were none, they went to his brothers. Females held nothing whatever, beyond [562] their wearing apparel and some few ornaments for personal use.

The "tlalmilli" itself, at the demise of a father, went to his oldest son, with the obligation to improve it for the benefit of the entire family until the other children had been disposed of by marriage.[109] But the other males could apply to the chief of the calpulli for a "tlalmilli" of their own:[110] the females went with

[103] Gomara, ("Historia de las Indios," Vedia I, p. 201). Garcia ("Origen de los Indios," Lib. IV, cap. 23, p. 247). Piedrahita (Parte I, lib. I, cap. 5, p. 27). Joaquin Acosta ("Compendio historico del Descubrimiento y Colonisazion de la Nueva-Granada," Cap. XI, p. 201). Ternaux-Compans ("L'ancien Cundinamarca," pp. 21 and 38).

[106] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120). Gomara (p. 434). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XIII). Zurita (pp. 12 and 43).

[107] Letter of Motolinia and Diego d'Olarte, to Don Luis de Velasco, Cholula, 27 Aug., 1554 ("Recueil, etc., etc.," p. 407). "The daughters did not inherit, it was the principal, wife's son . . . ." Besides, nearly every author designates but a son, or sons,—as the heirs. There is no mention made of daughters at all. In Tlaxcallan, it is also expressly mentioned that the daughters did not inherit (Torquemada, Lib. XI, cap. XXII, p. 348). In general, the position of woman in ancient Mexico was a very inferior one, and but [562] little above that which it occupies among Indians in general. (Compare the description of Gomara, p. 440. Vedia I, with those of Sahagun. Lib. X, cap. I, p. 1; cap. XIII, pp. 30, 31, 32 and 33. The fact is generally conceded). H. H. Bancroft, "Native Races." Vol. II, Cap. VI, p. 224, etc.

[108] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120). Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XLII to XLVIII, pp. 513 to 529). Acosta (Lib. V, cap. VIII, pp. 320, 321 and 322). Gomara (pp. 436 and 437. Vedia, I). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XI, pp. 162 and 163). Clavigero (Lib. VI, cap. XXXIX. "They burnt the clothes, arrows, and a portion of the household utensils . . . . .")

[109] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120), "el cual hacer de testamento no se acostumbraba en esta tierra, sino que dejaban las casas y heredades á sus hijos, y el mayor, si era hombre, lo poseia y tenia cuidado de sus hermanos y hermanas, y yendo los hermanos creciendo y casándose, el hermano mayor partia con ellos segun tenia; y si los hijos eran por casar, entrábanse en la hacienda los mismos hermanos, digo en las heredades, y de ellas mantenian à sus sobrinos y de la otra hacienda." Gomara ("Conq. de Méjico," p. 434). "It is customary among tributary classes that the oldest son shall inherit the father's property, real and personal, and shall maintain and support all the brothers and nephews, provided they do what he commands them. The reason why they do not partition the estates is in order not to decrease it through such a partition . . . . ." Simancas M. S. S ("Recueil, etc., etc.," p. 224). "Relative to the calpulalli . . . . the sons mostly inherited."

[110] Zurita (p. 55). "He who has no land applies to the chief of the tribe (calpulli), who, upon the advice of the other old men, assigns to him a tract suitable for his wants, and corresponding to his abilities and to his strength." Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 125).

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

556 555 fully worked utensils and tools and well-tended and productive fields, while an unsuccessful man had a small and miserable equipment. Yet except for the intervention of natural disaster the differential was largely due to the ability of a man and his household to produce with their own hands the symbols of his wealth or to exchange his specialized product for equivalent superior equipment made by others. The entrepreneur and broker had small place in the undertaking of production and its distribution.[1]

● 771 The gods also stimulated good craftsmanship. Every home had an altar, and every act was accomplished through the favor of some deity. Ceremonies to appease these custodians of natural force were of frequent occurrence. Thus the use of symbols, referring to the god whose favor was sought, came to exercise an important influence on design. Since a man does reverence with his most esteemed social attitudes and his best material possessions, each household must try to surpass its previous efforts to honor the gods. The temple equipment, therefore, tended to represent the cream of local craftsmanship.

324 Work in stone, the most durable natural substance available, is a common gauge of human ability. Since the tools last forever, it is possible to compare the technical abilities of peoples over an enormous span of human history. However, for basic equipment like projectile points, axes, grinding stones, and the like, satisfactory forms are reached fairly early and do not change in proportion to cultural advances in other directions. Thus the arrow or the dart points of Aztec times were not technically better than those used by the Middle Culture peoples. However, the technical demands of the sacrificial cult called for a heavy broad-bladed flint economic, social and religious stimulation of their sudden 532 rise to power as a license to convert craftsmanship into great religious art.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The Aztecs did not create their art forms or their religion, 532 which seems to have seeped in from the Mixteca-Puebla 771 country. There the religious manuscripts and the ritualistic 177 concepts hewn in stone and painted on vases were more complex and better drawn than their Aztec equivalents. Unfortunately, as yet, archaeological investigation has not extended to more than a sampling of this potentially rich area of Mexican civilization. However, the Valley people, given the opportunity, eagerly accepted these forms and created their own versions of the parent art.[14] (See Plates 57, top; 58, 59.)

The same elements portrayed in stone monuments ap- 532 peared in smaller objects. Wooden drums and atl-atls had relief carvings the equal of the temple ornaments in all except scale. The same divinities were graven in bone against a background of turquoise mosaic. The goldworkers reproduced in miniature the images of the gods and goddesses and the symbols of their cult, carrying out in costume ornament the elements of the ritual in which they were used. Lapidaries succeeded in reducing jade, obsidian, rock crystal, opal, moonstone and amethyst into tiny sculptures which carry the same emotional authority as the grand-scale art. The bulk of first-rate material is enormous. It would seem that the products of tribal craftsmanship had been raised en masse into arts. Virtually overnight a cluster of primitive villages had transformed themselves into great creative centers.[15] (See Plates 45–48; 55, bottom left.)

Painting and drawing did not reflect this transmutation.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

CHAPTER X

RELIGION

A brief survey of the Aztec universe and the unpronounceable gods and goddesses who presided over it and ruled men's fate

AZTEC RELIGION, in purpose and practice, tried to attract those natural forces which are favorable to human existence and repulse those which are harmful. Ethical control and spiritual perfection fell within the province of social custom, so that the moral goals of our own religion were largely absent; the Aztec religion had no Savior of mankind, no heaven or hell to reward or punish the consequence of human behavior.[1]

The Aztecs and their forebears believed that the forces of nature acted for good or evil very much as does mankind, so that it was logical for them to personalize the elements as gods or goddesses. The process of worship entailed offering presents, uttering prayers and performing symbolic acts to induce the divine powers to operate for the public benefit. The tribal intellect was mobilized, as it were, to sort out the processes of nature, find out how they acted and devise magical procedures or rituals to win them to action favorable to man.

Nature operates in series of recurrences which give the effect of rhythms. Birth, maturity and death follow relent-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

771 lessly in human life; night succeeds day; the stations of the year rotate endlessly through spring, summer, fall and winter; the planets move in eternal sequence through the sky. Thus to discover what those rhythms were and follow their complicated but regular beat would, in Aztec philosophy, ensure the happy survival of the community. There was little thought of the perfection of the individual when vast powers hovered close, ready to destroy the whole tribe if it ceased its vigilant watch on nature. Thus rhythm and form become an essential part of worship and found their outlet in ritual and religion, art, philosophy and science.

The growth of civilization, with the resultant ramification of social function and material equipment, led likewise to a more complex perception of the universe, expressed in the stratification of gods and goddesses and a specialization of their functions. This result led to a more intense observance of ritual, which consumed a great part of the material and intellectual product of the tribe.

Aztec religion was an outgrowth of the recognition and fear of natural forces and the attempt to constrain them. The process by which man defines these forces and grades them in order of importance is as much a part of the evolution of culture as art, mechanics or social organization. The Aztecs developed a conception of the relationship of the supernatural forces to the universe that, given the precision of our method of thought, could have been developed into an imposing philosophy.

773 According to Aztec belief, the world passed through four
776 or five ages, or Suns. Details differ, but the record on the great Calendar Stone may be taken as the official version in Tenochtitlan. The first era, Four Ocelot, had Tezcatlipoca

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

They had to overcome several hazards before they could 775 take up their life there, so they were equipped with charms and gifts for the journey, which took the sacred number of four days. The wayfarer had to travel between two mountains which threatened to crush him, avoid first a snake and then a monstrous alligator, cross eight deserts, surmount eight hills and endure a freezing wind which hurled stones and obsidian knives upon him. Then he reached a broad river which he crossed on the back of a little red dog, sometimes included in the grave furniture for the purpose. Finally arriving at his destination, the traveler offered gifts to the Lord of the Dead, who assigned him to one of nine different regions. Some versions make the dead spend a probationary period of four years in the nine hells before they take up their life in Mictlan, which was, like the Greek Hades, devoid of moral significance.*

The Aztecs, as we have said, conceived of their universe 771
as extending horizontally outward and vertically upward 772
and downward. The world, as horizontally divided, implied the association of divine powers with the phenomena of geography and climate. This significance of direction is a familiar religious concept. The vertical arrangement of the heavens had rather more to do with rank and order than with a realization of natural phenomena. The hierarchy of the Christian saints, with its implicit recognition of position and authority, approaches closely to the point of view with which the Aztec peoples regarded their gods. Aztec and ritualized Christian worship have much the same attitude toward distinctions between philosophy and practice, and between the point of view of the instructed theologian and the humble worshipers.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

war or sacrifice, childbirth or drowning, passed upon death 776
to their domain. (See Plate 55, bottom left.)

This incomplete description of the gods and goddesses who thronged the Aztec pantheon gives an idea of their variety of purpose and character, outlined more fully in Table X. For an individual to try to do honor to so many gods could result in an insupportable situation. Yet even the modern Navajos pass a third of their time in ceremonial activity, and they do not have half the economic wealth of the Aztec peoples. While the ancient Mexicans extended their ceremonialism to greater lengths than do the most ritualized Christian sects, yet the relationship between the Aztecs and their gods and the Christians and their saints is not so very dissimilar, different as are the ultimate concepts of the two religions.

The priests gave guidance and prescribed the ceremonies, 793 and the worshipers gave heed to those especial divinities upon 776 whose patronage their life directly depended, much as a de- 771
vout Catholic selects certain saints for veneration above the list of those whose days are recorded on the calendar. In the same way the Aztec tribal god has his counterpart in the patron saint of country, town or craft. The Aztec, however, thought of his gods as having strong material powers, but their spiritual aspect counted little with him.

The ritual of Aztec religion was as complex as the theol- 796
ogy. The organization of the priesthood followed the pyramided structure of the social order, but the ceremonies were worked out in accordance with the ritualistic requirements of the calendar and the seasons. In the following chapter we shall describe the priesthood, the ceremonies and also the Aztec methods of counting, recording and using time.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

CHAPTER XI

RITUAL

In which are Summarized the Nature of the Religious Organization, the Feasts, and the Relationship between Ritual, Calendar and Writing

RELIGION was a general group activity necessary for the social and economic safekeeping of the tribe, and the priesthood was a highly important force in the direction of the communal life. In the early simple societies there were two executive chiefs, one for war and one for religious affairs. We do not know whether the priesthood comprised laymen who performed the ritual acts of specific ceremonies or whether it was an established group whose whole life was devoted to religious ends. It is probable that selected individuals originally carried out the religious duties of the tribe in addition to their civil obligations, but as Aztec culture became more elaborate, the complexity of their functions molded them into a body of permanent officials.[1]

In Tenochtitlan the Chief of Men and the Snake Woman had double duties in respect to civil and religious affairs, the former actively leading the services and the latter supervising the temples, the form of the rites and the internal affairs of the priesthood. Two high priests directed cult activities in honor of the War God, Huitzilopochtli, and the Rain God, Tlaloc, the chief divinities worshiped in this city. They

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

nite, owing, in part, to the treasure-seeking propensities of the 764
Spanish immigrants as well as to the diligence of the clergy in obliterating all objects to which the aborigines attached superstitious notions.

For the same reason we refrain here from entering into a de- 771 tailed account of the customs of worship. Still we feel obliged to state that the feature of "separate religious rites"[113] so characteristic of society based upon kin, is plainly visible among the ancient Mexicans. There are some very remarkable evidences of this, to which we must allude.

It has already been established at the outset, that each calpulli 618 had "its particular god," which was worshipped, as a tutelar deity, 346
within the territory of that calpulli. Consequently each kin had its particular medicine-lodge or temple.[114] Besides, the last one of the seventy-eight places into which Father Sahagun subdivides the great central "teo-calli" of the tribe, is described by him as follows:

"The seventy-eighth edifice was named calpulli, these were small buildings enclosing the inside of the square, these little houses they called calpulli, and there the principals and officials of [782]
the republic gathered, to do penance for four days preceding each festival occurring at twenty days interval. Their vigils thus lasted four days, during which time some of them ate at midnight and others at noon."[115]

This statement, which is confirmed (according to the learned Jesuit John Eusebius Nieremberg)[116] by the celebrated physician and naturalist Francisco Hernandez, is followed by another one, not less important, also of Sahagun:

"They offered up many things in the houses which they called "calpulli," which were like churches of the quarters, where those of the same gathered, as well for to sacrifice, as for other ceremonies they were wont to perform."[117]

Thus the right of the kin to "separate worship" appears not

[113] "Ancient Society" (p. 71).

[114] Besides the positive assertions of Sahagun (Lib. II, Appendix, p. 211. Lib. I, cap. XIX, p. 31): "se ponian en una de las casas de oracion que tenian en los barrios que ellos llamaban calpulli, que quiere decir iglesia del barrio ó parroquia" and (Lib. II, cap. XXXVII, etc.), we have also the testimony of Durán (Cap. V, pp. 42 and 43, and Cap. IX, pp. 79 and 80), and Oviedo (Lib. XXXIII, cap. X, p. 302).

[115] "Historia general," (Lib. II, Appendix, p. 211).

[116] "Historia naturae," (Lib. VIII, cap. XXII, p. 146).

[117] "Historia general," (Lib. II, Appendix, p. 211. See note 114).

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

as the presiding god, who, at the end, transformed himself 773 into the sun, while jaguars ate up the men and giants who 776
then populated the earth. Quetzalcoatl was the divine ruler of the second era, Four Wind, at the expiration of which hurricanes destroyed the world and men were turned into monkeys. The Rain God, Tlaloc, gave the world light in the third epoch, Four Rain, brought to a close by a fiery rain. Chalchihuitlicue,* "Our Lady of the Turquoise Skirt," was a Water Goddess who presided appropriately over the fourth Sun, Four Water, wherein a flood came, transforming men into fish. Our present age, Four Earthquake, is under the control of the Sun God, Tonatiuh, and it will be destroyed, in time, by earthquakes.[2] (See Plate 52.)

While the versions vary from place to place, we seem to 773 have a recapitulation of the great disasters from flood, volcanic eruption, hurricanes and earthquakes that beset the communities of ancient Mexico. Also there is a reflection of the order in which the gods attained prominence in the local worship. In the history of the Mexican tribes there are references to struggles within single towns between the devotees of two cults, as to which would have the mastery.[3]

The universe itself was conceived in a religious rather than 772
a geographic sense and was divided horizontally and verti- 776
cally into areas of religious significance. The horizontal uni- 823 verse, possibly the older concept, recognized five directions, the four cardinal points and the center. The Fire God, old and fundamental in Mexican religion, controlled the central zone. The east was assigned to the Rain God, Tlaloc, and the Cloud God, Mixcoatl (Cloud Snake), and was a region of abundance. In this idea geography was combined with

*Chal-chee-we'et-le-kway.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

772 ritual, since the intensely fertile Vera Cruz coast plain is the 776 actual source of the seasonal rains caused by the condensa-
823 tion of warm air when the Gulf of Mexico is exposed to the chill winds of the Central Plateau. The south was considered evil, possibly because of the arid zones south of Morelos and Puebla, but had as presiding deities gods associated with spring and flowers, Xipe (the Flayed One) and Macuilxochitl* (Five Flower). The west, however, had a favorable significance, being the home of the planet Venus, the evening star, which was associated and even identified with Quetzalcoatl (Feathered Serpent), the God of Knowledge. The north was a place gloomy and awful, presided over by Mictlantecuhtli† (Lord of the Dead), who, in one of those contradictions so frequent in Mexican theology, was sometimes connected with the south as well.[4] (See end papers.)

772 The vertical world was divided into heavens and hells
776 which had no moral significance, being merely overworlds
775 and underworlds. The number of heavens varied up to thirteen and represented the dwelling places of the gods, according to their rank in the hierarchy, the original creator living in the topmost heaven, and so on down the scale. One of these heavens belonged to Tlaloc, who received those who died by drowning, lightning or other causes connected with water. One school of thought divided the heavens into east
[821] and west, according to the passage of the sun. The east was the home of warriors, whose death in battle or sacrifice nourished the sun, and the west the home of women who died in childbirth, thus sacrificing themselves in the bearing of potential warriors.[8] (See Plate 57, bottom right.)

775 The rest of the dead passed to Mictlan, the underworld.

*Ma-kweel-tho'-chitl. †Meek-tla'n-tay-coot-li.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

They had to overcome several hazards before they could 775 take up their life there, so they were equipped with charms and gifts for the journey, which took the sacred number of four days. The wayfarer had to travel between two mountains which threatened to crush him, avoid first a snake and then a monstrous alligator, cross eight deserts, surmount eight hills and endure a freezing wind which hurled stones and obsidian knives upon him. Then he reached a broad river which he crossed on the back of a little red dog, sometimes included in the grave furniture for the purpose. Finally arriving at his destination, the traveler offered gifts to the Lord of the Dead, who assigned him to one of nine different regions. Some versions make the dead spend a probationary period of four years in the nine hells before they take up their life in Mictlan, which was, like the Greek Hades, devoid of moral significance.*

The Aztecs, as we have said, conceived of their universe 771
as extending horizontally outward and vertically upward 772
and downward. The world, as horizontally divided, implied the association of divine powers with the phenomena of geography and climate. This significance of direction is a familiar religious concept. The vertical arrangement of the heavens had rather more to do with rank and order than with a realization of natural phenomena. The hierarchy of the Christian saints, with its implicit recognition of position and authority, approaches closely to the point of view with which the Aztec peoples regarded their gods. Aztec and ritualized Christian worship have much the same attitude toward distinctions between philosophy and practice, and between the point of view of the instructed theologian and the humble worshipers.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

771 lessly in human life; night succeeds day; the stations of the year rotate endlessly through spring, summer, fall and winter; the planets move in eternal sequence through the sky. Thus to discover what those rhythms were and follow their complicated but regular beat would, in Aztec philosophy, ensure the happy survival of the community. There was little thought of the perfection of the individual when vast powers hovered close, ready to destroy the whole tribe if it ceased its vigilant watch on nature. Thus rhythm and form become an essential part of worship and found their outlet in ritual and religion, art, philosophy and science.

The growth of civilization, with the resultant ramification of social function and material equipment, led likewise to a more complex perception of the universe, expressed in the stratification of gods and goddesses and a specialization of their functions. This result led to a more intense observance of ritual, which consumed a great part of the material and intellectual product of the tribe.

Aztec religion was an outgrowth of the recognition and fear of natural forces and the attempt to constrain them. The process by which man defines these forces and grades them in order of importance is as much a part of the evolution of culture as art, mechanics or social organization. The Aztecs developed a conception of the relationship of the supernatural forces to the universe that, given the precision of our method of thought, could have been developed into an imposing philosophy.

773 According to Aztec belief, the world passed through four
776 or five ages, or Suns. Details differ, but the record on the great Calendar Stone may be taken as the official version in Tenochtitlan. The first era, Four Ocelot, had Tezcatlipoca

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

as the presiding god, who, at the end, transformed himself 773
into the sun, while jaguars ate up the men and giants who 776
then populated the earth. Quetzalcoatl was the divine ruler of the second era, Four Wind, at the expiration of which hurricanes destroyed the world and men were turned into monkeys. The Rain God, Tlaloc, gave the world light in the third epoch, Four Rain, brought to a close by a fiery rain. Chalchihuitlicue,* "Our Lady of the Turquoise Skirt," was a Water Goddess who presided appropriately over the fourth Sun, Four Water, wherein a flood came, transforming men into fish. Our present age, Four Earthquake, is under the control of the Sun God, Tonatiuh, and it will be destroyed, in time, by earthquakes.[2] (See Plate 52.)

While the versions vary from place to place, we seem to 773 have a recapitulation of the great disasters from flood, volcanic eruption, hurricanes and earthquakes that beset the communities of ancient Mexico. Also there is a reflection of the order in which the gods attained prominence in the local worship. In the history of the Mexican tribes there are references to struggles within single towns between the devotees of two cults, as to which would have the mastery.[3]

The universe itself was conceived in a religious rather than 772
a geographic sense and was divided horizontally and verti- 776
cally into areas of religious significance. The horizontal uni- 823 verse, possibly the older concept, recognized five directions, the four cardinal points and the center. The Fire God, old and fundamental in Mexican religion, controlled the central zone. The east was assigned to the Rain God, Tlaloc, and the Cloud God, Mixcoatl (Cloud Snake), and was a region of abundance. In this idea geography was combined with

*Chal-chee-we'et-le-kway.

776
796 surrounding us, brought by those [Nahuas] living on the borders of warring people. Those who had taken these pris-727 oners, these "tribute-captives," brought them, [and] here guards watched them.

And if one of them fled and escaped, they replaced him, they brought a man to take the place of him [who had fled].

776 Then the slaves died, when the feast was celebrated. And the garb [of Macuilxochitl was thus]: on his lips there was the imprint of a hand. His face was red and burnt. He had a crown of feathers. A wing was the burden on his back, on which was the sun-flag, with quetzal-feathers at the top. The cotton cloth, which was girt behind, had red edges. He wore sun sandals.

Fifteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Two Reed (Omacatl).

[773] This Omacatl was god of Uitznauac.[74] It was said that he invented, created, and introduced banqueting—invitations to feasts, acceptance [of invitations], the feasting of people. Through him it came to pass that men gathered together, that near relatives assembled. To one's house was brought his image, there to be held in esteem and cared for.

And also it was said that if he was not [so] held in esteem, like an invited [guest], he would become angered. He chided one in his sleep or in a dream; he said to him who dreamed: "Thou! Why dost thou not esteem me? I shall depart from thee. Already I know what I shall do to thee."

[753] And if he was sorely enraged, when one ate he often caused him to swallow hair which was upon the water and the food. And when, [as] one said, he ate the god, often he sickened. Thus he afflicted him: food stuck in his throat; the water wound about the roof of his mouth like a snake. His gullet was troubled when he ate. And if he walked, he stumbled and fell.

776 And thus was his feast celebrated. Whose are the image
796 of the god first made a sacred cylinder [of dough]: this was the bone of the god. The chief man—the priest, the elder of the city—[made it], a cubit long—fat, round.

And before it was shared among them, first all ate and drank, drinking wine. And when day broke, they stabbed Omacatl in the stomach and killed him. Then the sacred roll was shared, broken in pieces, divided among them.

When it was eaten, [it was] as if a debt had been assumed, as if one were summoned to a feast, and were forgiven [the debt]. And those who accepted, when the feast ended, had paid with their stomachs and were clean, because they had repaid [their debt].

776 And thus was he decked: he had a crown of feathers—izcmoaqua, yn iocmoc omiqua, quiqualcoaia yn jmalhoin, yn jtelaxiuqa, in maltequjhoua, muchioaia: njcan quiqpiaia, yn calpinqua, in cacalpinqua.

Auh intla aca tlaiehi, intla tlacholohi, ypan tlacaquetzaia, motlacacoujaia, quixiptlaiotiaia, quixiptlatiaia:

in tlatlacoti, vincan miquja, yn jquac ilhujqujxtilloia.

Auh yn jnechichinal: tzonmacpale istlapaloatzale, tlaistlapaloatzalujlli, tlaistlapalvilli, yhujtzoncale, quachichiqujle, vitonquj yn jtlamamal, vitoncatlamamale, ypan icac, tomalopanjtl, quetzaltzoain, quetzaltzontecomaio, quetzaltzontecome, quetzaltzontecomio, teotlapaltica motzinjlpi, motzinapa, ytzalocac, tomalocaqua.

Jnic caxtolli capitulo, ynchpa tlatoa yn teotl, yn jueca Omacatl.

Jnjn omacatl, vitznauac, teotl catca, yn jtech tlamjloia, in piqujlloia, qujtocaia ca ichoatl imactia, in cocaiutl, in tecoanotzalistli, in tetlacamatilistli, in tetlatlaqualtilistli: yiuatijan muchioaia yn jmocentlalilia, yn jmocencqujxtiliz teoioloque, tachi vicoia, vmpa macuimachoia, necujtlaujloia yn jxipda.

Auh no qujtocaia, yntlacamo mavizcilo, yn juhqujma cocanotzalo, tlavelcuja: tecochpa, anoço tecochizpan teaoaia, quilhujaia, yn aquin quitemjquj. Jn tehoatl tlayca yn amo tinechnavizmati; njmitztlalcahuia: auh ie ne njcmati, in tlein mopan njcchioaz.

Auh intla cenca moçuma, yn jquac tlaqualo, mjecpa centli qujtetolohtia, in atl, in tlaqualli ipan. Auh yn aquj yn mjtna teuqua, miecpa mococua: ynjc qujtolinja, melcima, ycopac mjlacatzoa in atl: meltepetlamja in jquac tlaqua: auh yntla nenemj motepetlamja, motecujnja, motlavitecquj.

Auh ynjc ilhujqujxtilloia: yn aquin teuqua, achtopa quichioaia, teumjmilli, yiomjio in teotl catca: çan tlacatl, teupiaquj calpole, cen molicpiol ynjc hujviiac, vel tetomacoac, mjmjltic.

Auh yn aiamo nemamaco, ec achtopa tlatlaqualo, atlioa, tlacoano: auh yn otlathujc conjtitocpinja, yn omacatl conmjctia: ojman ic nemamaco, netlatlapanjlo, nenezelhujlo, in teumjmjlli:

iquac quaqualo, iuhquin ic tetzoiotiloia, tetlacaquitilo, tetlalhujlo, temolcoaltilo: ca yn aquique macoia, yn iquac ie ilhujohquiçaz, macujtlaxcolistlaoaia, mopopoioaia, ypampa ca omtlaxtlaoaia.

Jn inechichinal catca: ilvitzoncale, quauhtzoncale, yoli

74. Probably the temple of Uitznauac (Uitznauac calmecac) is meant. Cf. Seler: Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 3, p. 82. Sahagún describes it as the 24th temple (Historia general, Vol. I, p. 222). The name Uitznauac suggests various other meanings—the south, the herrie or part of the city named Uitznauac, the people of that area, or the south house or south temple. See ibid., Vol. I, pp. 137, 197-99, 215, 221, 222, 229, and also Seler: op. cit., Vol. II, pp. 4, pp. 7-8, 9-10.

776 white clay. He had a spray of flint knives, with quetzal feathers.[79] The burden on his back had [a fan of] red arara feathers. His sun flag was upon it. The sun sign was on his paper vestment,[80] and on his shield. Red was his staff, which had a heart. He had a necklace of the claws of an animal. He had a paper breech-clout. He had rattles and shells. He had sun-shoes.

cueçalvitonquj yn jtlamamal, ytonalopan ipan icac, totonaloio yn jmaneapan, totonaloio yn jchimal, tlauhio yiellotzpil; xopilcuaque, yamamaxtli, ximtile, cuiole, itonalocac.

Seventeenth Chapter, which telleth of the god whose name was Left (Opochtli), whom anciently men here worshipped as a god.

This Opochtli was one of the Tlaloca. He was the god of those who lived on the water, who worshipped him.

[773] They said that he made and revealed his creations and inventions—the net, the dart-thrower, the three-pronged harpoon,[81] the pole for propelling boats,[82] [and] the bird-snare.

776 And when his feast was celebrated, offerings of water,

796 food, [and] wine were made; and the cane of corn plants,

[273] scented smoke, incense, and sweet-smelling herbs. These they spread before him, thus welcoming him. They shook their rattle-beards at him. They strewed toasted [pop-]corn grains like hailstones, or like scattered dice. And also his old men, his old women, and the city elders made music for him.

776 As his garb, he wore a paper crown; he was covered with black unguent—a liquid rubber covering; he had a heron-feather spray with single quetzal feathers. He wore a paper breech-clout [and] had a paper vestment [over his shoulders] with the sun-emblem.

Jnic castolli vmome capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa, yn teutl, yn itoca catca opuchtli: yn qujmotzutiaia ic uecauh, nican tlaca.

Inin opuchtli, ipan mizcoaia, tlaloc: atlaca intzuh catca, qujmotzutiaia.

Juh qujtoaia, ca ishoatl itlatzintli, ytlaxeztli, qujxxti, qujtzittiti in matlatl, yn atlatl, yn mjnaacachalli, yn aviotli, tzmoaztli.

Auh yn iquac illujqujxtililoia, atl, tlaqualli, vetli, in vendi muchioaia: yoan cintopilli, xuchitl, yietl, copalli, yiauhtli, qujtzepeviliaia, ic qujnanamiquja: chicaoaztli concacalachiliaia mumuchitl qujchaiaviliaia: iuhqujn tecivitl povia: no yoã qujcujcatiaia, yn ivevioouan, yn jlamaioouan, calpoleque.

Jn jnechichioal catca: amacale, tlaõçalli, tlaolaltilli, artatzoue, quetzalmjjaoaio, amamaxtle, amaneapanale, tonaloio.

Eighteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Our Lord the Flayed One (Xipe totec).[83]

He was the god of the sea-shore people, the proper god of the Zapotecs.

776 His gifts, [which] he dealt out, his particular creations, his

753 attributes, with which he visited people, which he gave them, [were] blisters, sores, smallpox, ophthalmia, maladies causing watery eyes, infected eyelashes, lice about the eyes, fogging of the eyes, filling of the eyes with flesh, withering of the eyes,[84] cataracts, glazing of the eyes.[84]

776 Those who were affected, we men thus sickened, would 796 thereupon vow to him, saying [that] therefore we would keep on, having donned it, his skin, on the celebration of the Feast of the Flaying of Men.

All hastened pursuing in a company, wrapped in skins [of men], [blood-]stained, dripping [blood], gleaming [with Jnic caxtolli vmey, capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa, in teutl: yn itoca, xipe totec.

Anaxtl itzuh: tzapotecca in vel intzuh catca, yn itequiuh pouja, yn ixcoian ytlachioal, yn inetzacavil: ic temodaia, ic tezozaia, ishoatl qujtemacaia, in totomonjlintli, papalanilintli, çaçaoatilintli, ixcuculintli, inchichitinalintli, intenpipixaqujlintli, intzmaçaliciuintli, intzitzuhpachinilintli, intzacapachiuilintli, intzacacivintli, intzotolicivintli, intzacayciuintli.

Jn aquja ipan muchioaia, yn coculintli tequjchti, yuicpa monestitiaia, yujcpa mjtoaia: ynjc ommaqujx yn jiouaio, ynjc itlan aquia, yn jquac illujqujxtililo: motzcaiotia, tlacaxipeualintli:

tlapainaltiaia, tztocaia, mjequjotin momanaia, muchinti tonictiuj, chichiiaoztiuj, chichipic-tiuj, tzotzotlantiuj in 79. Cf. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. II, p. 380 (tecpanquauhchiquilli).

80. Cf. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 931) for explanation of manta del sol.

81. ". . . un dardo de tres puntas que se llama mizcacachalli."—Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 172. The corresponding Spanish text on Opochtli, contains the same information: ". . . es como flaga, aunque no tiene, sino tres puntas, [marginal insertion, partly missing: (of) triangulo (or) tres tridentes] con que hace, a los peces; y también es el matan asni."

82. Sounding in the boat, they propelled it with a long pole. The Spanish text uses the term remo, oar, which is technically inaccurate.

83. Seler (Translation of the Aubin Collection, p. 105) cites Herrera (Hist. gen., Lib. III, cap. 15) to indicate that Xipe enjoyed special honor in the Tenochtitlan district. A clear discussion of the "xepitzac y tlapanaca" is given in Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. III, p. 133. See also note 88.

84. Meaning problematical.

776
796 goods)." Thus it was made known to the people that they 567 would be offered up as sacrifices.

At this time they gave gifts and had a feast.

And their victims they set up in a good place, all in costly mantles which had been placed upon them. [And] they made them dance upon the roof-tops or in the market place. [And] they went singing, ending their song mocking death.

And if any were noted who were very subtle, among [565] those to be offered up as sacrifices; one skilled in songs, one who was ingenious, who was intelligent and able, the noblemen set him aside and put another in his place.

Likewise, if a woman could sew, or if she prepared food well, or made good cacao—from whose hand good food [595] and drink came; [or if she was] a good interpreter; her also they set aside. The nobles took [such women] as wives.

776 [Yiacatecutli's] array [was thus] put on: his face was covered with white pyrites. He had a tuft of hair on the front of his head like a pillar of stone and a headband with bunches of quetzal feathers. He wore golden ear-plugs. A blue knotted cloth was his cape.[110] He had a costly breech-cloth. He had little bells and shells. He wore princely sandals. His shield bore a coil pattern like a gourd vessel,[111] in quetzal feathers. His traveling staff was in his hand; he had a cane staff.

iquac tetlauhtia, tetlaqualtia.

Auh yn jtlaaltilhoan, iccan, quinquetza: mòch tlaçotilmatli, yn jntech quinttalilia: ipã mjtoniaia in tlapanco, anoço tianquizco: cujcatinemj, tlatlahlamj yn jncuje, ynje momiquinquequelos.

Auh intla aca cittoc, in cenca mjmati tlaaltilli, yn cujcamatinj, in ielizmatquj, yn jne, yn iollo: quijquixtiaia in pipilti, ipan tlacaquetzaia:

no iuhquj, intla cioatl, intla tlamachiuhquj, anoço vellaqualchioa, vel achica, in qualli yiauh, in qualli intlaqual ymac quiça; vellatolmelaoac: no quintlelia, quinmotlaccioaotiaia in pipilti.

Jn jnechichioal motlatlatlali, mixapetzvi, ytemjlo, izquatzo, ixquatzoae, quetzallalpile, teucujtlanacoche, xiuhtlalpilli yn jtilma, tlaçomastle, tzitzile, oiocale, teccaque, quetzalxicalcoliuhquj yn jchimol, ytlaçaia ymac omoc, otlatopile.

Twentieth Chapter, which telleth of the god whose name was Lord of the Four Directions (Napa tecutli).

776 It is said that he also belonged among the Tlaloca. He 467 was the special [god of] the mat-makers' guild, who worshipped him as a god.[112]

And he was also [god] of those who fashioned mats of large, fat reeds, and of those who made frames of reeds.[113]

● [773] They spoke in this wise: "For it was he who first taught and showed them how to weave mats and make seats."

He it was who owned, ruled, discovered, began, and initiated [mat-making].

And they spoke thus: "For he it is who causeth the reeds to sprout and grow—the fine thin ones, the coarse ones, the long, fat reeds and the round, white ones, those with sprouts, the black ones, the sharp ones, the thin ones."[114]

776 And when it was his feast day, they spoke thus: "He 796 washeth and batheth men; he shaketh and sprinkleth rain 467 upon them." [For] greatly they importuned [rain] of him.

And also each year they slew a man who represented him,
[567] a slave.

Jnic cempoalli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn teutl yn jtoca catca Napa tecutli.

Juh mjtoa, ca no intech pouj yn tlaloque: iehoan ymjxcoian, incatjan, in calpolloc, quimotetutiaia in petlachiuhque:

yoan tolcuechiuhque, in tlacotechjuhque, ytech mopouia:

iuh quitoaia, ca iehoatl achto quinmachti, quimititi, in petlachioalitli, yn icpalchioalitli:

iehoatl axcaoa cococaoaia, tlatqujoa, tlanextile, tlatzintila, tlapeoaltile.

Joan iuh quitoaia ca iehoatl quipeoaltia, quiquixtia, in toli in tolpitzaoac, in tolpatlactli, in tolmjmjlli, xitapili, in tolquiutl, in tolcapotl, yn jtztoli, xonali:

yoan yn jquac illujuhquiçaia, iuh mjtoa, tepapaca, tealtia, tepan quijtztzelea, tepan quipixna, yn aoachili, cenca tlaihelanjlilia.

Auh no ce tlacatl, ipan quixcoaia, tlacotli, in quimictiaia ixtiuhtica:

---

110. Corresponding Spanish version states that "esta cubierta con una manta azul, y sobre el azul, una red negra: de manera que azul, se parecye, por las mallas de la red."

111. The tlachtlauhqui also has been referred to as a conventionalized serpent-head design.

[618] 112. Calpulli—clan or gens, which contained, probably, of heads of old families, controlled domestic affairs, distributed to common lands among members (Seler: op. cit., Vol. II, pp. 1, p. 83, citing Alonso de Zorita: Breve sumario relativo, Vol. II, pp. 72-227). In various of his writings Seler uses the word "guild" when the context suggests its membership.

113. Corresponding Spanish text says, "Napan calizco de juncias: que llaman tolcuetli."

114. Cf. Sahagún: op. cit., Vol. I, p. 143 and Vol. III, p. 272.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

Del Principio de los Dioses

HERE BEGINNETH THE THIRD BOOK

NICAN PEOA INJC EY AMOSTLI.

173
539

First Chapter, in which it is told how the gods had their beginning.

How the gods had their beginning and where they began is not well known. But this is plain, [that] there at Teotihuacan, as they say, in times past, when yet there was darkness, there all the gods gathered themselves together, and they debated who would bear the burden,[1] who would carry on his back—would become—the sun. (This hath already been told elsewhere.) And when the sun came to arise, then all [the gods] died that the sun might come into being.[2] None remained who had not perished (as hath been told). And thus the ancient ones thought it to be.

Injc ce capitulo, vncan mjtoa jn quenjn otzintique in teteuh.

In quenjn tzintique in teteuh in canpa tzintique, amo vel mzcho, ca ie iehoatl in panj ca in vncan teotioacan, qujtoa in canjn yn iqujn, in oc iovaian vncan mocentlalique, in ixqujchtin teteu, yoan mononotzque, in aqujn tlatlquiz, in aqujn tlamamaz, in aqujn tonatiuh iez, (Ynjn ca ie omjto cececnj,) auh in iquac in omomanaco tonatiuh, niman muchintin vncan mjcque, inca muzcalti in tonatiuh: aiac mocauh in macamo mjc (in oiuh mjto). auh in juh qujmatia veveteque.

TO VITZILOPOCHTLI the Mexicans paid great honor.

The following they believed of his beginning, his origin. At Coatepec, near Tollan, there always had dwelt and lived a woman named Coatl icue,[3] mother of the Centzonuitznaua. And their elder sister was named Coyolxauhqui.

And this Coatl icue performed penances there; she swept; she was charged with the sweeping. Thus JN VITZILOPOCHTLI, in cenca qujmavizztiliaia in Mexica.

Yvin in qujmatia, in itzintiliz, in ipeoaliz, ca in coatepec, yvjcpa in tullan, cemilhujtl quitztica, vmpa nenca cihoatl, itoca Coatl icue: innan centzonuitznaoa. auh inveltiuh, itoca, Coiolxauh.

auh in iehoatl coatl icue, vncan tlamaceoaia, tlachpanaia, quimocuitlaviaia, in tlachpanalli. Injc tlama-

1. Tlatlquiz (here probably a copyist's error) appears as tlaquiz in the corresponding passage in the Real Palacio MS. Cf. loqui. supra. in Alonso de Molina: Vocabulario de la lengua mexicana (Julio Platzmann, ed.; Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1880).

2. The story appears later in Sahagún's Historia (Book VII). In simple terms, the most usual version is told in Alfonso Caso: La religión de los aztecas (Mexico: Imprenta Mundial, 1936), pp. 13ff. An interesting variant appears in Juan de Torquemada: Segunda parte de los veinte i un libros rituales i monarchia indiana (Madrid: Nicolas Rodrigo Franco, 1723), pp. 77-8; and another in "La leyenda de los soles" (in Códice Chimalpopoca; Mexico: Imprenta Universitaria, 1945), pp. 121f.

3. Mother of the gods—that is, of the sun (Huitzilopochtli), moon (Copolnahqui), and stars (Centzonuitznaua)—according to Caso (op. cit., pp. 26-9. He states: "Yo hemos visto ahora como nace de ella Huitzilopochtli en el nacimiento en que los astrólogos, explicándolo por la Luna, pretendían mostrarla porque no creen en el prodigio de la concepción divina, y como el Sol-Huitzilopochtli nace de su vientre armado del rayo de luz y mata a la Luna y a las estrellas." did she do penance at Coatepetl. And once, as she swept, feathers, as it were, a ball of feathers, descended upon her. Then Coatl icue snatched it up and placed it in her bosom. And when she had swept, [when] she came to take the feather [ball] which she had placed in her bosom,[4] she found nothing. Thereupon Coatl icue conceived.[5]

773
539

And when the Centzonuitznaua saw that their mother was already with child, they were very wrathful. They said: "Who brought this about? Who hath made her heavy with child? She hath dishonored and shamed us!"

And their elder sister, Coyolxauhqui, said to them: "My elder brothers, she hath affronted us; we must slay our mother, the wicked one who is already with child. Who is the cause of what is in her womb?"

And when Coatl icue learned of this,[6] she was sorely afraid and deeply saddened. And her child, who was in her womb, comforted her. He spoke and said to her: "Have no fear; already I know [what I shall do]."

When Coatl icue heard the words of her son, she was much consoled by them and her heart was eased of what had so terrified her.

And upon this, when the Centzonuitznaua had assembled for their deliberations, when they had made up their minds that indeed they would slay their mother because verily she had brought dishonor, much did they harden themselves; they were exceeding wroth. As if bursting her heart, Coyolxauhqui greatly incited and aroused the anger of her elder brothers, that they might slay their mother. And the Centzonuitznaua thereupon arrayed and prepared themselves for war.

And these Centzonuitznaua were like seasoned warriors. They wound and twisted [their hair]; they bound their hair about their heads [in warrior array].

And [there was] one named Quauitl icac, who was a traitor; that which the Centzonuitznaua said, he then told and brought as news to Uitzilopochtli.

And Uitzilopochtli said to Quauitl icac: "Watch well what they do, my dear uncle, and pay careful heed; for already I know [what I shall do]."

And finally, when [the Centzonuitznaua] were determined and of one mind in their deliberations cenaia, in coatepec. auh ceppa in iquac tlachpanaia, in coatl icue ipan oaltemoc ihujtl, iuhqujn ihujtelolotli, njman concujtiuetz in Coatl icue: ixillan contlali, auh in ontlachpan njman cõcuizquja yn ivitl, in ixillan oqujtlalica aoc tle qujttac, njman ic otztic in Coatl icue.

auh in oqujttaque in centzonvitznaoa in jnnan ie otztli, cenca qualanque qujtoque ac oq'chivili y? aqujn ocotzti? techavilq'xtia, techpinauhtia.

auh in jnveltiuh in Coiolxauh: quimjlvi noqujchtioan techavilqujxtia çan ticmjctia in tonan, in tlauelilloc in ie otztli: ca oqujchivili in itic ca.

auh in oqujma Coatl icue: cenca momauhti, cenca motequipacho. auh in jconeuh in jtic catca qujiollaliaia, quioalnotzaia quilhujaia, maca ximomauhti ie ne njcmati, in oqujcac in Coatl icue, in itlatol in jconeuh, cenca ic moiollali, motlali yn jiollo, iuhquin juhcan tlama.

auh in ie iuhq', in centzonvitznaoa in oqujcẽtlalique in jntlatol, in oqujçemjtoq̃ içа qujmictizque in jnnan, iehica ca otlapinauhti, çа çenca muchicaoaia, cenca qualanja, iuhquj in qujçaia in jiollo, in Coiolxauhquj, cenca qujnioleoaia, qujniollococoltiaia in joqujchtioa, in macuele miquj in jnnan. auh in cẽtzonvitznaoa, njman ie ic mocẽcaoa, moiaochichioa.

auh in iehoantin centzonvitznaoa, iuhq'n tequjoaque catca tlacujaia, tlaquauicujaia, quiquauicujaia in jntzon, in jnquatzon.

auh ce itoca Quavitl icac, necoc qujtlalitinenca in itlatol, in tlein qujtooaia centzonvitznaoa, njman conilhujaia, connonotzaia in Vitzilobuchtli.

auh in vitzilobuchtli: quioalilhujaia in Quavitl icac: cenca tleticmomachitia notlatzine, vel xonmotlacaqujlti ic ne njcmati.

auh in ie iuhquj in iequene oqujcemjtoque, in ocentetix in jntlatol, injc quimjctizque, injc quitlatla-

4. Sahagún's corresponding Spanish text has "en el seno juntó a la barriga."
5. Quetzalcoatl is, in some stories, also said to have been miraculously born. See Caso (op. cit., p. 27), which, however, refers to a virgin birth.
6. Tezozomoc (op. cit., p. 43) says that one of Coatl icue's sons told her of the plot to kill her.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

that they would put to death and dispose of their mother, they thereupon set forth. Coyolxauhqui led them. Much did they exert and drive themselves. They were in war array, which was distributed [among them]; all put in place their paper array, the paper crowns,[7] their nettles,[8] painted paper streamers, and they bound bells to the calves of their legs. These bells were called oyoalli. And their darts [had] barbed points.

Thereupon they set forth; they went in order, in columns, in armed display, moving with deliberation. Coyolxauhqui led them.

And Quauitl icac thereupon hastened to run up [the hill], that he might warn Uitzilopochtli. He said: "Already they are coming."

Then Uitzilopochtli spoke: "Watch well where they come."

Thereupon Quauitl icac said to him: "Already they are at Tzompantitlan."

Again Uitzilopochtli addressed him: "Where now do they come?"

Then [Quauitl icac] said to him: "Already they are at Coaxalpan."

Once more Uitzilopochtli called out to Quauitl icac: "See where they now come."

Then [this one] said to him: "Already they are at Apetlac."

Once again [Uitzilopochtli] spoke forth to him: "Where now do they come?"

Then Quauitl icac answered him: "Already they have come half way[9] up the slope of the mountain."

And Uitzilopochtli again spoke forth to Quauitl icac; he said: "Watch where they now come."

Then Quauitl icac said unto him: "At last they are coming up here; at last they reach here. Coyolxauhqui cometh ahead of them."

And Uitzilopochtli then burst forth, born.[10]

Then his array he brought forth with him—his shield [named] teuecuelli,[11] and his darts, and his dart thrower, all blue, named xiuatlatl. And in ditizque in jnnan, njman ie ic vi teiacana in Coiolxauhquj, vel muchichicaoa, mocecenquetza, moiaochichiuhque, motlamamacaque, intech quitlalique in jmamatlatquj, in anecuiotl, intzitzicaz, amatitech pipilcac, tlacujlolli, yoan in coiolli incotztitech qujilpique, injn coiolli mjtoaia oiovalli, yoan in jnmiuh tlatzontectli, niman ie ic vi, tetecpantivi, tlatlamantitivi, tlaieiecotivj, momamātivi, teiacana in Coiolxauhquj.

773
539

auh in Quavitl icac, njman ie ic motlalotitleco, in qujnonotzaz in Vitzilobuchtli quilhuj ca ie vitze, njman qujto in Vitzilobuchtli, vel xontlachie can ie vitze njman ie ic conilhuja in Quavitl icac: ca ie tzonpantitlan, ie no ceppa quioalilhuja in Vitzilobuchtli, cā ie vitze, njman conilhui ca ie coaxalpan vitze, ie no ceppa quioalilhuj in Vitzilobuchtli in Quavitl icac: tla xontlachie can ie vitze, njman ic conilhui ca ie apetlac, ie no ceppa quioalilhui, can ie vitze, njman conilhuj in Quavitl icac: ca ie tlatlacapan iativitze.

Auh in vitzilobuchtli: ie no ceppa quioalilhuj, in Quavitl icac. quilhuj tla xontlachia can ie vitze.

njman jc conilhuj in Quavitl icac, ca iequene oalpanvetzi, iequene oalaci teiacantivitz in Coiolxauhquj.

Auh in Vitzilobuchtli: njman jc oallacat, njman itlatquj oalietia in ichimal, tevevelli, yoan in jmiuh, yoan yiatlauh xoxoctic, mjtoa xioatlatl, yoan icxitlan tlatlaan, ic ommichiuh yn iconecujtl, mjtoaia

7. Cf. Arthur J. O. Anderson and Charles E. Dibble: Florentine Codex, Book II, The Ceremonies (Santa Fe: School of American Research, Monograph No. 14, Part III, and University of Utah, 1951), p. 69.

8. See Fr. Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1938), Vol. III, p. 99, where medical properties of xoxocotzli are mentioned.

9. Tlalacapan: on use of tlaca in composition, see Angel María Garibay K: "Paralipómenos de Sahagún," Tlalocan, II (1946), p. 171.

All the place names given here (Tzompantitlan, etc.) are translated in Eduard Seler's Einige Kapitel aus dem Geschichtswerk des Fray Bernardino de Sahagún aus dem Aztekischen übersetzt (ed. Cecilie Seler-Sachs, Walter Lehmann, Walter Krickeberg; Stuttgart: Strecker und Schwaedtner, 1927), p. 256. In the original myth, possibly they were place names, which, in Nahuatl, later came to be names of places around the Teopan of Huitzilopochtli, used perhaps to recall the original account. Cf. Sahagún (Robredo ed., I, 181, and II, 382), where Apetlac and Coaxalpan are referred to not as towns but as places about the temple.

10. See Pl. 1.

11. Seler, op. cit., p. 256, n. 1: "Schild mit Bällen von zusammengerollten Zweigen." agonal stripes[12] was his face painted, with his child's offal, called his child's painting. He was pasted with feathers about his forehead and about his ears. And on his one thin foot, his left, he had the sole pasted with feathers, and he had stained both of his thighs with blue mineral earth, and both upper arms.

773
539

And one named Tochancalqui laid fire to the serpent xiuhcoatl[13] at the command of Uitzilopochtli.

Then with it he pierced Coyolxauhqui, and then he quickly struck off her head. It came to rest there on the slope of Coatepetl.[14] And her body went falling below; it went crashing in pieces; in various places her arms, her legs, and her body kept falling.

And Uitzilopochtli then arose and pursued the Centzonuitznaua, and went among them, and pounced upon them, and scattered them from the top of Coatepetl.

And when he had pursued them to the base, the foot [of the mountain], he took after them and gave them chase around the skirts of Coatepetl. Four times he pursued and followed them around. In vain they went about doing what they might against him; in vain they stood against him, striking about with their shields.[14a] No more could they do, no more could they achieve; neither could they take refuge. Uitzilopochtli quite overpowered them; he made them turn tail; he destroyed them in battle. He completely bested and ill-used them.

And not even now did he let them alone. He kept on. Much did they [then] importune him. They said to him: "Let this be enough!"

But Uitzilopochtli would not content himself with this. With force he hurled himself against them and took after them. And only very few fled his presence and escaped his hands. They went toward a haven to the south.[15] For indeed to that place these Centzonuitznaua[16] journeyed—the few who escaped the hands of Uitzilopochtli.

And when he had slain them, when he had spent his wrath, he took from them their vestments, their adornment, their paper crowns ornamented with feathers. He arrayed himself with these and took ipilnechiual, moquaxpotonj, izquac, yuan inanacaztlan, auh ce pitzaoac in jcxi yiopochcopa, quijpotonj in jxocpal, yoan quijtzaoaoan in jmetz vmezti. yoan vmezti in jacol.

auh ce itoca Tochancalquj contlati in xjuhcoatl, quioalnaoati in Vitzilobuchtli:

njman jc quixil in Coiolxauhquj: auh njman quechcotontivetz, in itzontecon vmpa ommocauh in jtenpa coatepetl. auh in itlac tlatzintlan vetzico tetezititivetz, cececcan veuetz in jma, in jcxi, yoan itlac.

auh in Vitzilobuchtli: njman ic oaleoa, quijnoaltoca intlan aquj, quijnoaltemovia, q'noaltepeoa in centzonvitznaoa, in Coatepetl icpac.

auh in oquijmazitico in tlalchi, in tlatzintlan, niman ic ic quijntoca, quijniaiaoalochti in Coatepetl, nappa in q'ntlatlaiaoalochti, in qui iaiaoalochti, oc nen quioaloiuhtivia oc nē quioaloiouiaia, oalmochimalvitectiuia, aoc tle vel quichiuhque, aoc tle vel axque, aocmo vel quitzacuilique, çan quijncemeviti in Vitzilobuchtli: quijncentepotzzi, vel quijnpopolo, vel quimixtlati, vel quijnpoctlantili.

auh in ça aocmo vel quijncaoaia, in ovel in cēntech mopilo, cenca quitlatlauhtiaia, quilhujaia ma izquich.

auh in Vitzilobuchtli: amo ic moiolcevi, ca cenca intech motlapalo in quijntocac. auh ça quezquitcon in ixpanpa coaque, in imacpa quizque vmpa itztiaque in vitztlanpa, ichica ca vmpa itztiaque, inin centzonvicnaoa, in oquizquijntin in inastitlanpa quizque in Vitzilobuchtli:

auh in ie iuhquj in oquijnmjcti, in oyiellelquiz quijncuili in jntlatquj, in jnnechichiual in anquiotl,

12. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 147.

13. Corresponding Spanish text: "Uno cuchillo, hecho de una, que es llamado xiuhcoatl."

14. See Pl. 2.

14a. Seler (op. cit., p. 257) translates this passage thus: "vergeblich rannte sie ihn an mit ihren Rundschilden, vergeblich rannten sie ihr Schilden an, schlugen sie (nur ähnlich gegen ihn) auf ihre Schilde, sie konnten nichts mehr machen, nichts mehr tun, konnten sich nicht mehr gegen ihn verteidigen."

15. Following xiuhcoapa, the Real Palacio MS has yn in centzonuitznaua xiuhcoapa. The passage would then read: "This place is known as Uitzilopochtli, because indeed there these Centzonuitznaua journeyed. . . . ."

16. Centzonuitznaua: probably centzonuitznaua is intended.

[them] for himself; he assumed [them] as his due, as if taking the insignia to himself.

And Uitzilopochtli was also known as an omen of evil; because from only a feather which fell, his mother Coatl icue conceived. For no one came forth as his father.

This one the Mexicans cherished, by making offerings to him, and by honoring and serving him. And Uitzilopochtli rewarded him [who did so].[17] And this veneration was taken from there, at Coatepec, just as had been done in days of yore.[18]

Enough [of this].

qujmotlatquiti, qujmaxcati, qujmotonalti, iubq'n qujmotlavizti. 773

auh in Vitzilobuchtli: no mjtoaia tetzavitl, iehica ca çan jvitl, in temoc injc otztic in jnan in coacue: caiac nex in ita. 539

Jehoatl in oqujpiaia in mexica injc otlamanitiaia, inic oqujmaviztiliaia, oquitlaecoltiaia, ioan in itech muchioaia in Vitzilobuchtli. auh in iehoatl in tlamaviztililiztli ocatca, ca vmpa tlaãtli in Coatepec, in juh muchivi ca ie uecauh ie izquijch.

SECOND PARAGRAPH, in which it is told how they did honor to Uitzilopochtli and thus worshipped him as a god.

And when the body of Uitzilopochtli was shapen, when they gave it form upon their feast day of Panquetzaliztli, they made it of a dough of amaranth, of fish amaranth seed, which is a spiny herb. They ground it; they pulverized it well; they crushed it into a powder and placed it in earthen vessels, as if it were an unguent—as if it were feather down. They rid it of chicalotl seeds—they cast them aside as useless; they threw away all the petzicatl [bird] seed,[19] the black-seeded amaranth, and the siftings and the corrupted material, and other small rubbish. And this they cast out and tossed away.

And when the amaranth seed dough was made, [it was] like pine [resin], like cooked maguey, like an unguent.

And upon the next day the body of Uitzilopochtli died.

And he who slew him [was] the [priest known as] Quetzalcoatl.[20] And [that] with which he slew him was a dart, pointed with flint, which he shot into his heart.

INJC VME PARRAPHO vncan moteneoa in quenjn qujmaviztiliaia Vitzilobuchtli, injc qujmoteutiaia. 796

Auh in Vitzilobuchtli: iñ iquac tlacatia in jnacaio in qujtlacatiliaia injlhujuh ipan. in iquac panquetzaliztli, in quichioaia tzoalli, michiõauhtzoalli, ie in chicalotl, qujtecia, vel quicuechoaia, quicuechtiliaia, caxtlaliaia, caxtiliaia, iuhqujn axjn, iuhquin ivitl, qujtlaçaia in chicalotl, vel quitlacujcuiliaia, muchi quiquiztiaia in petzicatl, in tezcaoauhtli, yoan ipolocatl, yoan in palanquj, yoan in oc cequi tlaçoltotonti, muchi quiquistiaia, muchi quichichitotzaia, auh in muchioaia tzoalli, iuhqujn ocotl ie on mexcalli, iuhqujn axi.

auh in imuztlaioc in miquia in Vitzilobuchtli in jnacaio.

auh in quimjctiaia iehoatl in Quetzalcoatl: auh injc qujmjctiaia ie mitl, iacatecpaio conaqujliaia yiollopa,

17. For muchioaia, the Real Palacio MS has muchiomaya, which is perhaps more logical.
18. See Pl. 3.
19. Chicalotl and petzicatl: cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 63, nn. 28—which identifies chicalotl with michiomichli or "fish amaranth"—and M. Sahagún (op. cit., p. 258) translates the phrase miki chicaxtli tzoalli as den Samen der Fischpflanzen; for chicalotl he has Stachelmohn (Argemone mexicana)—prickly poppy.
20. See below (Appendix, Ch. 9).

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952
NU7 Aztec NU7

773
539
796 532

—After Pasu y Troncoso

1. Birth of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter I)
2. Defeat of the Centzonuitznaua (Chapter I)
3. Uitzilopochtli worshiped (Chapter I)
4. Ceremonial sprinkling of impersonator of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter I)
5. Washing after the year's service to the god (Chapter I)
6. Feasting after the year's service to the god (Chapter I)

[p. 36(C)]

000 Third Chapter, where is told what Moctezuma commanded when he heard the account of those who saw the boat which first came.

Injc ei capitulo: vncan mjtoa in tlein ic tlanaoati Motecuçoma in jquac oqujcac intlatol, in iehoantin in qujttaque acalli in achto valla.

Moctezuma thereupon commanded [Pinotl] of Cuetlaxtlan and the others, and said unto them: "Ye shall order that guard be kept everywhere on the shores [at the places] thus named: Nauhtlan, Toztlan, and Mictlanquauhtla — wheresoever [the strangers] would come to land."

Then the stewards departed. They gave the command that watch be kept.

In motecuçoma, njman ic ic q'nnaoatia in Cuetlaxtecatl, yoan in jzqujntin: qujmjlhuj. Xitlanaoticã, ma tlapielo, in noviã atenco; injc mjtoã. Nauhtlan Toztlan, mjctlan quauhtla: in campa ie qujçaqujvi:

njmã ic iaque in calpixque, tlanaoatique injc tlapieloia.

644 And Moctezuma assembled his lords: the ruler's vicar Tlilpotonqui, the commanding general Quappiaztzin, the army commander Quetzalaztatzin, and the uitznauatlailotlac Ecatenpatiltzin.[1] He acquainted them with the news and he showed and discovered to them the necklaces which [the messengers] had brought him.

Auh in motecuçoma: qujncentlali in jtecuioan, Cioacoatl, Tlilpotonquj, Tlacochcalcatl, Quappiaztzin, Ticociaoacatl, Quetzalaztatzin, Vitznaoatlailotlac, hecatenpatiltzin: qujncaqujti in tlatolli, yoan qujmjttiti, qujmjxpanti in qujoalcujque cozcatl:

He said to them: "We have marveled at [this] fine, blue turquoise. It shall be well guarded. The keepers will protect it well. If they lose one [piece, their houses will be] our houses; [their children,] our children; [their women with child,] our women with child."[2] qujmjlhuj. Ca oticmaviçoque in matlalteuxivitl, vel mopiaz, in tlatlatique vel qujpiazque: intla centetl qujchitonizque tocacal, topipilhoan, titeheoan.

000 And then the year made its round. When [the year] Thirteen Rabbit met [One Reed], when already it was about to end, at the time of the closing of [Thirteen][3] Rabbit, then [the Spaniards] came to arrive. Then once again were they seen.[4]

Auh njman ie mocuepa in xivitl, ie imonamjcioc in matlactli omei tochtli: auh ie tlamjznequj, ie itzonqujzian in xivitl omei tochtli, in qujçaco, in ie no cêppa itioque.

773 [202] And then [the stewards] hastened to inform Moctezuma. When he learned of it, then speedily he dispatched messengers. For thus he thought, and it was so regarded, that this was Topiltzin Quetzalcoatl who had arrived. For thus was it [held] in their hearts that indeed he would come — that he would come to land on and visit his domain.[5] For

Auh njman qujnonotztivetzico in Motecuçoma, in oqujcac, njman iciuhca tlaioa, in iuh qujma, in iuh moma, ca iehoatl in topiltzin Quetzalcoatl in oqujçaco: ca iuh catca iniollo in çan oallaz, in çan qujçaqujuh, qujoalmatiz in jpetl, in jcpal: ipampa ca vmitztia, in jquac ia. Auh in qujmjoa macujltin, in qujnamjqujtivi, in qujtlamamacativi: in teiacantia

1. Cf. Sahagún (Rubredo ed.), II, p. 330; also James Cooper Clark: Codex Mendoza (London: Waterlow & Sons, 1938), Vol. I, p. 56. For some time, like uitznauatlailotlac, a satisfactory English equivalent is difficult to suggest.

2. Cf. Seler, op. cit., p. 460; also corresponding Spanish text: "joyeria en los que tienen cargo de guardar la resumera."

3. Before omei, in the Aztec text, probably matlactli should be read.

4. Arrival of Cortés in 1519.

5. In Angel María Garibay K.: Llave del Náhuatl (Otumba: [Imprenta Mayli], 1940), p. 188, the passage "Ca yuh catca in iyollo in ica huallac, in ica quinqualoh quilnamjcoc in iquel in iepal" is thus translated: "Así fue su determinación, que habría de venir, habría de regresar, habría de tornar a su tierra y arribar."

773 verily he traveled there [to the east] when he went. And [Moctezuma] sent five to go to receive him and 648 to offer him gifts. The leader was Teuoa [such 565 was] his lordly name; his name as a nobleman was Yoalli ichan. The second was [the steward of] Tepoztlan; the third, of Tiçatlan; the fourth, of Ueuetlan; the fifth, of Ueicamecatlan.[6]

Teuoa, in jtecutoca, in jpiltoca Joalli ichan. Injc vme Tepuztecatl. Injc ci, tiçaoa. Inic navi vevetecatl. Injc macujlli Veicamecatl heca.

6. Cf. Seler, loc. cit., where these are given as lines from towns. Veicamecatl here is interpreted as Uéicamecatenco.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

see that they were evil and of little worth, for where we had set up crosses such as those his ambassadors had seen, they dared not appear before them, through fear of them, and that as time went on they would notice this. 797

The favour he now begged of him was his attention to the words that he now wished to tell him; then he explained to him very clearly about the creation of the world, and how we are all brothers, sons of one father and one mother who were called Adam and Eve, and how such a brother as our great Emperor, grieving for the perdition of so many souls, such as those which their idols were leading to Hell, where they burn in living flames, had sent us, so that after what he [Montezuma] had now heard he would put a stop to it and they would no longer adore these Idols or sacrifice Indian men and women to them, for we were all brethren, nor should they commit sodomy or thefts. He also told them that, in course of time, our Lord and King would send some men who among us lead very holy lives, much better than we do, who will explain to them all about it, for at present we merely came to give them due warning, and so he prayed him to do what he was asked and carry it into effect.

As Montezuma appeared to wish to reply, Cortés broke off his argument, and to all of us who were with him he said: "with this we have done our duty considering it is the first attempt."

Montezuma replied—"Señor Malinche, I have understood your words and arguments very well before now, from what you said to my servants at the sand dunes, this about three Gods and the Cross, and all those things that you have preached in the towns through which you have come. We have not made any answer to it because here throughout all time we have worshipped our own gods, and thought they were good, as no doubt yours are, so do not trouble to speak to us any more about them at present. Regarding the creation of the world, we have held the same [773]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

797 belief for ages past, and for this reason we take it for 773 certain that you are those whom out ancestors predicted would come from the direction of the sunrise. As for your great King, I feel that I am indebted to him, and I will give him of what I possess, for as I have already said, two years ago I heard of the Captains who came in ships from the direction in which you came, and they said that they were the servants of this your great King, and I wish to know if you are all one and the same.

648 Cortés replied, Yes, that we were all brethren and servants of our Emperor, and that those men came to examine the way and the seas and the ports so as to know them well in order that we might follow as we had done. Montezuma was referring to the expeditions of Francisco Hernández de Córdova and of Grijalva, when we first came on voyages of discovery, and he said that ever since that time he had wished to capture some of those men who had come so as to keep them in his kingdoms and cities and to do them honour, and his gods had now fulfilled his desires, for now that we were in his home, which we might call our own, we should rejoice and take our rest for there we should be well treated. And if he had on other occasions sent to say that we should not enter his city, it was not of his free will, but because his vassals were afraid, for they said that we shot out flashes of lightning, and killed many Indians with our horses, and that we were angry Teules, and other childish stories, and now that he had seen our persons and knew we were of flesh and bone, and had sound sense, and that we were very valiant, for these reasons he held us in much higher regard than he did from their reports, and he would share his possessions with us. Then Cortés and all of us answered that we thanked him sincerely for such signal good will, and Montezuma said, laughing, for he was very merry in his princely way of speaking: "Malinche, I know very

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

601

Mother: "nantli" — "tenantzin" — "teciztli."[18]

Aunt: "auitl" — "teaui."[19]

Grandmother as well as grand-aunt: "citli."[20]

Great-grandmother "piptontli."[21]

Descending from the "Ego."

Son: "tepiltzin," "tetelpuch." But the women (mother, sisters, etc.), call him "noconeuh."[22]

[18] Molina (I, p. 80; II, pp. 63, 92, 96). "Citli" is probably the same as "Citli,"—hare, or grandaunt. The fact that the same name should be given to a near female relative or even to the mother, and to a fleet, timid, quadruped, is very singular. It may be that the timidity of the animal has given occasion to bestow the name, or, since hare's hair was frequently woven into fine mantles, together with feathers, that this also may have given rise to it. The latter is first mentioned by Peter Martyr, of Anghiera, "De nouo Orbe," or the "Historie of the West Indies, etc., etc." London, 1612. An English translation by Michael Lok and Richard Eden, of the famous "Decades," also entitled "De Rebus Oceanicis," (Dec. V, cap. X, p. 229), he mentions having seen among the objects brought to the court of Spain by Juan de Ribera, garments; "they compact of Conies haire, and they set these feathers in such order between the Cony haire, and intermingle them between the thriddes of the cotton, and weave them in such difficulty, that we do not well understande how they might do it." Sahagun (Lib. XI, Cap. 1, p. 157) mentions another animal to which the name "cioatlamacazqui" is given, which he translated "little old woman," basing upon its other designation of "tlamaton." [237] [286]

The reverend father is, however, in error. The first name signifies literally, "woman medicine-man," or "female doctor" (Indian notion of course), and the second "little medicine-man," from "ciuatl" woman, Molina, II, p. 22, "tlama"—medicine-man, (II, 125). This animal seems to be the Raccoon, as the following quotations prove: Joannis Eusebius Nieremberg, ("Historia naturæ maxima peregrime," Antwerp, 1635 Lib. IX, Cap. XLII, p. 175). "Antra canitates montium atque collium Tzozocolci hospitatur animal peregrinum, quod cuncta manibus praetentat. Mapach ab Indis dicitur, sed non firmo nomine; alij illamaton seu vetulam appellant, alij maxtlo seu gossypinum cingulum, alij cioatlamacazque seu sacerdotissam." Oviedo y Valdés (Lib. XII, Cap. XXXIX, p. 422), he calls "Coçumatle," an animal which is probably the Coati, makes no mention of the "mapach," but Clavigero (Liv. I, Cap. X, p. 76) treats of this animal fully.

The naming of a female relationship, "Citli" appears the more strange, as this name is given, in the Mexican mythological tales, to a god who tried to compel the sun to move, and lost his life in the attempt. This story is due to Andrés de Olmos, neither Sahagun nor Motolinia mention the occurrence in this manner. Compare Sahagun (Lib. VII, Cap. II, p. 245, etc., etc.); Mendieta (Lib. II, Cap. I, pp. 77, 78) and Torquemada (Lib. VI, Cap. XLI, p. 76). Both refer it to his authority. We shall refer to it in our essay on "Creed and Belief." [773]

[19] Molina (I, 113; II, 9, 91).

[20] Molina (I, 113; II, 22). See note 18.

[21] Molina (I, p. 117; II, 82). There is also, "nipipinia"—"pararse flaco de vejez," and "Pipinqui ynacayo"—"viejo flaco y arrugado." The affix "tontli" is a diminutive.

[22] Molina (I, p. 71). A singular etymology is shown here: The man says, {"Thy / Their} boy" or {"Thy / "Their} youth." ("Te-piltzin"—"Te-telpuch" {from "Tehnatl" / or "Te"} "thou" / "their"} and "Piltzintli," child, male or female, (II, p. 82,) and "Telpochtli," youth, (p. 96). The woman, however, calls: "my child" (or boy, since the same name is for both settlement is not stated, but while some sources mention twenty 618 chiefs as composing the original council of the tribe, others speak of but ten leaders. This might, according to the view taken, indicate in both instances ten kins, or twenty in the former and ten in the latter. At any rate the number is larger than that originally composing the tribe, thus showing that the segmentation so characteristic of tribal society according to Mr. Morgan, had already begun. Of the government of the tribe Clavigero says: "The 645 whole nation was under a senate or college of the most promi- 643 nent men."[45] No mention is made anywhere of a head-war-chief [45] Clavigero (Lib. III, cap. I, p. 190). Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. XII, p. 94. Lib. III, 618 cap. XXII. pp. 289, 290, and 291). Durán (Cap. VI, p. 47).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

It is difficult to ascertain the actual number of kins composing the Mexican tribe at at that time. The number of chiefs and their names are variously stated. Durán (Cap. VI, p. 47), mentions six chiefs and four priests. Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXIV, p. 148), mentions ten chiefs. The "Codex Mendoza" also says ten chiefs (Tab. I. Vol. I, Kingsborough). Clavigero (Lib. III, cap. I, p, 190. note r). mentions twenty. It is interesting to compare the names, also those of the twenty leaders of Torquemada (Lib II, cap, III, p. 83), with those of the twenty "barrios" of Vetancurt.

Durán.	Mendieta.	Torquemada.	Clavigero.	"Barrios" of Vetancurt.
Acacitli,	Acacitli,	Acacitli,	Acacitli,	Tzapotia,
Tenoch,	Tenuch,	Tenoca,	Tenoch,	Huehuecalco,
Meci.	Tecineutl,	Nanacatzin,	Nanacatzin,	Tecpancaltitlan,
Ahuexotl,	Auexotl,	Ahuexotl,	Ahuexotl,	Cihuateocaltilan,
Ocelopan,	Ocelopan,	Ocelopan.	Ocelopan.	Yopico.
Tecpcatetl,	Quahpan.	Tecpacatetl,	Tezacatl,	Teocaltitlan,
Quauhtloquetzqui,	Xomimitl,	Xomimitl,	Xomimitl,	Tlaxilpan,
Ococal,	Xocoyal.	Quentzin,	Quentzin,	Tequicaltitlan,
Chachalaitl,	Xiuhcaqui.	Xiuhcac,	Xiuhcac,	Atlampa,
Axolosa.	Atototl.	Axolohua,	Axolohua,	Tlacacomoco,
		Tlalala,	Tlalala.	Amanalco,
		Tzontliyayauh,	Tzontliigagauti,	Tepetitlan,
		Tuzpan,	Tochpan,	Atizapan,
		Tetepan,	Tetepan,	Xihuitengo,
		Cozca,	Cozcatl,	Tequixquipan,
		Ahatl,	Atzin.	Mecaltitlan,
		Achitomecatl,	Achitomecatl,	Xoloco,
		Acohuatl,	Acohatl,	Chichimecapan,
		Mimich,	Mimich,	Copolco,
		Tezca.	Tezcatl.	Tezcatzonco.

I have italicized such names as are alike. We see that of the ten chiefs named by Durán and Mendieta, six are also named by the two other authorities. As might be expected, there is hardly any concordance between these names of chiefs and those of the Mexican "barrios."

If it were known to us whether, in this case, each "chief" represented a kin only, 618 or whether Durán, Tezozomoc, and Mendieta alone indicated the true number, we 773 could or might, of course, determine the number of the calpulli. That the chief is used to denote his kinship in the old authors is distinctly stated by Durán (Cap. XXVII, p. 224). This chapter relates the mission of sixty "wizards" ("brujos"-"hechiceros,") sent by the chief "Montezuma Ilhuicamina" (the first "stern or wrathy chief" of that name), to an old woman or goddess purported to be "Huitzilopochtli's" mother. Arrived before the old hag (as she is described), she inquires of them for her son and for

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

643 as yet; this peculiarly military office was not yet established in permanence. However, there are indications that one executive chieftain for tribal affairs may, at least rudimentarily, have existed namely: the "Snake-woman" (cihuacohuatl). But the attributes of this office did not assign to it any marked prominence.[46]

174 The position of the Mexican tribe, about the middle of the fourteenth century, was still a very precarious one. With barely sufficient sod to dwell upon, blockaded, so to say, by powerful tribes along the lake shore; with the independent cluster of Tlatilulco, jealous and threatening, within an arrow-shot of its homes, it was forced into a peculiar attitude of military defence. The elements for a warlike organization were contained in the autonomous kins, which were grouped into the still larger cluster of the brotherhood, and all together composing the tribe. The leaders were found in the officers and chiefs of the kins. But the state of insecurity then prevailing required an office whose incumbent should be in constant charge of the military affairs of the tribe. This was plainly within the scope of tribal society; such functions had already been exercised previously, in times of particular need. Now, under the pressure of circumstances, and with a permanent settlement, permanence of the charge became a necessity.[47]

[618 773] the seven chiefs "which seven went for leaders of each quarter" (p. 222). The wizards reply (among other things): "Great and powerful Lady (?) we have neither seen, nor spoken to, the chiefs of the calpules." Judging from this, the original number of them was ten, and it is presumable that if such was the case they were the war-chiefs, whereas the others were more properly the administrative officers analogous to the "sachems" of the Iroquois. (Compare Morgan, "Ancient Society." Part II, cap. II, pp. 71, 72, and 73. Cap. IV, p. 114. Cap. V, pp. 129, 130, etc., etc., to 148). We shall have occasion to return to this again in a subsequent note.

[46] The office of "Cihuacohuatl" is very old. Ixtlilxochitl ("Relaciones" "Segunda Relacion," pp. 323 and 324), after speaking of the seven leaders of the Toltecs, mentions "Ziuhcoatl" tambien uno de los cinco capitanes inferiores" as discoverer of Jalisco. Confirmed (the last mention excepted) by Torquemada (Lib. I, cap. XIV, p. 37). Veytia (Lib. I, cap. XXII, p. 220). The "Codex Mendoza" (Plate II in Vol. I of Lord Kingsborough), represents the first regular head-war-chief of the Mexicans, "Handful of Reeds" (Acamapichtli) with a head and face of a woman and snake surmounting his own head or rather the forehead, whereas the "name" proper stands, as usual, behind the occiput. The expanatory note thereto (Vol. VI, p. 8), says: "The first figure probably denotes that Acamapichtli, before he was elected king, possessed the title of Cihuacohuotl, or supreme governor of the Mexicans; when Mexico afterwards became a Monarchy this title was retained."

[47] Durán (Cap. V, pp. 43 and 44). Acosta (Lib. III, cap. 8, p. 468). Herrera (Dec. III, lib. II, cap. XII, p. 62). Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. XIII, p. 35). "The cause of his election was the increase in numbers, and their being surrounded by enemies who made war upon them and damaged them." "La causa de su eleccion, fue, aver crecido en numero, y estár mui rodeados de Enemigos, que les hacian guerra, y afligian."

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

692 that thefts and like petty crimes increased as mutual responsi-
[186] bility diminished. The increasing complication of tasks and manners of livelihood led to disputes and injustices. In a nation of warriors skilled in arms, personal animosity flared up into bloodshed. Thus the tribunals mentioned had to be set up to exercise their jurisdiction in affairs of clan and tribe and to reinforce the powerful influences of public approval and disapproval. (See Plates 35, 41.)

688 Religious crimes, like blasphemy or robbing temples, were 775 rare, for the disfavor of the gods brought disaster on the community and on the individual as well. Religion, however, did not enter into the field of ethics, and no post-mortem punishment awaited the sinner. Special heavens existed for warriors and for women who died in childbirth and for people who died in certain specified ways, but this belief had to do with the favor of particular gods. It was not a carefully defined system of rewards and punishment.

681 Restitution for the sinned-against was the chief basis of dealing with antisocial acts, in contrast to our pattern of punishing the sinner. Exile or death was the lot of the evildoer who endangered the community. A random sampling of crimes and punishment will show the tenor of Aztec law and why it was never necessary to resort to imprisonment as a means of enforcing expiation of a crime. Cages or detention pens, however, were used to confine prisoners before trial or sacrifice. (See Plate 34.)

685 Theft was punished either by slavery until restitution was made or by a fine of double the amount stolen, one part to the robbed, the other to the clan treasury. Highway robbery received the death penalty, and pilfering in the market place meant instant death by stoning, since that petty crime mili-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

772 ritual, since the intensely fertile Vera Cruz coast plain is the 776 actual source of the seasonal rains caused by the condensa-
823 tion of warm air when the Gulf of Mexico is exposed to the chill winds of the Central Plateau. The south was considered evil, possibly because of the arid zones south of Morelos and Puebla, but had as presiding deities gods associated with spring and flowers, Xipe (the Flayed One) and Macuilxochitl* (Five Flower). The west, however, had a favorable significance, being the home of the planet Venus, the evening star, which was associated and even identified with Quetzalcoatl (Feathered Serpent), the God of Knowledge. The north was a place gloomy and awful, presided over by Mictlantecuhtli† (Lord of the Dead), who, in one of those contradictions so frequent in Mexican theology, was sometimes connected with the south as well.[4] (See end papers.)

772 The vertical world was divided into heavens and hells
776 which had no moral significance, being merely overworlds
775 and underworlds. The number of heavens varied up to thirteen and represented the dwelling places of the gods, according to their rank in the hierarchy, the original creator living in the topmost heaven, and so on down the scale. One of these heavens belonged to Tlaloc, who received those who died by drowning, lightning or other causes connected with water. One school of thought divided the heavens into east
[821] and west, according to the passage of the sun. The east was the home of warriors, whose death in battle or sacrifice nourished the sun, and the west the home of women who died in childbirth, thus sacrificing themselves in the bearing of potential warriors.[5] (See Plate 57, bottom right.)

775 The rest of the dead passed to Mictlan, the underworld.

*Ma-kweel-sho'-chitl. †Meek-tla'n-tay-coot-li.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

They had to overcome several hazards before they could 775 take up their life there, so they were equipped with charms and gifts for the journey, which took the sacred number of four days. The wayfarer had to travel between two mountains which threatened to crush him, avoid first a snake and then a monstrous alligator, cross eight deserts, surmount eight hills and endure a freezing wind which hurled stones and obsidian knives upon him. Then he reached a broad river which he crossed on the back of a little red dog, sometimes included in the grave furniture for the purpose. Finally arriving at his destination, the traveler offered gifts to the Lord of the Dead, who assigned him to one of nine different regions. Some versions make the dead spend a probationary period of four years in the nine hells before they take up their life in Mictlan, which was, like the Greek Hades, devoid of moral significance.*

The Aztecs, as we have said, conceived of their universe 771
as extending horizontally outward and vertically upward 772
and downward. The world, as horizontally divided, implied the association of divine powers with the phenomena of geography and climate. This significance of direction is a familiar religious concept. The vertical arrangement of the heavens had rather more to do with rank and order than with a realization of natural phenomena. The hierarchy of the Christian saints, with its implicit recognition of position and authority, approaches closely to the point of view with which the Aztec peoples regarded their gods. Aztec and ritualized Christian worship have much the same attitude toward distinctions between philosophy and practice, and between the point of view of the instructed theologian and the humble worshipers.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

have been an important religious center in Middle Culture times. However, neither trade nor religion broke down the sense of communal and political independence in Central Mexico. (See Plate 35, Fig. 2.)

Foreign relations centered around war, which, we have seen, was an important part of Aztec economy and religion. The same confusion of motives that we find in our modern culture affected the reasons for military action. We wage war for economic, territorial and political advantages and, while condemning the practice in our adversaries, justify our own participation by saying that we are fighting for freedom, to liberate someone, to extend civilization or to ensure peace. Soldiers on our own side are brave and attain glory, preserve our social virtues and sacrifice themselves for the public well-being. Those on the other side are aggressors, agents of evil and cowardly knaves. The Aztecs made war for defense, revenge and economic motives, which were inextricably confused with the need for the sacrificial victims requisite for proper adoration of their gods. Thus in warfare the great aim was to take captives, but behind this religious goal lurked the less holy urges of political and economic expediency.

The captive himself attained social status, since he went to a special warrior's heaven. A redoubtable Tlaxcalan chief, named Tlahuicol, was singled out for sacrifice to the sun and fought so successfully with his dummy weapons that he killed some of his adversaries and wounded a number of the others. He was pardoned and offered a chieftaincy in the Tenochcan army. Tlahuicol, however, rejected his pardon and gladly underwent sacrifice for the greater honor and glory in that death. This story illustrates the attitude of the

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

727 individual warrior, which is not unlike that of the mediaeval knight or career soldier in our own culture.[5]

The Aztec reasons for fighting and their social and moral sanctions for war were not so very different from our own, except that we have many more, due to our superior rationalizations. The Aztec military technique, however, was definitely inferior, since it was not so completely developed a social tool as it is our own culture. The basic organization of the army required the participation of every able-bodied man under the direction of the war chief. However, as Aztec society grew more intricate and greater numbers of warriors took the field, the military structure became more rigid.

The unit of organization was an aggregation of twenty men, several of which were combined into larger bodies of two to four hundred, roughly corresponding to our platoons and companies. Special detachments of from four to six men, who did scouting and raiding, operated much as do the squads of our own military system. The clan commander marshaled the larger bodies, much as a colonel handles his regiment. The clan troops were banded together in four divisions under the heads of the four municipal quarters, and the tribal war chiefs had the supreme command. In a very numerous army the troops from a given quarter, or barrio, were sometimes divided into brigades, composed of the forces from two or three clans.[6]

The high tribal officers, the war chief, the chiefs of the quarters and the clan chiefs commanded the larger bodies. The ordinary chiefs and members of the warrior orders, the Knights of the Eagle and the Tiger and of a third infrequently mentioned order, the Arrow, according to their particular ability, took over the lesser units. In other words,

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

723 648 pation in trade and booty far in excess of the apparent size and importance of the town.[11] (See map, end papers; Plates 41, top; 42, top; 43.)

721 The purely economic and military aspects of war are as crude, when judged by our modern technical standards, as the rest of the purely mechanical aspects of Aztec life. On the other hand, the ritualistic conception of war as the earthly re-enactment of the titanic struggle between opposing forces in nature has a quality almost sublime. The political and economic frictions that brought about conflict were welcomed by the warriors as an opportunity to vibrate to the deep rhythms of nature, rhythms which met in a celestial antiphony in the Sacred War which the Sun fights each day as he, by his own death and sacrifice, ensures the life of man.

721 796 The War of Flowers was undertaken to satisfy this yearning when no active campaign was in progress. In this incongruously named ceremonial combat the best warriors from several states met in a very real battle, so that feats of arms could be accomplished and captives taken to satisfy the hunger of the gods. One famous War of Flowers was repeated for several years, and the cream of the fighting men of Texcoco, Tenochtitlan and Tlacopan vied with the might of Cholula, Huexotcingo and Tlaxcala. If a warrior were captured he met the most glorious of deaths in direct sacrifice to the Sun. If he lived he gained renown. If he were slain, he [775] was cremated, an honor reserved only for fighting men and passed on to the special heaven where warriors dwell.[12]

726 Such warfare had no place in a conflict with Europeans, but, when reduced to fighting for their bare lives against the Spaniards, the Aztecs put up one of the most desperate de-

HERE BEGINNETH THE ADDITION TO THE THIRD BOOK, CALLED THE APPENDIX, WHICH TELLETH OF THE SOULS OF THOSE WHO DIED AND OF STILL OTHER SERVICES [RENDERED] THE RULERS.[1]

NICAN VMPEOA IN JANCA, INJC EY AMOXTLI IN ICOTŌCA APENDIZ IN ITECH TLATOA IN JMANJMAOĀ IN OMJCQUE. YOAN OC CEQUJ IN ITLAECOLTILOCA, IN TLACATECUTL.

115 First Chapter,[2] which telleth of the souls of those who died, who went there to the land of the dead; and of how they were buried.

[This is] what the natives knew: the old ones and the chiefs. For all who died went to [one or another of] three places when they died.[3]

The first place was there to the land of the dead[3] where dwelt, and was, Mictlan tecutli or Tzontemoc, and Mictecaciuatl, consort of Mictlan tecutli.

And there, to the land of the dead, went [the souls of] all of those who died here on earth, who died only of sickness—the chiefs, the vassals.

164 And when one died—man, or woman, or child—they thus prayed to him who had died, who had met his end. They spoke to him when still he lay couched and stretched out:

[161] "My son, thou hast known sorrow; thou hast suffered. Our lord hath been good to thee. For in truth here on earth the abode of all of us is not always to be, but it is only for a little time, only a moment, as we warm ourselves [in the sun]. Only through the grace of our lord do we come to know ourselves.

164 "And now, verily, Mictlan tecutli receiveth thee there—Acolnauacatl, Tzontemoc; and Mictecaciuatl. For he hath placed thee in this place; he hath pro-
115 vided thee a seat. Lo, there is the abode of all of us; there is the place where we all come to our fate—there where the earth groweth wide, where forever [all things] end.

"For thou hast removed to the abode of the dead, to the place of descent, to the end of journeys, and to the place of no outlets and no openings.[3a] For Injc ce capitulo: itechpa tlatoa yn imanjman in miquja in vmpa via mjctlan, yoan in quenjn tocoia.

In juh qujmatia in nican tlaca in vevetque; yoan in tlatoque ca in jxqujchtin miquja. Ezcan in vi, yn iquac miquj.

Jnjc ceccan vmpa in mjctlan, auh in vncan mjctlan, vncan onoc, vncan ca mictlan tecutli, anoço Tzontemoc, yoan in Mictecacihoatl, yn icioauh mjctlã tecutli.

auh in vmpa yi, mjctlã ieheantin, in jxquichtin tlalmiqui, in çan coculiztli ic miqui in tlatoque, in maceoalti.

auh in iquac miquia in oquichtli, anoço cihoatl, anoço piltõdi. auh injc quitlatlauhtiaia in miquja, in moniquiliaia, quilhujaia, in çan oc vetztoc, in çan oc acantoc.

Nopiltze oyhjotl ticmomachiti, oticmociavilti, omitzmocnelili in totecujo, canel amo njcan tocenchan in tlaltiepac, ca çan achitzin ca, ca çan cuel achic, ca çan titotonio ca, çan ipaltzinco titiximatico in totecujo.

auh in azcan ca omitzalmanili in mjctlan tecutli, in Aculnaoacatl in Tzotemoc, yoan in Mjctecacihoatl, ca omitzalmotetzonti, ca omjtzalmocpalti, canel vmpa tocenchan, vmpa tocenpopolivjian, vmpa tlatlalpatlaoa, ca oiccen onquiz, ca otonmovicac in quenamjcan, ximoaian in viloaian, in apochquijaouiocã, in atlecalocan, ca ocmo ceppa miloch monecuepal ticchicoz, ca ocmo tioalla-

1. Tlacatecutl, in the Aztec column, is probably to be read tlamacazqui.
2. Not mentioned in the Appendix to Book III is the concept of a special place for women who died in childbirth. See Book IV.
3. Although Sahagún invariably translates mictlan as inferno, the literal meaning is land or place of the dead.
3a. The terms apochquijaouiocã and atlecalocan might literally be rendered "place without a smoke hole" and "place without a chimney." For atlecalocan we have read tecuiyapan.

764 no more mayest thou make thy return, thy way back. Yea, no more mayest thou bethink thyself of what thou hast left behind thee. For much time thou [775] leavest bereft and orphaned thy children and grandchildren. Yea, no more mayest thou bethink thyself how they may end. We go to join with and rejoice with thee after many days."

And behold how they addressed the kin of the dead:

761 "My son, take to thyself and exert all thy force; apply thyself that thou take maize gruel and [thy] half-tortilla.[26] Take courage. Of what avail is what 764 we say? Is it that [our lord] feeleth ill will toward us?—that he mocketh us? Verily, [it is that] our lord hath willed and commanded that he hath already fulfilled his office and reached his end here. What? Couldst thou in truth yet bring it about that he might borrow a little, a day, [here] on earth?

"And although thy heart and body feel affliction and pain, although it is dark there where he lieth alone and awaiteth the commandment of our lord, be of good cheer, and henceforth be sure of thy orphanhood.

764 "What canst thou do, that thou art bereft? My son, use all thy strength; let not thy head hang, like one in grief. For now we have come to strengthen thy heart and thy body by a little. For here is the purpose and office of motherhood, of fatherhood. For our lord hath destroyed [the household]; for thy mothers and fathers have gone, they who well uttered and recounted their consolations and lamentations. And this is enough. Thus [we who are as] thy mothers and fathers have entreated thee. Go in peace."

Then the old men whose office it was prepared the paper vestments. They shredded, cut up, and bound the paper. And when they had prepared the paper adornment, thereupon they arrayed the dead one; they flexed [his limbs]; they poured water upon his head.

They said to him: "Behold that which thou hast enjoyed, that by which thou hast lived on earth."

And then they poured a little water into a bowl, and offered it [to him], and said to him:

"Behold wherewith thou shalt travel."

Then they put [the bowl] in with him, and thereupon they bound him well; they bound firmly upon him [the wrappings for the dead]; they wrapped them round and round him and tied them firmly matiz in monica motepotzco, in macujl in matlac, ca otiquijmonjcnocauhteoac, otiquijmontlacacauhteoac, in mopilhoan, in monvioan, ca ocmo tihoallamatiz y çaço quen popoliviaque, ca motech tonacitivi, motech tonpachivitivi, in macujl in matlac.

Auh izcatquj ic qujtlatlauhtiaia in mjccaoa.

Nopiltze ma izquijch xicmanili, ma izquijch motlapal xicmochivili, ma ximochicaoa, ma ticcauh yn atolatl, in tlapãqui, ma ximelaquaoa, quennel tiqujtoanj, cujx çan aca ic techcocolia, cujx çan aca ic techquelloa, ca oquimonequilti oquimjtalhuj in totecujo, ca ie vncan ca itequjuh, ca ie vncã ca itzonquçaia, quen xoconchioa in ma oc achitzin ca in ma oc cemilhujtzintli conmotlanevianj in tlalticpac.

Auh ynjn tlacuelehoatl ontoneoa, oochichinaca in moiollotzin in monacaiotzin, tlacuelehoatl ontlaioatica in vncan ontlacauhteoac, in vncan ocontlatolchiaia in totecujo, tlacuele centlamjc xoconmomachiti in jcnopilotl, quennel timotolinja, nopiltze ma izquich motlapal, xicmochivili, ma nocuele iuhqujn tlaocoli tocontolo, ca çan nican achitzin, ic ticchicauhtivitze in moiollotzin, in monacaiotzin, ca nican popovi ixtlavi, in naniotl, in taiotl, ca otlanemiuhiantili in totecujo, ca oiaque in monanoa in motaoa, in vel quiteneoaia in vel quijponia in choquitzio, in ixaioiotlatolli. auh ca ie izquich, injc mitzmotlatlauhtilia yn monaoa, in motaoa tle ticmatcatzintli.

Niman qujntlachichiviliaia yn amatlamatque, in vevetque in machiceque catca: yn amatl quixoxotlaia, quiteteqnja quihilpiaia. auh in oquicencauhque in amatlatqujtl, njman ie ic quichichioa in mjcqui, quicnonotztlalia, icpac conteca atl, quilhuja. Jzcatquj yn oticmotlamachtico ino ic tinenca tlalticpac.

auh njmã achi contonco conteca in atl, conmaca quilhuja.

Yzcatquj injc tonotlatocat, njman itic conaquja niman ie ic quiquiquimiloa, quiteteuhquimiloa, quiteteuhilpia, quicacatzilpia in mjcqui njman ie quimamaca, in iamatlatqui, auh in 26. Cf. Seler, op. cit., p. 295. This is the small chili's ration as given in Codex Mendoza.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

about the dead one. Then they laid out his paper adornment in order. And when they had arranged it in order, then they gave it all to him. They placed it as an offering before him and said to him:

"Behold wherewith thou shalt pass there where the mountains come together.

"And behold how with this thou shalt pass the road which the serpent watcheth.

"And behold wherewith thou shalt pass the green lizard, the xochitonal.

"And behold wherewith thou shalt cross the eight deserts.

"And behold wherewith thou shalt go over the eight hills.

"Behold wherewith thou shalt travel the place of the obsidian-bladed winds."

For there, in that place, the place of the obsidian-bladed winds, it was said that all suffered much. By winds were all the obsidian blades, and stones, borne. And hence, when valiant men died, [their kin] burned all of their baskets with insignia, their shields, their obsidian-bladed swords, and all the things [which they had wrested from] their captives; and all their capes, and all their clothing of whatever sort.

Likewise, [if it were] a woman, all her baskets, her waist bands, her divided cords for holding up the textile, her skeins, her shuttles, her battens, her cane stalks, her combs—also all [this] burned with her.

It was said that they would encircle themselves [with these things] and thus be protected in the place of the obsidian-bladed winds, and not suffer greatly. And he who had nothing among his wretched belongings, who went bare, underwent much pain and suffered much in order to pass the place of the obsidian-bladed winds.

And also they caused him to carry a little dog, a yellow one; they fixed about its neck a loose cotton cord. It was said that [the dog] bore [the dead one] across the place of the nine rivers in the land of the dead.

And when Mictlan tecutli was reached, he offered up all with which they had adorned the dead ones on earth—the ceremonial papers,[6] the pine incense burners, and bundles of canes [for perfume], loose cotton thread, and red cotton thread, or his cape

ocontlamamacaque, njman ie conmaca centlamantli ixpan cõmana quilhuja. 764

Yzcatquj inic tonquijçaz in vncan tepetl imonamiquja. 764

auh izcatquj ic itla tonquiçaz in vtli quipia yn cuatl. 775 auh izcatquj iqu itlan tonquijçaz, in xoxouhquj cuetzpalin in xochitonal.

auh izcatqui ynjc tocontõcaz chicuey ixtlaoatl.

auh izcatquj ic tonquiçaz in chicue tiliuhcan.

Yzcatquj ic tonquiçaz in itzehecaian.

auh in vncan y, ytzehecaian, quil cenca netolinilo, muchi hecatoco in jtztli, yoan in xalterl, auh ipampa in miquja in oquichtin in jntlavizpetlacal yn jnchimal, yn jnmaquauh, yoã in ixquijchtin ymalteooan, yoã in ixquijch in itilma, yoan in jxquijch in tlein itlatlatqui, muchipan quitlatiaia;

ça ie no ivi in cihoatl in ixquijch in itana, in ineanaia, yn imecamaxal, yn iquatzõ, yn ixiiouh in itzotzopaz, in ivtlauh, yn iteçacauh ytziquaoez, no muchi ipã tlatla, quilmach quimotenãtiz, ic mehecatzacuiliz yn itzehecaiã, amo cenca motoliniz. auh yn aq'n atle itlatquitzin içan iuh iauh, cẽca tlaihjiovia cenca motolinja, inic quiça itzehecaian.

Auh yoã centetl chichiton quivicaltia ieh in coci, concozcatia potonqui icpatl, quilmach quipanaviz chicunaoapan in mjctlan.

auh in iquac onaxico in jtech mjctlan tecutli, quitlamamaca ĩ tlalticpac in tlein qujnchichivilia mimicque in evĩlotl, ocotlenamactli, yoan quisujmiloaia acaquavitl, yoan potonqui, yoan chichilicpatl, aço ytilma, anoço ymaxtli. auh in cihoatl icue, ivipil. yoa

6. Bulbul: meaning is problematical. In Seler's Einige Kapitel (p. 297, n. 3) this is offered: "ocotl—Bohrwurmer, vgl. Molina ocotlaxtli—hier etwa Auchkleeria."

764 or his breech clout. And a woman, her skirt [or] her shift, and indeed all her clothing she had left they 775 bound together.

in ie muchi itlatlatquj, in oquicauhteoac muchi quiquimilua,

And when eighty days [had passed], then they burned [these]. Likewise was this done after a year, and after two years, and after three years. And when four years had passed, [then was] the last time that they did [this].[5] in iquac nappoaltica iquac tlatla, no iuh muchioaia yn iquac cexiuhtica. yoan in iquac oxiuhtica, yoan in iquac iexiuhtica: auh in iquac nauhxiuhtica ça cen in conchioa.

And all this, it was said, came to Mictlan tecutli. And when the four years had ended, thereupon [the dead one] went to the nine lands of the dead,[6] [where] lay a broad river.

auh injn quilmach much itech onaci, in Mictlan tecutli: auh in otzonquiz nauhxiviti, njman ie ic iauh in chicunauhmjctlan, icac atl patlaoac,

There the dogs carried one across. It was said that whosoever came walking [to the bank] looked over to the dogs. And when one recognized his master, thereupon he came to throw himself into the water in order to carry his master across. Hence the natives took pains to keep the dogs.

ie vncan in tepanavia chichime, quil in aqujn oquiçato ivic oalachia in chichi. auh in oquioalixima yn itecujo njman ie ic oalmomaiavi in atlan injc quipanaviz in itecujo, ipampa in njcan tlaca cenca qujnnemjtiaia in chichime.

And it was said that the white dogs and the black ones, those which were black, could not carry one over the river to the land of the dead. It was said that the white dog said: "I have just washed myself." And one which was black said: "I have just stained myself black." Only a yellow [one][7] could bear one across.

auh quil in iztac chichi. yoã in tliltic, in tlilca quil avel tepanavia yn mjctlan, quil quitoa in iztac ca quin ononnotlapaquili. auh in tlilca quitoa ca quin ononnoçac, çan ye yio in coci vel tepanavia.

And there at the nine lands of the dead, the [dead] were completely destroyed.

auh in vncan chicunamjctlan ẽcã ocempopolioca.

764 And when it came to pass that [the old men] had ornamented [the dead one], then they took him to the fire. And first they slew the little dog; thereupon they burned [the dead one and the dog].

Auh in ie iuhqui yn oquicencauhque, njmã ie quivica in tleco, yoan in chchiton achto conmjctia, njman ie ic tlatla,

Two old sextons took great care of [the dead one]. And some of the sextons stayed singing. And when the body of [the dead one] already was burning, they took great pains with it, they kept packing it down. And the body crackled and popped, and smelled foul. And when it came to pass that they had burned it, thereupon they gathered and heaped up the coals. And they said: "Let him be bathed"; and thereupon they bathed him—they cast water upon him; they sprinkled and poured the water on him. When [the coals] grew cold, once more they gathered up the charred remains, and thereupon dug a round hole in which to place it—a pit, and this they called a cave.

cenca quimocuitlavia in tlalhoaque vmentin, auh in cequjntin tlalhoaque cujcatoque: auh in iquac ie tlatla inacaio cenca qujmocuitlavia quixixiltinemj. auh in tonacaio, tzotzoioca, cuecuepoca, yoan tzoiaia: auh in ie iuhquj in ocontlatique, njmã ie ic collolalia, quitepeuhtitlalia in tlexochtli. Yoan qujtoa ma onmalti, njman ie ic caltia catequja capapachoa, capapatztza, in oceceuh, ie no ceppa collolalia in tecolli, njman ie ic tlatataca iaoaltic in quitlalia, tlatatactli,

5. Cf. also Seler: Collected Works, II, Pt. 3, pp. 144f. Gifts given the prince of the underworld were a false mummy bundle of resinous wood, clothing, and a mask. Similar rites were performed for those who died far from home, or had been taken captive and sacrificed. Seler adds that if many fell in an expedition, the ruler prepared a public feast, in which there were singing and dancing in honor of the dead, and the burning of a mummy bundle, gifts, and belongings of the dead. The feast lasted four days.

6. The nine lands or regions of the dead were thought of as arranged in tiers, or layers, the ninth being the deepest. See Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, IV, pp. 178f. The heavens likewise rose in tiers.

7. Red, according to Seler (Collected Works, II, Pt. 3, pp. 144f.). See, however, Einige Kapitel, p. 298 (gelbe).

[Second Chapter][1]

775 The second place [where] they went [was] there to Tlalocan. And in Tlalocan all prospered greatly; all enjoyed much wealth. Never did one suffer. Never was there lack of ears of green maize, [nor] squash, squash blossoms, heads of amaranth,[2] green chilis, tomatoes, green beans, [nor] the Tagetes flower.

Injc vecan viloa vmpa in tlalocan. auh in tlalocan cenca netlamachtilo, cenca necuiltonolo, aic mihjiovia, aic polivi in elotl, in aiotetl, yn aioxochquilitl, in ouhtzontli, in chilchotl, i xitomatl, yn exotl, in cempoalxochitl:

And there dwelt the Tlaloca, who were like priests, the long haired ones;[3] who were like the fire priests.

auh vmpa nemj in tlaloque, iuiqui in tlamacazque, pāpapaoaque, iuhque in tlenamacaque catca:

766 And there went those who had been struck by thunderbolts, and those who had been submerged in the water, and those who had died in the water. And those who were leprous, or affected by venereal sickness, or by boils, or by the itch, or by sores, or by the gout; and those full of tumors, [those] they took [there], and those swollen by the dropsy,[4] [who] thus died.

auh in vmpa vi ichoantin in: viteco, yoã in ilaquilo, yoan in atlan miqui, yoan ichoantin in teococoxque, yoan in nanaoati, yoan in xochicivi, yoan in xixjioti, yoan in papalani, yoan in coacivi, yoan in popoçaoalizzli quinvica, in teponaoacivi ic miquj,

These, when they died, they did not burn, but only buried. They applied liquid rubber to their faces; and with fish amaranth [paste] they covered their cheeks; and they colored their foreheads blue [with blue papers]. And they gave them [each] a paper lock of hair at the back of the head. Mountain images they placed before them. And they placed paper capes over them, and in their hands they placed for them large staves of wood.

in ichoãn jn, yn iquac miqui, amo tlatla, can quintocaia, quimixolviaia, yoan michioauhtli, incamapan conpachooa, yoan quimjxquatexoviaia, yoan quimahamacuexpaltiaia, tepeiotl, in quintlaliliaia yn imixquac: auh amatl in quinquequentiaia, yoan inmac quintequiliaia ozzopil quavitl:

775 And so they said that in Tlalocan all is ever green, always in growth, always spring; it is always spring time.

iuh quitoa in tlalocan, muchipa tlacelia, muchipa tlatzmolini, muchipa xopantla tlaxopīmamanj.

1. Chapter heading is omitted in the Nahuatl version.
2. Omohxoxotl. Seler (Hoge Kapitel, p. 308) has omohxoxotli (Bouwkaar). The corresponding Spanish text has semillas de Mahiz.
3. Sahagún writes (Bulnes ed., II, p. 321): "Cuando morie el señor o rey, para elegir otro presidieron los ancianos que llamaban tecuilonqui, y también los mejor del pueblo que llamaban tehuamahtiniz; y también los capitanes, soldados viejos de la guerra, que llamaban yautequioque, y otros capitanes que eran principales en las cosas de la guerra, y también los sabiaques que llamaban tlamacazque o papaoaque."
4. Identification of diseases is problematical. Seler (loc. cit.) has ochoanes of the genitals for xixjioti, skin diseases for papalani, inflamed sores which did not heal for coacivi, swelling of the body for popoçaoalizzli, and infectious diseases for teponaoacivi.

[p. 46 is blank]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

115

Third Chapter, in which are recorded those who went to heaven.

Jnic ey capitulo, vncã moteneoa ih aqujque via ilhujcac.

The third place to which they went was there to the home of the sun, in heaven. Those went there who died in war, either, verily, those who died then in battle, to be despoiled there on the battlefield, where they breathed their last, where fate overtook them, or else [those who] were brought home that later they might die [as sacrifices]. Perchance [one such] was slain in gladiatorial sacrifice, or cast into the fire, or shot with arrows, or slain with pointed canes, or fought with and slain, or covered with resinous wood [to which they laid fire]. All [these] went to the home of the sun.

Injc Eacan vilou: vmpa in ichan tonatiuh ilhujcac, ichoantin vmpa vi, in iaomiqui, in anoço vel vncan njman miquj iaoc, in iapaniocan, in vncan qujnnamoia, vncã ihiotl, quiça, vncan ii ɔequjub vetzi, yn anoço çan calaquilo, i çatepan miquizque. Yn aço oooano, aço tlepantlaxo, aço tlaxichvilo, aço teoconvilo, anoço cacalioa, anoço ocopotonjlo, muchintin vi in tonatiuh ichan,

It was said that they dwelt where was only a place like a plain; when the sun burst forth and arose, then they shouted and cried out to it and struck their shields together. And he whose shield was pierced in perhaps two or three places could well look at the sun. And he whose shield nowhere was pierced could in no wise see the sun nor look into its face. And there, where dwelt those slain in war, [were] the magueyes, the thorny shrubs,[1] and clumps of mesquites. And all offerings which [the living] offered them—these they could receive; these could reach them.

quil ça çemonoque, in canin iuhcan ixtlaoacan, in iquac in oalmomana in oalquiçaia tonatiuh, nimã quicaoatza, coiovia, muchimalhuitequj, auh in aqujn ichimal, in aço vncca, anoço iexcan tlamintli vncã vel quitta in tonatiuh. auh in aqujn acan tlamintli ichimal, avel quitta in tonatiuh, avel ixco tlachia, auh yn vmpa onoĩ, in iaomjcque nequametl, tzivactli, mizquitla; auh in jxqujch yn ventli in qujnmanilia, vel quitta vel itech aci.

And when four years had gone by, then they were changed into birds of precious feather—humming birds, flower birds,[2] yellow birds blackened about the eyes;[3] chalky butterflies, feather-down butterflies, large varicolored butterflies,[4] which sucked [honey auh in iquac onauhxiuhtique, njmã ic mocuepa, tlaçototome, huitzitzilti, xochitototi, totocoztli, mixtetlilcomolo, tiçapapalotl, ivipapalotl, xicalteconpapalotl, tlachichina in vmpa in monoian. youn in njcan

1. Teiuxtli: according to Seler (Collected Works, II, Pt. 3-4, p. 56), it is probably a thorny plant found in the Chiahuac highlands; he cites Hernández to identify it as a cactus with cylindrical stem. "It is, therefore, the national weapon in the hand of the god of the Otomí."

2. Xochitototi: Simeón (op. cit.) identifies it as a cuzcatl—a bird of yellow throat, breast, and stomach. Sahagún (Robredo ed., III, p. 184) calls it so. "era como flor: tenia la garganta, y el pecho, y la barriga amarillos, como flor muy amarilla; tenia en la cara unos ojos: tenia la cabeza y espaldas y las alas y la cola, entreladas de negro y blanco; tenia las pies negros."

3. Cf. Seler: Einige Kapitel, p. 382.

4. The butterflies are thus described in Seler, loc. cit., and Collected Works, IV, p. 82. Sahagún (op. cit., p. 214) mentions xicalpapalotl: "son muy pintadas de diversos colores."

775 [137]

from the flowers] there where they dwelt. And here upon earth they came to suck [honey] from all the varied flowers—the erythrina coralloides,[5] the carolines princeps,[6] the calliandra.[7] tlalticpac oalhui in quioalchichina, in jxquich nepapan xochitl in equimjtl, anoço tzonpanquaviti xilohxochitl, tlacoxilohxochitl.

5. Cf. Saher, op. cit., II, Pt. 1-2, p. 53, Pt. 3-4, p. 174; and Rimjpe Kapixel, p. 302. He says equimitl is the leaf of the tzonpanquaxitl, the erythrina coralloides or coralloidendron. Apparently it was used magically; cf. Sahagún, Lib. IX, caps. iii-iv, and Saher's translations of the Nahuatl text in Sahagún (Robredo ed., V, p. 234). Sahagún (Robredo ed., III, p. 275) writes: "Hay también unos árboles que se plantan en las florestas que se llaman tzonpanquahuitl; es árbol redondo, tiene ramas apretadas, tiene la cepa redonda y de buen parecer; tiene unas flores que se llaman equimitlitl; son muy coloradas y de buen parecer y no tienen olor ninguno; se hojas de este árbol se llaman equimitl."

6. Cf. Saher, Rimjpe Kapixel, loc. cit. In Collected Works, II, Pt. 3-4, pp. 132-3, he defines it as "palo de rosa" (name in Chiapas), "cabello de ángel" (miimosaceae calliandra). The former is bauhinia equestrina K. Schum or carolinea princeps L. fil. Saher believes xilocochitl is a name given two distinct flowers. Sahagún (op. cit., III, 276) describes them as "coloradas y a manera de bolas derhiladas; hácese en una hierba que se llama xilocochitl: es una olorosa, pero son muy hermosas." See also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, cap. xxviii.

7. Cf. Saher, op. cit., pp. 174-5: This passage is related to one in the song chanted every eight years when water tunnies were eaten. Cf. Sahagún (Robredo ed.), V, pp. 136, 149 ff.; Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book II, p. 212.

821
823
502

The Wind

That which was known as [the wind] was addressed as Quetzalcoatl. From four directions it came, from four directions it traveled. The first place whence it came was the place from which the sun arose, which they named Tlalocan. This wind which came from there they gave the name of the Tlaloc wind. Little did it frighten men; lightly did it blow. With it, one could go in a canoe; with it one could land; with it one could cross the water.

[715]

The second place whence it came [the north] was called Mictlampa; and this was named the wind from the land of the dead. This was much feared, and caused much terror. Violently did it blow, when it set in, and the canoes could not contend with it. They could not travel forward. They could not venture forth; they could not pass across; they could not get under way in the water. Rather, all the boatmen came out and left [their craft] because of fear—those who gained their livelihoods on the water, the fishermen who used nets, or who speared [the fish]. When they saw that it was Mictlampa ehecatl which arose, then they feared evil and were troubled. They hurried, hastened, and greatly quickened their pace, plying the pole—plying it rapidly. They strained their arms, that they might come out and beach [the canoe] on the shore, on the edge of the water, near the water line. And so they said: "Often it drowneth men and sinketh canoes."

The third place whence it came [the west] was known as Ciuatlampa; it was named Ciuatecayotl and Ciuatlampa ehecatl. Also it was called One Wind. or Maçaua; for it came from Maçauacan. And this one did not blow fiercely. Nevertheless, it was very cold. Men suffered much from [its] cold; they became livid and stiff from cold. It made them shiver; it was deadly. It made men tremble, shake, and quake; it exhausted them; it gave them stomach pains, or pains in the lungs, or the head. And yet, with it they could go ashore from the water. It did not frighten men nor terrify them.

And the fourth place whence came the wind [the south] was there from Uitztlampa. It was named Uitztlampa ehecatl. And this one was much feared and held in dread. All feared harm. It made men speechless with terror; it made them silent with fear. Because it blew swiftly, it frightened them greatly. They said: "When it arieth, it uprooteth and breaketh trees: and it teareth walls to pieces—old walls

Ehecatl

Moteneoaia: ic quinotzaia quetzalcoatl. Nauhcampa oallauh, nauhcampa oalitztiuh. Inic ceccan oallauh: vmpa in iquiçaiampa tonatiuh, quitoaia tlalocã: inin ehecatl, vmpa oallauh, quitocaiotiaia, tlalocaiotl: amo cẽca temauhti, amo cenca totoca, uel ipan acaltica viloa, vel ipan quixoa, in atlan: vel ipã panoa.

Inic occã oallauh, moteneoa mictlampa: auh inin motocaiotia mictlampa ehecatl. In hin uel imacazo, uellamauhtia: cenca totoca, in icoac moquetza, amo vel quisnamiqui in acalli: amo vellauilteco, amo uel tlastlapalolo, avel istlapal viloa, auel tlanecuilolo in atlan: çan mauhcaquixoa, mauhcaquiça in tlapanauique, in atlãca, in tlãtlamãque, in tlamjnque. In oquittaque, ca mictlampa ehecatl in omoquetz: ic cenca motenmati, motequipachoa, uel motequimati, ompilcatoque, ompipilcatoque, in tlaneloa, in tequitlaneloa: vel momaquauhtilia, inic uel onquiça, onmacana atenco, atexipalco, achichiiacpa: iuh quitoa, ca miecpa, teatlanmictia, quipolactia in acalli.

Inic escan oallauh: moteneoa cioatlãpa, motocaiotia, cioatecaiotl, cioatlampa ehecatl: no quitocaiotia ce ehecatl, anoço maçaoa ipampa vmpan oalitztiuh maçaoacan. Auh in hin, amo no cenca totoca: iece cenca itztic, uel tececmjti, tepineoalti, tepinuch, tetetziliuiti, tetetzilquisti, tetzitzilquiti, teuiztioquilti, tecuecuechquiti, tecuecuechmiquiti: texillanquauhtili, teiomotlanquauhtili, tetzonteconeuh. Auh tel, uel ipan quixoa in atlan, amo temauhti, amo tẽmauizcuiti.

Auh inic nauhcampa, oallauh ehecatl, vmpa uitztlampa: motocaiotia uitztlampa ehecatl. Auh inin, cenca vel imacazo, mimacaci: netenmacho, aoc tenaostilti, aoc tetlatolti: ipãpa cenca totoca, cenca tlamauhtia. Quitoa, in icoac moquetza: vel quitzjneoa, quipoztequi in quauitl: yoan quixixinja in tepantli, in tepançolli, in xacalli: quecatoctia in tlatzacuilli, in chinancalli. Auh in vei atl vel colinja, quiteponaçoa,

The Seventh Chapter telleth of the year counter and the year sign.

One Rabbit

It is said [that this was] the year sign and year counter of the south. For thirteen years it carried, set on its path, took with it, and bore the burden [of the year]. Always, during each [of the thirteen] years, it was the first, the one which led, began, made the start, and introduced as many year signs as there were: Reed, Flint, and House. Of the one [known as] Reed, it was said [that it was] as it were the sign of the east; that is, the year sign of the sun. For from there issued the light which shone forth.

And the third year sign, the one [known as] Flint, was called the sign of the north. For [the north] was said to be toward the land of the dead. Thus have the old people spoken: it is said that when one died, to that place set out, went straightway, and proceeded the dead. Therefore, when someone died—when [the sextons] adorned him, when they wrapped him in his mantle and bound him [in wrappings]—they made him look toward and seated him looking to that place.

And the fourth year sign, the fourth in order, [was] the one known as House—the sign of the west. For this reason they named it Ciuatlampa: it is said that there dwelt but women; none of us men were there.

These four year signs, year counit[ers], as many times as they came to appear, [so many times] they came to be the beginning year signs.

When all the thirteen-year [periods]—all four of them—had concluded, ended, and finished, thus proceeding around, to give and leave their works from year to year, this [last] one came to, stopped at, jogged, knocked against, and ended at Thirteen House, the sign of the west. That is, now it approached [the end of its] thirteen years of labor.

And then One Rabbit came to settle itself as the sign of the south. When this occurred and it established itself and began its work, thus to bear a year

Inic chicome capitulo, itechpa tlatoa: in xiuhtlapoalli, in xiuhtonalli.

Ce tochtli.

moteneoa: uitztlampa xiuhtonalli, xiuhtlapoalli: 805
matlacxiuitl omei tlauica, tlaotlatoctia, tlatqui, tlamama. In muchipa cecexiuhtica, vel tlaiacatia, tlaiacana, quipeoaltia, ipeuhca muchioa, quitzintia in izquitetl xiuhtonalli in acatl, in tecpatl, in calli. In ichoatl acatl, mitoa: tlapcopa tonalli, iuhquinma, q. n. tlauilcopa xiuhtonalli: ipãpa ca umpa oalneci in tlauilli, in tlanestia. 823

Auh inic ei xiuhtonalli, ichoatl in tecpatl: moteneoa mictlampa tonalli, ipampa in mjtoa mictlampa: [775]
iuh quitoaia in veuetque, quilmach in icoac micoa: vmpa itztiui, vmpa tlamelaoa, vmpa tlatotoca in mimicque. Ichica, in icoac aquin miquia, in oconchichiuhque, in oconquiquimiloque, in oconiilpique: [764] vmpa quitlachialtiaia, vmpa quitztiltitimotlaliaia.

Auh inic naui, tlanauhcaiotia, xiuhtonalli: ichoatl in calli moteneoa, cioatlampa tonalli. Ipãpan iuh quitoaia, cioatlampa: quilmach, çan muchi cioa umpa onoque, aocaque toquichtin.

Inin nauhteme xiuhtonaltin, xiuhtlapoaltin: izquiteme ceceppa moquetztiui, tonalpeuhcaiome muchiuhtiuj. 805

Inic muchi matlatlacxiuitl omeci, quitlamja, conxxitia, quitzonquistia nauhteistin: inic tlaiaoalotiui, quimomacatiui, quimocauilitiui, intequiuh, cecexiuhtica: ichoatl itech onaci, itech ōmocaoa, itech onitopi, itech ontlatzotzona, ontlatzonquistia in matlactlomei calli, cioatlampa tonalli. q. n. ic ocxxiti in matlacxiuitl omei itequiuh.

Auh niman ic oalmoquetza in ce tochtli: uitz- 805
tlampa tonalli. In icoac, y, moquetza, in quipeoaltia 731
itequiuh, inic ce xiuitl tlauicaz, tlaotlatoctiz: cenca

821
372
[775]

men make certain burns on the wrist in honor of those stars. They said of him who was not marked by those burns that, when he died, there in hell they would produce fire on his wrist, drilling it as those do who here drill fire with the stick.

maduras quando se muriese q̃ alla en el infierno avian de sacar el fuego de su moñeca barrenãdola como qñ aca sacã el fuego del palo.

821
787

The star Venus these people named Citlalpol or Uey citlalin, and they said that when it riseth in the east it maketh four assaults. The [first] three times it shineth little and hideth again; and at the fourth it cometh forth with all its brightness and followeth its course. And they say of its light that it is like that of the moon. On its first assault they held it an omen of evil, saying that it brought sickness with it. And therefore they shut the doors and windows so that its light might not come in. And sometimes they took it as a good omen. And at the beginning of the time that it started to appear to the east, they slew captive men in reverence to it, and offered it their blood, spattering it toward [the star] with their fingers.

A la estrella de venus la llamaua esta gente citlalpul, vey citlalli y dezian que quando sale por el oriente haze quatro aremetidas, y a las tres luze poco y bueluese a asconder: y a la quarta sale con toda su claridad y procede por su curso. y dizen de su luz que parece a la de la luna. En primera arremetida teniaula de mal aguero diziendo que traya enfermedad contigo, y por esto cerrauan las puertas y ventanas porq̃ no entrase su luz. Y a las vezes la tomavan por buen aguero. Y al p'ncipio de tp̃o que començaua a aparecer por el oriente matauan hõbres captiuos por su reuerencia, y ofrecianle la sangre salpicando hazia ella con los dedos.

X 787 776 So he fled from its presence;, back of him it went rattling at him as it pursued him. And if he stood, if he stopped in alarm, it also sat, and remained rattling. And if he gathered courage to seize it quickly, it only mocked him for doing so. Far did it rise when it jumped; he could not catch it. Hence, in the same manner, he let it alone in his fear; from its presence he fled, exerting all force in order to run terrified to his home.

Auh intla moquetza, motilquetza, no motlalia chachalcatinemj: auh intla omoiollochichili, injc qujcujtiuetziz çan jc qujquelloa, ueca ieoa in choloa, amo uel cana: çan no iuh conmauhcacaoa: ixpampa ieoa: iuqujch qujtoctia, injc momauhcatlaloa ichan.

X 787 775 Just so the dead also appeared to people. They were in [funeral] wrappings, with head wrappings, and were groaning. If, somewhere, one appeared before one, it moaned at him. Only the valiant could venture toward it in order to seize it and cling to it. But then it only made sport of them: perhaps a clump of grass or a hard clod remained in their hands. [776] Thus they quickly transformed themselves. So it was said that all this was only a disguise of Tezcatlipoca by which he mocked men. Etc.

Çan ie no iuhquj in mjcquj, no moteititiaia: yilpitica, quaquailpitica, quiqujnacatica: in cana moteititiaia; tequjqujnatza: çan iehoan in jollochicavaque, vel iujc motlapaloa in qujcujtiuetzi: itech mopiloa. Auh injc çan inca mocacaiaoa, aço tlachcujtl, anoço tlaquavac tetl in jmmac mocauhtiquiça: injc mocueptiuetzi: iuh mjtoa, ca çan muchi ich, inaoal in tezcatlipoca injc teca mocacaiaoaia etc.

The omen of the linnet.[4]

X 787 825 The linnet is a bird like a woodpecker,[5] and far into the forest is its home. And when it cried out at someone, it was taken as an omen.[6] They said: "It is not a good time that we have come; for something will spring out on us."

Tetzaujtl itechpa chiqujmoli.

In chiqujmoli, ca centetl tototl, iuhquin quauhchochopitli: auh veca quauhtla in jchan. Auh in iiçc tepan tzatzia, netetzaujloia: qujtovaia, ca amo qualcan, in otioallaque: ca itla ipan ticholoaque.

The omen of the coyote.

[776] They said it was Tezcatlipoca. Often he disguised himself as a coyote; and this coyote often intercepted men on the road. And when he did this, then was heard: "This is by no means a good time for him who goeth; perhaps thieves or robbers are somewhere on the road, or something harmful will spring out at them."

Tetzaujtl itechpa in coiotl.

Qujtoaia, ca in tezcatlipoca: mjiecpa qujmonaoaltiaia in Coiutl: auh injn coiutl, mjiecpa teiaiacatzacujlia in vtlica. Auh in jquac iuh qujchioa y, njman ic mocaquj, ca amo qualcan in viloa: aço ichtecque, anoço tetlatlaçaltique, cana vtlica cate: anoço itla ipan chololoaciuh, in tecoco.

Here end the omens which the natives of New Spain took as portents.

Nican tzonquiça in tetzauitl, yn qujtzonmatia, injcan nauan españa tlaca.

---

4. Molina, op. cit.: chiquitlin pasaro; Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 514 (chiquinoli): jilguerillo—especie de jilguero. Sahagún (Guilbert ed.), Vol. IV, p. 334: "Ave canora, cantamente parlera. . . . Deyshonra matarla hacerla."

5. Quauhchochopitli: Martín Antonio Rincón, in Rerum Medicarum Novae Hispaniae Thesaurus seu Plantarum Animalium Mineralium Mexicanorum Historia ex Francisci Hernandez (Rome: Vitale Mascardi, 1651), p. 33, appendix, book Chap. XCIV, "De Quauhchochopitli, seu Avicula ligna excavante," and writes: "Avicula est, Monimae Cotarnici formà, & magnitudine, plumis nigris, aut pallis, linea albà, transversim discurrentibus distinctis; ventre, pectoreque, minii colore. Singua picorum more, quorum est species proprius: nisi in frigidis, & arboribus ventre nudiusculi petitur avenatur."

6. Corresponding Spanish text: "las bozes del pico [maggie]: quando le oyan bozear en las montañas."

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

fate, to see if the day of birth was lucky or unlucky. Four 787 777 days later the child's family held a feast both to celebrate the birth and to name the child. If the day of birth proved 553 to be unlucky, custom sanctioned a religious fiction where- 777 by the naming ceremony was postponed to a more favorable period. At the feast the guests sprinkled food and pulque 553 over the sacred fire, which had been kindled at the ac- 776 couchement as an offering to the Fire God, the Old God, whose cult originated in the time of the Middle Cultures.
The child, if a boy, was shown toy weapons and tools 553 which the parents placed in his hands, guiding them in the motions of use. If the child were a girl the parents made her pretend to weave and spin with toy instruments. A name, that badge of identity so important to man, was given to the child at this time. A boy was often named for the date of his birth, One Reed, Two Flower, Seven Deer, or for an animal, like "Nezahualcoyotl" (Hungry Coyote), or for an ancestor, like "Montezuma the Younger," or for some event at the time of birth. Often the day name was given with an alternative animal title. Girls' names frequently were compounded with the word for flower, xochitl.

Education began after weaning in the third year. Its pur- [862] pose was to induct the child into the techniques and obliga- 861 tions of adult life as promptly as possible. A world in which handwork is universal offers a child a chance to participate in adult activities far earlier than in our heavily mechanized culture. Fathers supervised the training of sons, and mothers instructed their daughters. Up to six years of age the children listened to frequently repeated homilies and advice, learned the uses of the household implements and performed minor household chores.[2]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

701 leadership. In Tenochtitlan the supreme chief, tlacatecuhtli, 643 "chief of men," was always chosen from the four and often [776] occupied first the position of "Snake Woman," a name also given to an important fertility goddess, Cihuacoatl.* The functions of these high chiefs are difficult to interpret in terms of Western civilization. Roughly the "chief of men" may be said to have represented the tribe in its external affairs, like war and alliances. As such the office had a greater significance to the Spanish observers who saw its holder as the leader of the tribe. The "Snake Woman" was the executive peak of the internal affairs of the tribe, where civil custom and religious demand governed almost every act. It is important to realize, however, that these chiefs could be deposed by the council at any time, if their services were unsatisfactory.

643 The continual election of such high officers from the same 646 family or lineage, when democratic procedure obtained elsewhere, is harder to explain. Tradition is strong in primitive communities, and a family that produced one effective man might in the next generation produce another. The council in Tenochtitlan chose successive chiefs from a fairly wide range—brothers, sons, nephews and half brothers were scrutinized in the rigid proving ground of public service. Furthermore, a wise council, exercising its tremendous powers, could make a puppet "chief of men" seem effective as its representative in extratribal affairs. Even then, to be considered for election a person of privileged birth had to meet the long series of tests on which eminence was based.

441 Two other specialized fields were open to Aztec youth:
463 trade and craftsmanship. Trade was a new development in *Se'e-wah-co-atl.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
324
776

532
324
346

PLATE 53

AZTEC ART

TOP: This feathered snake in the Mexican National Museum may well symbolize Quetzalcoatl, God of Learning and the Priesthood. This representation differs from the fire snake in that it lacks a raised crest over the head. BOTTOM: The enormous snake at the foot of the balustrade to the great temple in Mexico is a dramatic architectural ornament, frequently employed in Aztec temple building. Snakes were the major ornament at Tenayuca (Plate 50, above) and many other Aztec buildings, appearing also far to the east in Mexican Chichen Itza.

[p. 160(E)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
776 324
778

534
322
532

PLATE 54

AZTEC ART

TOP: Coatlicue, the Mother of the Gods, a highly important member of the pantheon. This representation, over eight feet high, displays her power in terms of such fearsome attributes as two snakeheads, a necklace of a skull, hands and hearts, a skirt of writhing snakes and claws on her feet. The bottom of the statue's feet is carved to represent the earth monster. BOTTOM: Wooden drum with two tongues (teponaztli) in the form of an ocelot. The smooth, simple outlines contrast with the macabre congestion of the presentation above.

[p. 160(F)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532
324
778

PLATE 55
AZTEC ART

TOP: Another presentation of Coatlicue, the Mother of the Gods. An earth goddess, she is also associated with death, so that in this case her head is a human skull. BOTTOM: Left: Small rock-crystal skull representing the Death God. This is a fine example of Aztec lapidary work. Right: A box, symbolically carved, to hold human hearts. Note the glyph for jade, i.e., "precious," banding the sides of the container.

[p. 160(G)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532
324
778

PLATE 56

AZTEC ART

TOP: This Corn Goddess is envisaged as a young girl. Her soft Indian beauty is brought out with the same sure simplicity which characterizes the warriors on Plates 40 and 49. BOTTOM: A colossal head, nearly four feet high, of Coyolxauhqui, sister of the War God. She is shown dead. Simple handling of details enhances this monumental conception.

[p. 160 (H)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

324 346 532 carved from the solid rock cliff and is a marvelous blend of architectural design and sculptural skill.*

532 The Aztec sculptors worked in relief and in the round, in heroic and in miniature size, and were equally able in symbolic and naturalistic conceptions, which they could execute in whatever medium was available. Our modern appreciation of their work is hampered by the prominence of religious motifs, which often detract by crowded detail or grotesque fantasy from the clean lines of their basic proportions. Aztec art, we have insisted, was never completely secular. Yet, in compensation, the Aztecs allowed a lively appreciation of natural elements to enter purely religious conceptions wherever possible.

323 532 322 From the time of the Middle Cultures the Mexicans used baked clay extensively for sculpture and worked out in it their artistic standards. The few surviving examples of wooden sculpture suggest that this medium was carved in accordance with stone techniques and did not, as in Egypt and Greece, serve as a training ground for standards later transferred to stone. If anything, the plastic methods of Mexico had their origin in a long and continuous handling of clay. Both media entail an emphasis on surface and contour; and the technical process of reducing stone by pecking and polishing, if more laborious, is not, in the last analysis, very different from the final smoothing and finishing of a work in clay. Thus the sculptors achieved a delicate appreciation of the contours and lines of the human form.

776 532 Partly owing to the past tradition and partly because the images of the gods were set in the temples, the Aztec artists showed their figures in passive attitudes, more often seated than erect. The austerity of their life led the Aztecs to

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 attribute similar attitudes to their gods, and, as a result, the
532 soft emotionalism so characteristic of European art is almost totally absent. Thus Aztec sculpture is even more forbidding and gloomy than other Middle American arts, which have at first a depressing effect on observers accustomed to Old World aesthetics.[9] (See Plates 40, 49, 52–56.)

532 The same sense of proportion so evident in Aztec architecture produced a monumental quality in their sculpture. The smallest piece has the same dignity that attends the most massive temple carvings. A photograph reveals no impression of the original scale, and in one case the head of a goddess was carved identically in a small piece of jade and a four-foot block of basalt, with no loss of plastic or monumental values to either.[10]

In relief sculpture the forming of the object and the disposition and subordination of details show the mastery of design inherited by eyes trained in centuries of weaving. The vast block of the thirteen-foot Calendar Stone is carved with as delicate an appreciation of the relative values of space as similar designs painted on pottery vessels or graven on jade. (See Plate 52.)

532 The finest Aztec sculpture, to the Western eye, repro-
778 duces the young gods and goddesses that presided over the crops. Thus the Aztec body, long of trunk, short of limb, softly rounded in its well-fleshed strength, is simply and accurately portrayed with passive grace. The patient and resigned features were perfect subjects for the sculptor and his medium. Some gods could assume the guise of animals, and the sculptors took full advantage of their close observation of nature to carve a coyote with ear atilt or to dignify a red basalt grasshopper with the armored malevolence of an insect

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

771 lessly in human life; night succeeds day; the stations of the year rotate endlessly through spring, summer, fall and winter; the planets move in eternal sequence through the sky. Thus to discover what those rhythms were and follow their complicated but regular beat would, in Aztec philosophy, ensure the happy survival of the community. There was little thought of the perfection of the individual when vast powers hovered close, ready to destroy the whole tribe if it ceased its vigilant watch on nature. Thus rhythm and form become an essential part of worship and found their outlet in ritual and religion, art, philosophy and science.

The growth of civilization, with the resultant ramification of social function and material equipment, led likewise to a more complex perception of the universe, expressed in the stratification of gods and goddesses and a specialization of their functions. This result led to a more intense observance of ritual, which consumed a great part of the material and intellectual product of the tribe.

Aztec religion was an outgrowth of the recognition and fear of natural forces and the attempt to constrain them. The process by which man defines these forces and grades them in order of importance is as much a part of the evolution of culture as art, mechanics or social organization. The Aztecs developed a conception of the relationship of the supernatural forces to the universe that, given the precision of our method of thought, could have been developed into an imposing philosophy.

773 According to Aztec belief, the world passed through four
● 776 or five ages, or Suns. Details differ, but the record on the great Calendar Stone may be taken as the official version in Tenochtitlan. The first era, Four Ocelot, had Tezcatlipoca

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

as the presiding god, who, at the end, transformed himself 773
into the sun, while jaguars ate up the men and giants who 776
then populated the earth. Quetzalcoatl was the divine ruler of the second era, Four Wind, at the expiration of which hurricanes destroyed the world and men were turned into monkeys. The Rain God, Tlaloc, gave the world light in the third epoch, Four Rain, brought to a close by a fiery rain. Chalchihuitlicue,* "Our Lady of the Turquoise Skirt," was a Water Goddess who presided appropriately over the fourth Sun, Four Water, wherein a flood came, transforming men into fish. Our present age, Four Earthquake, is under the control of the Sun God, Tonatiuh, and it will be destroyed, in time, by earthquakes.[2] (See Plate 52.)

While the versions vary from place to place, we seem to 773 have a recapitulation of the great disasters from flood, volcanic eruption, hurricanes and earthquakes that beset the communities of ancient Mexico. Also there is a reflection of the order in which the gods attained prominence in the local worship. In the history of the Mexican tribes there are references to struggles within single towns between the devotees of two cults, as to which would have the mastery.[3]

The universe itself was conceived in a religious rather than 772
a geographic sense and was divided horizontally and verti- 776
cally into areas of religious significance. The horizontal uni- 823 verse, possibly the older concept, recognized five directions, the four cardinal points and the center. The Fire God, old and fundamental in Mexican religion, controlled the central zone. The east was assigned to the Rain God, Tlaloc, and the Cloud God, Mixcoatl (Cloud Snake), and was a region of abundance. In this idea geography was combined with

*Chal-chee-we'et-le-kway.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

772 ritual, since the intensely fertile Vera Cruz coast plain is the 776 actual source of the seasonal rains caused by the condensa-
823 tion of warm air when the Gulf of Mexico is exposed to the chill winds of the Central Plateau. The south was considered evil, possibly because of the arid zones south of Morelos and Puebla, but had as presiding deities gods associated with spring and flowers, Xipe (the Flayed One) and Macuilxochitl* (Five Flower). The west, however, had a favorable significance, being the home of the planet Venus, the evening star, which was associated and even identified with Quetzalcoatl (Feathered Serpent), the God of Knowledge. The north was a place gloomy and awful, presided over by Mictlantecuhtli† (Lord of the Dead), who, in one of those contradictions so frequent in Mexican theology, was sometimes connected with the south as well.[4] (See end papers.)

772 The vertical world was divided into heavens and hells
776 which had no moral significance, being merely overworlds
775 and underworlds. The number of heavens varied up to thirteen and represented the dwelling places of the gods, according to their rank in the hierarchy, the original creator living in the topmost heaven, and so on down the scale. One of these heavens belonged to Tlaloc, who received those who died by drowning, lightning or other causes connected with water. One school of thought divided the heavens into east
[821] and west, according to the passage of the sun. The east was the home of warriors, whose death in battle or sacrifice nourished the sun, and the west the home of women who died in childbirth, thus sacrificing themselves in the bearing of potential warriors.[5] (See Plate 57, bottom right.)

775 The rest of the dead passed to Mictlan, the underworld.

*Ma-kweel-sho'-chitl. †Meek-tla'n-tay-coot-li.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 At the head of the Aztec pantheon, in a theological sense, was a supreme and ineffable god, Tloque Nahuaque; but an active cult in his honor seems to have been restricted to a single temple, at Texcoco, which became a center of religious philosophy under the stimulus of the great chief, Nezahualcoyotl. Ranking below this abstraction of divine power and far more widely recognized was a supreme couple, Tonacatecuhtli* and Tonacacihuatl,† "Our Lord and Lady of Subsistence." These gods were theologically important and fulfilled the functions of parenthood and origin for other divinities. They were not extensively worshiped, since their control of nature was remote. An equivalent being, Ometecuhtli,‡ "Lord of Duality," occupied an analogous position, resulting from priestly speculation as to the ultimate origin of the gods who controlled man's destiny. The Sun God, Tonatiuh, who also discharged the functions of a heavenly overlord, was, however, more closely associated with the active expression of Aztec religion. The daily appearance of the celestial orb, so infinitely important to the existence of all life, made sun worship an essential part of the Aztec religion.

There were several gods who intervened in human affairs and were venerated above all others. Usually one of this group was the tutelary spirit of a community and had arrogated to him supreme powers. Such a god was honored by the principal temple, synthesized the abstract position of the gods invented by the theologians and partook of all the supreme powers exerted by the chief god of other commu-

*To-na-ca-tay-co'o-tli.
†To-na-ca-se'e-watl.
‡O-may-tay-co'o-tli.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

nities. This group, without exception, was composed of sky gods. 776

Tezcatlipoca, the "Smoking Mirror," sometimes appeared on the scene as an adversary of the Toltec divinity Quetzalcoatl, the "Feathered Serpent." He was widely worshiped, and his powers were shared by other chief gods. His attributes, as depicted in the sacred manuscripts, showed him to be protean, and they were often assigned to the tribal divinities of other places. A Mixtec manuscript, which emanates from the probable center of the Tezcatlipoca cult, shows the same divinity presiding over the four directions but with a different color in each instance. The powers and dress of this great god passed to local tribal divinities with the spread of Mixtec religion and the Tezcatlipoca cult to the Valley of Mexico. (See Plates 57, top; 61, top.)

The red Tezcatlipoca of the west took the name of Xipe, or Camaxtli, the tutelary god of Tlaxcala. Huitzilopochtli, the great War God of the Tenochca, assumed the functions and dress of the blue Tezcatlipoca of the south and was a Sun God as well, but his adversary and opposite divinity of the night retained the name Tezcatlipoca and was shown as the black Tezcatlipoca of the north. Quetzalcoatl was sometimes depicted as a white Tezcatlipoca, associable with the east as a morning star and the west as an evening star. Under the name "Feathered Serpent" but with the attributes and powers of Tezcatlipoca, he presided over the destinies of Cholula. Tezcatlipoca, as god of a favorable region, as surrogate of the sun and as the chief god of the original cult, was the chief divinity worshiped at Texcoco.

Tlaloc, the Rain God, is an ancient god, going back to Toltec times. His eye rings, his fangs and the volute over his

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 lips render him an easily recognized figure in the Mexican pantheon. At Tenochtitlan he shared the great temples with Huitzilopochtli, and his control of rain made the attraction of his powers essential to survival on the Mexican plateau. (See Plate 59, bottom left.)

Quetzalcoatl, the "Feathered Serpent," God of Civilization and the planet Venus, seems to have been widely venerated but under different guises. In contrast to Tezcatlipoca, whose functions and appearance were assigned to tribal gods with different names, Quetzalcoatl had several forms shared by distinctive divinities. The sculptures of Teotihuacan and Chichen Itza show that a feathered snake was honored, and the local records mention Quetzalcoatl and Kukulcan, Nahuatl and Maya names having the same meaning. At Tenochtitlan there is ample evidence of a feathered-serpent cult, but the records refer to Xiuhcoatl,* "Fire Snake," as well as to the standard sacred variety. The term Quetzalcoatl applies as well to a bearded god with a projecting mask, also called Ehecatl, the "Wind God." In parts of the Mixteca-Puebla area and the Valley, as we have seen, there is evidence that the "white" Tezcatlipoca had the name "One Reed," the date name synonymous with Quetzalcoatl.[8] (See Plates 23, 53; 59, bottom left.)

776 173 In addition to this confusion over Quetzalcoatl, the God of Civilization, the annals and myths tell of Quetzalcoatl, the great king, who civilized the Toltecs and left for the east to return again. The friars seized upon this myth as evidence that St Thomas the Apostle had visited Mexico and converted its inhabitants, who later slid back into pagan ways. Therefore, the friars, to justify the Conquest, made

*She'e-oo-co-atl.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

361
778

302
776

PLATE 57

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Tezcatlipoca, Smoking Mirror, from fresco at Tizatlan. BOTTOM: Left: The Codex Florentino plan of Tenochtitlan (cf. Plate 37). A. The shrines of Huitzilopochtli and Tlaloc. B. Priest. C. Priests' quarters. D. Temple platform. E. Eagle warrior's quarters. F. Ball court. G. Skull rack. H. Temple of Xipe. I. Sacrificial stone. K. Old temple of Huitzilopochtli. L. Five Lizard (date) and Macuilxochitl, God of Flowers. M. Five House (date) and same god. N. Dancing places. Q. Image of Xipe. P. Doors into sacred enclosure. Right: Gold ornament representing the vertical universe; at top gods play ball, symbolizing the sky and the movement of the planets, next the sun disk, then a flint knife, representing the moon, and finally the earth monster.

[p. 176(A)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

778
532

776
532

PLATE 58

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Altar at Teotihuacan with symbols of agricultural worship. Note glyph at top center. MIDDLE: Codex Florentino, special ceremony involving gods' descent to earth, with birdmen, snake dancers, rain-gods and priests dressed as the chief gods of the pantheon. BOTTOM: Vienna Codex, scene partly ceremonial and partly historical. Gods, dates, temples, chiefs and fire making are shown.

[p. 176 (B)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

PLATE 59

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Left: Tlaloc, God of Rain. Right: Quetzalcoatl, God of Learning, in guise of Ehecatl, God of Wind. BOTTOM: Page from Tonalamatl of Codex Borbonicus. The goddess Itzpapalotl, presiding over the fifteenth week, One House, is shown in the large division. The broken tree signifies Tamoanchan, a legendary homeland; the house below, with a man on top and the night sign in the door and the spider above, signifies the realm of darkness. The other symbols are offerings. The rectangular divisions refer to the days and their Gods. The day signs and numbers begin at the lower left with One House and end at top left with Thirteen Eagle. A Night God is drawn in each day square, beginning with Piltzintecuhtli and ending with Chalchihuitlicue (Table XVI, 194). The squares above the bottom row and to the right of the vertical row reveal the Gods of the Day Hours and their birds, beginning at the left with Xiuhtecuhtli and ending at the top with Ilamatecuhtli (Table XV).

532
212 776

[p. 176 (C)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 173 much of a blond god who, after taking leave of his people, promised to return from the east by sea. Yet the Quetzalcoatl of the Valley of Mexico manuscripts was never blond but usually black in beard and face paint, when he was not shown as the masked Wind God, Ehecatl.

554 174 177 As if the confusion between a man and a god of many guises were not baffling enough for the historian, we find to our dismay that the title Quetzalcoatl not only was given to the rulers of the Teotihuacan Toltecs but also was borne at Tenochtitlan by the chief priests who exemplified the learning of the time. Distinguished authority has supported the hypothesis that a Mexican named Quetzalcoatl went to Yucatan where he attained high office and absorbed the civilization of the Maya. Later he returned to Mexico and taught a version of the calendar, as well as many other useful arts, to the peoples of the plateau. Others, more romantic, see in Quetzalcoatl an Irishman, Norseman or even Atlantean, who popped into Mexico and spread sweetness and light. I, personally, believe that the introduction of superior culture elements and the creation of local arts as well might not only lead to the invention of a God of Civilization but also endow individual innovators with the name of that god. The conflicting data suggest to me that the name and concept did not originate in any one person but resulted, rather, from the experience of many peoples over a long period of time in explaining and honoring the introduction of those benefits which ensured their corporal and spiritual well-being.

776 The great gods of the sky played an important part in the duality of the Aztec world in which an eternal war was fought symbolically between light and darkness, heat and cold, north and south, rising and setting sun. Even the stars

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 were grouped into armies of the east and the west. Gladiatorial combats, often to the death, expressed this idea in [796 701] ritual; and the great warrior orders, the Eagle Knights of Huitzilopochtli and the Ocelot Knights of Tezcatlipoca, likewise reflected the conflict between day and night. This Sacred War permeated the ritual and philosophy of Aztec religion.* (See Plates 39, middle left; 40.)

While the great gods, the chief deities of the tribe, tended to be associated with the heavens, there were many others who controlled growth and fertility. Often these gods had goddesses as wives or companions, as if the idea of reproduction of the male and female principles were dawning in Aztec theology. Tlaloc, the Rain God, held sway over growth and vegetation, and his companion Chalchihuitlicue, (Our Lady of the Turquoise Skirt), presided over lakes and rivers. This goddess was the center of an important cult and is represented as a charming young girl beautifully dressed. Xipe (the Flayed One) symbolized spring, and his distinctive costume, a human skin, represented the new covering of vegetation with which the earth clothes itself each year. His priests, at the ceremonies in his honor, carried this symbolism into their costume by donning the skins of freshly [796 782] flayed captives. (See Plates 28, top left; 56, top right; 59, bottom left; 61, bottom left.)

The corn goddesses were young and lovely and probably derived from the old cult of the Middle Culture goddesses. Chicomecoatl,* (Seven Snake), was the Goddess of Crops and Subsistence, represented by corn, the staple food. Xilonen,† "Young Corn Mother," and Xochiquetzal,‡ "Flower

*Chee-co'-me-co-atl.
†Shee-lo'-nen.
‡Sho-chee-kay-tza'l.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Bird," were the embodied spirits of young growth and, by 776 analogy, youth and the games. These had as male counterparts such gods as Cinteotl, "Maize God," Xochipilli,* "Flower Prince" and Macuilxochitl, "Four Flower," whose functions, identified with growth, youth and games, are almost synonymous. (See Plates 31; 56, top left; 57, bottom left.)

About the maguey plant revolved another cult embracing 776 the goddess Mayauel, who represented the plant and whose 802 four hundred sons were associated with pulque. According 273 to some accounts, the various styles of drunkenness were recorded in terms of these gods or their associated animal, the rabbit. Four hundred rabbits stood for complete drunkenness, while fifteen or twenty suggested mere conviviality. The chief of these pulque gods was called "Two Rabbit," after his day in the almanac, and another, Tepoztecatl, was the tribal god of Tepoztlan, honored by a temple placed high in the mountains of Morelos.

The gods of the earth and death were highly important, 776 since growth takes place in the earth and the dead are received there. The sun on rising seems to be born in the earth and at its setting to be hidden by it, thus passing apparently to the world of the dead. The gods and goddesses associated with the earth had significance for the solar cults as well as for growth and fertility.

Tlaltecuhtli, "Lord of the Earth," was depicted as a male monster of horrifying aspect, partaking of the attributes of a toad and an alligator. His open mouth could consume even [821] the sun, since the setting sun passed into the earth, according to Aztec astronomical ideas. The goddesses, however, seem

*Sho-chee-pe'e-ly.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

•776 to have been worshiped more extensively, and the clay images made in their honor also continued in unbroken line the tradition of the Middle Culture figurines. Coatlicue (Our Lady of the Serpent Skirt) was the mother of the gods in their stellar aspect but also was honored as the mother of Huitzilopochtli. The measure of her importance may be gauged by [778] the great statue of her in Mexico which is a masterpiece of sacerdotal art and undoubtedly had a temple to itself. Coatlicue was also represented as a mother carrying a child in her arms. In this guise her function as a mother goddess brought her image into almost every home in the valley. Tonantzin (Our Mother), which may have been an aspect of this same goddess or of Cihuacoatl (Snake Woman), had a temple at Tepeyac, now the site of the shrine to the Virgin of Guadalupe, and her cult was transferred to the Virgin by the early missionaries, an act exemplifying their intelligent procedure in evangelizing the Aztecs. A goddess, Tlazolteotl (Eater of Filth), was extensively worshiped and was also synonymously known as the "Mother of the Gods." Primarily an earth-goddess, she, alone of the goddesses, had a moral significance, since in eating refuse she consumed the [783] sins of mankind, leaving them pure. A rite of confession developed in her cult. (See Plates 54–55.)

Standing out from the numerous divinities associated with death were Mictlantecuhtli and Mictlancihuatl,* (Our Lord and Lady of the Region of Death). They wore masks made from human skulls, and their ornaments were either human bones or representations of them. They presided over the northern regions and also ruled the hells below the earth. Theirs was no punitive function, for all who died, save in

*Meek-tlan-se'e-watl.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

war or sacrifice, childbirth or drowning, passed upon death 776
to their domain. (See Plate 55, bottom left.)

This incomplete description of the gods and goddesses who thronged the Aztec pantheon gives an idea of their variety of purpose and character, outlined more fully in Table X. For an individual to try to do honor to so many gods could result in an insupportable situation. Yet even the modern Navajos pass a third of their time in ceremonial activity, and they do not have half the economic wealth of the Aztec peoples. While the ancient Mexicans extended their ceremonialism to greater lengths than do the most ritualized Christian sects, yet the relationship between the Aztecs and their gods and the Christians and their saints is not so very dissimilar, different as are the ultimate concepts of the two religions.

The priests gave guidance and prescribed the ceremonies, 793
and the worshipers gave heed to those especial divinities upon 776
whose patronage their life directly depended, much as a de- 771
vout Catholic selects certain saints for veneration above the list of those whose days are recorded on the calendar. In the same way the Aztec tribal god has his counterpart in the patron saint of country, town or craft. The Aztec, however, thought of his gods as having strong material powers, but their spiritual aspect counted little with him.

The ritual of Aztec religion was as complex as the theol- 796
ogy. The organization of the priesthood followed the pyramided structure of the social order, but the ceremonies were worked out in accordance with the ritualistic requirements of the calendar and the seasons. In the following chapter we shall describe the priesthood, the ceremonies and also the Aztec methods of counting, recording and using time.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
796

TABLE X

PRINCIPAL MEMBERS OF THE AZTEC PANTHEON, THEIR CHARACTER, AND SPHERES OF WORSHIP

	Month	Week	Day	Day Hour	Night Hour
GREAT GODS
Huitzilopochtli, Hummingbird Wizard, War and Sun God, chief god of Tenochtitlan	5* 9 15
Tezcatlipoca, Smoking Mirror, chief god of pantheon, solar attributes, chief god of Texcoco	5 12		13 8	10
Quetzalcoatl, Feathered Serpent, God of Learning and of Priesthood, chief god of Cholula, frequently shown as Ehecatl, the Wind God		2	2	9
CREATIVE DEITIES
Tloque Nahuaque, Lord of the Close Vicinity, creative spirit, theological abstraction Ometecuhtli, Lord of Duality, like Tonacatecuhtli and his wife
Tonacatecuhtli, Lord of Our Subsistence, Creator God, chief of the gods		1	1
Tonacacihuatl, Lady of Our Subsistence, wife of the above FERTILITY GODS
Tlazolteotl, Goddess of Dirt, Earth Mother, worshiped under many synonyms	11	13	14	5	7
Teteoinnan, Mother of the Gods, synonym of Tlazolteotl
Ixcuina, Four Faces, synonym of Tlazolteotl
Toçi, Our Grandmother, synonym of Tlazolteotl
Chicomecoatl, Seven Snake, Corn Goddess, ancient goddess dating from Middle Culture times	4 11
Cihuacoatl, Serpent Woman, Earth Goddess, ruling childbirth and death thereby Tonantzin, Our Mother, synonym of Cihuacoatl
Coatlicue, Serpent Skirt, Earth Goddess, associated with spring, mother of Huitzilopochtli
Cinteotl, Corn God, son of Tlazolteotl, husband of Xochiquetzal, important				(12) (7)	4
Xochiquetzal, Flower Feather, Goddess of Flowers, of Craftsmen, important		19	20	(13)
Xochipilli, Flower Prince, God of Pleasure, Feasting, Frivolity			11	(3) 7
Macuilxochitl, Five Flower, synonym of Xochipilli

*The numbers refer to the Tonalamatl of the Codex Borbonicus. Those in parentheses refer to variations found in the Tonalamatl Aubin and the Codex Telleriano-Remensis.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

TABLE X (Continued)

776
796

	Month	Week	Day	Day Hour	Night Hour
Xipe, Our Lord, the Flayed One, God of Seedtime and Planting, the red Tezcatlipoca, highly important	2	14	15	(11) (4)
Xilonen, Young Maize Mother, Goddess of the Young Corn	8
Ilamatecuhtli, the Old Princess, a goddess of ancient times, related to corn and the earth	17			13
GODS OF RAIN AND MOISTURE
Tlaloc, He Who Makes Things Sprout, Rain God, very important	6 13	7	7	8	(8) 9
Tlaloques, minor rain gods, children or brothers of Tlaloc, a plural synonym	3 1 16
Chalchihuitlicue, She of the Jeweled Robe, Water Goddess, very important	1	5	5	3	6
Huixtocihuatl, Salt Woman, Goddess of Salt and of the Dissolute	7
Napatecuhtli, Four Times Lord, one of the Tlalocs
Ehecatl, Wind, Wind God, a frequent guise of Quetzalcoatl FIRE GODS
Xiuhtecuhtli, Lord of the Year, Fire God, a divinity of ancient times, important	18 10	20 9	9	(7) 1	1
Huehueteotl, Old God, a synonym of Xiuhtecuhtli
Chantico, In the House, goddess associated with the hearth and volcanic fire		18	19
PULQUE GODS
Mayauel, She of the Maguey Plant, Goddess of the Maguey and also of Fertility		8	8
Patecatl, He from the Land of Medicines, God of Medicine, husband of Mayauel		11	12
Tezcatzontecatl, Straw-Covered Mirror, an important pulque god, identifiable with the Chac Mool figures in stone
Centzon Totochtin, Four Hundred Rabbits, the many pulque gods
PLANETARY AND STELLAR GODS
Tonatiuh, the Sun, Sun God with intimate connections with Huitzilopochtli and Tezcatlipoca				4
Piltzintecuhtli, Young Prince, synonym of Tonatiuh					3
Metztli, the Moon, Moon God, sometimes identified with Tezcatlipoca
Tecciztecatl, He from the Sea Snail, synonym of Metztli		6	6		(5)
Mixcoatl, Cloud Serpent, God of Stars and of Numbers	14
Camaxtli, god of Tlaxcala, synonym of Mixcoatl, a War God

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

TABLE X (Continued)

776
796

	Month	Week	Day	Day Hour	Night Hour
Itzpapalotl, Obsidian Knife Butterfly, stellar and also agricultural goddess		15	16
Tlahuizcalpantecuhtli, Lord of the House of Dawn, Venus, the morning star, variant of Quetzalcoatl		9		(1) (12)
Coyolxauhqui, Painted with Bells, Moon Goddess, sister of Centzon Huitznaua Centzon Huitznaua, 400 Southerners, star gods of south
Centzon Mimixcoa, 400 Northerners, star gods of north Tzitzimime, Monsters Descending from Above, stellar gods GODS OF DEATH, EARTH
Mictlantecuhtli, Lord of Region of Death, God of Death		10	10	11	5
Mictecacihuatl, Lady of Region of Death, wife of Death God
Tepeyollotl, Heart of the Mountains, Mountain God, Jaguar God		3	3		8
Tlaltecuhtli, Lord of Earth, earth monster, personification of earth in contrast to sun				2
Teoyaomiqui, God of Dead Warriors, a specialized Death God				6
Huahuantli, the Striped, synonym of Teoyaomiqui				(6)
VARIANTS OF GREAT GODS
Itzli, Stone Knife, a surrogate of Tezcatlipoca in guise of sacrificial knife		20			2
Itzlacoliuhqui, Curved Obsidian Knife, another variant of Tezcatlipoca		12	(13)
Paynal, the Hasty, messenger of Huitzilopochtli
Yacatecuhtli, Lord Who Guides, God of Traveling Merchants	15 12
Chalchiuhtotolin, Jeweled Fowl, variant of Tezcatlipoca		17	(18)
Yaotl, Enemy, synonym of Tezcatlipoca				(5)
OTHER GODS
Xolotl, Double, Monster God, twin of Quetzalcoatl		16	17
Ixtlilton, Little Black Face, God of Health and Cures from Ills				(2)
Cihuateteô, Goddesses, witches, spirits of women dead in childbirth
Huehuecoyotl, Old Coyote, backbiter or mischief-maker, god of Otomi		4	4

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

131
133
●776
101

[END PAPER MAP (B)]

De los Dioses

FIRST BOOK. HERE ARE NAMED THE GODS WHO WERE WORSHIPPED BY THE NATIVES.

INIC CE AMUXTLI: VNCAN MOTENEOA, IN TETEUH: IN QUJNMOTEUTIAIA IN NICAN TLACA.

First Chapter, which talketh of the highest gods[1] who were worshipped and to whom sacrifices were offered in times past.

Humming-bird from the Left (Uitzilopochtli), [was] only a common man, just a man.[2] [He was] a sorcerer, an omen of evil; a madman, a deceiver,[3] a creator of war, a war-lord, an instigator of war.

For it was said of him that he brought hunger and plague —that is, war.[4] And when a feast was celebrated [for him], captives were slain; ceremonially bathed slaves were offered up. The merchants bathed them.[5]

And he was thus arrayed: he had an ear-pendant of blue cotinga feathers;[6] he had the fire serpent diagram, the blue nomad cloth,[7] the arm band.[8] He wore rattles and shells.[9]

Ynic ce capitulo, ynchpa tlatoa, yn oc cenca tlapanauja teteuh: yn qujnmotutiaia, yoan yn qujtlamanjliaia, yn ie necauh.

Vitzilubuchtli: çan macuualli, çan tlacatl catca: naualli, tetzaujtl, atlacacoemelle, teixcuepanj: qujiocoianj in iaoiutl, iaotecanj, iaotlatoanj:

ca itechpa mjtoaia, tepan qujtlaça yn xiuhcoatl, in mamalhoaztli, q. n. iaoiutl, teuatl, tlachinolli. Auh yn jquac ilhujqujxtiloia, malmjcoaia, tlaaltilmjcoaia: tealtiaia, yn pochteca.

Auh ynjc muchichioaia: xiuhtotomacoche catca, xiuhcozaxaxale, xiuhtlalpile, matacaxe, tzintile, oiocalle.

776 ●

[796]

Second Chapter, which talketh of the god named He who Hummeth (Paynal), who was worshipped, and to whom sacrifices were offered, in ancient times.

Paynal was "the delegate," "the substitute," "the deputy"; because he represented Uitzilopochtli when there was a procession. He was named Paynal, because he pressed on and urged them ahead.[10]

Ynic vme capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn teutl yn jtoca paynal: yn qujmotutiaia, yoan in qujtlamanjliaia in necauh.

Paynal: motepatilleteianj, motexiptlatianj: tepan mixcoaj: ishica ca qujmixiptlatiaia, in vitzilubuchtli, yn iquac tlaixcalouia, motecaiotia paynal: ipampa ca cenca, qujtzontemia, qujmodalochtiaia.

776

796

[661]

---

1. The corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex reads: "Capítulo primero, que habla del principal dios. . . ."
2. Eduard Seler, in Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Amerikanischen Sprach- und Altertumskunde (Berlin: A. Asher & Co., 1902-23), Vol. II, p. 423, refers to him as our an Sterneboten.
3. Seler thus phrases the passage: "Uitzilopochtli was only a man, a conjurer, an unlucky omen, a wicked rogue, one who deluded the people with visions."—Collected Works (Cambridge, Mass.: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1939), Vol. II, pt. 4, p. 4.
4. Cf. Rémi Simeón: Dictionnaire de la langue nahuatl ou mexicaine (Paris: Imprimerie Nationale, 1885); and Aimée de Olmos: Grammaire de la langue nahuatl ou mexicaine (Paris: Imprimerie Nationale, 1875), p. 239. ". . . of him it is related that he thrown the starboard and the firebrand, i. e., war, venice (spear-throwing) and fire at the people" (Seler, op. cit., Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 218). Cf. also Bernardino de Sahagún, Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (México: Pedro Robredo, 1938), Vol. IV, p. 102, ". . . muestra dios Vitzilopochtli nadie de dos cosas para contra sus enemigos para ascuchar y obedecerle; la una se llama xiuhtlal, y la otra mamalhuaztli . . . y él tenía por otra cual en la mano una celedra hecha de mexcaxa, que llaman xiuhtlal, en derecha una serpiente a cordada, y aquella, siendo vivo, como nigromántico en las batallas como que conjuraba vino la celedra sobre los enemigos con que los espantaba y hacía huir."
5. The meaning (cf. nadia) is to offer as a sacrifice, or to bathe as omens (cf. Sahagún, op cit., Vol. II, pp. 379, 384).
6. Cf. ibid., Vol. III, p. 104. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 423) identifies the bird as Cotinga cineta s. cerulea, and suggests that the feathers were arranged in a mosaic pattern. Simeón, op. cit., p. 699, calls the bird Herbaceus ceric (Hum.).
7. Seler, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 426. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 379, suggests that such an article of clothing was sometimes worn about the legs.
8. Seler, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 223, and Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, pp. 144, and Vol. II, p. 380, say the arm-band was provided with a hole or a reed, to insert a decoration. In the Spanish text of the Florentine Codex, Lib. II, fo. 37r, Sahagún defines matacazte as "pellejo de bestia fiera, a manera del manipulo, que se usa en la misa." Cf. also Seler (Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 3, 40), who says that it is the same as quauhchaquauhtl. See illus. of Uitzilopochtli.
9. The MS Biblioteca del Palacio reads tzintlli, oyoalli, in iaoio—an indication that they were worn on the calves of the legs—Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, pp. 427-8.
10. Sahagún (Florentine Codex, corresponding Spanish text) describes Paynal as figure aparejado.

1

776 And the people followed [the impersonator], jostling,
796 howling, roaring. They made the dust rise; they caused the ground to smoke. Like people possessed, they stamped upon the earth.

Auh in macuxaltl, quimocuia, quimiztlachocuia, cuitlauitinja, quicaoatzinja, tzuhuli quiquetzinja, tlalli quipopotzinja: inhuejo tlatimpujujuja, tlalli tzocuja:

[778] And one man carried [the image] in his arms.[11]

auh ce tlacatl quimopalotinja.

And he was adorned thus: he was garbed in the costly cape of precious feathers,[12] with the quetzal-feather headornament in the manner of coastal people. Bees were painted on his face; and a star design. He had a turquoise nose-plug. He was the hummingbird disguise. He had the hummingbird mirror; he had a shield set with a mosaic of turquoise.

Auh yuje tzoctlichiuia, tzoquentinja, quetzalquemecuitl, in cuetlaxtinja, iztacxilichiuale, iztlalichiuale, mixtlalichiuh, xiuhtecuxjuo, viuitlatzacuale, elotzacua, xiuhchiuale.

776 [796] Third Chapter, which telleth of the god named Smoking Mirror (Tezcatlipoca), who, in times past, was worshipped as a god, and to whom offerings were made.

Jaie ey, capitulo, yuchqui tlamo in teotl, yn jueca tezcatlipoca: in quijtoaiaia, yuan in quijtlamanjtinia, ie uecauh.

Tezcatlipoca: He was considered a true god, whose ability was everywhere—in the land of the dead, on earth, and in heaven. When he walked on the earth, he brought vice and sin. He introduced anguish and affliction.

Tezcatlipoca: yuin uel teotl ipan muchuia, nenjian yuanjjin: mictla, tlalticpac, yllujcac. Jn jquac nemja tlalticpac, ichcauil quijolintinja, in tuhuli tlaçolli: ceceu tequehqui, cujuinintinia.

He brought discord among people, wherefore he was called "the enemy on two sides." All evils which came to men, all [these] he created, brought down, afflicting men and dividing them [one against the other].

teuali, tenpanda motenxia: ipampa y, mjtuia necuc iuzti, nezchi quijocoiaia, quijuauajaja, quijuecaujtinia, qujuecujtinia yn jaquich aquilli tepan muchuia: tecu tenjjtinia, tequequtinia.

And sometimes he bestowed riches—wealth, heroism, valor, position of dignity, relationship, nobility, honor.

Auh in quenon, quijuauacia, in necujlmeuili: in tlaquijtl, in aquijchiol, in tlacuchiuil, in teoiul, in tlamacuiul, in pilloli, in mecuiqui.

Fourth Chapter, which telleth of the [rain-]god named Tlaloc, the priest.[13]

Jaje nauj capitulo, yuchqui tlamoia yn teotl, yn jueca tlaloc, tlamacuiqui.

Tlaloc: the priest. To him was attributed the rain; for he made it, he caused it to come down, he scattered the rain like seed, and also the hail. He caused to sprout, to blossom, to leaf out, to bloom, to ripen, the trees, the plants, our food. And also by him were made floods of water and thunder-bolts.

Tlaloc, tlamacuiqui: yuje ipan muchoia, in quijauijtl: ca ichcauil quitocuia, quijuecujuia, quijpixoia, in quijauijtl, yuan in tecujtl: quiuelahtinja, quijuecalaxtinja, quijuecuitlatinja, quicuepontinja, quicaltinia in quauijtl, in çacatl, in tonacatl. Yuan no inuch tlaujtinia, in tetlaquijtinti, in tlaujtequjlinti.

And he was then decorated: his face was thickly painted black, his face was painted with liquid rubber;[14] it was anointed with black; his face was [spotted] with [a paste of] amaranth seeds.[15] He had a sleeveless chest-jacket of netted fabric; he had a crown of brown feathers; he had a necklace of green stone jewels. He had foam sandals, and also sandals. He had a painted-reed banner.[16]

Auh yuje: tzoctlichiuia, tlaxtlilipoctzolli, tlaxtlilhujlli, tzoltlaqui, imajchiuaua, imxichiuaxilo, xuchtzicale, xiuhtzicola, xoxouaua, chalchiuhtecuqui, poquitecqui, no tzinzile, ezuxilipaua.

Fifth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Plumed Serpent (Quetzalcoatl).

Jaie mauijll capitulo, yuchqui tlamo yn teotl, yn jueca quetzalcoatl.

---

11. After the sacrifice of the impersonator, the image was carried in procession.—Loc. cit.

12. Sahagun (Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 1, p. 44) dubious as to a costly robe made entirely of precious feathers, says over the shoulders (indeed and the upper-arms) (cape worn over the jacket); probably it was an apron-like garment placed on the front of the idol.

13. Sahagun (Ibid., pt. 2, p. 46) says that tlamacuiqui and tlamacuiqui means "priest" and "priest." He himself translates Tlaloc tlamacuiqui as "Rogatorio . . . Rogatorio," in Einige Kapitel aus dem Geschichtswerk des Fray Bernardino de Sahagun aus dem Aztekischen wortgetreu übersetzt (Cuentos Sahagún, Wilhelm Lehmann, Wilhelm Krickeberg, eds.; Stuttgart: Strecker und Schwartzer, 1927), Vol. I, p. 3.

14. Sahagun (loc. cit.): "im Gesicht eine Bepinselung mit flüssigem Kautschuk."

15. Cf. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. I, p. 180; see also Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, pp. 462-4.

16. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 149.

776

Quetzalcoatl—he was the wind, the guide and road-sweeper of the rain gods,[17] of the masters of the watery, of those who brought rain. And when the wind rose, when the dust rumbled, and it crackled and there was a great din, and it became dark and the wind blew in many directions, and it thundered; then it was said: "[Quetzalcoatl] is wrathful."

And thus was he bedight: he had a conical[18] ocelot-skin cap. His face was thickly smeared with soot. He was adorned with [spiral] wind and mesquite symbols.[19] He had a curved, turquoise mosaic ear-pendant.[20] He wore a gold neckband of small sea-shells.[21] He had the quetzal-pheasant as a burden on his back. He had ocelot anklets with rattles. He wore a cotton hune[-ribbed] jacket.[22] He carried the shield with the wind-shell design.[23] He had the curved [inlaid] spear-thrower[24] and also foam sandals.

Quetzalcoatl: yn ehecatl ynteiacuncauh yntlachpancauh in tlaloque, yn acoque, yn quiquijauhti. Auh yn jquac molhuja ehaca, mjtoa: tzahtli quaqualaca, yeoioca, teteujca, tlatlaioca, tlatlalpitta, tlatlatzinj, motlatlametitia.

Auh yuja yn tuchichioaia: ocelocopile, mjatlilpepoca, hecanechioale, mixqujnechioale, tzicoliuhcanacoche, tzucujtlaacuechcoupa, quetzalcopallamamale, ocelotzittile, icpamjcicujle, hecacuecachimale, hecaujque, no peçulcaque.

Sixth Chapter: here are noted the greatest goddesses who were worshipped as idols, whom the natives falsely reverred as gods.

The savage Snake-woman (Cioacoatl), ill-omened and dreadful,[25] brought men misery. For it was said: "She giveth men the hoe and tump-line. Thus she forceth men [to work]."

And when she appeared before men, she was covered with chalk, like a court lady, with obsidian ear-plugs. She was in white, having garbed herself in white, in pure white. Her tightly wound hairdress rose like two horns above her head.

By night she walked weeping and wailing, a dread phantom foreboding war.[26]

And in this wise was her image adorned: her face was painted one-half red, one-half black.[27] She had a head-dress of [eagle] feathers[28] and golden ear-plugs. She wore a Jnjc chiquacē capitulo: vncan motenca, yn oc cenca tlapanauja yn cioatetu: yn qujmoteutiaia, in qujteutlapiqujaia yn njcan tlaca.

Cioacoatl tequanj: yoan tetzaujtl, tetetzaujanj, ittoiutl qujtititia: ca mjtoaia, victli mecapalli, qujtemacaia, ic temolaia.

Auh yujc motititiaia, mometztlilaia: iuhquja tecpan cioatl, nanacoche, itztacoche, itztaian moquetza, itztaian actica, itztactla ycaia, itztaticac, vel panj qujquetza yn jueuetlacol, yn jaxtlacujl, ioaltica chocatimeca, tecoiuhtimeca, no iuztetzujtl cetca.

Auh yuj yn tuchichioaia yxiptla, yn jaxtac, centlacochichiltic, centlacotlilitic, yujquetzone, teucujtlanacoche, quechqueme, xiuhtzotzopaca.

---

17. Cf. Edward Seler: Translation of the Aztec Collection (London and Aylesbury: Hazell, Watson, and Viney, Ltd., 1901), pp. 42-3; and Juan de Torquemada: Monarquia indiana, Vol. II, pp. 47 and 52. The connection between Quetzalcoatl and the Thaloc is illustrated in this passage (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 203): "Este genio atribuia el viento a un dios que llamaban Quetzalcoatl, hijo cuyo como dios de los vientos. Según el viento de cuatro partes del mundo por mandamiento de este dios, según ellos decian; de la una parte viene de hacia el oriente donde ellos dicen estar el paradiso terrenal al cual llaman Tlaloman, (y) a este viento le llamaban tlalchiquequi; no se viento furioso, cuando El sopla no impide (a) los cuerpos andar por el agua."

18. Conical shape is not specifically implied; but the definition of capilli in Simeon (op. cit.) is mitre. Furthermore, the conical cap is a distinguishing mark of Quetzalcoatl.

19. Wind-painting, according to Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 475; see also pp. 436 and 437). Parts of the costume, as illustrated, bear of the wind-dress—the rounded edges of the mantilla, for instance. Inferior cf. Alonso de Molina: Vocabulario de la lengua mexicana (Julio Platzmann, ed.; Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1880).

20. Edward Seler (ibid., p. 475) calls it "den derzeig gebrochenen Ohrpflock." In corresponding Spanish text, Sahagún, writing more fully than in the Aztec text, says: "Tenia, veste ovejuna, de turquesas, de labor mosaico. . . . ." The word tenjpil means turquoise used in mosaic work (Simeon, op. cit.).

21. The corresponding Spanish text of Sahagún reads: "tenia un collar de oro, de que colgaban, veste caracoles marinos, preciosos."

22. See Edward Seler, op. cit., p. 475.

23. Sahagún's corresponding Spanish text has: "una rodela, con una pintura, con cierto angular; que llaman, el joel de viento." The term ecanepachtli may be translated more literally as "shield with pendent shell" design. A bitumed shell design usually hangs as a boxer shield on representations of Quetzalcoatl; this same design appears on the shield. (See Translatoral of Codex Borbonicus.)

24. Corresponding Spanish text says: "con cierto empuñadura de espada."

25. Cf. also tetzaujtenc, epithet of snake mentioned by Sahagún (Historia general, Vol. III, p. 286), as sound because "mata con espanto."

26. This is explained in ibid., Vol. II, pp. 281, 284.

27. See illustration, which indicates that the part of the face below the nose is black.

28. Seler translates this as eagle feathers. His citations from the Hymns of Centzonmimi are convincing. Cf. Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 4, p. 59.

776 cape-like cow-garment. She carried a turquoise-colored weaving-stick.

Seventh Chapter: here is named the goddess called Seven Snake[30] (Chicome coatl).

Chicome coatl—this one represented [and] held in her charge our food,[30] men's livelihoods of whatever sort; their food and drink.

And in this manner was she adorned: her face was painted with red ochre; she had a paper headdress; she wore a shirt [ornamented with] water-flowers[31] and a skirt [ornamented with] water-flowers; also she had foam-sandals;[32] she carried a sun flower shield, a sun shield.

Jnic chicome capitulo: vncan momoua, yn cioatetl: yn jtoca, chicome coatl.

Chicome coatl: ihcatl ipan mjtoaia, qujmjxiptlatiaia, in tonacaiotl: yoan in çaço tlein yoanca, yiolca macuxalli, yniçu, yniquaio.

Auh yojn ynnechichioale catca; intlauhtzacale, amacala, xnochiavipile, xnochiacuxie, no poçolicaque, tonalchimale, tonatiuhchimale.

Eighth Chapter: here is named the goddess called the Mother of the Gods (Teteu innan), who is also named Heart of the Earth (Tlalli yiollo) and Our Grandmother (Toci).

She was the mother of the gods. Her devotees were [759] physicians, leeches, those who cured sickness of the intestines, those who purged people, [and] eye-doctors.

Also women, midwives, those who brought about abortions, who read the future, who cast auguries by looking upon water or by casting grains of corn, who read fortunes by use of knotted cords, who cured sickness by removing stones or obsidian knives from the body, who removed worms from the teeth, who removed worms from the eyes.[33]

Likewise owners of sweat-houses prayed to her; wherefore they caused her image to be placed in the front of the sweat-house. They called her "Grandmother of the Baths."

776 And when there was a feast, when it was time for the 796 slaying, the physicians were good to her who impersonated Teteu innan, that she might not weep [nor] whine. They solaced her; they flattered her; they satisfied her caprices; they amused her. They wished her not to weep. They bid [her fate] from her;[34] they made merry with one another about slaughter; they buried; they made war; they cried war-cries as if in battle. There was an array of warriors; insignia were given [and] gifts; the valiant soldiers, adorned with maxtlas, painted with white chalk, adorned with feathers, surrounded her and took her up.

And when she who was the likeness [of the goddess] was slain, then a man put on her skin as a shirt, and stood between two of his Huaxocs,[35] who accompanied him on either side.

Jnic chicuai capitulo: vncã momoua, yn cioatetl, yn jtoca: Teteu yma: no motocaiotia, Tlalli yiollo, yoan Toçi.

Jnnã catca yn teteu, qujmoteutiaja, in tiiici, in teiximjnque, teximanque, tetlaxopijlique, teixpatique.

Auh yn cioa, xmjxiojtique, tepillalilique, tetlatlazilique, tlapouhque, ezlan mitzaij, tlaolchaiauhque, mocatlapouhque, tetlacujcujlique, tetlaocujlanque, teixocujlanque.

No ichoantin qujtlatlauhtiaia, in temazcalque; ypampa y, quithalilia yn jxipela, in temazcalinque, qujxcaiotiaia, temazcalteci.

Auh yn jquac, in ie illujquejtilloia, in ie inijquimoquippa: in ichoantin tiiici, yn jxipela catca teteu yma, qujtlaxoxilpeloaia, amo vel chocaia, quetzlequjxtiaia, qujtlamocuxtiaia, qujtlacmoqujtiaia, qujxcoltiaia, haqujchocolanja, qujtlatlaltiaia, momjquinquequlaia, qujnecalitiaia, qujnochiaia, qujtlacaxachiliaia, ennujaia, tlacuxcaltiaia, tetlaxinmocuia, tetlauhtiloia: in qujmjlhuca machiuia in tlacaca, ic quintiçaujaia, ic qujpotonjaia, qujmomacujlitiaja, ic panj moquetzaia.

Auh yn jquac: ennjc, yn jxipela: ujmon ce tlacatl ennequjaia, yn jeuaia, yuaquauila ochinquetzaia, vncan yoanca, qujujoaia, qujtzatzacutiujia:

29. See Plate 29, which explains the name.
30. Since Chicome coatl was goddess of maize, this section may refer to the various uses of maize, which was basic to Mexican civilization.
31. Cf. Eduard Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 448.
32. Although Seler (op. cit., p. 449) uses the term "foam," he cites Sahagún as referring to flowers. Illustrations show the gods wearing in fact, feathered sandals.
33. Sahagún describes these words in detail. See Angel María Garibay K: "Paralipómenos de Sahagún," in Tlalocan, Vol. II, No. 3 (1947), pp. 235-54.
34. Cf. also Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, pp. 169, 176.
35. Seler, Ensayo Especial, p. 6. Cf. also Sahagún, op. cit., p. 178, referring to the Toçi festival: "Iban delante de ella aquellos que decoraban que se llamaban huaxocos."

They were painted with white chalk, and with [marks like] hawk scratches. They went naked, with a rope for a breech-clout. They carried on their backs a paper mitre-shaped cap, which had a protruding spindle, cotton flowers, and quetzal feathers.[36]

They brought him to Toci's temple where they had placed [the impersonator's] skin upon a wooden bench.[37]

And the costume [of Totec iuan] was as follows: there was liquid rubber on her lips and a circle [of rubber] on each cheek. She had cotton flowers.[38] She had a ball with palm strips. She had a shell-covered skirt, called a star-skirt. She had the star-skirt. Eagle feathers were strewn over her skirt—it was strewn with eagle [feathers]; it had white eagle feathers, pointed eagle feathers. Her shield had a golden disc in the center. She carried the medicinal herb, totoicxiti. She used a broom; she carried a broom.

motiçaiaque, motlotlauitzcopa, çan pepetlauhtiuj, in momocamatti: amacalli in qujmama, mahmalacaquetzalle, ichcauchiio, hiujquetzalle:

776
796
[302]

vmpa concoca, in tocitiztlan: quauhtlapechco cuotlaliaia yn jonaio.

776

Auh ynjc nechichiuale, motenolcopi, tlazapuchtli qujmotlatlalili yn jcamapá ichcauchica, çoiatemale, cuechcueie, mocuechcueti: ic mjtoa, citlalli ycua, citlalcueie, quavivih, tzotzeliuhquj yn juipil, quauhtzotzeliuhquj, iztac quavihujio, quauhtenitaço; yn jchimal, teucujtlaytixapo, tetzacuio, popoa, iequjoa.

Ninth Chapter, in which one hearth of the goddess named the Goddess of Zapotlan (Tzapotlan tenan).

[She was] represented as a woman. From her substance was made turpentine.

She healed men's bodies; those with itch of the head;[39] they who were hoarse used the turpentine unguent on the throat; [they used it] who had sores or pimples on the head;[40] or cracks in the skin of the feet, lips, face, hands, or legs; and when it was eaten, [it was used for] the tecolle-sickness.[41]

In oil and in heat were used to advantage in indeed many places.

And when the feast day was celebrated, they who sold the turpentine unguent brought slaves and slew them. They fashioned her image of a dough of amaranth [seeds] and maize.[42] Her old men sang for her; they beat the two-toned wooden drum, and the turtle-shell drum; they rattled rattles shaped like dried poppy-seed pods,[43] and they rattled bone rattles.

Thus was she arrayed: two spots were painted on her face; she had a paper crown; large drops of liquid rubber and small drops were spattered over her paper crown, and it had quetzal feathers arranged to resemble corn-tassels. She carried the nine-rattlehead.[44]

Jnjc chicunauj capitulo: vncan motenoa, yn cioatzul, yn jnoc Tzaputla tena.

Ce cioatl, ipan mjtoaia, yn ozitl ynacaio machiotia:

776
278
757

quipaleuja yn tenacaio, yn aquja quazoçiuj, tozcamjtoaciuj, motencaoiuja: chaquachiuj, quaçoçoti, xozaianj, tentzaianj, iztetçonauj, matetçonauj, iczitzaiaianj, yoan in quala, yn tlazaliciuj:

yn jchinaca yn jtonal vel mieccan momequj.

Auh yn jquac illujquiztlioia, yn ozinomacaque, motlaccoujaia, tlacamjctiaia, qujtecollotiaia yn jxipela, qujcujcatiaia, yn ieweiocan, qujtepemacilhujaia, caiocozomjlia, caiocujquujlia, caiocuchilhuja, comjchicuacilhuja.

776
796

Jnjc nechichiuale omeacaola, amacali, olchachapanqui, tlaolchipinilli yn jamacal, yoan quetzalujtaoaia, aiochicaoaca.

36. See Plate 8.

37. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 182, calls it goddess.

38. Cf. text and illus. in MS Biblioteca del Palacio, cited in Eduard Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, pp. 448-9, in which these are described as a hand-head of compact cotton.

39. ". . . cosa maravillosa, de hombres, o mujeres, que tienen, en la cabeza" (incomprehensible Spanish text).

40. ". . . cosa enfermedad . . . tener mujeres, que tienen en la cabeza que se llama hoba" (loc. cit.).

41. See p. 41, n. 150.

42. Cf. Diego de Durán: Historia de las Indias de Nueva España y islas de Tierra Firme (Mexico: J. M. Andrade y F. Escalante, 1867-80), Vol. II, p. 197.

43. "Sonajuelas, semejan hechas a manera de dormideras" (Sahagún, op. cit.).

44. Cf. Eduard Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 474; and Einige Kopfzier, p. 7—Nahui-Ravellenti (chaud-rattlehead). The same author, cited in Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. V ("Los cantares de los dioses"), says: "Esta voz (ravellenti) significa evidentemente la cabeza y, mucho a esta hora variación en el modo de pronunciar, tanto origen de sonajuelas-rasuelli. Sarta el instrumento para encontramiento de la flauta. . . ." (pp. 47-8); ("El chicuacuelli, bálculo de sonajas, instrumento musical que usan en la mano los dioses de . . . la Lluvia y del Agua. . . . En la procesión de los sacerdotes en la Resalquelhuitl, llevan delante el sonajuelacuelli, sonajas de varilla. Es el instrumento mágico, con que

● 776 Tenth Chapter, which telleth of the goddesses [called] the Princesses (Cuaspiltin).[46]

[753] These were five devils, whose images were of stone. Of them it was supposed, and men said: "They hate people; they laugh at them." When one was under their spell, possessed by them, one's mouth was twisted, one's face was contorted; one lacked use of a hand; one's feet were misshapen—one's feet were deadened; one's hand trembled; one foamed [at the mouth]. Whence it was said, one had met and contended with the Cuaspiltin, who dwelt on the cross-roads. Wherefore fathers or mothers told their children: "Go not forth; the Cuaspiltin arrive on earth; they descend [upon us]."

776 796 And for this reason, when it was their feast day, they made them offerings of soft, folded tortillas called tlamatzoalli, butterfly-shaped tortillas called papalotlaxcalli, [others shaped like] sacrificial notched sticks (xoncuili),[46] small tamales called xocuichtlamatzoalli,[47] and toasted grains of corn.

And then they offered all these, sometimes at the temple of the goddesses, sometimes at crossroads.

776 And they were thus bedight: they had their faces whitened with chalk, and over this, darkened with liquid rubber. Their paper garments were covered with painted figures. They had sandals decked with feathers.

Jnic matlactli, capitulo: ynechpa tlama, yn cioatzin, ciospipilti:

Diablome catca y, macujltin, tzme yn jmiztlaxan; intech tlamjlnia, qujlmach tetlaxelia, tzca mocaiana, ynjc aca itech qujnecuia tlaxelilocati, tzmecujliuj, ixnecujliuj, matzicoliuj, icxicopichauj, icximjmjquj, momacuecuetza, tzmqualacquiça: ic mjtoaia omotzmamicti, ypan oquiaque ciospipilti, vmaxac chanequc. Jpampa y yn tetzca, anoço tzmaoa, qujmilhujaia yn jupilhoan: maca xonqujça tlalpan aci, tzmo in ciospipilti.

Auh ipampa y, yti iquac ynjlhujuh, ynjc qujntlamanjliaia: tlamatzoalli, papalotlaxcalli, xoncujli, xocuichtlamatzoalli, izquijtl.

Auh yn vncan momana y, in quemman vncan yn cioatzocalco, in quemman, vmaxac.

Auh yn jmochichioal catca, mjztiçauique: auh panj tlaolxaoalti, tlaitzcopeoaltictli, tlaitzcopeoalli, yn jmamatlaquan, pozonocaquequa.

Eleventh Chapter: which telleth of the goddess named the Jade-skirted (Chalchiuhtli ycue), who was [goddess of] the waters.

She was considered a god[dess]; her likeness was that of a woman. It was said that she belonged among the rain-gods, as their elder sister.

Hence she was esteemed, feared, and held in awe; hence she terrified men. [For] she killed men in water, she plunged them in water as it foamed, swelled, and formed whirlpools about them; she made the water swirl; she carried men to the depths.

She upset the canoe, she emptied it; she lifted it, turned it up and plunged it in the water.

And sometimes she sank men in the water; she drowned them. The water was restless: the waves roared; they dashed and resounded. The water was wild.

When it calmed, when it quieted, it heaved to and fro; it was said, "It playeth; it billoweth, it splasheth like the stamping of feet; the water striketh the shore, spraying water and foaming."

Jnic matlactli vce capitulo: ytechpa tlama, yn cioatzoul, yn jtocca chalchiuhtli ycue: iehoal yn atl.

Teotl ipan machoia: iuhquin cioatl quiztlatlaiaia, iuh mjtoaia, qujlmach yoean pouj, iouhtinh in tlaloque:

ynic mazicuitlilloia, ynic imacxaxaia, ynic mauhcaitzoia, ynic tlamauhtiaia, tzatzctiaia, tzatlaanjctiaia, tzpolactiaia, tzpan poçonja, mozpouaçoa, mazicioia, tzpan motzujlacachoa, ynic tzontlanjujca:

yn acalli quicoepa, quiztlapachcoepa, quemtiquetza, ca ano malauj, ca tzma.

Auh in quemma tzapachoa, tzapotzauja, mocuiciotia, tzicujca xxxanacatimanj, cocomocatimanj, hatlacamanj:

yn jquac ozcuh, yn ic ozuj, ouje iaiauh: quitoa, tzaujltia, tzizipujpilinj, cocomotzauj, atzotli itech omotlatlazaua, omotchachaquanja, mapopoçoquilloia.

se hace descender lluvia. . . . El chicomecóatl es el par simbólico de las fertilidad y, sin duda, también instrumento mágico con que se obtiene lluvia" (pp. 129-30).

46. See Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, pp. 324-5; Vol. II, pp. 181-5. Seler (Collected Works, Vol. I, pp. 2, p. 38, and pt. 3, p. 100, and Vol. II, pt. 3, pp. 49, 80) ibid., holds that Cuaspiltin (the princesses) are the same as Cihuateo (the goddesses)—women who died in childbirth (mocihuaquetzque) or on the sacrificial stone, and hence were the equivalent of warriors killed in battle or offered up as sacrifices. Seler describes them as special earth-goddesses who descended to the earth in the guise of eagles. As equals of warriors, they were conveyed in certain warriors' symbols—eagle feathers and down sandals, for instance. They were thought to dwell in the west, and to incite men to sin and crime.

46. An S-shaped color, made to resemble lightning.—Seler, op. cit., Vol. III, pt. 2, p. 47.

47. Painted novelties in the form of square-flours, according to Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 6.

And when (there was) no wind, it was calm; the water spread like a mirror, gleaming, glittering.

And when her feast was celebrated, in the month of Etzalqualiztli, the eating of boiled corn,[48] then was celebrated the feast of the rain-gods.

They placed her image upon a framework: they put a skirt upon her, and a shift; they placed jewels upon her—a plaited neckpiece, from which hung a golden disc.

And they offered her offerings and the fire priests came out to receive her. They strewed aromatic herbs before her.

With the rattle board of the mist and rain gods, they spoke. The city elders, her singers, sang for her.

And then they slew her impersonator—a slave woman, bought and set forth by those who gained their livelihoods as water-carriers—those who brought in water, who fetched water in canoes; those who owned canoes; those who worked in irrigation ditches; and those who made canoes in the market-place, those who sold water for refreshment.[49]

Likewise they arrayed her, made offerings, and ornamented her. For she would go, when they slew her, to a place called Tlalocan. In the temple of the Tlaloca, they opened her breast.

Then Moctezuma paid great honors to [the goddess]. Before her image, he offered incense and slew quail.

Thus they said: "The chief gaineth rain; he doth a penance for his people." And giving thanks, they thus paid honor to the waters.

[For] they remembered that because of her we [may] live. She is our sustenance. And thence come all things that are necessary.

In the same manner they paid honor to the image of man's sustenance, called Chicome coatl; and to the image of the salt [-goddess], named Uixtociuatl. Thus they remembered what they had done; thus they honored the three.[50]

For indeed, through them the peasant earned his livelihood. Thus might he be satisfied; thus, in truth, might he live.

And thus was she decked: she was painted yellow and blue; she was painted blue about the lips and on her face.[51] She wore a green-stone necklace; she had turquoise [mosaic] ear-plugs. She had a blue paper cap with a spray of quetzal feathers. Her shift and her skirt were painted like water. She bore a shield ornamented with water lily leaf and flower. She carried the mist-rattleboard,[52] which she sounded. She wore foam sandals.

Auh yn jquac atle ehecatl, tlamattimanj, atencattitimanj, petlantimanj, cuecuriocatimanj. 776

Auh yn jquac ilhuiqujxtiliola, çan no iquac yn etzalqualiztli: yn vncan ilhujqujxtiliola tlaloque, 796 colodi in qujchichioaia yxiptla: qujcuetiaia, qujujpiltiaia, qujcoecatiaia, coecapetlatl, itech pilcatiuh cuetic teucujtlacomalli: [805] yoan qujtlamanjliaia, qujnanamiquj yn jtlenamacacauh, yiauhtli, ixpan qujtepevilia, [778] caiochicaoaz ilhujtinemj, qujcujcatia in calpoleque, ycujcacaoan.

Auh in vel ixiptla, yquac mjquja: tlacotli cioatl in qujcoaia, ichoan qujnettiaia, yn anamacaque: yn atl ye motlaiecultia, yn acaltica atlacuj, yn acaleque, yn apantlaca: yoan acalquetzque tianquixco, in qujtechiletia atl. [567] [463]

No iuh qujchichioaia, no iuh qujtlamamacaia, no iuh qujcencaoaia: iuh tlantiuja: in miquja, ytocaiocan tlalocan: yn vncan intepan, tlaloque, queltetequjo.

Jn jquac y, no cenca qujmauiztiliaia, yn motecuçuma: ixpan tlenamacoia, yn jxiptla, qujtlacotenjlia, iuh qujtoaia: qujiauhtlatlanj in tlacatl, qujtlamachuja yn jmacaoal: yoan vncan mocnelilmati, ynjc qujmahujztiliaia atl:

qujlnamjquja, ca ic tinemj, ca tonenca: yoan ic muchioa, yn inquich tetech monequj.

No iuh qujmauiztiliaia, yn jxiptla tonacaiotl, yn jtoca, chicome coatl; yoã yn jxiptla iztatl, ytoca Vixtociuatl: ic qujlnamjquja; yn ja tlamanjati:

ca vel ynenca muchioa in macoualli, ic vellamati, ic vel nemj. 776

Auh yujn, in muchichioaia: mozaoia, teoxica, motenujltec, motezotenujltec, mixcoçalhuj, chalchiuhcuetque, xiuhmacoche, teoamacale, quetzalmjiacoaio, atlacujlolhvipile, atlacujlolhuiujpile, atlacujlolcuaia, atlacueçomanchimale, xiuchicaoaçe, cacalaca; poçolocque.

---

48. Sahagún (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 148): "este atolli era hecho de maiz cocido, a manera de arroz, y era muy amarillo." Durán (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 219): "el maiz cocido por el solo llamaxic pegaldy pero a causa de revolverlo con frijol (el) le llaman atpally."

49. Corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex reads: ". . . la festejaban . . . todos aquellos, que tienen sus granjerias, en el agua: como son los que venden agua, en las canoas: y los que venden agua, en tinajas, en la plaça. . . ."

50. Corresponding Spanish text: ". . . porque dexian, que estos tres dioses: sustentavan, a la gente pupular: para que pudiesen, vivir, y multiplicar."

51. Corresponding Spanish text: ". . . la pintavan, la cara, con color amarilla. . . ."

52. Corresponding Spanish text: "Tenia en la mano, derecha, un vaso, con una cruz: hecho a manera, de la custodia, en que se lleva el sacramento, quando van solo le llevan: y con como cetro, dezia diosa." See p. 9, note 44. See also illustrations of Chalchiuhtli yoan and Tlaçolteotl.

776 Twelfth Chapter, which telleth of the Goddess of Vice (Tlaçolteutl).[53]

Tlaçolteutl was also called Iscuina, and also Tlaelquani. As to the name Tlaçolteutl: it was said that it was because her realm was that of evil and perverseness—that is to say, lustful and debauched living. It was said that she ruled and was mistress of luxury and debauchery.

776 And as to her name Iscuina: it was said there were four 551 women—the first named Tiacapan (the older sister), the second Teicu (the younger sister), the third named Tlaco (the middle sister), the fourth named Xocutzin (the youngest sister).[54] These four women, it was said, were god-[desses]. These, each separately, were called goddesses of luxury (Tlaçolteteu).

And as for her being called Tlaelquani:[55] it was said it was because one told, one placed before her, all vanities;
[783] one told, one spread, before her all [one's] unclean works—however ugly, however grave; avoiding nothing because of shame. One exposed all before her, [and] made one's confession in her presence.

776 It was said: evil and perverseness, debauched living—these Tlaçolteutl offered, inflamed, inspired. And likewise she forgave. At her whim, she removed the corruption; she cleansed; she washed. In her hand lay the [cleansing] green
[783] and yellow waters.[56]

And thus she pardoned; thus, at her whim, she removed the corruption. In her presence confession was made; before Tlaçolteutl the heart was opened; before her one recited, one told one's sins.

793 And her warden[57]—he who saw for her—was a seer,[58]
776
783

Jnic mathactli vnome capitulo: ytechpa tlatoa yn tlaçolteutl.

In tlaçultteutl: yoan itoca iscujna, yoan itoca tlaelquanj. Jnic motocaiotia tlaçulteutl, qujl ipampa, qujl ichoatl yiauca, ytlatquj, ytech pouj, in teuhtli, in tlaçulli: in qujtemequj, xvilnemjlistli, qujl ipan tecuti, ypan tlatocati, yn aujlnemjliçqui.

Auh ynjc itoca, iscujna: qujl navinti ioah, in cioa: ynjc ce ytoca tiacapan, ynjc vme, ytoca teicu, ynjc ey, itoca tlaco: ynjc nauj itoca xocutzin. Jnjque hin, naujatin cioa: qujl teteu. Jnjque hin, cecenca yntoca: tlaçulteteu.

Auh ynjc motocaiotia tlahelquanj: qujl ipampa, imixpã mjtoa, imjxpan mopoa, yn jaqujch nequalli: iixpan mjtoa, momelaoa, yn jaqujch tlahellachicoalli: immanel cenca temamauhti, iximanel cenca oujh: atle mopinaviacaoa, vel mochi, iixpan neci, ixpan mjtoa. Neiolmelaoalistli.

Qujlnach in tlaçulli, in teuhtli, in aujlnemjlisiel: ichoatl qujtemaca, ic temotla, ic tehipitza in tlaçulteutl. Auh çan no ichoatl, qujtepolhuja: ichoatl chico, xnaoac qujujca, qujtaca: ichoatl, tepapaca, tehaltia: ichoatl imac manj yn matlalatl, in tuxpalatl.

Auh injc qujtepopelhuja ynjc chico, tlanaoac, qujujca, qujtaca: iixpan neiolcujtilo, iixpan neiolmelaoalo, yn tlaçulteutl, iixpã mopoa, mjtoa, in tetlachiual.

Auh iix, ynacac, ytlacatcauh mochiua, in tlapouhqui, in

---

53. The chapter on Tlaçolteutl is not included in MS Escorial or MS Biblioteca del Palacio. Hence it is not among translations in Seler's Einige Kapitel, nor, probably, elsewhere.

54. Cf. Edward Seler, Translations of the Aztec Collection, p. 93: "It is the goddess who is by the interpreters called Iscuinan, 'she of the two faces' or 'of two-colored face,' and Tlaçolteutl, 'Goddess of Dirt,' and is explained as goddess of lust, of sensual love, and as patroness of adulterers. . . . She, this goddess, or these goddesses—for under the designation Iscuina, she was thought of as in the plural number, and, indeed, as stated by Sahagún in his first book, as four sisters of different age—was the deity who according to this legend, introduced the peculiar kind of sacrifice which was offered to the girls—the cleansing to death with arrows." The names of these four sisters were common girls' names. See p. 41.

55. Eater of filth or of embrace (Seler: op. cit., pp. 92, 94). Sahagún's corresponding Spanish is "remedera de cosas sucias."

56. Cf. Edward Seler, op. cit., p. 57, discussing Chalchihtlicue and Tlaçolteutl: ". . . the water . . . is not only emblematic of the mutability and evanescence of earthly being, in that it sweeps away all things, but is also the symbol of purification and cleansing; it removes filth, which is sin. Thus speaks the midwife when four days after its birth she subjects the child to a ceremonious washing: 'My son, come unto thy Mother, the Goddess of Water, Chalchihtlicue. May she cleanse of the dirt which thou hast of thy father and thy mother'. . . . 'My son, come to thy Mother, thy Father, the Lady Chalchihtlicue, the Lord Chalchihtlatonac . . . water the water, the blue (Matlalat), the yellow, (Tzapalat), may it wash thee, may it cleanse thee perfectly, may it take from thee all evil which thou hast from the beginning of the world, which clings to thee from the father, from the mother.'" Sahagún (Historia general, Vol. II, pp. 191-2), says ". . . ovarienses con que la parteera ovaba a la diosa del agua llamada Chalchihtlicue y Chalchihtlatonac, y decía así: 'Entonces nuestra Chalchihtlicue y Chalchihtlatonac, vosotros ha a vuestra presencia esta criatura: rociaos que la revistan.' Dicho esto la partera tomaba el agua echada sobre ella su vasella, y luego la daba a gustar a la criatura y también la vertía el pecho con ella, y el colchon de la cabeza, a manera de cuando se pone el dios y crisma a los niños, y decía de esta manera: 'Hijo mio muy amado,—y si era varon decía, hijo mio muy amado—, llegaos a vuestra madre y padre la señora Chalchihtlicue y Chalchihtlatonac; témanos ella, porque ella es la de lavar a criaturas y es las brazos en este mundo.' Y luego metía en el agua a la criatura, y decía: 'Entra hijo mio—o hija mia—en el agua, que es llama Matlalat y Tzapalloc; lávate en ella, limpiate el que está en todo lugar, y tenga por bien de apartar de ti todo mal que traes con ya desde antes: del principio del mundo.'" Seler (loc. cit.) establishes a connection between Chalchiuhtlicue and Tlaçolteotl. In the fifth week of the Tonalamatl of the Aztec Collection, which is ruled over by Chalchiuhtlicue, the water goddess holds the head of Tlaçolteotl in her hand. In the Codex Borbonicus for the corresponding fifth week, a stream of water issues from the throne of the water goddess and in the current is the headdress of Tlaçolteotl. These two illustrations mentioned Seler's remarks on the relationship between the two.

57. See Sahagún: Florentine Codex, Lib. VI, cap. xiii (text, tenacazy); also Historia general, Vol. II, p. 249.

58. See Chap. VIII. Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 5) uses the term Kalendermadchen.

the tlapouhqui, wise in reading the sacred almanac which lay in his hand, with the picture [writing], the ink, [and] the colors for painting; the knowledge, the wisdom which hath been uttered.[39]

The penitent who would confess first explained to the seer; he said unto him:

"I wish to go to the master, our lord, the savior and protector of all, our lord Tezcatlipoca,[40] in secret. I wish to have this for myself."

The soothsayer said: "Thou hast been given this favor."

He instructed him when he should come; he chose a favorable time. He saw, in his sacred almanac, what day was good, favorable. It was said: he hath chosen the time.

And when the appointed time [came] he[41] bought a new mat, and incense, and wood. [If he was] a highly honored penitent, he made his confession in his own house; the seer went there. Or perchance the penitent went to him.

He swept well the place where the new mat was placed, and a fire was lit. Then the seer cast the incense into the flames. He addressed the fire; he said:

"Mother of the gods, father of the gods, old god, here hath come a man of low estate. He cometh here weeping, sad, anguished. Perhaps he hath sinned; perhaps he hath erred, perhaps he hath lived in filth. He cometh heavy-hearted; he is sorrowful. Master, our lord, protector of all, also take away, pacify, the torment of this man."

Then the seer spoke unto him who would confess; he said unto him:

"Thou hast come toward the god, protector of all, and [into] his presence. Thou hast come to tell him, to deliver thyself of, thy evil atmosphere, thy corruption. Thou hast come to open thy secrets.

"Take care that thou commit no fault or sin. Take off thy clothing; show thy nakedness to the god, protector of all, our lord Tezcatlipoca.

"Perhaps, being a man, thou wilt not see the god; perhaps he will not speak to thee, being a man; [for] he may not be seen nor touched.

"And so, in this manner, thou comest [to the god], uncover thy secrets, tell thy way of life, thy deeds, in whatsoever way thou art moved, in whatsoever manner it is, whatsoever thou hast done, whatsoever thou hast achieved, whatsoever thou dost which [is] evil and sinful.

"Overturn, pour forth thy vices, thy wrongdoing; [expose] thy evil odor, thy corrupteness.

"And let our lord, protector of all, have pity on thee—tlamatinj, yn jmac manj, yn amuxtli, yn tlacujlolli: in qujpia 776 yn tilli, yn tlapalli, yn matile, yn piale, yn nonotzale, yn 793 oquju 783

yn mojelmelaxaz in tlapilchioale; achto qujtlacaqujtia in tlapouhquj, qujlhuja.

Ca ytechtzinco njnaxitimequj, yn tlacatl, yn totecujo, in tloque nauaque: in totecujo, yioalli, yn ehecatl, ytepoxin, ypetlacaltzin, njcnotztilizmequj.

Qujlhuja in tlapouhquj: otimotlacnelili:

qujnaoatia, yn iquja oallaz: qujpepena in tonalli, qujcta [787] yn jamux, yn jtlacujlol: qujtta, yn iquja qualli tonalli, yn ieccan, in qualcan: mjtoa: qujtonalpepenja.

Auh yn ie yquac, in ie ynaoatilpan, iancujc petlatl quicua: yoan copalli, yoan quauitl: yn tlamauizti in tlamacuhquj, çan ichan yn moiolmelaoa, ie vmpa iauh in tlapouhquj. Auh anoce teujc iauh, in tlamacuhquj:

iancujc petlatl in moteca, vellachpano yn vncan motlalia; [788] yoan tletlalilo: njman copalli contema in tleco in tlapouhquj, qujnotza in tletl; qujlhuja.

Teteu ynnan, teteu ynta, veue teutl, njcan oallatia, in cujtlapilli, yn atlapalli, yn macoualli: njcan chocatiujtz, tlaocuxtiujtz, motzupoahtiujtz, ancan omalauh, ancan omotzpotlamj, ancan oqujxamjc yn vitlallotl, in tocatzoalli, yn çacamjtl; aquj ielitlacua, qujtequjpachoa, Tlacatle, totecujoe, tloquehe nauaquehe, macoçe xicmocujli, ma xicmocaqujti, yn jnentlamachiliz yn macoualli.

Niman qujnotza, yn moiolmelauhquj, in ihoatl tlapouhquj: qujlhuja.

Tiualmoviccatia quintzinco, itzpantzinco, in tloque nauaque; ticmolhujlico, ticmo[illegible]qujlico, yn mjiaca, in mopalanca: ticmotlapolhujlico, in motop, immopetlacal, a ma ao cappa ieh njcan timatoiauj, timotzpexiuj: ma ispantzinco ximopepetlaua, ximomamazauj, in tloque, nauaque, in totecujo, in ioalli, in ehecatl.

A cujx tictlacaittaz in totecujo, a cujx njtztlacanotztlac: ca ioalli, ca ehecatl.

Auh ynja quen tiujtz, ma tictlapo im motop, in mopetlacal: ma xicpoa in nonemjlix, in motlachical, ynin quenja ticmati, ynin quenja cah: in quenja muchiuh, in quenja tax: in quenja tlachiuh, in monequal, in monequaujuc:

xicnoquj, xicpetlaej, in maiectica, in maqualtica, in mjiaca in mopalanca.

Auh xicmotlaocuhtomochili, yn totecujo, in tloque nauaque,

---

39. Cf. Florentine Codex, loc. cit., and Sahagún, Historia general, loc. cit.

40. Cf. corresponding Spanish text: Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 67, and Vol. II, p. 71, gives as meanings of yoalli, ehecatl (1) "espíritu, aire y invisible"; and (2) "aire invisible sin sangre . . . impalpable, y favorecedor y empecedor y indepedientes, por cuyo virtud andan vivos. . . ." Angel María Garibay K, Llave del náhuatl (Otumba, México: n. p., 1940), p. 113, translates tloque nauaque as "que está cerca y junto"—the one, God in general.

41. Context suggests that possessive refers to the penitent.

●776 783 793 who, stretching forth his arms to thee, embraceth thee and carrieth thee upon his back.[62]

"Be daring; be not timid because of shame; be not backward."

[627] Then the penitent [swore an oath to tell the truth, by] touching earth, and cast incense upon the fire. Thereupon he seated himself before the soothsayer and spoke—for [the seer] was the representative, the deputy, the likeness [of the goddess]:

"Our lord, protector of all, because thou perceivest my evil odor, my vices, I take off my clothing and uncover, in thy presence, my nakedness—[that is,] the things I have taken, the things that I have done. Can these things be hidden and darkened, when they are reflected and clear in thy sight?"

Then he began [the tale of] his sins—whatsoever he had done; as if he were offering a song, proceeding thus, talking, doing it as if he were following a road. Much [in that way] he followed [the tale of] his sins. So he proceeded.

785 776 783 793 And when he ended his words, then had he told all his sins.

Then answered the seer, the warden [of the god]; he said unto him:

"Behold, thou hast spoken to the god; thou hast offered him thy deeds and thy misdeeds.

"And behold, this thou shalt do.—When the Ciuapipiltí dreamed, when the feast of the Ciuapipiltí or the Incuimame is celebrated,[63] thou shalt fast four days. Thou shalt starve thy entrails; thou shalt parch thy lips.

"And when it is the day of the feast, at night thou shalt pierce thy tongue with straws and maguey spines. With these thou shalt thus repent thy sins. These thou thus payest in blood.

"And thou shalt pass these straws, as many as thou wishest, whether straws or maguey spines. And thou shalt pass these straws either through thy ears or through thy tongue.

"And thou shalt thus pass the straws through thy tongue; but take care lest thou do penance only to earn merit. Rather [thou shalt do it] to expiate thy sinful life; thou shalt offer blood for thy sins; [therefore] shalt thou break open thy tongue, inserting [the straw] from in front of thee.

"When thou drawest it through, thou shalt cast it down behind thee, either each one [alone] as thou takest it out, or else thou shalt gather them, binding them together, even four hundred [of them], even eight hundred of the straws, which thou shalt have passed through thy tongue.

"Thus shalt thou cleanse thyself of thy faults and thy sins."

in momaçpaltitica, y macuchetica, in tepuztetica; ximotlapalo, ma timopinoçquetz, ma tiniciuh.

Nimá ôelalqua in tlamacuhquj, oncopaltema: njman ixpan motlalia in tlapouhquj: qujlhuja, injc teviujti, ynjc tepatiloti, ynjc teizipda.

Totecujoe, tloquehe, nanaquehe: ca ticmocujlia, ca ticmocaquitia, in njiaca in nopalanca: mjxpantzinco, njnopepetlaoa, njnonamaxauja: ca onac, ca onjechiuh: cujx ichtaca, cujx tlaiocoalan, ca tzacac, ca tlavilpan im mjxpantzinco, yn onac.

Niman compeoaltia: in jtlapilchioaliz, vel iujn quenja cah, vel yujn quenja qujchiuh: yn maca çan cujcatl, cenca çan jvin conoa, cencan yvin conjtoa, yn juh qujchiuh, in imaca çan vtli, cencan qujtocatiuh yn jtlachioal, yn juhuj cencan qujtocatiuh.

Auh yn oelamjto yn jtlatol, yno muchi qujto ytlachioal:

qujnanquilia, yn tlapouhquj, yn jvtli, yn nacatli muchioa, in teujujti, in tepatilloti: qujlhuja.

O ca ticmomochilia, ca ticmomaquilia, in tloque nanaque, im motlachioal, in monequavitec.

Auh ynjn, ca iuca yn taix, yn tiechioaz: yn jquac temoa, yn jquac temo cioapipilti, anoçe yn jquac ynjlhujuh cioapipilti, yn jacujname: nauilujtl timoçaoaz, timocujtlaxculçaoaz, timomomatzaz.

Auh yn iquac vel jlhujtl, in ie oallauijh, in ioaltica tiçacatlaçaz, tiolatoquijztic: ynjn motlapilchioal, iuh tiomamjctic y: auh ynjn iuh namjque ez y:

auh jn quenja ticmequiz, iuh ticmequiz: yutla tiçacatlaçaz, iehoatl in tiucalçacatl tiquijztia, anoçe tlacotl. Auh aço monacaxco in tiolaquijztia, anoçe momenepilco.

Auh ynjc tiquijztic: ca amo ma çan titlamacoua, ca teuhtli, tlaçulli in tictlaça, tictlançua, tiocujtlacuepoaia, ỹ momenepil, mjxpampa ticaquia, motoiolan in tiequjztia, in tictlaçaz: aço çan ceuan in tiequjztia, anoçe çan ticeuequjztia, tictlatlaçalhuiz, yn aço centoontli, aço vntoontli, in tiequjztia tlacotl:

ie pollaia, in motlatlacul, in motlapilchioal, im momequal.

62. Cf. Mem 56.

63. See Cap. X. The Ciuatetes or Ciuapipiltin were thought to be earth-goddesses who descended to earth in the form of eagles; they incited men to sin and crime.

And if the sins of the penitent were only light, [the priest] said unto him:

"Thou shalt parch thy lips, thou shalt fast, thou shalt starve thy entrails for four days."

Or else he said unto him:

"Thou shalt sing and dance [for the goddess]; thou shalt hang rubber-spotted papers [as offerings] and fashion images [for her]."

Or else, he said unto him:

"Thou hast done wrong, truly, with wine. Thou shalt satisfy the gods of wine, the Totochtin."

And he thus commanded him, and said unto him:

"When thou goest, when thou dost thy penance at night, thou shalt take nothing with thee. Thou shalt go naked. Thou shalt gird thy loins with paper painted with pointed figures,[64] spreading one piece behind thee [and one] at thy feet.

"And when thou shalt return, there before our lords, the gods, thou shalt cast off thy paper skirt."

And when he had done his penance, then he went to his house.

Thus in the[illegible] he changed to a good life. It was said that if he were to sin again—so it was said,—no longer might he gain mercy therefor.

It was said that they told only of great vanities, grave violence, adultery, [and only] the aged so spoke.

Thus the aged confessed—it was said—that they might not be punished here on earth for their sins; if they were adulterers, so that their heads might not be pierced, or beaten with stones, [therefore] they confessed.

The soothsayer, before whom were laid [one's] sins, nowhere spoke of what had been placed before him, of what had been said in secret.

For what was said in secret was not for him, but was given and told in secret to the god. And him mortal man might not see.

Thirteenth Chapter, which telleth of the little gods—the lesser [ones],[65] who were considered the very old gods.

Turquoise Lord (Xiuhtecutli)—the yellow-faced one, the holy flame. This one was known as fire, [as] the old god, [as] our father.

He was thought a god, considering that he burned one, he consumed one, he scorched the fields. And for many purposes he was useful; for [with fire, thus] one was warmed, things were cooked on a plate, things were cooked in a pot, pottery was fired, salt was burned, syrup was boiled, charcoal was burned, the lime was burned; things were fried,

Auh intla çan xicca, yn jtlapilchioal, tlamacruhquj: 785
qujlhuja, timotemoatzaz, titlacatlaquaz, timocujtlaxculçaoaz, 776 naujlhujtl: 783
anoço qujlhuja
titlatotia, timotetruhcaoaz, tiepiquiz: 793

anoço qujlhuja.

ca nel vetli, yn jpan otitlaneçomalti, tiquinqujxtiz in totochtin.

Auh qujlhuja, ynjc quinaoatia:

yn iquac tiaz, yn titlamacteoaz ioaltica, atle motech vetztiaz, tipetlaubtiaz: yn momazac, amatl tlaitzcopeoalli in mantiaz: centetl mjcampa, motzintlampa, mantiaz.

Auh yn jquac tioalmocuepaz, vmpa tocontlaçaz yn jmjxpan totecujocoan, yn tetru, yn mamacuz.

Auh yn jquac otlamaceuh, njman oalauh yn jchan:

ic cenmajan, monemjlizcuepa: qujlmach intla oc cepa tlatlacoz, qujl ça ancmo tlaoculilonj.

Qujlmach çan yio vey nequalli, vey nequaujtectli, in tetlaximalizdi: in qujtoaia vetztoc.

Jnjc moialmelaoaia vetztoque: qujlmach, ichoatl, ynjc amo tlacujlcilooque, njcan tlaltiepac, yn jtclapilchioal: yntla [684] ontlaxini ynjc amo quatetlaxililot, ynjc amo quatepitzinjlot, ynjc amo quatetzocoaloz, moiolmelaoa.

Jn tlapoohqui, yn jixpan tlalilo, tlapilchioalli: çan njman ocan qujtoa, in tlein ixpan tlalilo, in tlein ilhujlo:

ipampa ca amo ieh yn jlhujlo, in nomocualo, ca tloque, ca naoque, in mazo, in jlhujlo, in tlapilchioalli: ca amo ieh motta, in macoualli.

Jnic matlactli vmey, capitulo: yntechpa tlatoa, yn 776 tepitoan tetzuh: yn qujntoqujlia, yn omotemruhque, yn vuezitzin tetzuh.

Xiuhtecutli, iccuçauhquj, yoan cuençaltzin. Jehoatl motocaiotia in tletl, anoço vezz tzuul yoan tota:

tzuul ipan machoia: ichica, ca tetlatia, tepalua, tecchichoua, tlachinoa: yoan mjec tlamantli, ynjc tlacuelia: ca ic necoolo, ic tlapanaao, ic tlacuzitilo, ic tlazco, ic izcatlatilo, ic necutlatilo, ic tecullatilo, ic temetlatjlo, ic tlaztzoionjlo, yc tlatzoioaoalo, yc tetlecujlolo, ic temazcallatilo, ic omitlatilo, ic tlaoeztlatilo.

---

64. The more characteristic emblem of Tlazolteotl is a broom wrapped with a tlalcuapaxtli—paper impressed with pointed figures (see Codex Borbonicus, month of Ochpaniztli). The paper hats cloth is no doubt of this same pattern. Probably the huipil worn by the goddess in the illustration (Plate 12) is a good indication of the design of the hats cloth.

65. Corresponding Spanish text has: "que son nuestros en dignidad que los arriba dichos."

776 cooked, and roasted in a pot; one roasted [on the fire]; sweat-houses were heated, unguents were melted, things were cleansed.

776 And when his feast day was celebrated, once a year, at the end of the month of Izcalli, they made an image of 796 Moctezuma; before it quail were sacrificed and incense was set forth.

[262] Tamales [stuffed] with greens[66] were prepared in each dwelling. First they were placed before the fire. Then they were eaten.

[534] And all day his old men sang, blew trumpet-shaped shells, beat drums, and sounded rattles for him.

And no one might reach his arm to the bowl, which was forbidden; nothing might be cooked. Because first were eaten the tamales [stuffed] with greens which had been brought as offerings.

And, in live coals, the children[67] roasted some snakes, frogs, small white fish, water lizards, [and] birds—whatever kind of small animal they hunted, they dropped in the hearth. Thus, they said: "Our father roasteth [something] for himself."

And when night fell, the old men, the old women, drinking wine, made libations in all [four] directions. [And] they said thus: "They give a taste of it to the fire; they refresh themselves."[68]

[535] And every four years a festival most greatly honored him—when Moctezuma danced a princely dance before the temple of Xiuhtecutli, which was called Tozmulco.[69]

[273] And at this time everyone [including] all the children, every one of them, tasted the wine. Thus it was called [the time when] the children drink wine.

[608 431] And then they gave the children uncles and aunts, a man [and] a woman, whom those with children sought out and gave gifts. These took [the children] upon their backs, and carried them then to the temple of Izcoçauhqui. There [the [304 852] parents] pierced their ears; thus they placed a sign upon them, while their uncles and aunts[70] looked on. Afterwards all feasted.

776 [Izcoçauhqui's] ornament was [thus]: black was smeared about the lower part of his face. About his head he bore a circlet set with green stones; he wore a paper crown with blue cotinga feathers and a spray of quetzal feathers; he had a crown of arrowshafts; a crown of spear-shafts;[71] he had

Auh yn iquac ilhujqujxtililoia, cexiuhtica: ipan itlamjan yxcalli: quixiptlatiaia in motecuçuma, ixpan tlacozmaloia, copaltemjlilo, oauhqujltamalli nechivililoia, in cecencalpan: achto ixpan qujmanjliaia in tletl, çatepan qualoia.

Auh yn jveveioean, iuh cemjlhujtl, in qujcujcatia, qujtecciztpichilia, qujteponacilhuja, caiacachilhuja:

auh aiac vel cõmaçoaia in comalco, tetlacaoaltiloia, ynjc amo aca motlatiz, mochichinoz: ipampa in iancujcan oqualoc oauhqujltamalli, ynjc otlamanaloc.

Auh in pipiltotonti, muchintin qujntlaxqujaia: yn aca coatl: cujiatl, xoujli, axolotl, totod: in çaço tlein ocacic ioioli, ycamac contlaçaia in tlecujlli: ic mjtoaia, motlaxquja yn tota.

Auh yn cioouac, noujan tlatlaoanaia in veveteque, ylamatque: iuh qujtoaia, qujtlatniaujliaia yn tletl, tezcalcetuja.

Auh nauhxiuhtica, yn oc cenca, mauirtililoia, ilhuiuh: iquac motecujtotiaia yn motecuçuma, ixpan yn jtzucal, xiuhtecutli, ytocaiocan tzomulco.

Auh in jquac hy, vel muchitlacatl, vel no izquijch tlacatl, qujpaloaia, qujltequja, in vctli, in pipiltotonti: ic motocaiotiaia, pillaoano:

yoan vncã qujntlatiaia, qujnmahujtiaia in pipiltotonti. Ce cioatl, ce oquijchtli, in qujntemoaia pilhoaque, qujntlauhtiaia; ichoantin qujnmamatihuja, vmpa qujmoncaoaia, yn itzupan izcoçauhquj: vmpa qujnnacazxapotlaia, qujnnacxcoionjaia: iuhquin ic qujnmachiotiaia, ynjc qujmjtta, yntlacoan, ymaujoan: çatepan tlaqualo.

Jn jnechichioal catca: tlilticca motezuijtec, chalchiuhtezcle, xiuhtotoamacale, quetzalmjiaoaia, mjtzione, tlacoztzone, xiuhcooanacoche, amacozmeapanale, no tzitzile, cocujole, tiuhtezcatlatlapanquj yn jchimal, tlachieltopile.

---

66. "Una de las hierbas que se comen cocidas se llama huauhquilitl, que son blandas, es muy verde, tiene las ramas delgadillas y atillas, tiene las hojas redondas. Las tallas de esta hierba se llaman huauhtli y la semilla se llama de la misma manera; esta hierba se cuece para comer, sabe a cenizas, esprimese del agua que se cuece para comerse; hacense tamales de esta hierba los cuales se llaman quilaxe." "1." Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 233. On p. 338, huauhquilitl is defined as Amaranthus hypochondriacus Amaranthaceae.

67. In the corresponding Spanish text, the children's parents hunted and roasted these animals. In the Historia general, Vol. I, p. 207, Sahagún writes that the old men roasted the animals from the children as offerings and threw the offerings in the fire.

68. Ibid., Vol. I, p. 209, see translations in Simeon: op. cit.

69. Described as the 64th temple in Tenochtitlan. Ibid., Vol. I, p. 227.

70. Corresponding Spanish text uses the word padrino (god-father; patron or protector). Molina (op. cit.) translates the words tlatli and oaxi as uncle and aunt.

71. Chalchiuhtezcalli—a strap for the head, set with jeweled disks, the front side bearing the figure of a cozinga (xiuhtotoal); quetzalpanitl or mahtlatzacatl quetzalmiaoaqui—a tiara of feather mosaic work in the form of a reversed cone, broadening upwards; mitzontli tlacochtzqualli or fire-serpent earplugs; he carried a cape of yellow paper. Likewise he had rattles and sea-shells. His shield had pieces of turquoise and mirror-stone. He carried the staff with the device for seeing.

776

Fourteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Five Flower (Macuilxochitl) and Flower Prince (Xochipilli).

Equally were they worshipped as gods of the palace folk.

When people fasted, if one of us men lay with a woman, or a woman with a man, it was said: "They brought to naught their fasting through sin."

Thereupon [the god] gave them, as merited punishment, haemorrhoids, venereal sickness, boils, and piles.[72]

Therefore they would make vows to him, in order to quiet, remove, or abate the sickness.

And when his feast, which was called the Feast of the Flowers, was celebrated, first all fasted four days. Some fasted thus: they ate no chili, [and ate only] after midday, only once [a day]. Some went at midnight, and drank a gruel called "painted atolli," on which small flowers floated. [This was] "the fast of the flowers."

All who ate good things ate them only at midday. And some ate only one thing—tortillas of corn not softened by lime,[73] without chili; [this] also [they did] at midday.

On the fifth day, which was when the feast was celebrated, a man became the likeness [of the god], arrayed in [his] clothing, in which he danced; they beat the drum and sang for him.

And at midday, quail were sacrificed. All drew blood, passing straws through the tongue; and they laid as offerings in his temple, five tamales which they had made for him. These were called [bread for] fasting, [and were] very large. On them stood the flowery arrow.

Some thus offered their offering upon wooden plates, and followed it with five more small tamales with a sauce, and others [offered] two cakes made of a dough of amaranth seed and maize—one black, one red,—[instead of offerings of] rubber laid in wooden bowls.

And some [brought] toasted corn, or toasted corn mixed in honey; or S-shaped corn-cakes which were like notched staves or lightning-bolts; [or] butterfly-tortillas, tortillas of ground corn which had not been softened in lime; cakes made of a dough of amaranth seed and maize, and shaped like shields, arrows, swords, and dolls.

And here, to Mexico, from everywhere, were brought captives, called "tribute-captives," [from] all warlike [places]

Jnic matlactli vnnavi capitulo: itechpa tlatoa in teutl, yn itoca: macuilxochitl, yoan xochipilli.

Çan neneuhque, ynjc netrutiloia tecpantzinca intzuh: 776 yn jquac neçaujliloia, intla aca toqujchti ipan cioacochiz, 688 anoço cioatl, ipan oqujchcochiz: mjtoaia, qujntlaçulmjctia 753
yn jneçaoaliz,
ic quitemacaia, tetech qujtlaliaia, qujteilhujltiaia, qujtema- [785 creoaltiaia, in xochiciuiztli, yn menexoalizti, tlapalanaltilizti, 834] quexiliuilizti, yuicpa netoloa, nenetoltiloia, ynjc qujceuiz, ynjc qujquaniz ynjc qujcaxaoaz, cuculizti.

Auh yn jquac ilhujqujxtililoia, ipan xochilhujtl: achtopa 776 navilhujtl nexochiçaoalo: in cequjntin ic moçaoaia, chil- 796 caoaia, qujnnepantla tonatiuh, in tlaquaia, centlaquaia, [264] ioalnepantla qujmattiuh, tlacujlolatulli in qujia, xochitontli yn ipan ca, mexochiçaoa:

muchi qujqua in velic, çan no nepantla tonatiuh qujmattiuh. Auh yn aca çan qujxcaviaia, in iotlaxcalli qujquaia, atle chilli: no nepantla tonatiuh qujmattiuh:

yc tlamacujlti yn jlhujqujxtililoia, iquac ce tlacatl qujmixipilatiaia, commaqujaia yn jtlatquj, ipan mjtotiaia, qujtlatzotzonjliaia, qujcujcatiaia:

yoan in ic nepantla tonatiuh, tlacotonaloia, neçuoaia, tlacoqujxtiloia: yoã tlamanjliloia yn jteupan, macujltetl in [785] qujchiujliaia, tamalli: mjtoaia tlacatlaqualli, cenca vevey ipan ycatiuh xuchujtl:

776
yn aca quauhcaxitl ynjc commanjliaia, yoan contoquiliaia oc no macuiltetl tamaltepitoton, mollotiuja: yoan vntetl [415] tzoalli yiol poujia, no cecnj quauhcaxtica, mantivia, centetl 262 tiltic, centetl tlatlauhquj. 796

Auh yn aca izquitl, anoço necuzquitl, anoço xonecujlli, papalotlaxcalli, iotlaxcalli, tzoçllaxcalli, tzoçalchimalli, tzoçalmjtl, tzoçalmaquauitl, tzoçalxnetl:

yoan noujian oalcaoaloia, in mamalti ajcan mexico, 776 motenoa maltequijme, yn jxquich techiçoaloloc, yn 796

cuauhmalhuapitl—two arrow shafts or wooden dolls, projecting forward above the frontal band on the side of the temples and exhibiting the cuac acatl ("2 reed") or the mamalhuaztli (fire-drill) (see illus.). Solar: The Tonalamatl of the Aubin Collection, p. 75. Tlaxcoxtzoac, in the Aztec text, should probably be tlaxcoxtzoac.

72. Corresponding Spanish text reads: "hueva, cosa enfermedades, de las partes secretas, . . . almorranas, podredumbre del miembro secreto, diviesos, incordios, etc."

73. In corresponding Spanish text: "panes asimos."

776
796 surrounding us, brought by those [Nahuas] living on the borders of warring people. Those who had taken these pris-727 oners, these "tribute-captives," brought them, [and] here guards watched them.

And if one of them fled and escaped, they replaced him, they bought a man to take the place of him [who had fled].

776 Then the slaves died, when the feast was celebrated. And the garb [of Macuilxochitl was thus]: on his lips there was the imprint of a hand. His face was red and burnt. He had a crown of feathers. A wing was the burden on his back, on which was the sun-flag, with quetzal-feathers at the top. The cotton cloth, which was girt behind, had red edges. He wore sun sandals.

Fifteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Two Reed (Omacatl).

[773] This Omacatl was god of Uitznauac.[74] It was said that he invented, created, and introduced banqueting—invitations to feasts, acceptance [of invitations], the feasting of people. Through him it came to pass that men gathered together, that near relatives assembled. To one's house was brought his image, there to be held in esteem and cared for.

And also it was said that if he was not [so] held in esteem, like an invited [guest], he would become angered. He chided one in his sleep or in a dream; he said to him who dreamed: "Thou! Why dost thou not esteem me? I shall depart from thee. Already I know what I shall do to thee."

[753] And if he was sorely enraged, when one ate he often caused him to swallow hair which was upon the water and the food. And when, [as] one said, he ate the god, often he sickened. Thus he afflicted him: food stuck in his throat; the water wound about the roof of his mouth like a snake. His gullet was troubled when he ate. And if he walked, he stumbled and fell.

776 And thus was his feast celebrated. Whose ate the image
796 of the god first made a sacred cylinder [of dough]: this was the bone of the god. The chief man—the priest, the elder of the city—[made it], a cubit long—fat, round.

And before it was shared among them, first all ate and drank, drinking wine. And when day broke, they stabbed Omacatl in the stomach and killed him. Then the sacred roll was shared, broken in pieces, divided among them.

When it was eaten, [it was] as if a debt had been assumed, as if one were summoned to a feast, and were forgiven [the debt]. And those who accepted, when the feast ended, had paid with their stomachs and were clean, because they had repaid [their debt].

776 And thus was he decked: he had a crown of feathers—ixtemoaque, yn iocuaco omoque, quinoalcaoaia yn jmmalhoan, yn jutlaxtiuan, in mahuqijhoan, mochioaia: njcan quijtpiaia, yn calpinque, in cacalpinque.

Auh intla aca thiehti, intla tlacholohti, ypan tlaiaquetzaia, motlacacoujaia, quijxiptlaiotiaia, quijxiptlatiaia:

in tlaclacoti, vncan mipujia, yn jquac ilhujqujxtilloia.

Auh yn jnechichioal: tummacpale ixtlapaloztzale, tlaixtlapaloztzalujlli, tlaixtlapalvilli, yhujxoncale, quachichiqujle, vitonqoj yn jtlamanal, vitzocatlamamale, ypan icac, tonalopanjtl, quetzaltzoaia, quetzaltzontecomaia, quetzaltzontecome, quetzaltzontecoujo, tintlapaltica mozinjlpi, motzinapa, ytonalocac, tonalocaque.

Jnic caxtolli capitula, ynchpa tlatoa yn teutl, yn jtoca Omacatl.

Jnjn omacatl, vitznauac, teutl catca, yn jtech tlamjlooia, in piqujlilooia, qujtocaia ca ichoatl inactia, in cocaiutl, in tecoanotzalistli, in tetlacamatilistli, in tetlatlaqualtilistli: ynatijan mochioaia yn jnnecentlalilia, yn jnnecenquixtiliz teoaioloque, tachi victoia, vnpa macizmachoia, necujtlaujloia yn jxipcla.

Auh zo qujtoaia, yntlacamo mavizcilia, yn jshcujma cnoanotzalo, tlavelcuja: tzcchpa, amoqo tecochirpan teaoaia, qujlhujxia, yn aquja qujnmjquj. Ja tehoatl tleyca yn amo tinechmavizmati; njmitztlalcahuia: auh ie ne njcmati, in tlein mopan njcchioas.

Auh intla cenca moçuma, yn jquac tlaqualo, mjecpa tzontli qujtetolohia, in atl, in tlaqualli ipan. Auh yn aquj yn mjtoa tzuqua, miecpa mocxoa: ynjc qujtilinja, melcima, ycepac mjlacatzoa in atl: mehepotlamja in jquac tlaqua: auh yntla nenemj mozepotlamja, motecujnja, motlavitzquj.

Auh ynjc ilhujqujxtilloia: yn aquja tzuqua, achtopa qujchioaia, tzumjmilli, yiemjio in teutl catca: çan tlacatl, tzupinquj calpole, cen molicpid ynjc hujvitac, vel totomaoac, mjmjltic.

Auh yn aizmo nemamaca, oc achtopa tlatlaqualo, atlica, tlaoaxe: auh yn otlathujc cmjtztcopinja, yn omacatl cnemjctia: njnam ic nemamaca, netlatlapanjlo, nezzalhujlo, in tzumjmjlli:

iquac quoqualo, ichujja ic tetoxicitilloia, tetlacaqujtilo, tetlalhujlo, tzmolcanaltilo: ca yn aquique macoia, yn iquac ic ilhujchujqjqac, mocujtlaxcalitlaoaia, mopopoaia, ypampa ca cenlatztlaoaia.

Ja inechichioal catca: ilvitzoncale, quauhtzoncale, yoá

74. Probably the temple of Uitznauac (Uitznauac cuicatzin) in Mexico. Cf. Seler: Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 82. Sahagún describes it as the 24th temple (Historia general, Vol. I, p. 222). The name uitznauac suggests various other meanings—the south, the barrio or part of the city named Uitznauac, the people of that area, or the south house or south temple. See ibid., Vol. I, pp. 137, 197-99, 215, 221, 222, 239, and also Seler: op. cit., Vol. II, pt. 4, pp. 7-8, 9-10.

the eagle-warrior's crown, the eagle-warrior's dress bordered in red eyes, and a cape of netting with snail-shells.[75] His breast ornament had snail-shells. A mirror-stone in two parts [was painted] upon his face. He was [also] arrayed with a chalky ear-plug; his shield was chalk-covered and had paper streamers. The device for seeing was in his hand. [He sat upon] his stool of reeds and rushes.

yquauhquentenchil, naoaio, ycuachin, ielpanouaqui cyli 776 tzacatlatlapanquj yn jxaiac: yn jxechichioal, ytiçanacoch, ytiçachimal, amapaio, ytlachiaia ymac catca, ytolicpal, acaçpalli.

Sixteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Little Black Face (Ixtlilton), the earth-stamper (Tlalteteçuini).[76]

Jnic castolli vce capitulo ytechpa tlatoa, in teutl yn jtoca, catca, ixtlilton, tlalteteçujn.

He was a god, whose temple was made entirely of wood, at a place named Tlacuilocan. Here in his temple were many earthen bowls, covered over. These were called "his black water."

Teutl catca, çan quavitl yn jteupan catca, ytocaiocan [346] tlacujlocan: in vncan yteupan, mjec yn apastli, tzatzacuti-manca, motoçaiocia ixtlauh.

And whenever a child sickened, they brought him to the temple of Ixtlilton. They uncovered one of the jars and had him drink "his black water." Thereupon the child became whole.

Auh yn aqujn mococoaia, piltontli, vmpa qujujcaia yn 776 jteupan ixtlilton: centel, qujtlapoaia yn apastli, conjtiaia 757 yn jtlilauh; ic patia in piltontli.

When one wished [to arrange] a dance, amid incense, he went and brought [Ixtlilton's] impersonator to his house. It was only a mask, who was arrayed [like the god].

Auh yn aqujn qujtotiz, copaltica in conanaia, ynjc 776 qujvicaia ychan yn jxiptla: çan tlacatl in muchichioaia. 535

When they had arrived at his house, where there was to be a dance, food was eaten and thirst was quenched. After eating, Ixtlilton danced. After he had danced, he entered into the house; he uncovered the wine [which] for four days had been covered. This was called the first opening or tapping of the new wine.[77]

Jn oacic ychan, tlatoxia, teytotia: njman tlatlaquaia, 776 atlixa: yn otlaqualoc, njman mjxtia, yn jxtlilton: yn omjtoti, yn onmacruh, calitic oncalaquj: ichoatl qujtlapoa [273] in vctli, navilhujtica tzacutimâca: ic mjtoaia, tlaiacaxapedia, vicmana.

Niman yc vmpeoa, yn ie tlacoano: oc cepa oalquijça itoalco, qujtlapoa yn jtlilauh, no tzacutimanca navilhujtica: ic macujlilhujtl in qujtlapoa:

If dirt, cobwebs, straw, charcoal [were found] upon it, then it was said perchance he was either an adulterer or a thief; or he lived dissolutely, or he lived in vice; or he was a monster, he who had the dance. Thus they confronted and reproached him openly. Thus they said [the god] sowed discord because he revealed and reproached people to others for their sins.

ic mjtoaia, ic motemeoaia, intla tlaçolli, yntla tocatzaoalli, [787] yntla tzontli, intla tecelli, vncan vetztoc: ic mjtoaia, açq tetlazima, açq ichtec, anoçq ahavilnemj, mahavilcia: ac açq tlacacemelle, in tlatoxia, ic qujmotlaia, qujxomacaia, qujxpantia: ic mjtoaia tetzalan, tenepantla motecca: ichica, ca qujtzicomaca, qujtzixpantia, ic teizmoela, yn tetlatlacul.

And when he departed for his house, they gave him a large mantle called ixquam (face-covering).[78]

Auh ynjc oalquiça tochã, quachili yn qujmacaia motocaio- [292] tia, ixquam.

Thus was [Ixtlilton] bedight: he was spread over with unguent; his face was covered with soot; about his lips was

Jnic muchichioaia, moçac, mocrmjxtlilpopoca, mjxti- 776 çatlatlali, yn jcamapa: tecpaquachichiquijle, quezzalle,

75. For description, see illustrations and text in Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, pp. 515 and 523; and also illustration (Omacatl) —Plate 13.

The term cuachichil means the natural cape or mantle, with one small shells knotted where the cords crossed. The chalcuayal and the tecuayal were presumably the same or similar. Seler: Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 3, pp. 79, 82, citing, in the first instance, Sahagún's Historia general, Lib. III, Appendix, cap. 3. In Lib. II (Florentine Codex, fo. 37v), Sahagún refers to "vn ornamento de vn palmo en quadro, hecho en tela rala, al qual llamauan yxuachtin, atado con vnas cuerdas de algodon a los pechos. . . ."

76. God of medicine. Tlalteteçuini (or tlalteteçuani) is probably formed from tlalli and teteçuinia. Cf. Seler: Ensiqo Kapital, Vol. I, p. 16.

77. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. I, p. 314: ". . . he que mococoaiaia hacaldaban los mozuelos y hacian vino nuevo, que se llamaba vitzli." The Spanish text of the Florentine Codex explains that "a este abrimiento, llamauan tlaiacaxapedia, quiere decir, este abrimiento primero, o vino nuevo." On the meaning of mococoaiaia, see Sahagún, op. cit., p. 37, for a definition of mococoaiaia.

78. ". . . demanda mihor: los quales llamauan ixquam: que quiere decir, cubertura de la cara: porque quadraua, amorgonado, aquel que asjo hacha, la fuera. . . ." Loc. cit.

●776 white clay. He had a spray of flint knives, with quetzal feathers.[79] The burden on his back had [a fan of] red arara feathers. His sun flag was upon it. The sun sign was on his paper vestment,[80] and on his shield. Red was his staff, which had a heart. He had a necklace of the claws of an animal. He had a paper breech-clout. He had rattles and shells. He had sun-shoes.

cueçalvitenquj yn jtlamamal, ytonalopan ipan icac, totonaloio yn jmanaspan, totonaloio yn jchimal, tlauhio yiellotepil, xopilcuruque, yamamaztli, tritzile, cxiole, itonalocac.

Seventeenth Chapter, which telleth of the god whose name was Left (Opochtli), whom anciently men here worshipped as a god.

Jnic caxtolli vmome capitulo, yuchpa tlatoa, yn teutl, yn itoca catca opuchtli: yn quimoteutiaia ie tecauh, nicaã tlaca.

This Opochtli was one of the Tlalocs. He was the god of those who lived on the water, who worshipped him.

Inin opuchtli, ipan mizeoaia, tlaloc: atlaca intzuh catca, quimoteutiaia.

[773] They said that he made and revealed his creations and inventions—the net, the dart-thrower, the three-pronged harpoon,[81] the pole for propelling boats,[82] [and] the bird-snare.

Juh quitoaia, ca ichoatl itlatzintil, ytlanextil, quinezti, quiteittiti in matlatl, yn atlatl, yn mjnacachalli, yn avictli, tzonoaztli.

776 And when his feast was celebrated, offerings of water, food, [and] wine were made; and the cane of corn plants, scented smoke, incense, and sweet-smelling herbs. These they spread before him, thus welcoming him. They shook their rattle-boards at him. They strewed toasted [pop-]corn grains like hailstones, or like scattered dice. And also his old men, his old women, and the city elders made music for him.

796 [273]

Auh yn iquac ilhujquiztililoia, atl, tlaqualli, vctli, in ventli muchioaia: yoan cintopilli, xuchitl, yietl, copalli, yiauhtli, quitepeviliaia, ic quinanamiquia: chicaoaztli concacalachiliaia mumuchitl quichaiaviliaia: iuhquin tecivitl povia: no yeã quicuicatiaia, yn iveviccoan, yn jlamaiccoan, calpoleque.

776 As his garb, he wore a paper crown; he was covered with black unguent—a liquid rubber covering; he had a heron-feather spray with single quetzal feathers. He wore a paper breech-clout [and] had a paper vestment [over his shoulders] with the sun-emblem.

Jn jnechichioal catca: amacale, tlaõçalli, tlaolaltilli, artatzone, quetzalmjiaoaia, amanastle, amaneapanale, tonaloio.

Eighteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Our Lord the Flayed One (Xipe totec).[83]

Jnic caxtolli vmey, capitulo, yuchpa tlatoa, in teutl: yn itoca, xipe totec.

He was the god of the sea-shore people, the proper god of the Zapotecs.

Anaoatl itzuh: tzapoteca in vel intzuh catca,

776 His gifts, [which] he dealt out, his particular creations, his attributes, with which he visited people, which he gave them, [were] blisters, sores, smallpox, ophthalmia, maladies causing watery eyes, infected eyelashes, lice about the eyes, fogging of the eyes, filling of the eyes with flesh, withering of the eyes,[84] cataracts, glazing of the eyes.[84]

753

yn itequiuh pouja, yn iccnian ytlachioal, yn ineixcavil: ic temotlaia, ic tzozaia, ichoatl quitamacaia, in totomonjztli, papalanilztli, çaçaoatilztli, incuculztli, ichichitinjlztli, intenpipinquijlztli, intamaçolicivztli, intiauhpachinjlztli, imacapachinjlztli, intoococivztli, intotolicivztli, intzacycivztli.

776 Those who were affected, we men thus sickened, would thereupon vow to him, saying [that] therefore we would keep on, having donned it, his skin, on the celebration of the Feast of the Flaying of Men.

796

Jn aquin ipam muchioaia, yn cuculztli tequjchti, yuicpa monetohtiaia, yujcpa mjtoaia: ynjc onmaquja yn jicoaio, ynjc itlan aquia, yn jquac ilhujquiztililo: motecaietia, tlacaxipeoalistli:

All hastened pursuing in a company, wrapped in skins [of men], [blood-]stained, dripping [blood], gleaming [with tlapainaltiaia, tetocaia, mjequjatin momanaia, muchinti tcaiotinj, chichiiaoatinj, chichipic-tinj, tocoxtlantinj in 79. Cf. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. II, p. 380 (tecpanquachichiquilli).

80. Cf. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 531) for explanation of manto del sol.

81. ". . . un dardo de tres puntas que se llama minarachalli."—Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 172. The corresponding Spanish text on Opochtli, contains the same information: ". . . es como fuga, arrojan un tiro, tiene tres puntas, [marginal insertion, partly missing: (o?) triangulo (no?)ma trabajan] con que hace, a las aves; y también el al mesmo caso."

82. Standing in the boat, they propelled it with a long pole. The Spanish text uses the term remo, oar, which is technically inaccurate.

83. Seler (Tonalamatl of the Aubin Collection, p. 103) cites Herrera (Hist. gen., Lib. III, cap. 15) to indicate that Xipe enjoyed special honor in the Tuxtlan district. A clear discussion of the "yopimes y tlapanecos" is given in Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. III, p. 133. See also note 89.

84. Meaning problematical.

-16-

blood], so that they terrified those whom they followed.[85] They fought, joining in battle against the valiant chiefs—chosen men [all].

And all [the chiefs], having taken their pleasure with wine, acted like buffoons, imitating and pretending to be warriors, unafraid of death, jostling one another, acting perversely, like warriors. Here they exercised their arms [against those who were skins], and played at combat like fighters in war, none resting.[86] This was [at Xipe totec's temple] called Tonecco.

And the young men garbed like Xipe totec, wearing human skins,[87] then went everywhere from house to house, begging. They were placed on zapote-fibre seats; bunches of [corn] were hung on them like jewels; they placed garlands on their shoulders, they covered them with flowers. They gave them to drink.

And if any woman had blisters, or ophthalmia, she said: "Let me make an offering to Totec, when [the Feast] of the Flaying of Men [is celebrated]."

[Xipe's] garb [was thus]: he had the quail-painting on his face.[88] Rubber divided his lips in two parts. On his Yopi-crown[89] was placed [a band] with forked ends. He wore a human skin, the skin of a captive. He had a wig of loose feathers, golden ear-plugs, a zapote-leaf skirt. He had rattles. His shield was red and had circles. His rattle stick[90] was in his hand.

Ninetenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Lord at the Vanguard (Yiacatecutli).[91]

He was the god of the merchants. Greatly they esteemed him, arraying in paper[92] the stout traveling staves[93] with tetoca, ynjc motlamauhtiliaia: qujnnecalitiaia, qujnnamjquj- 776 796 in tiiacaoan, tlapepenti, tlatocanati:

yoan in iuqujchti, çan papaqujnj, yn mjhivintia, tlatlamati, moqujchnequj, moqujchnenequj, amjquizmauhque, [524] teca momotlanj, iaotlavelilloque: vncan moieiecoaia, moiaomamachtiaia, yn juh mjcaliaque iaopan, vmpa mocacaoaia [346] yn aiac, mjtoaia tetecco.

Auh yn totecti njman ic ic neujan, tepan cacalaquj, no [292 tlatlaeoa: tzapoicpalpan tlalilo, qujmocholcuxcatia, qujn- [352 xochinexpanaltia, qujmicpacaochitia, qujntlaoantia. 302]

Auh intla aca cioatl, totemonja, ixcocoiria: qujtoa, ma njctlamanilia, in totec, iquac tlacaxipeoalixtli.

Jn inechichioal, mizcolnechimale, tenmaxaltic vltica, 776 yiopitzon contlaliticac mazaliuhquj, conmaqujticac tlacaieoatl, yiaoaio malli, tzoechaiaoale, tezcujtlanacoche, tzapocueis, tiitzile, ichimal tlauhtevilacachiuhquj, chicaoaztli yn jmac icac.

Jnic caxtolli vnnauj capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa, in teutl: yn jtoca yiacatecutli.

Puchteca intruh catca: cenca qujmavizztilaia, qujtlaquen- 776 tiaia amatica: yn jatopil, ymotlatopil, yni nenemja, ynj 463
484

85. The corresponding Spanish text describes the scene thus: "En este fiesta, hacian como un juego de cañas: de manera que si un vencido, iba de la parte deste dios, o venagen del dios totec: y estos todos, yuan vestidos de pellejos de hombres que eran muertos, y desollados, en aquella fiesta. . . . Los del bando contrario, eran los soldados valientes, y esados, y personas valientes, y esforçados: que no tenjan en nada la muerte: esados, atrevidos, que de su voluntad salian, a combatirse, con los otros. Alli los vnos, con los otros, se exercitaná, en el exercicio de la guerra: peleauajan los vnos, a los otros: hasta su pasaia, y de alli, bolujan huyendo, hasta su proprio puesto." Cf. also the description in Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 124. The game of cañas in the Enciclopedia Universal Ilustrada, Vol. II, pp. 299-300, is described as "Antigua fiesta, juego ó ejercicio caballeresco en que tomaban parte dos bandos á cuadrillas corriendo á caballo, cañoleando gallardamente, y arrojándose cañas de las que se vaqueros con la adarga." A Moorish exercise, in Medieval times adopted also by the Spaniards, it was reserved to the nobility. It took the form of a picturesque war game requiring considerable skill in horsemanship and spear-throwing.

86. MS Biblioteca del Palacio, Seler, Einige Kapitel, has tecoco in the Aztec text, instead of ciac, which is in the Florentine Codex. Seler translates the passage as "they stopped, ceased, at the place called Tonecco."

87. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 124: "Todos los pellejos de los desollados se vestian muchos mancebos, a los cuales llamaban Totetecti." Cf. also ibid., p. 123, defining Tonecco as "los muertos a honra del dios Totec."

88. In the MS Biblioteca del Palacio text (Seler, op. cit.), the word is mizquitzhuitzac, translated as "er hat im Gesicht die Wachtelbemalung." Seler also (Tonalamatl of the Aubin Collection, p. 102) uses the term mizquitzhuitzac (quail face painting).

89. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 466) translates yopi as "the red people" (Tlapanecs), and gives two illustrations to indicate that they were painted caps.

90. "The word chicaoaztli means 'wherewith anything is made strong.' Word and symbol obviously refer to the strengthening of the reproductive function, to fertilizing, hence we also see the chicaoaztli with the first sign projecting between the human couples in sexual union." Seler: Tonalamatl of the Aubin Collection, p. 100.

91. Seler suggests that the form of the name should be iaoac-teculatl or yacatecutlatl ("the lord, the prince, the leader") (Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 57). Torquemada (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 57) says he also was named Yacatolichqui ("el que tiene la nariz aguileña"); Francisco Javier Clavigero, in Historia antigua de México (México: Editorial Porrúa, S. A., 1945), Vol. II, p. 87, n. 17, adds the name Xiocatecutli.

In op. cit., Vol. II, pt. 4, p. 91, Seler refers to Yacatecutli as meaning "lord of the nose," and to the form Iyacatecutli, which Sahagún uses in the Florentine Codex, as "lord of the departed," explaining the connection of the cult of this god with that of Tezcatlipoca, and linking Yacatecutli with Itztapalupqui. Both the latter were among the "old gods."

92. Cut in four points and covered with liquid rubber. (Seler: op. cit., p. 92).

93. The corresponding Spanish text states: ". . . era una cuba, manjua, que ellos llaman vilaol. Y tambien vsan de otra manera de barado,

776 which they journeyed. Wheresoever they slept, there they set 463 them up; before them they did penances, they drew [their] 484 blood, they offered incense that they might be favored by their god, Yiacatecutli—thus they begged and implored his favor.[94]

. All manner of places they came to and entered. And hence they were named "the merchants who lead." They took their name from their god, Yiacatecutli.

These vanguard merchants[95] went into the coast-lands,[96] looking well for whatever goods there might be; they stretched over the southern coast-lands, they circled around the coast-lands.

They traveled exhausted by the heat and the winds; weakened, tired in the heat, they walked in great affliction. Their foreheads burned; they shaded the sun's heat with their hands [as] they plodded [under] its rays.

They betook themselves into the deserts; they climbed up and down canyons and mountains—all places. On elbow, on knee, they thus sped, they thus took much time.

[439] Greatly were they wearied, much did they suffer, that they might find precious green stones, emeralds,[97] turquoise,[98] amber, gold; [and] feathers of all manner of birds —the [long tail feathers of the] quetzal[99] and its black [825] and green head and breast feathers;[100] the red spoonbill;[101] the blue cotinga;[102] the parrot; the trupial;[103] the eagle; and the skins of fierce animals, of ocelots.

medlatocaia, incãpa cuchisque, vncan qujtilquetza, ixpan tlamacoca, mjço, qujcopaltemjlia, ynjc qujtlaubtia yn jnteuh yiacatecutli, ynjc qujtlanjlia, ynjc qujmatataqujlia, yteicnelilia:

noujan acitinemj, calactinemj. Auh ic moteneoa, pochteca yiaque: itech canque, yn iteca intzuh, yiacatecutli:

Ontoneca, anaoac calaqujnj, vel qujtemotinemj, in tlein qujmonanauhtiuque, anaoatl qujzaqualotinemj, anaoatl qujlacatzotinemj, tonalciiauhtinemj, heecaciuhtinemj, mociauhpouhtinemj, mociauhpouhtiuj, elciciuhtiuj, mociauhquetztiuj, ymellelactiuh, ymjaçua tlatlatiuh, intonal qujmacujtiuj, intonalomjuh ietiuh:

ixtlaoatl qujnamjctinemj, atlauhtli, tepetl, qujtemouja, qujtlecauja, ixqujchca ana: inmolicpi, intetepon ic tlatlacça, ic moquetquetza:

vel qujciiavj vel qujhiiouja, ynic qujtemoa in chalchiujtl, in quetzalitzli, in teuxiujtl, yn apoçonalli, in tecujtlatl: in nepapan ihujtl, in quetzalli, in tzinjtzcan, in tlauhquechol, xiuhtototl, in tzutli, çaqua: quauhtli, in tequanoatl, yn ocelupetlatl.

---

que es vna cosa larga lisjsma, marina: sin fiado ninguno: que es como junco, de las que se vsan en España." Clark, in Codex Mendoza (James Cooper Clark, ed. and tr.; London: Waterlow and Sons, 1938), Vol II, p. 106, gives bamboo (Bambusa spp.).

94. Torquemada (op. cit., 57-8) says they gathered the moves all together, girt with a ribbon, worshipping the moves as well as the god.

95. Traveling tradesmen who went into the tierra caliente (ostomeca anaoac calaquim) (Seler: op. cit., p. 91). In Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 1104, Seler states: "Yacatecutli (der 'Herr der Nase') oder Iyacatecutli ('der Herr der Wegsperrenden') war der Gott der Karawanenführer der ostomec anaoac calaquim der reisenden Kaufleute, die die grossen Handelsexpeditionen nach der Tierra Caliente leiteten und ausführten."

Sahagún (op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164) refers to the town of Ostoteca in Anáhuac as one of the towns famous for the Xiuhtototi.

The references in ibid., Vol. II, p. 350, to the Nanalcatomeca, appears to refer to a grade or class of merchants inferior in rank to the Pochteca tlatoque.

[103] 96. Anáhuac, in addition to designating the valley of Mexico, especially around the lake, refers also to the area in Southern Mexico, essentially tropical, which borders the sea coast. In the Spanish version of this chapter, Sahagún defines the area as "todas las poblaciones, que estan rebera de la mar." In Book III, Chap. XII, Sahagún states "Tabasco hasta Anáhuac, que dista más de cien leguas" (from Tula). Also, "Entraban en la provincia de Anáhuac, no todos, sino aquellos que iban de parte del señor de México con quien estaban aliados y confederados . . . iban todos juntos hasta el pueblo de Tochtepec. En ese pueblo se dividían, unos iban a Anáhuac Ayotlan; otros iban a Anáhuac Xicalanco."—Historia general, Vol. II, p. 354.

Seler defines Anáhuac Ayotlan as the Pacific coastal lands and Anáhuac Xicalanco as the area of Tabasco.—Op. cit., Vol. II, p. 456.

97. "Las esmeraldas que se llaman quetzalitzli, las hay en esta tierra muy buenas; son preciosas, de mucho valor, llámanse así porque Quetzalli quiere decir plumas muy verdes, y atzli piedra de navaja, la cual es muy pulida y sin mancha ninguna, y estas dos cosas tiene la buena esmeralda que es muy verde, no tiene manchas, y muy pulida y transparente es resplandeciente." (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 279.)

98. "Tecuhtzuit, quiere decir turquesa de las dueñas . . . es turquesa fina, y sin ninguna mácula y muy lucida."—Loc. cit.

99. "Las plumas que crían en la cola se llaman quetzalli (y) son muy verdes y resplandecientes, son anchas, como unas hojas de espadaña, dobléganse cuando las toca el aire (y) resplandecen muy hermosamente."—Ibid., p. 163.

100. "El tocado que tiene en la cabeza este ave (quetzalcoatl) es muy hermoso y resplandeciente, llaman a estas plumas tzinitzcan; tiene este ave el cuello y el pecho colorado y resplandeciente; es precioso este plumaje llámanle tzinitzcan."—Loc. cit.

There also is a bird by that name; "Hay una ave en esta tierra que se llama tzinitzcan . . . las plumas preciosas que tiene crían en el pecho y en las cobertas y debajo de las alas; son la mitad pretas y la mitad verdes resplandecientes."—Loc. cit.

101. Tlauhquechol or tecquechol means red quechol; or precious quechol. It is an aquatic bird. "Tiene el pecho, y la barriga, y la cola y las alas de color encarnado muy fino."—Loc. cit.

Seler gives name as Platalea Ajaja L. (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 653). Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 37n., gives Platalea Ajaja rosea L. (roseate spoonbill).

102. Sahagún defines xiuhtototi as a bird the size of a jay bird (grajo) (op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164). Seler identifies it as Cotinga cincta S. Coerulea (ibid., p. 654). Clark (loc. cit.) gives Cotinga amabilis Gould.

103. See Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164: "Cuando vuela y extiende la cola entonces se parecen las plumas amarillas (y) revuelven el color amarillo con las negras, y así parecen como llama de fuego y como oro, crianse en Anáhuac."

776
463
484
[415]
[439]

And [they brought] vases, and incense-burners, and jars made of calabashes, spoons for stirring cacao, and stoppers for jars.

When they entered lands with which they were at war, and went among people who were far distant, they became like their enemies in their garments, their hair-dress, their speech,[104] [that they might] mimic the natives.

And if they came to an evil pass, if they were discovered, then they were slain in ambush and served up with chili sauce.[105][But if] any—even one, even two—escaped alive, [such an one] informed Moctezuma.

This one then gave him a gift, and decked him with his amber lip-plug. He did him honor, singling him out as a valiant warrior, thus making him a man of consequence.

And when those who returned arrived home, when they had come back, when they had reached and had contentment in their land, they feasted all, [especially] the merchants and the principal men, that they might make themselves celebrated.

It was called "the washing of the feet."[106] They paid great honor to the cane, to the walking staff, of Yiacatecutli.

In the tribal temple[107] they set it upright. They offered it an offering first, when they laid a feast. And when they summoned people to a banquet, they always offered it an offering when they ate.

And when they ceremonially bathed and slew a man as a sacrifice,[108] he whom they offered was the likeness of their god, Yiacatecutli; or else one of [the following gods], or all of them, whom they worshipped—Chicomequiauitl, or Chalmecaciauitl, Acxomocuil, and Nacxitl, Cochimetl, Yacapitzauac.[109] No one determined, [for] it was of their own free will, whether they should offer up one or two men.

They bought them there at the slave market at Atzacpotzalco; they sorted and arranged them, turning them around many times, examining them, buying the good ones—those of good bodies, without blemish, the best men, in good health, sid in no degree, who were marked by no marks on the body.

Such as these they slew on the feast-day, Panquetzaliztli, when the feast of Uitzilopochtli was celebrated.

Thereupon they garbed them in trappings like those of Yiacatecutli, which were assigned to them.

And before they slew them, first they let them be seen by the people. It was said: "They save them up [like

Auh in tecomatl, in poctecomatl, in aiutectli, in aquauitl, yn atzaccaiutl:

[292]

ixtlauel iautitlan, in tzacuj, in tzacutica, tetlan onnemj, vel calaquj, motlacacuepa in nechichioalitica, in nezintica, in tlatoltica quintlachecalhuja in chaneque.

Auh intla otlaneçomaltique, intla oittoque: vncan quipoiomjctia, quinchillatilia: ça aca, aço ce, aço vme yn oc nõ tematitlanpa quiça, ixhoatl quioalnonotzaia in motecuçuma:

[263]
[265]

ic vncan qujmaca, caquilia, yapoçomaltentzuh, yc qujmaviziotia, ic qujnezcaiotia, in tiiacauh, vncan ic oquichtia.

[431]
[301]
[501]

Auh yn iquac ealacia, ynchan: vn jmiloch, ynnecurpal oquichiuhque, yn otlaltechacico, yn otlaltechpachiuhque: izquich tlacatl quinotza, in puchteca: yoan in tlatoque, ic moteititiaia:

mjtoa, mocxipaca, cenca qujmavizilia yn itopil, yn jtlaçcaia yiacatecutli:

776

cana in calpulco quiquetzaia: achto quitlamanjlia, yn iquac tetlaqualtia: yoan intlaca nel motecoanotza, quitlamanjlia in çan muchipa yn jtlaquaia.

796
[778]

Auh intla aca tealtix, ixhoatl caltiaia, quiteoaia in jteouh yiacatecutli: anoço cenne ixhoantin yn machenaia, in quinmotetutiaia in chiconequiauitl, anoço chalmecaciauitl, yoan acxomocuil, yoan nacxitl, cochimetl, iacapitzauac, aiac quijiocuja, yiollodama, yn aço ce, anoço vme, ca aleiz tlacatl:

vmpa cencovaia yn tlacanecujloca atzapotzalco: motlabtlatilia, motlapapatilia, quijncuecuepa, quinjhitta, yn qualtin quinccoaque, yn acan quenamjque, in tlacaiecti, in tlacamelaoaque, yn acan cucuque, yn atle intlaciuh ca:

776
796
567

yajc ixhoan quinmictique, yn ipan panquetzaliztli: yn vncan illujquitzilioia vitzilubuchtli:

yquac quinchichinaia, quintlamamaca, intech quitlalia yn juhquj yxochichinal yiacatecutli.

Auh yn ximo quinmjctia, achtopa quinteititiaia: mjtoa quinmjmextia, ic quinmachiria in tealtique:

104. Cf. Tezozomoc (op. cit., p. 57): Yxomolihqui "pusiponente representa persona, que tiene vivaça, ó habilidad, para mejor gracionamente, ó engañar, y es sabio, y sagaz (que se propia condicion de Mercaderes) . . . ."

105. Cf. Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 22) citing Hist. Repu. Colh. Mex. B. II §80.

106. Book IX of the Historia general deals almost entirely with the activities of the merchants. Chapter VI, entitled De las ceremonias que se hacia a los mercaderes cuando llegaban a su casa, que se llama lavatorio de pies, mentions washing mouth and hands.

107. Sahagún defines calpulli as "yglesia del barrio, ó parrochia" (Spanish version).

108. Sahagún defines the sacrificer in this manner: "Estos diablos que mataban a estos cativos."—Historia general, Vol. I, p. 213.

109. According to the Spanish version, they were four brothers and a sister of Yiacatecutli. Seler (Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 4, p. 92) interprets Cochimetl and Yacapitzauac as synonyms for Yiacatecutli; "Chicomequiauitl or Chalmecaciauitl is the name of a goddess of water and the earth"; Acxomocuil is Tezcatlipoca; Nacxitl is Quetzalcoatl.

776
796 goods]." Thus it was made known to the people that they 567 would be offered up as sacrifices.

At this time they gave gifts and had a feast.

And their victims they set up in a good place, all in costly mantles which had been placed upon them. [And] they made them dance upon the roof-tops or in the market place. [And] they went singing, ending their song mocking death.

And if any were noted who were very subtle, among [565] those to be offered up as sacrifices; one skilled in songs, one who was ingenious, who was intelligent and able, the noblemen set him aside and put another in his place.

Likewise, if a woman could sew, or if she prepared food [595] well, or made good cacao—from whose hand good food and drink came; [or if she was] a good interpreter; her also they set aside. The nobles took [such women] as wives.

776 [Yiacatecutli's] array [was thus] put on: his face was covered with white pyrites. He had a tuft of hair on the front of his head like a pillar of stone and a headband with bunches of quetzal feathers. He wore golden ear-plugs. A blue knotted cloth was his cape.[110] He had a costly breech-cloth. He had little bells and shells. He wore princely sandals. His shield bore a coil pattern like a gourd vessel,[111] in quetzal feathers. His traveling staff was in his hand; he had a cane staff.

iquac tetlauhtia, tetlaqualtia.

Auh yn jtlaaltilhoan, iccan, qujnquetza: mûch tlaçotilmatli, yn jntech qujntlalilia: ipã mjtotiaia in tlapanco, anoço tianquizco: cujcatinemj, tlatlahlamj yn jacujc, ynjc momiquinquequelos.

Auh intla aca cittec, in cenca mjmati tlaaltilli, yn cujcamatinj, in iolizmatquj, yn jac, yn iollo: qujqujxtiaia in pipilti, ipan tlacaquetzaia:

no iuhquj, intla cioatl, intla tlamachiuhquj, anoço vellaqualchioa, vel achica, in qualli yiauh, in qualli intlaqual ymac quiça; vellatolmelaoac: no qujxtiloia, qujnmotlacacioaoatiaia in pipilti.

Jn jnechichioal motlatlatlali, mixapetzvi, ytemjlo, izquatzo, tzquatzoac, quetzallalpile, tzutzujtlanacoche, xiuhtlalpilli yn jtilma, tlaçomaxtle, tzitzile, ciocale, teccaque, quetzalxicalcoliuhquj yn jchimol, ytlaçcaia ymac onoc, otlatopile.

Twentieth Chapter, which telleth of the god whose name was Lord of the Four Directions (Napa tecutli).

776 It is said that he also belonged among the Tlaloca. He 467 was the special [god of] the mat-makers' guild, who worshipped him as a god.[112]

And he was also [god] of those who fashioned mats of [173] large, fat reeds, and of those who made frames of reeds.[113]

They spoke in this wise: "For it was he who first taught and showed them how to weave mats and make seats."

He it was who owned, ruled, discovered, began, and initiated [mat-making].

And they spoke thus: "For he it is who causeth the reeds to sprout and grow—the fine thin ones, the coarse ones, the long, fat reeds and the round, white ones, those with sprouts, the black ones, the sharp ones, the thin ones."[114]

776 And when it was his feast day, they spoke thus: "He 796 washeth and bathetb men; he shaketh and sprinkleth rain 467 upon them." [For] greatly they importuned [rain] of him.

And also each year they slew a man who represented him,
[567] a slave.

Jnic cempoalli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn teutl yn jtoca catca Napa tecutli.

Juh mjtoa, ca no intech peuj yn tlaloque: iehoan ymjacoion, incatjan, in calpollec, qujmotetitiaia in petlachiuhque:

yoan tolcuechiuhque, in tlacuechjuhque, ytech mopeaia:

inh qujtoaia, ca iehoatl achto qujnmachti, qujmititi, in petlachioaliztli, yn icpalchioaliztli:

iehoatl azcaca cocucaoaia, tlatqujoa, tlamettile, tlatzintile, tlapeoaltile.

Joan inh qujtoaia ca iehoatl qujnnahia, qujqujxtia, in tali in tolpitzoac, in tolpetlactli, in tolmjmjlli, artapili, in tolqujtutl, in tolcaputl, yn jztoli, xonali:

yoan yn jquac illujuhqujçaia, inh mjtoa, tepapaca, tealtia, tepan qujtzetzelua, tepan qujpitoa, yn aoacholi, cenca tlaihtlanjlilia.

Auh no ce tlacatl, ipan qujteuaia, tlacotli, in qujmictiaia tezcatlipoca:

---

110. Corresponding Spanish version states that "esta vestuario con una manta azul, y sobre el azul, una red negra de manera quadrada, a parejas, por las mallas de la red."

111. The tezcatlalhuqui also has been referred to as a conventionalized serpent-head design.

112. Calpulli—clan or gens, which contained, probably, of heads of old families, controlled domestic affairs, distributed to common lands among members (Seler: op. cit., Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 89, citing Alonso de Zurita: Breve sumaria relacion, Vol. II, pp. 72-227). In various of his writings Seler uses the word "guild" when the context suggests its membership.

113. Corresponding Spanish text says, "Napoa calcipo de petatos: que llaman tolcuatili."

114. Cf. Sahagún: op. cit., Vol. I, p. 143 and Vol. III, p. 272.

They arrayed him [like the god], and he carried in his hand a green gourd vessel, in which was water. With a branch[115] he sprinkled people.

And when not on his feast day, but sometime during the year, [a devotion was paid to Napa tecutli,] another man impersonated him, and they decked him [similarly].

When one of the makers of mats desired that there should be a dance at his house, that he should observe [a devotion], the governors of his guild (calpuleque)[116] escorted [the impersonator of the god], who went sprinkling the people with water, since they had prayed that they might be benefited.

And when he delivered himself of his faults, [the celebrant] brought forth his goods and chattels.

He said: "May I eat not in vain, may I consume not in vain, may I use not for myself alone that which hath benefited me. May all be eaten, drunk, consumed, that a dance be danced for our god, Napa tecutli. May I now live, soon sleep, soon awake again. [The god] knoweth if he will give anything to me, if he willeth that anything be given."

Then he covered the impersonator with a large cotton mantle; who, thus clothed, then departed [with the calpuleque] from [the mat-maker's] house.

And then [the mat-maker] feasted all his kinsmen.

And in the guild hall where was guarded the image [of the god], the mat-makers greatly honored and cared for him. Always they spread out mats and set up seats; they shook [things] out, they swept clean, they removed rubbish, they laid fires. Always they swept [the hall] very clean, they provided incense. No rubbish lay about.

And in this manner was [the god] bedight; he was covered with a black unguent; his face had a thick coating of soot—his face was blackened, and it was spotted with a paste of amaranth seed. He wore a paper crown. His hair-dress, at the back of his head, was of paper. He wore a paper breech-clout. He had bells and white sandals. He bore the shield [ornamented with] water-lily flowers and leaves. He carried a staff of long thick reeds.

qujchichioaia, ymac mazcinenca, xoxoujc, xoxouhquj 776 xicalli: vncan istinemj atl, vexotica ic teatzelhvia. 796 567

Auh yn jquac amo ilhujuh, yn çan nenmajan: oc no ce 467
qujxiptlaiotiaia, qujchichioaia:

yn jquac tla aca, petlachiuhquj qujnequj ychan qujtotia, qujnepieltia: vmpa qujvicaia, in calpuleque, teatzelhujtiuh, tzacochvitiuh, iuhquja ic qujtlanjliaia, ynjc qujmicneliz.

Yoan iuhquja yvic mocujtlascuixtlaoaia: yn açaca ic vnca itlaquj, yazca:

qujtoaia, macamo njcnenqua, macamo njcnenpolo, macamo njcnicauj, yn nocneliloca: ma onquale, ma onjoa, ma onpopoliuj, ma ic onmjtoti in toxouh napa tecutli:
ma çaquen njnonemjtia, yn ac iuhquj njcochiz, ac iuhquj njneoaz, iehe qujmati, yn açoc itla, nechmomaquixiz, qujmomacavilia:

ic quixquentiaia ce quachtli, yn ixipela muchioaia. ic oalquiça yn ichan:

auh ic mochichiaztl, tlatlaquaia yn jnaniloque. 776
Auh yn jcalpulco in vmpa pialoia yaiptla, ceaca tlamauiz- 467 tilitia, tlacelitia, in petlachiuhque, muchipa petlatzteca, icpaltzteca, tlatzetzelua, tlachpana, tlacuzuj, tlelialia, muchipa copaltema, tlatzacaliuhtoc tlatzacaliuhtimanj, [356] atle vezzoc, çe tlaçalli.

Auh yujn yn muchichioaia, motlilocac, mjxtlilpopoca, 776 mixtlilhuj, mjchchiaujticac, amacale, yiama:uexpal. amamazcle, mixtile, ixtaccaque, atlacuçmanchimale, axtapil-tepile.

Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of those called the Little Molded Ones (Tepictoton), who were held to be among the Tlaloca.

[The Tepictoton] were also thought to belong among the Tlaloca.

These thus named Tepictoton were only imagined. They made them as representations of various mountains.

And any who were palsied, cramped, stiffened, paralyzed, or any who were threatened with drowning when the wind arose over the water, would then vow that they would fashion images, that they would make representations of Jnic cempoalli vce capitulo, vtechpa tlatoa yn inoca tepictoton: yn jnoan pouja tlaloque.

No ynoan pouj, intech tlanjlioia yn tlaloque:

yn jc mjtoaia tepicto, çan qujmonpiquijia. qujmixiptlaiotiaia, in tempe, in çaço catle tepetl.
Auh yn aquja coachujia, oc.apanoaia, quaquauhtia, 776 cocotzaujia: amoço yn aquja atlac miquimequj, ehecatl ipan 782 moquetza atla: vncan mocuitlaia ynjc tepiquia, in qujpiquia: quetzalcoatl, ic chalchivitl yeoc, in tlaloc:

115. The corresponding Spanish text specifies "un ramo de sabçi" (ramo).
116. According to Durán, (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 223), the calpuleque were "señores o guardas de barrios."

776 Quetzalcoatl, Chalchiuitl ycue, Tlaloc, Popocatepetl, Iztac
782 tepetl, Poiauhtecatl,[117] and any other mountains of which they had vowed to make representations.

popucatepetl, iztac tepetl, poiauhtecatl: ynan in çaçe quexquijtzi tepetl in qujtemoua in qujpiqui.

And they represented the mountains, they made their 532 images, only in a dough of amaranth seed and maize,[118]
782 made in human form, made to look like men.

Auh in qujpipiqoja, in qujmixipdatiuia in ytepe, çan tzoalli, qujntlacatlaliaia, qujntlacatlachialtiuia, tlacatlachiticatca:

They gave them teeth of squash seeds; they provided them 755 eyes of fat black beans. With whatever adornment [the mountains] were represented, thus when they made them, they thereupon arrayed them.

qujntlantiuia xiuauchtli, auh in qujmjxtelolotiuia xiecutli: in quenamj yntlatqui in qujmixipdatiuia, in qujpipiqujia çan no iuhqui ynjc qujchichiouia.

And they made papers, and they spattered them with [314 liquid rubber.[119] And they laid these over them as mantles.
289] And some of these papers, which were spattered with drops of liquid rubber, they hung on a cord, tied and fastened together, so that they were held in a row before the small molded ones [Tepicme].

Auh ynan qujchiouia, amatetzujtl, colchachapatztia, colchipiniaia, qujnquequentiaia:

auh in cequj amatetzvitl, tlaolchipinjlli, tlaolchachapatzalli, mecatitech qujpipilouia, mecatitech qujnemetzchilpiaia, qujnemetechçaloaia, ymjxpan antoc, ic itzacutoque in tepicme:

They rustled, quivered, and flew in the breeze. Canes of fat, round reeds [held the cord] at both ends; [the canes] were stuck into and supported by the ground. On this were held the rubber-spotted papers.

hiçuacatoc papapatlacatoc, papatlantoc, ontopilquaujtl, necoc, nenecoc, necoccampa tlatlalacticac, tetzotzontlicac, ya itech antoc tetzujtl.

[415] And a green spotted gourd was split in two and cored. Before [the Tepicme] they set this, which they called the 793 tecuxuac cup, for the wine, in which the wine was. Thus they offered [them] wine.

Auh tzilacaiuitl, tlaixtlapantli, tlaixtitzactli: ymixpan mamanca, chalchiuhxicalli ipan ponjia, vctli vnca ca, vctli ic mamanca.

And it was the office of the priests alone, who were experienced, to make [the Tepicme] and set them in place. None 532 of the householders dared make or adorn them.

Auh çan ixhoua in tlamacazque, ya jxtequitoh, in machiotque catca, ya qujchichiouia, in qujntlalaiaia: aiac çan motocuiaia, in calla in qujchichiouia.

And on the fifth [day], when they feasted the priests, it was said, they caused them to forget.

Auh macujhtica in qujntlalhujaia, mjtoa: qujmolcaualtiaia in tlamacazque:

When the Tepicme were fashioned, thereupon they held 782 a vigil and made music for them.

ya o ic cauhque tepicme, njman ic ic qujtemçatjia, qujncujcuia:

During the night, they made offerings four times; they 755 set before the priests, before them who sang the songs for the Tepictoton, round tamales which they gave them.

in caiocal nappa in qujntlamanjlia, tamalolli in qujnmacaia, qujmamaia ynujpa, in tlamacazque, in tepiccujca:

And four times they offered them food during the night, and they made music for [the Tepictoton].

no nappa in qujntlamacaia caiocal, ynan qujntlapichilia,

[198 They whistled with their fingers, they made music for 533] them with shells, with flutes, and with fifes.

qujmaquiquijtalia tocacistli in qujnpichilia, ynan vilacapitztli, cocuujlod,

Young jesters, in their cups, who cut capers, and amused
[273 people, blew the flutes. They also were offered food.
463] And on the next day they slew the Tepictoton [images]; they slew them, like sacrificial quail, twisting their necks. Then they gathered up and carried away the Tepictoton figures made of a dough of amaranth-seed and maize to the priests' house, where dwelt the priests.

vilacapitztia, çan telpopochti, papaquijnj, hauiouj, tulivintiauj, tecromeltiauj, cocolopa, no tlamacaia.

Auh ya otlatvic njman qujmictia ya tepicme, qujquochcotolla, qujquochcuj, qujquochilacatoua, çatepan qujcocololoa, conolcuj, in tepictonalli, qujtqui ya calmécac ya vmpa onoque, tlamacazque.

And he who [caused to be] fashioned the Tepicme thereupon returned to his guests, where they were entertained.

Auh in tepiquijo, njmao ic ye calaquih ya ilamatzontlahoan, ya jxtecoua, vncan mopia, mopiztiquo:

And in the evening, toward nightfall, then all the old 273 people set drinking wine—those already advanced in age, the 782
755

auh in ic iocotitoh, in ic tovtlac njman ic ic tlacoua, mochoaxcatlalia in vctecaca, ya ic chicuacque, ya otlachi-

117. Gods of the sea, of water, and of rain (cf. corresponding Spanish text). Popocatepetl and Iztac tepetl (Iztac cloud) are prominent peaks in the Valley of Mexico; Poiauhtecatl is Mt. Orizaba.

118. Made of dough (vez masa), in the Spanish columns; Sobre muchos é proporcionados Zumos de Starbolmolmo (Tratado Kapard, p. 27).

119. ". . . unos papeles llenos de goma de ule, a los cuales papeles llamaban amatetzoli" (Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. 1, p. 130).

755
782 which [the cuahxicame] are, the little wooden bowls and the clay bowls, all these they left at Tepetzinco: they threw them into the water, off shore, at a place called Panzolan.

776 Twenty-second Chapter, which telleth of the god with the mirror in his hair (Tezcatzoncatl), who also was held to be one of the four hundred rabbits (centzontotochtin).

He [was] the wine, in times past[128] considered full of sin. For he hurled people off cliffs, he strangled people, he drowned people, he killed them.

He was an evil-natured being. One did not affront him: one did not speak lightly of him.

And this Tezcatzoncatl was also considered one of those called the four hundred rabbits, who are the substance of wine—Ijuhtecatl, Acolhua, Tlilhua, Pantecatl, Iniquincatl, Tolncatl, Papaztac, Tlahuizcalpantecuhtli, Ometochtli, Tepoztecatl, Chimalpantecatl, Colhuatzincatl.[129]

And as for the array of Tezcatzoncatl, he had the white heron feather headdress; he had a crescent-shaped ornament through the septum of his nose and a paper ear-plug. He had a fan-shaped ornament of red macaw feathers and a neck piece with flecks scattered over it. He had the knotted cloth with [representations of] scorpions. He carried the palque gods' shield, the obsidian staff, and the fire staff. And also he had rattles.

quimhuetzoncatl, quapijoncatzoncatl, nuchi vuapa cuecuexin tepetzinco: ailan cuenpanoia, vuapa cuepanoia, yuxuiocan panoidan.

Juic ompaualli vmmo cuptlahu, yuchqua tlatoa in tezcatzoncatl, ye jnnan pouj cuecuexonchi.

Jehuatl in vetli, ixpan tlaelcauhtli ipan machoia: ca tempeninja, tequechmecanja, tzoalinja, tzonjctia; tzoavitzouj, amo pinavilouj, amo chimoiouhtouj.

Auh yuja tezcatzoncatl, yuxan pouj, yuxan ecu, ye mexmoxa, centzontotochtin, ye vetli ixnecuio, ye iJuhtecatl, Acolhua, tilhua, pantecatl, Jnquincatl, Tolncatl, papaztac, Tlahuizcalpa, vme tochtli, tepoztecatl, chimalpantecatl, Colhuatzincatl.

Auh ye jnechichiual Tezcatzoncatl, xiuxuxua, iacuxoxua, amanacachu, cuepalvitzocua, chaiocac cuapa, colotlalpile, vmetuchchimaxic, itzopile, tecpatzpile, no tzinzile.

fin del libro

128. Yappar formerly, in times past (Siméon: op. cit.). The meaning also could be "drains."
129. See Sahagún: op. cit., Vol. I, pp. 112, 311, 314; Vol. III, p. 139; Vol. V, p. 67, for explanation of the names.

776
532

1—Uitzilopochtli. 2—Paiani. 3—Tezcatlipoca. 4—Tlaloc.

—After Pane y Tezozomoc

TR 532

—After Paso y Troncoso

5—Quetzalcoatl. 6—Chicomecoatl. 7—Chicome mazatl. 8—Tlaloc Ixiuhcan.

2: Sahagun M-5 (1529-1590) 1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

9—Tuxpitlac tecuin. 10—Cuauhpilli. 11—Chalchihuitl yeca. 12—Tlaxcalteca.

—After Paso y Troncoso

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590)1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

—After Paso y Troncoso

13—[illegible]. 14—Macuilxochitl or Xochipilli. 15—Omacatl. 16—Ixtlilton.

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

17—Opochtli. 18—Xipe totec. 19—Yiacatecutli. 20—Napa teuctli.

—After Paso y Troncoso

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590)1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

[782]

—After Paso y Troncoso

21—Tamastamatl. 22-26—Teptiotoes.
27—Chalchihuitl pyes (Chap. 11). 28—Tlaloxan (Temple of Tlaloc) (Chap. 11).

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

[782]

[796
467]

[782 755]

—After Paso y Troncoso

29—Tzapotlan temoa (Chap. 9), Chalchiuhtli yeme (Chap. 11), Chiconac cuauhtli (Chap. 7). 30—Tlapalcuauhtli—Confusion (Chap. 12). 31—Napa tecuhtli (Chap. 10). 32—Tepictoton (Chap. 11). 33—Pantitlan (Tepictoton) (Chap. 11). 34—Appendix, Chap. 12. 35—Appendix, Chap. 12.

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590)1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

T76
532

[182]

—After Pozo y Tezozomoc

36—Appendix (Refutation). 37—Appendix (Refutation) 38—Tlilhuacan. Xiuhtecutli. 40—Opochtli.
41—Tlacatecolli. 42—Tezcatzoncatl; 43—Tepitoton.

De las Cerimonjas

SECOND BOOK, WHICH TREATETH OF THE FEASTS AND SACRIFICES BY WHICH THESE NATIVES HONORED THEIR GODS IN THEIR STATE OF INFIDELITY.

LIBRO SEGUNDO QUE TRATA DE LAS FIESTAS, Y SACRIFICIOS: CON QUE ESTOS NATURALES, HONRRAUAN A SUS DIOSES, EN EL TIEMPO DE SU INFIDELIDAD.

805 X796 First Chapter, concerning the calendar and the feasts of fixed date, the first of which is the one which followeth.[1]

The first month of the year was called, among the Mexicans, Atl caualo, and in other parts Quauitl eua. This month began upon the second day of February, when we celebrate the Purification of Our Lady. On the first day of this month, they celebrated a feast in honor—according to some—of the Tlaloc gods, whom they held to be gods of rain; [or]—according to others—of their sister, the goddess of water, Chalchiuhtli icue; [or]—according to [still] others—in honor of the great priest or god of the winds,[2] Quetzalcoatl. And we may say that [they celebrated the feast] in honor of all of these. This month and all the rest, which are eighteen [in number], each have twenty days.

[176 184f]

Capitulo primero, del canlendario, de las fiestas fixas, la primera de las quales es lo que se sigue.

El primero mes, del año se llamaua entre los mexicanos Atl caoalo: y en otras partes quavitl eoa. Este mes començaua en el segundo dia del mes de Hebrero quando nosotros celebramos, la purificacion, de nuestra señora. En el primero dia deste mes: celebrauan vna fiesta a honrra (segun algunos) de los dioses tlaloques, que los tenjan por dioses de la pluuja: y segun otros de su hermana, la diosa del agua, chalchiuhtli ycue: y segun otros a honrra del gran sacerdote, o dios de los vientos quetzalcoatl: y podemos dezir, que a hõrra de todos estos. Este mes, con todos los de mas, que son deziocho tienen a cada veynte dias.

Atl caualo or Quauitl eua

X796 In this month they slew many children; they sacrificed them in many places upon the mountain tops, tearing from them their hearts, in honor of the gods of water, so that these might give them water or rain.

[493] The children whom they slew they decked in rich finery to take them to be killed; and they carried them in litters upon their shoulders. And the litter went adorned with feathers and flowers. [The

5ª	d	KL	Atl caualo, o quavitl eoa	d	1ª
1	e		En este mes matauan muchos njños	e	2
2	f		sacrificavanlos, en muchos lugares en	f	3
3	g		las cumbres de los montes: sacandoles	g	4
4	A		los coraçones a hõrra de los dioses del	A	5
5	b		agua, para que les diesẽ agua o llujia.	b	6
6	c		A los njños, que matauan: com-	c	7
7	d		ponjanlos con ricos ataujos para lleuar-	d	8
8	e		los a matar, y lleuauanlos, en vnas	e	9
9	f		literas, sobre los hõbros: y las literas,	f	10

1. The first nineteen chapters, largely a digest of more expanded material in Chapters 20-38, are presented unannotated; most of the translators' notes will be found in this later section. For these nineteen chapters the original has no corresponding Nahuatl text.
2. Marginal notation: Cultus deae calendarii.
3. Marginal notation: Cursus del calldario romano.

The second month they named Tlacaxipeualiztli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast in honor of the god called Totec—[or], as another name, called Xipe—when they slew and flayed many slaves and captives.

Al segundo mes, llamauan tlacaxipeoaliztli. En el primero dia deste mes: hazian vna fiesta a honrra del dios llamado Totec, y por otro nombre se llamaua xipe: donde matauan, y desollauan muchos esclauos y captiuos. 796 X [305 776]

Chapter 2
Tlacaxipeualiztli

From the captives whom they were to slay the owners themselves tore off the hair of the crowns of their heads and kept it as a relic. This they did in the tribal temple before the fire.

When the masters of the captives took their slaves to the temple where they were to slay them, they took them by the hair. And when they took them up the steps of the pyramid, some of the captives swooned, and their masters pulled them up and dragged them by the hair to the sacrificial stone where they were to die.

Having brought them to the sacrificial stone, which was a stone of three hands in height, or a little more, and two in width,* or almost, they threw them upon it, on their backs, and five [priests] seized them—two by the legs, two by the arms, and one by the head; and then came the priest who was to kill him. And he struck him with a flint [knife], held in both hands and made in the manner of a large lance head, between the breasts. And into the gash which he made, he thrust his hand and tore from [the victim] his heart; and then he offered it to the sun and cast it into a gourd vessel.

After having torn their hearts from them and poured the blood into a gourd vessel, which the master of the slain man himself received, they started the body rolling down the pyramid steps. It came to rest upon a small square below. There some old men, whom they called Quaquacuiltin, laid hold of it and carried it to their tribal temple, where they dismembered it and divided it up in order to eat it.

Cap. 2.
Tlacaxipeoaliztli

1 d KL Tlacaxipeoaliztli d 22[1]
2 e A los captiuos que matauan: arran- e 23
3 f cauãlos, los cabellos de la coronjlla, y f 24
4 g guardauanlos, los mjsmos amos, como g 25
5 A por reliquias: esto hazian en el calpul A 26
6 b delante del fuego. b 27
7 c Quando lleuauan los señores de los c 28
8 d catiuos a sus esclauos al templo: donde d 1[2]
9 e los aujan de matar, lleuanuanlos por e 2
10 f los cabellos: y quando los subian, por f 3
11 g las gradas del cu, algunos de los cap- g 4
12 A tiuos, desmayauan, y sus dueños los A 5
13 b subian arrastrando por ios cabellos, b 6
14 c hasta el taxon donde aujan de morir. c 7
15 d Llegandolos al taxon: que era vna d 8
16 e piedra de tres palmos de alto, o poco e 9
17 f mas, y dos de ancho o casi: echauanlos f 10
18 g sobre ella de espaldas: y tomauanlos g 11
19 A cinco, dos por las piernas, y dos por A 12
20 b los braços, y vno por la cabeça: y venja b 13[3] luego el sacerdote, que le auja de matar, y dauale con [413] ambas manos, con vna piedra de pedernal: hecha a manera de hierro de lançon por los pechos, y por el agujero que hazia: metia la mano, y arrancauale el coraçon, y luego le ofrecia al sol, echauale en vna xicara.

Despues de auerles sacado el coraçon, y despues [415] de auer echado la sangre en vna xicara: la qual recebia el señor del mjsmo muerto: echauan el cuerpo a rrodar por las gradas abaxo del cu, yua a parar, en vna placeta abaxo: de alli le tomauan, vnos viejos, [767 que llamavan quaquacujlti, y le lleuauã a su calpul: 266] donde le despedaçauan, y le repartian pa comer.

* Actually a palmo is defined as the span between thumb and end of little finger, hand outstretched. In Webster's Dictionary, the Portuguese palmo is 0.64 m.; in the Encyclopædia Britannica (14th ed.), the Spanish palmo is 0.229 m. A handbreadth is estimated as 3-4 in.

1. Marginal notation: Cuitlahua muere pero.
2. Marginal notation: Moctezuma hablar dios muy.
3. Marginal notation: Sacadri corbaçjh et cuef.

The third month they called Toçoztontli. On the first day of this month they observed a feast to the god named Tlaloc, who is the god of rain. On this feast they slew many children upon the mountains. They offered them as sacrifices to this god and to his companions, so that they would give them water.

Al tercero mes. llamavan toçoztontli: en el primer dia deste mes, hazian fiesta al dios llamado Tlaloc: que es dios de las pluuias. En esta fiesta, matauã muchos njños, sobre los montes: ofrecianlos en sacrificio a este dios, y a sus compañeros, para que los diessen agua. 796^ [805 776]

Chapter 3
Toçoztontli

On this feast they offered the first fruits of the flowers which had bloomed earliest that year, on the pyramid named Yopico. And before they had offered them, none dared smell a flower.

Those in charge of the flowers, who are called xochimanque, celebrated a feast to their goddess, named Coatl icue, or by another name Coatlan tonan.

Likewise in this month, those who had worn the skins of the dead [sacrificial victims] whom they had flayed the previous month, took [them] off. They went to cast them into a cave in the pyramid which they called Yopico; they went in procession to do this, and [performed] many ceremonies. They went stinking like dead dogs. And after they had left them [in the cave], they washed themselves, [performing] many ceremonies. A number of the sick made vows to attend this procession, in order to recover from their sickness, and they say that some [of them] recovered.

The masters of the [sacrificed and flayed] captives, with all those of their households, did penance for twenty days: neither did they bathe nor wash their heads until the skins of the dead captives were deposited in the cave mentioned above. They said that they did penance for their captives.

After they had ended the penance, they bathed and washed themselves, and summoned all their kin and friends, and gave them food. And they performed many ceremonies with the bones of the dead captives.

Cap. 3.
Toçoztontli.

1 c KL
2 d En esta fiesta: ofrecian las prjmicias
3 e de las flores, que aquel año primero
4 f nacian en el cu, llamado iopico: y
5 g antes que las ofreciesen, nadie osaua
6 A oler flor.
7 b Los officiales de las flores, que se
8 c llaman sochimanque: hazian fiesta, a 9 d su diosa llamada Coatl ycue, y por otro
10 e nombre coatlã tona.
11 f Tambien en este mes: se desnu-12 g dauan, los q̃ trayan vestidos, los 13 A pellejos de los muertos, q̃ aujan des-
14 b ollado el mes pasado: y-los a echar
15 c en vna cueua, en el cu, que llamauan
16 d iopico: yuan a hazer esto, con pro-
17 e cesion: y cõ muchas cerimonjas, yuan
18 f hediendo, como perros muertos: y
19 g despues que los aujan dexado: se 20 A lauauan, con muchas cerjmonjas:
c 14
d 15
e 16
f 17
g 18
A 19
b 20
c 21
d 22
e 23
f 24
g 25
A 26
b 27
c 28
d 29
e 30
f 31
g 1'
A 2'

[824 346]

[755]

Algunos emfermos hazian voto, de hallarse presentes, a esta procesion, por sanar de sus emfermedades: y dizen, que algunos sanauan.

Los dueños de los catiuos, con todos los de su casa, hazian penjtencia, veynte dias: que nj se bañauan, nj se lauauan las cabeças: hasta que se ponjan los pellejos, de los captiuos muertos, en la cueua arriba dicha: dezian que hazian penjtencia, por sus captiuos. 796^ 785 783

Despues que aujan acabado la penjtencia: bañauanse, y lauauanse, y combidauan a todos, sus parientes, y amigos, y dauanles comjda: y hazian muchas cerjmonjas, con los huesos, de los catiuos muertos.

1. Marginal notation: Apollo habet diu xxx.

2. Marginal notation: Marue cypriaue.

The fourth month they called Uei toçoztli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast in honor of the god named Cinteotl, whom they regarded as god of maize. In his honor they fasted four days before the arrival of the feast.

Al quarto mes llamauan, Vey toçoztli: en el primero dia deste mes: hazia fiesta a honrra del dios llamado Cinteutl, que le tenjan por dios de los mahizes: a honrra deste, ayunauan quatro dias, ante de llegar la fiesta.

[796] [805 776 785]

Chapter 4
Uei toçoztli

In this feast they placed reeds at the doors of the houses. They sprinkled them with the blood from their ears or from the calves of their legs. Besides these, the nobles and the rich set up in their houses some branches which they called acroyatl. Likewise, they set up branches for their gods, and set forth flowers for [the gods] which each one had in his house.

After this, they went about the maize fields and brought stalks of the maize (which was still small), and they garnished them with flowers and went to place them before their gods, in the house called calpulli; and also they set food before them.

Having done this in the various suburbs, they went to the pyramid of the goddess whom they called Chicome coatl, and there, before her, they enacted skirmishes in the manner of battles. And all the girls bore upon their backs ears of maize [grown] the year before. They went in procession, to present them to the goddess Chicome coatl, and they returned them once more to their house[s] as blessed thing[s]; and from them they took the seed to plant next year. And also they put it [away] as the heart of the grain bins, because it was blessed.

They made of dough (which they call tzoalli) the image of this goddess in the courtyard of her pyramid; and before her they offered all kinds of maize, and all kinds of beans, and all kinds of chía. For they said that she was the maker and giver of all those things which are the necessaries of life, that the people may live.

Cap. 4.
Vey toçoztli

1 b KL. Vey toçoztli b 3
2 c En esta fiesta, ponjan espadañas a c 4
3 d las puertas de las casas ensangrenta- d 5
4 e uanlas, con sangre de las orejas, o de e 6
5 f las espinjllas: los nobles y los ricos, f 7
6 g de mas de las espadañas, enrramauan g 8
7 A sus casas, con vnos ramos, que llaman A 9
8 b acxoatl. Tambien enrramauan a sus b 10
9 c dioses, y las ponjan flores a los que cada c 11
10 d vno tenja en su casa. d 12
11 e Despues desto, yuan por los ma- e 13
12 f hizales, y trayan cañas de mahiz (que f 14
13 g aun estaua pequeño) y componjanlas g 15
14 A con flores y yuanlas a poner delante de A 16
15 b sus dioses, a la casa que llamauan b 17
16 c calpulli: y tambien ponjan comjda c 18
17 d delante dellos. d 19
18 e Despues de echo esto, en los barrios: e 20
19 f yuan al cu, de la diosa, que llamauan f 21
20 g chicome coatl: y alli delante della g 22[1]
hazian escaramuças a manera de pelea: y todas las muchachas lleuauan a cuestas, maçorcas de mahiz del año pasado: yuan en procesion, a presẽtarlas, a las diosa chicome coatl: y tornauanlas otra vez a su casa como cosa bendita, y de alli tomauan la semjlla, para sembrar el año venjdero: y tambien ponjanlo por coraçon, de las trojes, por estar bendito.

[785] [776] [241]

Hazian de masa (que llaman tzoalli) la ymagen desta diosa, en el patio de su cu, y delante della: ofrecian todo genero de mahiz, y todo genero de frisoles, y todo genero de chien: porque dezian, que ella era la autora, y dadora de aquellas cosas, que son mantenjmjentos, para biujr la gente.

[778]

1. Marginal numerals: Sacrificios antes de hacer pesar.

The fifth month they called Toxcatl. On the first day of this month they celebrated a great feast in honor of the god named Titlacauan, and for another name, Tezcatlipoca. This one they held to be god of the gods. In his honor, they slew, in this feast, a chosen youth who might have no blemishes upon his body, [who was] reared in all luxuries for the space of a year, [and] trained in the playing [of musical instruments], and in singing, and in speaking.

Al quinto mes llamauan Toxcatl: el primero dia deste mes: hazian gran fiesta a honrra del dios llamado Titlacaoe, y por otro nombre Texcatlibuca: a este tenjan por dios de los dioses: a su honrra matauan en esta fiesta vn mancebo escogido, q̃ ninguna tacha tuujesse en su cuerpo: criado en todos deleytes, por espacio de vn año, instruto en tañer, y en cantar, y en hablar.

796 X [305 776] [533]

Chapter 5
Toxcatl

This feast was the most important of all the feasts. It was like Easter, and fell near Easter Sunday—a few days after. This youth, reared as hath been said, was very comely, and chosen from many. He had long hair—down to the waist.

When, on this feast, they slew the young man who had been reared for [the rôle], they at once produced another, who was to die after one year. He walked everywhere in the town finely arrayed with flowers in his hand, and with people who accompanied him. He greeted with good grace those whom he met. All knew that this one was the likeness of Tezcatlipoca, and they bowed before him and worshiped him whenever they met him.

Twenty days before this feast came, they gave this young man four comely young women reared for [the part], with whom for all the twenty days, he had carnal relations. And they changed his array when they gave him these young women: [they] clipped his hair like a war captain and gave him more finery [even] heavier [than what he had had].

Five days before he was to die, they celebrated feasts for him and banquets, in cool and pleasant places. Many of the leading men accompanied him. On the arrival of the day he was to die, they took him to a pyramid or sanctuary which they called

1. Marginal notation: Matar la dar xoxi.

Cap. 5.
Toxcatl

1	A	KL.	Toxcatl	A	23
2	b		Esta fiesta, era la principal de todas	b	24
3	c		las fiestas, era como pascua, y caya	c	25
4	d		cerca de la pascua de resurrection	d	26
5	e		pocos dias despues: este mancebo	e	27
6	f		criado, como esta dicho era muy bien	f	28
7	g		dispuesto, y escogido entre muchos:	g	29
8	A		tenja los cabellos largos hasta la cinta.	A	30
9	b		Quando en esta fiesta matauã al	b	1'
10	c		mãcebo que estaua criado para esto:	c	2
11	d		luego sacauan otro: el qual auja de	d	3
12	e		morir dẽde a vn año, andaua por todo	e	4
13	f		el pueblo muy ataujado con flores en	f	5
14	g		la mano, y con personas que le acõpa-	g	6
15	A		ñauan saludaua a los que topaua graci-	A	7
16	b		osamẽte: todos sabian que era aquel	b	8
17	c		la ymagẽ de Texcatlipuca: y se pros-	c	9
18	d		trauã delante del, y le adorauan donde	d	10
19	e		quijera que le topauan.	e	11
20	f		Viente dias antes que llegasse esta	f	12' fiesta: dauã a este mancebo quatro moças, biẽ dispuestas y criadas para esto: con las quales todos los veinte dias tenja cõuersaciõ carnal: y mudauanle el traje, quando le dauã estas moças, cortauale los cabellos como capitã y dauãle otros ataujos mas galanes.

[833] [302] [302]

Cinco dias antes que muriesse: hazianle fiestas y vanquetes en lugares frescos y amenos: acompañauanle muchos principales: llegado el dia donde auja de morir: lleuauanle a un cu, o oratorio que llamauã tlacuchcalco. y ante que llegasse alli en vn lugar que [346]

2. Marginal notation: Nouil, Arbõl auge Pan.

The sixth month they called Etzalqualiztli. On the first day of this month they observed a feast to the rain gods. In honor of these gods, the priests of these gods fasted before their feast came for four days, which are the four last days of the previous month.

Al sexto mes llamauan Etzalqualiztli: en el primero dia deste mes: hazian fiesta a los dioses de la pluuja: a honrra destos dioses, ayunauã los sacerdotes destos dioses: quatro dias antes de llegar a su fiesta, que son los quatro postreros dias del mes pasado.

796X
[325
[76]
785]

Chapter 6
Etzalqualiztli

In order to celebrate this feast, the priests and servants of the idols went to Citlaltepec for reeds; for they grew very large and handsome in the waters called Temilco. From there they brought them to Mexico to adorn the pyramids. On the road which they took, no one appeared; all wayfarers hid themselves, for fear of them. And if they came upon one, they took from him whatever he had, even leaving him naked. And if he resisted, they belabored him such that they left him for dead. And even if he bore tribute for Moctezuma, they took it from him. And for this they visited upon them no punishment; because, since they were servants of the idols, they had license to do these things, and others [even] worse, with no punishment. Many other ceremonies the priests of the temple performed in these four days, which are put forth at length in the account of the feast.

On the arrival of the feast of Etzalqualiztli, everyone made a kind of gruel or porridge which is called etzalli (a delicious food, which they liked well). All ate in their houses, and gave [of it] to those who came, and did a thousand follies on this day.

On this same feast, they punished terribly servants of the idols guilty of committing some fault in their service; [they mishandled] them in the water of the lagoon to such a point that they left them for dead. And thus they left them there at the edge of the water. From there their parents or relatives took them and carried them to their houses, half dead.

On this same feast they slew many captives and

Cap. 6.
Etzalqualiztli.

1 g KL. g 13
2 A Para la celebracion desta fiesta: los A 14
3 b satrapas de los ydolos y sus mjnjstros, b 15
4 c yvã por junças a Citlaltepec: que se c 16
5 d hazẽ muy grãdes y muy hermosas en d 17
6 e vn agua que se llama temjlco, de alli e 18
7 f las trayan a Mexico: para adornar los f 19
8 g cues, por el camjno donde venjã, nadie g 20
9 A parecia: todos los camjnãtes se ab- A 21
10 b scondian de mjedo dellos, y si con b 22
11 c alguno encõtrauã: tomauãle quãto c 23
12 d traya hasta dexalle en pelo, y si se d 24
13 e defendia: maltrataualle de tal manera e 25
14 f q̃ le dexauã por muerto: y aunque f 26
15 g lleuasse el tributo para Motecuçoma se g 27
16 A le tomauan: y por esto njnguna pena A 28
17 b las dauã: porque por ser mjnjstros de b 29
18 c los ydolos, tenjã libertad para hazer c 30
19 d estas cosas, y otras peores sin pena njn- d 31
20 e guna. Otras muchas cerimonjas hazian e 1[1] los satrapas del templo en estos quatro dias que estan a la larga puestas en la historia desta fiesta.

[137]
[346]
[651]
[681]

Allegada la fiesta de Etzalqualiztli: todos haziã vna manera de puchas o poleadas que se llama Etzalli (comjda delicada a su gusto) todos comjan en su casa, y dauan a los que venjan, y hazian mjll locuras en este dia.

En esta mesma fiesta, a los mjnjstros de los ydolos que avian hecho algun defecto en el serujcio dellos: castigauanlos terriblemẽte en el agua de la laguna tãto que los dexauã por muertos: y assi los dexauã alli a la orilla del agua: de alli los tomauã sus padres o parientes, y los lleuauã a sus casas medio muertos.

[262]
[786]
[688]

En este mjsmo mes mataua muchos cativos y otros

1. Marginal notation: Jueves de diez reyes.

The seventh month they named Tecuilhuitontli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast to the goddess of salt, whom they called Uixtociuatl. They said that she was elder sister of the Tlaloc gods. In honor of this goddess they slew a woman decked in the ornaments with which they represented the same goddess.

Al septimo mes llamauan Tecujlhujtontli: En el primero dia deste mes: hazian fiesta a la diosa de la sal que llamauan Vixtociuatl: deziã que era hermana mayor, de los dioses tlaloques: matauan a honrra desta diosa vna muger compuesta con los ornamẽtos que pintauã a la mjsma diosa. 796 [805 776]

Chapter 7
Tecuilhuitontli

On the eve of this feast, all the old women sang and danced, as well as the young women and girls. They went held by some short cords which they carried in their hands, one [taking] one end, another the other [end]. These cords they named xochimecatl. They all wore garlands of wormwood [flowers] of this land, which are called iztauhiatl. A number of old men led them and ordered the singing. Among them went the woman who was the likeness of this goddess and who was to die arrayed in rich ornaments.

On the night before the feast, the women, with the same one who was to die, kept vigil; and they sang and danced all night long. At break of day, all the priests arrayed themselves and performed a very solemn dance. And all who were present at the dance held in their hands those flowers which are called cempoalxochitl. Thus dancing, they took many captives to the Pyramid of Tlaloc, and, with them, the woman who was to die, who was the likeness of the goddess Uixtociuatl. There they slew first the captives and then her.

Many other ceremonies were performed during this feast; and also [there was] great drunkenness, all of which is set forth at length in the account of this feast, fol. 76.

Cap. 7
Tecujlhujtontli.

1 f KL. La vigilia desta fiesta cantauan y
2 g dançauan todas las mugeres, viejas, y
3 A moças y muchachas yvan asidas de 4 b vnas cuerdas cortas que lleuauan en las 5 c manos, la vna por el vn cabo, y la otra
6 d por el otro: a estas cuerdas llamauan
7 e sochimecatl: lleuauan todas gujrnaldas
8 f de axenxos desta tierra que se llama
9 g iztauhiatl: gujauadas vnos viejos, y
10 A regian al canto en medio dellas yva la 11 b muger que era la ymagen desta diosa, 12 c y que avia de morir adereçada con
13 d ricos ornamentos.
14 e
15 f La noche antes de la fiesta: velauan
16 g las mugeres con la mjsma que auja de 17 A morir, y cantauan, y dançauan toda la
18 b noche: venjda la mañana: adereça-
19 c uanse todos los sacrapas, y hazian vn
20 d areyto muy solemne: y todos los que
21 estauan presẽtes al areyto, tenjan en la mano aquellas flores que se llaman cempoalsochitl: assi baylando lleuauan muchos cativos al cu, de Tlaloc: y con ellos a la muger que auja de morir que era imagen de la diosa Vixtociuatl: allí matauan primero a los captivos, y despues a ella.

Otras muchas cerimonjas se hazian en esta fiesta, y tambien gran borracheria: todo lo qual esta a la larga puesto en la historia desta fiesta. fo. 76.

f 2[1] [535] 3 4 5 6 7 [301] 8 137] 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 f 16 [535] g 17 A 18 b 19 c 20 [137] d 21 [273]

1. Marginal notation: Marvellous, poet, sage Sun.

X 796 The eighth month they called Uei tecuilhuitl. On the first day of this month they observed a feast to [805] the goddess named Xilonen (goddess of the tender 776 maize). On this feast they gave food to all the poor men and women—old men, old women, boys, girls— [735] in honor of the goddess. They slew a woman, on the tenth day of this month, arrayed in the ornaments with which they represented the same goddess.

Al octauo mes llamauã Vei tecujlhujtl: En el primero dia deste mes, haziã fiesta a la diosa llamada Xilonen (diosa de los xilotes) en esta fiesta dauã de comer a todos los pobres hombres y mugeres, viejos y viejas, njños y njñas, a honrra desta diosa: matauã a vna muger a diez dias deste mes, compuesta cõ lós ornamẽtos con que pintauã a la mjsma diosa.

Chapter 8
Uei tecuilhuitl

X 796 For eight uninterrupted days before the feast, they fed men and women, young and old. Then, very 735 early in the morning they gave them to drink a kind of gruel which they call chienpinolli. Each one drank 262 as much as he wished. And at noon they placed all in order, seated in their rows, and they gave them tamales. He who gave them [out], gave each one as many as he could hold in one hand. And if one of them exceeded the bounds of custom so much as to take [tamales] twice, they mishandled him and took from him those which he had, and he went with nothing. This [feasting] the lords brought about in order to give comfort to the poor; for at this time, ordinarily, there is a want of the necessities of life.

X 796 All these eight days they danced and moved in rhythm, men and women together performing the 535 ceremonious movement, all heavily adorned with rich vestments and jewels. The women wore their [302] hair unbound; they went with hair down, dancing and singing with the men. This dance began at sundown, and they continued in it until nine o'clock. [373] They carried many lights (like great torches) of resinous wood, and there were many braziers or bonfires which burned in the same courtyard in which they danced. In this dance or solemn movement they went with hands joined [to those of other dancers], or embraced—the arm of one grasping the body of another as in an embrace, and the other likewise [holding still] another, men and women [alike].

Cap. 8.

1	e	KL	Vei tecujlhujtl	e 22[1]
2	f		Dauan de comer a hombres y mu-	f 23
3	g		geres chicos y grãdes ocho dias con-	g 24
4	A		tinos, antes de la fiesta luego muy de	A 25
5	b		mañana dauãles a beuer vna manera	b 26
6	c		de maçamorra que llamã chienpinolli:	c 27
7	d		cada vno bueja quãto queria: y al	d 28
8	e		medio dia ponjãlos todos por orden	e 29
9	f		en sus rencleras sentados, y dauanlos	f 30
10	g		tamales: el que los daua, daua a cada	g 1[2]
11	A		vno quãtos podia abarcar con vna	A 2
12	b		mano: y si alguno se desmãdaua a	b 3
13	c		tomar dos vezes maltratauanle, y to-	c 4
14	d		mauanle los que tenja, y yvase sin	d 5
15	e		nada. Esto hazian los señores por con-	e 6
16	f		solar a los pobres: porque en este	f 7
17	g		tiempo ordinariamente ay falta de	g 8
18	A		mãtenjmjentos.	A 9
19	b		Todos estos ocho dias baylauan, y	b 10
20	c		dançauã: haziendo areyto hombres y	c 11[3]

mugeres todos juntos todos muy ataujados con ricas vestiduras y joyas: las mugeres trayan los cabellos sueltos, andauan en cabello baylando y cantando cõ los hombres començaua este areyto en ponjendose el sol, y perseueruauan en el, hasta ora de las nueue: trayã muchas lumbreras (como grãdes hachas) de tea, y aujan muchos braseros o hogueras, que ardian en el mjsmo patio dõde baylauan. En este bayle o areyto andauã trauados de las manos, o abraçados, el braço del vno asido del cuerpo como abraçado, y el otro asimjsmo del otro hombres y mugeres.

1. Marginal notation: Sanxti gaudiej Eph. et sanj.
2. Marginal notation: Jnlior ha diez sanj.
3. Marginal notation: Pij papae et Mart.

X 796 The ninth month they called Tlaxochimaco. On the first day of this month they held a feast in honor of the god of war, named Uitzilopochtli. In this they offered him the first flowers [grown] in that year.

[805 ●776]

Al nono mes llamauan Tlaxochimaco: El primero dia deste mes hazian fiesta a honrra del dios de la guerra llamado Vitzilobuchtli: offrecianle en ella las primeras flores de aquel año.

Chapter 9
Tlaxochimaco

[23] 262 On the night before this feast, all busied themselves in killing fowls and dogs, in order to eat them, and in making tamales and other things concerned with food. Then, very early in the morning of this [778] feast, the priests of the idols decked Uitzilopochtli with many flowers; and after the statue of this god was adorned, they decorated the statues of the other gods with garlands and strings and wreaths of flowers. And then they decked all the other statues in the tribal temples and young men's houses. And in the houses of the majordomos and leading men and common folk, all decorated with flowers the statues which they had in their houses.

X 796 535 Having decorated the statues of all the gods, they then began to eat that fare which they had prepared the night before; and, a little after eating, they started a kind of dance in which the noblemen, with women, together danced grasping each other's hands, and the ones embracing the others, arms thrown about each other's necks. They did not dance solemnly in the manner of a ceremonial dance, nor did they go through the movements of a ceremonial dance; but they went step by step, to the rhythm of those who [534 778] beat [the drums] and sang, all of whom were standing, a little to one side of those who danced, near a circular altar which they called momoztli.

This chanting lasted until nightfall. Not only in the pyramid courtyards but in all the houses of the leading men and the common folk they beat [the drums] and sang with a great din until night. And [273] the old men and the old women drank wine; but no young man nor young woman drank it. And if [any] of them did drink it, they punished them sorely. Many other ceremonies were performed in this, which are [described] at length. Etc.

Cap. 9

1 d KL Tlaxochimaco d 12
2 e La noche antes desta fiesta ocupa- e 13
3 f uanse todos en matar gallinas y perros f 14
4 g para comer, en hazer tamales y otras g 15
5 A cosas concernjentes a la comida: luego A 16
6 b de mañanita el dia desta fiesta: los b 17
7 c satrapas de los ydolos, componjã cõ c 18
8 d muchas flores a Vitzilobuchtli, y des- d 19
9 e pues de compuesta la estatua deste e 20
10 f dios: componjan las estatuas de los f 21
11 g otros dioses con gujrnaldas y sartales g 22
12 A y collares de flores: y luego cõponjan A 23
13 b todas las otras estatuas de los calpules, b 24
14 c y telpuchcales: y en las casas de los cal- c 25
15 d pisques y principales y maceguales, d 26
16 e todos componjan las estatuas que ten- e 27
17 f jan en sus casas con flores. f 28
18 g Compuestas las estatuas todos los g 29
19 A dioses: luego començauan a comer A 30
20 b aquellas viandas que tenjan aparejadas b 31
de la noche pasada, y dende a vn poco despues de comer: començauan vna manera de bayle o dança: en la qual los hombres nobles con mugeres juntamente baylauan asidos de las manos y abraçados los vnos con los otros: echados los braços sobre el cuello el vno del otro: no dançauan a manera de areyte, nj hazian los meneos como en el areyte, sino yvan paso a paso: al son de los que tanjan y cantauan los quales estauan todos en pie, apartados vn poco de los que baylauan, cerca de vn altar redondo que llaman momuztli—

Durauã este cantar hasta la noche: no solo en los patios de los cues: pero en todas las casas de principales y maceguales, tañjã y cantauan con gran bozeria hasta la noche: y los viejos y viejas beujan el vctli: pero njngun mancebo nj moça lo beuja: y si alguno lo beuja castigauanlos reziamente. Otras muchas cerimonjas se hazian en esta: que esta a la larga. Etc.

The tenth month they named Xocotl uetzi. On the first day of this month, they observed a feast to the god of fire, named Xiuhtecutli or Ixcoçauhqui. On this feast they cast into the fire, alive, many slaves, bound hand and foot, and before they had quite died, they took them forth, dragging [them] out of the fire, in order to tear out their hearts before the image of this god.

Al decimo mes llamauan Xocotl vetzi: En el primero dia deste mes, haziã fiesta al dios del fuego llamado xiuhtecutli o Jxcoçauhquj: en esta fiesta echauã en el fuego viuos muchos esclauos, atados de pies y manos, y antes que acabasen de morir, los sacauã arrastrando del fuego para sacar el coraçon delante la ymagen deste dios.

Chapter 10
Xocotl uetzi

During the feast of Tlaxochimaco, they went forth into the forest [and] cut a tree of twenty-five fathoms' height and brought it, dragging it, to the courtyard of this god. There they pruned off all its branches and raised it upright, and it remained thus standing until the eve of the feast. Then they again laid it upon the earth with much caution and [using] many devices that it might not bump [the ground]. On the day before this feast, early in the morning, many carpenters came with their tools, and they trimmed it and made it very smooth. After having trimmed it and decorated it with many kinds of papers, they tied ropes and other cords to it and raised it up with much shouting and din, and they made it firm.

As soon as the beam or tree was raised and adorned with all of its finery, then those who had slaves to cast alive into the flames adorned themselves with their plumage and rich ornaments, and they stained their bodies yellow, which was the livery of fire; and, taking their captives with them, they performed a dance all that day, until nightfall.

After the captives had kept vigil all that night on the pyramid, and after having performed many ceremonies with them, they cast into their faces some powder which they call yiauhtli, that they might lose their sense of feeling and not suffer so greatly [the

Cap. 10.
Xocotl vetzi

1 c KL. Xocotl vetzi c 1°
2 d Durante la fiesta de tlasochimaco: d 2°
3 e yuã al monte cortauan vn arbol de al- e 3
4 f tura de veinte y cinco braças y trayanle f 4
5 g arrastrando hasta el patio deste dios: g 5
6 A alli le escamondauan todo, y le leuan- A 6
7 b tauan enhiesto y estaua assi enhiesto b 7
8 c hasta la vigilia vigilie de la fiesta en- c 8
9 d tonce le tornauã a echar en tierra cõ d 9
10 e mucho tiẽto y cõ muchos pertrechos e 10
11 f para que no diesse golpe: la vigilia f 11
12 g desta fiesta, bien de mañana venjan g 12
13 A muchos carpinteros con sus herrami- A 13
14 b ẽtas y mondauãle y hazianle muy liso. b 14
15 c Despues de mondado y de auerle com- c 15
16 d puesto cõ muchas maneras de papeles: d 16
17 e atauanle sogas y otros mecates y leuan- e 17
18 f tauanle con muchas bozes y muchos f 18
19 g estruendos y afixauanle muy bien. g 19
20 A Desque la viga o arbol estaua leuã- A 20°
tada y adornada cõ todos sus aparejos: luego los que tenjã esclauos para echar en el fuego viuos aderẽçauãse con sus plumajes y atauajos ricos: y tiñjanse el cuerpo de amarillo que era la librea del fuego y lleuando sus captiuos consigo: hazian areyto todo aquel dia hasta la noche.

Despues de auer velado toda aquella noche los captiuos en el cu, y despues de auer hecho muchas cerimonjas con ellos, enpoluorizauanlos las caras con vnos poluos que llamã yiauhtli: para que perdiessen el sentido, y no sintiessẽ tanto la muerte, atauanlos

1. Marginal notation: despues de diez veyn.
3. Marginal notation: Barrendo delante.

2. Marginal notation: Puesto al rededor.

pains of] their death

The eleventh month they named Ochpaniztli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast to the mother of the gods, named Teteo innan, or Toçi, which meaneth "Our Grandmother." They danced in silence for the honor of this goddess, and in great silence slew a woman dressed with the ornaments with which they represented this goddess.

Al vndecimo mes llamauan Ochpanjztli: El primero dia, deste mes, haziã fiesta a la mãdre de los dioses llamada Teteu inna o Toci, que quijere dezir nuestra abuela: baylauan a honrra desta diosa en silencio y matauan vna muger en gran silencio vestida con los ornamentos que pintauan a esta diosa.

796X [805 776]

Chapter 11
Ochpaniztli

Five days before this month began, all the feasts and merry making of the previous month ceased. Entering this month, they danced eight days without singing and without beating the two-toned drum. These past, there came forth the woman who was the likeness of the goddess whom they name Teteo innan, arrayed with the ornaments with which they pictured the same goddess; and a great number of women came forth with her, especially the medicine women and midwives. And they split into two bands and fought, pelting each other with balls made of tree parasites and from the leaves of the tuna cactus and with balls made from the leaves of reeds, and with flowers which they call cempoalxochitl. This merry making lasted four days.

These ceremonies and others of like kind ended, they brought it about that that woman should not know she was to die, so that she should neither weep nor be saddened; for they held that to be an omen of evil. The night when she was to die having fallen, they decked her very richly, and persuaded her that they were taking her so that some great lord might sleep with her; and they bore her in great silence to the pyramid where she was to die. Having taken her up, one [of the priests] took her upon his back, shoulder against shoulder, and swiftly they struck off her head, and then they flayed her. And a stout youth put on her skin.

This one who wore the skin of the woman whom they had slain they then bore off with great solem-

1. Mexican calendar: September 1st–20th.

Cap. 11.
Ochpanjztli.

1 b KL Cinco dias antes que començasse este
2 c mes: cessauan todas las fiestas y regozi-
3 d jos del mes pasado entrando este mes,
4 e baylauã ocho dias sin cantar, y sin
5 f teponaztli: los quales pasados, salia la
6 g muger que era ymagen de la diosa q̃
7 A llaman teteu inna, compuesta con los 8 b ornamẽtos con que pintauan a la
9 c mjsma diosa, y salian grã numero de 10 d mugeres con ella: especialmente las 11 e medicas y parteras: y partiansе en dos
12 f vandos y peleauan apedreandose con
13 g pellas de pachtli y con hojas de tunas
14 A y cõ pellas hechas de hojas de espa-
15 b dañas, y con flores que llamã cempoal-
16 c sochitl. Este regozijo durauã quatro
17 d dias.
18 e
19 f Acabado estas cerimonjas y otras
20 g desta calidad: procuraũ que aquella muger no entendiesse que auja de morir porque no llorasse nj se entristeciesse (porque lo tenjan por mal aguero: venjda la noche en que auja de morir, ataujauanla muy ricamente, y haziãla entender que la lleuauan para que dormjesse con ella algun gran señor: y lleuauanla con grã silencio al cu, donde auja de morir: subida arriba, tomauala vno a cuestas espaldas con espaldas, y de presto la cortauan la cabeça, y luego la desollauan: y con mancebo robusto vestiase el pelejo.

21 b
22 c
23 d
24 e
25 f
26 g
27 A
28 b
29 c
30 d
31 e
1 f
2 g
3 A
4 b
5 c
6 d
7 e
8 f
9 g

[534 535] [754] [524 137] [787]

Este que vestia el pelejo desta que matauan: lleuauanle luego con mucha solenjdad y acõpañan-

The twelfth month they named Teotl eco, which meaneth "The Arrival of the Gods." They celebrated this feast in honor of all the gods; for they said that they had gone to a number of places. They observed a great feast on the last day of this month because their gods had arrived.

Al doseno mes llamauan Teutl eco, que quiere dezir la llegada le los dioses celebrauan esta fiesta, a honrra de todos los dioses, porque dezian que aujan ydo a algunas partes, hazian gran fiesta el postrero dia deste mes, porque sus dioses aujan llegado.

796x [805 776]

Chapter 12
Teotl eco

On the fifteenth day of this month the young men and boys strewed boughs on all the altars and shrines of the gods, both those which were in the houses and those which were along the roads and crossroads. And for this activity which they performed they gave them maize; [to some they] gave a large basket full of maize, and to others two or three ears.

On the eighteenth day arrived the god (who is always a young man whom they called Tlamatzincatl; that is, Titlacauan). They said that, because he was young and strong, he traveled better and arrived first. They then set forth food on his pyramid, and that night they ate and drank, and all made merry, especially the old men and the old women, who drank wine because of the arrival of the god. And they said that with this rejoicing they washed his feet for him.

On the last day of this month was the great feast; for they said that all the gods then arrived. On the eve of this day, at night, they made, on a mat, a very closely packed small cake of cornmeal, in the shape of a cheese. Upon this small cake the gods impressed the print of a foot as a sign that they had come. All night long the principal priest watched, and came and went many times to see when he would descry the print.

Seeing the mark of a footprint, the priest then cried out, saying "Our lord hath come!" Then the priests of the pyramid began to sound horns, and conch shells, and trumpets, and other instruments of those which they then used.

1. Marginal notation: Deificatio omnd Michael.

Cap. 12
Teutl eco

1 A KL
2 b A los quinze dias deste mes: los
3 c moços y muchachos, enramauan
4 d todos los altares y oratorios de los 5 e dioses: assi los que estauan dentro de
6 f las casas como por los camjnos y en-
7 g cruzijadas, y por esta diligencia que
8 A hazian dauãlos mahiz, algunos dauan
9 b vn chiqujvitl lleno de mahiz, y a otros
10 c dos o tres maçorcas.
11 d A los deziocho dias: llegaua el dios
12 e (que siempre es mancebo que le
13 f llamauã tlamatzincatl: este es titla-14 g cauã) deziã que por ser mancebo y
15 A rezio, camjnaua mejor, y llegaua pri-
16 b mero: luego ofreciã comida en su cu,
17 c y aquella noche comjan y beujan y
18 d regozijauãse todos: especialmente los 19 e viejos, y viejos que beujan vino, por la 20 f llegada del dios: y dezian que lo
A 10
b 11
c 12
d 13
e 14
f 15
g 16
A 17
b 18
c 19
d 20
e 21
f 22
g 23
A 24
b 25
c 26
d 27
e 28
f 29 lauauã los pies con este regozijo.

El postrero dia deste mes era la gran fiesta: porque dizen que todos los dioses llegauan entonce: la vijlia deste dia, a la noche hazian encima de vn petate de harina de mahiz vn mõtonzillo muy tupido de la forma de vn queso: en este montonzillo imprimjan los dioses la pisada de vn pie en señal que avian llegado: toda la noche el principal satrapa velaua y yva y venja muchas vezes a mjrar quando veria la pisada.

En vinjendo el satrapa la señal de la pisada luego daua boxes diziendo, llegado a nuestro señor: luego comenzauan los mjnjstros del cu, a tañer cornetas, y caracoles, y trompetas y otros instrumentos de los

[465] [776] [273] [252] [534]

The fourteenth month they named Quecholli. They observed a feast to the god name Mixcoatl. And in this month they made arrows and darts for war. They slew many slaves in honor of this god.

Al quarto decimo mes llamauan Quecholli: hazian fiesta al dios llamado Miscoatl: y en este mes hazian saetas y dardos para la guerra: matauã a honrra deste dios muchos esclauos.

411 796x [805 776]

Chapter 14
Quecholli

When they made the arrows, for a space of five days all took blood from the ears, and [with] the blood which they pressed out of them they anointed their own temples. They said that they did penances in order to go to hunt deer. From those who did not bleed themselves, they took their capes as punishment. No man lay with his wife on those days; neither did the old men nor the old women drink wine; because they did penance.

At the end of the four days during which they made the arrows and darts, they made a number of very small arrows, and bound them in four's with each [bundle of] four torches. And, a small bundle of the four torches and the four arrows being made, they offered them upon the graves of the dead. They placed also, along with the arrows and torches, two tamales. All this remained for a whole day upon the grave, and at night they burned it and performed many other ceremonies for the dead on this same feast.

On the tenth day of this month, all the Mexicans and Tlatelulcans went to those mountains which they call Çacatepec. And they say that this mountain is their mother. On the day that they arrived, they made huts or cabins of grass, and they lit fires, and nothing else did they do that day.

Next day, at dawn, all forthwith broke fast and set out for the country and formed a great wing, wherewith they surrounded many animals—deer, rabbit, and other animals—and little by little they kept coming together until they rounded up all of them. Then they attacked and hunted, each one what he could.

1. Marginal notation: [illegible]

Cap. 14
Quecholli.

1 f Quando hazian las saetas por espa- f 20
2 g cio de cinco dias: todos se sangrauan g 21
3 A de las orejas y la sangre que esprimjan A 22
4 b dellas: vntauanla por sus mesmas si- b 23
5 c enes. Dezian que hazian penjtencias c 24
6 d para yr a caçar venados: los que no se d 25
7 e sangrauan, tomauanles las mantas en e 26
8 f pena: njngun hombre se echaua con f 27
9 g su muger en estos dias, nj los viejos ni g 28
10 A viejas beujan pulcre: porquẽ hazian A 29
11 b penjtencia. b 30
12 c c 31
13 d Acabados los quatro dias en que ha- d 1' 14 e zian las saetas y dardos: haziã vnas e 2
15 f saetas chiquitas y atauanlas de quatro f 3
16 g en quatro con cada quatro teas: y assi g 4
17 A hecho vn manogico de las quatro teas, A 5
18 b y de las quatro saetas, ofrecianlas so- b 6
19 c bre los sepulchros de los muertos: pon- c 7 20 d jan tambien juntamente con las saetas d 8
y teas dos tamales: estaua todo esto vn dia entero sobre la sepultura, y a la noche lo quemauan: y hazian otras muchas cerimonjas por los defũtos en esta mesma fiesta.

796x [785]

A los diez dias deste mes yvan todos los Mexicanos y Tlatelulcanos a aquellos montes que llaman Çacatepec: y dizen que es su madre aquel monte, el dia que llegauan hazian xacales o cabañas de heno, y hazian fuegos y njnguna otra cosa hazian aquel dia.

796x [778 342]

Otro dia en amaneciendo luego almorçauan todos, y salian al campo y hazian vna ala grande: donde cercauan muchos anjmales, ciervos, conejos, y otros anjmales y poco a poco se yvan juntando hasta acorralarlos todos: entonce arremetian y caçauan cada a qual lo que podia.

796x 224

The fifteenth month they named Panquetzaliztli. In this month they celebrated a feast to the god of war, Uitzilopochtli. Before this feast, the priests of the idols fasted for forty days and performed other severe penances, like going naked at midnight to carry branches to the mountains. Etc.

Chapter 15
Panquetzaliztli

On the second day of this month all began to perform a dance and to sing the canticles of Uitzilopochtli in the the courtyard of his pyramid. Men and women danced, all together. They began these canticles in the afternoon, and they ended at nearly ten o'clock. These dances and songs lasted twenty days.

On the ninth day of this month, they adorned, with great ceremonies, those whom they were to slay. They painted them in various colors; they decked them in many papers. Finally they performed a dance with them, in which went a woman paired with a man, singing and dancing.

On the sixteenth day of this month, the owners of the slaves began a fast; and on the nineteenth day, they began to perform a number of dances in which all, men and women, went grasping hands, and they danced winding back and forth in the courtyard of the aforementioned pyramid. A number of old men sang, and played [instruments] while the others danced.

After those who were to die had performed many ceremonies, there came down from the pyramid of Uitzilopochtli one attired in the ornaments of the god Paynal, and he slew four of those slaves in the ball court which was found in the courtyard which they called Teoxlachtli. From there he departed and circled all the city, running; and in certain places he slew, in each one, a slave. And from that point [onward], two factions began a mock battle. Some died in the skirmishing.

---

3. Marginal notation: Dedicatio Templi Mexicani.

"Al quinzeno mes llamauan Panquetzaliztli: En este mes hazia fiesta al dios de la guerra Vitzilobuchtli: antes desta fiesta los satrapas de los ydolos ayunauan quarenta dias y hazian otras penitencias asperas como era yr a la media noche desnudos a lleuar ramos a los montes. Etc.

796^x [805 776 785]

Cap. 15.
Panquetzaliztli.

1	e	KL.	e	9¹
2	f	El segundo dia deste mes començauã	f	10
3	g	todos a hazer areyto, y a cantar los can-	g	11
4	A	tares de Vitzilobuchtli, en el patio de	A	12
5	b	su cu, baylauan hombres y mugeres to-	b	13
6	c	dos juntos: começauan estos cantares	c	14
7	d	a la tarde, y acabauan cerca de las diez:	d	15
8	e	durauan estos bayles y cantos veinte	e	16
9	f	dias.	f	17
10	g	A los nueue dias deste mes: apare-	g	18
11	A	jauã cõ grandes cerimonjas a los que	A	19
12	b	aujan de matar pintauanlos de diuersas	b	20
13	c	colores, componjãlos con muchos pa-	c	21
14	d	peles: al fin hazian vn areyte con ellos,	d	22
15	e	en el qual vyan vna muger y vn hom-	e	23
16	f	bre pareados cantando y baylãdo.	f	24
17	g	A los deziseys dias deste mes: co-	g	25
18	A	mençauã a ayunar los dueños de los	A	26
19	b	esclauos y a los dezinueue dias, comen-	b	27
20	c	çauan a hazer vnas danças en que yvan	c	28

796^x [535]

todos asidos de las manos hombres y mugeres, y dançauan culebrẽdo en el patio del dicho cu, cantauã y tañjan vnos viejos entre tanto que los otros dancauan.

Despues de auer hecho muchas cerimonjas los que avian de morir decendian del cu de Vitzilobuchtli, vno vestido con los ornamẽtos del dios Paynal, y mataua quatro de aquellos esclauos en el juego de pelota que estaua en el patio que llamauã teuzlachtli: de alli yva y cercaua toda la ciudad corriendo, y en ciertas partes mataua en cada vno vn esclauo: y de alli començauan a escaramuçar dos partialidades, morian algunos en la escaramuça.

[346]

[726]

The sixteenth month they named Atemoztli. In this month they celebrated a feast to the rain gods, because for the most part in this month it began to thunder and to threaten rain; and the priests of the Tlalocs began to do penances and to offer sacrifices, so that the rains would come.

Al mes decimo sexto llamauan Atemuztli: En este mes hazian fiesta a los Dioses de la pluuja: porque por la mayor parte en este mes, començaua a tronar y hazer demuestras de agua: y los satrapas de los Tlaloques començauan a hazer penjtencias y sacrificios porque venjesse el agua.

796[x] [805 776]

Chapter 16
Atemoztli

When it began to thunder, the priests of the Tlalocs, with great industriousness, offered copal and other fragrances to their gods and to all the statues of these. They said that then they came to give rain. And the common folk made vows to fashion the images of the mountains, which are called tepictli, because they are dedicated [to] those gods of the rain. And on the sixteenth day of this month, all the common folk prepared offerings to offer before Tlaloc. And [during] these four days they performed penances, and the men abstained from women, and the women from men.

Having come to [the time of] the feast, which they celebrated on the last day of this month, they cut lengths of paper, and they bound them to a number of poles, from bottom to top. And they set them up in the courtyards of their houses and made the images of the mountains of tzoalli. They fashioned for them their teeth of squash seeds, and their eyes of some beans which are named aiecotli. And then they offered them their offerings of food, and they worshipped them.

After having kept a vigil for them, and beaten drums and sung for them, they opened their breasts with a tzotzopaztli, which is an instrument with which the women weave, almost like a machete; and they took out their hearts and struck off their heads. And later they divided up all the body among themselves and ate it; and the ornaments with which

Cap. 16.
Atemuztli.

Quando començaua a tronar los satrapas de los Tlaloques con gran diligencia offrecian copal y otros perfumes a sus dioses, y a todas las estatuas dellos: dezian que entonce venjan para dar agua: y los populares hazian votos de hazer las ymagines de los montes que se llaman Tepictli: porq̃ son dedicadas aquellos dioses del agua. Y a los deziseis dias deste mes, todos los populares aparejauan offrendas para offrecer a Tlaloc: y estos quatro dias hazian penjtẽcia, y abstenjanse los hombres de las mugeres, y las mugeres de los hombres.

[314] [834]

Llegados a la fiesta que la celebrauan el vltimo dia deste mes: cortauan tiras de papel, y atauanlas a vnos barales desde abaxo hasta arriba: y hincauanlos en los patios de sus casas y hazian las ymagines de los montes de tzoal: hazianles los diẽtes de pepitas de calabaça, y los ojos de vnos frisoles que se llaman aiecotli: y luego los ofrecian sus offrendas de comjda y los adorauan.

[778 289] [324]

Despues de auerlos velado y tañido y cãtado: abrianlos por los pechos, con vn tzotzopaztli: que es instrumento con que texen las mugeres, casi a manera de machete: y sacauanles el coraçon, y cortauãles las cabeças: y despues repartian todo el cuerpo entre si,

[413 286]

1. Marginal notation: Sacrificing empty.
2. Marginal notation: Dancing for dice game.
3. Marginal notation: Expulsion from Mexico 9.

The seventeenth month they called Tititl. In this month they celebrated a feast to a goddess whom they named Ilamatecutli, and by another name, Tonan, and by [still] another name, Coxcamiauh. In honor of this goddess they slew a woman, and as soon as they had torn out her heart they struck off her head and performed a dance with it. He who went before carried the head by the hair, in his right hand, making [with it] the gestures of the dance.

Al mes decimo septimo llamauan Tititl. En este mes haziã fiesta a vna diosa que llamauã Jlamatecutli, y por otro nombre Tona, y por otro nombre coxcamjauh, a honrra desta diosa: matauan vna muger, y desque le aviã sacado el coraçon cortauanle la cabeça y hazian areyto con ella, el que yva adelante lleuaua la cabeça por los cabellos en la mano derecha, haziendo su ademanes de bayle.

796x [805 776] [535]

Chapter 17
Tititl

This woman whom they slew in this feast they arrayed in the adornments of that goddess whose likeness [she was], called Ilamatecutli, and by another name, Tonan, which meaneth "Our Mother." This woman, thus bedight with the adornments [which are] set forth in the description, danced alone. A number of old men made music for her; and, dancing, she sighed and wept, mindful that soon she was to die. After midday, the priests arrayed themselves in the ornaments of all the gods, and went before her, and took her up to the pyramid where she was to die. Having stretched her out upon the sacrificial stone, they tore out her heart, and they struck off her head. Then one of those who went adorned as a god took [it], and, [with him] foremost, carrying it by the hair, they performed a dance with it. He who bore it in his right hand guided [them], and he made the dance gestures with it.

On the same day that the servants of the idols slew this woman, they performed certain mock-battles, and made merry, running—some behind the others—up and down the pyramid, enacting certain ceremonies.

On the next day, all the common folk made a number of sacks, like pockets, with some cords attached, as much as a fathom long. They filled these

1. Marginal notation: [illegible]

Cap. 17.
Tititl.

1 e KL
2 d A esta muger que matauan en esta
3 e fiesta: componjanla con los stauios de
4 f aquella diosa cuya ymagen tenja que
5 g se llama Jlamatecutli y por otro nom-
6 A bre Tona quiere dezir nuestra madre
7 b esta muger ansi compuesta con los 8 c stauios estan puestos en la historia,
9 d baylaua sola: hazianla el son vnos vie-
10 e jos, y baylando suspiraua y lloraua,
11 f acordandose que luego auia de morir:
12 g pasando el medio dia, componjanse los 13 A satrapas con los ornamentos de todos
14 b los dioses, y yvan delante della, y su-
15 c bianla al cu, donde auia de morir:
16 d echada sobre el tazon de piedra, su-
17 e cauanla el coraçon, y cortauanla la ca-
18 f beça, tomaua luego vno de aquellos
19 g que yva adornado como dios, y delan-20 A tero de todos y lleuandola por los ca-bellos: hazian areyto cõ ella guiaua el que la lleuaua en la mano derecha y hazia sus ademanes de bayle con ella.

c 19 d 20 e 21 f 22 g 23 A 24 b 25 c 26 d 27 e 28 f 29 g 30 A 31 b 1* c 2 d 3 e 4 f 5* g 6 A 7

796x 535

El mesmo dia que mataũ esta muger los mjnjstros de los ydolos, haziã ciertas escaramuças y regozijos: corriendo vnos tras otros el cu, arriba y el cu abazo haziendo ciertas cerimonjas.

796x

El dia sigujente todos los populares hazian vnas talegas como bolsas, con vnos cordeles atadas tan largos como vn braço: hinchian aquellas talegas de

796x 565 524 [415]

2. Marginal notation: [illegible]

The eighteenth month they named Izcalli. In this month they celebrated a feast to the god of fire, whom they called Xiuhtecutli, or Ixcoçauhqui. They made an image in his honor, with great artifice, which appeared to throw off flames of its own accord. And every four years, in this same feast, they slew slaves and captives in honor of this god. And they pierced the ears of all the children who had been born in those years, and they gave them godfathers and godmothers.

Al mes decimo octauo llamauan Izcalli: en este mes hazian fiesta al dios del fuego que llamauan Xiuhtecutli, o Jxcoçauhquj: hazian vna ymagen a su hõrra de grã artificio que parecia que echaua llamas de fuego de si: y de quatro en quatro años en esta mesma fiesta esclauos y captiuos matauan a honrra deste dios: y agujerauan las orejas a todos los njños que aujan nacido en aquellos años y dauanlos padrinos, y madrinas.

796X
[805
778]
776
[852
304
608]

Chapter 18
Izcalli

On the tenth day of this month they made a new fire at midnight, before the image of Xiuhtecutli, [which was] very curiously adorned. And, the fire having been lit, then, in the morning, the young men and boys came, and they brought various animals which they had hunted in the ten preceding days—some water [animals] and some land [animals]. And they offered them to the old men who were charged with safeguarding this god. And these cast into the fire all of those animals, so that they would cook. And they gave each one of these young men and boys a tamal made with amaranth, which they called xauhquiltamalli, which everyone in the city offered upon that day. All ate of these in honor of the feast day. They ate them very hot, and they drank and made merry.

On this feast, in ordinary years, they slew no one. But in the bisextile year, which was every four years, they slew, during this feast, captives and slaves and the impersonator of Xiuhtecutli, decorated in the manner which hath been told above, with many precious and curious adornments; they performed many great ceremonies upon the death of these [victims]—many more than on the other feasts already described. This is set forth at length in the account of this feast.

After they had slain these slaves and captives and the impersonator of Ixcoçauhqui, who is the god of fire, all the leading men and lords, the illustrious, and

Cap. 18.
Izcalli

1	b	KL.		b	8
2	c	A los diez dias deste mes: sacauã		c	9
3	d	fuego nuevo a la media noche delante		d	10
4	e	la ymagẽ de Xiuhtecutli muy curiosa-		e	11
5	f	mente ataujada: y encendidos fuegos,		f	12
6	g	luego en amaneciendo venjan los man-		g	13
7	A	cebos y muchachos, y trayã diuersos		A	14
8	b	anjmales que aujan caçado en los diez		b	15
9	c	dias pasados vnos de agua, y otros de		c	16
10	d	tierra: y offrecianlos a los viejos que		d	17
11	e	tenjan cargo de guardar a este dios: y		e	18
12	f	ellos echauã en el fuego a todos aque-		f	19
13	g	llos anjmales para que se asassen: y		g	20
14	A	dauan a cada vno destos moços y mu-		A	21
15	b	chachos vn tamal hecho de bledos que		b	22
16	c	ellos llamauã Vauhquiltamalli: los		c	23
17	d	quales todo el pueblo ofrecia aquel dia,		d	24
18	e	y todos comjan dellos por honrra de		e	25
19	f	la fiesta, comjanlos muy calientes y		f	26
20	g	beujan y regozijauanse.		g	27

[262]

En esta fiesta los años comunes no matauã a nadie: pero el año del bisexto que era de quatro en quatro años: matauan en esta fiesta captiuos y esclauos, y la ymagen de Xiuhtecutli, compuesta de la manera que arriba se dixo cõ muchos y preciosos y curiosos ataujos: hazian grandes y muchas cerimonjas en la muerte destos, muchas mas que en las otras fiestas ya dichas. Esto esta puesto a la larga en la historia desta fiesta.

Despues que aujan muerto a estos esclauos y captiuos, y a la ymagen de Jxcoçauhquj que es el dios del fuego: estauan aparejados y adereçados muy rica-

[535]

The five remaining days of the year, which are the four last of January and the first of February, they named Nemontemi, which meaneth barren days. And they regarded them as unlucky and of evil fortune. There is conjecture that when they pierced the boys' and girls' ears, which was every four years, they set aside six days of Nemontemi, and it is the same as the bissextile which we observe every four years.

A los cinco dias restantes del año que son los quatro vltimos de Enero y el primero de hebrero llamauan Nemontemi, que quiere dezir dias valdios: y tenjanlos por aziagos y de mala fortuna: ay conjectura que quando agujerauan las orejas a los njños y njñas que era de quatro en quatro años, echauan seys dias de Nenontemj y es lo mjsmo del bisexto que nostoros hazemos de quatro en quatro años.

796x 777 [805] [304]

Chapter 19

These five days they held as of evil fortune and unlucky. They said that those who were born in them had evil outcomes in all their affairs, and were poor and wretched. They named them Nemo. If they were men, they named them Nemoquich; if it was a woman, they named her Nenciuatl. They dared do nothing in these days, because they were unlucky. Especially did they abstain from quarreling, because they said that those who quarreled in these days always remained with that custom. They held as a bad omen stumbling in these days.

These aforementioned feasts were fixed, and were always observed within the month, or a day or two ahead. Other feasts they had [which were] movable, which were celebrated during the course of the twenty signs, which made a round in two hundred and sixty days. And hence these movable feasts, in a year, fell one in one month, and another in another, and always varied.

o Capi. 19.

1 A Estos cinco dias tenjan por malafor- A 28
2 b tunados y aziagos: dezian que los que b 29
3 c en ellos nacian tenjan malos successos c 30
4 d en todas sus cosas, y eran pobres y mj- d 31
seros llamauanlos Nemo, si eran hombres llamauanlos Nenoqujch, y si era muger llamauala Nencioatl, no osauan hazer nada en estos dias por ser malafortunados: especialmente se abstenjan de reñjr: porque dezian que los que reñjan en estos dias se quedauã siempre con aquella costumbre tenjan por mal aguero tropeçar en estos dias.

[551] [578] [787]

Estas fiestas dichas eran fixas que siempre se haziã dentro del mes o vn dia o dos adelante: Otras fiestas tenjan moujbles que se hazian por el curso de los veinte signos: los quales hazian vn circulo en dozientos y sesenta dias: y por tanto estas fiestas moujbles vn año cayan en vn mes y otro en otro y siempre variauan.

Of the Movable Feasts

The first movable feast was celebrated in honor of the sun, in the sign which is named ce ocelotl, in the fourth house, which is named naui ollin. On this feast they offered, to the image of the sun, quail, and they offered incense. And at noon they slew captives before it in honor of the sun. On this same day, all drew blood from their ears—children and those who were grown—in honor of the sun, and they offered it that blood.

De las fiestas moujbles.

La primera fiesta moujble se celebraua a honrra del sol en el signo que se llama ce ocelutl, en la quarta casa que se llama naolin: en esta fiesta ofrecian a la ymagen del sol codornjzes y incensauan: y en el medio mataua capituos delante della a honrra del sol. En este mesmo dia se sangrauan todos de las orejas chicos y grãdes a hõrra del sol y le ofrecian aquella sangre.

796x [776] [785]

The Second Movable Feast

In this same sign, in the seventh house, all the painters and the seamstresses celebrated a feast. They

La segunda fiesta moujble.

En este mjsmo signo en la septima casa haziã fiesta todos los pintores, y las labrãderas ayunauã quarẽta

785 796x 463

785 fasted, [some] for forty days, others for twenty, in X 796 order to prevail over chance, in order to paint well 463 and to weave textiles well. For this purpose they offered quail and incense, and performed other ceremonies—the men to the god Chicome xochitl, and the women to the goddess Xochiquetzal.

dias, otros veinte por alcançar ventura para pintar bien y para texer bien labores, offrecian a este proposito codornizes y encienso, y haziã otras cerimonjas los hombres al dios Chicome xochitl y las mugeres a la diosa Xochiquetzal.

The Third Movable Feast

X 796 In the third sign, which is called ce maçatl, in the
● [276] first house, they celebrated a feast to the goddesses who are named Cioapipilti, because they said that [289] then they came down to the earth. They adorned their images with papers and offered them offerings.

La tercera fiesta mouible.

En el tercero signo que se llama ce maçatl: en la primera casa hazian fiesta a las diosas que se llaman cioapipilti porque dezian que entonce decendian a la tierra, atauiauã a sus ymagines con papeles, y ofrecianlas ofrendas.

The Fourth Movable Feast

X 796 In the sign which is called ce maçatl, in the second 273 house, which is called ome tochtli, they celebrated a great feast to the god named Izquitecatl, who is the [276] second god of wine: and not alone to him but to all the gods of wine, who were many. On this day they adorned his image very well on his pyramid, and offered him things to eat, and they sang and played [musical instruments] before him. And in the court-
[463] yard of his pyramid they set a large open jar of wine, and those who were wine merchants filled it to overflowing, and all who wished went to drink. They had [415] some canes through which they drank. The wine sellers kept feeding the large jar, so that it was always full. Mostly, those who had newly cut the maguey did this. The first syrup which they took out they took to the house of this god as first fruits.

La quarta fiesta mouible

En el signo que se llama ce maçatl: en la segunda casa que se llama vme tochtli: hazian gran fiesta al dios llamado Yzquitecatl, que es el segundo dios del vino, y no solamente a el: pero a todos los dioses del vino que eran muchos: adereçavan este dia muy bien su ymagen en su cu, y ofrecianle cosas de comjda, y cantauan, y tañjan delante del: y en el patio de su cu, ponjan vn tinajon de pulcre, y hinchianle los que eran taberneros hasta reberter, y yuan a beuer todos los que querian: tenjan vnas cañas con que beujã: los taberneros yuan ceuando el tinajon: de manera que siempre estaua lleno: principalmente hazian esto los q̃ de nueuo aujan cortado el maguey, la primera agua mjel que sacauan la lleuauan a la casa deste dios como primjcias.

The Fifth Movable Feast

X 796 In the sign called ce xochitl, in the first house, they celebrated a great feast. The leading men and the lords danced and sang in honor of this sign, and they [304] otherwise made merry. And then they brought forth the richest feathers, with which they adorned themselves for the dance. In this feast the lord gave gifts [438] to the warriors and to the singers and to the palace folk.

La quinta fiesta moujble

En el signo llamado ce xochitl: en la primera casa, hazian gran fiesta, los principales, y señores, baylauan, y cantauan a honrra deste signo, y hazian otros regozijos: y sacauan entonce los más ricos plumajes, con que se adereçauan para el areyto: y en esta fiesta, el señor hazia mercedes a los hombres de guerra, y a los cantores y a los del palacio.

The Sixth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce acatl, in the first house, the lords and the leading men celebrated a great festival [346] to Quetzalcoatl, god of the winds. This feast they observed in the house called calmecac, which was the house where dwelt the priests of the idols, and where were trained the boys. In this house, which was like

La sexta fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce acatl: en la primera casa, hazian gran fiesta a quetzalcoatl dios de los vientos: los señores y principales: esta fiesta hazian en la casa llamada calmecac, que era la casa donde morauan los satrapas de los ydolos: y donde se criauan los muchachos, en esta casa que era como vn mones-

In this house[1] which was like a monastery, was the image of Quetzalcoatl. On this day they adorned it with rich ornaments and placed before it offerings of perfumes and food. They said this was the sign of Quetzalcoatl.

terio, estaua la ymagen de quetzalcoatl: Este dia la aderençauan con ricos ornamentos, y ofrecian delante della perfumes, y comjda: dezian que este era el signo de quetzalcoatl. [796] [778]

The Seventh Movable Feast

In the sign which was called ce miquiztli, in the first house, the lords and leading men celebrated a great feast to Tezcatlipoca, who was the great god. They said that this was his sign. Since all of them had their shrines in their houses, where they kept the images of this god and of many others, on this day they decorated this image and offered it perfumes, flowers, and food, and sacrificed quail before it, tearing off their heads. This not only the lords and leading men did, but all the people to whose attention this festival came; and the same was done in the tribal temples and on all the pyramids. All prayed, and besought of this god that he grant them favors, for [it was thought] that he was almighty.

La septima fiesta moujble.

En el signo que se llamaua ce mjquiztli: en la primera casa: hazian gran fiesta, los señores y principales a Tezcatlibuca, que era el gran dios, dezian que este era su sino, como todos ellos, tenjan sus oratorios en sus casas: donde tenjan las ymagines deste dios, y de muchos otros: en este dia, componjan esta ymagen, y ofrecianla perfumes, y flores y comjda: y sacrificauan codornizes delante della arrancandolas la cabeça. Esto no solamente lo hazian los señores, y principales: pero toda la gẽte, a cuya noticia venja esta fiesta, y lo mjsmo se hazia, en los calpules, y en todos los cues: todos orauan, y demandauan a este dios que les hiziesse mercedes: pues que el era todopoderoso. [778]

The Eighth Movable Feast

In the sign which was called ce quiauitl, in the first house, they celebrated a feast to the goddesses whom they named Ciuapipilti. These, they said, were the women who died in first childbed. They said that they became goddesses and that they dwelt in the house of the sun; and that when this sign reigned, they came down to the earth and afflicted with various sicknesses those whom they met outside of their houses. And hence, in these days, they dared not go out of their houses. They had shrines built in honor of these goddesses in all the suburbs where two streets [crossed], which they called ciuateocalli, or by another name, ciuateopan. In these shrines they had the images of the goddesses, and on these days they adorned them with papers which they called amatetuitl. On this feast of these goddesses they slew in their honor those condemned to death for some crime, who were in the jails.

La octaua fiesta moujble

En el signo, que se llamaua, ce qujauitl: en la primera casa, hazian fiesta, a las diosas que llamauan Ciuapipilti: estas dezian que eran las mugeres que murian del primero parto, dezian que se hazian diosas, y que morauan en'la casa del sol, y que quãdo reynaua este sino, decendian a la tierra, y herian con diuersas emfermedades, a los que topauã fuera de sus casas. Y por esto en estos dias, no osauan salir de sus casas. Tenjan edificados oratorios, a honrra destas diosas: en todos los barrios donde auja dos calles: los quales llamauan ciouteocalli, o por otro nombre ciouteupan: en estos oratorios, tenjan las ymagines destas diosas: y en estos dias las adornauan con papeles, que llamauan amatetuitl. En esta fiesta, destas diosas matauan a su honrra los condenados a muerte por algun delicto, que estauan en las carceles. [776] [784] [778]

The Ninth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce quiauitl, in the fourth house (which was called naui ecatl), because this house was very unlucky they slew in it the malefactors who were imprisoned. And likewise the lord had a number of slaves slain as a superstition. And the merchants and traders made a show or demonstration of the jewels in which they dealt, bringing them forth so that all might see them. And afterwards, at night,

La nona fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce qujauitl: en la quarta casa que se llamaua nauhecatl, por ser esta casa muy malafortunado, matauan en ella los malhechores, que estauan presos. Y tambien el señor hazia matar algunos esclauos, por via de superticion: y los mercaderes, y tratantes hazian alarde o demostracion de las jeyas, en que trataua, sacandolas, para que las viesen todos: y despues a la noche, comjan, y beujan, to- [681] [777] [463]

[1] [the calmecac. — Analyst]

And afterwards, at night,

they ate and drank, and held flowers and those canes of perfume. And they sat in their seats. And each one began to boast of what he had gained, and of the distant parts which he had reached. And he belittled the others for their counting for little; [for] neither did they have as much as he, nor had they gone to distant places, as he had. In this the ones made a great mock of the others for a long space of the night.

manan flores: y aquellas cañas de perfumes, y assentauanse en sus assientos: y començaua cada vno a jactarse, de lo que auja ganado, y de las partes remotas, donde auja llegado: y valdonaua a los otros de que eran para poco, nj tenjan tanto, como el, nj aujan ydo a partes remotas como el: en esto tenjan gran chacota, los vnos con los otros, por gran rato de la noche.

The Tenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they named ce malinalli, in the second house, named ome acatl, they celebrated a great festival; for they said that this was Tezcatlipoca's sign. In this feast they fashioned the image of Omacatl, and one who felt devotion took it to his house that it might bless him and cause his goods to increase. And when this took place, he kept it and preferred not to let it go. He who would let this image go, waited until the next time when the same sign reigned. Then he returned it whence he had taken it.

La decima fiesta mouible

En el signo que llamauan ce malinalli: en las segunda casa llamada vme acatl, hazian gran fiesta: porque dezian que esto sino era de Tezcatlibuca: en esta fiesta hazian la ymagen de Omacatl, y alguno que tenja deuocion, lleuauala a su casa: para que le bendiresse, y le hiziesse multiplicar su hazienda, y quando esto aconteçja tenjala, y no la queria dexar: el que queria dexar esta ymagen esperaua, hasta que otra vez, reynasse el mjsmo signo: entonce la lleuaua adonde la auja tomado.

The Eleventh Movable Feast

In the sign called ce tecpatl, in the first house, they brought forth all the ornaments of Uitzilopochtli; they cleaned them and shook them out; and they put [them] in the sun. They said that this was his sign and that of Camaxtli. This they did at Tlacatecco. Here they set out, on this day, many kinds of food, very well cooked, like that which the lords eat. They presented all of them before his image. After they had remained there a while, the officials of Uitzilopochtli took them up and divided them among themselves, and ate them. And they also incensed the image and offered it quail. They struck off their heads before it, so the blood should be shed before the image. And the lord offered all the precious flowers which the lords used, before the image.

La onzena fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce tecpatl. En la primera casa sacauan todos los ornamentos de Vitzilobuchtli, los linpiauan, y sacudian, y ponjan al sol: dezian que este era su signo, y el de camaxtle: esto hazian tlacatecco: aquj ponjan, en este dia, muchas maneras de comjdas, muy bien gujsadas, como las comen los señores: todas las presentauan, delante de su ymagen, despues de auer estado vn rato alli, tomauanlas los officiales, de Vitzilobuchtli, y repartianlas entre si, y comjanlas, y incensauan tambien a la ymagen, y ofrecianla codornizes, descabeçandolas delante della: para que se derramasse la sangre delante la ymagen: y ofrecia el señor todas las preciosas flores, que vsan los señores, delante la ymagen.

The Twelfth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce ocomatli they said that the goddesses called Ciuapipilti came down to the earth and [that] they harmed the boys and girls, afflicting them with palsy. And if anyone, at this time, sickened, they said that [the Ciuapipilti] had caused it: that he had come upon them. And the fathers and mothers on these days did not let their children go outside the houses, so that they might not come upon these goddesses, whom they held in great dread.

La doueena fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce Ocumatli: dezian que decendian las diosas llamadas ciospipilti, a la tierra: y dañauan a los njños, y njñas, hiriendolos con perlesia. Y si alguno en este tiempo enfermaua, dezian que ellas lo aujan hecho, que se auja encontrado con ellas: y los padres, y las madres, estos dias no dexauan salir a sus hijos, fuera de casa: porque no se encontrassen, con estas diosas, de las quales tenjan gran temor.

The Thirteenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they called ce itzcuintli, [which] they said was the sign of fire, they held a great festival in honor of Xiuhtecutli, god of fire. In it they offered him much copal [incense] and many quail. They arrayed his image in many kinds of papers and with many rich adornments. Among the rich and powerful, they celebrated a great feast in honor of the fire, in their own houses; they held dinners and banquets in honor of the fire. In this same sign they held elections of lords and consuls, and in the fourth house of this sign they enacted the formalities of their elections, feasts, dances, and gift [giving]. After these feasts, they forthwith proclaimed war against their foes.

La treszena fiesta mouible.

En el signo que llamauan ce itzcuintli: dezian que era el signo del fuego: hazian gran fiesta a honrra de xiuhtecutli, dios del fuego: en ella le ofrecian mucho copal, y muchas codornizes: componjan su ymagen, con muchas maneras de papeles, y con muchos ornamentos ricos: entre las personas ricas y poderosas, hazian gran fiesta, a honrra del fuego, en sus mismas casas, hazian combites, y vanquetes, a honrra del fuego. En este mismo signo: hazian la election de los señores y consules, y en la quarta casa deste sino: hazian la solēnjdad, de sus electiones, combites, y areytos, y dones. Despues destas fiestas apregonauan luego la guerra contra sus enemigos.

796x [314] 289 772 [565] [666 431] 721

The Fourteenth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce atl, in the first house of this sign, they celebrated a feast to the goddess of water, named Chalchiuhtli icue. All those who dealt in water celebrated the festival—those who sold water, as well as those who fished, and those who gained other livelihoods which there are in the water. These arrayed her image and laid offerings before her, and revered her in the house called calpulli.

La catorzena fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce atl: en la primera casa deste signo, hazian fiesta, a la diosa del agua llamada chalchiuhtli ycue: hazian la fiesta, todos los que trataua en el agua: assi vendiendo el agua, como pescando, como haziendo otras grageriias, que ay en el agua. Estos componjan su ymagen, y la ofrecian, y reuerenciauan, en la casa llamada Calpulli.

[776] [463]

The Fifteenth Common Movable Feast

The lords, leading men, nobles, and rich merchants, when a son or daughter was born to them, paid much heed to the sign, the day, and the hour in which he was born. And of this they forthwith set out to inform the judicial astrologers, and to ask as to the good fortune or ill of the child who was born. And if the sign in which he was born was propitious, they had him baptized at once; and if it was adverse they sought the most favorable house of that sign [in which] to baptize him. When they baptized him, they banqueted the kinsmen and friends, so that they would be present at the baptism, and then they gave food and drink to all the guests, and also to the children of the whole suburb. They baptized him at sunrise in the house of his father. The midwife baptized him, uttering many prayers and performing much ceremony over the child. This [same] feast they also observe today in the baptism of their children, as to feasting, eating, and drinking.

La quinta decima fiesta mouible comũ.

Los señores, y principales, nobles, y mercaderes, ricos quando les nacia algun hijo o hija; tenjan gran cuēta con el signo en que nacia; y el dia, y la hora en que nacia: y desto yuan luego a ynformar a los astrologos, judiciarios: y a preguntar por la fortuna buena o mala de la criatura que nacia. Y si el signo, en que nacia era prospero, luego le hazian baptizar, y si era aduerso buscauan la mas prospera casa de aquel signo para le batizar. Quando le batizauan, combidauan a los parientes, y amigos: para que se hallassen presentes al batismo: y entonce dauan comjda, y beujda, a todos los presentes, y tambien a los njños, de todo el barrio: baptizauanle, a la salida del sol, en casa de su padre, baptizauale la partera, diziendo muchas oraciones: y haziendo mucha cerimonja sobre la criatura. Esta fiesta, tambien la vsan agora, en los baptismos de sus hijos, en quanto al combidar, y comer, y beuer.

777 787 565 852 [759]

The Sixteenth Movable Feast

As soon as the parents saw that their son was of La seyzena decima fiesta mouible.

Despue los padres vian que su hijo era de edad para

584

1796 Twenty-sixth Chapter in which are related the feast and ceremonies celebrated upon the feast in the seventh month, which was named Tecuilhuitontli.[1]

Tecuilhuitontli: When this feast arrived, they celebrated the minor feast of the lords for twenty days. And at this time died—[for thus] her fate then befell her—at this time died [in sacrifice], a war captive's 1796 death, [she who was the likeness of] Uixtociuatl, ● 776 god[dess] of those who made salt, the salt-makers. 317

This Uixtociuatl, so it was said, was thought to be the elder sister of the rain gods. And it was thought that the rain gods were her brothers. [In] one thing she angered and offended them, that she mocked at her brothers. And then they pursued their elder sister over to the salt beds. There she discovered salt—how it existed, how it was formed, and how were made the salt jars; and also salty sand.

And, on this account, greatly did men who lived where there was salt pay honor to her.

1796 And the array of [the likeness of] Uixtociuatl was [303 [thus]: Her [face] paint and ornamentation were 301 yellow. This was of yellow ochre or the [yellow] of maize blossoms.[2] And [she wore] her paper cap with quetzal feathers in the form of a tassel of maize. It was of many quetzal feathers, full of quetzal feathers, so that it was covered with green, streaming down, glistening like precious green feathers.

And [she had] her golden ear plugs. And the golden ear plugs glittered and flashed and were very yellow, like squash blossoms. And her shirt was embroidered[3] to resemble water [waves].[4] And the border of her shirt was as if painted with green stones, designed to represent billowing clouds on the hem [of her shirt]; the edge was painted in a cloud design. And her skirt was designed in the same fashion.

And on her ankles[5] she had placed bells—golden bells—or rattles. On the calf of her leg she had bound an ocelot skin on which were the bells. And when Jnic cẽpoualli on chiquace capitulo, vncan moteneoa yn ilhuitl, yoan in tlamauiztililiztli, in muchioaia, yn ipan vel ic cemilhujtl, ic chicome metztli, in mjtoaia: Tecujlhujtontli.

Tecujlhujtontli: yn in qujçaia in muchioaia, in tecuilhujtontli, no cempoalilhujtica: auh vncã mjquja, vncan itequjuh vetzia vncan teumjquja in vixtocioatl, yn jnteouh iztatlaca, iztachiuhque.

Jnjn vixtocioatl, iuh mjtoa qujlmach inveltiuh, catca in tlaloque: yoan qujlmach yioq'chtioan in tlaloque: centlamãtli ic qujnqualanj, ic qujniollitlaco, inca mocaiauh, yn joqujchtioan: auh njman ic qujtotocaque yn jnveltiuh vmpa yn iztapan: vmpa qujnexitito yn iztatl, yn juh ioli, yn juh tlacati, yn juh muchioa iztacomjtl, yoan iztaxalli.

Auh ipampa y, cenca qujmauiztiliaia yn iztapaneca, yn iztapãtlaca.

Auh in vixtocioatl, yn jnechichioal catca, yn jxaoal, yn jnechioal cuztic: ichoatl in tecoçaujtl anoço tomjoli: yoan yamacal, quetzalmjiaoaio, quequetzalo, moca quetzalli, iuhqujn xoxoqujuj, xoxoqujuhtimanj, momoiaoa, xexeliuj, iuhqujn xoxopaleoa, xoxozouja:

yoan yteucujtlanacoch, teucujtlanacoche: auh in teucujtlanacochtli, pepetlaca, pepepetlaca, cenca coztic, iuhqujn aioxochqujlitl: yoan yujpil tlaaicujlolli, aycujliuhquj: auh yn iten yn ivipil, tlachalchiujcujlolli, chalchiujcujliuhquj, tẽmizmolonquj, tlatenmjxicujlolli: auh yn icue çan ic no iuhquj ynic tlacujlolli, yoan icxic cẽpalia coiolli, teucujtlacoiolli, anoço tzitzilli: itlaniuio in qujlpiaia, oceluecoatl yn ipan

1. "Fiesta de los señores," according to Garibay ("Relación breve," p. 300); "der kleine Herrenfest," or "kleines Herrenfest," in Seler (Einige Kapitel, pp. 130, 131).
Torres describes this month and the next basically as the lords' months, in contrast to Ennalqualoni. Cf. Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 26.
2. In op. cit., p. 131 and p. 131, n. 1, Seler refers to "gelber Pflanzenfarbe." Mimmi, however, is translated by Molina (op. cit.) as "la espiga y la flor de la caña de maya."
3. Literally, pensado; Sahagún, however, writes "labrada."
4. Cf. Sahagún's corresponding Spanish text: also Plate 24.
5. "Las corpanas de los pies," in Sahagún's Spanish. Cf. also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 1, n. 9.

Each one stood saluting him, before whom lay all manner of arms and devices—the shields, and the clubs set with obsidian blades, and the capes, and the breech clouts.

They stood saluting him, and then each one stood receiving his gifts. They then went out where all adorned themselves, putting on the devices and insignia. To the great chieftains was given this costly array. And to all the common folk were given the Huaxtec devices.[34]

And after that, when this was concluded, when all were arrayed, then once more all placed themselves in a line before Moctezuma. Each one stood saluting him. Thereupon [each] came forward; [each] came up there.

And when the dancing took place, the hand-weaving dance was danced. Those to whom insignia had been given came there to display their devices. And the insignia which were given were like their reward, which served to bind them [to their duty]. And in this manner was the hand-waving dance: all were in columns, as hath been said; like flowers they moved. They went in glory [as] they circled the temple.

And all the onlookers, the old women—all the beloved women—burned with tears; their hearts were full of grief.

They said: "These are our beloved sons whom we see here; if, in five or ten days, word comes: '[We are] in flood and fire—that is, at war'—is it possible that they will return again? Will they find their way back? Verily, they will be gone forever!"

And [the wearer of the skin of the likeness of] Toci, and her Huaxtecs, and the medicine [women] went apart [from the others] and went dispersed behind [the dancers]. They alone proceeded singing, apart, singing in a high falsetto; like [that of the cen]tzontli [bird] they raised their [voices in] song. The hand-waving dance began at midday; and when it ceased, the sun had already set.

And when dawn broke, and it was already day, again all gathered, once more all dancing the hand-waving dance, and none ceased, even once. For arms and insignia were offered to the noblemen—not now many, but a few. And they were bestowed devices ceceiaca contlapalotimanj, ixpan onoc, in jxqujch nepapan tlaviztli, in chimalli, yoan in macquavitl yoã tilmatli, yoan maxtlatl: [796x] [714 411] contlapalotimanj, njman ic concujtimanj, ceceiaca in innetlauhtil: vmpa oniatimanj in vmpa nechichioalo, onneaqujlo tlaviztli: in vevei tiacaoan, in qujmomaca iehoatl in tlaçotlanquj: auh in ie ixqujch, ça tlacujtlapiloa, iehoatl in qujmomaca cuextecatl tlaviztli.

Auh in ie iuhquj in ontlamoac, in õnechichioaloc: njmã ic oc ceppa õnevipanolo, in jxpan Motecuçoma: ceceiaca contlapalotimanj, njmã ic oalqujztimanj, njman ic vmpa oniatimanj.

Auh in jquac in ie netotilo, nematlaxo: vmpa oniatimanj in onotlavizmacaque, vncan tlaviznextia. [535] Auh in tlaviztli, ic qujmomaca, iuhqujn impariuh muchioa, in qujmjliuhca muchioa: auh injc momatlaça tetecpãtivi in juh omjto iuhqujn suchitl mantiuh, vel maviçotivi, qujiaiaoalo in teucalli.

Auh in jxqujchtin tlatlatta, in jlamatzitzin, yie ixqujch tlaçatl cioatzitzinti, tlachoqujztleoa, icnoioa in iniollo:

qujtoaia. Inin topilhoantzitzin nican tiqujmitta, intla macujl, matlac oalmjto, tehoatl tlachinolli, id es, iaoiutl, çujx oc mocuepaqujuj, cuix oc ymiloch qujchioaqujuj, ca ic ceniazque.

Auh in toci, yoan ycuexoan, yoan titici, çan nonqua mantiuj, itepuzco tepeuhtiuj: çanjioque in cujcatiuj, [533] ynic cujca cenca tlapitzaoa, iuhqujn tzõtli cana incujc: in peoa nematlaxo nepantla tonatiuh, auh in necaoalo, ic oncalaquj in tonatiuh.

Auh yn otlatujc, in ie ymuztlaioc, oc cepa cenqujxoa, oc no nematlaxo, aiac mocaoa ca ça yiopa: qujnjquac motlauizmacaia in pipilti, aocmo mjequjnti, [714] ca quenqujntin: auh in qujmomacaia, cenca tlaço-

34. See Sahagún, Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 3, pp. 1288. Sahagún mentions (pp. 13), 137) a pointed, cone-shaped hat; a disc or crescent fastened to the hat; a crescent-shaped nose plate; a golden ear pendant; and sandals. Sahagún there relates to the wear of Aztecpipil among the Huaxtecs, or that "the Huaxtecs were [down to preaching] themselves to be the servants, followers, Huaxtecs, of the old mother of the gods, Tetec Ixtoca, the Huaxtec earth goddess, . . . mother and inventor of war, . . . who was supposed to be at home among the Huaxtecs, and perhaps was actually received by the Huaxtecs from days." [776 177]

X 796 Thirty-first Chapter, which telleth of the feasts and the ceremonies which were performed on the feast of the twelfth month, which was named Teotl eco.

The twelfth feast was the one named "The God Arriveth."[1]

[824] When there were still five days before the end of the month, then began the strewing of fir branches.[2] The branches were of three stalks, which they bound together. Only the young men laid them down, on [346] every small pyramid, in the temples of the Cinateteo,[3] and in all the dwellings where were kept images of the devils.

And when they scattered branches in every home, they offered [the idols] a small basket of dried grains of maize; or else of maize, four dried ears; [or], in some places, three. If [the householder] were very poor, he offered two dried ears of maize.[4] This was [252] named the tongs [for maize grains];[5] for the youths ate the maize toasted in the embers. And none who had not the right [to do so] might eat the maize thus toasted; only those who were diligent, discreet, careful; the alert, who trusted not [too much] their [own] diligence.

And on the third day of the spreading out of ● [776] branches, then there arrived Telpochtli; and his name was Tlamatzincatl.[6] He came first; this one arrived ahead. For this reason he came here first: he was still a youth, still strong, fleet, nimble.

X 796 Wherefore he arrived first; and they laid out offerings for him. They offered him fish amaranth seed, 252 ground and made into a ball of dough.

First, they roasted [the maize], and broke the grains upon an earthen plate, and then ground it upon a stone. And when they had ground it, then they moistened it with water. Some they moistened with honey. They fashioned mayhap five, mayhap four balls [of this paste], and filled a wooden vessel

Inic ceuppoalli on matlactli oce capitulo: ierehpa tlatoa in ilhuijtl, yoan in nextlaoalizzli; in muchiuaia, in jpã vel ic ceujlhujtl, injc matlactetl on ume metztli: in motocaiotiaia, Teutl eco.

Injc matlactetl on ume ilhujtl: ichoutl in motocaiotia, Tetl eco:

in ic iuh tlamacujlti, njuã vncan vmpeoa in acxoistemalo: in acxoiatl, ichoutl in acatl, ẽci in quijpiaia; çan ichoantin in telpopochtin quijtemaia, novian in momoteco, in cioatecucalco, yoan in novian techachan, in vncan pipiclo in jmjxipilacoan diabloene:

auh in techachã novian onacxoistemaia, quijnoalmaca, aço cen chiqujuhtzintli in tlaolli, anoço cintli, naolotl: in cana icolotl: in cenca motolinja, omolotl in cintli quijoaltemaca: moteneoa, cacalotl ca quijmocalhujaia in telpopochti: auh aiac çan nẽ mocalhujaia, can ichoantin injmel, in tlaceliaaj, in tlamocujtlavianj, in cochicanj, in ameo tlatlacanequjnj in jmel.

Auh in ie ic icilhujtl acxoistemalo: iquac heco in telpochtli, itoca Tlamatzincatl, oaliacattivia, ichoatl achto heco: ipampa in oaliacattivia, ca oc telpochtli, oc chicaoac, tlaççanj, coeze:

ipampa in achto oalaci, yoan quijtlamanjliaia: in qujmanjliaia, mjchiouuhtli, in tlapololli:

achtopa qujcequj, quijtomotza comalco, çatepan quijteci: auh in oquijtecque, çatepã quijpolouia, atica: cequj necutica, in quijpolouia: aço macujltetl, aço

1. Teoco hero—Los dioses llegan, in Garibay, op. cit., p. 387. Clavigero, op. cit., p. 185, refers to modern as in feasts de la venida de los dioses. The spelling "Tetl eco" is in the Florentine Codex.

2. See note 3, p. 59. In Cap. xxxiv (Pinquentemilitli), Sahagún explains that "por ramos llevaban cada verde y espinos de magueys," and, in Cap. xxv (Ennepalizztli), "donde no había cerro ponían cuchillas cada verde en lugar de ramos."

3. Sahagún (Robredo ed., Vol. I, p. 114) explains that "Tenían edificados oratorios a honra de estos dioses en todos los barrios donde había dos calles; los cuales llamaban cinateocalli, o por otro nombre cihuacapan; en estos oratorios tenían los vasquezos de estos dioses. . . ." Clavigero, (loc. cit.) says: "reconocían los templos y los convecindades de las calles." Cf. also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 6.

4. Olotl is more properly corn cob. See Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 32; however, he usually renders it maize ear.

5. "Cuartos, o tenazuelas . . . para asbrar granos de maiz tostado en el rescoldo" (Molina, op. cit.). Sahagún has the same equivalent.

6. These names are synonyms for Tezcatlipoca.

[with them], and then went off carrying it. When they came to his presence, then they put it down; they laid it down for him.

And when it was already night, then the beloved old men and old women drank wine. In this manner they spoke: it was said, "They bathe [the god's] feet."

And when the fourth day had come, then ended the scattering of the branches. Then they threw away the branches. And when the fifth day came, then in truth was when [it was the feast] Teotl eco, with which ended the twenty days.

At midnight [the priests] prepared a flour of maize, which they patted and pressed together, making it round [and flat] like a shield, and placing it upon a mat.

When [it was time that] all the gods should reach here, and arrive, they made preparations. All set themselves in motion, that the gods might arrive.

And the old priest, [the god's] aged one, named "He who keepeth the god," kept going back to look upon [the maize flour on the mat]. Often he looked upon it. Never did he rest. His office was only to look. Never did he leave his foot; [for] that which he watched, the maize flour, was called his "foot."

And when [the god] arrived, then he saw a small foot[print], which was there upon the maize flour, or at its edge; when he stood upon the [cake of] maize flour, it split.[7] Then it was plain that the gods had arrived.

Then he who kept the god said to them: "Verily, the lord hath deigned to come."

When this was heard, then [the priests] went in procession, blowing shell trumpets, to proclaim [the news] everywhere. Then by this was it known that in truth the gods had come.

And all the common folk thereupon went away and departed to lay offerings in their temples, the temples of the devils. All offered them balls of dough.

And when they had made the offerings, all was still,

And when night fell, in the same manner as they did [before], the old men and the beloved old women drank wine. It was said: "They bathe the feet of the gods who have come."

And the next day, then came Yacapitzauac, this Yacatecutli, who was the god of the merchants; and nauhtetl in coololoa, quauhcaxic in tetentiuh, mec quitquitiuh: in oacic ixpã mec contema, contemjlia. [252]

Auh in jquac ie ioa, mec tlatlaoano, tlatlaoanalo, in veventzitzin, in jlamatzitzin: in juh quitoaia, quijlmach quicxipaca. [888 273]

Auh in oacic ic navilhujtl, vncan ontlamj, in acxoistemalizitli: iquac quitepeoa in acxoiatl. Auh in oacic ic macujlilhujtl, in ie vel iquac Teutl eco, in ie ic ontlamj cempoalilhujtl:

ioalnepantla, in quichioaia, iotexitli, quitepitztlaliaia, quipachoaia, iaoaltic injc quitlaliaia, petlapã in contlaliaia:

in jquac muchintin oalacia, hecoia in teteu, quicencaoaia, cemolinja, injc iecoia teteu:

auh in quacujlli, in jveveio, itoca: Teuoa, mocujtlacueptinemj, in conjtta, achca in conjtta, aquẽmã motlalia, çan jc nemj in conjtta, aquẽman conjcxicaoa, in conjtta iotexitli, moteneoa: icxi. [793]

Auh in ohecoc, vncan conjtta, icxitontli, in vncan icac, iotexpan: anoço itenco, in moquetza iotexitli, texxitinj: njmã ic neci, ca ohecoque in teteu: [787] njman ic quioalitoa, in teuoa. Ca omecavi in tlacatl:

in ocacoc: njmã ic maantimoquetza in tlapitzalo, quitzacutimomana: njmã ic macho, ca ohecoque in teteu. [534]

Auh in jxquich maceoalli, njman ic vivi, viviloa, in tlatlamanazque inteupã, in intetecupan diablome: çã moche in tlapololli, in quinmanjlia:

auh in ontlatlamanaloc, njman ic cactivetzi.

Auh in ie ioaa: çan iẽ no ivi in quichioa, tlatlaoana in veveque, in jlamatzitzin, quijlmach, quimjcxipaca in ohecoque teteu. [888 273]

Auh in jmuztlaioc, iquac heco in Jacapitzaoac, inj Jacatecutli: pochteca inteouh cauca, yoa in Izcoçauh- [776]

7. The word ololoia is explained by Carochi (op. cit., p. 307): "[illegible] quando [illegible] se hacen [illegible] [illegible]" — "y [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]."

X 796 Ixcoçauhqui, he who [was named] Xiuhtecutli, who likewise was god of the merchants. Only these came ● [776] last, behind [the others], last of all; because they were already old.

And after this, then began the casting [of victims] into the fire, there on the large altar.[8] Indeed many wretched captives they cast into the flames.

X 796 And when they were being cast into the fire, there then went dancing [one arrayed as a] squirrel. He 292 was bedecked with a small feather crest; he had a 535 crest. The painting on his face was in two colors. He bore a small box upon his back as he went, in which [198] was a small dried rabbit. When they cast one into the flames, [the dancer] whistled with his fingers.

And one [in the likeness of a] bat was there, [also] doing a dance; indeed [in an array] like a bat was [534] he adorned. He had two gourd rattles which, one in each hand, he went rattling.

And when they had cast [the captives] into the fire, then the priests formed themselves in rows, that they might descend. [They were bedight with] their paper stoles, which were painted with designs.

X 796 They took one another's hands, grasping them firmly. When the line [of the procession] was broken, 535 where a gap was formed [in the line], one was, as it were, thrown off. Some fell, striking the ground, biting the earth. This was called "They fall upon their hands."

And next day all assembled at the same time to [237] dance the serpent dance. All were decked in colored feathers—yellow, bright red, orange, and green. Thus were people adorned with feathers—[even] all the small children, although they [still] lay in their cradles—all the people, [but] only the men.[9]

Thereupon was begun the serpent dance, at midday. Hands were clasped; there was song. It was no matter what [song] they intoned—mere pleasure songs. And when they ceased, it was night. And any who were taking much pleasure, verily, spent the night there.

And these two festive days they had already taken from the [next month], Tepeilhuitl.

Enough. Here endeth and concludeth the feast [of the month] Teotl eco.

quj, iehoatl in Xiuhtecutli, çan no pochteca intouh catca, ça oallatzacujtivia, ça oallatoqujlitivia, ça qujoalcentzacujtivia: ichica ca ie vevetque.

Auh in jquac in, njman ic peoa in tetlepantlaxo, vncan in teccalco: vel mjequjntin, in qujntlepantlaçaia, mamaltzitzinti:

auh in vncan tetlepãtlaxo, vncan mjtotitinemj techalotl, çan mochichioaia quachichiqujltone, quachichiqujle, mjxtecujcujlo: ioacalton qujmamatinemj, vncan onotinemj, tochtlaoatzalxontli: in jquac ce contlaça tleco, mapipitzoa:

yoan ce tzinacan vncan nenca, mjtotitinemj, vel iuhqujn tzinacan: ic no mochichioaia vnietl in jaiacach, vccampa in aiacachotinemj.

Auh in ontetlepantlaxoc, mec oalmotecpana in tlamacazque: injc oaltemo, imaamaneapanal, tlacujlolli:

maana, in matitech maana, cenca moteteuhtzitzquja: inon omocotonque, in omotlacavilique, iuhqujn mochichiccanauhtivi, in aca tlalli ic movitequj, tlalli qujquativetzi. Inin moteneoa mamatlavitzoa.

Auh in jmuztlaioc, onnenechicolo, cenvetzi, in necocololo, hivitica necujcujlolo, in coztic, in chichiltic, in vitztecolli, in xoxoctic, injc mjvicujcujloa, muchintin in pipiltotõti, in manel coçolco onoc, cenca ixqujch tlacatl, çan ichoantin in oqujchtin:

njman ie ic penalo in necocololo, nepãtla tonatiuh, neaano, cujco, çaço ac tle queoa, çan avilcujcatl: auh in necacaoalo, ie ioca: auh in aca cenca compaquj, vel vncan iovilia:

auh in jiomjlhujixti y, ie cuel cõcujlia in tepeilhujtl.

Je ixqujch njcan tlamj, njcan tzonqujça in ilhujtl Teutl eco.

---

8. ". . . en el donde cada año sacaban vivos en un gran recondo de fuego muchos cautivos, en la fiesta que se llamaba tecalco; y hacían los dichosos capellín ceremonias que se llamaban atecalcoxcaxa, como se dice en la misma fiesta de tecalco" (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 224).

9. ". . . porque no les hacían mal el dios Acolmiztli" (ibid., p. 226). Cf. Clavigero, op. cit., p. 188.

[796] and adorned [the figures]; they molded them [with amaranth seed dough].

[778] And some molded them well into the night. Thus did they fashion them: they daubed liquid rubber upon the faces [of the figures][9] and they laid [a spot of] fish amaranth seed paste upon [each of] their cheeks;[9] they covered them with banners of white paper spattered with liquid rubber, and they fitted upon them paper headdresses and their forked heron feather ornaments.

[314 289]

qujntlapschilitivitze, iuhqujn tlacaoacativitz, njmã ie ic tetlacatililo, techichioalo qujmpepechoa:

auh in cequjnti oc vecaioan, in qujnpepechoa, injc qujntlacatilia, qujmixolhuja, yoan mjchioauhtli in quimõtlalilia incampan, qujmõquentia in tetevitl, yoan qujmõaquja imamacal, yiaztatzon.

[765] And of those who had died in the water, they placed images only upon circular mats,[10] and made them of a dough of amaranth seed.[11]

Auh in atlan mjquja, çan iaoalco in qujntlaliaia, in jmjxiptla, tzoalli in qujnchichioaia.

And when it dawned, then they were set in each one's house, upon reed resting places made of thin, fine reeds; or wide ones; or large, white ones; or hollow reeds.[12] Upon these they placed them.

Auh in otlatvic: mec tetlatlalilo in techachan, tolpepechpan, aço tolpitzaoac, aço tolpatlactli, aztapili, aço axali in impũ qujtlaliaia:

And when this was done, when they had set them in order, thereupon they laid offerings before them. [262] They offered them fruit tamales, and chili sauce, or else dog meat, or turkey. And they offered incense to them.

Auh in ie iuhquj, in otecencaoaloc: njman ie ic qujntlamanjlia: in qujnmaniliaia xocotamalli, yoan tlatonilli, anoço itzcuinnacatl, anoço totolin: yoan qujntlenamaqujlia.

When this was done, one said [of the figures]: "They are seated in the houses." And if one was rich, there was singing and wine was drunk in their honor; and elsewhere they only brought them offerings.

In jquac in moteneoa cali onoac: auh in netlacamachoia, cujcatilo, yoan tlatlaoanjlilo: auh in cana çan ixujch in qujntlamanjliaia.

And upon the feast day, there died some women, [who were] representations of the mountains.

Auh in jpan in ilhujtl, mjquja cequjntin cioa, imjxiptlaoan Tetepe.

[776] The first was named Tepexoch; the second, Matlalcueie; the third, Xochtecatl; the fourth, Maiauel, representing the maguey; the fifth was named Milnauatl. This [last was] a man, representing a serpent.

Injc er itoca Tepoxoch. Injc vme: Matlalquae. Injc ei: Xochtecatl. Injc navi, Maiavel: ixiptla metl. Jnjc macujlli: itoca Milnaoatl: inin oqujchtli, ixiptlan coatl:

[314 289] Their array [consisted of] paper headdresses and paper vestments daubed with liquid rubber—with much rubber; a great deal of rubber. And the array and adornment of Milnauatl were in the same manner.

in jnechichioal, in jmamamacal, in jmamatlatquj: tlaolhujlli, cenca ollo, moca olli: auh in Milnaoatl, çan no iuhquj in jnechichioal, in jtlatquj:

[493] Early in the morning they started to go, carrying them upon their shoulders on litters. It was said: "They provide them with litters." They went carrying them there. They went there in litters; they carried them in a roundabout procession. Only the women carried [the litters] on their shoulders. They went singing for them.

ioatzinco in qujmpeoaltia in qujnnapalotinemj, tlapechtica: moteneoa, qujntlatlapechvia, vncan mamantivi, vncan yicativi in tlapechco, qujntlatlaioalochtia: çan no cioa in tlanapaloa, qujncujcatitivi.

---

9. The corresponding Spanish text reads, besides: "La cabeça de cada vna vnsaua vnaja dos veces, vna de parenas, y otra de cabellos. . . ."
9. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 2, n. 15.
10. According to Sahagún (loc. cit.), "vnaban o vnsaua hechos de hoias, redondas como tapetes de esteras."
11. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 22, n. 119.
12. In the Robredo ed. of Sahagún, Vol. III, p. 233, atoll is explained: "Hay otra que se llama tecuapilli, es muy verde y tiene unos cabellos hecho como aquellos hueles que se llaman atoll, y crecen cerca del agua, y cuando se vnsaua vnsaua entre los diamates cuando la cosecha."

X 796 And when they had burned, they there buried their [765] charcoal and ashes.

And of those slain in battle, their streamers, their costly banners, their shields, and their capes, and their breech clouts they placed upon a dry maize stalk, tied on. From it hung loose twisted, red cotton [237] thread. At its end there hung a [dead] hummingbird, and four hundred [white] heron [feathers]. Many cords were pasted with feathers. At the ends hung heron [feathers]. They left these in the eagle bowl, where they burned.

And the sixth day was named "They come upon the grass."[3] And for this reason they named it "They come upon the grass," [that] grass was scattered [in the Temple of Mixcoatl]. This [was] grass from under the pine trees. Here were ranged in their places [793] the old women [who served the temple]. Before them lay a mat.

Thereupon came forth women with children. Each one heaped upon the mat five sweet tamales. All together, by fives, they laid them [there]. They came to give their children to the old women. And the old women came to take the children; they then dandled them in their arms. Then, those who danced their children in their arms gave them [back] to their mothers.

Then [the mothers] departed to their homes. This began in early morning. And it was time to eat when they finished. And when this was done, then all departed to hunt. They went to Çacatepec, there by Ixillan tonan.

And when ten days still remained in this month, as hath been said above, they then celebrated a feast
● [776] in honor of the god of the Otomí, who was named Mixcoatl, in the manner which will be set forth.

And when they had arrived there at Çacatepec, nothing was done. Only when they arrived, they all [342 513] made grass shelters, in which to sleep; all lit fires, to warm themselves.

And at dawn, thereupon food and drink were eaten and drunk. Then all arrayed and wrapped mantles about themselves.

Then all departed; all were ordered and disposed X 796 in a row, stretching like a rope nowhere broken. All, 224 in this manner, encircled all the deer, coyotes, rabbits, and hares; cautiously they closed in upon them.

And when they had come upon them, then all

auh in ontlatlac, in jtecollo, yoan inezo, vncã contoca.

Auh in oiaomjxque in inmecapan, yoan intlaçopan, yoan inchimal, yoã intilma, yoan inmaxtli, oosqusuhtitech in qujtlaliaia, qujlpiaia, itech pilcatiuh chichilicpatl, potonqui ic tlamalintli, yiacac pilcatiuh vitzitzilin, yoã cẽtzonaztatl, mjec in mecatl, qujpotonjaia hivitica, yiacac pilcatiuh aztatl, vmpa concaoa in quauhxicalco, vmpa tlatlaia.

Auh injc chiquacentlamantli: moteneoa, çacapã qujxoa: auh injc moteneoa, çacapan qujxoa, mocuetzelos, çacatl: iehoatl in ocoçacatl, vncan motecpana in jlamatque, oc petlatl imjxpan onoc.

Nimã ie ic oalmoiacatia in pilhoaque çioa, contentimanj petlapan mamacujltetl in tzopelic tamalli: ceniauh, in mamacujltetl contema: qujmõmacativi in impilhoan, in ilamatque: auh in jlamatque, qujnoalantimanj in pipiltotonti, njmã qujmonjtotia inmac: njmã ic qujmõmaca, in tenanoan, in oqujmonjtotilique inpilhoan:

njmã ic iatimanj in inchachan, oc iooatzinco in peoaia. Auh in ie tlaqualizpan in necaoalo: auh in ie iuhquj, njman iecviloa in amjoaz, vmpa tlamattivi in çacatepec, vmpa in jxillã tonan:

Auh in jmatlacioc metztli y, in tlacpac omoteneuh: vncan qujlhujqujxtiliaia, in inteouh otomj: in mjtoaia Mixcoatl in jpanjn moteneoaz.

Auh in onaxioac in vmpa çacatepec aiatle muchioaia, çan oc qujzqujch hazzioa nezzacaltilo, in vncan cocochioa, tlatlatlatilo, neezcolo.

Auh in otlatvic, njman ie ic tlatlaqualo ãtlioa: njmã ie ic nechichioalo, nehaspanalo:

mec viloa, netecpanalo, nevipanolo: iuhqujn mecatl motilinja, acan cotonj: muchi tlacatl im juh, qujniaoaloa in jzqujchtin mamaça, in coiotl, in tochtli, in citli: çan jvian impan ommonamjquj.

Auh in ovel impan ommonamjc, mec tenamoiala,

3. "Ils vont à la prairie" (zacapan quimoque), according to Garibay (loc. cit.).

scized [the game], all fell upon it. All that escaped did not yet die.[4]

And when they did this, thereupon they dispersed and all returned. And the captors yet remained and slew more [game]. And those who caught a deer or a coyote, those Moctezuma favored with capes whose edges were striped with feathers.

If one were a captor, one might array oneself [in it]. And if one were not a captor, one might only place [his cape] in a basket, or sell it. And Moctezuma offered the captors food, and they drank.

And when [game] had been slaughtered on Çacatepetl, thereupon all departed. They took with them only the heads, carrying them in their hands, dripping drops of blood. When they reached their homes, they hung up [the heads]. And they took Moctezuma there.

And when they went out upon the grass, then they offered paper vestments to as many as would die. For [the god] Tlamatzincatl, many of his bathed sacrificial victims were arrayed. For the second [god], Izquitecatl, either two or three. These the wine makers ceremonially bathed,[5] they who made wine for the great chief.

The third for whom they died was Mixcoatl and his consort, a woman named Yeoatl icue. Only two of them died. Only the majordomos secured [the victims]. And also those women, [each one named] Coatl icue, the wives of Tlamatzincatl and Izquitecatl—these also took upon their heads their paper array.

And when [the time] had come, when [it was] verily the feast of Quecholli, then the [space of] twenty days ended. Then went those who were to die, into the sand.[6] After midday, they then took them to the place where they would die. They took them in procession about the offering stone; they went in line. And when they came to encircle [the sacrificial stone], thereupon all came down [from the pyramid]. No more were they taken where they were guarded, but they took them there to the tribal temples. [There] they kept them in vigil all night, and watched and guarded them.

And when it was midnight, thereupon they took hair [from the crowns of their heads]. And when they had cut the hair, thereupon [their belongings] were burned. [If the captive was] a man, he burned tecujcujtivecho, izqujch in tematitlampa quiça, in aiamo imjquja.

Auh in ie iuhquj, njmã ie ic tlaxitinj, oalnecuepalo: auh in tlamanjme, oc ompa ommocaoa, oc tlamjctia: in aquja maçatl oc acic, anoço coiotl, qujntlauhtia in Motecuçoma, tenjvivavanquj in tilmatli:

intla tlamanj, qujmoquentiz: auh intlacamo tlamanj, çan qujtlatiz tanaco, anoço qujmonamaqujliz: yoan in tlamanjme qujntlamaca in Motecuçoma, yoã atli.

Auh in ie iuhquj motlamjctiloc, in jcpac çacatepetl: njman ie ic viloatz, çaiio in intzontecon qujoalhujvica intlan qujmaana, chichipicativitz in eztli, in oacico inchachan, aco qujnpip̄los auh çan vmpa concaoa in Motecuçoma.

Auh in jquac çacapan qujxooaia: iquac qujnmacaia in imamatlatquj in jtzqujntin mjqujzque: iehoatl in Tlamatzincatl, mjequjntin mochichioaia, itlaaltilhoan: injc ome iehoatl in Izqujtecatl, aço vmentin, anoço eintin: iehoan qujmaltiaia in tlachicque, yoan in tecutlachique:

injquein, mjquja iehoatl in Mixcoatl, yoan inamjc cioatl, itoca: Jeoatl icue, çan omextin, çan calpixque in qujnnextiaia: auh no iehoãtin in cioa, Coatl icue: in jnamjcoan Tlamatzincatl, yoan izqujtecatl: no iquac qujcuja in jmamatlatquj.

Aũh in oacic, in vel iquac ilhujtl, Quecholli injc tlamj cempoalli: vncã xalacoa, vncã xallaquj, in mjqujzque: vmmoezcalo, in tonatiuh: mec qujnvica in vmpa mjqujzque: qujmõiaoalochtia in techcatl, motecpantivi: auh in ocõiaoaloto, njmã ie ic oaltemo, aocmo vmpa vico in vmpa opieloia, ça vmpa qujnvivica in jncacalpulco, ceioal in qujntoçavia, qujnpia, qujnpipia.

Auh in ie onaci, ioalnepãtla: njmã ie ic tetzoncujva: auh in oqujmõtzoncujque, njmã ie ic motlatlatlãlia: in oqujchtli, qujtlatia, in jpan yoan itilma,

4. Reference to the corresponding Spanish text suggests that que quemaçiçiolo might better be read for inquiçiolo. Cf. also Seler (op. cit., p. 199).
5. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. I, n. 5.
6. Cf. supra, p. 97, n. 7.

Temple of Uitzilopochtli
Costepetl.[1] 1.

Uitzilopochtli's feast came three times; they celebrated his feast [three times] in one year.

The first time was [in the month] named Panquetzaliztli. And this was the time when they took up [to the top of the pyramid] this Uitzilopochtli [and] a second [god] named Tlacauepan Cuexcochtzin.[2] And thus did they take up the image of this Uitzilopochtli: all the priests and youths took it up in their arms. And the image of Uitzilopochtli was [made] only of a dough of amaranth seeds—very large; almost a fathom [tall].

And [the image of] the second [god], whose name was Tlacauepan Cuexco[ch]tzin, was likewise made of a dough of amaranth seeds.

And the image of Uitzilopochtli was made, and took the form of man, there at a place called Itepeyoc. And the second [god], Tlacauepan Cuexco[ch]tzin, was made, and took the shape of man, there at a place known as Uitznauac calpulco. And during the night they cooked and formed [the images].

And when it dawned, they were already shapen. Thereupon offerings were laid before them. And after noon all then danced; all went in procession. And when the sun entered his house [at sunset], they took [the figures] up [to the top of the pyramid]. And after they had gone to set them in place, all descended. [The images] remained there all night. And the priests who guarded [them] were called Iopoch.

And in the morning Paynaltzin came forth, who was himself the vicar of Uitzilopochtli. [A priest] carried [the god] in his arms. And the image of Paynal was formed of wood. And he who bore him in his arms was called Topiltzin Quetzalcoatl. He was richly bedight with his feather device.[3] And the image of Paynal was thus adorned: [it had on] its humming bird disguise, its arms, its golden banner, and its green stone necklace. And over the small of its back went hanging the mirror device for its back,

Vitzilobuchtli ineocal
costepetl. 1.

In vitzilobuchtli, expa in qujçaia ilhujuh, in qujlhujqujxtiliaia, yn ipan ce xivitl. 796x

Injc cepa ipan in mjtoaia panquetzaliztli: auh ynin vncan acoqujçaia, in iehoatl vitzilobuchtli, ym omextin yn jtoca Tlacauepan cuexcochtzin. Auh ynic qujtlecaujaja in iehoatl vitzilobuchtli ixiptla, vel ixquich in tlamacazquj, in telpuchtli in qujnapaloaia: auh yn ixiptla catca vitzilobuchtli, çan tzoalli, cenca vey, cennequetzalli. [776] 776 796x

Auh ynjc vme in jtoca Tlacauepan, cuexcotzin, çan no tzoalli in jxiptla catca.

Auh in muchioaia, in tlacatia Vitzilobuchtli ixiptla: vmpa yn itocaiocan Itepeioc: auh ynic vme, in tlacauepan cuexcotzin, vmpa in muchioaia, in tlacatia, itocaiocan Vitznaoac calpulco: auh cenioual in qujmicuxtiiaia, in qujntlacatiliaia.

Auh in otlatujc, ie otlacatque: njman ie ic ymixpan tlamanalo: auh in ie teutlac, njman ie ic netotilo, necocololo: auh çan ic oncalaquj, in tonatiuh, in qujntlecaujaia: auh yn oqujmoontlalito, njman ie ic oaltemoa, vmpa ceioal catc: yoan qujnpiaia tlamacazque, yn jntoca Iopuch: [793]

Auh yn otlatujc, niman ie ic oalquiça, in paynaltzin, in çan no ie yxiptla Vitzilobuchtli, qujnapaloa: auh yn ixiptla paynal, çan quauitl tlaca ietiuh: auh in qujnapaloa, itoca topiltzin Quetzalcoatl: cenca mochichioaia, yiapanecaiouh: auh yn ixiptla paynal ynic muchichioaia, yvitzitzilnaoal, yianecuiouh, yteucujlapã, ychalchiohcoxquj: auh yn icujlapan pilcatiuh, iehoatl in cujlatencoal, çan muche in teuiuid: 796x 293

1. See Lib. III, cap. 4, § 1.
2. Identified as companion of Uitzilopochtli (Tezozomoc, op. cit., pp. 146, 155).
3. Cf. Sahagún (Bustamante ed.), Vol. III, p. 111.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

● 776 Second Chapter, which telleth how they considered a god one named Titlacauan or Tezcatlipoca; even as an only god they believed in him.

Of this one who was called Titlacauan they said that verily his were the heavens and the earth. All these in truth he made. And he gave to men all that which was necessary; that by which all live; that which can be drunk. He gave riches to men; he made them prosper.

And also of Titlacauan they said [that he was] invisible—like the darkness; [like] the wind.[1] When sometimes he called out to one, he spoke like a shadow. Verily, what one knew within one, [that] he knew. There was much calling out and praying [to him]. It was said to him:

"O protector of all, O giver of life, O Titlacauan, pity me, give me what is necessary for my life and for my strength—of thy gentleness and sweet essence. For now there is want; there is fatigue in gaining one's needs. [This] now there is upon earth. Take pity upon me; incline thyself to me. For I am thy orphan, I am poor, I am in need. Do I, perchance, serve thee in nothing? For I sweep, I sweep up rubbish, I lay fires there where I attend thee, there in thy poor house. Ah! Quickly slay me, trample me with thy feet! Ah! May my body come to rest!"

776b 753 And also they said of Titlacauan that he gave woe and affliction. And men he burdened and scourged with plagues which were great and grave —leprosy, boils, dropsy, cancers, the itch, haemorrhoids, piles, chilblains,[2] and other sicknesses.

And when he laid these upon men, it was when he was wroth—that someone had forsaken his vows and promises, and that he had mishandled the fasting; that a man had lain with a woman [or] a Injc vme capitulo, itechpa tlatoa in quenjn Dios vel ipã qujmatia in ichoatl in mjtoa Titlacaoan, anoço Tezcatlipuca in juhqujma ipan qujmatia ce dios.

In ichoatl in moteneua titlacaoa qujtoaia ca ichoatl ilhujcaoa tlalticpaque, ichoan muchi vel quichioa: yoan muchi quitemaca, in ixquich in tetech monequj, in nemoalonj, yn ioalonj, ichoatl tecuiltonoa, ichoatl tetlamachtia:

auh yoan in Titlacaoã qujtoaia, amo hitonj, çan iuhqujn ioalli, i ehecatl in quẽmã aca qujnotzaia, çan iuhqui ceoalli tlatoaia, vel teitic tlamati, mati, cenca tzatzililoia, tlatlauhtiloia, ilhujloia, Tloquee, nauaqueie, ipalnemoanje, titlacaoane; xinechmotlaocolili, ma xinechmomaquili, in notechmonequj in nonenca, in nochicaoaca, in motzopelica, in maviaca ca ic mihiiovia, ca ic mociavi, ic vmpa õqujça in tlalticpac, ma xinechmocnoitrili, ma xinechmocnomachiti, in njmocnotlacauh in nitozonqui, in nioaçonqui. Cuix atle nimjtznochivililia, ca nitlachpana, ca nitlacuicui, nitletlalia, in vncan nimjtznotlatolchialia, in vncan mocnochã. auh manoço cuele xinechmotlatilli, xinechõmocxipachilvi, ma cuele niccrujto in nonacaio.

Auh yoan in titlacaoan, qujtoaia, ca no ichoatl in qujtemacaia in netolinjliztli, in cococ teupouhquj: yoan tetech qujtlaliaia, ic temotlaia in cocolizztli, in vey, in ouj, in teucocoliztli, in nanaoatl, in tlanquaslauliztli, in qualocatl, in xiiotl, in xochiciuiztli, in quexiliujliztli, in xoteuconaujliztli: yoan in oc cequj cuculiztli.

Auh in jquac tetech qujtlaliaia, iquac in ioliflacolola: yn aquja amo qujneltiliaia, yn jnetol, yn jtlacemitol: yoan in qujtlacoaia in necaoaliztli, yn ac ipan

1. Tezcatlipoca, according to Caso (op. cit., p. 19), signified the nocturnal cycle and was connected with the moon and all the earlier gods. Hence he brought misfortune, death, and destruction, and was associated with witchcraft. Always young (injpochtli), he was regarded as patron of warriors, and sometimes called Yaotl (war). For this reason he was also connected with Huitzilopochtli, his son. Edward Seler, Collected Works (J. Eric S. Thompson and Francis B. Richardson, eds.; Cambridge, Mass.: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1960), Vol. I, Pt. 2, p. 20, and Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, p. 2.

2. Probably [illegible], possibly to be related to [illegible] (Simeón, Diccionario de la lengua nahuatl o mexicana [Paris: Imprimerie Nationale, 1885]; Sahagún, Robredo ed., III, p. 180).

776
753

woman with a man, or that otherwise the fasting had been broken.[5]

776
755

And when the sick man suffered greatly, he prayed much to him, he cried out to him, he reached his hand toward him.[6] He said to him:

"O Titlacauan, abate [my suffering] for me. May I do no more for thee—may I no longer hear nor serve [thee]! But if now thou shalt heal me, I vow to thee that I shall serve thee. If I shall gain something for myself, I shall not eat of it of a morning,[6] but do thou come to set it at thy foot. I shall bring it [to thee]."

And the sick man [who was] in sore straits, who might not recover, who could not now end [the suffering], who could now endure no more, sometimes berated [Titlacauan]. He said to him:

"O Titlacauan, thou sodomite! Now that thou takest thy pleasure [with me], slay me quickly!"

Some Titlacauan then healed, not angered by this. And some nevertheless then died for this.

776

And Titlacauan they also named Tezcatlipoca, and Moiocoiatzin, Yaotzin, Necoc iaotl, and Neçaualpilli. And hence was he called Moiocoia[tzin]: that which was in his mind, that which he thought of, he forthwith made. No one invented [anything for him]; none might prevent him. And in the heavens and all the earth around, whomever he wished he might endow; he would enrich him. And whomever he wished, he might afflict. And whenever he might be wroth, or might so wish, or when he was neglectful, he would bring down the heavens above us, and we should perish.

[778]

And Titlacauan, [who] extended throughout this world, was therefore besought, called to, and prayed to. And everywhere they set up his sanctuaries, shrines[8] by the road, at crossroads. Everywhere he was awaited. And in the shrines they had fir branches laid on the five days with which the twenty-day [month] ended.[9] Always they went to do this on each of the [five] days with which each month ended.

Enough.

cieacuchi oquichtli, yn ac ipan oquichcuchi cioatl: yoan anoce monecaoalujtequj.

Auh in jquac in cenca tlaihiiouja cucuxquj, cenca quitlatlauhtia quitzatzilia, ymac tlatetonc; quijhuja.

Titlacaoane, ma oc xinechmocaxaujli, macacomo iuh njnochioaz, ma onjcac, ma oc notlaiecul: auh intla oc tinechmopatilia, moujctzinco njnonetoltia, ma njmjcanotlatlaiecultilia: intla itla njcnonenentilia, camo njctlacaquaz, çan mocritzin ic ticmoquechilijujuh, nican: njcujcaz.

Auh in cucuxquj cenca tlanauj, yn amo vel pati; yn aoc ontlaiecoa yn aoc vel .: in quenmanjan cahoaia: quijhujaia.

Titlacaoane, cujlonpole: ie tonmotlatlamachtia, manoço cuele xinechtlatlati:

in cequjntin njman quijnpatiaia amo ic qualanja, y cequjntin ye njman ic miquja.

Auh in titlacaoan, no quitocaiotiaia tezcatlipuca, moiocoiatzi, iaotzi, necoc iautl, neçaoalpilli: auh ynic moteneoa, moiocoia, in tlein quijocoia, in tlein quijnamjquj, njman quichioa: aiac quijocoia, aiac quelleltia: yoan yn ilhujcatl, yoan in jequich anacatl tentica, yn aquin quinequj quicujhonoz, quicujhonoa: yoan yn aquin quittitiz, in cococ tenpoalhquj, quittitia. Auh yn iquin moçoniaz, immoenequiz, yn jquin tlatziuiz, quioalpachoz yn ilhujcatl topan manj, tipopoliuiztque.

Auh yn titlacaoa, quicentzacutimanca yn njca ynic notzaloia, in tlatlauhtiloia in tzatzilioia: auh noviian quitlalilia yn ichial, in mumuztli in vtlica, in vmxac, noujian chialoia Auh in mumuzco acxoatl quitlalilia, ynic tlamacujlti ilhujtl, ynic tzonquiça cempoalilhujtl: muchipa iuh muchiuhtiuja, yn ipan ocentetl ilhujtl, ynic tlantioh ocempoalilhujtl.

ie izquich.

---

5. The corresponding Aztec text of this passage has [illegible], probably meaning [illegible].
6. See IX, 7.
7. In "Paralipómenos de Sahagún" (p. 171, n. 7), Garibay notes that [illegible] may also be more literally rendered "spouse; a and 'mate' [illegible], a 'mother, wife'."

In this paragraph, we have read [illegible] as [illegible]; it might equally well be [illegible] (I shall sing).

In "Tu amásame," in the corresponding Spanish, Bas, however, Mallon, op. cit. ([illegible]), and Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, pp. 141, 142. The term [illegible] is variously translated.

8. See IX, 8.

Third Chapter, which telleth—in which is related—[the story of] Quetzalcoatl, who was a great wizard;[1] and of the place where he ruled,[2] and of what he did when he went [away].

This Quetzalcoatl they considered a god. They all adored him as a god. He was prayed to in olden times there at Tula.[3]

And there was his temple, [which was] very tall and high; lofty and towering. Very many [were its] steps, extending in a multitude, and not wide; but each one, in truth, was very narrow. On each step, the sole of one's foot could not be extended.

There, it is said, he lay; he lay covered; and he lay with only his face covered. And, it is said, he was monstrous.

His face [was] like a huge, battered stone, a great fallen rock; it [was] not made like that of men. And his beard was very long—exceedingly long. He was heavily bearded.

And the Toltecs, his vassals, were highly skilled. Nothing that they did was difficult [for them]. They cut green stone, and they cast gold, and they made other works of the craftsman and the feather worker. Very skilled were they. These started and proceeded from Quetzalcoatl—all craft works and wisdom.

And there stood his green stone house, and his golden[4] house, and his coral house, and his shell house, and his house of beams, his turquoise house, and his house of precious feathers.

And [for] his vassals the Toltecs, nothing with which they dealt was [too] distant. Very quickly they could arrive whither they went. And because they were fleet, they were named tlanquacemilhuiaue.[5]

Inic Ey capítulo: itechpa tlatoa, in jnoloca in Quetzalcoatl in vej nacalli catca: in canjn tlatocac, yoan in tlein quichiuh iquac ia.

In ichcatl, in quetzalcoatl: iuhquijma teutl ipan quijmatia, netecutiloia, teumachoia, in iquijn ic vecauh, in vmpo nallan.

auh in vncá onoca in itecpan, cenca vecapil, cenca quauhtic, itzchiquauhtic, itzchivecapan, cenca miec in itlaxamatlaio, vel tecpichauhtoc, axpo papatlaoac, çan pitzaxtoton, amo vel coce zocpalli, vmpan onoca quijl çan tlapachiuhtoca, çan itzlapachiuhtoca, yoan quil xilacacemolle catca:

in itzxiac iuhquijn tetecujnpol, tehtlanipol, hamo tlatlacaiocoia. auh in itentzon cenca viac, cenca vitlatetic, tentemopachtic, auh in tolteca, in imaceoalhoan, cenca mjmatia, ale ovi in quichioaia, in quitequja chalchiviel, yoan tecujtlapitzaia, yoan quichioaia, in oc cequj toltecaiotl in amantecaiotl, cenca vel mimatia vel itech peuhtica, vel itech quiztica, in Quetzalcoatl in itzquich in toltecaiotl, in nemachtli, yoan onicaca ichalchiuhcal, yoan itecujtlacal, yoan itzpachcal, yoan itecizacal, yoan itopalcal, itziuhcal, yoan iquetzalcal.

auh in imaceoalhoan, in tolteca hacan in veca quichioaia, vel icinlica acitivetztiia in campa via: auh inic cenca totocaia motocaiotiaia, tlanquacemilhujme,

1. Simeón Guilloy (op. cit., pp. 170, 171) translates the name as above, but suggests three possibilities for precise understanding of the word: (1) If mecl is the root, a twisted-quadruped is implied; (2) if the root is cuitectl, cuitecatl (an archaic verb surviving in composition), then the meaning is close to magician or prestidigitator, or—following Molina (cf. cuitecatqui, cuitecatlehua, cuitecatlehua, etc.)—to fool; (3) if the root is the blunt ne, nec, necc, then the meaning approximates wisdom, science, magic. Guilloy favors the second possibility.

2. Seler (Ausgw. Kapitel, p. 268, n. 1) corrects in campo to in quemic. This is perhaps more logical.

3. As a deity, Quetzalcoatl was wind god and priest god (Seler: Collected Works, Vol. I, p. 28), or morning star god, god of life, of the morning (Caso: op. cit., p. 19). See also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, pp. 2-3.

Possibly the most coherent account of Quetzalcoatl as the priest-chief of Tula is in the Anales de Cuauhtitlán, of which the best editions are Walter Lehmann's Geschichte der Königreiche von Colhuacan und México (Stuttgart und Berlin: Verlag von W. Kohlhammer, 1938), and Primo Feliciano Velázquez's, in Códice Chimalpopoca. According to this source (pp. 42, 49ff., in Lehmann's Geschichte, and pp. 11ff. in Velázquez's Códice), he reigned at Tula for ten or twenty years following A. D. 873, having been born thirty years earlier of Chimalman, widow of Tezcatzoncatl, who died A. D. 894. (See supra, Chap. I, n. 4.) Chimalman is said to have swallowed a green stone, and from it to have conceived. See also Tezozomoc, op. cit., p. 30.

4. Tezozomoc: gold or silver, according to Silva Galeotti, op. cit. Xicotencatl (or xuit cuepalpil) is gold, and iztac xuitcatl is silver. Cf. Molina (op. cit., Spanish-Mexican section).

5. Those who walked the whole day without doing, according to Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, p. 114.

Fifth Chapter, which telleth of the clouds.

The Lord of Tlaloccan

821
776

He was considered a god. To him were attributed rain and water. Thus they said he made that which we ate and drank—food, drink, our sustenance, our nourishment, our daily bread, our maintenance. All that which grew in the summer he made—sprouts, fresh green sprouts, trees, amaranth, chia, squash, beans; the maguey, the tuna cactus; and still others, not edible—flowers, grasses.

[137]

821
793
785

And when his feast was observed, first there was fasting for four days. The priests fasted in honor of Tlaloc in what was called the priests' house, where they had matured and grown.

When the fourth day had passed, when the fasting had ended, when the feast had been completed, [the evildoers] were plunged and submerged repeatedly in the lake. Not soft, not gentle was the punishement. They were plunged and immersed repeatedly in the water. They ill-used only those of their own kind. They dragged [the victim] back and forth through the mud. They plunged him under the water and dragged him; they went pulling him along by the hair; they kicked him. [As] he swam under the water, churning, beating, and swirling it up as he went, he escaped the hands of the priests.

When a fault had been committed in the priests' house, or some error had been done—even though someone had only stumbled, or tripped over something, at once, for this, they laid hold of him. Because of it they shut him in as their captive, no more taking their eyes from him, that they might plunge him in the water.

And to excess did they set upon him. Greatly did they afflict and torment him. He lay half dead, breathing his last, gasping, in his last agonies; at death's door [was he] whom they finally cast on the shore. No one could plead his cause. From thence [the victims'] fathers and mothers took them. And if anyone felt apprehension or forboding for his son, in order that [the priests] should not plunge him into the Ic macuilli cepitulo, itechpa tlatoa: in mixtli.

Tlaloci secutli.

Teutl ipan machoia, itech tlamiloia, in quiauitl, in atl: inh quitoaia, ic quichioa in ticoua, in tiqui, in qualoni, in joani, in tonenca, in toiolca, in tocochca, in toneuhca, in tocemilhuitiaia, in tonacaiotl: in ic iaquich xopaniotl, in itzmolintoc, in celintoc, in quauitl, in ouhtli, in chian, in aiotetl, in etl, in metl, in nopalli: yoan in oc cequi, in amo qualoni, in euhtli, in xiuitl.

Auh in icoac ilhuiqiuitilitoia: achtopa nauilhuitl moçaoaia, motlalocaçaoaia in tlamacazque: in motenoua calmecac moouipoua, moxcalchia.

In icoac oacic nauilhuitl, in ic neoalco, in ic ilhuitl muchioa: matlampapachoaia, mopopolactiaia in uei apan: amo iuiian, amo motlamachuja, in atlan onmetzotzopontitlaça, onmotzotzopontimaiaui: çan monetechuja, vncan çoquititlan quinemjtia, quipopolactia, quiauilana: icpac cantinemi, quititilicça, atlã tlatzotzopontzinemj, xicotzotzinemi, tlamomolontzinemi: inmac mouuitlatinemi, in tlamacazque, in otlatlaco, in calmecac itlã oncholo: intlatol çan aca tlamotepotlani, itlã oconixxixopeuh, oc uel ic conaciqui, ic ic inmal ça quipipia, axcmo conjcaua, inic catlampapachoque.

Auh amo çan quenjn quipolou: uel quiccoltia, quellelaxitia, ça quen quimatioc, ça mopopoçauhtoc, ça ipomocatoc, ça micqui in quicalmaiani atencc: aiac uel ipan tlatoa, vncan quimonana in intahoua, in innaloua. Auh in aquin quichamahcaxitilia, in quichalmachilia ipilxin, inic amo catlampapachoque: conquixtiaia ilaxin quinmacaia in tlamacazque, ayo tocolin, ayo tlaquilli: ic quicaoaia.

S: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

Sixth Chapter. Here are mentioned the snow, the clouds, and the hail.

[Frost]

The frost [pol] was called Itztlacolihqui. Once yearly the cold came. During the feast of Ochpaniztli the cold began. And for one hundred and twenty days—one hundred and twenty suns—this persisted and there was cold. And it cooled and disappeared [during the feast] called Tititl.

When [the month] came to an end, it was said: "For the frost hath departed. Now there will be sowing—it will be the time of sowing. Already land will be planted, so that [seeds] will be placed in the soil. Already it is warm, mild, calm. Already the season is good, the time is propitious; the hour is at hand; the time is ripe; the moment hath come." [For] already they hastened and were diligent. Already there was unrest; all men would be agitated and solicitous; they would be preoccupied. No longer would there be rest. Already the days would fly;[11] already there would be the setting forth for the working of the fields, the fresh working of the soil, the reworking of the fields; already the fields would be reworked. Now there would be planting of beans; beans would be placed. Now amaranth seed would be cast broadside; amaranth would be placed. Now chia seed would be cast; chili plants set out and transplanted. Already off-shoots would be pruned and separated, and all would bear fruit.

Snow

It was only the servant and companion which followed, accompanied, and spread the frost over the earth. It was considered to be like the rain. And it was said that when there was snow, [crops] would be harvested; the crops would be good. It foretold, and was an omen of, [good] crops.

Ic chicuacen cxpiztle, vncan mitoa: in ołpaiuitl, ynan mitl, ynan in tecuitl.

Cetl, mitoa: itztlacolihqui, cexiuhtica in ołlatiuh, in cesetzi: ipan ochpaniztli, in pesa cesetzi. Auh chicuacempoualilhuitl, ch:macipoalhuia: in mani, in cesetzi. Auh ipan quiça, ipan poliui, in itoca tititl: 821 776 icuac tlami, mitoa ca oquix in cetl, ic tecoz, ic tequinpan, ic tlatlaxqui[illegible], ic tlallan ontlatlalilos: ic tlatotonja, ic tlacacaoaca, ic tlaiamanja: ic qualcan, ic uncan, ic inman, ic tlainman, ołlainmanoc: ic tlacisi, ołlacitih, ic neamaloz, ic neacomanaloz, ic nemocitilos, ic tlamocitiz, ac onnetlalilos: ic tlacaitl ooz, ic motocaz in tlachimiztli, in tlapopozolli, in çacamolli, ic çacamolos, ic etlaxos, ic etlaçalos: ic ouhpixoloz, ic ouhquetzaloz, ic chiempixoloz, ic chiltecos, ic chilaquiloz: ic ołpipilcoz, ic onnemaiohoz, ic netlacatilos.

Cepaiuitl.

Çan iuical, çan iehecal, quinequilia, quinocatiuh, yoł onocitiuh in cetl: iuhquin quiauitl ipan poui. Auh mitoa, in icuac cepaiuitl: pieroz, tlamochiuoz: quinotia, inemaz in piepiniztli. 821

11. Here we follow Leonhard Schultze Jena: Weltanschauung, Menschenopfer und Kalender der alten Azteken, nach den mexikanischen Urquellen des Sahagún's Florentiner und anderen (Stuttgart: W. Kohlhammer Verlag, 1950), pp. 32, 368-369. As alternative, however, might be "turn on fresh, or other" (iteuit, ueuit).

One condition of cuyaçhuaxoc and xocoxochiuhcan is questioned.

821
[176]

Clouds

When [clouds] billowed and formed thunderheads, and settled and hung about the mountain tops, it was said: "The Tlaloca are already coming. Now it will rain. Now the masters of the rain will sprinkle water."

Hail

It was formed and took shape when very white clouds settled on mountain tops. It was said: "Now it will hail; now our food will be hailed out."

And thus did hail fall, making a din as of rattling, beating one about the head, pelting one [as if] with stones. Thus, truly, died and were despoiled our crops. For some distance, it flattened on the ground and spread birds over the surface of the water. At that time the water dwellers went gathering for themselves; they brought in their catch.

821
789

And that it might not hail, that they might not be hailed upon, and the young maize plants might not be damaged by hail, then the [sorcerers who] cast away hail and rain drove and headed it off. They removed it from the waters [of the lake]; they showed it the way and took it [hence]. Or else they cast it forth into the deserted places, the uncultivated lands where there were no crops, no one lived, and nothing existed; poverty-ridden lands—barren lands where nothing grew, nothing issued: the land was void. It was only an abandoned place; the [very] stones were dry.

Mistli.

In iconc tepeticpac moloni, momoloca, motlatlalia, mopilou: mitoaia, ca ie uitze in tlaloque, ie quiiauitz, ie pixauinque in aoaque.

Teciuitl

Ic machiua, ic neci: in iconc tepeticpac motlatlalia mistli, cêca ittac: mitoa, ca ie teciuia, ie teciuiloz in tonacaiotl.

Auh inic uetzi teciuitl, iuhquin tlacacalaca, tequacacalanja, tetemotla: vel ic miqui, ic ispoliui, ic tonacamiqui, cematl quimana, atlaco quinmana in totoxne. Auh vel oncan mopiaquia, quin mopiaquia, tonacatlama, in atlaca.

Auh inic amo teciuiz, inic amo teciuiloz, inic amo tecinmiquiz tocti: niman quiiopena, quipeuia, in teciuhtlazque, in quiauhtlazque: atlanpa quiquanja, quitlachichtia, quiuica: anoço vmpa quitlaça in çacatla, çacaitl-oacan, in atle imuchiouian, atle iiouia, atle onoc, atle iieouia, atle cootoc, atle iquiçaiil, atle quiztoc, atle onuetztoc: çan iuhcatla, tetl oacacca.

S: Sahagún M-S (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

821
[176]

These people attributed the wind to a god whom they named Quetzalcoatl, something like god of the wind. The wind bloweth from the four quarters of the world by command of this god, according to what they said. The first quarter it cometh from is from the east, where they say is the terrestrial paradise which they call Tlalocan. This wind they called Tlalocayotl. It is not a furious gale; when it bloweth, it doth not hinder the canoes from moving on the water. The second wind bloweth from the north, where they say hell is; and hence they name it Mictlampa ehecatl, which meaneth the infernal wind. In hin uel imacazo, etc.: this wind is violent, and therefore they fear it greatly. When it bloweth, canoes cannot go on the water. And all which are on the water come out with all the speed they can [master] because of fear when it bloweth; for often they are endangered by it. The third wind bloweth from the west, where they said was the abode of the Amazons. They called it Ciuatlampa ehecatl or Ciuatecayotl, which is to say wind which bloweth from where the women abide. This wind is not savage, but it is cold. It maketh one tremble with cold. With this wind, navigation is good. The fourth wind bloweth from the south, and they name it Uitz-

Esta gente atribuia el viento a vn dios q̃ llamauan quetzalcoatl bien asi como dios de los vientos. Soßa el viento de quatro ptes del mundo por mandamiento deste dios segun ellos dezian. De la vna pte viene de hazia el oriente, donde ellos dizen estar el payso terrenal al qual llaman tlalocan. A este viento la llamauan tlalocayotl: no es viento furioso, quando el soßa no impide las canoas andar por el agua. El segundo viento soßa de hazia el norte donde ellos dizen estar el infierno y asi le llaman mictlampa ehecatl que q. d. el viento infernal. Yn hin vel ymacazo etc. este viento es furioso y por eso le temen mucho quando el soßa no pueden andar las canoas por el agua. Y todos los que andan por el agua se salen por temor qñ el soßa con toda priesa que puedẽ porque muchas vezes peligran con el. El tercero viento soßa de hazia el occidente donde ellos dezian que era la abitacion de las amaçonas llamauanle ciuatlampa ehecatl o ciuatecayotl que q. d. viento que soßa de donde abitan las mugeres. este viento no es furioso: pero es frio, haze templar de frio con este viento bien se nauegan El quarto viento soßa de hazia el medio dia y llamanle vitzilõpa ehecatl q. d. viento q̃ soßa de aquella pte donde fueron los dioses que llaman vuitznaua: este viento en estas ptes es furioso,

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

821
[776]

Variously they named the sheet lightning or thunder bolts. They attributed them to the Tlalocs or tlamacazque. They said that these made the thunderbolts and sheet lightning and peals of thunder, and [that] they smote with them whomsoever they would.

Por diversos nombres nombran al relampago o rayo atribuyãle a los tlaloques o tlamacaces. Dezian que ellos hazian los rayos y relampagos y truenos y ellos herian con ellos a quien querian.

821
793
[776]

Fifth Chapter

Clouds and rain these natives attributed to a god whom they called Tlalocan tecutli, who had many other [gods] under his command, who were named Tlalocs and tlamacazque. These [people] thought that they created all things needed for the body, such as maize and beans, etc.; and that they sent the rains so that all things growing in the earth would

Las nubes y las plumias atribuianlas estos naturales a vn dios que llamauan tlaloca tecutli, el qual tenia muchos otros debaxo de su dominio a los quales llamauan tlaloque y tlamacazque. Estos pensauan que criauan todas las cosas necesarias pa el cuerpo como mayz y frisoles etc. Y que ellos embiauan las plumias para que naciesen todas las cosas que se crian

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

821
776

They said that these gods $\frac{1}{1}$ made the clouds, the rains, and hail, snow, peals of thunder, sheet lightning, and thunderbolts.

Estos dioses dezian que hazian las nubes y las lluuias, y el granizo, y la nieue, y los truenos y los relampagos y los rayos.

821

The rainbow is something like an arch of hewn stone. It showeth divers colors. When it appeareth, it is a sign of clear weather.

El arco del cielo es a manera de arco de canteria tiene aparencia de diuersos colores. quando aparece es señal de serenidad.

$\frac{1}{1}$ [i.e. Tlaloccan tecutli & Tlalocs & tlamacazque – A]

Fourth Chapter. Here is told what Moctezuma then commanded[1] when he knew that the Spaniards had come back: the second time [that] they came, [they did so under] Don Hernando Cortés.

He said to them: "Come, O ye intrepid warriors; come! It is said that our lord hath at last arrived. Receive him. Listen sharply; lend your ears well to what he will say. You will bring back what is well heard. Behold wherewith you will arrive [before] our lord."

[First was] the array of Quetzalcoatl:[2] a serpent mask made of turquoise [mosaic];[3] a quetzal feather head fan;[4] a plaited neckband of precious green stone beads, in the midst of which lay a golden disc;[5] and a shield with [bands of] gold crossing each other,[6] or with [bands of] gold crossing [other bands of] sea shells, [with] spread quetzal feathers about the [lower] edge and with a quetzal feather flag; and a mirror upon the small of the back,[7] with quetzal feathers, and this mirror for the small of the back [was] like a turquoise shield, of turquoise mosaic — encrusted with turquoise, glued with turquoise; and green stone neck bands, on which were golden shells; and then the turquoise spear thrower, which had on it only turquoise with a sort of serpent's head; it had the head of a serpent;[8] and obsidian sandals.

Injc nauj capítulo: vncan mjtoa in tlein ic tlaonaoati Motecuçoma, in oquijma in quenjn çan oalmocuepque Españoles, injc vppa oallaque, ichoatl in don hernando Cortes.

Quimjlhuj tla xicalhujan mocloqujchtle, tla xicalhujan quji-iequene oquijçaco in totecujo tla xicnamjquji, vel xitlacaqujcan, vel xinacaçocan, tlein qujtoa, vel nacaztli in anqujoalcujaque: iscatquj ic itech amaciaque in totecujo, ichoatl in jtlatquj Quetzalcoatl: cuaxaiacatl, xiuhtica tlachioalli, quetzalapanecaiotl, chalchiuhcoxcapetlatl nepantla mantiuh teucujtlacomalli, yoan cestetl chimalli, teucujtlatica nenepanjuhquj anoço teucujtlatica epnepanjuhquj, quetzaltençouhquj, yoã quetzalpanio; yoan tezcacujtlapilli quetzallo: auh inin tezcacujtlapilli, iuhquin xiuhchimallo tlaxiuhtzacutli, xiuhtica tlatzacutli, tlaxiuhçalolli, yoan chalchiuhcuecuezti, teucujtlacoiollotoc: tjnan ic ichoatl xioatlati, çan motequjtica xivitl, iuhquin cozcatontecometica, costromtecome, yoan itzcactli.

1. Tlamomaui: tlamomaui is probably meant.

2. Seler, op. cit., p. 461, n. 1, says: "In Wahrheit ist dies die Tracht Xiuhtecutlis."

3. Cf. Eduard Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Amerikanischen Sprach- und Altertumskunde (Berlin: A. Asher und Co., 1904), II, p. 413, in which a figure corresponds to the description in the corresponding Spanish text: "una mascara labrada de mosaico de turquesas tenia esta mascara labrada de las mejores piedras verdes cubiertas doradas y remendado encima dorados eres el pico de la nariz y la remendado que hasta la frente era como lienzo de la nariz largo se dispalia la cada de la cabeça y la cabeça con parte del cuerpo pues por cubrir el en cejo de manera que hasta cejo y la cada cosa parte del cuerpo pues por cubrir el cuerpo cejo y hasta cera cejo."

4. Corresponding Spanish text: "Estaua esta mascara encaxada en esta corona alta y grande llena de plumas ricas largas y muy hermosas de manera que pareçiendan la corona sobre la cabeça se pueça la mascara en la cara."

5. Cf. Codex Vaticanus. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "Llevaua por joal una medalla de oro redonda y encima estaua una mesma cartelas de piedras preciosas que cubaban al cuello cubrian los hombros y todo el pecho."

6. Corresponding Spanish text: "Llevaua tambien una rodela grande hordada de piedras preciosas con una mandas de oro que llegauan de orilla abaxo por toda ella, y otra mandas de perlas atrauesadas sobre las de oro de orilla abaxo por toda ella y las espaldas que hauia estas mandas las quales eran como redes de red pues pasauan otras capitas de oro tenia esta rodela otra rapaçejas en la haste que estaba en la rodela otra mandas que estaba dentro la manejas de la rodela hecha de plumas ricas."

7. Ibid.: "una medalla grande hecha de obra de mosaico que la llevaua atada y colgada sobre las espaldas."

8. Ibid.: "un cuerpo como cuerpo de obispo toda labrada de obra de mosaico de turquesas y la hechura de arriba era una cabeça de una culebra rabiatiza o encrucada."

451 The second [gift] which they went offering him
476 was the array of Tezcatlipoca — the headpiece of 292 feathers, with stars of gold;[9] and his golden shell 301 earplugs;[10] and a necklace of sea shells; and the breast ornament decorated and fringed with small shells; and the sleeveless jacket painted with a design, with eyelets on its border, and fringed with feathers;[11] and a mantle with blue knots, which was called tzitzalli, grasped by the corners in order to tie it across the back;[12] also, over it, a [mosaic] [416] mirror[13] lying on the small of the back; and, [as] another thing, golden shells bound on the calves of the legs; and one [more] thing, white sandals.

Injc vntlamantli quijmacaco, ichoatl in jtlatquj catca Tezcatlipuca: hivitzoncalli; cozticc teucujtlatica cicitlallo, yoan itecujtlacoiolnacoch: yoan chipolcoxcatl; elpan concatl, cilin ic tlatlatlamachilli, ic tenchaiaoac; yoan xicolli, çan tlacujlolli, in jtenjaxa hivitica tenpoçonqui: yoan cenetl tilmatli, xiuhtlalpilli, motocaiotiaia, cuitzilli, quiualacazvitzana injc mocujtlalpia; no ipan mantiuh teacacujtlapilli: yoã ec no centlamatli, teucujtlacoiolli, itlanjzico molpiaia, yoã centlamantli, itzac cactli.

[237] Third was the adornment of the lord of Tlalocan: the headdress of quetzal and heron feathers, replete with quetzal feathers. It had quetzal feathers and was blue-green; blue-green was overspread. And over it gold interspersed with shells. And green stone [were] his serpent-shaped ear plugs.[14] [There were] his sleeveless jacket, with a design of green [416] stone; his neck ornament, his plained, green stone neck band with also a golden disc. Also he had a mirror at the small of his back, as hath been told; and likewise he had rattles and a cape with red rings on the border,[15] which was tied on; and shells of gold for his ankles; and his serpent staff was made of turquoise.

Injc etlamantli, ichoatl in jnechichical catca, Tlalocã tecutli: quetzalxoxouhqui, çã moca quetzalli, moxopixica quetzalli, iuhquin xoxoqujvi, xoxoqujuhtimani: auh in jpan teucujtlatica epetepanjuhqui: yoan ichalchiuhtecomacoch: ixicol, tlachalchiuhtucujlolli: in jcoxqui chalchiuhcozcapetlatl no teucujtlacomallo, no teacacujtlapile, in juhqui omjto, no tzitzile; teachiuacacuio in tilmatli injc molpia: yoan icxicoiolli teucujtlatl: yoan icoatepil, xiuhtica tlachiuhtli.

[237] Fourth, likewise the array of this same Quetzalcoatl was yet another thing: the painted ocelot skin cap,[16] with plumed feathers; a very large green stone at the top, which was fixed at the tip; and round, turquoise [mosaic] ear plugs,[17] from which were hanging curved sea shells fashioned of gold; and a plained green stone neck band in the midst of which there was likewise a golden disc; and a cape with red border which was tied on; likewise,

Injc nauhtlamantli çan ic no ichoatl in jtlatquj catca Quetzalcoatl, ic ne centlamantli: ocelocepalli, omalitic; veiepal in chalchiuhtl yicpac ca ic quetzacuitica; yoan xiuhnacochtli, malacachic, itech pilcatica teucujtlacepcoiolli; yoan chalchiuhcozcapetlatl, çan no teucujtlacomalli in joepantla mantia; yoan tilmatli tentlapallo injc molpia; çan no teucujtlacoiolli in jcxi itech monequja: yoan chimalli teucujtlatica itzaqui, quetzalhençouhqui, no quetzalpanio:

---

9. Ibid.: "una cabellera hecha de plumas ricas que colgaban por la parte deste hasta cerca de la cintura, cosida toda de cosillas de oro."

10. Ibid.: "unos zarpajos de oro que llamaban colgaderos como quasquillos de oro y metidos de cornezuelos marinos blancos y horadados deste metales colgaban por encima que era como gato y llamaban cotzolin [sic] de manera que subian todo el pecho hasta la cintura, llamaban este genero de joyas cornezuelos arrodillados; colgaban por todo el."

11. Ibid.: "un manto de cosillas blancas pintado la cuelta de abajo deste manto que llamaban llamaban este labor por nombre el cabadar."

12. Ibid.: "este manto era de cada delta era un ojal abierto y todo labrado alrededor de muchas labores de un ojal muy fino llamaban este manto tecuitlli este manto se prendia por las cantoras atado por las espaldas el cuerpo."

13. Ibid.: "otra metetlli, de tecuaqui, atado al cuerpo sobre las lomos."

14. Ibid.: "unos pendientes de chalchihuitl, metidos que eran ellos unos redondillos de chalchiuhtl."

15. Translation is probable; theme in the Aztec column.

16. Corresponding Spanish text: "una cofia de cuero de tigre, y colorado [sic] de la cuera, sobre las espaldas, una capilla grande, hecha de plumas de ricaros, llamaban la cofia en chalchihuitl grande, y redondo, en la punta."

17. Ibid.: "de cuaquyas de turquesas."

12

½ [There is no known genus of pheasant native to the New World. Perhaps the term is used colloquially. — Analyst] golden shells used upon his ankles; and a shield with a golden disc in the center, and spread quetzal feathers along its [lower] rim, and also with a quetzal feather banner.[19] [He had] the curved staff of the wind god, hooked at the top,[20] and white precious stone stars[20] spread over it; and his foam sandals.

Behold, these [were] all the things called the array of the gods, which became the charge of the messengers, and yet many more things which they bore as their greeting gifts — the shell-shaped headpiece of gold, with pendant parrot feathers;[21] the golden conical cap,[22] etc.

Thereupon were baskets filled; wooden frames for carrying burdens on the back were loaded. And the five [messengers] named, Moctezuma then commanded; he said unto them: "Go! Linger nowhere! Pray to our lord the god; say unto him: 'Thy servant Moctezuma hath sent us; behold what he offereth you, for [the god] hath come to reach his wretched home in Mexico.'"

And when they had gone to reach the coast, they ferried them across, they took them by boat across to Xicalanco. Then once again they departed from there by boat; the water folk took them. Everything was placed and heaped in the boat; they filled the boat with the goods. And when the boat was filled, thereupon they departed. They betook themselves into the water and left to reach the boats [of the Spaniards], they approached their boats.

Then [the Spaniards] inquired of them: "Who are you? Whence came you?"

Then [the messengers] answered them: "We have come from Mexico."

Again [the Spaniards] said to them: "Perhaps not. Perchance you only claim to come from there. Perhaps you only pretend. Maybe you make sport of us."

But when they had verified it, when they had quieted their doubts, then they hooked the prow of the boat with an iron pole, and thus drew them near. Then also they let down a ladder.

yuã hecxoxecujilli, quecolhic, intac chalchivitl injc citlallotec yoan ipoçolcac. 431 776 301 292

Oca inquijtlamãtli in, in motencoa teutlatquijtl in intlatquj mochiuhtia titlanti, yoan oc cenca mjec tlamantli in quijquijque in intenamiquja Teucujtlaquatecuitli tocuitlapilolo, teucujtlacopilli, etc. 431 301

Niman ic ic tlatanatemalo, tlecacaxchichiualo. Auh in omotecaculque macujltin; njman ic ic qujnnacoztia in Motecuçoma: qujmjlhuj. Tla xivian, ma cana anvecauhti, xicmotlauhtilican in totecujo in teutl: xiqujlhujican, ca otechalioa in motechiuhcauh Motecuçoma: iacatquj mjcxalmomaquilia, ca omaxitico in jchãtzinco mexico: 431 482 202

Auh in oacito atenco, qujmõpanavique, acaltica qujmonvicaque in xicalanco: ic no ceppa vncan oncaq acaltica qujnvicaque in atlaca, moch onmacalaquj, onmacalten, conacaltenque in tlatquitl. Auh in oatlaacaltemaloc, njman ic ic vi, ommatoctique, itech onacito in jmacal, itech compachoque in jmacal. 505 njmã qujnoalilhujque. Ac ameuan? campa anealloque? njman iuh qujnnanqujlique. Ca vmpa tioallaque in Mexico: 648 oc ceppa qujnoalilhujque. Acaçomo, aço çan vmpa anmotlamja, aço çan anqujjpiquj, aço çi toca anmocacaiaoa.

Auh in ovel yiollo macic, in ximilhopachiuh. Niman ic qujoaliacatzopinjque in acalli, tepuztopiltica, ic qujnoaltilinjque: njman no quiualquetzque ocaoatli.

---

19. Ibid.: "Ye quad rodela ennoc[illegible] con plumas ricas en la haza de la rodella [sic] salia una corona de plumas ricas."

20. Ibid.: "un bastón labrado de escuyas de turquesas y en la hoxa de arriba pusiera unas piedras ricas a partes resplandecientes en la cha de arriba."

21. Ibid.: "una mitra de oro hecha a manera de caracol marino el cual resplandecía de plumas ricas que colgaban hasta las espaldas."

22. Corresponding Spanish text: "otra mitra dorada."

[p. 14 is blank]

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

panec, a good part of the Yope remained independent of the Mexicans until the arrival of the Spaniards and gave the Spaniards themselves much trouble.

These Tlapanec and/or Yope seem to be linked with distant groups to the south and north. The nearest kin of the Tlapanec language is that found in Nicaragua,[a] but certain customs of the Yope are identical with those of the Apache.[b]

The recent discovery by Ortega of several codices from the Tlapanec zone provides us with a potential source of information on this formerly almost unknown region.[c] Though the codices are still unexploited, they have already shown that the Tlapanec used a pre-Mexican[d] calendar system. There is less novelty in the observation that the god Xipe Totec came to the highland via the Yope. His temple, which stood where the western towers of the Cathedral of Mexico now stand, was called Yopico.

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the northwest of Tlapan lay the province of Tialcoçauhtitlan, to the north that of Quiauhteopan, and to the northeast Yoaltepec—the borderlands of the Mixteca. Tlapan Province extended down to the Pacific Coast to the fortress of Tototepec (not to be confused with the Mixtec kingdom of Tototepec in adjacent Oaxaca). On both sides of this bastion war was continually being waged. The greater portion of the Yope roamed unconquered in Yopitzinco to the west; and to the east was a doubtful region of independent Mixtec peoples, with the other Tototepec of Oaxaca looming as a background power.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Ortega's startling discovery of the balance of the "Codex Humboldt I"[e] and its identification by Toscano

[a] On the Tlapanec language, see Radin, "The Tlapanec Language of Guerrero," International Journal of American Linguistics (1933), 8: 45–72, and Schulze Jena, Indiana III (1938).

[b] The only Yope ethnography surviving is in a document published by Federico Gómez de Orozco ("Costumbres, fiestas, enterramientos y diversas formas de proceder de los Indios de Nueva España," Tlalocan [1945], 2: 60–61).

[c] See Toscano, "Los codices tlapanecas de Azoyú," Cuadernos Americanos, T. 10, N° 4 (1943), pp. 127–136.

[d] That is, with the signs immediately anterior to the familiar Calli-Tochtli series as year-bearers.

[e] Published by Seler, Bulletin 28, Bureau of American Ethnology.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

797 it would be a good thing if it were successful, but it seemed to him that it was not quite a suitable time to speak about it, for Montezuma did not appear to be inclined to do such a thing.

346 778 Then our Cortés said to Montezuma through the interpreter Doña Marina: "Your Highness is indeed a very great prince and worthy of even greater things. We are rejoiced to see your cities, and as we are here in your temple, what I now beg as a favour is that you will show us your gods and Teules. Montezuma replied that he must first speak with his high priests, and when he had spoken to them he said that we might enter into a small tower and apartment, a sort of hall, where there were two altars, with very richly carved boardings on the top of the roof. On each altar were two figures, like giants with very tall bodies and very fat, and the first which stood on the [776] right hand they said was the figure of Huichilobos their god of War; it had a very broad face and monstrous and terrible eyes, and the whole of his body was covered with precious stones, and gold and pearls, and with seed pearls [381 824] stuck on with a paste that they make in this country out of a sort of root, and all the body and head was covered with it, and the body was girdled by great snakes made of gold and precious stones, and in one hand he held a bow and in the other some arrows. And another small idol that stood by him, they said was his page, and he held a short lance and a shield richly decorated with gold and stones. Huichilobos had round his neck some Indians' faces and other things like hearts of Indians, the former made of gold and the latter of silver, with many precious blue stones.

There were some braziers with incense which they call copal, and in them they were burning the hearts of the three Indians whom they had sacrificed that day, and they had made the sacrifice with smoke and copal. All the walls of the oratory were so splashed and encrusted with blood 346 that they were black, the floor was the same and the whole 778 place stank vilely. Then we saw on the other side on the left hand there stood the other great image the same height as Huichilobos, and it had a face like a bear and [416] eyes that shone, made of their mirrors which they call Tezcat, and the body plastered with precious stones like that of Huichilobos, for they say that the two are brothers; and this Tezcatepuca was the god of Hell and had charge [776] of the souls of the Mexicans, and his body was girt with figures like little devils with snakes' tails. The walls were so clotted with blood and the soil so bathed with it that in the slaughter houses in Spain there is not such another stench.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

They had offered to this Idol five hearts from that day's sacrifices. In the highest part of the Cue there was a recess of which the woodwork was very richly worked, and in it was another image half man and half lizard, with precious stones all over it, and half the body was covered with a mantle. They say that the body of this figure [776] is full of all the seeds that there are in the world, and they say that it is the god of seed time and harvest, but I do not remember its name, and everything was covered with blood, both walls and altar, and the stench was such that we could hardly wait the moment to get out of it.

They had an exceedingly large drum there, and when 346 they beat it the sound of it was so dismal and like, so to [534] say, an instrument of the infernal regions, that one could hear it a distance of two leagues, and they said that the skins it was covered with were those of great snakes. In that small place there were many diabolical things to be [534] seen, bugles and trumpets and knives, and many hearts of Indians that they had burned in fumigating their idols, and everything was so clotted with blood, and there was

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

346 so much of it, that I curse the whole of it, and as it stank like a slaughter house we hastened to clear out of such a bad stench and worse sight. Our Captain said to Montezuma through our interpreter, half laughing: "Señor Montezuma, I do not understand how such a great Prince and wise man as you are has not come to the conclusion, in your mind, that these idols of yours are not gods, but evil things that are called devils, and so that you may know it and all your priests may see it clearly, do me the favour to approve of my placing a cross here on the top of this tower, and that in one part of these oratories where your Huichilobos and Tezcatepuca stand we may divide off a space where we can set up an image of Our Lady (an image which Montezuma had already seen) and you will see by the fear in which these Idols hold it that they are deceiving you."

776 Montezuma replied half angrily, (and the two priests who were with him showed great annoyance,) and said: "Señor Malinche, if I had known that you would have said such defamatory things I would not have shown you my gods, we consider them to be very good, for they give us health and rains and good seed times and seasons and as many victories as we desire, and we are obliged to worship them and make sacrifices, and I pray you not to say another word to their dishonour."

783 When our Captain heard that and noted the angry looks he did not refer again to the subject, but said with a cheerful manner: "It is time for your Excellency and for us to return," and Montezuma replied that it was well, but that he had to pray and offer certain sacrifices on account of the great tatacul, that is to say sin, which he had committed in allowing us to ascend his great Cue, and being the cause of our being permitted to see his gods, and of our dishonouring them by speaking evil of them, so that before he left he must pray and worship,

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

might occasionally have raised, as well as upon the chase. But |05 during this very period also, their chief divinity and subsequent principal idol, Huitzilopochtli, god of war, is reported to have ut- 776 tered these prophetic words: "And I was sent on this journey, and 787
"my office it is to carry arms, bows, arrows, and shields; war is my "chief duty, and the object of my coming. I have to look out in "all directions, and with my body, head and arms, have to do my "duty in many tribes, being on the borders and lying in wait for "many nations, to maintain and to gather them, although not gra"ciously." Proceeding to state a number of objects, subsequently given to the Méxicans in tribute, he closes as follows: "All this I "shall own and hold, for I am sent after it, it being my office, and
"I came for this purpose."[4] Imbued with a spirit of which this |74 utterance is merely a legendary form, the Mexicans made their appearance among the agricultural tribes of the valley of Mexico as a crowd of famished, but desperate, intruders, were received as such, and, after a brave resistance, compelled to take refuge in a naturally isolated spot of dry land, surrounded by swamps and marshes.[5]

In this defensive position, which the Mexicans subsequently |81 converted into the strongest one ever occupied by Indians up to the 16th century,[6] they carefully nursed and developed their war-

[4] Tezozomoc (Cap. I, p. 6). Joseph de Acosta (Historia natural y moral de las Indias, 1608. Lib. VII, chap. IV, p. 450). M. Brasseur de Bourbourg ("Popol-vuh, "Intr., p. 137 and p. 140.") intimates Huitzilopochtli to be a myth common to all the aborigines of Central America in general.

[5] The spot to which the Mexicans fled, and which subsequently became the nucleus [311] of Tenuchtitlan, and of Tlatilulco, was dry land, in the midst of canes and reeds. (Tezozomoc, cap. I, p. 8, "porque el dia que llegaron a esta laguna Mexicana, en medio "de ella estava, y tenia un sitio de tierra, y en el una peña.") Fray Géronimo de Mendieta (Historia eclesiastica Indiana," published by my most esteemed friend, Señor J. G. Icazbalceta, the learned Mexican scholar, in 1870. Lib. II, cap. XXXIV, p. 148. "Y luego se hicieron fuertes en este sitio, tomando por muralla y cerca las aguas y "emboscadas de la juncia y carrizales y matorrales de que estaba entonces poblada y "llena toda la laguna, que no hallaron el agua descubierta sino en sola una encrucijada "de agua limpia desocupada de los matorrales y carrizales, formada al manera de una "aspa de San Andrés. Y casi al medio de la encrucijada hallaron un peñasco"). Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. X, pp. 91 and 92. "En este lugar se rancharon (como decimos "en el libro de los Poblaciones) haciendo unas pobres, y pequeñas choças, rodeados "de carrizo, y Espadañas, que ellos llamas Xacalli," etc., etc. (Acosta, Lib. VII, cap. VII, p. 453. " . . . . y dividiendóse una parte y otra, por toda aquella espessura "de espadañas, y carrizales, y juncia de la laguna, commençaron á buscar por las señas "de la revelacion el lugar tan deseado.")

[6] There was, to my knowledge, but one similar position: that of Atitlan, in Guate- [171] mala. (See: Segunda Relacion por Pedro de Alvarado á Hernando Cortes, 28 July, 1524, pp. 460, 461 and 462, of Vol. I. of "Historiadores primitivos de Indias," by Don Enrique de Vedia, Madrid, 1852.) The tribe was regarded as very fierce, also.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

626 was disabled or until he voluntarily withdrew.[122] Slanderers, [689 however, were punished by the kin, having their lips cut off [682 or publicly sliced.[123] Homicide, and murder, were invariably 683 punished by death.[124]

689 Intemperance in public was free to people more than seventy years old, while if grown men below that age appeared in a drunken state (festivities excepted), their heads were shorn clean in punishment. But whenever the delinquent was a chief he was publicly degraded; and any officer was forthwith removed and relieved of his duties.[125] Women who attempted to act as [122] Gomara (Vedia I, p. 440): "no traen armas sino en la guerra, y alli averiguan sus pendencias por desafios." Bartolomé de las Casas ("Historia apologética de Indias," cap. 213 and 214. Vol. VIII of Lord Kingsborough, note XLV, p. 124). Bystanders interfered, separating the parties, if they came to blows. Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. II, p. 23), says that such strife and quarrels only occurred when they were drunk: "Y fuera de estar beodos son tan pacificos, que cuando riñen mucho se empujan uno á otro, y apenas nunca dan voces, si no es las mugeres que algunos veces riñendo dan gritos." (Cap. XIV, p. 78): "Sin rencillos ni enemistades pasan su vida." Torquemada (Lib. XII, cap. XV, pp. 306 and 309). Herrera (Dec. III, Lib. IV, cap. XVI, p. 136).

[123] Zurita ("Rapport," etc., pp. 129 and 130) speaks only of children, punished by splitting the lips for lying. This is copied by Herrera (Dec. III, Lib. IV, cap. XVI, p. 136) and Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XXX, p. 478). Velancurt (Part II, Trat. III, p. 482), however, declares this punishment to have been meted out to adults, adding: "to-day there would be many without lips, so much do they lie." Gomara ("Conquista," p. 438, Vedia I) speaks of this punishment as having been instituted by Quetzalcohuatl, and for adults as well as for children. This, attributing it to Quetzalcohuatl, is an evident error. Compare Sahagun, (Lib. III, cap. III, p. 244). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XVII, p. 480) is positive about adults. Bustamante ("Tezcoco," p. 195) says that slanderers were killed.

[124] Las Casas ("Historia Apologética," cap. 213, Kingsb: Vol. VIII, p. 123): Destos era el que mataba á otro, el cual moria por ello." Gomara (Vedia I, p. 442): "Matan al matador sin excepcion ninguna." Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXIX, p. 136): "Sentenciaban á muerte á los que cometian enormes y graves delitos, asi como á los homicidos. El que mataba á otro, moria por ello." Torquemada (Lib. XII, cap. VIII, p. 387), almost copies the preceding. Nearly all the authors agree on this point, except, according to Mr. Bancroft ("Native Races," Vol II, p. 450, note 50), Durán, who is said to assert: "that the murderer did not suffer death, but became the slave for life of the wife or relatives of the deceased." In this Durán agrees with the "Codice Ramirez." Velancurt ("Teatro," Vol. I, p. 485) says that even for murder committed in a drunken state, the culprit was killed (hung). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XVII, p. 484) briefly states that all homicide was punished with death. As to the manner of execution, it is variously stated. It would be unsafe to attempt going into details.

[778] [125] It is well known that there was an idol for the drunkards. Sahagun (Lib. I, cap. XXII, p. 46) even gives the names of thirteen "dioses del vino." According to Gregorio Garcia ("Origen de los Indios," etc. Lib. III, cap. II, §VI, p. 92, who mentions as authority Fray Esteban de Salazar, "Historia, ó Relacion de la Teologia de los Indios Mexicanos" lost in a shipwreck, 1504), they had three hundred gods of the drunkards "que de solos los borrachos tienen 300 Dioses." See also Torquemada (Lib. VI, cap. XXIX, p. 58) and others. The punishments are given by me after Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXX, pp. 139 and 140). Copied textually by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. X, p. 550). Besides these, Zurita (pp. 110-112) asserts the same, even more explicitly, and he is followed by Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XVI, p. 136). Velancurt (Vol. I, p. 485). Clavigero (Lib.

787x

drew blood. It was said: "Thus was the sun nourished."

And Seven Flower was said [to be] good and bad. As a good [sign], in certain places the scribes paid it honor and were devoted to it. They set up its image and made offerings to it. Also those women who were embroiderers and cotton thread workers first fasted for eighty days; some fasted for forty or twenty days, when penance was done. Thus they requested of it that what they undertook might be well done; [that] their embroidery or design might be a work of art well fabricated and well painted. All therefore offered incense and slew quail; and all bathed and sprinkled themselves with water, when [the fasting] had been lifted. Then the feast of the day sign, Seven Flower, was celebrated.

Auh in chicome xochitl: mjtoaia qualli, ioã ãqualli: ynic qualli ceccan vncã tlamaviztiliaia, motemachiaia, in tlacujloque, qujtlaliaia yxinela, qujtlamanjliaia: no ichoan in cioa tlãmachchiuhque, icpachiuhque, achtopa qujneçaviliaia, nappoaltica, ace vmpoaltica, cempoaltica in moçaoaia: ic qujtlaitlanjliaia, injc itla vel aizque mjmatizque, toltecatizque, vellalalizque, vellacujlozque: in jpan intlamach, intlacuilol: ic mochintin tlenamacaia, tlacotonaia: auh mochintin mãaltiaia, maujujxoaia, yn jquac neoalco, in vncan ilhujquiztililoia, chicome xochitl:

787x 782 286 785

And they said when it was not a good [day sign], that if some embroiderer broke her fasting — it was said — then she merited for herself infamy and an ill name. Thus she could only live in vice and become a harlot. For it was said the embroiderers lived in great vice and became terrible whores.

auh injc amo qualli, mitoaia, iquac intla ace tlãmachchiuhquj, ynneçaoaliz qujtlacoaia, mjtoa: vncã qujmomacevia avilquizcaiotl, avilrocaitl: injc çã ãavilnemjz, ãavienjtiz, ca mjtoa, tlaquauh avilnemja, mãaviltiaia in tiamachchiuhque,

787x 286 785 548

It was said the one who was their goddess, named Xochiquetzal, made sport of and mocked her. And she gave and thus scourged her with piles and infections.

qujlmach ichoatl inca mocaiaoaia, quiquequeloaia in inteouh catca, itoca xochiquetzal, ioan qujtemacaia, ic temotlaia, xochiciujztli, palanjliztli:

787x 286 776

But she also did well her penances, who took heed, and so then attained success, was esteemed, and gained honor for herself. In [all] places she was looked to; by the grace of the people, she lived well on earth.

auh in aqujn vel ontlamaceoa in vel monotza, ca oncã quiçaia, maviztia, momavizçotiaia, cana motztica, vel moietztica tepaltzinco in tẽc:

787x 286

Also it was said of this [day sign] that he who was born on it would perform all crafts well: he would be a good craftsman; he would plan well great works; he would constantly be prudent, if he took good heed. But if he did not take good heed, nothing resulted; he deserved nothing. He only merited the infamy with which he was defamed and the mockery with which he was mocked.

no iuhquj ipan mitoaia in aqujn ipan tlacati, moch vel qujchiouz in toltecaiotl, vel tõtoitecatiz, tlatlaneçmjliz, iõiolizmatquj iez, intla uel monotzaz: auh intlacamo vel monotza, atle onqujçaia, atle icnopil, çan iaujlqujzca, iquequeloloca in qujmomaceviaia.

And Nine Wind was said to be wholly and entirely evil. As to him who was then born, nothing could be made of his life; so nothing would be retained; he could hold nothing; nothing would be kept: nothing would appear; he could do nothing; he was incapable on earth. He was as one driven by the winds, wandering here and there. He might wish to be something, to be someone: he became only nothing. For truly so was his day sign. He might wish for public esteem — to become a mer-

Auh in chicunavi hecatl: mjtoaia, motqujtica, moch centlantica amo qualli: in aqujn ipan tlacati, atle vel muchioa yn jnemjliz, atle vel ic tlaçaloia, atle vel ic tlaana, atle vel ic tlatzicoa, atle ivelneaca, atle veli, atle veliti in tlaticpac, çan iuhqujn ecatocotinemj, avic iatinemj, conmonectia in ma itlati, in ma acati, çan atleti: ca nel iuhquj itonal, conjxtoca, ipan onmjxpoa, in ma pupuchtecati, in manoce cujcujcanjti, teaachti, tetlãtlavicalti, tecãcamanalhuj. Etc. atle veliti, çan tlaqualania, çan nẽia motlatlaõotla, mone-

X 787 And if it were a noblewoman, or only a commoner [woman], who was then born, so likewise it was her lot. She was considered as a man, esteemed as if a man; a comforter. Hence she caused others no apprehension, was not negligent, and did not dishearten others.

And also it was said that one who was born upon this [day sign], One Deer — it was told that he was exceedingly timorous; he lived thinking only of his fears; he walked with his terrors, and only lived afraid, indeed frightened to death. When he witnessed a thunder clap, or a bolt of lightning, or lightning flash — a flash of lightning — then he could not endure it. Indeed the lightning and thundering frightened him and caused him to be in terror and dread.

And so they said that sometimes, on some occasions, it happened to him; for his fear followed him and persisted with him; his fears came upon him as a judgment. For his dread came upon him. Verily, he was struck by lightning; that befell him which he feared and of which he lived in anxiety. And even if it was summer, he was still smitten by a summer flash. Also, when he bathed in the water, there he died, drowned; his eyes were torn out;[2] his finger nails were removed and torn out.

Hence was it said: "Verily, so was his lot; so was he born. Even as the deer is a great coward, just so was he, whose day sign this is, a great coward; fearful." So seldom did his kin, his parents, trouble themselves; they did nothing for him.

776 782 And also it was told that then, too, was one of the times when those known as the Goddesses descended. They made offerings to them, and then they clothed [their images] in their paper vestments and their paper adornments.

Auh intla çioapilli: anoço çã macoxelli ipan tlacatia, no iuh mahcxnale catca, teoquichtlamachti: iuhquin oquichpoui, tencotlaz, atle ic tenentlamachti, amo tenmachonj, amo tecuetlaxo.

Auh no ioan mjtoa: in aquin ipan tlacati oc maçatl: quilmach oica momauhtiaia, çan imaviz in quimattinenca, çan imauhcac in nemja, çan mamauhcanenca, vel iolmjquja, in jquac quicaquja tlatlatzinjlizzli, anoço tlavitequjlizzli, tlapetlanalizzli, tlapetlanjllotl: njman ticoniecoaia, vel quiçaviaia, quicujcujtiuetzilitia, quimaviscujtia in onotlapetlan, onotlatlatzin.

Auh iuh quitoa, in quêman, in quenmanjan çã ipan neltiaia, ca imaviz contocaia, ipã ontlamelaca, çã imaviz quitlamachiliaia, ca inemauhtil ipan oniuh, vel vitecoia, ipan muchicoaia in quimacaci, in quimamattinemj. Auh intlacanelmo xopantla, çan tonalhujteco: no ioan in jquac atlan maltia, vncan mjquja, ilaquilo, intelolococopinalo, intitlatlaxo, intococopinalo, ic mjtoa, ca nel iuhquj itonal, iuhquj ipan motlacatili: in iuhquj maçatl, cenca momauhtianj: çan no iuhquj in aquin itonal catca, vel mauhca tlacatl, mavitzoco: ic çanyca mellaquaca, in joaniolque, in jtaoan, aquê commatia.

Auh ioan mjtoa: no vncan ceppa ipan temeia, in motenecoa çioatetecu: vncan quitotlamanjliaia, ioan vncan ic quintlaquentiaia yn imamatlaquen, in imamanechichioal

2. Cf. Spanish text.

X 787 273

one in authority. Haughtily, he thought well of himself. He did not deflate himself; he did not overcome nor chastise his tongue. No one could force him to recant. He thought himself superior, better than others.

Indistinct was his speech. What did he say? He was as if stirred, and his words bubbled up and burst forth. It was as if he argued, harangued, enforced silence, and drove all people away, put them to flight, numbed them with terror, visited them with afflictions, made them shrink with fright, and assailed them with his words.

It seemed that he disgusted others, and did not inquire what they said. Wherever they may have spoken, or undertaken something, he seemed to make little of it and kick it aside. But when he had drunk nothing, he seemed to be dumb, one who whispered, fearful of people, quite frightened.

For all this he excused himself by saying: "It is because I no longer knew what I said; for I was drunk. The wine had taken effect upon me; I was overwrought."

And another drunkard was very suspicious. He misunderstood; not as things were did he hear them. Often he blamed his wife. If anyone only looked at her, he then said to him: "Why dost thou make eyes at my wife?" Then he gave rise to hatred, fury, and murder, etc. And all that which was spoken he took as applying to him. He suspected that when there was occasion for mirth, he was thereby being defamed, the object of ridicule. Without reason he belabored the people. The wine and drinking cursed him.

And if it were a woman, she simply went to her knees; she remained on her knees. No longer was she rational. She sat with legs outstretched; she remained with legs outstretched. And if she were much besotted, if she were much affected, her hair simply formed a mantle over her. She tumbled there, with hair streaming out, etc.

X 787 273 ●776

All of these kinds [of drunkenness] here mentioned, each one, showed upon and were the doing of the drunkard. It was said: "So is his rabbit. Thus was his day sign; in this way did the wine gods manifest themselves on him." And if a drunkard fell over a precipice, or else fell somewhere [else], it was said: "He was affected by the wine gods." Because in many ways the wine showed its power, aquillanj, aiac vel quitlaxolikchtia: vel moiexatoca, motepanaviltoca, aixnexquin itlatol, tlein mach quiçoa, iuhquin momoloca, iuhquin quinomolotza ytlatol, iuhquin quicuecuepotza itlatol, iuhquin móolbuia, iuhquin motitza, iuhquin cactoc quiçteteca, iuhquin tococentlaça, iuhquin tetotocaticalac, iuhquin tepópouhtitlac, iuhquin tetotoliuhtitlali, iuhquin tococotoztlali, iuhquin tecujcujiuetz, itlatol:

iuhquin tequacécepouh, iuhquin xcontetemoa, tlein quitoa: canin mach ontlatoa, canin mach ontlaana, iuhquj tlaclacxotla, iuhquin tlaquéqueça: auh in ie atle conj, iuhquin noetli iuhquin anaoatl, vel teimacazquj, vel mauhquj, ça ixquich injc mopáxia, in quiteilhuia: ca socmo njcma, in tlein njquito, ca njvintic, ca notech motlali, njtlançomalti.

Auh in aca tlaoiiquj vel ipan chicotlamati, chichicotlacaquj, amo iuh tlátlacaquj: tlpiecpa tetech quitlamja yn jciouh: in açaca çan conjeta, ie cuel quijhuia: tle ic tiquiznotza in nonamjc: vncan quipeoaltia in qualantli, in tlauelli, in nemjctilistli. Etc. Ioan moch quimocuitia, in tlein tlatolli mitoa: ioã in tlein vetzquililo, in momatica ichoatl in ica nenonozalo in vetzquililo, çan jliviz in teaoa, quiveuzcatlachichtia in vctli, in tlailli.

Auh intla çioatl: ça papachiuhtimotlalia, ça pápachica, aocmo quimati, momemelauhtimotlalia, momemelauhtica: auh intla cenca vel oiviztic, in vel oiellelacic, ça itzon quiçoentica; vncan quauhtemvetzi, itzon patlaoatoc. Etc.

In jxquitlamantli in: njcã omoteneuh, iccciaca itech neci, iccciaca itlachioal tlaoanquj, mitoa: ca iuhquj itoch, iuhquj itonal, iuhquj ic ipan mitzoa, in totochtin: ioan intla omotepexivi tlaoanquj, in anoço cana ovetz, mitoa: omotochvi: ichica in mjccã quiça itlachioal vctli, ic mitoa: centzontotochti: ipanpa ca amo çan quexquijch in jtech quiça ãqualli.

787 X
273
776

it was called the Four Hundred Rabbits; for very few did it affect favorably.

And when, it was said, the day Two Rabbit set in, then was celebrated the feast day of the principal wine god, who was called Izquitecatl. And although only he alone was named, yet at that time they remembered all the wine gods, who became the wine. Thus was Izquitecatl greatly revered. They set up his image in his temple. There they laid gifts before him; for him they sang and provided music with gourd tubes. And before him stood a stone basin, called two-rabbit basin — full, to the brim. Into the wine dipped the drinking tubes, extending from it so that those who sampled the wine stood drinking it: but only those who could drink, the old men, the old women, the intrepid warriors, the bold, the foolish, who paid the debt with their heads and their breasts. That is, they would be captured sometime when war was declared; or else on issuing forth [to battle] they would capture others and take prisoners. So [by drinking] they went about mocking death.

And the wine which they drank never came to an end; [the basin] never stood empty. The wine makers, the wine making officials, continued pouring it into [the basin]. All came assembling there where they cut the maguey, when everywhere it was the time and season for breaking into the maguey. This was because then they offered new wine. If someone for the first time broke into the maguey, he first poured the extracted material there. Thus they said he poured out wine and offered the wine-pouring to Izquitecatl; they gave him wine to drink.

But not only at this time did they pour wine; rather, always were offerings so made in his temple.

Iuan in jquac mjtoaia, moquiztza tonalli, vme tochtli: vncan illhujquiztilloia, in jmachcauh totochti: in motenoa Izquitecatl: auh macivin çan jcel motenoa, ca oncan quincemjlnamjquia, in totochti, ovcti, ic oncca mavizillloia in izquitecatl, quitlaliaia, iziptla in jeupan: vncan quitlamatjlia, quicujcalia, quitlapichilia acocotica: yoan ixpan icaca tecomjtl, ilnca vmetochtecomatl, tentimanj, petontimanj, in vetli: ipã manj piaztli, pizçotimanj, mamaiço ic conjtimanj in aquijque vmpa ontlatlapaloa: ui çan [415] ichoan in ic thoananj, in veuetque, in jlamatque ioan in iactlauelilloque, in mjvintia: in aquen tlatta, in quipopoa, yn intzontecon, yn jmelchiquiuh, quiztonequj: ca onvicoaque in quenmã, in oaalmjto iaoiol: auh oo ce onquiçativi, oahecalequiçaque ontlamatiuj: ic mtemjquiçaquequetotinenca:

auh in vetli quja, aquenman tlamja, ãquẽman cuetoc, in contecatimanj tlachiõque, tecutlachique: izquich oalacitimanj in vetlichic, yn noviian tlachicpan, tlachicoaian, ca vncan vitzmana intla aca ilicujcan otlatlapan, vncã achto quiteca in jtlachic: ic quitoaia tlatoiaoa, quijmanjlia itlatoiaoal in Izquitecatl, quitlatoievilia:

auh amo çanjio iquac, y, in tlatoiaoaia: ca çan machipa iuh tlamaneca, in ieupan.

[p. 18 is blank]

X 787 Eighth Chapter, which telleth of the fifth sign, named One Reed. And it was not a good day, [nor] those with it. It was said that those born then, if they were born in the ninth house, named Nine Crocodile — they said and it was averred that one would be a slanderer and bearer of false witness. And it was thought that this sign was the day of Quetzalcoatl. Therefore the lords and noblemen then paid their devotions and made offerings.

Inic chicuei capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, inic macujltetl machiotl, in jnoca ce acatl: auh amo qualli tonalli in jtech ca, qujlmach in aquijque vncan tlachia, intla vncan tlacatia, inic chicuacuhtetl calli, in jnoca chicunavi cipactli: qujtoaia qujlmach cenca techicaitoanj, ioan teteixpanvianj: auh qujlmach injn machiotl, ichoatl itonal in quetzalcoatl: ipampa in tlatequc, in pipilti, vncan mixtlacoaia ioan themanaia.

X 787 805 The day sign One Reed set in. With it were reckoned the evil days, those of an unfavorable time. Following it came Two Ocelot, and Three Eagle, Four Vulture, Five Motion, and Six Flint Knife. These various days were said to be evil, of an unfavorable time.

Moquetza ce acatl tonalli, ic mocempoa in amo qualli, in amo ieccan izquijlhujtl, qujtequjlitica yn ipan vme ocelotl, ioan ei quauhtli, navi cuacuauhtli, macujlli olin, chiquacen tecpatl: in jzquijtetl in tonalli mjtoaia amo qualli, amo ieccan;

X 787 It was held that One Reed was the day sign, the time, of Quetzalcoatl. For Quetzalcoatl represented the wind, and was therefore thought a god. And when the day One Reed set in, the lords and noblemen paid him great honors. They made offerings at the priests' house in the [barrio] known as Mexico.[1] For there was kept the image of Quetzalcoatl. Before him they arranged and spread offerings. Everything they then prepared for him. They placed on him his various array and paper vestments. And before him they laid out flowers, tobacco, [vessels] full of incense, and drink and food. So they said that then they dedicated and assigned the day sign to Quetzalcoatl.

● 776 778 782

qujlmach itonal cenca itonalpan in quetzalcoatl. Iehica in quetzalcoatl, i ehecatl ipan mjxtoaia, inic teteocoia: auh in jquac in moquetzaia ce acatl tonalli, cenca tlamavistilisia in tlatoque, in pipilti, themanaia in calmecac, yn jtocaiocan mexico, ca vncan pialoia in jxiptla Quetzalcoatl, izpan qujtlatequjlisia, qujtlamamacaia muchi iquac qujcencavilisia, itech qujtlalilisia, in jzquijtlamantli inechichioal, yn iamatlatequj, ioan izpan qujtequjlisia suchitl, yeel, qujcopaltemplisia ati, tlaqualli, qujmanjlia, iuh qujtoaia vncan qujtonalxia, qujtonalquechia in Quetzalcoatl.

X 787 And so they said it was an unfortunate time. He who was then born, whether nobleman or commoner, was of scant merit or deserts. Just as worthless as the wind was his life. It was swept away by the wind. As nothing were his lineage and origin. For in the time of Quetzalcoatl the wind [god] had he been born; for such was his nature. The same befell he if it was a woman.

Auh inic mjtoa: amo iecoin, in aquin ipan tlacatia pilli, anoço macoxalli, atle cenca iaxcocol, ilhujl caica, çan iuhquin ehecatl ipã povia iacmilia, ôcatocoia, atle itlaanca, inelhoaio mochioaia: ipampa in jonalpan quetzalcoatl, ôcatl otlacat, ca niman iuhcan oquiz, no iuhquj ipan mochioaia, intla çioatl,

1. The calmecac, house of priestly learning, is defined as "Lugar de Estado de la casa' y convento de sacerdotes" by Antonio Molina in El vocabulario en la organización social de los mexicanos (México: Instituto de Historia, 1949); p. 77. There were six, in the entire subpolis, probably pertaining to clans (as the term is used by Monzón): Tequixo, Huitznáhuac, Tlamatzinco, Tlilancalco, Tetzahuitl, and Mixtec (pp. 47-52).

Ninth Chapter, which telleth of the sixth sign, called One Death, and of the good fortune belonging to it. It was said to be the day sign of Tezcatlipoca. And many were the offerings and blood sacrifices with which they did him honor. And each person provided much pleasure to the slaves.

One Death set in. This was said to be a good day sign, but also somewhat bad, as will here appear in its discussion. For it was said that when this occurred, then they honored Tezcatlipoca. The lords greatly venerated [the day sign]. Each one made offerings and beheaded quail at his personal [altar] in his house and in each of the tribal quarters in the temples called tecalli.

Thus did they speak: "This one is he by whom we live, Titlacauan, master of the earth, master of the lords of the earth, who now hath his blessed day."

For everyone then showed devotion, was humbled, and sorrowed, in order that he would show them favor. And not alone did the lords thus act, but also the brave warriors, the seasoned warriors, and the wealthy, the rich, and he who was wise; for the day sign of Titlacauan had set in. They also observed the day sign and made offerings in his dwelling place in his tribal temple. For this reason they showed great devotion, for this was the time to pray for favors.

And as for its not being accounted a good and favorable time: there then was fear and dread lest this same one be wrathful and wilful. For thus did they say: "He whom he had favored and honored, and to whom he had revealed his sweetness, fragrance, and mercy, from this same one he might withdraw and remove it." Yet it was not without reason; when [the man] became vain and haughty, he disregarded and neglected what was his birthright. Still [the god] showed compassion and gave it as a gift to the one who sought him diligently and who went about weeping and sighing for his sake. So was it said that everywhere he was awaited; everywhere there was humility and sorrow before him. Nowhere was the dwelling place of the war [god]

Iniac chicuaevi capitulo: inchpa tlatua, injc chiquacentetl machiotl, in jtoca ce mjqujztli: ioan in qualli tonalli itech ca, qujlmach itonal in Tezcatlipuca: auh mjec in ventli, in nextlaoalli injc qujmaviztiliaia, ioan cenca qujpapaquiltiaia in tlatlacoti.

Moquetza ce mjqujztli: ynjn mjtoaia, qualli tonalli: auh ioan achi amo qualli, in iuh neçix nican, ipan itlatollo, ca mjtoa in jquac, y, vncan qujtonaltiaia in Tezcatlipuca, cenca tlamavizilliaia, in tlatoque, tlamanaia, tlacotonaia, ceceniaca yn jncaliticc, in jmjxcoian in cacalpulco, in ecotenecoa in teucalli, in teucalco:

iuh qujtoaia, ca ichoatl in jpal tinemj, in titlacaoan, in tlalticpaque, in tlaltecue, in axcan itonalpantzinco, ic muchi tlacatl vncan tlatemachiaia, nentlamatia, tlaocoiaia, injc qujcneliz: auh amo çanioque in tlatoque, iuh qujchioaia, y, no ichoan in tiacaoã, in tequjoaque, yoan in mocujltonoa, in motlacamatia, ioan in aquin qujmatia, ca itonal moquetza in titlacahoã, no tlaonaltiaia, tlamanaia, in jchã, in jcalpulco: ypampa injc cenca tlatemachiaia, ca vncan tlaitlanjliloia, injc teicneliz:

auh injc amo qualcan, ioccan, ipan machoia, ca vncan nentlahtiloia, ymacaxoia, injc amo çan no ie moçomaz, monenequjz, ca iuh qujtoaia, in aquin qujcnelia, in oconmaviçolti, in oixpan conqujxti, in jtzopelica, in javiiaca, in jetlaocoliliz: çan no ie conjnailia, conjquanjlia, tel amo çan nen iquac in ie ardamati, in ie cuecuenoti in aoc tle ipan tlatta, conmjxcaoaltia, in jmâceoal, ocatca, oc ie quicnoitta, connemactia, in qujtlamatstaqujlia, in jca chocatinemj, elciciuhtinemj, ic mjtoaia: noviian chialo, noviian ivicpa nentlamacho, tlaocoialo, ican vel ichan in iaotl Tezcatlipuca: çan jtlan conantinemj in jpetl, jcpal.

X 787
● 776 Tezcatlipoca: he only went withdrawing rule and power from others.

X 787 And of him who was born on the day sign One Death it was said that he would prosper and be rich, whether a nobleman or only a poor vassal. Many were his gifts. Honor came his way and rested on him when he performed well his penances and humbled himself. But if he did not do well the penances, purely by his own act he forsook and harmed his day sign.

X 787 If, at this time, someone were born, then they bathed him and gave him a name. Small children 553 performed the naming ceremony.[1] If a boy had been born, then therefore called forth [as his name] Mi-
851 quiz, or Yaotl, Cenyaotl, Necoc yaotl, Chicoyaotl, or Yaomauitl. So they placed on him a name of Tezcatlipoca. Of this one it was said: "None may wish him harm: none may wish him to die." If anyone should wish or desire his death, he would simply sicken and suddenly die.

567 At this time it was the day sign of the slaves, the wretched slaves, whose dwelling places were by the hones for sharpening and the grinding stones. None of the slave-owners could scold them, or abuse them with vile words, or call angrily or indignantly to them when they learned that the morrow would be the day sign of Tezcatlipoca. They then, first, took from them, struck off, and removed from them the wooden collars, the curved ones in which they were held and with which they went about restrained lest they flee. Then they soaped them and bathed them, and made much of and flattered them. They showed them great esteem, because, so they thought, they were his likenesses and representatives:[2] his beloved [825] sons. It was said that they were like the blue cotingas, the trupials, the precious birds of Tezcatlipoca. And those who owned slaves warned and on threat of death[3] ordered their children, youths, and growing sons, commanding them sternly and rigorously, not to chide, deal vainly with, nor strike the slaves.

Auh in aquin ipã tlacatia itonal ce mjquiztli: mjtoaia mocuiltonoz, motlamachtiz, intla pilli, anaço çan macoualtzintli, muchi inemactia, itech açia, itech pachivia, in maviçotl: iquac in tlauellamaceoa, mocnomati: auh intlacamo uellamaceoa, ca çan ynevjian conmocauilia, quimjtlacalhuja yn jtonal.

yn jquac, y, tla aca otlacat, njman caltiaia, quitocamaca, quixicvenquaqualia in pipiltotonti, intla oquichdi otlacat, ic quinotza mjquiz, anoço iaotl, ceniaotl, necoc iaotl, chicoiaotl, iaomavitl, ic quitocamanaia in Tezcatlipuca: injn mjtoaia, aiac vel quicocolia, aiac vel quimjquitlanja, intla aca quimjquitlanj, quimjquiztemach... çan iẽ in mococolia onmjctiuetzi.

Auh in jquac in catca ipan tonalli: in tlatlacoti, in tlatlacotzitzinti, in teatexatitlan, temetlatitlan innemjan: aiac vel quimaoaia, aiac vel quintenquanviaia, quintlauelnotzaia, quinoqualancanotzaia, in tlacaoaque, in oquimatque, ca muztla itonalpan iez in Tezcatlipuca: njman achto quintomaia, quitequjlia, quintlaxilia in quauhcozcatl, in coliuhquj, injc pieloia, inic ilpitinenca, injc amo cholozque: njman ic quimamoviaia, quimaltiaia, cenca quintlaçotlaia, quinxoxocoiomatia, vel quinmavizmatia, ipampa iuh quimatia, ca ixiptlaoa, ipatilloca, ytlaçopilhoan, mjtoa iuhquin iquecholhoan, içaquantotooa, itlaçototooan in Tezcatlipuca: auh in tlacaoaque, vel quinnemachtiaia, quinmjquiznaoatiaia, quintlaquauhnaoatiaia, quintepitznaoatiaia, in impilhoan, in intlazcaltilhoan, yn intlaoapaoalhoan: injc amo quimaoazque quincuecuenochichioazque, anoço quinvitequizque in tlacaoã:

1. Of this ceremony, the Spanish text reads: "vendaban a los niños, y les daban de comer, para q̃ supiesen el nombre, del que avia nacido: y le llamaban o llamar, por los dichos." Eduard Seler, in Einige Kapitel aus dem Geschichtswerk des Fray Bernardino de Sahagun (Stuttgart: Strecker und Schröder, 1927), p. 315, translates an explanatory passage from the Academia de la Historia MS: ximoan ye ic quimocuecuetza in cuauchpipilhuanti in ipan omilloque ximoan ye ic quimomaxaca in ximoan omilaxtlan[a] in ilcin yeuca auh quintlalhuia in aqui yaotl anoço xiuitl auh ximoan ye ic ximoxiuia quilhuia nimalhuia xictlamat xictlamatquaquaqua i yaotl iquac quincaquaxilia in ximoa ynic ocachi tlaxoal ic quimotaxa — daman ruft er die Knaben. Nachdem sie gewaschen sind, gibt er ihnen die Nabelschnur-Opfergabe und fragt (die Angehörigen), wie er heisst, und er nennt ihnen (die Namen) Yaotl oder Uitzil (Krieger oder Kahlkopf). Und darauch fangen sie an zu schreien und sprechen: "Kommt her, Freunde, der Nabelschnuropfer Yaotl ist ihm." Dann nachdem sie seinen Namen (der Kinder), mit dem alle er nannten rollen.

2. See Florentine Codex, Book VI, fol. 203v.

3. Quimotaxaxamatiaxtiz, the term so appears in the Nahuatl column.

1 [i.e., One Death.—Analyst]

X 787 Eleventh Chapter, which telleth of the seventh sign, named One Rain, and of the evil day signs which belonged with it. They said that those then born were sorcerers and soothsayers and demons. — And tlacatecolotl meaneth demon. — Almost all the houses belonging to this [sign] were evil and unfavorable. Only the thirteenth was good.[1]

[776]

Inic matlactli onc capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, inic chicuentetl machiotl, in jtoca ce qujavitl: ioan in amo qualli tonalli, in jtech catca: qualmach in aquijque vncan tlacatia, nanaoalti catca, ioan tetlachivianj, tlatlacatecolo: auh in tlacatecolotl, ca irhoatl qujtoznequj in Diablo, achi muchi in calli itech pouhquj, in amo qualli, in amo iectli: çanjio inic matlactetl vmey qualli.

X 787 One Rain set in, of which it was said that it was in no way a good day sign. It was full of evil, vice, misery, orphanhood, affliction, suffering, anguish, misfortune, and indigence.

Moquetza ce qujauitl: injn mjtoaia, njman amo qualli tonalli, motqujtica teuhtli, tlaçolli, icnoiotl, icnotlacaiotl, tlaciaujliztli, tlacococaviliztli, teopouhcaiotl, atle onquiçaliztli, atle oneoatinemjliztli:

X 787 776 This was because during the time of this day sign, so it was said, then descended those known as the Goddesses, inhuman ones, mockers of the people. Hence most sternly [parents] commanded their children not to go out; not to travel along the roads. They should only remain at home. Thus did they speak to them: "Go not forth. You will encounter the Princesses, for they descend and arrive upon earth." Hence the fathers regarded them with fear, lest one of [the children] might develop misshapen lips, or crossed eyes, or a hare lip, or be possessed.

ipampa in jpan, y, tonalli, iuh mjtoa: ca vncan temoia, in moteneoa cioateteo, ãtlacacemellequc, teca mocaiaoanj: ic cenca qujntlaquauhnaoatiaia, in tepilhoan, in aiac qujçaz, aiac vtli qujtocaz: çan cali onozque: iuh qujmjlhujaia maca zonqujçaca, anmotenamjctiaque, ca temo, ca tlalpan açi in çiospipiltı: ic qujntlamauhcaittiliaia in tetaoan: injc amo aca tennecujliviz, iznecujliuja, tenpatziuja, itech qujneuaz:

778 782 When this [day came], everywhere in the Goddesses' sanctuaries and temples — everywhere offerings were made. For in every single place stood a temple of Goddesses, in each neighborhood,[2] there at crossroads. They covered with white streamers each of the images which were there — five [figures] of stone, placed in a row, their faces rubbed and painted with liquid rubber. He who made a vow to them covered them at the time of their descent, at the time of their day count, on the day sign of their descent. As many of them as there were he covered with white paper streamers.

in jquac in, in noviian çioateupan, çioatrúcalli, noujian tlamanaloia, ca noviian cecenteti mãcs, in çioateucalli, cecentlaxillacalpã vncan in omaxac, tetecujtl qujmonquequentia, in vmpa catca, ymjxiptlaoan, macujteme in teme, tecpantoca, tlaoltzaoalti, moolxaubque in aquin ivicpa monetoltiaia, qujntlaquentia yn jquac in intemoia, yn jntlapoalpan, in jpan tonalli temoia, iznujteme amatetecujtl qujnquentia.

---

1. The Spanish text reads, in part: "Este que en este signo nacen, son nigromanticos, brujos, hechiceros, enhaqueros. Es de notar, que este vocablo tlacatecolotl, propiamente quiere decir, nigromantico, o brujo: inspirandoles el mal, por diablos: mas todos los otros deste signo: eran de malas disposiciones. Pero la decima casa, y la treyntadecima casa, ventajosamente I todos los signos: eran felices." See Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book XII, "The Conquest of Mexico," p. 21, ch. 1, 2, 3, nigromantic, sharpsighted, and enchantment. Depending upon the context, we have at times translated tlacatecolotl as demon.

2. Ibid., Book VIII, "Kings and Lords," p. 58, n. 13.

x 787 Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of the tenth ● 776 sign, called One Flint Knife. And it was said that it was of good fortune, and claimed that those then born were brave and became seasoned warriors. And it was said that the women then born were forceful; they were able in all things and made their goods very well. And it was said to be the day sign of Uitzilopochtli, to whom it was dedicated. His domain was war. It was said also to be the day sign of Camaxtli. And when this sign began, they observed the feast [of Uitzilopochtli]. And it was said that all the day signs were good—[all] thirteen.

Injc ompoalli ce capitulo: iechpa tlatia, injc matlactetl machiotl, in jtoca ce tecpatl: ioan quijqualli in jtonalio, auh quijn in aquijque vncan tlacatia chicaonque catca, ioan tequijuacatia: auh quijn in cioa vncan tlacatia oquijchiotlioque catca, muchi in veli catca, cenca uel quijcentiuia in jntlatequj: auh quijl itonal catca in Vitzilopuchtli, in jtech pouhquj catca, in jtequjuh catca iiauiotl, quijl no itonal in Camaxtle: auh in jquac vmpeoaia injn machiotl, quijlbujquixtiliaia, auh quijl muchi qualli catca in jaquijlbujtl, matlequjlbujtl vmei.

776 One Flint Knife set in. On this One Flint Knife,
782 when it tarried for a day, they then made offerings to Uitzilopochtli, whose day sign it was, and to Camaxtli, god of the Uexotzinca.

Moquetza ce tecpatl: inin ce tecpatl, in jquac tlacemilhujtiltiaia, vncan quijtonaltiaia, ytonalpan catca in Vitzilopuchtli, ioan in camaxtle, vexotzinca intecuh,

Thus it is said they made offerings and paid great 776 honor [to Uitzilopochtli] there at his temple, in his 782 tribal district, at the place whose name was Tlacatecco. There was his image guarded, and all his 776 array. They had it all spread out before him and laid in the sun; they offered incense and presented him[1] what were called the quetzal feather cape, the blue cotinga feather cape, the red spoonbill feather cape, the yellow parrot feather cape, and the humming bird feather cape.[2] But only after them came [825] last the no longer very precious feathers, like the white heron feather cape or the reed thrush feather cape.[3] Severally they laid all of them down, offered them separately, arranged them in rows, placed them in order, etc.

injc mjtoa: quijtonaltiaia, cenca quimaviztiliaia, in vncan ieuqan icalpulco in jtocaiocan catca tlacatecco, vncan pielcia in jxiptla in jaquijch itlatequj, much ixpan quijtequjliaia, quijtotonjaia, quijtlenamaquijliaia quijtlacotonjliaia, in moteneoa quetzalquemjtl, xiuhtotoquemjtl, tlauhquecholquemjtl, tozquemjtl, vitzitzilquemjtl, auh ça quijtoquijlia, quijtzacuja, in aocmo cenca tlaçoiviti, in iuhquj aztaquemjtl, tzanaquemjtl: muchi nononqua quijtecaia, quijtlatlamantilia, quicuecuentilia, quijvivipana. Er[a].

And all these precious capes, when they spread 782 them out, remained there a day. By doing this, it was said, they sunned them for Uitzilopochtli. And there offerings were made; there they laid out all the gifts, called fast foods. And all the good, prepared

[1]auh much ie in tlaçotilmatli ipan quijtecaia, vncan cemjlhujtia: ichoatl injc mjtoa quijtlatotonjlia in Vitzilopuchtli, ioan vncan tlamanaloia, vncan quijtecaia in jaquijch ventli, in moteneoa tlacatlaqualli: ioan in jaquijch ietli, in tlachichiualli tlaqualli, in

1. [illegible] literally could mean "they beheaded quail for him."

2. Corresponding Spanish text: "[illegible] quetzal-quemjtl, que quiere decir; capa de quetzales verdes, y resplandecientes; [illegible] xiuhtotoquemjtl, que quiere decir; capa de pheniques azules, y resplandecientes; [illegible] tozquemjtl, que quiere decir; capa de pheniques amarillos, y resplandecientes; [illegible] vitzitzilquemjtl, que quiere decir; capa de pheniques resplandecientes de colores."

3. Cf. Seler, op. cit., p. 233. In ibid., p. 168, n. 2, it is jacksbee.

787 Twenty-second Chapter, which telleth of the 776 eleventh sign, called One Monkey, and of its fortune.
753 It was said of those then born that one was a man of 784 good standing, friendly, amiable, and happy, given to music and the other arts. And it was said that at this time descended to earth those who were the "Goddesses"; and that those whom they met on the road or in paths between houses they injured and visited with sickness. And for this reason, when it was this day sign, no one could fare forth. And one who then sickened the physicians forthwith abandoned.

Inic composalli vnome capitulo, itechpa tlatoa, inic mathactetl oce machiotl, in jtoca ce oçomatli: ioan in jtonalio, quijmach in aquijque vncan tlacatia quall: iiollo catca, teicnjoan, tlaçotlaloni, papaquijnj, quijnocujtlaviaia in cujcatl, ioan in oc cequj tolreca-iotl: auh quijl in jquac oaltemoia, in aquijque cioste-teu in tlaticpac: auh quijl in aquijque quinnamjquja, in vtlica, in anoço caltzala quijtlaueliaia cocolixtli itech quijtlalia: auh ipampa in jpan in tonalli catca, aiac vel quiçaia: auh in aquin iquac mococoaia, çan njman quijnaoatiaia in titici.

787 One Monkey set in. This Monkey [day sign] they regarded as favorable.

Moquetza ce oçomatli: inin oçomatli, quijçualitaia:

776 But also they said that at that time the so-called "Princesses" or "Goddesses" descended. It was the 784 time when they were expected, the time of their arrival. At this time they looked upon the children 855 with much apprehension. They simply shut them in the houses; they did not wish them to appear at the entrances or on the road, so that [the Goddesses] would not come upon or harm them. Perhaps one of them would have twisted lips, or a shrunken mouth; or he cross-eyed or of weak vision; or his lips would quiver or quake; or he would be maddened—a devil would possess him and he would foam at the mouth; or he would have withered, twisted arms; or he lame, etc.

auh ioan quitoa, no uncan temoaia inchielpan, imaçia, in motencoaia cioapipilti, cioateteu, oncz vncã quintlamauhcaittiliaia in tepilhoau, çã quintzatzaquaia calitic, amo quimothquijtitlanja, in quiaoac, in vtlica, injc amo motenamjctiaque, quimjtlacoçque, aço aca tennecujliviz, tempetziviz, ixnecujliuja, ixvitzaliviz, iten papatlaçaz, iten viujiocaz, iollotlaueliloiiz, itech quijneoaz, tenqualacquijçaz, matzicoliuja, macopichauja, icxi quijujlanaz. Etc.

And if someone began to sicken, the physicians 776 told him that he would become dangerously sick;
753 he would not recover. For he had come upon the Princesses, and they had set upon him; it was the time of their descent and arrival when [this sickness] began. For it was [so] willed.

auh intla aca ipan opeuh mococoa, quijtcilhujaia in titici, ca tlanauiz, aocmo quijçaz, ca omotenamjcti, ipan oquijsque in cioapipilti, ca intemoian, imẽcoian in opeuh, ca oelcujloc:

And likewise it was said that if someone were of good standing, of a good day sign, and able, if at this time they injured him, they said that the Princesses had indeed willed it upon him and that he had contended with them.[1]

auh no ioan mjtoa, intla aca qualli yiello, in qualli itonal, ioan qualli itlachielix: vncan quijtlacalhujaia, quijtoaia: ca çan oqueleujque, oquijamonamjcti in cioapipilti.

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "Y si alguno que era bien dispuesto, enfermaua en aquel dia, decian: que los dioses le auian deseado, y se le auian quedado."

X 787 Twenty-fifth Chapter, which telleth of the fourteenth sign, called One Dog. This, it was said, was
● 776 a good day sign; and it was claimed that it was the day of Xiuhtecutli, whom they called Tlalxictentica.[1]
666 They observed a very great feast day for him. And at this time the rulers were elected.[2]

Injc cempoalli on macujlli capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, injc matlactetl onnavi machiotl, in jtoca ce itzcujntli: inin qujlmach qualli tonalli, ioan qujl itonal catca, in xiuhtecutli: in qujtoaia Tlalxictentica, cenca vei illujtl qujchioaia: ioan ypan motlatocaaltiaia in tlatoque.

X 787 — then set in the one named One Dog. This, they 776 said, was a good day sign. At this time, they dedicated the day to [the god of] fire, called Xiuhtecutli.
778 They formed his image there in his temple. There they made offerings to it; before it they decapitated quail and spread incense. They adorned and bedight 782 it in all manner of paper array. The fabrication [of the paper articles] was in charge of those called paper-cutters and designers. They provided it with feathers; they scattered feathers over it; provided it with various kinds of costly feathers and dispersed a variety of them over it. And they provided [the paper array] with green stones. They called the [ceremony] nextlaualli. All the food [and array of] Tlalxictentica[3] they burned before him.

Niman oalmoquetza in jtoca, ce itzcujntli: injn qujtoaia qualli tonalli, vncan qujtonaltiaia in tletl, in jtoca Xiuhtecutli: qujtlaliaia yxiptla in vmpa itcupan: vncan qujtlamanjliaia, ixpan tlacotona, copaltema, qujchichioa, qujcecencaoa, in jxqujch amatlatqujtl, inmac iecauja in moteneoaia amatecque, amatlamatque, qujviiotiaia, qujvitzetzeloa, qujnepapanjviiotia, tlaçoiujtica qujnepapanivitzetzeloa: ioan qujchachalchiuhiotia, quitocaiotia nextlaoalli, itlaqual in tlalxictentica, much ixpan qujtlatiaia:

782 And everywhere, in each family which was rich and had become wealthy, those of Pochtlan and Amantlan,[4] they made [the god] very important. Thus they did him honor: food and drink were provided. There was rejoicing. There were banquets. Very early in the morning, when it was still very early dawn, they burned the paper array. As was said, thus they fed the fire. Incense went with and accompanied [the offerings]. One basket at a time, or two baskets at a time, they cast into the fire clean, white incense. And they decapitated quail. It seemed that before the hearth, they kept fluttering and beating their wings. Their blood was scattered by their fluttering, so that the earth before the hearth was struck in various places. They spattered and poured forth their blood. Likewise they first made a libation of wine before the hearth, and later at each of the four corners of the hearth they made libations.

auh in noviian cecencalpan, in netlacamachoia, in necujltonoloia, in puchtlan, in amantlan: cenca qujveichioaia injc qujmaviztiliaia, tlatlaqualoia, aatlioaia, netlacamacho, necoanotzalo, oc ueca ioac, cenca oc tlaujzcalpan in qujtlatiaia amatl, in mjtoa ic qujtlamaca tletl, qujvicatiuh, qujtocatiuh in copalli, cecen petlacalli, ovn petlacalli in contepeoa tleco, chipaoac, iztac copalli: ioan qujncotona çoçoltin, iuhqujn tlecujlixquac tlãpatlaca, tlapapatlaca, ieço nemamacaoca, tlalli ic neujujteco tlecujlixquac qujtzitzicujtza, qujnonoquja in jmezço: ioan no achto tlecujlixquac qujtotoiaoa in vctli: auh çatepan tlecujlnacazco nauhcampaixti qujtotoiaoa:

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "Este decian: ser el signo del dios del fuego, llamado Xiuhtecutli, o Tlalxictentica."
2. Ibid.: "los señores, y principales, que eran elegidos, para regir la republica: hacian la fiesta de su eleccion."
3. Ibid.: "cerca de la mesma, quemaban las obradas de papel, y copal, diciendo: que con esto comia, dando de comer al fuego."
4. Mendoza, op. cit., pp. 50, 64, 68: calpulli of merchants, leather workers, etc.

Twenty-seventh Chapter, in which is mentioned the fifteenth sign, named One House. And it was said to be evil. It was said that the men then born were thieves, patrons of vice and sin. All which befell them was bad. And it was said that the women [then born] were very lazy and much given to sleep, and did nothing useful.

Injc cempoalli on chicome capitulo: vncan moteneoa, injc caxtoltetl machiotl, in jtoca ce calli: ioan qujl amo qualli, qujl in vncan tlacatia toqujchti, ichtecque catca, teuhtli tlaçolli qujmocujtlaviaia: mochi amo qualli in jnpan mochioaia: auh qujl in çioa cenca tlatziujnj, cenca cochinj, njman atle qualli qujchioa. 787x

—One House. This One House, they said, was a totally evil day sign, the breeding-place of vice and sin. And also, at that time, descended the so-called Goddesses; and what then came to pass hath already been told in many places. The midwives especially paid them honor; each one individually made offerings to them in her own home.

In ce calli: jnjn ce calli, qujtoaia, njman amo qualli tonalli, tlaçolli, teuhtli iiolian, ioan no ipan temoia in omoteneuhque cioateteo, auh in tlein vncan mochioaia, ie mjeccan omjto: in iehoan titici, oc cenca iehoan qujnmaujztiliaia, ceceniscа qujntlamanjliaia in jnchachan, 787x 776● 844

He who was then born, they fully expected, would thus come to a bad end: perhaps he would die in battle, or be taken captive; or perish at the crossing of the waters; or he would enter [among the foe] and be carried off. Perhaps he would be offered as a striped one in gladiatorial sacrifice, or be shot full of arrows; or his head would be burst in the fire, or he would be cast into the flames. Perhaps they would twist him in a net, or smash him, or tear out his entrails—violently tear out his entrails: or just destroy him like a water rat, pushing him under the water, spearing and stabbing him; or they would just cook him [in the steam bath].

in aqujn ipan tlacatia, cenca qujtlatenmacluiliaia, injc ohujcan qujçaz, aço iaomjqujz, axioaz, iapaniocan popoliujz, anoço calaqujz, vicoz, aço oacanaloz, oacanoz, aco cãcalioaz, aço quatlecueponjloz, aço tlepan tlaxoz, anoço qujmatlapatzcazque, quevitequjzque, anoço qujxicanazque, qujxicteteoanazque, anoço çan catoçanpolozque, catlanpapachozque, vncan qujxixilizque, tlatzotzopotztinemj, anoço çan qujtemazque, 787x

And in this way he would come to a bad end. Perchance he would commit adultery. Perhaps he would covet a woman. Perhaps he would covet another's woman. Perhaps he would eat another's food, lift his head from another's [bed]. And the woman would be his companion in death; they would break and smash both their heads. Hence were adulterers called "broken heads" or "smashed heads."

ioan injc ovican qujçaz, aço tetlanximaz, aço tetlan aqujz, aço cueitl, vipilli tepan canaz, aço tetlaqualiz, tetlan quateujz: auh in cioatl imjqujztevical iez, vmextin qujnquatepipitzinjzque, qujnquatexamanjzque, ic tocaiotilo in tetlanxinquj, quatepitzic, quatexamac: 787x 684

And so in this way he came to a bad end. Perchance he would sell himself, would eat and drink his substance, would swallow himself, would put an end to himself.[1] Discontented, nowhere did he feel tranquil. Thus he lived a thief. He robbed, he ioan injc ovican quiçaz, aço monamacaz, moquaz, mjz motoloz, motlamjz, ican avia, acan tlacaco tlamati, injc nemj, iichtequj, motlitlacuja, tetlitlatlalochtia, tetlactujcujlia, tetlatlaçaltia, tecacalxaputla, tequjqujmjliquanja, 787x

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "desdichado, que antes cualquiera, que el mesmo se sentenciaba, y consumia, y hurtaba su granjia."

X 787 Thirtieth Chapter, which telleth of the seventeenth sign, called One Water. It was said to be an evil day sign. And it was said of those then born that they rejoiced a little only at the beginning of their lives, and that they ended in evil. And it was said always to be evil when they died. And it was said to be the day sign of Chalchiuitl icue, whose feast day the water folk observed.

Injc cempoalli on matlactli capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, inic caxtolli omome machiotl, in jtoca ce atl: quilmach amo qualli tonalli: auh quijl in aquijque vncan tlacatia, çan ipeuhian in jnnemjlix achi poquja: auh injc tzonquijçaia amo qualli, auh quijlmach mochipa, amo qualli, injc mjquja: auh quijl itonal catca in chalchiuitl icue, quilhuiquixtiliaia in atlaca.

One Water. This One Water, they said, was also evil. And they said it was quite varied, of different qualities, all good or all bad.

Ce atl: injn ce atl: quitoa, amono qualli: yoan quitoa, çan chictlapantli, chictlapantica: izquich qualli, izquich amo qualli:

At this time they made offerings to the one named Chalchiuhtli icue, who represented the water. Especially did the sellers of water, the owners of boats — those who transported water with boats — and those who launched boats, made offerings to her. These formed her image; they set in place the framework [for her image] at her temple, in her tribal district.

vncan quitonaltiaia: in jtoca chalchiuhtli ycue, in jpan mjaeoaia atl: oc cenca ichoan quitlamanjliaia, yn anamacaque, in acaleque, acaltica atlacuj, yoan acalquetzque: ichoan quixiptlatiaia quitlaliaia ycoloio in jteupan, in jcalpulco.

And thus was it said to be diverse [in fortune], one which could not attain and carry with it very much good. That is to say, of the one then born, very few resulted great and fortunate at this time. For according to his deserts, his day sign, he was only all evil, completely surrounded by vice. And in evil he would go; in it he would die. Perchance somewhere he would be stoned — he would be felled by a stone; or else he would be drowned — he would perish in the water.

Auh injc mjtoa çan chictlapanquj yn amo vel macitica motquitica ic qualli, quitoznequi in aquin ipan tlacatia, çan vej quiçaia cenca çan aca in vncan quijçaia tlacnopilhujani, ca in juh ca vel inmaceoal, itonal çan muchi ãqualli in cololotica motquitica teuhtli, tlaçolli, auh amo qualli ynjc iaz, inic miquiz, aço çan cana tetepacholoz, tetica uetziz, anoço, atocoz, atlan mjquiz,

But even if, on the other hand,[1] he merited some reward, only for a miserable[2] moment, only for a short time, a very short time, and frequently for a brief space, a moment, for a time only, would he partake of his riches.[3] So of him were said the words of the talkative inhabitants, that in the world there are bad days. Sometimes one succeeded; sometimes one failed; if, in his childhood, he should suffer auh imla ça noço itla imaceoaltiz, çã cencpol, çan cuel achic, çan cuecuel achic, çan achica, çan achitonca, çã achitzinca, çan izquich cauitl in, in jxpan onquijçaz in jnecujltonol, ic ipã mjtoa, in jndatol tlalticpac tlatlatoanj, çan tatacapitz uel in tlalticpac, quẽman veli, quemmãn aveli, inda ipiltian motolinia, quin itonoco in achi moiollaliz:

1. [illegible] 2. Corresponding Spanish text: "y si algunos hiciere alguna recuenlo: algun poco tiempo, los grandes el mayor tiempo, en los cuidados la ventura."

Thirty-third Chapter, in which is mentioned the nineteenth sign, named One Eagle. It was said to be an evil day sign, and he who was then born was boastful, and brave, daring, fearing nothing and no one. And it was said that the women also were daring, of ill fame, of evil tongue, shameless, and immodest. And it was said that at this time descended the lesser Goddesses; and they did evil to the small children. Hence they did not let them go out of doors, nor did they bathe them at that time.[1]

Injc ōppōalli ōmatlactli vnsey capōtlulo: vncan motenecoa ynjc cuxtolli vnnavi ōtlachiod, yn itoca ce quauhtli: quil amo qualli in tonalli, auh in ipan tlacatia, mochachamacanj, yoā chicaoque, aiac ixco tlachia, atle ypan tlatta, atle ypā teitta: yoan quil in cihoa, ano tle ypā tlachia, yoan cenca tlaviliquixtianj, tentlaveliloque, ixquauhti, amo pinacanj: auh quil yn iquac, oaltemoia yn aquique tepitoton cihoateteu: auh quinōtlaueliaia in conetotonti, yc amo quinoalquixtiaia in qujiaoac, amono quimaltiaia yn iquac. 787x

In ce quauhtli: ynjn ce quauhtli, mjtoa amo qualli tonalli, no vncan temoia, in qujntocaiotia cihoateteu, quilmach yn juh oamjtoa ça xoxocnio, ça teiccaoan yn vncan temoia, iece cenca vellamauhtiaia, ypampa quil cenca ihjioque, tlaveleque, tetlavelique, amo elkleculque, amo icnocaque, njman aiamjquixti, ynjc teca mavltianj, yn juh oamjto quezquican: yn juh conitoa in iquac hin, njmā aiac vel petlauhtinenca in pipiltotōti, cenca malhujloia, ypampa cenca tlaquauh vncan tetech quincoaia, tennecujlocoaia, tempatzinoaia, ixnecujlocoaia, ixcatzinoaia, iacanecujlocoaia. etc. 787x 776 855

And therefore they paid them great honor there in the places where they were awaited, there in the different Goddesses' temples. In each neighborhood, in the house clusters and their vicinities, reeds were strewn and scattered; sand was sprinkled on the roads and at street crossings and crossroads — places where roads came together.

suh injc cenca qujnmavixtiliaia in vncan inchielpā yn iquicā cicihoateucalco, in tlatlazilacalpā, tetlatlazilacalloc, tetlatlazilacaltian, tlaoltzetzelolo, tlatoltzetzelolo, tlaixalhujlo yn vtlica, yn vmaxac, yn inepanivjian vtli. 776 782

One who made a vow to them that he would cover and wrap them, adorned their offerings, the paper banners of the Goddesses painted and spattered with liquid rubber. There he covered the different images of the Goddesses, as they were arranged in order. It was at midnight, just at the dividing of the night, that the making of offerings

Jn aquijn invicpa monetoltia: in qujnquentic quintlaquentic, quinchichivilia yn jancuitlaoal, in cihoatetuxid amatl, tlacoixacalli, colpeiioac, vmpa qujmoquequentia yn iaquitzme, tecpantoque, yn inixiptlaoan iocalonepantia, çan jc onxellivi, iocalli im pena tlamanililo, auh iquac mocxoa yic nepantla tonatiuh, yic tlaquelizpā auh in aquijn amo quintlaquentia, çan [778]

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "no les dexaban salir de casa, ni bañarse, al tiempo que eran dignas ropjanas."

2. Pohlmann: see "Mamacuilcho en 3 ocelotzin," p. 212.

●776 begun. And when it ceased, it was midday, when it 782 was already time to eat. And he who did not cover them only offered and arranged a little drink and food, or white incense, or coarse incense. The youths, the young unmarried warriors, the masters of the youths,[3] the guardians there at the Goddesses' temple, who watched and kept vigil for one night, kept the food as a gift, took and appropriated it to themselves.

And when silence fell, when at each place there was a cessation of offerings, then forthwith began the libations. Only in each person's home, each person's house, was it done. No more did one practise restraint: no more were there inhibitions. They made the old men and the old women drink and poured out the wine for them. So there were tearful greetings of one another and animation of one another, etc.

X787 And it was said that he who was then born, was perverted. If a man, he became a chieftain, a man-at-arms, debauched, evil, and daring. Only his exploits, his chieftainship, did he relate and make public. He considered that no one rejected him. He pretended to excel others. He respected no one. He wished others destroyed. He despised others. He became presumptuous. And then, being of ungov-ernable tongue, he interrupted people and belittled the word of others, and scoffed and grumbled at them. He rose up in rage; he constantly shook his head; he interfered in others' affairs; he pretended to know all; he praised himself. He pretended that he spoke well and truthfully. He would not be outdone in talk. He was vainglorious; he was a flatterer.
He pretended to be virtuous, but to see no virtue in others. He belittled others' words. He contradicted, denied, and twisted his own words. All his works, all corresponded to him; he merited all; all indeed became him: vice, drunkenness,[4] and corruption.
And sometimes, if he became neglectful, he was captured and imprisoned, or died in battle, etc.

It was just the same if it were a woman. She was truly of evil tongue, vile-mouthed, inhuman in speech — big-mouthed, of biting words. Her great joy, her great pleasure, was evil speaking. She was one who vituperated others, who insulted and affronted them. Like a dog, [she let] no one head her ueztinti, tlequakuiztli in cêmanaia, in centecpanaia, anoço iztac copalli, copaltzalli, in tlaqualli ichoti quimoveveniia quimocuilia, quimotechia in telpuchti, telpuchtequjoxque, yoan tiiachcacoi, in vmpa tlapiztoque cihuatzincalco, in vmpa ezioual oyntoçoque, onoçoque,

auh yn ocactiveni, yn onecacaualoc tlamanalo, ni-man ic peua I tlatlatoiaviliio, ça techachan, ça tecacalitic yn muchioa, aocac ôtemamati, aocmo onnemamacho, icholiti quintlaoaniia, quintlatoiaviliia yn vevenque, yn ilamatque, ic mochochoquintlapaloa, mellaquaoa et[a].

Auh mjmo yn aquin vncan tlacati, atlacacemelle, intla oquichtli, tlacauhti, oquichti, ôquen tlatta, ôquen tlatlatta, aiac izco tlachia, çan jioquichio, ytia-cauhio in conpopoa, yn jzco quimana, niman aiac quimotlaçalitoca, motepanaviltoca, aiac te cõmpoa, motepoloitoca, atle ontepoa, cenca itmoquixtia, yoã nimã feendacatl, vel tepãpatzoa, tepãpatzaoa, tetlidi-via, tequiquinatza, mitteua, moquaquacuecuechoa, motlãtlamachixtia, motlatlamachitoca, motlatlanixti-tia, movevellatoltoca, moieiectlatoltoca, ãmotẽpanavillanj, momamachotia, temãmachotia, moiẽiectoca, tlaiectoca, tetẽpatzlatoa, motẽtencuepa, tlatlatol-cuepa, tlatlatolmalacachoa, much ychivil, much quimopanjtia, much quimolhujtia, much vel iech muchioa in tlatlauelilocaiotl, yn ehi iujntilizti, yn ᵃaviliquizcaiotl, auh in quẽman intla otlatlatzivini vica, calaquilo, iacmjquj et[a].

Çan ie no iuhquj intla cihoatl, vel tentlavelilloc, camatlavelilloc, ahxentlacatl, temxaxacal, camatlatzcoa, cenca ipac, cenca ivelmach yn tentlauelilocaiotl, vel tepapacanj, tenovjiantocanj, tepaçotlaoani, iuhquiiauia chichi aiac vel quiiacaolinia, quiiacapeionia, yntlaca iech onaci, nimã quitlecavitiquiça, ytech mo-

3. Corresponding Spanish text: "los mozalores, de aquellos ornatos." — Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book II, "The Ceremonies," p. 102.
4. Bibliotheca in the Red Schools 101.

532
x787

[776]

[402]

[776]

— After Paso y Troncoso

56. Twelve House, Thirteen Lizard, and Ten Crocodile (Chapter 15). 57. Uitzilopochli (Chapter 17). 58, 59. Merchants (Chapter 18); 60, 61. Three Deer and bathing of child (Chapter 19). 62. Uitzilopochli (Chapter 20).

[p. 126 k]

532
X787

[776]

—After Paso y Troncoso

71, 72. One water and bathing of child (Chapter 30). 73. [Eleven] Rain (Chapter 30). 74. One Wind and Quetzalcoatl (Chapter 31). 75, 76. Thieves (Chapter 32). 77. One Eagle (Chapter 33).

[p.126 m]

532
X787
[776]

— After Paso y Troncoso

9-12. Death of the "Children" and attendant ceremonies (Chapter 33), 61-65. Visit to the recently deceased mother (Chapter 35).

[p. 126 m]

X 787
●776

Third Chapter, in which is told the omen taken as a portent when at night they heard as if someone shot iron arrows into something or as if he chopped wood; this they called the night axe.

Likewise there was an omen which was taken as and considered portentous; its name was the night axe. When it made itself heard, it was well into the night,[1] when none spoke aloud:

[799]

When the priests went forth to do penances and to lay down fir branches at their places of doing penance on mountain tops, whereaoever they all went, then it was heard that it resounded like someone chopping and splitting wood. It rang out for a great distance; much did it frighten the people. It made them faint and swoon with fear. This night axe, so we are told—it was said that it took the form of Texcatlipoca, to make sport and fun of people.

They said that he who looked upon it, one who was bold and wise, and not given to fright, of strong spirit,[2] could then hurl himself at it. He seized it and would no more give up, in order to see it. He would call to it as to a person and, indeed, hang on to it—force himself on it—as he pursued it. He followed at its back and forced it on; because thus he could catch it and see what manner of omen his was. Thus do they say, that whosoever would catch it when he saw it could with difficulty approach it; yet he pursued it and made it go everywhere; everywhere he came up to it.

When he tired it, somewhere on the road he awaited it without fear. And when now he saw it, he beheld it like a man without a head—a headless one, with neck severed at the nape, and with chest framework and belly broken open. Thus they said it was thought that that which was heard was his [split] chest framework when its halves met [like] a mouth continually opening and closing, with a sucking sound.[3]

Ic ei capitulo, vncan motenena: in tetzaujtl catca, in tetzammachoia: in jquac ioualtica qujcaquja, in juhquj aca, tlatepuzmjuja: in juhquj quauhxeloaia, in qujtoaia, ioaltepuztli.

No ioan, tetzaujtl catca, netetzaujloia, tetzammachoia: in jtoca ioaltepuztli. Iquac caquijztia, in ouellalliimjctimotecac: in aocac naouti.

In ontlamaceoato, in onacaoiatlaliito tlamacazqua: in jntlamaceqaian tepeticpac, in çaço campa ie, onuja, injc mocaquja, injc caquiztia, iuhqujn aca, tlaxeloa, quauhxeloa: cenca veca caquijzti, cenca temamauhti, teiolmjcti, teqotlauh. Inin, ioaltepuztli, iuh mjtoa, qujlmach ichoatl, ipan mjzeoaia, in tezcatlipuca: injc teca mocacaiaoaia, teca mauijtiaia, qujtoa. In aqujn qujttaia, in mjhiujntia, in jiollo qujmati, in amo momauhtianj, in tonallapaliuj, vel ic momotla: qujmomaca, aiocmo qujcaoa, injc vel qujttaz, qujtlacanotzaz, vel itech mopiloa, itech motlapaltilia, injc qujtoca: qujtepuztaoca, qujtlalochtoca, ipampa injc yel cacia: qujttaz, in quenamj itetzauh: in juh conjtoa, in aqujn vel cacia, in qujttaia: aiaxcan in vel itech puchiuj: oc qujtotoca, noujñ qujnemjtia: noujan caxitia.

Iquac in oquiciammjcti, cana otlica qujoalmuchieltia: auh in ie qujztta in ie qujztticac, iuhqujn tlacatl quechcotonquj, quechcotoctic, quechtepultic: ioan elchiqujuhtlapanquj, ellapanquj: in juh conjtoa: qujlmach ichoatl, in caquijzti, ielchiqujuh: iuhqujn ommonamjquj ommocacamapiquj, ommopipiquj, onchachaquanj.

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "el primer sueño de la noche: quando todos durmian profundamente."
2. Ibid.: "algun hombre animoso y esforçado y esmerado en la guerra."
3. Ibid.: "el pecho rompido abierto: y tenia todo para como una portezuela, que se abria, y se cerraua, haziendo en el sonido: y el cerrar de abrir: que hazian aquellos golpes, que se oyan lexos." Sun Pl. 2.

X 787
716

And of this [apparition] he to whom it appeared, whether priest or bold one, or reckless warrior, when he had succeeded in reaching and seeing it, then saw his heart. He seized it; he clutched it and took it tightly in his fist; he tore it out. So he demanded what it would give, grant, or award him — perhaps riches, perhaps the taking of captives, perhaps valor; or poverty — perhaps the hoe or the tump line. So was it said that all which it thus awarded him became his gift.[4]

And if it spoke to him, it said: "O our friend, O humming bird, O warrior. What dost thou say to me? What wilt thou have of me? Unhand me, and I shall give thee what thou wishest." At once did it then address him, calling him by his name as a man — whatever was his name — and his name as a nobleman.

And the vassal to whom it had appeared said to it: "I shall not let thee go, for I have taken thee."

Then it said to him: "Behold one thorn; I give it to thee. Leave me alone."

The brave-hearted one liked this not;[5] he thought it not well. At last he left it if it gave him three or four thorns. Thus these showed and made evident that he went skillfully to war, not going forth in vain.[6] As many [captives] would he take as it showed and gave him thorns. Thus he then received as reward all earthly happiness and contentment — flowers, tobacco, riches; capes, lip pendants, head bands.

And also it was said, and so was the common opinion and report, that whosoever could not make it talk, immediately tore and ripped out its heart. He who had cut out its heart fled from it and ran away. He buried it somewhere: he wrapped it up thoroughly and tightly, and later, when it had dawned, he looked at it, and then it showed him whether [his fortune were] good and propitious. When he saw a soft, white feather, or thorns — perchance one, or two — then it appeared that his lot would be good. But if it were not good, he saw a piece of charcoal or a rag. Thus it indicated that his reward had become only poverty and misery.

And whosoever was not of strong spirit, who was not well based — of poor foundations — the coward, Auh ie ichouel, in, yn aquja oquinnetiti: in aço tlamacaxquj, in anoço çan mihinjtia in jactiauelliac: in ypnac in ouel cacic, in ouel quijtac, njman ie quinnotilia in jiollo: quicnjnuetzi, quijtlalochaua, quinnotzoltzitzaquja, quicotonilia: ic quijtlaitlanjlia, in tlein quinnacac, in tlen quinnactia, in tlein quinnacoaltia: aço necujtonolli, aço tlamaliztli, aço oquichiztl: anoço netolinjliztli, aço victli, aço mecapalli: iuh mjtoa, ca much ie quinnacoaltiaia, inamac muchiuaia.

Auh intla ie quinotza, quijluja: Tocnjuhtze, vizitle, iaotle: tle tinechiluja, tle tinechnequjlia, xinechcaua: njmjtzmacas in tlein ticnequj: vel njman ic tenotzaia, ic quijtlacatocaiotaia, in aquja tlein iaoca, in jpiltoca.

Auh quijluja in macroilli, in oquinnotiti: amo nimjtzcaoaz, ca onjmjtzan.

Ic vncan quijluja, inca ce vizitli: njmjtzmaca, xinechcaua:

amo quicelia, amo quiuelitta, in jollochicaoac: quinjquac quicaoa, intla eci, anoço ie aauj, quimaca vizitli: ic quinzaia, quinzacaiotia, ca tlamatiuh in iaoc, amo nenquicas: inquj cacix in oquinzeuili, in oquimacac vizitli: ic much vncan, quimaccoaltia in tlaltic pac pacquijlizitli, neiollalilizitli: in xuchitl, in jiztl, in netlamachtilli: in tilmatli, in tençacatl, in tlalpilonj.

Auh yeti mjtoa, iaiuca in nenonotzalli, in tlatlatolli: in aquja amo quijtlatlaoltia, çan vel njman quicotonjlia, quijtlaçacotonjlia in ijollo: inpampa iehua, motlaloa in oquicotonjli yiollo: caua quijlaia, vel quicqiqquinjlloa, quicpitzilacatzoa: quinjquac in otlachnic quiztac, in quicentitia, intla qualli, intla iectli: in conjta: iatac ivid in molonica, anoço vizitli, aço çe, anoço vme, ic quinzaia ca qualli, in jmacozal: omichiuh. Auh intlacamo qualli, in conjta: necolli, anoço tzotzomatli, ic quinzaia, in çan icnoiotl, netolinjliztli, oquimacoaltl.

Auh in aquja, amo conca tzaallapaloj, in amo iniin, amo iniizin, in mauhcatlacatl: amo can vel

4. "Mamaitiche en 3 sahumerios" [no translation].

5. [illegible] either [illegible] or [illegible] may be read. Cf. Molina, op. cit.

6. Pinquinian: the title is omitted in the Nahuatl text.

could nowhere seize [the specter]. He only heard it, and, giving up the chase, left it in terror. He could not pursue it; he was exhausted, vexed; deadened was his body; he only went flattened on the ground; he could walk no more. So he knew that the night axe was an omen to him, only making sport and fun of him. Perchance sickness or death, or misery, slavery, and sin, [the specter] gave him when it came upon him.

cana, çanijo qujcaquj, çan icampa ontlacuecuetlaxoa, ontlacuecuechcaoa: amo vel qujtoca, çan onciammjquj, onmociauhcanequj, mjmjquj in jnacaio, ça vtlica chachapantiuh, aiocmo vel nenemj: ic qujmati in çan oqujtetzauj ioaltepuztli, çan ica onmocacaiauh, ica ommaujlti: aço cocoliztli, mjqujliztli: anoço icnoiotl, tlacujutl, tlatlculli, in oqujmacac: injc oqujmotlac.

787 X
776 ●

[p. 160 is blank]

Ninth Chapter, in which is related the omen which they regarded as a portent when an animal of strong stench, called a skunk,[1] now entered one's home or else sprayed and loosed an odor,

Likewise all regarded as an omen the skunk when it entered someone's home or there bore its young.

They said: "Now the householder will die"; because, so they said, its abode, its dwelling place, was by no means among houses, in one's home. Maize fields, meadows, maguey and cactus fields [were] its dwelling places and abodes.

Also, they supposed that it was the likeness of the demon Tezcatlipoca. And when it loosed an odor, when it loosed a foul odor at one, they said: "Tezcatlipoca breaketh wind."

And if someone tried to capture or chase it, thus it mocked and gibed him: it raised and lifted high its tail, and then, if it drew quite near one, it forthwith loosed its stench at him. Like one sprinkling, its spray appeared and was seen; like a rainbow it arose. And it penetrated one; its evil stench entered into one. With difficulty did it abandon him. So one's cape dropped—was cast aside, thrown away. [Its stench] was spread all over the area; it extended all over the region. It reached everywhere, and spread on people. So did its stink-sicken one and molest one's nose.

And they said that when it arrived, when it was smelled, one should not spit. It was believed that if one spat, his hair would whiten; it would flare brightly. Hence they severely warned the children not to spit. When its stench was smelled, they only covered their mouths.

Ic chicuenauj capitulo, vncan mjtoa: in tetzauitl in quimotetzaujaia, in jquac centetl iolquj, in cenca hijac, in jtoca Epatl: in jquac ic oncalaquj ichân, auh anoço in jquac moxixa: mjexi. 787x 825

No ioan in epatl, netetzaujloia: in jquac aca ichan calaquj, anoço vncan mopilhoatia:

quitoa, ic mjquix in chane: ipampa iuh quitovaia, ca amo inentla, amo inemja in calla, in techan: ca mjlpan, çacatla, memetla, nonopalla, in jnemjia, in jquiçaia.

No ipan quimatia, ca ixiptla in tlacatecuhtl, tezcatlipuca: auh in jquac mjexi, in teiexi, quitouia: omjex in tezcatlipuca. [176]

Auh intla aca canaxnequj, in ace quitoca: çan ic quiqueloa, ic ica mocaiaoa: cenca quiquetza, cacoquetza in jcuitlapil: auh quinjquac, intla ic uel itech onaci: njman ic quiualiexi, iuhquin aca tlaalpichia, vel neci, vel itto, in jiel: iuhquin aiauhcoçamalotl, ic moquetza: auh vel temaoa, tetechaquj in ijel, aiaxcan tecaoa: ic vetzi, ic tlaxo, ic tlaçalo in tetilma: vel centlalli moenana, centlalli manj: nouijan aci, tepan moteca, injc yiac, injc tetlachti: teiacanolocho.

Auh quitoa, in jquac in eco, mjnecuj, auel onchicha: quilmach intla aca onchichaz, quaztaliujz, comonjz: ic cenca quintlacaoaltia, in tepilhoã: injc amo onchichaazque: in jquac ineco yel: çan onmotempachoa. [827]

1. Sahagun, op. cit., Vol. IV, p. 20.

[p. 172 is blank]

A787 ●776

Eleventh Chapter, in which is told the omen from which a portent was drawn when, at night, they saw the towering men, the giants.[1]

Likewise all regarded as an omen the towering man[2] when it was seen as an apparition at night. It was said: "But all this is the disguise, the transformation, of the demon Tezcatlipoca, with all of which he maketh sport of men."

When it was thus visible to someone, he thereby held it as an omen that he would either die in war or be carried off. But one who was very bold,[3] strong of heart or spirit, would not more let [it] go. He seized it firmly in his hands and hung on to it. He demanded thorns of it, thus seeking valor and the taking of captives.[4]

And it was said that one who was of simple mind, neither prudent nor determined, when he saw it only spat or hurled dung at it. But in nothing at all would it benefit him; it only cursed him with some misery, afflicted him, smote and brought disaster on him thereby, and visited him with the digging stick and the tump line.

And [when] he who was only a coward saw an apparition, in no way did he banish his fears. Indeed, he fainted and swooned away; he no longer had saliva—the roof of his mouth was all dry; his mouth was parched. His mouth stuck fast, no longer moist. Not now was his mouth wet. With caution he withdrew, leaving its presence. He no longer wished to look at it. He fled in terror, feeling, thinking that someone would now snatch him away. In some manner he went to reach his home and rushed inside it, bursting in through its door, coming in on all fours and throwing himself with outspread arms upon those who slept.

Ie matlactli oce capítulo, vncan motemeoa in tetzaujtl: injc motetzaujaia: in jquac iovaltica, quijnjtzaia tlacaujaqoc, quijnameti.

No yoan, netetzaujloia in tlacaujiac: in jquac iovaltica motititia, mjtoa: çan ie mache ...oual, inecuepalix in tlacatecuiotl tezcatlipoca, mach ic teca mocaiaoa:

in jquac aca iuh quimottitia, ic quitetzauja in aço ie iaomjquiz, aço ic vicoa. Auh in aquin vel mjhiviñtia, in jollotlapaliuj, in tonalchícavac, aiocmo quicaoa, quitetzuhtzitzquja, itech mopiloa: quitlanjlia in vitztli, injc quitemolia oquichiotl, in tlamaliztli.

Auh mjtoa in aquin ahquimamatcaoa, in amo iolizmatquj, in amo nenonotzale: in jquac oquitac çan conchicha, anoço cuitlatl ic contepachoa: auh amo tle ic quicnelia, çan no quitelchioa, itla nesolinjlizzli ic quiteopoa, ic quimotla, ic quiueipoloa, aço vitzli, mecapalli quitititia.

Auh in aquin, çan vel mauhcatlacatl quimottitia: njman amo conieoa, in jtemamauhtilia: vel çotlaoa, iolmjquj, aocmo chiche: vel icopac tlaoaquj, icamac tlapolinj, icamac tlaçaçalia: aocmo tlapalti, aocmo tlapaltia in jcamac: çan tlamach contlalcavia, ispampa ieoa: aocmo quioalittaznequj, momauhcatlalaoa: in juh momati, ie omma aca ie quicuitiuetziz: in oquenelizin acito ichan, motlaloticalaquj, quitpetlaticalaquj in jtlatzacujl: tepan manenentical-aquj: tepan mamaçouhtiuetzi, in vncan cochioa.

---

1. See N. 5. The corresponding Spanish text translates the terms as encantajar. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 931, has the following note: "QUINAMETIN, m. pl. Los quinametes, primitivos pobladores del Anáhuac, encantaron a los antiguos, a los cuales la leyenda asigna talla de gigantes y que compusieron las ruinas del Anáhuac, en Puebla, principalmente."

2. Garibay, op. cit., pp. 310-311, n. 13: "El 'hombre largo' (tlamacuepan), o lo que parece, era una fantasma que se alargaba hasta el cielo, cosa los calabaín, o disminuía de las cosmolitas."

3. Corresponding Spanish text: "algun valiente valiente, y esforçado."

4. Ibid.: "que cada de capitanear en la guerra tomar captivos, quantos captivos le dieron."

[p. 176 is blank]

X 787
●776

Twelfth Chapter, in which is related what was another omen, whose name was "bundle of ashes."[1]

Likewise there was an omen, which was a portent to them, the "bundle of ashes." Thus was it said: "Indeed, all this is the disguise, the reappearance, the apparition of Tezcatlipoca."

When it was seen, it only went rolling, groaning, and billowing. He who saw it then held it as an omen that he would die, either in war or of some sickness;[2] or that something evil would meet and fall upon him.

Whoever was not strong and sturdy of heart, who was just a coward, if it appeared to him, only fled and ran from its presence. Then it frightened and terrified him, lest soon he die or something evil should come upon him, etc.

But he who was sturdy of heart, one who was renowned as intrepid in war, then prepared, arrayed, and bedight himself. Then he thus took counsel with himself: at night he would hunt the wizards who walk everywhere. He went in pursuit of them — on all the wide ways where they dwelt at night. He went seeking it, that perchance somewhere it would appear to him; that he might demand from it his reward, his gift — thorns.

And if now one appeared before him like this one, he sought it out and seized it; he grasped it firmly in his hands, and clung to it. Not now did he let it go; he tortured it. He said to it: "Who art thou, O rogue? Speak to me! Fail not to speak! For I have taken thee, and I shall not let thee go." For a long time he persisted in torturing it.

When it spoke to and answered him, if now he vexed it, when, perhaps, it was about to dawn and morning to break, it said to him: "Loose me now! Thou harmest me! Whatsoever thy heart wisheth, I shall give thee. What shall I give thee?" It said: "Take it. I give thee a thorn."

"I will not have it; I will not take it!"

Ic matlactli omome capitulo, vncan mjtoa: in oc centlamantli tetzaujtl catca: in jtoca catca: tlacanexqujmilli.

No yoan, tetzaujtl catca, tetetzaujaia: in tlacanexqujmjlli, iuh mjtoa: çan ie muchi ich inaoal, inecuepaliz, inenextiliz in tezcatlipoca:

in jquac itoia, çan momjmjlotiuh, qujqujnacatiuh, tehtentiuh. In aqujn qujttaia, ic qujtetzanuja, in ie mjqujz: aço iavc, anoço çan tlalmjqujz: anoce ytla, amo qualli ie qujmonamjctiz, ipan vetziz.

In aqújn amo iollochicaoac, in amo iollatlapaliuj, in çan mauhcatlacatl, intla oqujmottiti: çan ixpampa iehoa, motlaloa: vncan qujtonalcaoaltia, qujhiçavia: injc yciuhca mjqujz, anoço itla amo qualli qujmonamjctiz. etc.

Auh in aqujn, vel iollotlapaliuj: in motencoa: iaotlaueliloc, ic nomanja, ic mochichioa, ic mocencaoa: njman iuh qujmolhuja, in iooaltica, naoahtemoz, novijan nenemj: qujtotocatinemj, in jzquj vchpantli, iooalnenemj, qujtetemotinemj, in aço cana itla qujmottitia: injc qujtlanjliz itenemac, iteicneliliz vitztli.

Auh intla ie oqujmottiti in juhquj y, qujtetemoa: qujcujxiuetzi, qujtetcuhtzitzquja, itech mopiloa: aocmo qujcaoa qujtlatoltia, qujluja: ac tehoatl jn nocnc? xinechnotza, amommaca titlatoz: ca onjmjtzan, amo njnjtzcaoaz: vecauhtica qujnemjtia, in qujtlatoltia:

iquac qujnotza, qujnanqujlia intla ie caamana: in ace ipan tlathviznequjj, in ace qujtlathujltia, qujlvia: xinechcaoa ie tinechitlacoa, tlein qujnequj moiollo: njmjtznacaz, tlein tinechmacaz: qujluja, yzca njmjtznaca, ce vitztli:

amo njcia, amo njccelia

1. Cf. Ouelbey, op. cit., p. 311, n. 14. The corresponding Spanish text describes them as vnas fantasmas: que no dauan pies, ni cabeças. Las quales andauan rodando por el suelo, y dando gemidos, como soplando.

2. Ibid.: "muerte . . . o besar de su enfermedad."

X 787
●776

"What shall I do?" It offered him two, three, four [thorns].

Verily, not for them did he loose it. Later, when it gratified and satisfied him, it now said: "I give thee all prosperity. Thou shalt be honored on earth." Then he released it;[3] for in truth he had realized what his heart sought — for which he had lived sighing and in discontent, etc.

tle njcchioax, vme, Ey, nauj qujmaca:

ça nel amo ic qujcaoa: quinjquac in oquijiolpachiujti, in oquijiolpachiuhcaioti in ic qujluja: muchi njmjtzmaca in necujltonolli, titlamaviçoz in tlalticpac: yquac qujcoa: ca nel oconjttac in qujtemoa ijollo, injc oelciciuhtinenca, onentlamattinenca. Etc.

3. [illegible]

787
776

Thirteenth Chapter, in which are told the rest of the omens which showed themselves at night.

Likewise all took as an omen [what] appeared before them called "hunched shoulder," or "little maize basket." In Acolhuacan it was called "little squashed one."[1] Thus were they named.

They said that they showed themselves to men only at the latrines, the dung heaps. If someone wished to urinate, and went forth quite alone at night, when, perhaps, the moon shone or it was dark, then they appeared to him. All this now only revealed to him an omen of death. He to whom it appeared thus took it as a portent that now he would die, or something would now befall him. But if he did not so do, it only terrified him.

And thus did it look — like a little girl, indeed, quite small; a very little girl, not a bit tall — only small like a sandal, a little cooking pot; a squat dwarf, pressed down like dung. She had hair, much hair, [flowing] like a garment, a mantle of hair, hanging. Clear to her hips did her hair fall — her mantle of hair. And as she walked, she only went creeping on the surface of the ground, waddling.[2]

He to whom she appeared could not catch her. If, now, he pursued her, she only disappeared from before him; thus she only mocked him. Further off, apart, she appeared. He pursued her there, he who tried to catch her; she vanished away. So he only let her alone, in terror; she tired him out; he was defrauded.

Just so, the severed head also appeared to the people at night. To him to whom it appeared, it often made known [its presence] by suddenly springing at the calf of his leg. Or else he heard it behind him, coming rattling[3] as it took after him.

Ic matlactli omei capitulo, vncan motencoa: yn oc cequj tetzavitl, in iooaltica monextiaia.

No yoan, netetzaujkoia moteittitiaia: in jtoca cujtlapanton, anoço cintanaton: mjtoa in acolhoacan centlapachton: iuh tocaiotilo.

Qujtoa, çan vncan in neaxixaloian, in tlaçulpan moteittitiaia: intla ie aca axixmjquj, in çan icel iooaltica quiça: in aço metztona, anoço tlaiooa: iquac qujmottitia: çan ieh much ie qujnextiaia in mjqujztetzaujtl. In aqujn qujmottitia, ic qujtetzanvia in ace miquiz, anoço itla ipan ie muchioas: auh yn acanoço tlei, çan conmamauhtia:

auh injc ittoia, iuhqujn civapiltontli, çan vel tepiton, civapiltepiton: amo achi quauhtic: çan cacapanton, chachapaton, tzapaton, cujtlapachton, tzonqueme, tzotzonqueme, tzotzoquenpile: vel icujtlacaxiuhian vetzi, in jtzon, in jtzonquen: auh injc nenemj çan tlalli ixco onotiuh, pepeiocatiuh, amo vel cana in qujmottitia: intla ie qujtoca çan ixpan ompolivi, çan jc qujquelo: iene cecnj, in valmonextia: vmpa qujtoca in canaznequj ompoliuhtiuh: çan iuh commauhcacaoa, conciauhcaoa, ommonenencoa.

Çan ie no iuhquj in tzontecomatl, no moteittitia in iooaltica: in aqujn qujmottitia, çan jc qujmachitia, amo inemachpan in jcotzco cholo: anoce icampa, concaquj chachalcativitz, in qujualtoca: ic ixpampa iehoa, icampa chachalcatiuh in qujtoca.

1. Corresponding Spanish text: "una muger pequeña enana." Cf. also Sahagún (Garibay ed.), Vol. IV, p. 326: "'El cuenillo.' Ser pandeado que era ogiaro." Cuenquenuco is cuquillo (ibid., p. 332).

2. Corresponding Spanish text: "una muger pequeña enana . . . que tenía los cabellos largos: hasta la cinta, y su cabar, era como una cabezada."

3. Cf. ibid. In Molina, op. cit., however, chachalcatiuh is to could. On chachalcatiuh, see Horacio Carochi: Arte de la lengua mexicana (México: Imprenta del Museo Nacional, 1892), p. 476.

X 787 So he fled from its presence; back of him it went ●776 rattling at him as it pursued him. And if he stood, if he stopped in alarm, it also sat, and remained rattling. And if he gathered courage to seize it quickly, it only mocked him for doing so. Far did it rise when it jumped; he could not catch it. Hence, in the same manner, he let it alone in his fear; from its presence he fled, exerting all force in order to run terrified to his home.

Auh intla moquetza, motilquetza, no motlalia chachalcatinemj: auh intla omoiollochichili, injc qujcujtiuetzin çan jc qujquelloa, ueca ieoa in choloa, amo uel cana: çan no iuh conmauhcacaoa: ixpampa ieoa: iaqujch qujtoctia, injc momauhcatlaloa ichan.

X 787 Just so the dead also appeared to people. They 775 were in [funeral] wrappings, with head wrappings, and were groaning. If, somewhere, one appeared before one, it moaned at him. Only the valiant could venture toward it in order to seize it and cling to it. But then it only made sport of them: perhaps a clump of grass or a hard clod remained in their hands.
[776] Thus they quickly transformed themselves. So it was said that all this was only a disguise of Tezcatlipoca by which he mocked men. Etc.

Çan ie no iuhquj in mjcquj, no moteittitiaia: yilpitica, quaquailpitica, quiqujnacatica: in cana moteittitiaia: tequjqujnatza: çan iehoan in jollochicavaque, vel iujc motlapaloa in qujcujtiuetzi: itech mopiloa. Auh injc çan inca mocacaiaoa, aço tlachcujtl, anoço tlaquavac tetl in jmmac mocauhtiquijça: injc mocueptiuetzi: iuh mjtoa, ca çan muchi ieh, inaoal in tezcatlipuca injc teca mocacaiaoaia etc.

The omen of the linnet.[4]

X 787 The linnet is a bird like a woodpecker,[5] and far 825 into the forest is its home. And when it cried out at someone, it was taken as an omen.[6] They said: "It is not a good time that we have come; for something will spring out on us."

Tetzauitl itechpa chiqujmoli.

In chiqujmoli, ca cêntetl tototl, iuhqujn quauhchochopitli: auh veca quauhtla in jchan. Auh in iijc tepan tzatzia, netetzaujloia: qujtovzia, ca amo qualcan, in otioallaque: ca itla ipan tícholozque.

The omen of the coyote.

[776] They said it was Tezcatlipoca. Often he disguised himself as a coyote; and this coyote often intercepted men on the road. And when he did this, then was heard: "This is by no means a good time for him who goeth; perhaps thieves or robbers are somewhere on the road, or something harmful will spring out at them."

Tetzauitl itechpa in coiutl.

Qujtoaia, ca in tezcatlipuca: mjiecpa qujmonaoaltiaia in Coiutl: auh injn coiutl, mjiecpa teiaiacatzacujlia in vtlica. Auh in jquac iuh qujchioa y, njman ic mocaquj, ca amo qualcan in viloa: aço ichrecque, anoço tetlatlaçaltique, cana vtlica cate: anoço itla ipan chololoatiuh, in tecoco.

Here end the omens which the natives of New Spain took as portents.

Nican tzonquiça in tetzauitl, yn qujtzummatia, njcan nauaua españa tlaca.

---

4. Molina, op. cit.: chiquimoli pájaro; Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 514 (chiquimoli): pájaro — especie de pájaro. Sahagún (Garibay ed.), Vol. IV, p. 334: "Ave canora, cantamente parlera. . . . Dryobates scalaris baiardi."

5. Quauhchochopitli: Martín Antonio Rincón, in Rerum Mediarum Novae Hispaniae Thesaurus seu Plantarum Animalium Mineralium Medicinarum Historia ex Francisci Hernandez (Rome: Vitale Mascardi, 1651), p. 33, appendix, heads Chap. XCIV, "De Quauhchochopitli, seu Avicula ligna excoquente," and writes: "Avicula est, Mexicanae Cuauhtzintz forma, & magnitudine, plumis nigris, aut pullis, linea albis, transversim discriminibus distinctis; ventre, pectoreque, rubij colore: linguae plurimum mucro, quorum est operior pedicus. niisi in frigidis, & arboribus mortuis conjunctili petitur cuncta."

6. Corresponding Spanish text: "los bozes del pico [maggie]: quando le oyan bozear en los montados."

825 And when it appeared that indeed all the chicks
235 fell upon their backs so that they died,[27] upon this they said: "They died of filth; perchance someone came to go in among them; or looked upon them; or indeed it was the householder who slew them by filth." Because of this, they believed, indeed all the turkeys had fallen upon their backs so that they died.

Auh injc neci çan muchintin aaquetztiuj injc mjçquj tototlpipil, ic qujtoa: ca tlaçolmjquj: aço aca inpan ocalaqujco, anoço oqujmjttac, anoço aca vel chane in oqujntlaçolmjcti: ic qujmatia, in çan muchin aaquetztivi tototlme, injc mjquj.

825 It was said that also the same befell those who 235 were married. If perchance somewhere one's spouse, whether woman or man, fell into adultery, they then 837 believed that those which had fallen upon their backs or stumbled over, indeed accused him.

Quil no iuh inpan muchioa in namjqueque: in aço cana qujtlaxima inamjc, in aço cioatl, anoço toqujchtin: injc qujmati, çan qujpiqui in aaquetztivetzi, anoce cana motlavitequj.

286 Twenty-fifth Chapter, which telleth of her who wove with yarn.

When [a woman] wove with yarn perhaps a mantle, or a shift, or a skirt, which came out awry, unevenly disposed, with crooked edges, they said and it was thought that the weaver of the mantle or shift was not generous. Just like a crooked seam, perverse [would she be]; not generous.[28]

Injc cempoalli ommacujlli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa: in icpatl qujqujti.

In jcpatl, in aço tilmatli, anoço vipilli, anoço cueitl: in jquac qujqujti in chicopatilivi, in chicoviaqujxtiuh, in tennecujliuhtiuh, qujtoaia: qujlmach amo tlacaiollo yn tilmaoa, yn vipilli: çan cueciuhquj. çan tlatlaveliloc: amo tlacaiollo.

821 Twenty-sixth Chapter, which telleth of hail.

When it rained, and much hail fell, one who there [had] his maize, chili, bean, or chía field scattered ashes from the hearth out of the entrance into the courtyard. It was said that thus his maize field would not be hailed out; it was thought that thus the hail would disappear.

Injc cempoalli on chiquacen capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in tecivitl.

In jquac qujavi, in cenca tecivi: in aqujn vnca imjl, anoço ychilcuen, anoço yiecuen, ychian: tleconextli qujisoac qujoaltepeoa, itvalco: qujlmach yc amo teciviloz in jmjl, qujl ic poliui in tecivitl.

754 Twenty-seventh Chapter, which telleth of sorcerers.

● 776 At night walked demons — perchance wizards
787 and sorcerers — where they harmed one in one's home. When the householders saw them, when perhaps some [demon] so [would] harm them, they then placed an obsidian knife in water, behind the door, or in the courtyard. They laid it down at night. They said and it was believed that there the demons and sorcerers would look at their reflections when they would harm one, or there would be death, or sickness would come upon the people.

Injc cempoalli on chicome capitulo, yntechpa tlatoa in tlatlavipuchti.

In iooaltica nemj tlatlacateculo: aço nanaoalti, tlavipuchtin in canjn ontepoloa in techan: in oqujmjttaque in aço itla ic qujnpoloa in chaneque: njman atlan conteca ytztli puertatitlan, anoço itoalco qujmana in iooaltica, qujtoaia: qujlmach vncan onmotezcavia in tlatlacateculo, yn tlavipuchtin in tepoloa: aço mjcoaz, anoce cocoliztli tepan muchioaz.

27. Corresponding Spanish text: "los pollos se cayan muertos, los ponen arriba: y esto, llaman tlaçolmjqui."

28. Corresponding Spanish text: "es perverso, en que la tela, se parecen biscornuada." Cuerauaço, in Simeon, op. cit., is to make a false seam.

At once they fled; nevermore would they come to harm one when they had seen the obsidian knife resting in the water.

Ic njman choloa, aiocmo ceppa tepolotivi: in jquac oqujttaque itztli, atlan onoc. 754 776 789

Twenty-eighth Chapter, which telleth of the gnawed leavings of a mouse.

Injc cempoalli on chicuei capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in qujmjchin ytentlacaoal. 825

Whatsoever a mouse had gnawed none might eat. It was said that he who ate what a mouse had left would be falsely accused. For it was said that the mouse came to steal it; he came to eat it in stealth. Wherefore no one might eat gnawed leavings of a mouse. Likewise it was said of it that he who ate the gnawed leavings of a mouse would be accused falsely of some sort of story or of that which might be missing.[29]

In qujmjchin in çaço tlein qujqua: aiac vel qujqualiaia, qujlmach in aqujn qujqualia yn q'caoa qujmjchin, itech tlatlamjz, ca mjtoa: oqujchtequjco in qujmjchin, oqujchtacaqua. Ipampa y, in aiac vel qujqualiaia in itentlacaoal qujmjchin. No yuh ipan mjtoz: in aqujn qujqua itentlacaoal qujmjchin, itech tlatlamjz, in çaço tlein tlatolli, anoço in tlein poliviz.

Twenty-ninth Chapter, which telleth of nails.

Injc cempoalli on chicunavi capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in jztitl. 826 776

It was said that, when nails were pared, they cast them into the water. It was thought that this was because the water dog[30] would make good [nails] grow out — not broken; they would be sound. For when it drew someone into the water, [the water-dog] tore away his nails and eyes.

Qujlmach in tozti, in jquac motetequja, atlan contepeoaia, qujlmach ipampa: in iehoatl avitzotl, qualli qujxoaltiz: amo papatzaoaz, qualli vez. Ipampa: in jquac aqujn qujlaqujaia, qujqujxtiliaia in jzti, ioan ixtelolo.

Thirtieth Chapter, which telleth of sneezing.

Injc cempoalli ommatlactli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in acucholiztli. 827

When someone sneezed, they said, in times past: "Someone speaketh of me; someone saith well of me." Or they said: "Someone speaketh ill of me." Or they said: "Some people discuss me." It was thought that they made it evident, and knew, when they sneezed, that someone far away mentioned them.

In jquac aca acuchoa, qujtoaia in ie vecauh: aqujn nechitoa, aqujn nechteneoa: anoce qujtoaia: aqujn nêchicoitoa, anoçe qujtoa: aqujque in noca mononotza. Qujl iehoatl qujnezcaiotiaia, iehoatl ic qujmatia: in jquac acuchoa, in aca canapa veca qujnteneoa.

Thirty-first Chapter, which telleth of small children.

Injc cempoalli ommatlactli oce capitulo, ȳtechpa tlatoa in pipiltotonti. 853

When small children still lay in the cradle and something was eaten or drunk,[31] first they placed it upon [their] foreheads.[32] It was said that in this way [the child] would not hiccough or be afflicted by what he ate or drank.

In iehoantin in pipiltotonti: in jquac yn oc coçolco onoque: in jquac tlaqualo, anoço itla mjz, achto ijxquac contlaliaia, qujlmach ic amo tzitzicunoz, amo motolinjz in tlein moqua, anoço mj.

29. Corresponding Spanish text: "de harto, o de adulterio, o de otra cosa."

30. Axitzod: Seler, in Collected Works, Vol. IV, 2. 21, refers to it as a spectral water animal or sprite "which drew men down into the water and ate off the nails and hair of innocent men" (cuang Sahagún, XI, cap. 4, § 2, and V, App., cap. 29). Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 66 (ahuizote), calls it monstruo o perro del agua (Lastra Ichina).

31. Corresponding Spanish text: "quando comjan, o bevian en presencia de algun niño."

32. Ibid.: "en la boca."

1:Vaillant A/5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

CHAPTER VI

THE MAN AND THE TRIBE

In which are set forth the basic ideas of Aztec education, government, law and social customs

642 618 THE SOCIAL ORGANIZATION of the Aztec tribes was in theory completely democratic. An individual was a member of a family which, in turn, belonged to a cluster of families or a clan.* Theoretically twenty of these clans made up a tribe, each of them regulating its own affairs but, in matters of tribal importance, joining with the others in a council composed of all the leaders. The council appointed one chief to control civil and religious affairs and usually a second for war. Originally designed for simple farming communities and presumably of an antiquity dating back to Middle Culture times, this organization later ramified into the governmental complexity of a populous and highly complicated city-state.[1]

844 The working of a community is best illustrated by the position of the individual in it, a process which is described in the third part of the Codex Mendoza. Immediately a child was born it was washed and swaddled by a midwife. Since 777 the gods governed the fate of man on earth, the parents con- 787 sulted a priest who looked in the tonalamatl,† or book of

*The term clan is used to mean a tribal division without connotation of male or female descent.

†To'-na-la-matl.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

fate, to see if the day of birth was lucky or unlucky. Four 787 777 days later the child's family held a feast both to celebrate the birth and to name the child. If the day of birth proved 553
to be unlucky, custom sanctioned a religious fiction where- 777 by the naming ceremony was postponed to a more favorable period. At the feast the guests sprinkled food and pulque 553
over the sacred fire, which had been kindled at the ac- 776 couchement as an offering to the Fire God, the Old God, whose cult originated in the time of the Middle Cultures. The child, if a boy, was shown toy weapons and tools 553 which the parents placed in his hands, guiding them in the motions of use. If the child were a girl the parents made her pretend to weave and spin with toy instruments. A name, that badge of identity so important to man, was given to the child at this time. A boy was often named for the date of his birth, One Reed, Two Flower, Seven Deer, or for an animal, like "Nezahualcoyotl" (Hungry Coyote), or for an ancestor, like "Montezuma the Younger," or for some event at the time of birth. Often the day name was given with an alternative animal title. Girls' names frequently were compounded with the word for flower, xochitl.

Education began after weaning in the third year. Its pur- [862] pose was to induct the child into the techniques and obliga- 861 tions of adult life as promptly as possible. A world in which handwork is universal offers a child a chance to participate in adult activities far earlier than in our heavily mechanized culture. Fathers supervised the training of sons, and mothers instructed their daughters. Up to six years of age the children listened to frequently repeated homilies and advice, learned the uses of the household implements and performed minor household chores.[2]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

tribe. They elaborated cult ritual and so instilled the realization of the power and proximity of the gods into the minds of the people that even their arts were dedicated chiefly to religious expression. The complicated astronomic and mathematical computations that kept the solar and religious calendars in harmony with the passage of the seasons were also the province of the priesthood. The priests arrayed the dancers, who, depicting mythological events, performed a type of mass drama. Aztec life under hierarchical direction became a pattern of rhythmic ritual, and this continued ceremony served the more firmly to establish the priests as interpreters of the divine order. One has the impression that the priests never overtly showed their temporal power. Situated as they were, with the instruments for interpreting the divine will in their own hands, they had to follow the exactions of ritual far more exigently than did the masses. Were one to choose a single word to describe Aztec government, it would be theocracy. The gods ruled; the priests interpreted and interposed, and the people obeyed, not the priests, but the rhythm of action whereby the gods lived. (See Plate 58, middle.)

At the core of the religion stood the calendar, which was arranged in two divisions: a ritualistic succession of days, the tonalpohualli (Table XIII–XVI), and a solar calendar (Table XVII), divided into eighteen twenty-day months and a five-day unlucky period, in which the months' names related to crops and indicated the agricultural origin of this time count. A combination of the two systems permitted the numbering of years, which were counted not on an infinite scale, as with us, but in terms of a fifty-two-year cycle.[8]

The tonalpohualli, sometimes erroneously referred to as [text continues on p. 190. - Analyst]

The five remaining days of the year, which are the four last of January and the first of February, they named Nemontemi, which meaneth barren days. And they regarded them as unlucky and of evil fortune. There is conjecture that when they pierced the boys' and girls' ears, which was every four years, they set aside six days of Nemontemi, and it is the same as the bissextile which we observe every four years.

A los cinco dias restantes del año que son los quatro vltimos de Enero y el primero de hebrero llamauan Nemontemi; que quiere dezir dias valdios: y tenjanlos por aziagos y de mala fortuna: ay conjectura que quando agujerauan las orejas a los njños y njñas que era de quatro en quatro años, echauan seys dias de Nenontemj y es lo mjsmo del bisexto que nosotros hazemos de quatro en quatro años.

796x 777 [805] [304]

Chapter 19

These five days they held as of evil fortune and unlucky. They said that those who were born in them had evil outcomes in all their affairs, and were poor and wretched. They named them Nemo. If they were men, they named them Nemoquich; if it was a woman, they named her Nenciuatl. They dared do nothing in these days, because they were unlucky. Especially did they abstain from quarreling, because they said that those who quarreled in these days always remained with that custom. They held as a bad omen stumbling in these days.

These aforementioned feasts were fixed, and were always observed within the month, or a day or two ahead. Other feasts they had [which were] movable, which were celebrated during the course of the twenty signs, which made a round in two hundred and sixty days. And hence these movable feasts, in a year, fell one in one month, and another in another, and always varied.

Capi. 19.

1 A Estos cinco dias tenjan por malafor- A 28
2 b tunados y aziagos: dezian que los que b 29
3 c en ellos nacian tenjan malos successos c 30
4 d en todas sus cosas, y eran pobres y mi- d 31
seros llamauanlos Nemo, si eran hombres llamauanlos Nenoquich, y si era muger llamauala Nencioatl, no osauan hazer nada en estos dias por ser malafortunados: especialmente se abstenjan de reñjr: porque dezian que los que reñjan en estos dias se quedauã siempre con aquella costumbre tenjan por mal aguero tropeçar en estos dias.

Estas fiestas dichas eran fixas que siempre se haziã dentro del mes o vn dia o dos adelante: Otras fiestas tenjan moujbles que se hazian por el curso de los veinte signos: los quales hazian vn circulo en dozientos y sesenta dias: y por tanto estas fiestas moujbles vn año cayan en vn mes y otro en otro y siempre variauan.

[551] [578] [787]

Of the Movable Feasts

The first movable feast was celebrated in honor of the sun, in the sign which is named ce ocelotl, in the fourth house, which is named naui ollin. On this feast they offered, to the image of the sun, quail, and they offered incense. And at noon they slew captives before it in honor of the sun. On this same day, all drew blood from their ears—children and those who were grown—in honor of the sun, and they offered it that blood.

De las fiestas moujbles.

La primera fiesta moujble se çelebraua a honrra del sol en el signo que se llama ce ocelutl, en la quarta casa que se llama naolin: en esta fiesta ofrecian a la ymagen del sol codornjzes y incensauan: y en el medio matauã capituos delante della a honrra del sol. En este mesmo dia se sangrauan todos de las orejas chicos y grãdes a hõrra del sol y le ofrecian aquella sangre.

796x [776] [785]

The Second Movable Feast

In this same sign, in the seventh house, all the painters and the seamstresses celebrated a feast. They

La segunda fiesta moujble.

En este mjsmo signo en la septima casa haziã fiesta todos los pintores, y las labrãderas ayunauã quarẽta

785 796x 463

In this house[1] which was like a monastery, was the image of Quetzalcoatl. On this day they adorned it with rich ornaments and placed before it offerings of perfumes and food. They said this was the sign of Quetzalcoatl.

terio, estaua la ymagen de quetzalcoatl: Este dia la 796 x adereçauan con ricos ornamentos, y ofrecian delante della perfumes, y comida: dezian que este era el [778] signo de quetzalcoatl.

The Seventh Movable Feast

In the sign which was called ce miquiztli, in the first house, the lords and leading men celebrated a great feast to Tezcatlipoca, who was the great god. They said that this was his sign. Since all of them had their shrines in their houses, where they kept the images of this god and of many others, on this day they decorated this image and offered it perfumes, flowers, and food, and sacrificed quail before it, tearing off their heads. This not only the lords and leading men did, but all the people to whose attention this festival came; and the same was done in the tribal temples and on all the pyramids. All prayed, and besought of this god that he grant them favors, for [it was thought] that he was almighty.

La septima fiesta moujble.

En el signo que se llamaua ce mjquiztli: en la primera casa: hazian gran fiesta, los señores y principales a Tezcatlibuca, que era el gran dios, dezian que este era su sino, como todos ellos, tenjan sus oratorios en [778] sus casas: donde tenjan las ymagines deste dios, y de muchos otros: en este dia, componjan esta ymagen, y ofrecianla perfumes, y flores y comida: y sacrificauan codornizes delante della arrancandolas la cabeça.
Esto no solamente lo hazian los señores, y principales: pero toda la gẽte, a cuya noticia venja esta fiesta, y lo mismo se hazia, en los calpules, y en todos los cues: todos orauan, y demandauan a este dios que les hiziesse mercedes: pues que el era todopoderoso.

The Eighth Movable Feast

In the sign which was called ce quiauitl, in the first house, they celebrated a feast to the goddesses whom they named Ciuapipilti. These, they said, were the women who died in first childbed. They said that they became goddesses and that they dwelt in the house of the sun; and that when this sign reigned, they came down to the earth and afflicted with various sicknesses those whom they met outside of their houses. And hence, in these days, they dared not go out of their houses. They had shrines built in honor of these goddesses in all the suburbs where two streets [crossed], which they called ciuateocalli, or by another name, ciuateopan. In these shrines they had the images of the goddesses, and on these days they adorned them with papers which they called amatetenuitl. On this feast of these goddesses they slew in their honor those condemned to death for some crime, who were in the jails.

La octaua fiesta moujble

En el signo, que se llamaua, ce qujauitl: en la pri- [776] mera casa, hazian fiesta, a las diosas que llamauan Cioapipilti: estas dezian que eran las mugeres que murian del primero parto, dezian que se hazian diosas, y que morauan en la casa del sol, y que quãdo reynaua este sino, decendian a la tierra, y herian con diuersas emfermedades, a los que topauã fuera de sus casas. Y por esto en estos dias, no osauan salir de sus casas. Tenjan edificados oratorios, a honrra [784] destas diosas: en todos los barrios donde auja dos calles: los quales llamauan cioateucalli, o por otro [778] nombre cioateupan: en estos oratorios, tenjan las ymagines destas diosas: y en estos dias las adornauan con papeles, que llamauan amateteujtl. En esta fiesta, destas diosas matauan a su honrra los condenados a muerte por algun delicto, que estauan en las carceles.

The Ninth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce quiauitl, in the fourth house (which was called naui ecatl), because this house was very unlucky they slew in it the malefactors who were imprisoned. And likewise the lord had a number of slaves slain as a superstition. And the merchants and traders made a show or demonstration of the jewels in which they dealt, bringing them forth so that all might see them. And afterwards, at night, La nona fiesta moujble.

En el signo llamado ce qujauitl: en la quarta casa [681] que se llamaua nauhecatl, por ser esta casa muy mal- 777 afortunado, matauan en ella los malhechores, que estauan presos. Y tambien el señor hazia matar algunos esclauos, por via de supersticion: y los mercaderes, y tratantes hazian alarde o demostracion de las [463] joyas, en que trataua, sacandolas, para que las viessen todos: y despues a la noche, comjan, y beujan, to-

[1] [the calmecac. — Analyst]

The Thirteenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they called ce itzcuintli, [which] they said was the sign of fire, they held a great festival in honor of Xiuhtecutli, god of fire. In it they offered him much copal [incense] and many quail. They arrayed his image in many kinds of papers and with many rich adornments. Among the rich and powerful, they celebrated a great feast in honor of the fire, in their own houses; they held dinners and banquets in honor of the fire. In this same sign they held elections of lords and consuls, and in the fourth house of this sign they enacted the formalities of their elections, feasts, dances, and gift [giving]. After these feasts, they forthwith proclaimed war against their foes.

La trezena fiesta mouible.

En el signo que llamauan ce jtzcujntli: dezian que era el signo del fuego: hazian gran fiesta a honrra de xiuhtecutli, dios del fuego: en ella le ofrecian mucho copal, y muchas codornizes: componjan su ymagen, con muchas maneras de papeles, y con muchos ornamentos ricos: entre las personas ricas y poderosas, hazian gran fiesta, a honrra del fuego, en sus mjsmas casas, hazian combites, y vanquetes, a honrra del fuego. En este mjsmo signo: hazian la election de los señores y consules, y en la quarta casa deste sino: hazian la solẽnjdad, de sus electiones, combites, y areytos, y dones. Despues destas fiestas apregonauan luego la guerra contra sus enemigos.

796x [314] [289 778] [565] [666 431] 721

The Fourteenth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce atl, in the first house of this sign, they celebrated a feast to the goddess of water, named Chalchiuhtli icue. All those who dealt in water celebrated the festival—those who sold water, as well as those who fished, and those who gained other livelihoods which there are in the water. These arrayed her image and laid offerings before her, and revered her in the house called calpulli.

La catorzena fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce atl: en la primera casa deste signo, hazian fiesta, a la diosa del agua llamada chalchiuhtli ycue: hazian la fiesta, todos los que trataua en el agua: ansi vendiendo el agua, como pescando, como haziendo otras gragerias, que a, en el agua. Estos componjan su ymagen, y la ofrecian, y reuerenciauan, en la casa llamada Calpulli.

[776] [463]

The Fifteenth Common Movable Feast

The lords, leading men, nobles, and rich merchants, when a son or daughter was born to them, paid much heed to the sign, the day, and the hour in which he was born. And of this they forthwith set out to inform the judicial astrologers, and to ask as to the good fortune or ill of the child who was born. And if the sign in which he was born was propitious, they had him baptized at once; and if it was adverse they sought the most favorable house of that sign [in which] to baptize him. When they baptized him, they banqueted the kinsmen and friends, so that they would be present at the baptism, and then they gave food and drink to all the guests, and also to the children of the whole suburb. They baptized him at sunrise in the house of his father. The midwife baptized him, uttering many prayers and performing much ceremony over the child. This [same] feast they also observe today in the baptism of their children, as to feasting, eating, and drinking.

La quinta decima fiesta mouible comũ.

Los señores, y principales, nobles, y mercaderes, ricos quando les nacia algun hijo o hija; tenjan gran cuẽta con el signo en que nacia; y el dia, y la hora en que nacia: y desto yuan luego a ynformar a los astrologos, judiciarios: y a preguntar por la fortuna buena o mala de la criatura que nacia. Y si el signo, en que nacia era prospero, luego le hazian baptizar, y si era aduerso buscauan la mas prospera casa de aquel signo para le batizar. Quando le batizauan, combidauan a los parientes, y amigos: para que se hallassen presentes al batismo: y entonce dauan comjda, y beujda, a todos los presentes, y tambien a los njños, de todo el barrio: baptizauanle, a la salida del sol, en casa de su padre, baptizauale la partera, diziendo muchas oraciones: y haziendo mucha cerimonja sobre la criatura. Esta fiesta, tambien la vian agora, en los baptismos de sus hijos, en quanto al combidar, y comer, y beuer.

777● 787 565 852 [759]

The Sixteenth Movable Feast

As soon as the parents saw that their son was of La sexta decima fiesta mouible.

Desque los padres vian que su hijo era de edad para

584

584 age to marry, they spoke to him of their wish to seek a wife for him. And he replied, thanking them for this solicitude which they showed in marrying him. Then they addressed the leading man who had charge of all the young men, whom they called telpochtlato, and they told him that they wished their son to marry, since [the son] held doing so to be good. For this they held a great feast for him and for all the young men whom he had in his care; and for this they held conversation with him, after having given food and drink to him and to all those whom he had [412] in his charge. And at the beginning of the conversation they laid before him an axe for cutting lumber or firewood. This axe was a sign that that young man took his leave, now, of the company of the other young men; for they wished him to marry. And thus the telpochtlato departed content. After this the relatives decided, among themselves, upon the woman whom they were to give [to the son], and summoned the marriage-makers, who were some old, honored women, that they might go to speak with the parents of the young woman. [The marriage-makers] went two or three times, and spoke, and returned with the reply. During this time, the relatives of the young woman spoke among themselves, and, having decided to give her to him, they gave their consent to ● [777] the marriage-makers. After this they sought a day of good fortune, of a sign of good disposition [among] which were acatl, oçomatli, cipactli, quauhtli. Having chosen one of these signs, the parents of the young man made known to the parents of the young woman the day on which the marriage should be performed, and then began to prepare the necessary articles for [276] the wedding—[those] to eat and to drink, as well as such [things] as capes, smoke tubes, and flowers.

585 This done, they summoned the leading men and all the other people whom they wanted for the wedding. After the feast and [after] many speeches and ceremonies, those acting for the young man came at about nightfall to take the young woman. They car- [482 313] ried her, with great solemnity, upon the back of a matron, and with many pine torches burning in two rows before her. Many people surrounded her, behind and ahead, until they brought her to the house of the parents of the young man. Having brought her [372] to the house of the young man, they set them both by the hearth, which they always had in the middle of a hall, full of fire. And the woman was at the left hand of the man. Then the mother of the young man casarse, hablauanle en que le querian buscar su muger: y el respondia, haziendoles gracias, por aquel cuydado, que tomauan de casarle: luego hablauan al principal que tenja cargo de todos los mancebos, que ellos llamauan Telpuchtlato: y dezianle como querian casar su hijo, que lo tuujesse por bueno: y para esto hazianle vn combite a el, y a todos los mancebos, que tenja a su cargo, y para esto le hazian vna platica, despues de auerle dado de comer, y de beuer a el y a todos los que tenja a su cargo: y en principio de la platica, ponjanle delante vna hacha de cortar madera o leña. Esta hacha era señal que aquel mancebo se despedia ya de la companja de los otros mancebos: porque le querian casar, y ansi el telpuchtlato yua contento. Despues desto determjnauan entre si los parientes la muger, que le aujan de dar, y llamauan a las casamenteras, que eran vnas viejas honrradas, para que fuessen a hablar a los padres de la moça, yuan dos, o tres vezes, y hablauan, y bolujan con la respuesta. En este tiempo los parientes de la moça se hablauan, y concertandose de darsela, dauan el si, a las casamenteras. Despues desto buscauan vn dia bien afortunado, de algun signo, bien acondicionado, quales eran acatl, oçumatli, cipactli, quauhtli, aujendo escogido alguno destos signos: los padres del moço hazian saber a los padres de la moça el dia en que auja de hazerse el matrimonjo, y luego començauan a aperejar las cosas necessarias, para las bodas, assi de comer como de beuer, como de mantas, y cañas de humo, y flores. Esto hecho conbidauan a los principales, y toda la otra gente, que ellos querian para las bodas. Despues del combite, y de muchas platicas, y cerimonjas: venjan los de la parte del moço a lleuar a la moça de par de noche, lleuauanla con gran solennjdad, a cuestas de vna matrona, y con muchas hachas de teas encẽdidas, en dos rencles delante della, yua rodeada della mucha gente, detras y delante, hasta que la llegauan a la casa de los padres del moço: llegada a la casa del moço, ponjanlos ambos, junto al hogar, que siempre le tenjan, en medio de vna sala, lleno de fuego, y la muger estaua, a la mano izquierda del varon: luego la madre del mancebo, vestia vn vipil muy galano a su nuera, y ponjale junto a sus pies vnas naoas muy labradas: y la madre de la moça, cubria cõ vna manta, muy galana a su yerno, y atauasela sobre el hombro, y ponjale vn maxtli, muy labrado, a los pies. Hecho esto, vnas viejas, que se llaman titici, atauan la esqujna de la manta del moço con la falda del vipil de la moça. Assi se concluya el

X796 Twentieth Chapter, which telleth of the feast and blood sacrifices which they made on the first day [805] [and] month, which was named, and which they called, Atl caualo or Quauitl eua.[1]

Quauitl eua: This day came, and when it was this [month], a feast was then celebrated for the Tlalocs.

[202] Everywhere on mountain tops, blood sacrifices[2] were made and sacrificial banners were hung. Blood sacrifices were made at Tepetzinco, or there in the very gulf of the lake at a place called Pantitlan.

[789] At this place they left consecrated papers[3] and set up long poles called cuenmantli, by means of which would come to pass greenness, sprouting, and growth.

[777 827] And there they took children, known as "human banners"[4]—those who had two cowlicks of hair and whose day signs were favorable. They were sought everywhere, and bought. It was said: "These are precious blood-offerings. [The rain gods] receive them with rejoicing; they wish for them; they are thus satisfied and given contentment." With them, the rains were sought; rain was asked.

And everywhere, in the houses, in each home, in each of the quarters where the young warriors were trained, and in each tribal temple, everywhere they [202 314 289] erected the slender green poles; on them, they placed white paper flags dotted with large and small drops of liquid rubber.[5]

Jnic 20. capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn ilhuitl, yoan in nextlaoalizzli: in quichioaia, yn ipan vel ic cemilhuitl metztli; in qujtocaiotiaia, in qujtoaia atl caoalo anoço quauitl eoa.

Quauitl eoa, ynin ilhuitl quiçaia: auh yn iquac y, vncan ilhujqujxtililoia in tlaloque:

nextlaoaloia, in noujan tepeticpac, yoã neteteuhtiloia, onnextlaoaloia, in tepetzinco, anoço vmpa in vel aytia, ytocaiocan pantitla:

vmpa concaoaia in teteujtl, yoan vmpa conquetzaia quauitl, moteneoa cuenmantli, viujtlatztic, çan itech iectiuh yn icelica, yn itzmolinca, yzcallo.

Yoan vmpa qujmóncaoaia pipiltxitzinti, in moteneoaia tlacateteuhti: ichoãtin in vntecuezcomeque, in qualli intonal: noujan temoloia, patiiotiloia: mitoaia, ca ichoantin vellaçonextlaoalti, vel qujnpaccacelia qujnnequj, ic vellamati, ic vellamachtilo, ynjc in ca qujiauhtlatlanjoa, quijauhtlatlano.

Auh yn novian calpan, in techachan: yoan in tetelpuchcalco, in cacalpulco, noujian qujquetzaia, matlaquauhpitzaoac, tzonjoquauitl, itech qujtlatlaliaia amateteujtl, vltica tlaulchipinilli, tlavlchachapatztli.

1. Sahagún, in the corresponding Spanish text, observes that Quauitleua is the term used by the Mexicans. Cf. Manuel Orozco y Berra: Historia antigua y de la conquista de México (Mexico: Tipografia de Gonzalo A. Esteva, 1880), Vol. II, p. 36: "Xilomanaliztli,—Atlacahualco,—Cuahuitleua,—Cihuailhuitl. Xilomanaliztli, ofrenda de xilosl ó plores; nombre usado por los de Tlaxcalla. Cuahuitleua, quemazon de los árboles; nombre perteneciente á lugares fuera de México. Atlcahualco ó Atlacahualco, nombre admitido por los mexicanos; segun el P. Leon, detencion de las aguas, y es la interpretación de todos que más nos satisface. Cihuailhuitl, fiesta de la mujer. El símbolo religioso es la imágen de Tláloc y un árbol reverdeciendo, con el agua entre las raices." Cf. also Francisco J. Clavijero: Historia antigua de México (México: Editorial Porrúa, S. A., 1945), Vol. II, pp. 401-2: ". . . el primer mes, cuyo nombre Atcahualco o Atlacahualco, significa la cesación del agua, pues en el mes de marzo cesan las lluvias del invierno en los países septentrionales, en donde tuvo origen el calendario mexicano o tolteca. La llamaban también Quauhtleua, lo que significa la regeneración de los árboles, que se verifica en este tiempo en los países fríos. Los tlaxcaltecas llamaban a este mes Xilomanaliztli, esto es, oblación de las mazorcas de maiz, porque en él ofrecían a sus dioses las del año corrido, para ayudar la siembra que por este tiempo comenzaban a hacer en los lugares altos."

Angel María Garibay K. in "Relación breve de las fiestas de los dioses, Fray Bernardino de Sahagún" (Tlalocan, Vol. II), p. 291, translates cuahuitl eua as palo se alza. Eduard Seler, in Einige Kapitel aus dem Geschichtswerk des Fray Bernardino de Sahagun aus dem Aztekischen uebersetzt uberarbeitet (Cecelie Seler-Sachs, Walter Lehmann, Walter Krickeberg, eds.; Stuttgart: Stecker und Schroeder, 1927), Vol. I, p. 55, translates the name as die Baume erheben sich (machen sich auf dem Weg).

2. Nezzlaoaloa. Seler rather commonly renders forms of this word in terms of payment of a debt rather than of a sacrifice. Cf. izdaua in Alonso de Molina: Vocabulario de la lengua mexicana (Julio Platzmann, ed.; Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1880), and in Rémi Siméon: Dictionnaire de la langue nahuatl ou mexicaine (Paris: Imprimerie Nationale, 1885). In Collected Works (Cambridge, Mass.: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1939), Vol. II, Pt. 4, p. 13, Seler says: "The child sacrifices to the rain god were called nezzlaoalli 'the debt paid.'"

3. Garibay (op. cit., p. 292) translates teteuujl as tiras sagradas.

4. In loc. cit., Garibay renders tlacateteuhti as tiras humanas and makes it clear (Nahuatl sermons No. 4) that the term refers to the children who died. Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 55) refers to them as Menschen-Opferstreifen (Opferpapiere in Menschengestalt). They may actually have been paper streamers surmounted by a representation of a human head, and have symbolized the children who died. See illustration (Seler: op. cit., p. 60) from the Biblioteca del Palacio MS.

5. See Note 3. Sahagún, in the corresponding Spanish text, refers to "unos papeles, llenos de gotas de oli o los quales papeles llamauan amatetenal." Tlaulchachapatztli; cf. chachapani, in Molina (op. cit.).

X 796 each [of the old men] a bowl of wine, or a gourd for each, or a small earthenware jar for each; quite 274 freely and purely of their own accord they brought with them the wine, pouring it into a large earthenware vessel. And the old men sat drinking wine and refreshing themselves, not, [however,] becoming drunk.

çan in iollocopa, çan in iollotlamati, in concaoa vetli, qujoaltecatimanj apazco: auh tlaoãtoque in vevetque, texcalcevitoque, amo ivinti:

Enough of this.

ie izqujch.

X 796 For when were ended these twenty days of Izcalli, thereupon set in the five days of nemontemi, or nenontemi, which are not counted.[9] And the nemontemi were feared and held in awe. None commanded others, none quarreled [with others]. And if any, at this time, disputed with others, it was said they would always do thus. And he who was born at this time they named Nemo. They said: "It hath been said that [he hath] no day sign. No reward is his; he will live in misery. He will live in poverty upon the earth."

Auh in onqujz y, cempoalli Izcalli, njmã ie ic oalmotlalia in macujlilhujtl in nemõtemj, anoço nenontemj, acampouhquj: Auh in nemontemj, vel imacaxxoia, mauhcaittoia, aiac teaoaia, aiac maoaia: auh in aca vncã teaoa, qujlmach cenqujcuj. Auh in aqujn vncan tlacati: qujtocaiotiaia. Nemo: qujtoaia, qujlmach atle ilhujl, atle imaceoal muchioa, qujhiovitiremjz, vmpa onqujztinemjz in tlalticpac.

[55] 777

And during [the month of] Izcalli, in the first, second, and third years, nothing [in addition] was done. But on the fourth year, a great [festival] was observed. At that time died those [adorned as] Izcoçauhqui, the impersonators of Xiuhtecutli—ceremonially bathed ones. Sometimes many died; sometimes not many.

Auh in jpan jn Jzcalli: injc ce xivitl, yoan ic oxivitl, yoan iquexivitl, atle muchioai : auh qujn ic nauhxivitl in moveichioa, qujniquac mjquja in Ixcoçauhque, in jxiptlaoan Xiuhtecutli: tlaaltilti, in quẽmã mjequjntin in mjquja, in quemã amo mjequjnti.

And upon the morrow, on the morning of [the feast of] Izcalli, the bathed ones entered the sand. They brought them into the sand there at Tzonmolco. All the women carried all their womanly array, and the men carried all their array (as hath been told elsewhere). And they carried for them their paper adornment; it went upon a wooden globe.

[293]

Auh in ie iuh muztla, in ie oallatvj Izcalli: in tlaaltilti, onxalaqui, qujmonxalaquja in vmpa tzommolco: in cioa muchi qujtquj, in jxqujch incioatlatquj: yoan in oqujchtin, muchi qujtquj in jxqujch intlatlatquj (in juh omjto cecnj): auh in jmamatlatquj, muchi qujmjtqujlia: quauhtzontapaioltica ieietiuh.

And when they brought them there, thereupon they arrayed them, [so that] all were ornamented. They put upon them their paper array. And when all were prepared and arrayed even as Izcoçauhqui was arrayed, and the women adorned also in the same manner, thereupon all climbed up to [the Temple of] Tzonmolco, in rows. And when they came reaching there, they circled about the offering stone. Then once again all came down, likewise walking in rows.

Auh in oqujmonaxitiq̃, njman ie ic qujnchichioa, techichioalo, qujmonaaquja in jxqujch imamatlatquj. Auh in ontecencaoaloc: auh injc muchichioa, ivin muchichioa Ixcoçauhquj: auh in cioa, çan ie no ivin muchichioa: njmã ie ic tleco in tzommolco, tecpantivi: auh in vmpan vetzito: njmã ie ic qujoaliaoaloa in techcatl: njmã ic no ceppa, oaltemo, no motecpãtivitze.

And when they came down, thereupon they took them to the tribal temple, and then took apart [the paper vestments], and put [the victims] in a house and guarded them well. And they fastened the men

Auh in otemoco njmã ie ic qujnvica in calpulco, mec qujnxixitinja, vncan mocencaltilia, vel q'npipia: in oqujchtin qujnxillãmecaiotia, in jquac maxixa qujntitilinjtivi. Auh in oacic iooalnepantla: njmã ic until the rosy dawn, when dawn would break and the morning would redden—when the swallow would sing.

9. Seler (op. cit., p. 236) refers to the "Nenontemi (unnützen Tage) die für nichts gerechnet werden"; i.e., they were dedicated to no god. One meaning of the verb nemi, however, is to rest.

And when dawn broke, thereupon all bestirred themselves, and até and drank. Thereupon the old men of the tribal temple and the singers sat in the courtyard to sing for them. And they walked carrying the small children upon their backs. And [a child who was] a little larger his uncle and aunt came grasping by the hand. There they made him dance; they went through dance movements. And when the sun hung low, after noon, then all gathered at the Tezcacoac. Here the dance and song proceeded—the songs, in all, spreading a sound as of the crashing of waves.

And then began the giving of wine. Everyone carried his wine, and brought it there. Among themselves, all took it and offered it, in earthen jars—all continually giving [it to others], giving and taking in return. Here they gave the wine to all the small children—those who were grown and those yet lying in the cradle, moistening food [in the wine] for them. Verily, everyone already mature was drunk; in truth, all showed that they had drunk wine.

None showed awe [of the wine] as it foamed; none [thought it] precious as it gleamed. It fell to the ground; the wine ran like water.[3]

And they carried their drinking vessels, called tzicuiltecomatl, [which had] three legs and, on four sides, had handles.

With ruddy faces, crying out, short of breath, with glazed eyes, all mingled with one another; there were disputes; all circled and milled about. Becoming more intense, all crowded and pressed together, elbowing each other. All took one another by the hands; they were bemused. Embracing one another firmly, [thus] all entered their homes.

Thus one said: "The wine feast hath verily been observed; for the children have drunk wine."

And thus ended and concluded Izcalli. Then came to reign the Nemontemi—five days which had no day-names, which were no longer counted, which were not reckoned in the [day] count. Greatly were they feared and held in awe.

For they were ill-omened and of no use. Nothing was done [during those days]. They were ill-fated, of ill-fortune. For in them was no reward or merit—

queniman tlatviz, in quenman tlatlavilotleoaz, in quenmã tlatoz cujcujtzcatl. 796*

Auh in otlatvic, njmã ie ic tlatlacivi, tlatlaqualo, aatlioa: njmã ie ic motlalia in vevetque calpoleque, cujcanjme, in jtoalco in qujncujcatiaia, vncã qujnmamatinemj in pipiltotonti: auh in ie achi qualton imatitech cantinemj in jtla, yoàn iavi, vncan qujtotia, tlaiiauhtinemj: auh in ie achi tlaca in vmmopilo tonatiuh, vncan oalcenqujxoa in tezcacoac: vncã mocenmana in netotilizti, in cujqujztli, cepã caoantimomana, xxxamacatimanj in cujcatl: 852 [535] [533]

Auh vncã peoa in nemaco, in temaco vctli, muchi tlacatl yioc vmpa qujtquj, vmpa qujvica, tetlan tlaano, apiloltica, vncan netech nemaco nepanotl nemamaco, necuecuepililo, necuecuepcaiotililo, vncan qujntlaoãtia in jxqujchtin pipiltotonti in ie achi qualtoton, yoan in oc coçolco onoque, çan qujntlapaloltiaia, vel muchi tlacatl ivinti in ie veveitlaca, vel neixmanalo in tlaoano: 273 796* 852 amo nemauhtilo, iuhqujn tlapopoçoca, amo tlaçotli iuhqujn tlapepetlaca, tlalpã aci, iuhqujn atl nemja vctli, yoan intlaoancax qujtquja, itoca tzicujltecomatl: ei icxi, nauhcampa nacace, [415] iuhqujn tlaichichiliui, iuhqujn tlaçomoca, iuhqujn tlacica, iuhqujn tlaixmetzivi, tlaixnelivi, neixnanamjco, tlaixmalacachivi, tlaixmoiaoa, iuhqujn nexoxocolo, nepopotzolo nequequeçalo, netotopeoalo nematitech neaano, neaanalo, neçecenquetzalo, nececenmacho, nequechnaoalotiuh in cacalacoa techachan:

ic mjtoa ca nel ilhujo in vctli, ca pillaoano.

Auh injc ontzonqujça, injc ontlamj Izcalli: njmã oalmotlalia, oalmotema in Nemontemj: macujlilhujtl in aoctle itoca tonalli, in aocmo vmpovi, in aocmo vmpouhquj cenca imacazoia, cenca mauhcaittoia: 777 796* 805 ichica ca çan nẽqujzquj, vncã nenenqujxtilo, atle vnqujxoa, nenencolo, nenenencolo: ichica ca atle vncan ca ilhujlli, mãceoalli, can vncan icnoiotl, neto-

3. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 24.

only misery, poverty, vanity, misfortune, and a life of woe.[4]

And if one were born at that time he was looked upon with fear; he was shunned. And if he were a man, they named him Nemon, Nentlacatl, Nenquizqui. Nowhere was he counted; he was not a man. And if it were a woman, [they named her] Nenciuatl.

And when [these days came], nothing was done; the palaces and courts were empty; no suits were judged. All stayed at home. None swept with brooms; they only fanned [the dust] with a fan, or a turkey quill, or with the wing of a bird; or they beat and cleaned with a cloak.

And no one might then quarrel; [for] this was strongly forbidden to people; it was severely forbidden to them. They were charged that none might wrangle. Neither might one sleep during the day. [If so,] it was said: "[So] shalt thou always."

Nor should anyone fall, or trip, or stumble. All walked softly. And to one who stumbled, they said: "Thou hast the Nemontemi; so shalt thou be. Be thou careful."

And whosoever then took sick and was ill, [of him] everyone said: "He hath sickened. Never more will he rise; no more may he have hope. That he will recover there is no hope." No longer had they hope for him.

And if one yet escaped [death], neither would any pay heed to him nor speak to him. It was said: "For it is only that he by whose grace we live hath acted and determined of his own will."

None, therefore, were comforted nor moved. His kin forgot him and laid him on the ground. No more might he be able to leave, to some degree get up [again], and take nourishment. For the setting in of the Nemontemi was terrifying.

For he had no day sign; he had no name; wherefore no one might, in truth, practice medicine and heal one, nor read the meaning of the days. For verily the days were not numbered; they had no count in all these four days.

linjliztli, nenquizcaiotl, nenquiçaliztli, ãoneoatinemjliztli.

Auh in aquin vncan tlacatia, cenca tlamauhcaittililoia, tlatẽmachililoia: auh intla oquichtli quitocaiotiaia Nemõ, nentlacatl, nenquizqui, acan ompouhqui acã, ompovi nenoquich. Auh intla cioatl: Nencioatl.

Auh in iquac y, atle aioaia, çan cactimãca in tecpan inteccali, amo tecutlatoloia, çan calonooaia; aiac tlachpanaia, ochpaoaztica: çan tlaiecapeviloia, ecaceoaztica, anoço totolmamaztica, totolaavitztica, anoço tlavivitequja, tlapopovaia tilmatica:

yoan aiac vel vncan maoaia, cenca tetlacaoaltiloia, cẽca tetlaquauhnaoatiloia, tetepitznaoatiloia, tecocoltiloia injc aiac maoaz: ano ac cemjlhujcochia: vncan teilhujloia. Centicujz:

ano ac vel motlavitequja, moticujnjaia, motepotlamjaia; nematca, nenemoaia: auh in aquin motepotlamjaia: quilhujaia. Otimonemovi, ocenticcujc, ma ximjmati.

Auh in aquin ipan y, cocoliztli quicuja mococooaia: muchi tlacatl quitoaia, Concocolizcuj, aocmo quiçaz. aocmo motemachiz, in aço patiz, aocmo teumeiolloti, aocmo itech ca netemachilli:

auh intla aca oc maquiça, aoc ac itlamatian aoc ac itlatoaian: mjtoa. Ca ça oicnotlama, in jpalnemoanj, ça oquimonomavili, oquimoioculili:

aocmo iuh catca teiollo, ca oica netlapaloloc, neellaquaoaloc, oquixcauhque injoziolque, ca oiquitecaque: aocmo iuhcan quixooaiã inon oquẽteltzin, meoatiquetz, inon oihiio quicuje, ca temauhti in jpan opeuh ilhujtl Nemõtemj:

ca atle itonal, ca atle itoca: ipampa aiac vel vncã ticitoca, tepatia, tetlapovia: ca nel amo vmpouhquj, atle ipoaallo in jzquilhujtl navilhujtl.

4. The Tovar Calendar (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 36) adds that people did not gather at the temple, and that the priests performed no sacrifices nor other customary acts.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

Eighteenth Chapter, in which it is told how they chose those who would govern.

The ruler was thus given office and chosen. The lords assembled and deliberated as to whom they would set in office and choose to be ruler. In the same manner assembled the old men and the seasoned warriors, brave warriors, men [at arms], and the leaders of the youths; lords; and keepers of the gods; fire priests—the long-haired ones.[1] All were gathered there at the great palace, the residence of the ruler, in order to consult and choose him who was to be ruler. They cast votes for all the princes who were sons of lords; men [at arms]; brave warriors, experienced in war, who shrank not from the enemy;[2] who knew not wine—who were not drunkards, who became not stupefied;[3] the prudent, able, wise; of sound and righteous rearing and upbringing; who spoke well and were obedient, benevolent, discreet, and intelligent.

And when were settled the deliberations and choosing, they were as one [in their] accord. When a certain prince was chosen and given the charge of being ruler, then also were raised to their office and chosen those who were to help him, the [four] princes who would be by his side; who would be his lords. They were invested with, and given, the titles Tlacochcalcatl, Uitznauatlailotlac, Pochtecatlailotlac, and Ticociauacatl.

When this was done, when the choosing was settled, then was determined on what good day sign would be installed those who had been elected—the ruler and the lords. Then the command was given when there would be a meeting, and all the noblemen were commanded then to come to assemble in the courtyard of the Temple of Uitzilopochtli.

Injc caxtolli omej capitulo: ipan mjtoa, in quenjn 643 qujnpepenaia, in aqujque tlatocatizque.

In tlatoanj, injc ixquetzaloia, inic pepenaloia, mocentlaliaia, mononotzaia, in tecutlatoque, injc qujxquetzaia, injc qujpepenaia, in aqujn tlatoanj iez çan no iuhquj mocentlaliaia in achcacauhtli ioan tequjoaque, tiacahoan, oqujchtin, ioan tiachcauh tlatoque, ioã teupixque tlenamacaque, papaoaque, ixqujchtin mocentlaliaia in vncan vei tecpan tlatocan, injc mononotzaia, injc qujpepenaia in ac iehoatl tlatocatiz, qujnteneoaia in jxqujchtin tlaçopipilti, in tlatoque impilhoan, in oqujchti, in tiacaoan in iac matinj, in amo qujtlaçotla in jntzontecõ, in jmelch qujuh, in amo qujximati in vctli, in amo tlaoanaq in amo qujmotequjtia mjxitl, tlapatl, in mjmatinj, in mozcalianj, in tlamatinj, in qualli iectli inezcaliliz, inneoapaoaliz, in vellatoa, in vellacaquj, in tetlaçotlanj, in jxe in iollo. [577]

Auh in jcoac in omocencauh nenonotzaliztli, tla- 643 pepenaliztli, in ocentet tlatolli, in ac iehoatl tlaçopilli 644 in oanoc, in oixquetzaloc in tlatoanj iez: njman no iquac ixquetzalo, pepenalo in qujpaleujzque, in jtlan iezque in tlaçopipilti, in jtecutlatocahoan iezque: motecutlalia, motocamaca tlacochcalcatl, vitznaoatlailotlac pochtecatlailotlac, ticociaoacatl:

in ie iuhquj in omocencauh tlapepenaliztli, njman nenonotzalo, tlein qualli cemjlhujtonalli in jpan tlalilozque, in opepenaloque: in tlatoanj ioan in tecutlatoque, ic tenaoatilo in jqujn cenqujxooaz: ioan naoatilo in jxqujchtin pipilti, injc cenquiçaqujuj in jitoalco vitzilopuchtli: [777]

1. Cf. corresponding Spanish text: "juntaronse los ancianos que llamauan Teuculatoque: y tambien los viejos del pueblo, que llamauan achcacauhti; y tambien los capitanes soldados viejos de la guerra, que llamauan tiamiqueque: y otros capitanes que eran principales, en las casas de la guerra: y tambien los sacerdotes, que llamauan Tlenamacaque, o papaoaque."

Papaoaque: cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., III, Appendix, cap. ii. In Bernardino de Sahagún: Histoire générale des choses de la Nouvelle-Espagne (D. Jourdanet and Rémi Simeon, trs.; Paris: G. Masson, 1880), p. 533, n. 2, the term is thus explained: "'Ceux qui ont les cheveux tombant en touffe sur les oreilles'; singulier papaoa, formé du mahuanil papatli, chevelure longue et en désordre."

2. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 114.

3. Mjxitl, tlapatl: see Chap. 17, n. 10, supra.

643 that the ruler and the lords ate; only once a day did 644 they eat.

783 And at night, when midnight arrived, the ruler
785 and the lords arose, covered with the fasting capes. And they took up their incense ladles and cotton bags filled with incense, and maguey spines; and they were shod in their foam sandals. And these keepers of the gods, the long-haired ones, took them in their midst—they took them above, to [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli, to offer blood at midnight. And they offered incense; there they cast incense before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli.

In the same manner they came down. They went in order. The keepers of the gods, the long-haired ones, took them in their midst, with their faces veiled in fasting capes designed with bones. When they had descended, then they went to bathe—the ruler and the lords. Thus did they do penance at night.

For four days they fasted, with faces veiled in fasting capes. And for as many days, at noon, they offered incense before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli. Likewise, for as many nights, at midnight, they offered incense and made blood offerings before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli, and they bathed themselves.

THIRD PARAGRAPH, in which it is related how they ended the penance, and took the ruler to the courtyard of the palace; and the others they took to their homes.

And after this, when the four days and four nights were ended during which the ruler and lords had fasted and done penance—at that time the ruler came forth, that they might escort him there to the great palace, the ruler's residence. And also at that time the lords entered their homes.

[77] And when this had come to pass, then the ruler chose a propitious day on which the ruler's feast might be observed. He commanded all the majordomos to accord others and give them all capes, and costly devices, and shields.

643 FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which it is told how 527 the ruler made summons to a feast.
648 Then he bade to a feast those from every city. He asked to the banquet the ruler of Michoacan, and the ruler of Cuextlan, and the ruler of Metztitlan, and the lords of the Totonac country, and the lords of Tlaxcala, and the ruler of Cholula, and the lords

Auh iioaltica, in jcoac ioalnepantla oaçic, meoa in tlatoanj, ioan in tecutlatoque, ic ommotlapachoa in neçaoalquachtli: ioan concuj in jntlema ioan icpaxiquipilli in vncan temj copalli, ioan vitztli, ioan conmocactia in jmpoçolcac: auh in iehoantin tẽupixque papaoaque, qujntlacoaantiuj, in qujujca, icpac vitzilopuchtli, injc ommjço ioualnepantla, ioan ontlenamaca oncopaltema, in jxpan vitzilopuchtli.

çan no iuj oaltemo tecpantiujtze, qujntlacoaana in teupixque papaoaque, ic ixtlapachiuhtiuj in neçaoalquachtli omjcallo, in ooaltemoçue, njman ic huj in maltizque, in tlatoanj, ioã tecutlatoque, injc iooaltica tlamaceoaia, naujlhujtl in moçaoaia ic ixqujmjliuhticatca in neçaoalquachtli, auh izqujlhujtl in nepãtla tonatiuh, in ontlenamacaia ixpan vitzilopuchtli: çan no izqujioal, in ioalnepantla tlenamacaia, ioan onmjçoa in jxpan vitzilopuchtli, ioan maltiaia.

INJC EY PARRAPHO: ipan mjtoa, in quenjn qujtzonqujxtiaia tlamaçeoaliztli, ioan qujujcaia in tlatoanj, in tecpan itoalco: ioã in oc cequjntin qujnujcaia in jnchan.

Auh in ie iuhquj in otzonqujz naujlhujtl, ioan nauhioal, in oonmoçauh, in ontlamaçeuh tlatoanj, ioan tecutlatoque, qujnjcoac qujça in tlatoanj, injc concaoa in vmpa vei tecpan tlatocan. Auh in tecutlatoque, qujn no icoac calaquj in jnchan.

Auh in ie iuhquj: njman ic qujpepena in tlatoanj, in qualli tonalli, in jpan motlatocapacaz, qujnnaoatia, in jxqujchtin calpixque, in jxqujch tilmatli, ioan tlaçotlanquj tlaujztli, ioan chimalli, in qujtetlauhtiz, in qujtemacaz.

INJC NAUJ PARRAPHO, vncan mjtoa, in quenjn qujchioaia tecoanotzaliztli, in iehoatl tlatoanj.

Niman ic tecuanotza, in noujian altepetl ipan, qujcoanotza in mjchoacan tlatoanj, ioan cuextlan tlatoanj, ioan metztitlan tlatoanj, ioan totonacapan tlatoque, ioan tlaxcallan tlatoque, ioan cholollan tlatoanj, ioan uexotzinco tlatoque, ioan tenjtla tla-

APPENDIX OF THE FOURTH BOOK, IN THE SPANISH VERNACULAR, WHICH IS JUSTIFICATION IN DEFENSE OF THE TRUTH CONTAINED HEREIN.

APENDIZ DEL QUARTO LIBRO EN ROMÃCE Y ES VNA APPOLOGIA EN DEFENSION DA LA VERDAD QUE EN EL SE CONTIENE.

805 Because some have been deceived, and the delusion even today endureth, concerning certain [systems of] counting which these natives used in days of old, I consider it helpful to place here an explanation of three kinds of counting [systems] which they used and in some places still use.

The first count is the division of the year into its months. The fact is that they divided the year into eighteen parts, and to each part they gave twenty days. These may be called months. Thus their year had eighteen months, which comprised three hundred and sixty days. The five left over to make a full year are not counted: rather, they called them idle [177] and unlucky days, because to no god were they dedicated. The purpose for which they established this division was that they dedicated each month or [period of] twenty days to a god, and during each they held celebrations and made sacrifices; except that in two of the months they celebrated the feasts of four gods, [in each] assigning ten days to one and another ten to the other. And so, although there were eighteen months, the feasts celebrated in them were twenty. This count is called a calendar in which all the days of the year are dedicated to the gods except the five which, as is told, they considered idle and of evil fortune. This count, which is the calendar these natives had had from time immemorial, has nothing to do with the other two counts which will now be described.

805 212 The second count which these natives used is called the year-count, because [by it] they counted a certain number of years in the following way. They had four characters placed in four positions with respect to a circle. One of these characters they called Ce acatl, meaning One Reed. This character was represented as a green reed, and, with reference to the circle, was to the east. The second character they called Ce tecpatl, meaning One Flint Knife. [It was] made in the manner of a lance head, half of it blood-stained. This was placed to the north with Porque algunos se an engañado, y aun todavia dura el engaño, cerca de ciertas cuentas, que estos naturales vsauan antiguamente: tengo por cosa prouechosa poner aquj, la declaracion de tres maneras de cuentas, que vsauan, y avn en algunas partes las vsan.

Es la primera cuenta, la division del año por sus meses. Es el caso que ellos repartian el año, en deziocho partes, y a cada parte, le dauan veinte dias; estos se pueden llamar meses: de manera, que su año tenja deziocho meses: los quales contienen trezientos y setenta [sic] dias, y los cinco que sobran, para ser año cumplido, no entran en cuenta, sino llamauanlos dias baldios, y aziagos, porque a ninguno dios eran dedicados. El fin a que enderecauan [sic] esta diuision es, que cada mes o cada veinte dias, los dedicauan a un dios, y en ellos le hazian fiestas, y sacrificios, excepto que en dos meses hazian fiesta a quatro dioses, dedicando diez dias a al vno, y otros diez al otro. Y assi con ser los meses deziocho, las fiestas que celebrauan en ellos eran veinte. Esta cuenta, se llama calendario, donde todos los dias del año, se dedican a los dioses, excepto los cinco que como esta dicho les tenjan baldios y aziagos. Esta cuenta, que es el calendario que estos naturales tenjan de tiempo sin memoria, no tiene que hazer, con las otras dos cuentas, que luego se dirá.

La segunda cuenta que estos naturales vsauan, se llama cuenta de los años, porque contauan cierto numero de años, por la forma que se sigue: tenjan quatro caracteres, puestos en quatro partes en respecto de vn circulo redondo. A al vno destos caracteres llamauã, Ce acatl, que quiere dezir, vna caña: este caracter, era como vna caña verde pintada, y en respecto del circulo, estaua hazia al oriente. Al segundo caracter, llamauan ce tecpatl, que quiere dezir vn pedernal: hecho a manera de hierro de lança tiñjdo la mjtad del con sangre: este estaua puesto

843 And when the swelling appeared, upon his back was as it were a small, blue bump. Or [he might 752 catch] inflammation of the groin.[22] And when the inflammation of the groin appeared, the child cried every night; and on the groin and armpits were formed small, round or long [welts of] flesh. And in order to cure it, they cut them off and removed the little [welts] of flesh.

Auh injc neci aiomama, yoijtlapan ca, iuhquin poxonotli, iuhquin texotic: anoço cuetzpalicivitli. Injc neci cuetzpalicivi piltontli: cocoioal in choca, yoan yquezilco, yciacac motlatlalia nacazotoni, olototoni, melacazoni. Auh injc peti: quijzmoda, quijquijxtia in nacazotoni.

843 And as for the pregnant woman: before her child had been formed as a being, they restrained [any of]
821 them, when the moon arose, from looking up at it. They said to them: "Do not look at the moon! Your children will suffer sickness of the heart, or else will be harelipped!"

Ioan in ozztli: in jquac aiamo vel tlacatl motlalia in jconcuh, quijtlacaoaltiaia, in jquac calmomana metztli: injc amo conacopaitzinque, quimjlhujaia: macamo xocoojtacan in metztli, mimjxquja, anoço tenquiviz in amococonih.

825 Twentieth Chapter, which telleth of the monkey's ●777 hand.

Injc ceppoalli cxpitulo, yxchpa tlatoa: in oçomatli ymacpal.

441 The merchants sought and cherished greatly a monkey's hand when they trafficked and sold goods anywhere. There they spread it out. It was said that thereby goods quickly were disposed of and soon all which they sold was bought. It was stated: "That which bringeth this about is the monkey's hand" — so foolish were they.

In oçomatli imacpal: in puchieca omca quijtemoaia, quimopialtiaia: in jquac in campa tiamjxquja, in tlanamacaia: vncan quijtocaia, quijlmach ic iciuhca aquj, iciuhca muchi coalo in tlein quijnamaca: quijl ichoatl iuh qujchioa in oçomatli yma: ynjc mochapoloitia.

777 Also of the sellers of mantles — when nowhere
264 was disposed of that which they sold, when no one bought either mantles, or shifts or skirts — it was 824 said: "They make them eat chilis that the goods may be disposed of." And thus did they do it. When they returned to their homes, they said: "Our goods are nowhere disposed of. Give them chilis to eat." Then in their midst they placed perhaps two or three chilis. It was averred that thereby the goods were disposed of. When they so did this, they said that they had made [their mantles] eat chilis.

No ichoantin in tilmanamacaque: in jquac acan aquj in quinamaca, in aiac qujcoa: in aço tilmatli, in anoço cueitl, anoço vipalli, quijlmach: qujchilquaqualtia, injc aquj. Auh injc qujchioaia: in jquac calvia inchan, quitoaia: acan oac in totianjc: ma xocoonchilquaqualtican: njman ic ijtic contema, aço vme, anoço Ey in chilli: quijlmach ic aquja, injc iuh qujchioaia in, ic quitoa: qujchilquaqualtia.

777 Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of the pestle 525 and the griddle.

Injc ceppoalli oce cxpitulo, itechpa tlatoa in texoloti, yoan comalli.

When one who played patolli[23] placed his pestle, and his griddle, and his grinding stone upside down in his home, and hung his pestle somewhere in a corner, it was said that thereby the householder would not lose, but only win.

In jquac aquin patoaia, in jchan, in jtexolouh, ioan in jcomal, ioan in jmetl: irtlapach quijmanaia: auh in texoloti cana xomolco quijpaloaia: quijlmach: ic amo quitlaniaque in chane, çan ic tlatlaniz.

22. Corresponding Spanish text: "otra enfermedad, que llaman cuentzpalaxiuitli, a cero hebrillas en las ingles." Note also Codex Rios (El manuscrito mexicano Vaticano 3738 llamado El Codex Rios [Madrid: Biblioteca Denoël, 1988], p. 54).

23. The corresponding Spanish text refers to patolos, which is an error.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

His later years were weighted with trouble with Tenochtitlan. He had married a sister of Montezuma II and, as she was unduly free in granting favors to the young men of the court, in 1498 he took advantage of his legal right to kill her. The Tenochcas took this act as a gross personal affront and directed every effort, short of war, to overcoming their ancient ally.[21] 175 [684]

Axayacatl of Tenochtitlan died in 1479, while Nezahualpilli was young in his rule, and his brother Tizoc, who had previously been the war chief, took his place. Tizoc's most important act of office was to begin the reconstruction of the great temple to Huitzilopochtli, the War God, and Tlaloc, the Rain God. In commemoration of his conquests he also had carved the so-called Sacrificial Stone. This monstrous-sized vessel for burning human hearts has a relief on the edge, depicting Tizoc dressed as Huitzilopochtli seizing captives representing tributary tribes. Most of the towns, unfortunately, must have been merely reconquered, since their names appear in the previous conquest lists of earlier rulers. It is not a complete surprise to read in some accounts that Tizoc died of poison administered by chiefs disgusted at his lack of military success.[22] 175 778 532 [782]

Ahuitzotl* succeeded his brother Tizoc in 1486. His first task was to complete the great temple the others had begun, in the dedication of which the gathering of sacrificial victims played an important part. He invoked the aid of Nezahualpilli, and the allies made a two-year campaign into northern Oaxaca, amassing no less than twenty thousand victims, the high point of the sacrificial cult in Mexico. At the start of the dedication the captives stood in two rows, and Nezahual- 175 [648] 796

*Ah'-weet-zod.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
776 324
778

534
322
532

PLATE 54

AZTEC ART

TOP: Coatlicue, the Mother of the Gods, a highly important member of the pantheon. This representation, over eight feet high, displays her power in terms of such fearsome attributes as two snakeheads, a necklace of a skull, hands and hearts, a skirt of writhing snakes and claws on her feet. The bottom of the statue's feet is carved to represent the earth monster. BOTTOM: Wooden drum with two tongues (teponaztli) in the form of an ocelot. The smooth, simple outlines contrast with the macabre congestion of the presentation above.

[p. 160(F)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532
324
778

PLATE 55
AZTEC ART

TOP: Another presentation of Coatlicue, the Mother of the Gods. An earth goddess, she is also associated with death, so that in this case her head is a human skull. BOTTOM: Left: Small rock-crystal skull representing the Death God. This is a fine example of Aztec lapidary work. Right: A box, symbolically carved, to hold human hearts. Note the glyph for jade, i.e., "precious," banding the sides of the container.

[p. 160(G)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532
324
778

PLATE 56

AZTEC ART

TOP: This Corn Goddess is envisaged as a young girl. Her soft Indian beauty is brought out with the same sure simplicity which characterizes the warriors on Plates 40 and 49. BOTTOM: A colossal head, nearly four feet high, of Coyolxauhqui, sister of the War God. She is shown dead. Simple handling of details enhances this monumental conception.

[p. 160 (H)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 attribute similar attitudes to their gods, and, as a result, the
532 soft emotionalism so characteristic of European art is almost totally absent. Thus Aztec sculpture is even more forbidding and gloomy than other Middle American arts, which have at first a depressing effect on observers accustomed to Old World aesthetics.[9] (See Plates 40, 49, 52–56.)

532 The same sense of proportion so evident in Aztec architecture produced a monumental quality in their sculpture. The smallest piece has the same dignity that attends the most massive temple carvings. A photograph reveals no impression of the original scale, and in one case the head of a goddess was carved identically in a small piece of jade and a four-foot block of basalt, with no loss of plastic or monumental values to either.[10]

In relief sculpture the forming of the object and the disposition and subordination of details show the mastery of design inherited by eyes trained in centuries of weaving. The vast block of the thirteen-foot Calendar Stone is carved with as delicate an appreciation of the relative values of space as similar designs painted on pottery vessels or graven on jade. (See Plate 52.)

532 The finest Aztec sculpture, to the Western eye, repro-
● 778 duces the young gods and goddesses that presided over the crops. Thus the Aztec body, long of trunk, short of limb, softly rounded in its well-fleshed strength, is simply and accurately portrayed with passive grace. The patient and resigned features were perfect subjects for the sculptor and his medium. Some gods could assume the guise of animals, and the sculptors took full advantage of their close observation of nature to carve a coyote with ear atilt or to dignify a red basalt grasshopper with the armored malevolence of an insect in heroic scale. The serpent, emblem of Quetzalcoatl, symbol of time and the year, representative of mystery and power, was frequently carved. The sinuous curves ending in the savage symmetry of the head offered a challenge which the sculptors accepted with a success that evokes the mysterious horror of the Aztec universe. (See Plates 53, 56.)

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532 778

The grotesque gods are abstract and horrible to our modern eye. Coatlicue,* the "Lady of the Serpent Skirt" and mother of Huitzilopochtli, was thought of as powerful and awesome, so the task of the sculptors was to transmute those qualities into stone. The great statue in Mexico, whose head is twin serpents, whose necklace human hands and hearts, whose feet and hands are viciously armed with claws and whose skirt is a mat of writhing snakes, brings into a dynamic concentrate the manifold horrors of the universe. A smaller carving, simpler and less detailed, produces this same effect, implying that the very essence of fear was honored and worshiped. An altar of red lava, dug up in the street behind the cathedral, is grimly adorned with ranked skulls, but the design is so harmonious that death becomes an abstraction, part of a distant universe of fear, and not the imminent individual disaster which besets us moderns. (See Plates 54–55.)

The Calendar Stone embodies a finite statement of the infinity of the Aztec universe. In the center is the face of the Sun God, Tonatiuh, flanked by four cartouches which singly give the dates of the four previous ages of the world and together represent the date of our present era. The twenty names of the days circle this central element, and they, in turn, are ringed with a band of glyphs denoting jade or turquoise, which give the idea of being precious and sym-

532 805

*Co-at-le'e-kway.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

361
778

302
776

PLATE 57

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Tezcatlipoca, Smoking Mirror, from fresco at Tizatlan. BOTTOM: Left: The Codex Florentino plan of Tenochtitlan (cf. Plate 37). A. The shrines of Huitzilopochtli and Tlaloc. B. Priest. C. Priests' quarters. D. Temple platform. E. Eagle warrior's quarters. F. Ball court. G. Skull rack. H. Temple of Xipe. I. Sacrificial stone. K. Old temple of Huitzilopochtli. L. Five Lizard (date) and Macuilxochitl, God of Flowers. M. Five House (date) and same god. N. Dancing places. Q. Image of Xipe. P. Doors into sacred enclosure. Right: Gold ornament representing the vertical universe; at top gods play ball, symbolizing the sky and the movement of the planets, next the sun disk, then a flint knife, representing the moon, and finally the earth monster.

[p. 176(A)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

778
532

776
532

PLATE 58

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Altar at Teotihuacan with symbols of agricultural worship. Note glyph at top center. MIDDLE: Codex Florentino, special ceremony involving gods' descent to earth, with birdmen, snake dancers, rain-gods and priests dressed as the chief gods of the pantheon. BOTTOM: Vienna Codex, scene partly ceremonial and partly historical. Gods, dates, temples, chiefs and fire making are shown.

[p. 176 (B)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 to have been worshiped more extensively, and the clay images made in their honor also continued in unbroken line the tradition of the Middle Culture figurines. Coatlicue (Our Lady of the Serpent Skirt) was the mother of the gods in their stellar aspect but also was honored as the mother of Huitzilopochtli. The measure of her importance may be gauged by [778] the great statue of her in Mexico which is a masterpiece of sacerdotal art and undoubtedly had a temple to itself. Coatlicue was also represented as a mother carrying a child in her arms. In this guise her function as a mother goddess brought her image into almost every home in the valley. Tonantzin (Our Mother), which may have been an aspect of this same goddess or of Cihuacoatl (Snake Woman), had a temple at Tepeyac, now the site of the shrine to the Virgin of Guadalupe, and her cult was transferred to the Virgin by the early missionaries, an act exemplifying their intelligent procedure in evangelizing the Aztecs. A goddess, Tlazolteotl (Eater of Filth), was extensively worshiped and was also synonymously known as the "Mother of the Gods." Primarily an earth-goddess, she, alone of the goddesses, had a moral significance, since in eating refuse she consumed the [783] sins of mankind, leaving them pure. A rite of confession developed in her cult. (See Plates 54–55.)

Standing out from the numerous divinities associated with death were Mictlantecuhtli and Mictlancihuatl,* (Our Lord and Lady of the Region of Death). They wore masks made from human skulls, and their ornaments were either human bones or representations of them. They presided over the northern regions and also ruled the hells below the earth. Theirs was no punitive function, for all who died, save in

*Meek-tlan-se'e-watl.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

 174 completely dominated the place. At regular intervals terraces 346 broke the lines of the sloping sides and increased the impres- 361 sion of its size. A wide staircase of one hundred and fourteen narrow steps led up the western side, and so steep was this stair that not until one's head rose clear of the platform did the temple itself come into view.

The temple, in reality, comprised two shrines, built side 174 by side, each having stone walls and soaring roofs of wood 346 coated with plaster. Through the right-hand door one could 778 clearly see the squat figure of Huitzilopochtli carved from the stone and covered with a paste in which were set jade, turquoise, gold and seed pearls. A girdle of gold snakes, picked out in precious stones, adorned his waist, and around his neck hung a string of gold masks covered with turquoise mosaic. By his side stood the statue of an attendant deity, equipped with a short lance and a gold shield, richly decorated with the customary mosaic.

In the adjoining shrine stood an image of Tezcatlipoca, one of the most prominent Aztec gods. His eye sockets were inlaid with mirrors of obsidian, the black depths of which reflected the red gleams of the afternoon light. This statue, too, was adorned with gold and precious stones. High in the wooden roof of this temple perched a small figure of Xipe, the God of Seedtime. Braziers of incense discharged greasy coils of smoke which deepened the gloom of the temples, whose walls were already black with the blood of many victims. In dim corners stood heaps of ritualistic paraphernalia, conch-shell trumpets, knives, banners and baskets of shapeless lumps of meat, surplus human hearts which, for some reason, had not yet been placed upon the braziers. The priests who glided through this murk seemed fitting satellites to the diabolic images to which they ministered. In front of the temples stood the great drum which was soon to throb across the lake as a nation suffered its death agony.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

It was from this point that Montezuma showed Cortes his empire, and Bernal Diaz, who witnessed the scene, left us this unforgettable description:

"Then Montezuma took Cortes by the hand and told him to look at his great city and all the other cities that were standing in the water and the many other towns and the land around the lake. . . . So we stood looking about us, for that huge and cursed temple stood so high that from it one could see over everything very well, and we saw the three causeways which led into Mexico . . . and we saw the [aqueduct of] fresh water that comes from Chapultepec, which supplies the city, and we saw the bridges on the three causeways which were built at certain distances apart . . . and we beheld on the lake a great multitude of canoes, some coming with supplies of food, others returning loaded with cargoes of merchandise, and we saw that from every house of that great city and of all the other cities that were built in the water it was impossible to pass from house to house except by drawbridges, which were made of wood, or in canoes; and we saw in those cities Cues [temples] and oratories like towers and fortresses and all gleaming white, and it was a wonderful thing to behold!"[8]

776 And the people followed [the impersonator], jostling,
796 howling, roaring. They made the dust rise; they caused the ground to smoke. Like people possessed, they stamped upon the earth.

[776] And one man carried [the image] in his arms.[11]

And he was adorned thus: he was garbed in the costly cape of precious feathers,[12] with the quetzal-feather headornament in the manner of coastal people. Bars were painted on his face; and a star design. He had a turquoise nose-plug. He was the humming-bird disguise. He had the breastmirror; he had a shield set with a mosaic of turquoise.

Auh in macoualti, qujtocaia, qujtlalochtocaia, cniohujtiuja, quicaoatztiuja, teuhtli quiquetztiuja, tlalli qujpopotztiuja: inhuqjn tlaizquiçqiça, tlalli tetecujca:

auh ce tlacatl qujnapalotiuja.

Auh ynjc muchichioaia, teuquemetiuja, quetzalapanecaiutl, in cuetlalitiuja, ixnacalichioale, ixcitlalichioale, mixcitlalichioh, xiuhtzanjoa, vitzitzilnacatl, elxecaoa, xiuhchimale.

776 [796] Third Chapter, which telleth of the god named Smoking Mirror (Tezcatlipoca), who, in times past, was worshipped as a god, and to whom offerings were made.

Tezcatlipoca: He was considered a true god, whose abode was everywhere—in the land of the dead, on earth, and in heaven. When he walked on the earth, he brought vice and sin. He introduced anguish and affliction.

He brought discord among people, wherefore he was called "the enemy on two sides." All evils which came to men, all [these] he created, brought down, afflicting men and dividing them [one against the other].

And sometimes he bestowed riches—wealth, heroism, valor, position of dignity, rulership, nobility, honor.

Jnic ey, capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa in teutl, yn jtoca tezcatlipoca: in qujmonotiaia, yoan in qujtlamanjliaia, ie necuh.

Tezcatlipoca: ynin vel teutl ipan machoia, noujian ynemjian: mictla, tlaltícpac, yllhujcac. Jn jquac nemja tlaltícpac, ixhuatl qujolitiaja, in teuhtli tlaçolli: cococ teupouhqui, cujteititiaia, tetzalli, tonepantla motecaia: ipampa y, mjtoaia necoc iautl, muchi qujococaia, qujtemoujaja, qujtencaujltiaia, qujtecujtiaia yn jxquich aqualli tepan muchioaia: teca manjltiaia, teqoquetoaia.

Auh in quenman, qujtemacaia, in necujltonolli: in tlatequjtl, in oquichiutl, in tlacauhiutl, in tecuiotl, in tlatecaiutl, in pillotl, in maniqotl.

Fourth Chapter, which telleth of the [rain-]god named Tlaloc, the priest.[13]

Tlaloc the priest. To him was attributed the rain; for he made it, he caused it to come down, he scattered the rain like seed, and also the hail. He caused to sprout, to blossom, to leaf out, to bloom, to ripen, the trees, the plants, our food. And also by him were made floods of water and thunder-bolts.

And he was thus decorated: his face was thickly painted black, his face was painted with liquid rubber;[14] it was anointed with black; his face was [spotted] with [a paste of] amaranth seeds.[15] He had a sleeveless cloud-jacket of netted fabric; he had a crown of heron feathers; he had a necklace of green stone jewels. He had foam sandals, and also rattles. He had a plaited-reed banner.[16]

Juje nauj capitulo, ytechpa tlatoaia yn teutl, yn jtoca tlaloc, tlamacazqui.

Tlaloc, tlamacazqui: ynjn ipan machoia, in qujiaujtl: ca ixhuatl quiococaia, qujtemoujaia, qujpixoaia, in quijauitl, yoan in tecinjtl: quixotlaltiaja, qujtemolinaltiaja, qujxonnvialtiaja, quicuepanaltiaja, quincaltiaia in quauitl, in çacatl, in tonacaiotl. Yoan no inch tlamjloia, in teilaqujlintli, in tlaujtequjlintli.

Auh ynjc muchichioaia, tlaixtlilpopotzalli, tlaixelhujlli, metlilocac, izmjchioave, izmichioauhio, xuachxicole, aiauhxicole, axtaxoua, chalchiuhcuaque, poçulcaque, no tzintile, aztapilpane.

Fifth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Plumed Serpent (Quetzalcoatl).

Juic macujlli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn teutl, yn jtoca quetzalcoatl.

11. After the sacrifice of the impersonator, the image was carried in procession.—Loc. cit.

12. Sahagun (Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 44) defines it as a costly robe made entirely of precious feathers, worn over the xicolli (jacket) and the tzitzquemitl (cape worn over the jacket); probably it was an apron-like garment placed on the front of the idols.

13. Sahagun (ibid., pt. 2, p. 46) says that tlamacazqui and tlamacazqui means "priest" and "priest." He himself translates Tlaloc tlamacazqui as "Rogacyoni . . . Rogacyoniste," in Einige Kapitel aus dem Geschichtswerk des Fray Bernardino de Sahagun aus dem Aztekischen wortgetreu übersetzt (Cuauhtlatoa Sahagún, Walter Lehmann, Walter Krickeberg, eds.; Stuttgart: Strecker und Schwaedtke, 1927), Vol. I, p. 3.

14. Sahagun (loc. cit.): "im Gesicht eine Bepinselung mit flüssigem Kautschuk."

15. Cf. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. I, p. 185; see also Sahagun, Gesamtausgabe Abhandlungen, Vol. II, pp. 443-4.

16. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 145.

And when (there was) no wind, it was calm; the water spread like a mirror, gleaming, glittering.

And when her feast was celebrated, in the month of Etzalqualiztli, the eating of boiled corn,[48] then was celebrated the feast of the rain-gods.

They placed her image upon a framework: they put a skirt upon her, and a shift; they placed jewels upon her—a plaited neckpiece, from which hung a golden disc.

And they offered her offerings and the fire priests came out to receive her. They strewed aromatic herbs before her.

With the rattle board of the mist and rain gods, they spoke. The city elders, her singers, sang for her.

And then they slew her impersonator—a slave woman, bought and set forth by those who gained their livelihoods as water-carriers—those who brought in water, who fetched water in canoes; those who owned canoes; those who worked in irrigation ditches; and those who made canoes in the market-place, those who sold water for refreshment.[49]

Likewise they arrayed her, made offerings, and ornamented her. For she would go, when they slew her, to a place called Tlalocan. In the temple of the Tlaloca, they opened her breast.

Then Moctezuma paid great honors to [the goddess]. Before her image, he offered incense and slew quail.

Thus they said: "The chief gaineth rain; he doth a penance for his people." And giving thanks, they thus paid honor to the waters.

[For] they remembered that because of her we [may] live. She is our sustenance. And thence come all things that are necessary.

In the same manner they paid honor to the image of man's sustenance, called Chicome coatl; and to the image of the salt [-goddess], named Uixtociuatl. Thus they remembered what they had done; thus they honored the three.[50]

For indeed, through them the peasant earned his livelihood. Thus might he be satisfied; thus, in truth, might he live.

And thus was she decked: she was painted yellow and blue; she was painted blue about the lips and on her face.[51] She wore a green-stone necklace; she had turquoise [mosaic] ear-plugs. She had a blue paper cap with a spray of quetzal feathers. Her shift and her skirt were painted like water. She bore a shield ornamented with water lily leaf and flower. She carried the mist-rattleboard,[52] which she sounded. She wore foam sandals.

Auh yn jquac atle ehecatl, tlamattimanj, atzecatitimanj, 776 petlantimanj, cuecuziocatimanj.

Auh yn jquac ilhuiqujztiloia, çan no iquac yn ezualqua- 796 listli: yn vncan ilhujquiztililoia tlaloque,

[805]

coloeli in qujchichioaia yxiptla: qujcuztiaia, qujujpiltiaia, qujcuecatiaia, cuecapetlatl, itech pilcatiuh cuztic teucujtla- [778] comalli:

yoan qujtlamanjliaia, qujnanamiquj yn jtlenamacacauh, yiauhtli, irpan qujnepevilia, caiochicaoaz ilhujtinemj, qujcujcatia in calpoleque, ycujcacaoan.

Auh in vel ixiptla, yequac mjquja: tlacotli cioatl in [567] qujcoaia, inhoan qujnextiaia, yn anamacaque: yn atl ye motlaiecultia, yn acaltica atlacuj, yn acaleque, yn apantlaca: [463] yoan acalquetzaque tianquisco, in qujtechiltia atl.

No iuh qujchichioaia, no iuh qujtlamamacaia, no iuh qujcencaoaia: iuh tlantiuja: in miquja, yteocaiocan tlalocan: yn vncan intrupan, tlaloque, quelitzequja.

Jn jquac y, no cenca qujmauiztiliaia, yn motecuçoma: ixpan tlenamacaia, yn jxiptla, qujtlacotenjlia, iuh qujnaia: qujiauhtlatlanj in tlacatl, qujtlamacehuja yn jmaceual: yoan vncan mocnelilmati, ynjc qujmahujztiliaia atl:

qujlnamjquja, ca ic tinemj, ca tonenca: yoan ic muchioa, yn inquich tetech monequj.

No iuh qujmauiztiliaia, yn jxiptla tonacaiotl, yn jtoca, chicome coatl; yoã yn jxiptla ixtatl, ytoca Vixtociuatl: ic qujlnamjquja; yn je tlamanjxti:

ca vel ynenca muchioa in macteualli, ic vellamati, ic vel 776 nemj.

Auh yujn, in muchichioaia: mexaoaia, texotica, motenujltec, motezotenujltec, mizcoçalhuj, chalchiuhcuaque, xiuhnacoche, tezoamacale, quetzalmjiaoaio, atlacujlolhvipile, atlacujlolhuiujpile, atlacujlolcueis, atlacueçonanchimale, aiuchicoaçe, cacalaca; poçulcaque.

---

48. Sahagún (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 148): "este atzolli era hecho de maiz cocido, a manera de arroz, y era muy amarillo." Durán (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 239): "el maiz cocido por el solo llamaxle pozolli pero a causa de revolverlo con frijol (atl) le llaman atzolli."

49. Corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex reads: ". . . la festejaban . . . todos aquellos, que tienen sus granjerias, en el agua: como son los que venden agua, en las canoas: y los que venden agua, en tinajas, en la plaça. . . ."

50. Corresponding Spanish text: ". . . porque dezian, que estos tres diosas: mantenjan, a la gente popular: para que pudiesen, viuir, y multiplicar."

51. Corresponding Spanish text: ". . . la pintaban, la cara, con color amarilla. . . ."

52. Corresponding Spanish text: "Tenia en la mano, derecha, vn vaso, con vna cruz: hecho a manera, de la rectedia, en que se lleua el sacramento, quando vas solo la llaua: y era como cetro, diuis diosa." See p. 5, note 44. See also illustrations of Chalchiuhtli yoan and Tlaqueloa tonan.

776
463
484
[416]
[439]

And [they brought] vases, and incense-burners, and jars made of calabashes, spoons for stirring cacao, and stoppers for jars.

Auh in tecomatl, in poctecomatl, in aiutectli, in aquauitl, yn atzaccaiutl:

When they entered lands with which they were at war, and went among people who were far distant, they became like their enemies in their garments, their hair-dress, their speech,[104] [that they might] mimic the natives.

intlanel iautitlan, in tzacuj, in tzacutica, tetlan onnemj, vel calaquj, motlacacuepa in nechichioalixtica, in nezintica, in tlatoltica qujntlachecalhuja in chaneque. [292]

And if they came to an evil pass, if they were discovered, then they were slain in ambush and served up with chili sauce.[105] [But if] any—even one, even two—escaped alive, [such an one] informed Moctezuma.

Auh intla otlanaçomaltique, intla oittoque: vncan qujpapoiomjctia, qujnchillatilia: ça aca, aço ce, aço vme yn oc nel tematitlanpa qujça, ichoatl qujoalnonotzaia in motecuçuma: [263] [266]

This one then gave him a gift, and decked him with his amber lip-plug. He did him honor, singling him out as a valiant warrior, thus making him a man of consequence.

ic vncan qujmaca, caqujlia, yapoçonaltenteuh, yc qujmaviziotia, ic qujnezcaiotia, in tilacauh, vncan ic oqujchtia. [431] [301]

And when those who returned arrived home, when they had come back, when they had reached and had contentment in their land, they feasted all, [especially] the merchants and the principal men, that they might make themselves celebrated.

Auh yn jquac oalacia, ynchan: vn jmiloch, ynnecuepal oqujchiuhque, yn otlaltechacico, yn otlaltechpachiuhque: izqujch tlacatl qujnotza, in puchteca: yoan in tlatoque, ic motzititiaia: [304]

It was called "the washing of the feet."[106] They paid great honor to the cane, to the walking staff, of Yiacatecutli.

mjtoa, mocxipaca, cenca qujmavizziliaia yn itopil, yn jtlaçaia yiacatecutli: 776

In the tribal temple[107] they set it upright. They offered it an offering first, when they laid a feast. And when they summoned people to a banquet, they always offered it an offering when they ate.

cana in calpulco qujquetzaia: achto qujtlamanjlia, yn jquac tetlaqualtia: yoan intlaca nel motecoanotza, qujtlamanjlia in çan muchipa yn jtlaquaia. 796 [778]

And when they ceremonially bathed and slew a man as a sacrifice,[108] he whom they offered was the likeness of their god, Yiacatecutli; or else one of [the following gods], or all of them, whom they worshipped—Chicnquiauitl, or Chalmecaciuatl, Acxomocuil, and Nacxitl, Cochimetl, Yacapitzauac.[109] No one determined, [for] it was of their own free will, whether they should offer up one or two men.

Auh intla aca tealtiz, ichoatl caltiaia, qujxeoaia in jteouh yiacatecutli: anoço ceme ichoantin yn mocheoaia, in qujnmotetutiaia in chiconqujauitl, anoçp chalmecacioatl, yoan acxomucujl, yoan nacxitl, cochimetl, iacapitzaoac, aiac qujiocuja, yiollotlama, yn aço ce, anoço vme, ca altiz tlacatl:

They bought them there at the slave market at Atzcapuzzalco; they sorted and arranged them, turning them around many times, examining them, buying the good ones—those of good bodies, without blemish, the best men, in good health, sick in no degree, who were marked by no marks on the body.

vmpa concovaia yn tlacanecujloca azcaputzalco: motlahtlatilia, motlapapatilia, qujncuecuepa, qujmjhitta, yn qualtin qujncoazque, yn acan quenamjque, in tlacaiecti, in tlacamelaoaque, yn acan cucuxque, yn atle intlaciuh ca: 776 796 567

Such as these they slew on the feast-day, Panquetzaliztli, when the feast of Uitzilopochtli was celebrated.

ynjc ichoan qujnmictinque, yn ipan panquetzaliztli: yn vncan ilhujqujztililoia vitzilubuchtli:

Thereupon they garbed them in trappings like those of Yiacatecutli, which were assigned to them.

yquac qujnchichioaia, qujntlamamaca, intech qujtlalia yn juhquj ynechichioal yiacatecutli.

And before they slew them, first they let them be seen by the people. It was said: "They save them up [like

Auh yn aiamo qujnmjctia, achtopa qujntititiaia: mjtoa qujmjanextia, ic qujtemachitia in tealtizque:

---

104. Cf. Tezozómoc (op. cit., p. 57): Yacomilohqui "propiamente representa persona, que tiene viveça, ò habilidad, para mofar graciosamente, à engañar, y si adrie, y engañ (que es propio condicion de Mercaderes) . . . ."

105. Cf. Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 22) citing Hist. Reyn. Coth. Mex. B. II §83.

106. Book IX of the Historia general deals almost entirely with the activities of the merchants. Chapter VI, entitled De las ceremonia que se hacia a los mercaderes cuando llegaban a su casa, que es llama lavatorio de pies, meaning washing mouth and hands.

107. Sahagún defines calpulli as "yglesia del barrio, ò parroche" (Spanish version).

108. Sahagún defines the substantive in this manner: "Estos dioses que mataban a estos esclaves."—Historia general, Vol. I, p. 219.

109. According to the Spanish version, they were four brothers and a sister of Yiacatecutli. Seler (Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 4, p. 92) assignsin Cachimetl and Yacapitzauac as synonyms for Yiacatecutli; "Chicnquiauitl or Chalmecaciuatl is the name of a goddess of water and the earth"; Acxomucuil is Tezcatlipoca; Nacxitl is Quetzalcoatl.

The fourth month they called Uei toçoztli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast in honor of the god named Cinteotl, whom they regarded as god of maize. In his honor they fasted four days before the arrival of the feast.

Al quarto mes llamauan, Vey toçoztli: en el primero dia deste mes: haziã fiesta a honrra del dios llamado Cinteutl, que le tenjan por dios de los mahizes: a honrra deste, ayunauan quatro dias, ante de llegar la fiesta. 796 [805 776 785]

Chapter 4
Uei toçoztli

In this feast they placed reeds at the doors of the houses. They sprinkled them with the blood from their ears or from the calves of their legs. Besides these, the nobles and the rich set up in their houses some branches which they called acxoyatl. Likewise, they set up branches for their gods, and set forth flowers for [the gods] which each one had in his house.

After this, they went about the maize fields and brought stalks of the maize (which was still small), and they garnished them with flowers and went to place them before their gods, in the house called calpulli; and also they set food before them.

Having done this in the various suburbs, they went to the pyramid of the goddess whom they called Chicome coatl, and there, before her, they enacted skirmishes in the manner of battles. And all the girls bore upon their backs ears of maize [grown] the year before. They went in procession, to present them to the goddess Chicome coatl, and they returned them once more to their house[s] as blessed thing[s]; and from them they took the seed to plant next year. And also they put it [away] as the heart of the grain bins, because it was blessed.

They made of dough (which they call tzoalli) the image of this goddess in the courtyard of her pyramid; and before her they offered all kinds of maize, and all kinds of beans, and all kinds of chia. For they said that the was the maker and giver of all those things which are the necessaries of life, that the people may live.

Cap. 4.
Vey toçoztli

1	b	KL	Vey toçoztli	b	3
2	c		En esta fiesta, ponjan espadañas a	c	4 [785]
3	d		las puertas de las casas ensangrenta-	d	5
4	e		uanlas, con sangre de las orejas, o de	e	6
5	f		las espinjllas: los nobles y los ricos,	f	7
6	g		de mas de las espadañas, enrramauan	g	8
7	A		sus casas, con vnos ramos, que llaman	A	9
8	b		acxoatl. Tambien enrramauan a sus	b	10
9	c		dioses, y las ponjan flores a los que cada	c	11
10	d		vno tenja en su casa.	d	12
11	e		Despues desto, yuan por los ma-	e	13
12	f		hizales, y trayan cañas de mahiz (que	f	14
13	g		aun estaua pequeño) y componjanlas	g	15
14	A		con flores y yuanlas a poner delante de	A	16
15	b		sus dioses, a la casa que llamauan	b	17
16	c		calpulli: y tambien ponjan comjda	c	18
17	d		delante dellos.	d	19
18	e		Despues de echo esto, en los barrios:	e	20 [776]
19	f		yuan al cu, de la diosa, que llamauan	f	21
20	g		chicome coatl: y alli delante della	g	22[1]

hazian escaramuças a manera de pelea: y todas las muchachas lleuauan a cuestas, maçorcas de mahiz del año pasado: yuan en procesion, a presẽtarlas, a las diosa chicome coatl: y tornauanlas otra vez a su casa como cosa bendita, y de alli tomauan la semjlla, para sembrar el año venjdero: y tambien ponjanlo por coraçon, de las troxes, por estar bendito. [241]

Hazian de masa (que llaman tzoalli) la ymagen desta diosa, en el patio de su cu, y delante della: ofrecian todo genero de mahiz, y todo genero de frisoles, y todo genero de chien: porque dezian, que ella era la autora, y dadora de aquellas cosas, que son mantenjmjentos, para biujr la gente. [778]

1. Marginal notation: Sacrificios notable et bali pensij.

X 796 The ninth month they called Tlaxochimaco. On the first day of this month they held a feast in honor of the god of war, named Uitzilopochtli. In this they offered him the first flowers [grown] in that year. [805 776]

Chapter 9
Tlaxochimaco

[231 262] On the night before this feast, all busied themselves in killing fowls and dogs, in order to eat them, and in making tamales and other things concerned with food. Then, very early in the morning of this feast, the priests of the idols decked Uitzilopochtli [778] with many flowers; and after the statue of this god was adorned, they decorated the statues of the other gods with garlands and strings and wreaths of flowers. And then they decked all the other statues in the tribal temples and young men's houses. And in the houses of the majordomos and leading men and common folk, all decorated with flowers the statues which they had in their houses.

X 796 Having decorated the statues of all the gods, they then began to eat that fare which they had prepared the night before; and, a little after eating, they started 535 a kind of dance in which the noblemen, with women, together danced grasping each other's hands, and the ones embracing the others, arms thrown about each other's necks. They did not dance solemnly in the manner of a ceremonial dance, nor did they go through the movements of a ceremonial dance; but they went step by step, to the rhythm of those who [534 778] beat [the drums] and sang, all of whom were standing, a little to one side of those who danced, near a circular altar which they called momoztli.

This chanting lasted until nightfall. Not only in the pyramid courtyards but in all the houses of the leading men and the common folk they beat [the drums] and sang with a great din until night. And [273] the old men and the old women drank wine; but no young man nor young woman drank it. And if [any] of them did drink it, they punished them sorely. Many other ceremonies were performed in this, which are [described] at length. Etc.

Al nono mes llamauan Tlaxochimaco: El primero dia deste mes hazian fiesta a honrra del dios de la guerra llamado Vitzilobuchtli: offrecianle en ella las primeras flores de aquel año.

Cap. 9
Tlaxochimaco

1	d	KL.	Tlaxochimaco	d	12
2	e	La noche antes desta fiesta ocupa-		e	13
3	f	uanse todos en matar gallinas y perros		f	14
4	g	para comer, en hazer tamales y otras		g	15
5	A	cosas concernientes a la comida: luego		A	16
6	b	de mañanita el dia desta fiesta: los		b	17
7	c	satrapas de los ydolos, componjã cõ		c	18
8	d	muchas flores a Vitzilobuchtli, y des-		d	19
9	e	pues de compuesta la estatua deste		e	20
10	f	dios: componjan las estatuas de los		f	21
11	g	otros dioses con gujrnaldas y sartales		g	22
12	A	y collares de flores: y luego cõponjan		A	23
13	b	todas las otras estatuas de los calpules,		b	24
14	c	y telpuchcales: y en las casas de los cal-		c	25
15	d	pisques y principales y maceguales,		d	26
16	e	todos componjan las estatuas que ten-		e	27
17	f	jan en sus casas con flores.		f	28
18	g	Compuestas las estatuas todos los		g	29
19	A	dioses: luego començauan a comer		A	30
20	b	aquellas viandas que tenjan aparejadas		b	31

de la noche pasada, y dende a vn poco despues de comer: començauan vna manera de bayle o dança: en la qual los hombres nobles con mugeres juntamente baylauan asidos de las manos y abraçados los vnos con los otros: echados los braços sobre el cuello el vno del otro: no dançauan a manera de areyte, nj hazian los meneos como en el areyte, sino yvan paso a paso: al son de los que tanjan y cantauan los quales estauan todos en pie, apartados vn poco de los que baylauan, cerca de vn altar redondo que llaman momuztli—

Durauа este cantar hasta la noche: no solo en los patios de los cues: pero en todas las casas de principales y maceguales, tañjã y cantauan con gran bozeria hasta la noche: y los viejos y viejas beujan el vctli: pero njngun mancebo nj moça lo beuja: y si alguno lo beuja castigauanlos rezjamente. Otras muchas cerimonjas se hazian en esta: que esta a la larga. Etc.

K 796 pains of] their death. They tied them hand and foot, and, thus bound, they slung them over their shoulders, and walked with them as if performing a dance about the edge of a great fire and tall mound of live coals. Thus proceeding, they went casting them upon the mound of coals—now one, and, after a little, another. And him whom they had cast they let burn for a good while; and, still alive and tossing, they [413] took him forth, dragging him out with something like a hook, and cast him upon the sacrificial stone. And, having opened his breast, they tore out his heart. In this manner suffered all those unhappy captives.

[778] The tree was made fast by many ropes from the top, as the rigging of a ship hangeth from the topsail. On the top of this stood upright the statue of that god, made of a dough which they call tzoalli. When the aforesaid sacrifice had been offered, all the young men assailed [the statue] with great vigor. Many other ceremonies were enacted, as hath been written at length below, in this feast.

los piez y las manos, y assi atados ponialos sobre los hombros, y andauã con ellos como haziẽdo areyto en rrededor de vn grã fuego y grã mõton de brasa, assi andando yvãlos arrojando sobre el monton de brasas: agora vno y desde a vn poco otro: y el que avian arrojado, dexauanle quemar vn buen interualo, y avn quando biuo y barqueando sacauanle fuera arrastrando con qual que garauato, y echauãle sobre el tazõ: y abierto el pecho sacauanle el coraçon: desta manera padecian todos aquellos tristes catiuos, Estaua el arbol atado con muchas sogas de lo alto, como la jarcia de la nao: esta pendiente de la gabia en lo alto del, estaua en pie la ymagen de aquel dios: hecha de masa que llaman tzoalli: acabado el sacrificio ya dicho, arremetian con gran impetu todos los mancebos. Otras muchas cerimonjas hazian segun a la larga esta escripto adelante en esta fiesta.

The thirteenth month they named Tepeilhuitl. In this month they celebrated a feast in honor of the high mountains, which are in all these lands of this New Spain, where large clouds pile up. They made the images of each one of them in human form, from the dough which is called tzoalli, and they laid offerings before these images in veneration of these same mountains.

Al tercio decimo mes llamauan Tepeilhujtl: En este mes hazian fiesta a honrra de lo montes emjnẽtes, que estan por todas estas comarcas desta nueua españa: donde se armã flublados: hazian las ymagenes en figura humana a cada vno dellos de la masa que se llama tzoal, y ofrecian delante destas ymagenes, en respecto destos mismos montes.

196 [805 778]

Chapter 13
Tepeilhuitl

In honor of the mountains they made a number of serpents, of wood or of the roots of trees, and they fashioned them heads like [those of] serpents. They made also some lengths of wood, as thick as the wrist, and long. They called them ecatotonti. These, as well as the serpents, they overlaid with that dough which they call tzoalli. These pieces they provided a covering in the manner of mountains. Above, they placed the head, like the head of a person. Likewise they made these images in memory of those who had drowned in the water, or had died such a death that they did not burn them, but rather buried them.

After, with many ceremonies, they had placed upon their altars the aforementioned images, they also offered them tamales and other food; and also they uttered canticles of their praises, and they drank wine in their honor.

Upon arrival of the feast in honor of the mountains, they slew four women and one man. The first of these [women] they called Tepexoch. The second they called Matlalcueie. The third they named Xochtecatl. The fourth they called Mayauel. And the man they named Milnauatl. They decked these women and the man in many papers covered with rubber. And they carried them in some litters upon the shoulders of women highly adorned, to the place where they were to slay them.

1. Marginal notation: October In this month.

Cap. 13.
Tepeilhujtl.

1	g	K.I.		g	30
2	A		Hazian a honrra de los montes: vnas	A	1'
3	b		culebras de palo o de rayzes de arboles,	b	2
4	c		y labrauanles la cabeça como culebra:	c	3
5	d		haziã tãbien vnos troços de palo gru-	d	4
6	e		esos como la muñeca largos llamauan-	e	5
7	f		los Ecatotonti: assi a estos como a las	f	6
8	g		culebras los investian cõ aquella masa	g	7
9	A		que llamã tzoal: a estos troços los in-	A	8
10	b		vestian a manera de montes, arriba les	b	9
11	c		ponjan su cabeça como cabeça de per-	c	10
12	d		sona: hazian tambien estas ymagenes,	d	11
13	e		en memoria de aquellos que se aujan	e	12
14	f		ahogado en el agua o avian muerto de	f	13
15	g		tal muerte que no los quemauan, sino	g	14
16	A		que los enterrauan.	A	15
17	b		Despues que cõ muchas cerimonjas,	b	16
18	c		aujan puesto en sus altares a las yma-	c	17
19	d		genes dichas: ofrecianles tambien ta-	d	18
20	e		males y otras comjdas: y tambien los	e	19

dezian cantares de sus loores, y beujan vino por su honrra.

[273]

Llegada la fiesta a honrra de los montes, matauan quatro mugeres y vn hombre: la vna dellas llamauã tepexoch: la segũda llamauã Matlalcueie: la tercera llamauan Sochtecatl: la quarta llamauã Mayauel, y al hombre llamauã Milnacatl: adereçauan a estas mugeres y al hombre cõ muchos papeles llenos de vlli: y lleuauanlas en vnas literas en hombros de mugeres muy ataujadas, hasta donde las aujã de matar.

796 [289 314 293 483 482]

B Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1951 NU7 Aztec NU7

The fourteenth month they named Quecholli. They observed a feast to the god name Miscoatl. And in this month they made arrows and darts for war. They drew many deers in honor of this god.

Chapter 14
Quecholli

When they made the arrows, for a space of five days all took blood from the ears, and [with] the blood which they pressed out of them they anointed their own temples. They said that they did penances in order to go to hunt deer. From those who did not bleed themselves, they took their capes as punishment. No man lay with his wife on those days; neither did the old men nor the old women drink wine; because they did penance.

At the end of the four days during which they made the arrows and darts, they made a number of very small arrows, and bound them in four's with each [bundle of] four torches. And, a small bundle of the four torches and the four arrows being made, they offered them upon the graves of the dead. They placed also, along with the arrows and torches, two tamales. All this remained for a whole day upon the grave, and at night they burned it and performed many other ceremonies for the dead on this same feast.

On the tenth day of this month, all the Mexicans and Tlaxcalcans went to those mountains which they call Çacatepec. And they say that this mountain is their mother. On the day that they arrived, they made huts or cabins of grass, and they lit fires, and nothing else did they do that day.

Next day, at dawn, all forthwith broke fast and set out for the country and formed a great wing, wherewith they surrounded many animals—deer, rabbits, and other animals—and little by little they kept coming together until they rounded up all of them. Then they scattered and hunted, each one what he could.

1. Hospital [illegible] Mexicanos de [illegible].

Al quarto decimo mes llamauan Quecholli: hazian fiesta al dios llamado Miscoatl: y en este mes hazian saetas y dardos para la guerra: matauã a honrra deste dios muchos ciervos.

411
796x
[805
776]

Cap. 14
Quecholli.

1 f KL. Quando hazian las saetas por espa-
2 g cio de cinco dias: todos se sangrauan
3 A de las orejas y la sangre que exprimjan
4 b de las orejas y la sangre que exprimjan
5 c dellas: vntauanla por sus mesmas si-
6 d enes. Dezian que hazian penjtencias
7 e para yr a caçar venados: los que no se
8 f sangrauan, tomauanles las mantas en
9 g pena: njngun hombre se echaua con
10 A su muger en estos dias, nj los viejos ni
11 b viejas beujan polcre: porque hazian
12 c penjtencia.
13 d Acabados los quatro dias en que ha-
14 e zian las saetas y dardos: haziã vnas
15 f saetas chiquitas y atauanlas de quatro
16 g en quatro con cada quatro teas: y asi
17 A hecho vn manogico de las quatro teas,
18 b y de las quatro saetas, ofrecianlas so-
19 c bre los sepulchros de los muertos: pon-
20 d jan tambien juntamente con las saetas
y teas dos tamales: estaua todo esto vn dia entero sobre la sepultura, y a la noche lo quemauan: y hazian otras muchas ceremonjas por los defũtos en esta mesma fiesta.

1 f 20
2 g 21
3 A 22
4 b 23
5 c 24
6 d 25
7 e 26
8 f 27
9 g 28
10 A 29
11 b 30
12 c 31
13 d 1'
14 e 2
15 f 3
16 g 4
17 A 5
18 b 6
19 c 7
20 d 8

796x
[834
273]
765
796x

A los diez dias deste mes yvan todos los Mexicanos y Tlaxcalcanos a aquellos montes que llaman Çacatepec: y dizen que es su madre aquel monte, el dia que llegauan hazian xacales o cabañas de heno, y hazian fuegos y ningguna otra cosa hazian aquel dia.

796x
[778
342]

Otro dia en amanesciendo luego almorçauan todos, y salian al campo y hazian vna ala grande: donde cercauan muchos anjmales, ciervos, conejos, y otros anjmales y poco a poco se yvan juntando hasta acorralarlos todos: entonce arremetian y caçauan cada a qual lo que podia.

796x
224

The eleventh month they named Atemoztli. In this month they celebrated a feast to the rain gods, because for the most part in this month it began to thunder and to threaten rain; and the priests of the Tlaloc began to do penances and to offer sacrifices, so that the rain would come.

Al mes decimo esto llamauan Atemoztli: En este mes hazian fiesta a los Dioses de la pluuja: porque por la mayor parte en este mes, començauan a tronar y hazer demuestras de agua: y los satrapas de los Tlaloques començauan a hazer penjencias y sacrificios porque venjesse el agua.

796[x] [805 776]

Chapter 16
Atemoztli

When it began to thunder, the priests of the Tlaloc, with great industriousness, offered copal and other fragrances to their gods and to all the statues of these. They said that then they came to give rain. And the common folk made vows to fashion the images of the mountains, which are called tepictli, because they are dedicated [to] those gods of the rain. And on the sixteenth day of this month, all the common folk prepared offerings to offer before Tlaloc. And [during] these four days they performed penances, and the men abstained from women, and the women from men.

Having come to [the time of] the feast, which they celebrated on the last day of this month, they cut lengths of paper, and they bound them to a number of poles, from bottom to top. And they set them up in the courtyards of their houses and made the images of the mountains of tepetlli. They fashioned for them their teeth of squash seeds, and their eyes of some beans which are named ixocotli. And then they offered them their offerings of food, and they worshipped them.

After having kept a vigil for them, and beaten drums and sung for them, they opened their houses with a tentzopontli, which is an instrument with which the women weave, almost like a marlow; and they took out their hearts and struck off their heads. And later they divided up all the body among themselves and ate it; and the ceremonies with which

Cap. 16.
Atemoztli.

Quando començauan a tronar: los satrapas de los Tlaloques con gran diligencia offrecian copal y otros perfumes a sus dioses, y a todas las estatuas dellos: dezian que entonce venjan para dar agua: y los populares hazian votos de hazer las ymagines de los montes que se llamaan Tepictli: porq̃ son dedicadas aquellos dioses del agua. Y a los dezinueue dias deste mes, todos los populares aparejauan offrendas para offrecer a Tlaloc: y estos quatro dias hazian penjitencia, y abstenjanse los hombres de las mugeres, y las mugeres de los hombres.

Llegados a la fiesta que la celebrauan el vltimo dia deste mes: cortauan tiras de papel, y atauanlas a vnos barales desde abaxo hasta arriba: y hincauanlos en los patios de sus casas y hazian las ymagines de los montes de tezal: hazianles los diẽtes de pepitas de calabaça, y los ojos de vnos frisoles que se llaman ixocotli: y luego les ofrecian sus offrendas de comjda y los adorauan.

Despues de averles velado y tañido y cãtado: abrianles por los pechos, con vn tentzopontli: que es instrumento con que teien las mugeres, casi a manera de marlote: y sacauanles el corazon, y cortauales las cabeças: y despues repartian todo el cuerpo entre sí,

[314] [834] [778 289] [324] [413 286]

1. Marginal variation: Atemoztli mesyo.
2. Marginal variation: Ilamauan Atemoztli mesyo V.

2. Marginal variation: Remedio de dios agua.

The eighteenth month they named Izcalli. In this month they celebrated a feast to the god of fire, whom they called Xiuhtecutli, or Ixcoçauhqui. They made an image in his honor, with great artifice, which appeared to throw off flames of its own accord. And every four years, in this same feast, they slew slaves and captives in honor of this god. And they pierced the ears of all the children who had been born in those years, and they gave them godfathers and godmothers.

Al mes decimo octauo llamauan Izcalli: en este mes hazian fiesta al dios del fuego que llamauan Xiuhtecutli, o Jxcoçauhquj: hazian vna ymagen a su hõra de grã artificio que parecia que echaua llamas de fuego de sí: y de quatro en quatro años en esta mesma fiesta esclauos y captiuos matauan a honrra deste dios: y agujeraua las orejas a todos los njños que aujan nacido en aquellos años y dauanlos padrinos, y madrinas.

796X [805 778] 776 [852 304 608]

Chapter 18
Izcalli

On the tenth day of this month they made a new fire at midnight, before the image of Xiuhtecutli, [which was] very curiously adorned. And, the fire having been lit, then, in the morning, the young men and boys came, and they brought various animals which they had hunted in the ten preceding days—some water [animals] and some land [animals]. And they offered them to the old men who were charged with safeguarding this god. And these cast into the fire all of those animals, so that they would cook. And they gave each one of these young men and boys a tamal made with amaranth, which they called nenhquilitamalli, which everyone in the city offered upon that day. All ate of these in honor of the feast day. They ate them very hot, and they drank and made merry.

On this feast, in ordinary years, they slew no one. But in the bissextile year, which was every four years, they slew, during this feast, captives and slaves and the impersonator of Xiuhtecutli, decorated in the manner which hath been told above, with many precious and curious adornments; they performed many great ceremonies upon the death of these [victims]—many more than on the other feasts already described. This is set forth at length in the account of this feast.

After they had slain these slaves and captives and the impersonator of Ixcoçauhqui, who is the god of fire, all the leading men and lords, the illustrious, and

Cap. 18.
Izcalli

1	b	KL. Izcalli	b	8
2	c	A los diez dias deste mes: sacauã	c	9
3	d	fuego nueuo a la media noche delante	d	10
4	e	la ymagẽ de Xiuhtecutli muy curiosa-	e	11
5	f	mente atauiada: y encendidos fuegos,	f	12
6	g	luego en amaneciendo venjan los man-	g	13
7	A	cebos y muchachos, y trayã diuersos	A	14
8	b	anjmales que aujan caçado en los diez	b	15
9	c	dias passados vnos de agua, y otros de	c	16
10	d	tierra: y offrecianlos a los viejos que	d	17
11	e	tenjan cargo de guardar a este dios: y	e	18
12	f	ellos echauã en el fuego a todos aque-	f	19
13	g	llos anjmales para que se asassen: y	g	20
14	A	dauan a cada vno destos moços y mu-	A	21
15	b	chachos vn tamal hecho de bledos que	b	22
16	c	ellos llamauã Vauhqujltamalli: los	c	23
17	d	quales todo el pueblo ofrecia aquel dia.	d	24
18	e	y todos comjan dellos por honrra de	e	25
19	f	la fiesta, comjanlos muy calientes y	f	26
20	g	beujan y regozijauanse.	g	27

En esta fiesta los años comunes no matauã a nadie: pero el año del biserto que ẽra de quatro en quatro años: matauan en esta fiesta captiuos y esclauos, y la ymagen de Xiuhtecutli, compuesta de la manera que arriba se dixo cõ muchas y preciosos y curiosos atauijos: hazian grandes y muchas cerimonjas en la muerte destos, muchas mas que en las otras fiestas ya dichas. Esto esta puesto a la larga en la historia desta fiesta.

Despues que aujan muerto a estos esclauos y captiuos, y a la ymagen de Jxcoçauhquj que es el dios del fuego: estauan aparejados y adereçados muy rica-

[262] [535]

In this house[1], which was like a monastery, was the image of Quetzalcoatl. On this day they adorned it with rich ornaments and placed before it offerings of perfumes and food. They said this was the sign of Quetzalcoatl.

terio, estaua la ymagen de quetzalcoatl: Este dia la adereçauan con ricos ornamentos, y ofrecian delante della perfumes, y comida: dezian que este era el signo de quetzalcoatl. [796^x] [778]

The Seventh Movable Feast

In the sign which was called ce miquiztli, in the first house, the lords and leading men celebrated a great feast to Tezcatlipoca, who was the great god. They said that this was his sign. Since all of them had their shrines in their houses, where they kept the images of this god and of many others, on this day they decorated this image and offered it perfumes, flowers, and food, and sacrificed quail before it, tearing off their heads. This not only the lords and leading men did, but all the people to whose attention this festival came; and the same was done in the tribal temples and on all the pyramids. All prayed, and beseeched of this god that he grant them favors, for [it was thought] that he was almighty.

La septima fiesta mouible.

En el signo que se llamaua ce mjquiztli: en la primera casa: hazian gran fiesta, los señores y principales a Tezcatlibuca, que era el gran dios, dezian que este era su sino, como todos ellos, tenjan sus oratorios en sus casas: donde tenjan las ymagines deste dios, y de muchos otros: en este dia, componjan esta ymagen, y ofrecianla perfumes, y flores y comida: y sacrificauan codornizes delante della arrancandolas la cabeça. Esto no solamente lo hazian los señores, y principales: pero toda la gẽte, a cuya noticia venja esta fiesta, y lo mjsmo se hazia, en los calpules, y en todos los cues: todos oruan, y demandauan a este dios que les hiziesse mercedes: pues que el era todopoderoso. [778]

The Eighth Movable Feast

In the sign which was called ce quiauitl, in the first house, they celebrated a feast to the goddesses whom they named Cioapipiltl. These, they said, were the women who died in first childbed. They said that they became goddesses and that they dwelt in the house of the sun; and that when this sign reigned, they came down to the earth and afflicted with various sicknesses those whom they met outside of their houses. And hence, in these days, they dared not go out of their houses. They had shrines built in honor of these goddesses in all the suburbs where two streets [crossed], which they called ciuatecalli, or by another name, ciuatepan. In these shrines they had the images of the goddesses, and on these days they adorned them with papers which they called amatetenuitl. On this feast of these goddesses they slew in their honor those condemned to death for some crime, who were in the jails.

La octaua fiesta mouible

En el signo, que se llamaua, ce quiauitl: en la primera casa, hazian fiesta, a las diosas que llamauan Cioapipiltl: estas dezian que eran las mugeres que murian del primero parto, dezian que se hazian diosas, y que moruan en la casa del sol, y que quando reynaua este sino, decendian a la tierra, y herian con diuersas enfermedades, a los que topauã fuera de sus casas. Y por esto en estos dias, no ossauan salir de sus casas. Tenjan edificados oratorios, a honrra destas diosas: en todos los barrios donde auja dos calles: los quales llamauan ciouecalli, o por otro nombre ciouetepan: en estos oratorios, tenjan las ymagines destas diosas: y en estos dias las adornauan con papeles, que llamauan amatetenuitl. En esta fiesta, dezian diosas matauan a su honrra los condenados a muerte por algun delicto, que estauan en las carceles. [784] [778]

The Ninth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce quiauitl, in the fourth house (which was called naui ecat), because this house was very unlucky they slew in it the malefactors who were imprisoned. And likewise the lord had a number of slaves slain as a superstition. And the merchants and traders made a show or demonstration of the jewels in which they dealt, bringing them forth so that all might see them. And afterwards, at night,

La nona fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce quiauitl: en la quarta casa que se llamaua nauhecatl, por ser esta casa muy malafortunado, mataua en ella los malhechores, que estauan presos. Y tambien el señor hazia matar algunos esclauos, por via de superticion: y los mercaderes, y tratantes hazian alarde o demostracion de las joyas, en que tratauan, sacandolas, para que las viesen todos: y despues a la noche, comjan, y beujan, to- [681] [777] [463]

[1] [the calmecac. — Analyst]

And afterwards, at night,

X 796 they ate and drank, and held flowers and those canes [302] of perfume. And they sat in their seats. And each one began to boast of what he had gained, and of the [51] distant parts which he had reached. And he belittled the others for their counting for little; [for] neither did they have as much as he, nor had they gone to distant places, as he had. In this the ones made a great mock of the others for a long space of the night.

mauan flores: y aquellas cañas de perfumes, y assentauanse en sus assientos: y començaua cada vno a jactarse, de lo que auja ganado, y de las partes remotas, donde auja llegado: y valdonaua a los otros de que eran para poco, nj tenjan tanto, como el, nj aujan ydo a partes remotas como el: en esto tenjan gran chacota, los vnos con los otros, por gran rato de la noche.

The Tenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they named ce malinalli, in the second house, named ome acatl, they celebrated a great festival; for they said that this was Tezcatlipoca's sign. In this feast they fashioned the image of Omacatl, and one who felt devotion took it to his house that it might bless him and cause his goods to increase. And when this took place, he kept it and preferred not to let it go. He who would let this image go, waited until the next time when the same sign reigned. Then he returned it whence he had taken it.

[778]

La decima fiesta mouible

En el signo que llamauan ce malinalli: en las segunda casa llamada vme acatl, hazian gran fiesta: porque dezian que esto sino era de Tezcatlibuca: en esta fiesta hazian la ymagen de Omacatl, y alguno que tenja deuocion, lleuauala a su casa: para que le bendiziese, y le hiziese multiplicar su hazienda, y quando esto aconteçja tenjala, y no la queria dexar: el que queria dexar esta ymagen esperaua, hasta que otra vez, reynasse el mismo signo: entonce la lleuaua adonde la auja tomado.

The Eleventh Movable Feast

In the sign called ce tecpatl, in the first house, they brought forth all the ornaments of Uitzilopochtli; they cleaned them and shook them out; and they put [them] in the sun. They said that this was his sign and that of Camaxtli. This they did at Tlacatecco. Here they set out, on this day, many kinds of food, very well cooked, like that which the lords eat. They presented all of them before his image. After they had remained there a while, the officials of Uitzilopochtli took them up and divided them among themselves, and ate them. And they also incensed the image and offered it quail. They struck off their heads before it, so the blood should be shed before the image. And the lord offered all the precious flowers which the lords used, before the image.

La onzena fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce tecpatl. En la primera casa sacauan todos los ornamentos de Vitzilobuchtli, los linpiauan, y sacudian, y ponjan al sol: dezian que este era su signo, y el de camaxtle: esto hazian tlacatecco: aquj ponjan, en este dia, muchas maneras de comjdas, muy bien gujsadas, como las comen los señores: todas las presentauan, delante de su ymagen, despues de auer estado vn rato alli, tomauanlas los officiales, de Vitzilobuchtli, y repartianlas entre si, y comjanlas, y incensauan tambien a la ymagen, y ofrecianla codornizes, descabeçandolas delante della: para que se derramasse la sangre delante la ymagen: y ofrecia el señor todas las preciosas flores, que vsan los señores, delante la ymagen.

The Twelfth Movable Feast

[753 774] In the sign named ce ocomatli they said that the goddesses called Ciuapipilti came down to the earth and [that] they harmed the boys and girls, afflicting them with palsy. And if anyone, at this time, sickened, they said that [the Ciuapipilti] had caused it; that he had come upon them. And the fathers and mothers on these days did not let their children go outside the [784] houses, so that they might not come upon these goddesses, whom they held in great dread.

La dozena fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce Oçomatli: dezian que decendian las diosas llamadas ciuapipilti, a la tierra: y dañauan a los njños, y njñas, hiriendolos con perlesia. Y si alguno en este tiempo enfermaua, dezian que ellas lo aujan hecho, que se auja encontrado con ellas: y los padres, y las madres, estos dias no dexauan salir a sus hijos, fuera de casa: porque no se encontrassen, con estas diosas, de las quales tenjan gran temor.

The Thirteenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they called ce izcuintli, [which] they said was the sign of fire, they held a great festival in honor of Xiuhtecutli, god of fire. In it they offered him much copal [incense] and many quail. They arrayed his image in many kinds of papers and with many rich adornments. Among the rich and powerful, they celebrated a great feast in honor of the fire, in their own houses; they held dinners and banquets in honor of the fire. In this same sign they held elections of lords and consuls, and in the fourth house of this sign they enacted the formalities of their elections, feasts, dances, and gift [giving]. After these feasts, they forthwith proclaimed war against their foes.

La treszna fiesta mouible.

En el signo que llamauan ce jtzcujntli: dezian que era el signo del fuego: hazian gran fiesta a honrra de xiuhtecutli, dios del fuego: en ella le ofrecian mucho copal, y muchas codornizes: componjan su ymagen, con muchas maneras de papeles, y con muchos ornamentos ricos: entre las personas ricas y poderosas, hazian gran fiesta, a honrra del fuego, en sus mjsmas casas, haxian combites, y vanquetes, a honrra del fuego. En este mjsmo signo: hazian la election de los señores y consules, y en la quarta casa deste sino: hazian la solẽnjdad, de sus electiones, combites, y areytos, y dones. Despues destas fiestas apregonauan luego la guerra contra sus enemigos.

796x [314] [288] 778 [565] [666 431] 721

The Fourteenth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce atl, in the first house of this sign, they celebrated a feast to the goddess of water, named Chalchiuhtli icue. All those who dealt in water celebrated the festival—those who sold water, as well as those who fished, and those who gained other livelihoods which there are in the water. These arrayed her image and laid offerings before her, and reverd her in the house called calpulli.

La catorzena fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce atl: en la primera casa deste signo, hazian fiesta, a la diosa del agua llamada chalchiuhtli ycue: hazian la fiesta, todos los que tratauan en el agua: ansi vendiendo el agua, como pescando, como haziendo otras gragerias, que ay en el agua. Estos componjan su ymagen, y la ofrecian, y reuerenciauan, en la casa llamada Calpulli.

[776] [463]

The Fifteenth Common Movable Feast

The lords, leading men, nobles, and rich merchants, when a son or daughter was born to them, paid much heed to the sign, the day, and the hour in which he was born. And of this they forthwith set out to inform the judicial astrologers, and to ask as to the good fortune or ill of the child who was born. And if the sign in which he was born was propitious, they had him baptized at once; and if it was adverse they sought the most favorable house of that sign [in which] to baptize him. When they baptized him, they banqueted the kinsmen and friends, so that they would be present at the baptism, and then they gave food and drink to all the guests, and also to the children of the whole suburb. They baptized him at sunrise in the house of his father. The midwife baptized him, uttering many prayers and performing much ceremony over the child. This [same] feast they also observe today in the baptism of their children, as to fasting, eating, and drinking.

La quinta decima fiesta mouible comũ.

Los señores, y principales, nobles, y mercaderes, ricos quando les nacia algun hijo o hija; tenjan gran cuẽta con el signo en que nacia; y el dia, y la hora en que nacia: y desto yuan luego a ynformar a los astrologos, judiciarios: y a preguntar por la fortuna buena o mala de la criatura que nacia. Y si el signo, en que nacia era prospero, luego le hazian baptizar, y si era aduerso buscauan la mas prospera casa de aquel signo para le batizar. Quando le batizauan, combidauan a los parientes, y amigos: para que se hallassen presentes al batismo: y entonce dauan comjda, y beujda, a todos los presentes, y tambien a los njños, de todo el barrio: baptizauanle, a la salida del sol, en casa de su padre, baptizauale la partera, diziendo muchas oraciones: y haziendo mucha cerimonja sobre la criatura. Esta fiesta, tambien la vsan agora, en los baptismos de sus hijos, en quanto al combidar, y comer, y beuer.

777 787 565 852 [759]

The Sixteenth Movable Feast

As soon as the parents saw that their son was of La sexta decima fiesta mouible.

Despues los padres vian que su hijo era de edad para

584

And they took [the children] to many [different] places.

[First was] Quauhtepec.[6] And the one who died here bore the same name—Quauhtepetl. His paper vestments were brown.[7]

The second place where one died was the top of Mount Yoaltecatl.[8] The human banner [the child to be sacrificed] had the same name—Yoaltecatl. His paper vestment was black striped with red.

The third place was Tepetzinco,[9] where died a girl called Quetzalxoch, a name which they took from Tepetzintli, [also] named Quetzalxoch. Her array was blue.

The fourth place was Poyauhtlan,[10] just at the foot and in front of Mount Tepetzinco. The name of him who died was Poyauhtecatl. Thus he went adorned: he was bedight in rubber, stripes of liquid rubber.

The fifth place, there in the midst of the lake, was a place named Pantitlan. He who died there had the name Epcoatl. The vestments in which he went, having put them on, were set with mussel shells.

The sixth place to which they carried [a victim] was the top of [the hill of] Cocotl,[11] and also he went bearing the name Cocotl. His array was varicolored—part red, part brown.

The seventh place was on the summit of Yiauhqueme, and also the human banner bore the name Yiauhqueme. The clothing which he bore was completely brown.

These were the places where [the children] died, as blood-offerings, as human banners.

And all went with head-bands[12] with sprays and sprigs of quetzal feathers; they had green stone necklaces, and they went provided with green stone bracelets; they provided them with bracelets of green stone. Their faces were painted with liquid rubber, and spotted with a paste of amaranth seeds. And their liquid rubber sandals: they had sandals of liquid rubber. All went in glorious array; they were adorned and ornamented; all had valuable things on them. They gave them paper wings;[13] wings of paper they had. They were carried in litters covered with quetzal

Auh mjeccan in qujmoncaoaia, quauhtepec: auh yn vmpa onmiquja, çan ie no ie ytoca etiujia, in quauhtepetl: yn jamatlatquj, yiapaltic.

Jnic vccã miquja, icpac in tepetl ioaltecatl: çan ie no itoca ietiuh, intlacateteujtl, ioaltecatl: yn jamatlatquj, tiltic, chichiltic ic onoanquj.

Jnjc ezcan, tepetzinco: yn vmpa onmjquja cioatl, itoca quetzalxoch, ytech canaia, in tepetzintli, qujtocaiotisia quetzalxoch, yn itlatquj catca texotic.

Jnic nauhcan, poiauhtlã, çan itzintla, çan ixpan in tepetl, tepetzinco: itoca ietiujia in miquja poiauhtecatl, ynic muchichiuhtiuja, vlpiiaoac, tlaulujectli.

Jnic macujlcan, vmpa in atl itic itocaiocan pantitlan, in vmpa, onmjquja, itoca ietiuh, epcoatl: yn itlatquj, in cacujtiuja, epoçpanjuhquj.

Jnic chiquaceccan: vmpa qujujcaia cocotl icpac, no itoca ietiuja cocotl: yn inechichioal catca, chictlapanquj, cectlapal chichiltic, cectlapal yiappalli.

Jnic chicoccan, icpac yn jiauhqueme: çan no itoca ietiuh, yiauhqueme, in tlacateteujtl: yn jtlatquj ietiuh, tlacemaquijlli, yn jiappalli.

Jzquican yn, in miquja nextlaoalti, tlacateteuhti:

auh muchinti, ynmaxtlatzon ietiuh, quetzalxixilquj, quetzalmjiaoaio: in chalchiuhcozquj ietiuh, yoan momacuextitiuj, qujmomacuextitiuj chalchiujtl: tlaixtolujlti, qujmixolhujaia, mjxmichiouujque, yoan ymolcac, ymolcac ietiuh, muchintin maujçotiuj, tlacencaoalti, tlachichioalti, muchi tlaçotlanquj, yn jntech ietiuh, tlaçotlantiuj, qujmamatlapaltia, amatl,

796 X
778
289
292
[314]
[525]
796 X
[292
301
237]
[314
624]
[289]
[493
237]

6. Maps of the Valley of Mexico in Colonial times bear some of the places and features mentioned by Sahagún, but the frequent repetition of phenomena is at times confusing. Of Quauhtepec, Sahagún's Spanish text says: "es una sierra cimiyente que está cerca del Tlamolinco."

7. Yiapaltic. Sahagún (Spanish text) has encarnado (deep red, flesh colored); later he has leonado (lion colored, tawny) for yiapalli. For papaltic, Siméon (op. cit., p. 34) has grisâtre; Molina (op. cit.), cosa teñida de negro; Simeón (op. cit.), brown or black.

8. The Spanish text explains: "es una sierra cimiyente que está cabe quauhtepec."

9. Loc. cit.: "es capital montecillo, que está delante dicho Quauhtepec, pertenece del Tlamolinco."

10. Loc. cit.: "es un montecillo, que está en los cimientos de Tlamolinco, y está cabe Quauhtepec."

11. Loc. cit.: "es un montecillo que está cabe dicho Quauhtepec."

12. Seler (op. cit., p. 57) reads yauauhtlatzon, which he translates as ihre eigentümliche Feiner.

13. Sahagún (loc. cit.) says "pusiéronles unos alas de papel como angeles." feathers; and in these [the children] were kept

They departed hence to go to the temple to bathe. Those who bathed they did not rub, but struck and slapped, [with a noise] like the breaking of ocean waves. Thus came to an end and disappeared the grime. And also this was the time for the washing of heads. The captors washed their heads and washed off the sweat with a soap [called amolli].[9]

For while all had fasted for their captives, they had never bathed; they had remained in filth until twenty days had passed. Likewise those of their household had never bathed. Then all bathed and washed their heads with soap. Thus it was said: "The hair was washed," or, "The filth was washed away." [For] so were they covered with filth.

And thereafter the owner of the captive set up in the courtyard [of his house] a woven twig ball on three small feet.[10] Upon it he placed the paper adornment with which had been adorned the Totec [when he died].[11]

And from here he brought out one pleasing to look upon, acceptable, and strong. He likewise was adorned [with the paper vestments of Xipe]. In them he took after people; he dispersed them; the man vexed them. He ran; he went using his shield as shelter and rattling his rattle-board. They went after him in disorder; they showered him with stones, and pelted him and attacked him with stones.

Everyone feared him, and let him pass. They said: "Now cometh he who hath washed his head."[12]

And if he seized someone, if he matched at anyone, he despoiled him of and ran off with his cloak; and however many cloaks he took, he carried them to the house of the captor and cast them on the ground in the middle of the courtyard.

Thereupon the captor planted his "pole of the flaying of men" in the courtyard; it betokened that this man [the captor] had flayed a captive.

Moreover, at this same time he put up[on the point of the pole], so that it hung,—having removed the [remaining] flesh,—the thigh bone[13] of the captive, and suspended with it the sleeveless knotted cord jacket and a small spray of brown feathers.

And he wrapped the thigh bone with paper, and provided it a mask. And this was called the god-captive.[14] vncã onoca, in teupan, ynic mãltitiuh, ynin nealtiaia, anno quinmamatiloaia, çan quintzotzona, quintlatlatzinja, iehqujn tlatlatzcatimanj, ic poujia, ic vel quiça in chiaualiztli. Auh no yquac, netzonpaco in tlamanj, motzopaca, mamouja: 796[K] 515 [388] ipampa inic oquinneçaujlique, yn inmaloa, aic omaltique, omotzoiotique, inic oquiz cempoalilhujtl: cenvetzi yn inchantlaca, yn aic omaltique, quinmuchiquacmaltia, mamoujia: ic mjma netzõpaco, anoço netzopaco, ynjc omotzoiotique:

auh çatepan itoalco, quiquetza in male, quitlalia quauhtzontapaiolli, ey icxi, tzicujlicxe, ytech quitlatlalia: yn jamatlaquj, ynjc omochichioaia totec. 796[K] [778]

Auh vncan conana ce tlacatl talqualittalli, tlaelittalli chicaoac: ie no ceppa ic ic muchichioaia, ipan tetoaoca, tococenmana, tlacatl quicocomonja, motlaloa mochimalcalcitiuh, quicacalatzziuh ychicaoac quicaoatzziuj, quitetoca, q'tepachotiuj, quitecicali:

muchi tlacatl quimauhtia, ipan macuuj: quitoa, Ie uitz tetzonpacquj:

auh iztla aca cana, iztla aca quicujtiuetzi, quipepetlaoa, quitlatlalochcia yn jtilma: in quezçuj quitecujlia tilmatli, ychan concaoa in tlamanj, itoalnepanala tlalli ic quiujujnequj in tilmatli.

Çatepan itoalco quiquetza, itlacatzipeualitzquauh, in tlamanj: ic quiuetzia, yno ce tlacatl quixipeuh malli. 796[K] 778

Auh yoan yn iquac y, tlaccapiloaia: auh ynaca oc conchokokiaia, yn iquezzepol malli: yoan mecaxicolli, ueuapatlacuatli iech pilcac. [291 237]

Auh in quezzepolli, ueuaica quiquiquimiloaia, quiçaiocxiaia: auh yniju motzoiotinia, malinxtl. [289]

9. Molina: op. cit., Spanish-Nahuatl section (amolli).
10. Corresponding Spanish text: "un globo redondo, hecho de paxaro."
11. Ibid.: "Hacia dentro hay [sic] otro que es como adornado, el cuerpo quando muerto."
12. Cf. Sahagún: Historia de Nueva España, p. 96, n. 1: corresponding: "Y no se atreve [sic] ninguno [sic] de enfrente, de cualquier [sic] manera, que el cuerpo estando [illegible] quien dice: cuidado [illegible] [illegible]." This would imply a double connotation.
13. Sahagún's Spanish text requires that the thigh bone was thus manipulated. Sabin, in Sahagún Kupfer, p. 81, has "rotula."
14. Cuitlapanquetzaliztli, in Sabin, loc. cit.

X 796 when it was cold, when it thickened and lay in place, it contracted and remained at rest.

And when day broke, the young men and the priests walked everywhere, to all the houses, from one dwelling to another; they went along the roads to all the houses. And also the priests [did likewise].

But when [the householders] made offerings, [the priests] remained quiet. They might not take part when offerings were made, or when they asked alms.

[578] And if [the priests] were met, if they took part, then there was ill-feeling and anger; there was strife.

[43] The youths took [their gifts] to the young bachelors' house and sampled them there.

And the priests carried [theirs] to the priests' house.

Then they departed to their fields, to get the maize god[dess]. In as many places as lay fields, from each field they got a stalk of green maize.[6]

[24] And in the harvested fields, they took only large maguey roots[7] and carried them hence to their houses.

● [778] They decked their maize god[desses] with flowers and set them up in the tribal temples; then they arrayed them and laid offerings for them.

[262] As fast foods they made, before them, five tortillas; they laid them in a basket. And upon it went a hard-baked frog, hard and stiff, its face stained blue, a woman's skirt about its hind-quarters. And they set down a large basket of pinolli;[8] and toasted maize [mixed] with beans.

And they cut a section of maize stalk and filled it and crammed it with everything laid out before Cinteotl. They took a very little from every [basket] and let the frog carry it on its back.

And when this was done, it was called calonooac, "it resteth in all the houses"; because only in houses, only in the homes, were honors paid to the maize god[desses].

And after sundown, they took [the ears of maize] to Cinteopan, the Temple of Chicome coatl. There they pilfered them and made merry with them; there was skirmishing, blows were struck; all whacked [each other] with them. It was said: "It is scattered."

And furthermore, they bore to Cinteopan, the Temple of Chicome coatl, the maize which was to be seed. Young girls carried it upon their backs.

[302] Some [of the girls] had a long lock of hair on one ontzaoac, yn omotlali, hi tzontoliuhtimanj, iniokatimanj.

Auh yn otlathuje, in telpopochti in tlamacazque, noujian nemj, oncal nemj, tecalpanoa, qujcenocujtiuj in calli, no iehoantin yn tlamacazque:

çan in tlatlamanaia tlamattiuj, amo aca vel monepanoaia, ynic motlaueuenjaia, ynic motlaeujaia.

Auh intla monamjquja, intla monepanoa, ic motlauelia, ic motlauelitta, ic mihixnamiquj:

in telpopochti, telpochcali qujtquj, vmpa qujpaloa.

Auh in tlamacazque, calmecac qujtquj:

njman ic vmpeua, yn jnmjlpan, cinteuanazque, yn izqujcan manj inmil, yn itech, yn ipan cecentetl milli, cecen cantiuj in toctli.

Auh in tlexinmjlpan, çã mecoatl in conana, qujoalitquj, yn inchachan:

qujmxotochiotia yn jncinteuoan, in cacalpulco qujquetza: vncan qujntlaquentia, qujntlamanjlia:

tlacatlaqualli ymixpan qujmanaia macujhtetl, acaquauhcaxtica conmana: auh ipan icatiuh cujatlaoatzalli, tepioacquj, quappiczticc, tlaixtexoujlli. qujtzincuetia: yoan cen chiqujujtl pinolli, yoan ecio izqujtl conmana.

Auh cem ixtli qujtequj acatl vncan qujtemjtia, qujtentiquetza, yn izqujtlamantli, ixpan onoc cinteutl: tepitoton, tepizcantoton, achipipil, noujiampa qujcuj, qujmamaltia in cujatl.

Auh yn iquac y, motenecu calonooac, cali onooac: ichica ca çan cali çan tetlachan in maniztililoia cicinteu.

Auh in ie teutlac, vmpa qujmoncacaoa, cinteupan yn jteupan chicome coatl: vmpa qujnamoc, ic nesujltilo, ic neiaiaotlalo, ic neujujteco, ic netlatlatzujteco, mjtoa tepixolo.

Auh no yean, in cintli, xinachtli ien: vmpa conitquja, cinteupan, yn iteupan chicome coatl, qujnmamaltia ichpupuchti:

yn aca tzontzocoltone, yn aca tzonquetne, yn aca

6. Cañas de maíces in corresponding Spanish text. Garibay (op. cit., p. 296) translates the term as mazo de maíz; Molina (op. cit.) as "pavesa o mazo de maíz que se quemó." 7. "Otras yerbas, que llamaban, maguey," in Sahagún's Spanish text. Orozco y Berra (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 239), referring to the maguey, says: "Las raíces, llamadas mezcales de jabalíes."

8. Granulated maize mixed with chia seed, cocoa, etc., according to Seler (op. cit., p. 88).

X 796 in five days the feast day of Toxcatl would come, then they began to sing [and dance].

Now, during this time, Moctezuma came not forth; those who had been [the impersonator's] companions provided the people with food and favors.

On the first day they sang [and danced] at a place called Tecanman. On the second day, in the place where they kept the image of Titlacauan, in the house of the keeper who guarded it. On the third day, at Tepetzinco, in the midst of the lagoon. On the fourth [day], at Tepepulco, which is also near Tepetzinco.

[501] After they had sung [and danced], then he embarked in a canoe. The women went traveling with him; they went consoling him and keeping him merry. Then the canoe arrived; then it touched the shore; then it was beached at a place called Acaquilpan or Caualtepec.

For here he was abandoned, a little [distance] from Tlapitzauhcan. The women then returned; and only they who had freely become his pages accompanied him while he yet lived.

[346] So, it was said, when he arrived where he was to die, [where] a small temple stood, called Tlacochcalco, he ascended by himself, of his free will, to the place where he was to die. When he climbed the first step, as he passed one [step], he there broke, shattered, his flute, his whistle, etc.

And when he had mounted all the steps, when he had reached the summit, then the priests fell upon him; they threw him on his back upon the sacrificial stone. Then [one] cut open his breast, seized his heart, and raised it as an offering to the sun.

For in this manner were all [these] captives offered up. But his body they did not roll down; rather, they lowered it. Four men carried it.

And his severed head they strung on the skull-rack. Thus he ended in the adornment in which he died. Thus he there ended his life, there he terminated his life, when he went to die there at Tlapitzauaian.

And this betokeneth our life on earth. For he who [538] rejoiceth, who possesseth riches, who seeketh and coveteth our lord's sweetness, his gentleness—riches and prosperity—thus endeth in great misery. For it is said: "None come to an end here upon earth with happiness, riches, and wealth."[12]

X 796 And here in Mexico, when [it was the month of] ● 778 Toxcatl, was set up and formed a figure of Uitzilcuíhi, oquiuh macuíilhuítl quiçaz yn ilhuítl Toxcatl, in pena cuícuíca:

yn iquac y, yn iaquilhuítl y, aocmo onmachiztia yn motecuçoma, oc ie ycenuíc catca, tetlaqualtia tetlauhtia, ynic omilhuítl cuícuíca, itocaiocan tecanma: ynic omilhuítl, vncan in pialoia, in teixiptla in titlacauan, yn ichã aquín calpixaquí, yn oquípiaia: ynic eilhuítl tepetzinco, vmpa in anepantla, ynic nappa tepepulco, çan no itlan in tepetzinco.

Yn on cuícuíca: nimán ie ic onmacalaquía, itlan ietihuí in cioa, quíiollaltitiuí, quellaquauhtiuí: vmpa vnquíça, vmpa onatenquíça, vmpa químonacana in acalli, ytocaiocan acaquílpan, anoço caoaltepec:

ipampa ca vncan ontecaoaloia, achi ie ytlan in tlapitzauhcan: in cioa vncan oalmocuepa: auh çã ichoã in matian muchioa, yn iachoan ocatca, yn oquítocatinenca in iõc oc nemí.

Iuh mítoa yn oacic, in vncan míquía teucaltontli icaia, itoca tlacochcalco: çan nomá in tleco, çan monomatlecauía, in vmpa míquía: in ce tlamamatlatl contlecauía, in ce conpanauía, ce vncan quíxamanía, quípuztequí yn itlapitzal, yn ívilacapitz, etc.

Auh yn oquípantlaz, yn izquí tlamamatlatl, yn opanuetzito tlacpac: nimán quícuítiuetzi in tlamacazque, conaquetztiteca in techcac: nimán ie ic queltetequi, conanilia yn iiollo, no conjauíia in tonatiuh:

ca çan muchi tlacatl iuh mictiloia, in mamalti. Auh yn ídlac amo quíoalmímílooaia, çan quíoaltemoujaia, quínauhcauíaia:

auh yn itzontecõ, tzompatitech conquauhço, iuh tlantica, yn iuh ipã omíc ynechichioal: ic vmpa ontlamí yn inemíliz, vmpa contzonquistia yn inemíliz, yn vmpa omíquíto Tlapitzaozian.

Auh ynín ca quínezcaiotia, in tlalticpac tonemíliz: ca in aquín paquí, motlamachtia, in quítta in químauçoa in itzopelica, yn iauíiaca in totecuío, in necuíhtonolli, in netlamachtilli: inic tzonquíça vey nezolinílíztli: ca iuh mítoa, aiac quítlamitiuh in tlalticpac, paquílíztli, necuíhtonolli, netlamachtilli.

Auh yn nican mexico, yn iquac Toxcatl: motlalia

12. This is a reference to the characteristics of Tezcatlipoca. See Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 2.

Twenty-eighth Chapter, which telleth of the feast and the offerings which they made upon the feast days of the ninth month, which was named Tlaxochimaco.

The ninth month: it was known as "The Flowers Are Offered,"[1] and [like the others, it] also [consisted of] twenty days.

Two days [before the feast], when flowers were sought, all scattered over the mountains, that every flower might be found—various flowers, mountain flowers: species of dahlia, of origanum, a mountain variety of tagetes; the nextamalxochitl; another origanum species, a variety of tigridia, of plumeria; sweet-smelling mountain clover; quauhelotochitl, [which is a sweet-smelling flower in the form of an ear of maize]; a species of magnolia, another of tagetes, one of excobedia; one of nymphaea, as well as a red variety; and the white water lily.[2]

And when [these] were gathered, when they had come to the flowers and arrived [where they were], at dawn they then were strung together; everyone strung them. And when the flowers had been threaded, then [these] were twisted and wound [in garlands]—long [ones], very long, and thick—very thick.

And when they had been arranged, then carefully were they set down; they were handled with esteem, and cared for with reverence.

And when this was done, all the peasants came in a body to make tamales for themselves. At sundown they plucked turkeys and dogs, and also at sundown they singed them. Those were singed which would be needed on the morrow.

All were occupied. All remained sleepless, wakeful. In festive mood, all were diligent and busy thus making preparations.

And when morning broke, the temple guardians then ministered unto Uitzilopochtli; they adorned him with garlands of flowers; they placed flowers upon his head. And before him they spread, strewed, Inic cēpoalli on chicuei capitulo, itechpa tlatoa in ilhuitl, yoan in tlamanalizzli: in quichioaia in ipan ic cemilhujtl, ic chicunauhtetl metztli, in moteneoaia Tlasuchimaco. 796[x]

Inic chicunauhtetl ilhujtl: moteneoa tlasuchimaco, no cempoalilhujtl: [805]

viptlatica in suchitemoloa, necenmanalo in tepepan in tlatemolo in ixquich suchitl, in nepapan suchitl, in tepepan suchitl, yn acocosuchitl, vitzitzillacusuchitl, tepecempoalsuchitl, nextamalsuchitl, tlacosuchitl, ocelusuchitl, cacalosuchitl, ocusuchitl, anoço aocusuchitl, quavelosuchitl, iollosuchitl, tlalcacalosuchitl, cempoalsuchitl, acasuchitl, atlacueçona, tlapalatlacueçona, atzatzamolsuchitl. 796[x] 137

Auh yn omonechico yn ocaxitico suchitl, yn oaxiosco, yn otlatujc, njmā ic moçoço, tlaçolo, tlaçoa: auh yn omoçoçoc, suchitl, mec momamalina, mjlacatzoa, vel viujac viujtlatezzic, totomaoac, vel tomactic. 796[x]

Auh yn otlacencaoaloc, mec tlamatzin motlatlalia, vel momalhuja, momauizpia:

auh yn iquac muchioaia yn, yn isquich maceoalli cenoetzi in motamalhuja, teutlacpa in qujujujtla totolti, yoß in chichime, no teutlacpa in qujnchichinoa, tetchichinolo, in monequizque iostzico: [231 252] neixpololo, acuchiztli nechioaltilo, necuchiçololo, yilhujnemoa, inhqujn tlatlaciuj, netetequjpacholo, injc tlacencaoaolo.

Auh yn otlatujc in ichoastin teupixque, njman ic ic qujtlamamaca in Vitzilopochtli, qujsuchicuzcatia, conixpanchitia: yoan ixpan qujtetequjlia, qujtecpanjlia, qujujujpana, qujtetecpiloa, in ixquich 796[x] 778

1. Cf. Gamaio y Beyo (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 32): "Micuilhuitontli, Tlaxochimaco. El primero era nombre usado por los de Tlaxcalla. . . . El segundo nombre es Tlaxochimaco, palabra que Tlaxcanada interpreta, cosando con dadas y repartidas las flores; ordinarios Veynte días, cuyos de flores, las la fiesta principal del año, comparada á Huitzilopochtli, fe ocupaban de día y las flores fueron ofrendadas profusamente con flores. . . ." Clavigero (op. cit., pp. 162-3) further writes: ". . . adornaban de flores a todos los ídolos, que adornaban a los que se encontraban en los templos, eran también a los que traían por derrotados en sus casas; que por esto dedicaban el mes el nombre de Tlaxochimaco."

2. Sahagún ed., Vol. III, pp. 27-4; Cf. also Fabri Sandoz, op. cit., passim, and Sahagún, Biblioteca Mexicana, p. 156 (where a few Gamaio equivalents are given). Some are described also in Martín Antonio Sánchez Barrera Mexicanorum Herba Illustratio Tlaxcaxoc (Rome: Vitalis Mascardi, 1651).

X 796 and hung rows of all the varied flowers, the most beautiful flowers, the threaded ones.

● 778 Then flowers were offered to all the rest of the gods, to the images of the gods, [or] devils. They were adorned with flowers; they were girt with [garlands of] them; flowers were placed upon their heads, there in the temples.

Thereupon all together, in all the houses, the homes of the majordomos, the homes of the great noblemen, and the houses of the youths, they laid flowers out [before the idols]. And they spread them out in the homes of each and all.

X 796 And afterwards, when each had been ornamented, then there were feasting and drinking. Everywhere, 535 everyone ate; all were in a festive mood.

And when midday came, then all sang and danced —verily, they drew up all the youths; the masters and the leaders of the young men, the seasoned warriors, the fearless warriors, the Otomí.[3] Here in the god's courtyard there was dancing—in the courtyard of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli.

[701] And those who led [the dance] were the fearless warriors, the great warriors, each of whom was considered [equal to] a battle squadron, who were not laggards in war; who turned [the enemy] back, [whose exploits] wheeled them hence.

[548] Also the women danced—not the daughters [of onlookers, but] courtesans, harlots—who went between [pairs of the men], they were [all] stretched in a row, taken by the hand or grasped about the waist. They moved all in line they went winding to and fro, nowhere breaking the line, at no time losing hands. They went in orderly procession.

[533] And the singers, who sang for them, who beat drums for them, who beat the ground drums, were quite apart [from the dancers]—no one side; they were upon a [counterfeit] house, upon the round [778] altar [or pyramid].[4] And the altar was completely round, round like a shield, like a millstone. And here, upon this, stood [the musicians].

And thus they danced: they did not leap, nor make great movements; they did not make dance gestures; they did not move throwing themselves about, nor dance making arm-movements, nor go bending their nepapan xuchitl, in tlaçoxuchitl, in manquj, in tlamantli:

njman ie ic texuchimaco, centetzi in inquijchtin teten, yn imixiptlaoan teten, tlatlacatecuio, texuchitilo, texuchiapano, teicpacxuchitilo, in vncan in tetecpan:

njman ie ic centetzi in noujan calpan, in calpixque inchan, in veuei pipilti inchan: yoan in tetelpuchcali, quicentzacutimanj, quicentzacutimomana in techachan.

Auh in ie iuhquj yn ocecencaoaloc mec tlatlaqualo, haztlica: noujan tlatlaqualo, yllhujtlamacho.

Auh yn oacic nepantla tonatiuh mec cujcoianolo, vel inquijch quicencaoa, in telpuchtli, in teachcaoan, in telpuchiaque, in tequjoaque, in quaquachictin, in otomj: vncan in netotilo in teuitoaloc, yn itoaloc Vitzilopuchtli.

Auh in teiacana, ichoantin in quaquachicti, in veuei tiacaoã yn iuhquj cecentecuti momatia, yn amo mitzacujlia iaoc, in tecuepanj, in temalacachoanj.

No ichoantin in cioa mjtotiaia, amo ichoan in teichpuchoan, ichoantin in mahaujktianj, yn aviaxjme intzatzalan mantiuj, inmatitech maantiuj, mocujtlanaoa, çan cenpanti, çan cenpantitiuj, mococolotiuj, acan cotonj, acan momacaoa vipantiuj.

Auh in cujcanjme, in qujacujcatia, in qujntlatzotzonjlia, qujnuenetzotzonjlia, çan nonqua, çan chico, caltech in manj, emomoztitech: auh in momoztli, çan iaoaltic, teujlacachtic, malacachtic, yn jtech, yn itlan manj.

Auh ynic mjutia, amo chocholoa, amono ontlayioa, amo ontlayiauhtiuj, amo motlatlaztiuj, amo [701] 3. Here and elsewhere, the following equivalents are offered: quaquachictli—[battle squadron]; tlalpochtli—[youth]; tlatlacatecuhtli—[master of the youths]; tlalpochtlato—[elder of the youths]; tlalpochtlapiltzin—[leader of the youths]; tequjoa or quaquajoa—[seasoned warrior]. To a degree, such definitions are, perhaps, arbitrary. The suggested equivalents, however, are based upon the following passages from Sahagún (Robredo ed.): Vol. I, p. 202, and Vol. II, pp. 137, 307 (quaquachictin, tequjoaque); Vol. I, pp. 131, 168, 182, 199, 215, 289, 291, and Vol. II, p. 182 (tlalpochtli); Vol. I, pp. 168, 291, and Vol. II, pp. 310, 319 (tlatlacatecuhtli); Vol. I, p. 291 (tlalpochtlato); Vol. II, p. 321 (tlalpochtlapiltzin). See also Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 94, on otomi and quaquachictli; pp. 88, 114, on tlatlacatecuhtli, tlalpochtlato; Vol. II, pp. 92, 93, 96, 136 on tequjoa or quaquajoa; Garibay (Llave del náhuatl, p. 303) on tlalpochtli; Siméon, op. cit., p. 258 (tlalpochtlato), p. 144 (tequjoa), pp. 144, 158 (tlalpochtlapil).

4. Cf. Siméon, op. cit., p. 198.

opochtli, here at the Temple of Uitznauac, in the tribal district. They placed it on the serpent bench.

This serpent bench was hewn of wood, to represent serpents; four sides carried the tails; four sides carried their heads.

They covered [Uitzilopochtli's] mesquite wood framework with fish amaranth dough; for his figure was always hewn of mesquite wood, which they covered.

Then they placed upon him his raiment; they put on him his sleeveless jacket, on which human bones were painted.

And over it they laid a mantle, his cape of magney fiber, like a network cape.

And they fitted on his paper crown, adorned with feathers, called amecuiatl. On his feather headdress stood a flint knife, also made of feathers, half of it being blood-colored.

Then they arrayed him in a godly, costly cape, made, embellished, and designed all in precious colored feathers, with the red eye border, all thus edged with [the feathers of] the red spoonbill. And in the center lay a great golden disc.

And his bones were made of fish amaranth dough, shaped like cylinders. They called them tromimilli. They piled them before [Uitzilopochtli's figure], until they were hip high.

And the cape which covered them, and spread before them, was designed with skulls, with the palms of hands, with hip bones, ribs, legs, the lower arm bones, and with the outlines of feet. Thus was it painted.

And this cape was named tlaquaquallo.

And yet one more thing they caused to be spread before him: they cast down what was named the sacred roll. In this form it was named his breech clout.

And this was a paper, white paper and not yellow paper,[13] a finger thick, a fathom wide, and twenty fathoms long.

With ceremonial arrows, arrows hardened in fire, they supported it; they were made only that they might carry [the paper]; that his breech clout might be carried.

In three places were they plumed, with white turkey feathers: first on the point, second on the shaft, and third on the end.

motlacatlalia, in Vitzilopuchtli: vncan m vitznaoac, teucalco, ycalpulco: coatlapechco contlalia: [796] ynjn coatlapechtli, quaujtl in tlaxixintli, iuhqujn cocoa, naujntin in motzinnamjctoque: nauhcampa caca yn jntzontecon: [778] [352 532] mjchioauhtzoalli, ynjc qujpepechoaia, yn jmizqujo, ca mizqujquaujtl, in tlaxintli, yn ixiptla muchipa caca, yn oqujpepechoque: [824] njman ie ic qujmamaca yn jtlatq': conaquja yn jxicol, tlacoaquallo, ynic tlacujlolli:

yoan panj cononolca, panj conquentia, ytzitzicaztilma: iuhqujn cuechintli: [292]

yoan conaquja yamacal, yujtica tlachioalli, motocaiotia anecuiotl: hivitzoncal, icpac icac tecpatl, çan no hiujtl ic tlachioalli ezzlapanquj: [293 237]

njman conquetia teuquemjtl tlaçotlanquj: muchi tlaçoiujtl ynic tlachiuhtli, ynic tlaiecchioalli, ynjc tlacujlolli, ynic tlatenchilnaoaiotilli, yn jten, çan moch tlauhquechol: auh yn jnepantla manj, cuztic teucujtlacomalli. [237]

Auh yn jomjio muchioaia, mjchioauhtzoalli, mjmiltic, motocaiotiaia teumjmjlli: qujtetema ixpan veca acitoc, injc vecapan cenquappantli.

Auh yn tilmatli ic tlapachiuhtoc, yn jixco çouhtoca, tlacujlolli, tzontecomatl, macpalli, queztepolli, omjcicujlli, tlanitztli, matzotzopaztli, xocpalli, ynic tlacujlolli caca. [532]

Auh ynjn tilmatli, motocaiotiaia tlacoaqualo:

yoan oc no centlamantli, ixpan contequjlia, ipan conteca in teumjmjlli itoca, iuh mjtoa ymaxtli:

Auh ynjn amatl caca quaoamatl, amo texamatl: ynic tilaoac cenmapilli: auh ynjc patlaoac cenmatl: auh ynjc vijac cenpoalmatl: [289 292] teumjtl, tlatzontectli, tlacochtli ynjc qujnapalos: çan ic muchioaia injc qujnapalosque, ynjc monapalos ymaxtli: [411]

excan in tlapotonjlli caca, iztac totoliujtica, injc cecnj, vel yiacac, ynjc vccan ytlaxichchocan, ynjc excan, vacan yn jmamazqocan: [411 237]

13. Cf. V. W. Von Hagen: The Aztec and Maya Paper Makers (New York: J. J. Augustin, 1944), pp. 68, 72 sqq. In the Rubendo edition of Sahagún, Vol. V, p. 231, a note by Seler defines quauhtamatl as "la materia manufacturada por la capa de liber de algunos árboles de género ficus. Sirvió de papel para los pintores o los libros, y de tela para hacer los calzones, camisas y otras cosas que el indio de los dioses requería."

X 796 ●778 When they had ornamented [the figure of Uitzilopochtli], the young, seasoned warriors, the masters of the youths, and the youths took it up. His breech clout went stretched and spread out before him. They went in procession; they went dancing [and singing].

When they brought it to the foot of the temple, they carried up [the platform]. Cords fastened it to the four [corners], so that they might take it up, that they might carry it. They went stretching [the cords] that [the platform] might not twist.

Then they began to climb up. They went rolling, winding, and reeling [the breech clout] up, coiling it.

As they went rolling up his breech clout, the officials proceeded to take up, gathering and collecting them together, the ceremonial arrows.

And when they had come to the top, when they had raised [the figure of Uitzilopochtli] to the summit, then they placed upon the serpent bench [the paper roll]. They placed it before him; they bound it to [the serpent bench]; they bound it on tightly and firmly.

X 796 When they had come to place it [there], then all came down; and there remained the officials, the priests, the guardians who guarded it.

Then all the people came down.

And this came to pass, that they went up at sundown, when a little sun still shone; and also at sundown an offering was made.

[262] And the tamales which they ate were fruit tamales, [which were] red, or tamales made of maize softened with lime, or bean and cornmeal cakes,[14] colored tamales, tamales of coarse, white flour, and [tamales] rolled up in amaranth seed dough.

These cylindrical tamales, wrapped up in amaranth seed dough—these tamales they offered at the temple.

And when it dawned, then offerings were made in their houses; only some made offerings before the devil [Uitzilopochtli].

And quail were beheaded by everyone, women and men.

Moctezuma began [the offering]. He himself, with his own hands, beheaded four quail.

And the priest beheaded other quail, but only by laying his hands upon them.[15]

Then, breaking [loose], the common people followed. All the people beheaded quail—men and women.

yn oquiencatlhque, cacoquixtia in telpuchtequiçaque, yoan in teschcaoan, in telpopuchti, ixpan cnotiuh, ixpañ çouhtiuh yn jmaxtli, tlaiaealotiuj, qujtotitiuj:

yn ocxitique yxtintlan teucalli, in ie quitlecatiiçque, ca nauhcampa ixticaca mecatl, injc cacoquixtiçque, ynjc qujnapalonque, qujcitilinjtiuj, ynjc amo monecujlox:

njman ie ic quipeoaltia in tlecoz, qujlacatzotiuj, qujcujxtiuj, qujtecuja, qujtecujxtiuj:

yn jamamaxtli qujoallaztiuj, in teumjtl concujtiuj, qujnechicotiuj, qujcententiuj in tequipanequc.

Auh yn opanuetxito tlacpac, yn oquipantlazque: njman ie ic conteca coatlapechco, ixpan qujtequjlia, itech qujlpia, qujcacatzilpia, qujteteuhilpia, yn ocontlalito: njmã oaltemoa, vmpa onmocaoa in tequipaneque, tlamacazque, in tlapixque, in qujpiaia:

njman ie ic oaltemo in ixquich tlacatl.

Auh ynin mochioaia, in acoquiçaia: teutlacpa oc achi tonatiuh, yoan no teutlacpa muchioa ventli:

yoã in quiquazque tamalli, xocotamalli chichiltic, anoço tenextamalli, anoço quatecujcujlli, tlapactamalli, quauhnextamalli, yoan tzocalilacatzolli:

ynjn mjmjltic in tamalli, tzoalli ynjc tlailacatzolli, qujcẽmana ỹ in tamalli in teupan.

Auh yn oclathujc, njman ie ic tlatlamanalo intechachan, çan aca in ontlamanaia vel ixpan tlacatecuiotl:

yoan tlacotonalo ixquich tlacatl, yn cioatl in toquichti:

conpeoaltia yn Motecoçuma, nauhtetl in çolin yn inoma, yn ñoma quicotona.

Auh yn oc cequj, çoçolti, tlenamacac, in quincotona, çan inpã conmanaiuh yn jma:

njman ie ic tlatzomonj, cenuetzi in macteoaltzõli, yn ixquich tlacatl in tlacotona, yn oquichtli in cioatl.

14. Alvaro Tezozomoc: Histoire du Mexique (H. Tezozomoc-Comparon, tr.; Paris: P. Jannet, 1853), Vol. I, p. 249, has, for quauquinili-amalli, bean and cornmeal cakes with bird or other meat.

15. Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 104) suggests that the priest merely touched them to behead them symbolically.

A796
778

Twenty-ninth Chapter, in which are named the feasts and blood offerings which they made upon the days of the tenth month, which was called Xocotl uetzi.[1]

The tenth feast, that which [was called] "Xocotl Falleth," likewise was of twenty days. They concluded it on the twentieth day.

And when they implanted the xocotl, [the Feast of] Tlaxochimaco had ended. They began at dawn; thus for the whole day was exhausted their strength. The overseer[2] shouted that they hasten; he cried out and called to them by name.

He said unto them: "[Use] all your force! Pull upon the ropes! Put strength to it! Exert all your might!"

And he who shouted became hoarse, as if his voice were cracked.

Earth was piled up, a mound of earth was raised,[3] that [the xocotl] might be lifted up in place; all exerted themselves; they took hold with all their force.

And the xocotl was twenty-five fathoms long. They stripped its leaves and branches; only its crown remained. When they had thus raised it, for twenty days it [waited] as they had brought it, not yet adorned.

And when twenty [days] had gone by, then verily came the celebration of the feast, "Xocotl Falleth." And when the feast was to be observed two days hence, once again they lowered [the xocotl]. Gradually, carefully they let it down; they took pains lest it break, crack, or snap. They brought it to rest upon wooden supports;[4] it was let down upon wooden supports, with much caution.

And when they had let the xocotl down in some manner, then all went home; all rested. And they piled up all the heavy ropes on the xocotl; they cast them back upon it.

Jnic cempoalli on chicuacuj capitulo, vncan motenoua in ilhujtl, yoan in nextlaoalistli: in qujchiouia, in ipan ic cemilhujtl, ic matlactetl metztli: in mitoaia Xocotl vetzi.

Inic matlactetl ilhujtl, ichoatl in xocotl vetzi: no cempoalilhujtl vel qujtlamja, in cempoalilhujtl.

Auh in qujquetza xocotl, oiuhialoa tlasuchimacotl, iostzinco in qujpeoaltia, ic cemilhujtica vel ontlamj, yn jntlapaliuiz, tlacaoacatimanj in tepan manj, in tlaciujja, tzatzi, tetzatzilia:

qujtoa. Izquich amotlapal, xitlatilinjcan, ximotilinjcan, ximotlapaltilican:

auh in tetzatziliaia içaoacaia, iuhquj yn jnmaquj tzatzaianja.

Mololhujaia, mocentlatilulcaujaia, ynic meoatiquetzaia, vel motlapaltiliaia, izquich caanaia yn Intlapaliuiz.

Auh in xócotl, injc viac catca, cempoalmatl onmacujlli: muchi qujtepeviliaia in jmatzocotl: ça yio in jxcallo mocaoaia: inic iuhquj in ocujquetzaque, cempoaltica in çan oqujvicaca, aiatle itlatquj.

Auh in oacic cempoalli: vel iquac ilhujtl in xócotl vetzi: auh in oqujuhviptla ilhujtl iez, oc ceppa qujteca, can jvian, çan tlamach in qujteca, qujmalhuja in ma cuetla, in ma natzin, in ma poztec: quauhtonmaçatl, quioalquechilitivi, quauhtonmaçapã in motecatiuh, cenca çan tlamach.

Auh ino quentel qujtecaque xócotl: njman ic cacalaca, nececevilo: auh in jaquich vepanmecatl ipan cîcpeuhtitlalia in xocotl, ipan contozauhtitlalia.

1. Garibay ("Relación breve," p. 303) translates Xocotl vetzi as "El Xocotl sienta o cae." Seler (Einige Kapitel, pp. 140, 161) has "der Xocotl fällt herab" for both xocotl vetzi and xocotl uetzi.

In Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 3, pp. 54-5, however, Seler argues that Xocotl uetzi should have been celebrated on the feast of Ozomatli, god and measure of the Ocuad, rather than for Xiuhtecutli. "For Ozomatli is the Xocotl, whose likeness was set up at the feast on the top of the tree. . . ." As evidence, Seler mentions the adornment of the xocotl and a passage from the MS del Palacio (ed. also Garibay, op. cit., p. 303): iquac in tlamacazqui yn tlamacaz Ozomatli. Sometimes, Seler adds, the figure was a mummy bundle.

2. In the Pedrido ed., Vol. I, p. 108, Sahagún defines the duties of the topon mazal as "los que tienen cuidado de vengar la gente." The corresponding Spanish text for Xocotl uetzi appears to use the term disparagar as a synonym, here rendered into Spanish as conducidores.

3. Cf. Codex Borbonicus, where illustrations of this scene and others for the month Xocotl uetzi are in better accord with the text than the illustrations in the Florentine Codex.

4. Although the g in quauhtonmaçatl seems clear in the Nahuatl orthog., Sahagún uses c in the Spanish text, and defines the term as "una cuchara cuadra de dos en dos." Probably the word is quauhtonmaçatl (cf. Rémi Simeon, op. cit.).

[i.e., a large tree, -Analysis]

And upon the morrow, then the carpenters came forth and assembled as they arrived. They brought with them their tools; there were adzes and hatchets. Well they hewed and smoothed [the xocotl] where it had knots, where the limbs branched out, where it was uneven.

They hewed another pole five fathoms long. They joined it, [so that it would] strengthen the crown of the xocotl. They made the crown very even. They girded all the tip with ropes, fastening and placing [branches and pole] within the ropes.

And when this was done, thereupon the fire priests adorned it with papers. The old priests helped and also those who cast [victims] into the fire aided. These [last] were very powerful and tall—exceedingly tall and big. They were chiefs.

The first was named Coyoua; the second was named Çacancatl;[5] the third was named Ueicamecatl. As such were masked they who pressed ahead with adorning [the xocotl].

And the xocotl image they fashioned [as] of flesh; a dough of fish-amaranth seeds mixed with maize they formed [for this]. They provided pure white papers for it, which they set in place. They bore no design.

Upon it they set [these]: its shoulder sash of paper; its paper breech clout; its papers[6] designed with falcons; its wig made of paper; its xocotl shirts, [of which there were] two. These were not put on, but were attached to the tree, in two incisions. Likewise they placed in another incision large pieces of paper, wide—a yard wide—and ten fathoms long, reaching down one-half the length of the xocotl.

And also they made three amaranth seed tamales, pierced them with sticks, in three places, and set them upon [the image]. And thereupon they bound on the xocotl ropes half way up on the xocotl—ten [of them].

And when all made ready, thereupon they raised it. And then there was much crying out and shouting.

They said: "Go on, there, heave! Pull with all your force!"

Thereupon they went to setting it upright; they went about raising it [by using] the wooden supports and prying it with a lever. And likewise as it moved, as it proceeded to rise, there was much clamor, much shouting, great din.

Auh in ōtlatvic: njman ōalhuj, oalnechicavi in quauhxinque, qujoalīquj, intlatquj oalietiuh in mateponxtli, tlaximalteponxtli, vel qujpetlaoa, qujxipetzoa, in vncan yixe, in vncā titicujztic, in vncā xizipochtic.

Oc ce qujxima quaoacatl macujlmatl: qujtlaçalhuja, qujtoctia in jxcalo xocotl, vel cōnevivilia in jxcalo, in jquapitzaoacan, qujmecatecuja, qujmecacuja, qujmecacitlantlalia.

Auh in ie iuhquj: njmā ie ic qujtlamamaca, in tlenamacac, tlapalevia in quaquacujlti, no ichoantin tlapalevia, in tetlepātlapque. Eintin, cenca chicaoque, quaquauhtique, quauhticapopol, quauhcholpopol, tetecutin caica.

In ce itoca: coioua. Injc vme, itoca: çacancatl. Injc ei, itoca: veicamecatl: iuhquin mjxpolotinemj, motequjmati in tlachichioa.

Auh in jxiptla xōcotl, in qujnacaiotizia: mjchioauhtzoalli qujtlaliaia, çan cemjxtac in amatl in qujmamaca, in jtech qujtlatlalia: amo ma tlacujlollo.

In jtech qujtlaliaia: yiamaneapanal, yiamamaxtli, itlotloma, yiamatzō, ixoxocvipil, ixocvipil, vme: amo onacticac, çan quauhtitech caca: vme itzitziquijlpan: njman no contlalia oc ce itzitziquijlpan, vevei amatl, patlaoac: injc patlaoac, cen iollotli: matlacmatl injc viac, itlacapan acitica in xocotl injc viac.

Auh no eteti tuccoiotl in qujchioa, qujquauhço: ezcan in qujquequetza: auh njman ie ic qujilpia in xōcomecatl, in vncan inepantla in xōcotl, matlactli.

Auh in omocencauh: njmā ie ic qujquetza, njman ie ic tlacaoaca, tzatzioa:

qujtoa. Ma ectel tlacahoane, ximotilinjcan, iquijch amotlapal:

njmā ie ic quauitiquetzivi, conquechilitivi, in quauhtonmaçatl, yoan qujquāmujvia: auh in iquene ie iauh, in ie meuatiquetzitiuh: cenca tlacaoaca, cenca tzatzioa, cenca chachalacoa:

796 X
778
[412 463]
[793]
[483 401]

5. Probably pronounced in reverse. Cf. the Jourdanet-Simeon edition, p. 139.
6. Referring could be to either paper or bark (amatl); in the Spanish text, Sahagún appears to favor paper.

X 796 And after that it was quickly lifted upright. Much ● 778 did the earth stir, move, and swirl. Upon this, they cast stones in [the hole]—all these round rocks—throwing in large stones, pouring them in. And when [the space] was filled with stones, then it was covered with earth. Thereupon each went to his house; all was quiet and calm.

auh in ie iuhquj ommoquetztivetzi, vel tecujnj in tlalli, vel olinj, yoã comonj: in ie ihuquj, njmã ie ic qujtetema: muchi ichoatl in teololli, in vevei tetl conmaia, contepeoa: auh in omoteten, njman ie ic motlalpachoa in panj, njman ie ic viviloa, cacalaçoa, cactivetzi, cactimomana.

X 796 And thereafter came out the captors [with] their captives, who were to be cast into the fire. [The captors] were well arrayed and adorned. They were [302] painted with yellow ochre; their faces were stained [237] red. They bore upon their backs butterfly devices made of red arara feathers. And their shields [were decorated with] lower legs[7]—those of either eagles [293] or ocelots. These were designed on this shield in feathers. Hence were these named "shields with legs."

Auh njman ie ic valquiça in tlamanjme: in immalhoan, in motlepantlazque, vel mocencaoa, mochichioa, motecocauhaltia, mjxtlapalhuja, in qujmama tlavizzli, papalotl: çan cuecalin in tlachiuhtli: yoã in jchimal tetepontli, aço quauhicxitl, anoço ocelomatetepontli, in vncã chimalpan icujliuhtica, hivitica: ic moteneoa in chimalli, tetepontli:

And so they went dancing with the captives; they [535] went winding back and forth. Thus they proceeded by twos. The captives, they who were to be cast into the fire, also danced. They covered their bodies with [301] white clay; they had paper breech clouts and paper [302] shoulder sashes; then they had their paper wigs, and [292] they decked their heads with feathers. They had feather lip plugs; they were stained bright red about the mouth; they were stained black in the hollows of the eyes.

ic mjtotitivi, momalitotitivi, momamãtivi: ic vmpatitivi in mamalti in motlepantlaçazque, no mjtotitivi, qujntiçavia, imaxmamaxtli, imamaneapanal, njmã ie imamatzon, qujnquapotonja; imjvitençac, motenchichiloa, mjxtentli'comoloa.

And when the sun set, then it all ceased, and they shut the captives in. And the captors departed. There in the same place reposed those who owned the captives. They guarded their captives.[8]

Auh in oncalac tonatiuh: njmã ie ic mocacaoa, qujncalcaquja in mamalti: auh in tlamanjme vivi: çan no vncan ommotlalia in maleque, qujnpia in immalhoan.

And then they started holding a vigil for them. It was already far into the night when the old men, those of the tribal temple, to which they belonged, departed. And when they ended the vigil, it was midnight, in the deep of night, when night divided in half.

Auh in peoa in qujntoçavia, ie tlaquauhiova in qujça: ichoantin in calpolvevetque, in calpoleque, in vncan povi: auh in mocacaoa in tetoçavia, iovalnepantla, iovalli itic, ioalli xelivi:

After that the captors then took [some of the cap- [302] tives'] hair; they took hair from the crowns of the captives' heads—a little of the captives' hair, [which] they cut from the crowns of their heads. They bound the ends [of the locks of hair] with bright red thread, to which were attached two heron feathers, forked. [413] And the obsidian knife with which they cut the hair they named the "falcon nail."

in ie iuhquj, njman ie ic tetzoncujva, in tlamanjme: qujntzoncuj in mamalti, inquanepantla, aqujton intzõ in mamalti, qujntequjlia in inquanepantla, chichilicpatica qujcujtlalpia, aztatl itech ca, vme, maxaltic: auh in jtztli injc qujtequja intzon: qujtocaiotiaia, itztlotli:

After they had taken [the hair], then they put it [415] into a small, woven reed basket, called the "hair basket." This hair basket the captor carried to his in ie jubquj in oconcujque, njmã ic cõtema petlacaltonco, itoca: tzonpetlacalli: inin tzonpetlacalli, qujvica in jchan tlamanj, aco qujpiloa, ic monextia in

7. Literally, knee. Bini Simeon, however, renders ampouili as skin.
8. The context suggests a distinction between dismissing and sleeping.

house and hung it high, that thus it might be shown that he had taken captives; that thus his manly exploits might be boasted. Always it hung from the roofing of the house, from the roof beams. It never came down until the time that he died.

And when they had cut [the captives'] hair, the owners of the captives slept but little. They guarded and watched them well; [for] it was their duty, their office, [to guard] lest those who were to be cast into the fire should flee.

And on the morrow, at dawn, thereupon they ranged [the captives] before the skull frame. And as they stood in order, then a man [priest] took off and pulled off the backs of [these] others their banners and their paper adornments—also perchance their wretched little cloaks—and placed them in the eagle vessel, where they burned.

Thereupon, of all the captives, who followed, they continued to place their banners and their little cloaks [in the fire]; there they all burned up. For now at last they were indeed to depart forever from the earth; futilely they stood in order. They awaited the end, for in truth now their hour had come.

And here they awaited Painal,[9] the envoy of Uitzilopochtli. And when Painal came, thereupon he ascended to the place where men were sacrificed,[10] where the unhappy captives were to suffer. And then, no sooner had Painal come than he then descended [from the pyramid]; a man [priest] brought him down, carrying him down under one arm. He who brought him down was called his father, or his elder brother. And when he descended, he came before and into the presence of the captives.

A second time Painal quickly went up. And a captor stood there, awaiting him. Then the captor seized [the captive] by the head,[11] grasping in his hand[12] [the hair of] the crown of his head. Then he went off leading him; and when they reached the foot of the pyramid steps,[13] there [the captor] left the captive.

Then those who cast men into the fire descended and came to seize him. First they threw incense in his face; then they bound his wrists, bringing his hands behind his back, and they bound his ankles.

ca tlamanj, ic moquichitoa, muchipa pilcac calqua-, itech in calquavid, aic oaltemo ixquich cavitl in injquja: 796x auh in otetzoncujoac oc achi concuchi, in maleque: vel quijmpia, vel quijmjxpia, vel imjx intequjuh, in ma cholotl in motlepanthaçasque.

Auh in otlatvic, in otlatlalchipaoac, njmã ie ic qujmecpana, tzompãtli ixpan: auh in ie tecpantimani, njman çe tlacatl compeoalkia, qujmonpeoaltia, qujmonetzinţilinja in oc coqujnti: in jpan yoan in jamatlatquj, yoan in aço itilmaçoltzin conthalia quauhtxicalco, vncan tlatla. [415] njman ie ic mochintin ẽatimanj, ommotocatimanj in mamalti, contlalitimanj in impan, yoan in intilmatzitzi, vncan contlatla, ca ie iccen cõcaoazque in tlalticpactli, çaçan ie vncã tecpantimanj, qujchixtimanj in immjquja, ca nel ie otlaimmãtic:

auh vncã qujchixtimanj in Painal, in jxiptla vitzilobuchtli. Auh in jquac oacico Painal: njman ie ic tleco in tlacacouhcan, in vncan tlacotinque, mamaltzitzinti: auh in ie iuhquj: çan tequjtl onaci in Painal, njmã ie ic oaltemo: çan ce tlacatl in qujoaltemovia, qujciacavitivitz: inin qujoaltemovia, motenecoa jca, anoço ich. Auh in oaltemoc: imjxpan oalqujça, imjxtlan oalqujça in mamalti: [778] ie no ceppa tlecotivetzi in Painal. Auh in tlamanj, ça iqujcac, qujchixticac: njmã ie icpac conana in tlamanj, amatica in cõtzitzquja, in jquaciolloco: njmã ie ic qujvicatinh; in oc ezitito in apetlac, vncã qujcaoa in malli:

njmã ie ic oaltemo, in tetlepantlaque, qujoalana: achopa, qujxiiuahcmja, çaepan qujmailpia, icampa qujviviquja in jma, yoan qujcxilpia:

9. It is to be understood that Painal was an image carried by a priest who, in this passage and those following, climbed up and down the steps carrying the image.

10. In both Nahuatl and Spanish columns, and in Seler (op. cit., p. 168), the spelling is chacacoaco ("en Matacoaco quienes sacrifican" according to Seler). The context appears to favor chacacoaco. Cf. corresponding Spanish version in the Bulmarde ed., and chacacoaco in Bird Gibson, op. cit.

11. More extensive in Seler, op. cit., p. 167, n. 1, 2.

12. On apetlac, see p. 47, n. 32. Sahagún (Bulmarde ed., Vol. 1, p. 191, and Vol. II, p. 207) writes of "el cualquiera del en que se lavaban aquellos que se decían sacrificados los grandes," and "los grandes sacrificados . . . decían cuando la cosa o aquello del en."

X 796 [534] horizontal drum, from which was hung a small water gourd. Hence it was said, "A water gourd hangeth."

When they reached the place of the skull frame, then [the wearer of the skin of the likeness of Toci] tramped upon her drum.[11] And the seasoned warriors already awaited [Cinteotl]. Now he departed, in order to bear his mask, made of the skin flayed from the leg [of the woman who had represented Toci], off to the enemy's land. Then the chiefs went surrounding him—strong, swift men who ran fast.

And when they who there placed [the mask] had gone to attain the land of the foe, up on the mountain top, one of the side-peaks of Iztac tepetl, a place called Popotl temi, not without struggle did they put it in its place; for [the foe] set upon them; or else they pursued [the enemy]. On both sides [men] were slain.

[417] 778 And when they had gone about setting the mask fashioned from the skin of the thigh [of Toci's likeness] upon a wooden frame,[12] then all went hence. And the foe likewise departed.

And when this was done, when [the wearer of the skin of the impersonator of] Toci had accompanied [home] her son [Cinteotl], thereupon she went to her home, there at Atempan. Then there assembled [701] the chieftains, all the fearless warriors, the leading warriors, the generals, the commanding generals,[13] and all the seasoned warriors, the chosen ones, the respected, the chiefs—who of their own free will were valiant, who set no value upon their heads and their breasts, who feared not death, who in truth hurled themselves upon our foes.

And after this, when they all had assembled in a body, then all were arranged in order, in well-ranked columns, before Moctezuma, who was seated upon his cagle mat. This was verily the skin [with feathers] [352] of an eagle upon which he was seated, and he reclined upon a seat with an ocelot [skin] backrest. It was in truth ocelot hide with which the seat was covered.

quitzoteontivi in teponaztontli, itech tlaçalolli, atecontontli: ie injc motemeoa, tecomazpilos.

In oacito tzompantitlan: njmã ic conjcça in jveuuh: auh in tequjoaque, ie qujchiztoque: vncan oncoa in jmexxaiac injc qujcaoazque iuuc: vncã oncoa cololhujtivi in tiacaoan, in chicaoaque, in tlaçanj: cenca motlalos.

Auh in oacito, in vmpa contlalianj in iaupan, in vmpa tepeticpac: inacaztlan in iztac tepetl: itocaiocan, popotl temj: aivian in contlalia, qujnoalnoca: anoce qujnitoca, necoc mjcoa.

Auh in ocõtlalito quauhticpac, in jmexxaiac: mec viloatz, mec no vi in teisuoan.

Auh in ie iuhquj, in ichoatl Toci: in ocõcaosto, iconeuh: njman ic ic iauh in jchan, in vmpa atempã, njmã ic cenqujxoa in tiacaoã, in jxqujchtin quaquachictin, in quaquauhiaca, in tlatlacochcalca, in tlatlacatecca: yoan in ie inqujchtin tequjoaque, in tlatzonanti, in ovelitoque in tiacaoan, in jiolloco chicaoaque, in amo qujtlaçotla in intzontecon, in jmelchiqujuh, in amo mjqujxmauhq̃, in vel in ca momotla in teisuoan.

Auh in ie iuhquj, in ocenqujzoac: njmã ic ixpan onnevipanalo, onnecenpãtililo, in jxpã Motecuçoma, ichoatica quauhpetlapan, vel ichoatl in quauhtli, tlaxipeoalli in jpan eoatica, yoan oceloteponzoicpalli in jpan motlaztica, vel ie in ocelotl yieouio, injc tlaqujmjlolli icpalli:

11. Guthrey (op. cit., p. 306) translates ie contrarungo iuuquk quiuoa in ceu que ie dooie: "quipan ne tamborill." The corresponding Spanish text implies use of the feet (pisar).

12. See note 22.

13. The importance of these officers (brave warriors, chiefs, and so on, is suggested by the following passages (Robredo ed.), Vol. II:

"... aquellos que han de tener cargo de regir la republica, o han de ser tlacatecatl, o tlacochcalcatl, dadles habilidad para que sean padres y madres de la gente de guerra que andan por las conquas y por las ganarias, y saben las vitorias, y dominadores o los barrenadores, y en su tiempo ha de venir al amonestar o mostrar a los estrangeros y criadores. ..." (p. 53).

"... los padres y madres del sol, que se llaman tlacatecatl (y) tlacochcalcatl, que tienen cargo de dar de beber y comer al sol y a la tierra, que le sirven y sirven de sus estrangeros: estos son los que tienen por regimen la cabeza y las orejas, y alli nacieron las orejas vivas y las horadan vivas, y las traen de la cabeza y las orejas de los muertos. ..." (p. 169).

"... sobre los principales y capitanes habia dos principales que los regian, el uno era tlacatecatl y el otro tlacochcalcatl; el uno de los dichos era jefe y el otro principal en las cosas de la guerra, y siempre parecian en todas cosas sus soldados para estos oficios. Tambien para capitanes generales de las cosas de la guerra parecian dos, uno soldado, o gentecuan y del pueblo, y otro soldado, y muy ejercitado en la guerra, el uno de estos se llamaba tlacatecatl y el otro tlacochcalcatl; estos ordenaban las cosas de la guerra, y del ordenar todas las cosas que concernian a la soldadesca" (p. 187).

Thirty-second Chapter, in which are related the feasts and sacrifices which they made, in the days of the thirteenth month, which was known as, and named, Tepeilhuitl.

The thirteenth feast was known as the "Mountain Feast."

All the digging sticks which were kept in men's houses, and the heavier sticks,[1] made as [representations of] mountains, they covered with a coating of dough of [ground] amaranth seeds.

And their bones were likewise fashioned of a dough of [ground] amaranth seeds, long and cylindrical in shape. Either fish amaranth[2] or chia [was used].[3]

And also they fashioned [images in the form of] mountains for, perchance, one who had died in the water—having drowned—or had been struck by lightning.

And for whosoever had been [thus] slain and not burned but only buried,[4] [to honor him] they also made images of the mountains; they made them all of the dough of [ground] amaranth seeds.

And upon the eve of the feast, toward sundown, they were bathed, their faces were washed.[5] When they [went to] wash them, they went blowing and sounding little clay whistles and little sea shell whistles for [the images].[6]

And they bathed them there at the Mist House; [with] fresh cane shoots they washed their faces. And some [men] washed them only at nearby shores.[7]

And when they had been washed, then the return was made whence they had came; in the same manner they came blowing whistles, with a great din as of shouting. Thereupon were given human form

Inic tempoalli on tlatlactli omome capitulo: vncan moteneoa in jlhujtl, yoan in nextlaoalli, in muchioaia in jpã ic cemjlhujtl, ic matlactetl omei metztli in moteneoaia, in mjtoaia Tepilhujtl. 796X

Injc matlacteri omei ilhujtl ichoatl in moteneoa tepeilhujtl:

in jxqujchtin cocos im pipialo techachan, yoan in ecatzotonti, qujtetepetlaliaia, tzoalli injc qujnpepechoaia: [241] 796X 778

auh in jmomjo muchioaia, çan no tzoalli, mjmjmjltic, aço mjchioauhtli, anoço cócotl:

auh no qujtepetlaliaia, in açaca atlan mjc, in jlaqujlo, in anoçe viteco: [765 778]

yoã in sequjn omomjqujli, in amo tlatilo, in çan qujtoca, no tepetl ipan qujqujxtiaia, çan moch tzoalli in qujnchichioaia: 796X

Auh in ocujuh muztla ilhujtl teutlacpa in teaaltilo, anoço teixamjlo: injc qujmonaltia qujntlapichilitivi, in qujnpichilitivi, cocovilotl, yoan tecciztotonti. [534]

Auh in qujmonaltiaia, vmpan aiauhcalco, acatzontli ichoatl in celtic ic qujmjxamja: auh in cequjntin çan imatenco in qujmonaltia.

Auh in ontealtiloc, mec oaltecuepalo, çã no ivi, [534] 796X 778

1. See corresponding Spanish text. Cap. XXII here: "Aunque estaban como troyes de palo grandes como la cualidad larga Barrenadas Rentonadas." Of these and of crosses, Torquemada (op. cit., Lib. II, p. 277) writes: "Para cada sahumadero, de palmares arriba, hacen cruces redondas de palo, y de cada de Arboles, labrandolas las cabezas de cada palohuerto que estan, Haciendo cuchillos de respaldar pequeños como figurillas, á manera de las Medianas, que acostumbran las Niñas, en manera Montes Imperiales, las quales llamaban Rentonadas. . . ." Clavigero, op. cit., pp. 149-7, writes similarly.

2. Mexican Mexican in Molina, op. cit., Spanish-Nahuatl vocabulary. In this chapter, however, Sahagún refers to michihuauhtli as yellow amaranth. See also p. 63, n. 32.

3. In the Bulmarda ed. of Sahagún, Vol. III, p. 364, Nicolás León has defined cocotl as "Tórtola (Chia de)"; in his study he used the numbered illustrations in Pere y Tamayo's translation. Cocotl is No. 998.

4. Torquemada (loc. cit.) further explains: ". . . en amanecio de algunos difuntos, en especial de los que se habian ahogado en Agua, ó habian muerto de rayos, que no pudieron ser quemados sus cuerpos, ó fueron enterrados por algunos amigos."

5. Both Sahagún (corresponding Spanish text) and Seler (op. cit., pp. 100-01) differ from this version. In Sahagún, the people wash the idols upon which the images rested; in Seler, the people are washed.

6. Though the coloring refers to color to the images, in the Spanish text Sahagún writes: "Los ídolos de cada frente Barrenaban y hacian cantar silbatos o de barro. . . ."

7. Sahagún (loc. cit.) here: "al agua que pasaba junto a su casa."

[776] and adorned [the figures]; they molded them [with amaranth seed dough].

[778] And some molded them well into the night. Thus did they fashion them: they daubed liquid rubber upon the faces [of the figures][8] and they laid [a spot of] fish amaranth seed paste upon [each of] their cheeks;[9] they covered them with banners of white paper spattered with liquid rubber, and they fitted upon them paper headdresses and their forked heron feather ornaments.

[314 287]

[766] And of those who had died in the water, they placed images only upon circular mats,[10] and made them of a dough of amaranth seed.[11]

And when it dawned, then they were set in each one's house, upon reed resting places made of thin, fine reeds; or wide ones; or large, white ones; or hollow reeds.[12] Upon these they placed them.

And when this was done, when they had set them in order, thereupon they laid offerings before them. They offered them fruit tamales, and chili sauce, or else dog meat, or turkey. And they offered incense to them.

[262]

When this was done, one said [of the figures]: "They are seated in the houses." And if one was rich, there was singing and wine was drunk in their honor; and elsewhere they only brought them offerings.

And upon the feast day, there died some women, [who were] representations of the mountains.

[776] The first was named Tepexoch; the second, Matlalcueie; the third, Xochtecatl; the fourth, Maisuel, representing the magney; the fifth was named Milnauatl. This [last was] a man, representing a serpent.

[314 287] Their array [consisted of] paper headdresses and paper vestments daubed with liquid rubber—with much rubber; a great deal of rubber. And the array and adornment of Milnauatl were in the same manner.

Early in the morning they started to go, carrying them upon their shoulders on litters. It was said: "They provide them with litters." They went carrying them there. They went there in litters; they carried them in a roundabout procession. Only the women carried [the litters] on their shoulders. They went singing for them.

[493]

qujntlapichilitivitze, inhquin tlacioacativitz, njmã ie ic tetlacatililo, techichioalo qujmpepechoa:

auh in cequjnti oc vecaioan, in qujnpepechoa, injc qujntlacatilia, qujmixolhuja, yoan mjtchiouhtli in quimõtlalilia incampan, qujmõquentia in tetevitl, yoan qujmõsquja imamacal, yiaztatzon.

Auh in atlan mjquja, çan iaoalco in qujntlaliaia, in jmjxiptla, tzoalli in qujnchichioaia.

Auh in otlatvic: mec tetlatlalilo in techachan, tulpepechpan, aço tolpitzaoac, aço tolpatlactli, aztapili, aço azali in impã qujtlaliaia:

Auh in ie inhquj, in otecencaoaloc: njman ie ic qujntlamanjlia: in qujnmaniliaia xocotamalli, yoan tlatonilli, anoço itzcuinnacatl, anoço totolin: yoan qujntlenamaqujlia.

In jquac in moteneoa cali onoac: auh in nitlacamachoia, cujcatilo, yoan tlatlaoanjlilo: auh in cana çan ixquich in qujntlamanjliaia.

Auh in jpan in ilhujtl, mjquja cequjntin cioa, imjxiptlaoan Tetepe.

Injc ce itoca Teposoch. Injc vme: Matlalquae. Injc ei: Xochtecatl. Injc navi, Maisvel: ixiptla metl. Jnjc macujlli: itoca Milnaoatl: inin oquichtli, ixiptlan coatl:

in jnechichioal, in jnmamacal, in jmamatlatquj: tlaolhujlli, cenca ollo, moca olli: auh in Milnaoatl, çan no inhquj in jnechichioal, in jtlatquj:

ioatzinco in qujmpeoaltia in qujnnapalotinemj, tlapechtica: moteneoa, qujntlatlapechvia, vncan mamantivi, vncan yicativi in tlapechoa, qujntlathiaoalochtia: çan no cioa in tlanapaloa, qujncujcatitivi.

---

8. The corresponding Spanish text reads, besides: "La cabeça de cada vno vnsauan tenjo dos colores, vna de parauisos, y otra de colorado . . ."
9. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 2, n. 15.
10. According to Sahagún (loc. cit.), "vnaban o rematauan hacian de barro, redondo como vagas de vnsauas."
11. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 22, n. 111.
12. In the Kobenhavn ed. of Sahagún, Vol. III, p. 235, otcalli is explained: "Hay otra que se llama tecuapalli, es vna cosa y dentro vnas cañas huecas como aquellas hacian que se llaman otcalli y echauan encima del agua, y remataba el vnsauas encima como los diuisos colorados de vnsauas."

And [the women] who carried [litters] were well and proudly budgets, all in new shirts and skirts, which they had put on them. And their faces were painted and they were arrayed in feathers.

And when the time was favorable that [the victims] should die, thereupon they set down the litters. Then they were brought up [to the top of the pyramid]; they proceeded to leave them there at the [Temple of] Tlaloc. And when they had brought them there and stretched them out upon the offering stone, then the officiating priests and the slayer came to take their places, and thereupon cut open their breasts.

And when [the victims] had suffered, when they had died, then they brought [their bodies] down. And thus they lowered them: they only went rolling them down [the steps], with great care turning them over and over.

And when they had come down with them, then they carried them to the skull rack. And when they had brought them there, then they cut off and severed their heads. There they inserted into their heads [the cross pieces of the rack].

And when they had severed the heads from the bodies, then they took [the bodies] to the tribal temples [whence the victims had been sent]. And next day, at dawn, [took place the ceremony] called "They are dismembered." Thereupon they dismembered the [figures made of] amaranth seed dough. And when [the bodies] were dismembered, then they took them up to the roof tops, there to dry in the sun—to dry still and hard. Little by little they kept taking some of it and eating it, and gradually they finished it.

And with the paper array which had been [theirs] they covered the circular seats which they had [used]. And when they had covered them, they hung them from the rafters of the tribal temples. For one year they stood for them; then they threw them down, scattered, in the Mint House. Only the paper vestments they [then] scattered; the circular seats they scattered to their houses.

Here ended the feast which was called Tepeilhuitl.

auh in tlanapaloa, vel mocencaoa, iccan moquetza, mochi iancuiz, in intech qujtlaliaia in incue, in invipil, yoã mozaoa, mopotonja.

Auh in otlaimmãtic in ic iquac mjquijtoque: njmã ic ic qujtecca in tlapechtli: mec tetlecavilo, qujmoncavitivi in vmpa tlalocan. Auh in oquimonaxitique, mec qujmõtecca in techcac: mec oalmoquetza in tequipanoque, in temjctianj: njmã ic ic qujmeltetequi.

Auh in ontlacotique, in omo[illegible]oque, njmã ic qujnoaltemovia: auh injc qujnoaltemovia, çan qujnoalmjmjlotivi, omoca çan quẽmach, in qujncuecuepticvizze.

Auh in oquimõquechcotomque, in intlac: njmã ic tecomputiclan: auh in oquimonaxitique, njmã ic quimõquechtequi, quimõquechcotoua: vncã quimõçoço in intomoteõ.

Auh in quimõquechcotomque, in intlac: njmã ic quivica in incacalpolco: auh in jmoztlaioc, in oallaxvic: in mjmoaia, Texinjlo, texixiinjlo: njmã ic ic quixiniqa in tzoalli: auh in oquixiniqque, njmã ic tlapanco quitlecavia, vmpa oaquj, quaulvaquj, tepiaquj: achchi concuijivi in quiçqua, can juh quitlamja.

Auh in jmomotlaquj ocatca, quiçquepontia in jaxcalli ocatca: auh in oquiçquepoltique calqueuc compitza, calpolco, çe xivitl quimoztlah, in quiçlaçaivi, in quiçquepontivi, in vmpa xiuhcalco: çanjo in jmomotlaquj, contzoua: auh in tzoalli quiçnelaquj.

Nicua tlamj in jlhuitl, in momoue Tepeilhuitl.

796x [292]

[778]

[264]

[289]

3: Sahagun M-3 (1529-1590) 1951 NU7 Aztec NU7

X 796 Thirty-fourth Chapter, in which they tell of the feasts and sacrifices which were performed on the days of the fifteenth month, which was called Panquetzaliztli.[1]

The fifteenth feast day: this one was called Panquetzaliztli.

[785] When the feast of Panquetzaliztli had not yet arrived, the priests fasted for eighty days, and laid down green boughs. When they began [the fast], it was upon the day following [the month of] Ochpaniztli. At midnight they spread the green boughs, on all the mountain tops and upon the circular altars, [even those] which were distant.

And this they did until [the month of] Panquetzaliztli arrived. When they laid the green boughs, they [292] went quite naked, wearing nothing. They went carrying green boughs; these [were] green reeds and [534] thorns. And they went blowing their shell trumpets and pottery whistles.[2] They proceeded blowing [them] alternately.

And when the feast of Quecholli ended, then began the singing and dancing, when was intoned the song named the Tlazoteaciotl—the song of Uitzilopochtli. This was begun at nightfall; and it was ended at the [534] time when the trumpets sounded, when the conch shells were blown.

Also, among them, the women sang and danced—harlots, who went between [pairs of men] (as hath been told). Daily they did this, until twenty days [had passed].

V 796 And when the ninth day before [the feast] arrived, then were bathed in sacred water [the victims 778 known as] the ceremonially bathed ones, or those to die the captives' death.[3] The old men of the tribal temple scoured the water; they got the water there

Inic 34 capítulo: itechpa tlamo in ʼIhuitl, yoan in nezcaoaliztli, in muchiosia in ipan ic cemilhuitl, ic caxtolteti metztli, in mijmaia: Panquetzaliztli.

Injc caxtolteti ilhuitl: ichoatl in motenteoa, Panquetzaliztli:

in ziamo aci ilhuitl Panquetzaliztli: in tlamacazque, nappoalilhuitl in moçaoaia, yoan acxoiztlaliaia: iquac quipeoaltiaia, in ith onoquin innurtlaioc, Ochpanjztli: in ioalnepantla onacxoiazma, in nevian teizpeticpac, yoã in momomonoco, in veca.

Auh inin qujchiõtia, inqujchica onaci in Panquetzaliztli, in onacxoiztlaliaia, çan pepetlauhtivi, atle intech vetztiuh, quinquitivi in acxoiztl, ichoatl in acatl xoxouhqui, yoan vitztli, yoan intecciz, yoan in cocovilutl quipitztivi, quipapatlativi in quipitza.

Auh in õquiz Quecholli ilhuitl: nimã ic peoa in cujcoianolo, in cujcatl in eos itoca tlazoteaciotl, icuic in Vitzilobuchtli: im peoaloia, iquac in tlatlapoiaca: auh in necacaoaloia, iquac in tlatlapitzalizpã, in ic tlatlapitzalo:

no teoan cujcoianos in cioa in xvienjme, teztzalan mantivi (in ith omjo) momurtlac in muchiou, inqujchica cempoalilhuitl.

Auh in oacic tlachicuavivi, vncan motecualtiaia in tlatlalilli, mooço xuchimjoque: in calpulveque, cotonaia atl: vmpa in vitzilobucheo cotonaia ml,

1. "Ilhuitecuhtli de Izcalinca," in Gerhard, op. cit., p. 312; "el mes de cuarenta el pendiente" (Chavero, op. cit., p. 179)—possibly a reference to the raising of the standard and the raising of Pyramid up to the skies in the Temple of Huitzilopochtli. Torquemada (op. cit., p. 289) writes: "Huitzilopochtlis de Pendones, ó Vanderas; porque el por este Tiempo se hacian hacer los estandartes de sus Penas; los quales ponian, enarbolaban ó levantaban en Cuarenta; y en este tiempo enarbolaban sus Mayorazgos, Alferes, y Lenderos; y defendian sus Tierras, y Mayorazgos, y otras cosas de honrra que tenian. De aquesto, que en todo este libro andan los Pendones, en devisa, y constituyen cada, y hacian entre ellos, como pendon Guerra, y Bandera: porque tambien eran tenidos á menosprecio, y tenido mucho Gusto, y honra quando perdian, y despojo, y premio de Cautivos, y Esclavos, y de muchos Pueblos, y generales Provincias, en señal de conquista, como quel, con Reinos, y Señorios. Y como de los estandartes en enarbolandolos unos de otros; porque los Pueblos, y Arrabaldes, no se rebelan, ni desmerecen; y para esto hacian grandes Ofrendas á su Dios Huitzilopochtli, ó Camaxtli, ofreciendole Aves, y otras cosas, pidiendole favor, y ayuda contra sus enemigos."

According to Tezozomoc (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 32) it was the special festival of the war captains, who set up a banner in the middle of the temple courtyard.

2. "Trompetas ó Gaitas de Tierra," according to Sahagun, op. cit., p. 288.

3. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 1, n. 5; p. 10. Sahagun (Bulmarda ed., II, p. 276) says: "Los sacerdotes hacian sus banquetes en que daban á comer carne humana; este hacian en la fiesta que se llama panquetzaliztli. Para esta fiesta compraban muchos que se llamaban tlacatecolos, at [the village of] Uxxilopochco. It was there at the [spring called] Uxxilatl, in a cave. With cypress[4] branches they stopped [the mouths of the jars] as they went. They proceeded bearing [the water] with them.

When they had taken [the water] hence, they thereupon sprinkled it upon [the victims], there at the foot [of the Temple of] Uxxilopochtli. And there they gave [the victims] their paper vestments, their paper adornment, in which they were to die. And they painted them with stripes, in blue, from their feet up to their knees; and from their hands up to their elbows. And their faces they stained in horizontal stripes of alternate colors, light blue and yellow.[5] And they inserted nose plugs made of an arrow and a half disc.

And when it was so done, when they had adorned them, when they had prepared them, then [the bathers, they who owned the slaves,] took them to the tribal temple, but they came hence quickly. Thereupon each [owner of a victim] went to his house [with his slaves]. There they took apart and set down [the victims'] array, placing [their ornaments] in palm leaf baskets for them. And there, together, [the owners] began the singing and dancing, going in company with their women.

And when they had come to the fifth day [before the feast], then they who owned the slaves[6] and the old men of the tribal temple began a fast. They ate only at midday,[7] and bathed themselves at midnight. Having bathed there at the cloud house, they then departed from the tribal temple.

And the woman who was to bathe [the slaves] bathed herself at the water's edge. She set up one thorn, stained with blood, on the bank. And when the four days of fasting ended, then at nightfall the serpent dance was danced. The bathed victims danced the serpent dance, as well as their owners, who had bathed them, and those who were to seize them, and those who were to bring them down [from the temple, when they were slain], and those who vmpan ca vixilatl, ontoc, avevetica in qujoaltzatzacuivi, intlan qujoalaantivi: 796^x 778

in oqujoalhujcaque: njman ic ic qujmatzelhuja, vncan in jxxitlan Vixxilobuchtli, yoan vncan qujnmamaca in jmmamatlatquj, in jmamanechichioal in jpan mjquijzque, yoan qujntzaco vavana in imjcxic, inmetzpan tlatlamj, yoan in inma, imacolpā tlatlamj: yoā imjxtlan tlatlaana, ic tlatlapantiuh in xxōtli, in cozic, yoan qujmoztlalilia iacapilolli, mjtl muchioa, yoan anecuiotl. 796^x 302 [301]

Auh in ic iuhquj in oqujmōchichiuhque, in oqujmōcencauhque, njman ic qujnvivica in incacalpulco, çan oalquijquijztiquijça, njmā ic ic vivi in inchachan tealtique, vmpa qujnxixicinja, qujntlatlalilia in intlatquj, qujmōcanatemjlia. Auh vncan in teoan compocaltia in cujcoianoa, qujnvivicativi in incioeon. 796^x 567

Auh in oacic, vncā tlamacujlti: njmā vncā compeualtia in moçaoaia tealtique, yoan in calpulvevetque: tlacatlaquaia, yoan maltiaia in iualnepanda: vmpā aiauhcalco in oemmaltiaia, vncan oneua in calpulco. [515]

Auh in cioatl tenkia, çan vncā in jaxnco oemmaltia: oc vixxtli cōquetza aiauco cuyo: auh in oxōquijzavilhujd, injc moçaua: njmā ic oaliova in cuanecujlolo, coanecujloa in tlaaltichi, yoā in tealtique, yoan in teaquc yoan in tatemovique, yoā im panoa- [535] que quieren decir, hombre, porque los hombres y mujeres para que engendraran, para que no cesse nunca sobre-vivido los hombres de mentir y de vivir, [illegible] como [illegible] de [illegible], porque allí hacía hecho de [illegible] y allí los [illegible] los que [illegible] en [illegible]."

---

The Kiel Folio 301 (Gerdes, op. cit., p. 107) reads: "Auh ioc [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

X-796 came down from the top of the Temple of Uitzilopochtli, [which was] above. When he had come [346] down, then he went direct to [the place] called the god's ball court.[9] Here they slew four victims—two [honoring the god] Amapan, two [honoring the god] Uapatzan.[10] When they had slain them, he then dragged them about the ball court. [It was] as if he painted it with their blood.

And when this was done, then [the priest bearing the figure of Paynal] fled thence, being made to hasten greatly.[11] He proceeded to Tlatilulco, and then [778] he went straight to Nonoalco. Here there received him [the priest bearing the image of the god] named Quauitl icac, the helper and elder brother [of Paynal].[12] His adornment was similar [to that of Paynal], but he was covered with chalk.

And when [the latter] had greeted [Paynal], then [both] departed; they circled about to Tlaxotlan. Thereupon they went straight to Popotlan. There also they quickly slew victims—very swiftly.

Then once more they went [on], straight to Chapoltepetl, passing before it. And when they came to the river bank, at a place name Izquitlan, also at this place they speedily slew a victim. He whom they slew was named Izquitecatl.

Then they set forth, hastening over to Tepetocan; when already at the outskirts of Coyoacan, they then went direct to Maçatlan. Here turning back, they then went straight to Acachinanco.

And when they had reached Acachinanco, then stopped the rolling up of the paper. These began to roll up the paper when Paynal began to follow his path.

And as for the rolling of the paper: The bathed ones remained in one separate group; those of Uitznauac remained in [another] group. [These latter] [714] a number of warriors aided. Moctezuma gave them armor jackets of yellow cotton, and shields [painted with] wolf eyes. Only pine staves lay in their hands.

And [the warriors] who aided those of Uitznauac [bore] spears with which they battled and which they [441] cast. And the bathed ones met them with only bird arrows, which they shot, with flint points. Verily, battle was joined; truly, [some] were slain.

obuchtli: in ocalhemoc, mec tlamelaoa, in motenoa Teutlacho: vncan qujmõmjctia navintin: vme amapan, vme vappatzan: in oquimõmjcti, mec quijzvilana, tlachco: iuhquin ic tlatlacujloa imenço.

Auh in ic iuhquj, mec oaleoa, cenca qujmotlalochtia, vncan qujça in Tlatilulco, njmã ic tlamelaoa nonoualco: vncan cantiqujça itoca Quauitl icac, itepalevicauh, itiacauh: canno iuhquj in jnechichiouh, tel çan ic motiçacaoan:

auh in oconantiqujz, mec vi, vmpan ommocolos tlaxotlan: njmã ic ic ontlamelaoa popotlan: no vncã ontlamjctitiqujça, çan iciuhca:

njmã oc ceppa ontlamelaoa, chapoltepetl ixpan qujça: auh in oacito atoiac, itocaiocan Izquitlan: no vncan ontlamjctitiqujça, in conmjctia, itoca Izquitecatl:

mec vi, vncã qujztiqujça in tepetocan, ic coioouacã caltenco, mec oallamelaoa, maçtlan, vncã oallacolos: njman ic qujcalmelaoa in acachinanco.

Auh in oacico acachinanco, njmã ic mocaoa in tlaamavia: in icholtin tlaamavia, iquac pena, in jquac vmpeoa, vtlateca Paynal.

Auh injc tlaamaviaia; in tlatlaaltilõ, nonqua manj: in vitznaoa nonqua manj, qujmpalevia cequjotin tiacaoan: qujmmacaia in Motecuçoma ichcavipilli, coztic, yoan chimalli, cujtlachiztzo: çan ocoquavitl in iuamac oonoc.

Auh in vitznaoa qujmpalevia tlatzontectli injc tlaiecoa in qujtlaça: auh in tlaaltilõ qujmamjqujj, çan tzcomjtl in qujtlaça, iacatecpaio, vel iauiotl in mochiouia, vel mjcoaia.

9. According to Torquemada, op. cit., p. 202, the four slaves were sacrificed in a ball court (tlachtlico)—not in the temple of the same name. Two had previously been sacrificed in the temple of Tlatelolco.
10. Seler (op. cit., p. 210) apparently does not regard Amapan and Uapatzan as gods; but, however, corresponding Spanish text.
11. Though the Huitzil was therefore the successor of Paynal, it was actually a priest, who carried the figure of the god. Cf. corresponding Spanish text: "Luego descendió su estrago, con gran prisa corriendo en los brazos, de cuanto de paynal, carrera de Tlatelolco."
12. "allí le salió a recibir, el estrago de aquel era, con la presencia del dios Quauhtlyac" (corresponding Spanish text).

X 796 night was spent and used in cutting lengths of paper, that they might complete and finish the spotted paper banners. And when they were finished and completed, they were joined to poles; [the papers] reached from the bottoms to the tops of the poles. They set them up in the middle of each courtyard. There they remained for the entire feast day.

amazodlalo: in tlamj, in iecavi tetevitl: auh in ozlan, in oiecauh, matlaquauhtitech mouivipana, tlaltitech peuhticac, onaciticac in jzonco; itoalnepantla in qujquequetza, vei oncā cemjllujtia:

X 796 And the producers of figures of the mountain [gods] beforehand feasted the priests, so that these would make for them the paper adornment of the small mountain gods. And only there in the priests' dwelling did they array them.

auh in tepiqoc achtopa qujnmolcaoaltiaia in tlamacazqui, injc qujnchivilizque imamatlatquj, tepictotō: auh çan vmpa in calmecac in qujchichioaia.

And when all [the adornment] had been finished, they then took them to the homes of those who had vowed to make the figures; and their instruments, [which] went forth [with them, were] their two-toned wooden drums, and their gourd rattles, and their turtle shell drums. And they adorned the figures of the mountains, offered them food, and dressed them in capes.

Auh in omuchi iecauh, mec qujtqujtze in inchā tepiqujnj, yoan intlatquj oalietiuh in inteponaz, yoā imaiacach yoan in jmaiouh, mec qujnchichioa in tepicme qujntlamamaca, qujntlaquētia:

And one who produced the figures [made] perhaps five, another [made] perchance ten, another perhaps fifteen. And the [figures] which they adorned were all [made] purely of a dough of amaranth seed.

auh in aca qujpiquja, aço m cujltetl, in aca aço matlactetl, in aca aço caxtoltetl: auh in qujchichioaia çan muche in tzoalli.

And they fashioned them as figures of these mountains—Popocatepetl, Iztac tepetl or Iztac cioatl, Tlaloc, Yoalteca tl, Quauhtepetl, Cocotl, Yiauhquemc, Tepeztintli, Tepepolli, [and] Uixachtecatl; and also [mountains of the god of] fire, Chicome coatl, Chalchiuhtli icue, and Ecatl.[6]

Auh in quinpiquja ichoauzin in tetepe: in popocatepetl, in jztactepetl, anoço iztac cioatl, in tlaloc, in ioualtecatl, in quauhtepetl, in cocotl, yiauhquemc, in tepetzintli, in tepepolli, in vixachtecatl, no ie in tletl, in chioume coatl, chalchiuhtli icue, ecatl.

And when they had completely adorned them, then they set food before them—each one separately. And their tamales were exceedingly small, exceedingly tiny, very long and very thin. And they heaped them in small wooden vessels and saucer bowls; and their small earthen vessels contained a very small [quantity of] chocolate.

Auh in oquinccencauhque, mec quintlamaca, ococenj mjecavia: auh in intamal cenca çan tepitoton, cenca çī achitzon, papatlachoztonti papatlachpipil: quauhcaxtomco in quinteremjlia, yoā inmolcaxtoton, yoan inçoquiccōtoton, çan no tepitoton cīcā achi in omaquj cacaoatl:

And four times that night they made offerings of food. And before them lay two green jars; wine was [in them]. And the green jars were made of these green gourds.[7] They split them, and took out their seeds; they removed the seeds, And they took out the pith, which was like a cord. Here they placed the gourd wine.[8] Thus all night they sang for [the auh nappa in quintlamaca ceioal, yoan imjxpan manj vaxtl chalchiuhteomatl vetli oncaca: auh in chalchiuhtecomatl muchioa, ichoatl in tzilacaiotli, xoxoctic, quintlapatzaia, quioalquintilia in jaiovachio, quioalaiouachquintia: yoan quioalquintilia in jcujtlaxcol, in jaiaqui mecatl, vacan contoca in oiocti,

4. These are listed in the chapter on Ad omnia. See p. 43. Tepeztintli and Tepepolli probably are the Tepeztinco and Tepepulco named in that chapter.
5. Cucurbita ficifolia Bouché (Sahagun, op. cit., p. 221).
6. Cf. Sahagun (loc. cit.)—Ecatl. Ecatl, however, is defined (Pérez Martínez op. cit.) as a mixture of honey and water.

images], holding a vigil for them. And they blew trumpets and flutes for them.

And they who sounded trumpets were not those whose office it was [to blow trumpets], but youths. They were much honored; they were offered food and wine.

And after this, upon the next day, [the priests] then sought weaving sticks. Thereupon they implanted them in the breasts [of the images].[7]

And when they had set in [the weaving sticks], then they cut off the heads of the [figures of] amaranth seed dough. Then they mixed what had been used for their hearts, and offered them up to them who had had the figures made, placing them in the green bowl.

And when this was done, when they had slain the [figures of] amaranth seed, thereupon they gathered and heaped up all the paper vestments of the mountain images. They burned [them] in the middle of the courtyard—they consumed them, they laid fire to them. And their little vessels, the little wooden vessels, all these [were] burned together.

And all the reed mats upon which they had stood, and the reed mats, and all the little vessels from which they had eaten, and the green jar, all [these] they took to the Mint House.

When they came [from] leaving these, thereupon first arrived the hidden guests, who were to feast in honor of the images. Then all were offered food, each severally and separately. When they had eaten, then they offered them wine.

And the women also entered. It was said, "They bring in the tamales." Now came empty-handed; all of them came bringing dried maize kernels, the women carrying them in their skirts. And those who brought their ears of dried maize [brought] perhaps fifteen or twenty.

And when they sat down, when they took their places, then they offered them food. All were offered food. Then likewise they offered them wine, and made them drunk. They set before them wine in black vessels. And they offered them cups, drinking vessels, wine jars, which were also black.

And when they took away the white spattered paper

iuh ceioal in qujncujcatia, qujntoçavia, yoan qujntlapichilia, qujnvilacapitzalhuja. 796x 778

Auh in tlapitzalli amo ichoan in tequjppaneque, çan telpopochtin, cencz no mavizmachoia, tlamacoia, tlaztiloia.

Auh in ie iuhquj in otlatvic, mec conjtlanj in tzotzopaztli, njmã ie ic qujmonaqujlia in iollopan. [284]

Auh in oconaqujli, njmã ic qujoalquechcollalia in tzoalli, mec conanjlia in jiollo muchios, qujoalmaca in tepiqujnj, xonovic xicalco, in qujoallalilia:

auh in ie iuhquj in oqujmõmjctique tzoalti: njmã ic ic qujncenqujxtia, qujtecpichoa, in jxqujch imamatlatquj tepictotoa, itoalnepantla in tlatla, in contlatia, in cõtlecavia, yoan in incacaxxtototon, in quauhcaxtecomti, muchi centlatla.

Auh in jxqujch aztapilpetlatl in jpan onoca, yoan oztopilquavid, yoan in jxqujch in tlaquaia in caxtomti yoan in chalchiuhtecomatl much vmpa concaoa in aiauhcalco.

In ie vi qujcaoztque, njmã ie ic ommoiacatia, in tlacoanotzalti, in tepictlaquaxque: mec tetlamaco, cococnj, neixcavilo: in ontlaquaque, njmã ie ic qujnmaca in vctli. 796x auh in cioa no calaquj, motenoa ontamalcaoa, niac çan juh iauh, muchi tlacatl itlaol qujnqujtiuh in cioa qujcuecuezanotivi: auh in oca icintzin in qujçqj, aço cuxtolotol, moço tlamjc.

Auh in omotecaque, in omotlalique, mec qujntlamaca tetlamaco: njmã no qujmaca in vctli, qujntlaokia, qujnoalmanjlia tilapantica in vctli, yoã qujoalmana in tetlaoan, in tlaoanonj, in tlaoõcaxitl, çan no dibõc. [273 415]

Auh in jpan: cancaoa tenvid, in nextlacolli cõtoa [202]

7. "Los Palacios MS. omitted children (Kirchhoff, op. cit., p. 314); "[illegible]" [illegible] "[illegible]" Tezozomoc (op. cit., p. 302) thus translates it: "[illegible] por los pechos, con un Tlachiquitl, que es un palo verde, con que sacan los [illegible], y mezcan de [illegible], y [illegible] el [illegible], que [illegible] los [illegible] [illegible] de la [illegible] y [illegible] los [illegible], [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] y [illegible]."

Thirty-seventh Chapter, which telleth of the feasts and ceremonies performed in the days of the eighteenth month, which was called Iscalli.[1]

The eighteenth feast was the one named Iscalli.

Upon the tenth day of Iscalli tamales stuffed with greens were eaten. [On this day] it was maintained and said, "Our father, the fire, roasteth [food] for himself." They set up his image—only a framework of wood which they made.[2] They gave it a mask, his face, made of precious green stone, horizontally striped with turquoise. It was very awesome; it gleamed as if it shone exceedingly; it cast much brilliance.

And they fitted upon it its quetzal feather crown, quite narrow at the bottom [but] large enough to fit around the head. The quetzal feathers spread out [above]. And two plumages stood she on each side, made like his horns. And the plumages both had quetzal feather vases. And to the base of the quetzal feather crown was sewn yellow hair, very carefully trimmed. And his lordly hair hung to his shoulders; and it was very evenly cut.

And when they put it on him, [it was] verily as if [it were] his own hair.

And they laid over him a cape of quetzal feathers, made entirely of quetzal feathers, which hung long, trailing upon the ground. The wind penetrated it, [making it, as it were,] stir upward, [so that it] glittered and gleamed.

And his mat was made of the skin of an ocelot—an ocelot skin laid flat [with] paws extended and also its head lying flat. And this [image of] Xiuhtecutli was before a brazier. At midnight [the priest] used the fire drill [to make the new fire]. And when a flame burst forth, then he blew upon it, and then made the fire.

And when the fire had been lit, when it was down, and the morning had reddened, then ranged them-

Jnic cempoalli on caxtolli omume, cept. ytechpa tlatoa, yn ilhuitl, yoan in tlamauiztililiztli, in motequipanoaia, in ipan vel ic cemilhujtl, ic caxtoltetl omey metztli, in mjtoaia in moteneoaia Yzcalli. 796[K]

Inic caxtoltetl omey ilhujtl: ichoatl in motencoa Yzcalli:

in iscalli tlamatlacti in qualoia oauhqujltamalli, 796[K] moteneoa, mitoaia, motlaxqujan toca, ichoatl in tletl, 778 qujtlaliaia; yxiptla, çan colotli, in qujchioaia, qujxaiscatiaia, yn ixiac chalchiujtl in tlachioalli, ziujtl ynic [262] ixtlan tlatlaan, cenca mauiçoticatca, cenca pepetlaca iuhqujn cuecueioca, cenca miliiotia:

yoan conaquja yn itzontecō quetzalcomjtl, çan [237] tzinpitzaoac, vey ynic quamalacachtic, iuhqujn zezeliuj quetzalli: auh vme in quammalitli, iuhqujn iquasquauh muchioa, neneeoc in mamanj. Auh in quammalitli, quetzalzontecomaio yiomexti: auh yn jtzintlan quetzalcomjtl, itech tlatzontli tzoncoztli, cencan quenmach in tlaquatectli, cencā quenmach in moquatec: auh ycujtlacxxiuhian vetztica yn itecutzon, cencan no quenmach in tlaquatectli in tlatzontectli.

Auh yn iquac oconaquiçque, iuhqujn ma nelli itzon:

yoan conqueztia in quetzalquemjtl, çan motequjtica quetzalli, cenca veca in vilantoc, tlalpan vivilantica: in ehecatl ielan calaquj, iuhqujn maacomana, iuhq'n cuecueioca, iuhqujn cuecueioa.

Auh yn jpetl muchioa, ocelocoztl, ocelupetlatl ma- [281] naçoualoac, çan iuh ca in jxcontecon, ixtlapach onoc:
auh in ichoatl xiuhtecutli ixpan ca tlecujlli, iocalnepantla in tlequimelaça. Auh in ovetz tletl, njman ic [372] ic quiçiua, moc tlelalia:

auh in omotlali tletl, in ovevic, in otlatlalchipanoc, 796[K] moc omomoçpana, tlamiacatia in telpopochti, in

1. "Iscalli," or "the quenching," according to Orozco, op. cit., p. 116. Temporarily leaving the meaning "ashes" (op. cit., p. 300); "quitar fuego; Remolino, 6 el de la encrucijada; porque que apaga fuego, 6 quema cenizas 6 deshace, y pasar de fuego 6 calor, y encender la Primavera." In Quiñones (op. cit., p. 172, n. 54) it is suggested that the literal meaning of Iscalli is "burn in the hearth."

2. Sahagún's corresponding Spanish text reads: "hacían la estatua del dios, del fuego de respaldar, y ponían máscara, como una cara, que ellos llamaban ixtlali, que quiere decir tlaxcalli, o mandil."

X 796 selves in line and came up the youths and small boys, who offered the old men serpents which they had captured. The old men took these from them and cast them into the fire—everything, whatever they had captured; all the birds—the thrush, the precious [136] thrush, small birds found among the reeds—all the varied kinds of birds; and the water dogs, scorpions, striped lizards, trout, the white fish, the sand fish, crabs, frogs, gulls[3]—all these they cast into the fire.

[262] Then appeared [the boys], and [the priests] offered each one a tamal stuffed with greens. And all the common folk made themselves tamales stuffed with greens. They laid them before [the image of] Xiuhtecutli. As many as offered to Xiuhteculti did so purely voluntarily. And some laid them as offerings only in the tribal temples.

And the tamales stuffed with greens they also named precious green stone tamales. And all the common folk presented among themselves their tamales stuffed with greens; they were presented among themselves. Whoever first cooked her tamal of greens then went to offer it to her kin. Thus she showed her self-esteem.

[262] And the sauce of the tamales stuffed with greens was a sauce of crabs.[4] And the sauce was called chamolmolli. And when the good common folk ate, they stood sweating and burning themselves. And the tamales stuffed with greens were very hot and gleaming; and they ate them hot, [so that even] their noses steamed. And the husks they set apart; no one let them reach the fire. They strewed all of them in the water.

[273] And when this was done, when all was eaten, thereupon wine was drunk. It was said: "They are refreshed; the old men refresh [themselves] there in the Temple of Xiuhtecutli." And thus they refreshed [themselves] with wine; they sat drinking and singing until it was dark. Here ended and concluded [the time when] tamales stuffed with greens were eaten; the eating of tamales stuffed with greens.

X 796 And when Izcalli came, when twenty days were counted, [this was] when Milintoc roasted something ● 778 for himself—[he who] likewise [was god of] fire. They also set up his image, which was only a framepipiltotoni, qujnõmacatimanj, in vevetque, in cocoa in oquimacique: qujnoalcujlitimanj in vevetque, tleco qujmonstlastimanj, yoan in ic inquijch, in aquijn çaço tlein ocacic, in jnquijch tototi, in acatzanatl, in teutzanatl, in acatechichictl, in ic inquijch nepapã tototi, yoan in xxoloti, in acaltetepon, in mjlquixochtli, xovili, in amjlotl, in xalmjchi, in acocilin, in cujatl, anenez, moch tleco qujmõtlastimanj:

njmã ic oalquijtimanj, qujnoalmacatimani, cecentetl in ossuhquijtamalli. Auh inquijch tlacatl in macecalli moosuhquijtamalhuja: ixpan ontlamanaia in xiuhtecutli: çan triollotlama, in quenquj ontlamanaia ixpan Xiuhtecutli: auh in cequjntin çan in cacalpulco in tlamanaia.

Auh in ossuhquijtamalli, no qujtocaiotiaia, chalchiuhtamalli: auh in jnquijch macecalli netech qujmomacaia, in inosuhquijtamal: netech motlatlamacaia: in aquin achto oicucic, iosuhquijtamal: mec iauh qujmacaz in jaõiolquj, ic qujnezttia in netlaçotlalizttli.

Auh in ossuhquijtamalli in jmollo catca, acocilatonjlli: auh in tlatonjlli, motocaiotiaia, chamolmolli: auh in jquac tlaquaia macecalxtizinti, tajltonjtoque, mochichinotoque: auh in ossuhquijtamalli, vel tetonquj totontlapetatic qujtotoncaqua, iaiacapoçontoque: auh in jacaio, çan nonqua qujtlaliaia, aiac tleco conaxitiaia: mochi atlan contepeoaia.

Auh in ic iuhquj, in ontlathquaiac, njmã ic ic tlaoano: mjtoa, texcalcovilo, texcalcovia in vevetque in vmpa itcupan xiuhtecutli: auh injc texcalcovia vetli, tlaoantoque, cujcatoque, çan iuh ioca, njcã tlamj ic tzonqujça, in ossuhquijtamalli quaio, in anoço vsuhquijtamalqualizttli.

Auh in omacic Izcalli, in jquac tlaomposoli: iquac motlazquijnia in Milintoc, çan no ic in tletl: no qujtlaliaia inipela, çan no oncotli in quichioaia, conaquja ixtiac, tapachtli in tlachioalli, moxentlilhuj, in tlili

3. Cf. Sahagún (Bulnes ed.), Vol. III, p. 190 ([illegible], [illegible], [illegible]); p. 199 ([illegible], [illegible]); p. 196 ([illegible]); pp. 197-8 ([illegible]); p. 198 ([illegible]). [illegible] in [illegible] according to Gerbay (Libro del alfabeto, p. 198), and [illegible] ([illegible] spoon) according to Clavé (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 79); Robert Lehmann-Nitsche ("Tierdarstellungen und Quecksilbermark," Zeitschrift für Ethnologie, Vol. LXX, p. 79) uses it in a "[illegible]" (Fischkorb). For [illegible], Clavé (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 90) has Cypriniae [illegible] (Vol. II, p. 73) "a white fish like a small eel." Cf. also Seler, Mexiko Reisebuch, p. 233.

4. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. II, pp. 199-4.

work which they made.[6] They put upon it a mask made of [a mosaic of bits of] shell. The lower part of the face was blackened, made black with black stones called tezcatl. And they striped the face horizontally with black mirror stones.

And upon his head they fitted a ball of yellow parrot feathers; the device for the back of his head, made of precious feathers, served as the lock of hair of the back of his head. And they set upon him his flame headdress, made of feathers from the neck of an eagle.[6] This glowed, and [it had] plucked [single] arara feathers set in order.[7] When he put it on, it appeared in truth to flare up. And his vestments were made only of arara feathers—a red arara feather cape, which trailed long.

And they laid before him tortillas made of uncooked, ground maize,[8] or small tortillas. They ground the maize. And when it was [ground to a] flour, then they mixed hot water with it, and afterwards it was sweetened. Then, they offered the tortillas, some [of which] had shelled beans, cooked, not raw.

And when they had set Milintoc in place, then severally all the common folk made offerings before him, coming together each with five [tortillas]. A great quantity of small tortillas were heaped up before him.

Similarly the youths and small boys were ranged in order; they hung on sticks the serpents and all the small animals, as hath been said. They offered them to the old men, and the old men cast them into the fire. And the quite small serpents and the other quite small animals burned up and charred. And the well-grown serpents, when they had been roasted, they went to take out, casting them forth upon the hearth. There they were piled up. Later, the old men of the tribal temple ate them.

And the youths and small boys then came forth, and they offered each of them a small tortilla. Then they departed. And after this the small tortillas were eaten.

Thereupon [all] were refreshed [with wine]; the old men refreshed themselves there at the Temple, the tribal shrine, of Milintoc. And the wine makers, those whose office it was to make wine, left with muchiox, ichoatl in tlilric teti, motocaiotiaia teutetl, yoan ixtlan tlatlaun, tezcapoztli ica:

796x
778
[301
302]

auh in conaquja itzontecon, ichoatl in tozpololli in jcuexpal mochiuhtica, tziuhtli in tlachioalli, itziuhcuexpal, yoan contecatica itlachinolxuchiuh, tozolquechtapalcatl in tlachioalli: ichoatl in juhquj xoxotla, yoan cueçalin in tlaxconolli: yoan tlavipantli: in jquac conteca iuhquin ma nelli tlatlatoc: auh in jtlaquē çā no cueçalin in tlachioalli, cueçalquemjtl, no veca vilanoc.

[237]

Auh ixpan quimanaia vilocpalli, anoço macuextlaxcalli: tlaolli in quiteci: auh in ie iotextli, njmā catonnjlpachoa, çatepan tzopelia: njmā ic quimana in tlaxcalli, cequj tlaoio, epaoxtlaoio, amo xoxouhcatlaoio.

796x
[252]

Auh in oquitlalique Milintoc, mec tlamanalo ixpan, cecenioca in macoololi, cenizuh in mamacujlli, itzachi in jupā motepeuhtitlalia, macuextlaxcalli:

Auh çan no ivi in motecpana in telpopochti, in pipiltotoni, quauhtitech quiquipilloa in cocoa, yoan in jequjch omjno in ioiolinc: quimonmacatimanj, in vevetque: auh in vevetque, tleco quimōnaiauhtimanj: auh in çan tepitoton cocoa, yoan in oc cequjtin çan tepitoton in ioiolinton, vel tlatla, tecoltia: auh in vevetonin cocoa, in ximoncaque, quimonantivi, tlexjllan quimollactimanj, vacā motepeuhtitlalia, çatepan quinque in calpollucvetque.

796x
262

Auh in telpopochtin, in pipiltotoni, ic calquijtimanj, cecen quimonmacatimanj, in macuextlaxcalli: njmā ic vivi. Auh in ie iohquj in ouquiloc, macuextlaxcalli:

Auh in telpopochtin, in pipiltotoni, ic calquijtimanj, cecen quimonmacatimanj, in macuextlaxcalli: njmā ic vivi. Auh in ie iohquj in ouquiloc, macuextlaxcalli:

njmā ic ic tencalevilo, tencalevia in vevetque in vocan iccopan, in jcalpoloo Milintoc. Auh in tlachioque, in tecuitlachioque, quiquicaua cecen caxid in vetli, anoço cecen xicalli, anoço cecen apilolxpiztli,

796x
274

2. Corresponding Spanish text: "[illegible]."
6. Paragraph [illegible] in Lib. III, Cap. I, §1 (Robredo ed., Vol. III, p. 198). Sahagún says of the Mixtec temple, "[illegible]."
7. Corresponding Spanish text: "y correspondían como pendientes de plumas galanas, que parecían como guardas de cabeza."
8. Sahagún: "[illegible]." (Sahagún, Robredo ed., Vol. II, p. 180).

Temple of Uitzilopochtli

Cuezpetl.[1] 1.

Uitzilopochtli's feast came three times; they celebrated his feast [three times] in one year.

The first time was [in the month] named Panquetzaliztli. And this was the time when they took up [to the top of the pyramid] this Uitzilopochtli [and] a second [god] named Tlacauepan Cuexcochtzin.[2] And thus did they take up the image of this Uitzilopochtli: all the priests and youths took it up in their arms. And the image of Uitzilopochtli was [made] only of a dough of amaranth seeds—very large; almost a fathom [tall].

And [the image of] the second [god], whose name was Tlacauepan Cuexco[ch]tzin, was likewise made of a dough of amaranth seeds.

And the image of Uitzilopochtli was made, and took the form of man, there at a place called Itepeyoc. And the second [god], Tlacauepan Cuexco[ch]tzin, was made, and took the shape of man, there at a place known as Uitzmaoac calpulco. And during the night they cooked and formed [the images].

And when it dawned, they were already shapen. Thereupon offerings were laid before them. And after noon all then danced; all went in procession. And when the sun entered his house [at sunset], they took [the figures] up [to the top of the pyramid]. And after they had gone to set them in place, all descended. [The images] remained there all night. And the priests who guarded [them] were called Iiopoch.

And in the morning Paynalxin came forth, who was himself the vicar of Uitzilopochtli. [A priest] carried [the god] in his arms. And the image of Paynal was formed of wood. And he who bore him in his arms was called Teptilxin Quetzalcoatl. He was richly budight with his feather device.[3] And the image of Paynal was thus adorned: [it had on] its humming bird disguise, its arms, its golden banner, and its green stone necklace. And over the small of its back went hanging the mirror device for its back,

Vitzilobuchtli ixtocal

cuezpetl. 1.

In vitzilobuchtli, cepa in quiçaia ilhujuh, in quijhujquiztiliaia, yn ipan ce xiuitl. 796x

Injc cepa ipan in mjtoaia panquetzaliztli: auh ynin vncan acoquiçaia, in ixhoatl vitzilobuchtli, yn omextin yn jtoca Tlacauepan cuexcochtzin. Auh ynic quitlecaujaja in ixhoatl vitzilobuchtli ixiptla, vel ixquich in tlamacazquj, in teipochtli in quinapaloaia: auh yn ixiptla catca vitzilobuchtli, çan tzoalli, cenca vey, cennequetzalli. [776] 776 ● 796x

Auh ynic vme in jtoca Tlacauepan, cuexcotzin, çan no tzoalli in ixiptla catca.

Auh in muchioaia, in tlacatia Vitzilobochtli ixiptla: vmpa yn itocaiocan Itepeioc: auh ynic vme, in tlacauepan cuexcotzin, vmpa in muchioaia, in tlacatia, itocaiocan Vitzmaoac calpulco: auh cenioaal in quinicuxitiaia, in quintlacatilaia.

Auh in ozlatujc, ic otlacaqui: njman ic ic ymixpan tlamanalo: auh in ic teutlac, njman ic ic netoxilo, necuololo: auh çan ic oncalaqui, in teoatiuh, in quintlecaujaia: auh yn oquinmontlalico, njman ic ic oaltemoa, vmpa ceioal cate: yoan quinpiaia tlamacazqui, yn jtoca Iiopoch: [793]

Auh yn ozlatujc, niman ic ic oalquiça, in paynaltzin, in çan no ic yxiptla Vitzilobuchtli, quinapaloa: auh yn ixiptla paynal, çan quauijl tlaca ixtiuh: auh in quinapaloa, itoca tepiltzin Quetzalcoatl: cenca mochichioaia, yiapanecaiouh: auh yn ixiptla paynal ynic muchichioaia, yvitzitzilmaxal, yimaxcaiouh, yteocuitlapil, ychalchihuitl: auh yn icuitlapan pilcatiuh, ixhoatl in cuitlatecuel, çan mache in teuxiuitl: 796x 293

1. See Lib. III, cap. I, § 1.
2. Described in association of Quetzalcoatl (Thompson, op. cit., pp. 142, 155).
3. Ed. Sahagún (Bustamante ed.), Vol. III, p. 111.

X 796 [293] all of fine turquoise. And he who led [the god] carried his serpent staff covered with turquoise.

And when [the priest with] Paynal came to Teotlachco, then [men] were slain before him. Those who died, who were named Amapantzizin, were both impersonators [of the god Amapan].[4] And many more captives [also] died.

And when they were slain, then they began the procession of Paynal. They arrived at Tlatelolco, and when they had arrived there, the common folk came out to meet him and offered him incense and beheaded many quail [before him]. And then they set forth [again] and reached Popotlan; and in the same way the common folk came out to meet him and offered him incense, and beheaded many quail [before him]. And again they started forth, and arrived there at Chapultepec, and in like manner the common folk greeted him and burned incense, and beheaded many quail [before him]. Thereupon they continued and arrived at Tepetocan, and also the common folk came out to meet him and offered up incense and also beheaded many quail [before him]. Then they set forth and reached Acachinanco, and also the common folk came out to receive him, offered him incense, and beheaded many quail [before him].

Thereupon the insignia went forth first, and when the insignia arrived, thereupon they mounted to the top of Coatepetl, where was [the image of] Uitzilopochtli. And when they had gone up, then they laid out the wooden serpent[5] and circled about it many times. Then all came down from there.

● [778]

auh in qujiacana qujtqujtiuh ycoatopil, xiuitl ic tlaqujmjlolli.

Auh yn onacic, in teutlachco in paynal, njman ie ixpã mjcoa: ichoantin in miquja yn jntoca Amapantzitzin, çan vmẽtin teixiptlaoan: auh ich cenca mjequjntin in mamalti miquja.

Auh yn onmjcoac, njman ie ic vmpeoa, yn tlaiaoaloz Paynal: vmpa onaci in tlatilulco, auh yno onacic, njman ie ic qujnamjquj in maceoalli, qujtlenamaqujlia yoan miec çolin qujcotonjliaia. Auh njman ie ic vmpeoa, onaci in popotlan, çan no iuh qujnamjq'a in maçeoalli, qujtlenamaqujlia: yoan miec çolin qujcotonaia. Auh njman ie no cuel vmpeoa, vmpa onaci in chapultepec, çan no iuh qujnamjquj in maceoalti, qujtlenamaqujlia: yoan miec çolin qujcotonjlia. Niman ie ic vmpeoa onaci in tepetocan: no qujnamjquj in maceoalli, qujtlenamaqujlia, yoan no mjec çolin qujcotona. Niman ie ic oalpeoa, valaci in vncan acachinãco: no qujnamjquj in maceoalti, qujtlenamaqujlia, no mjec çolin qujcotona.

Niman ie ic oalpeoa in machiotl, auh yn oacico im machiotl, njman ie ic tleco, yn jcpac coatepetl: in vmpa ca vitzilobuchtli: auh yn odecoc, njmã ie ic conteca, in ezpanjtl, yn otlaiaoalo: njman ie ic oaltemo.

4. See esp. [illegible], [illegible].

5. See fac. [illegible], and n. 17.

were then made. But everyone drew blood; straws were passed through tongue or ear-lobe, and incense was offered. Everyone [did so]; none were negligent.

And there was the image of that one, [the sun, at a pyramid temple] called Quauhxicalli. There was erected his image, his image was designed as if it had the mask of a man [but] with [the sun's] rays streaming from it.[10a] His sun ornament was round, circled with feathers; surrounded with red spoonbill [feathers]. Here in his presence was the fasting done, and the passing of straws through the flesh, the laying of offerings, and the slaying of quail.

And upon his feast day, also many captives died, and these were also called "those who died in war." These went to the house of the sun and dwelt with the sun.

neçocohoaia, tlacoquistiloia, tlenamacoia muchi tlacatl aiac ixcauhticatca,

796 x
[285]

auh inon catca ixiptla, ichoatl, in motenchoaia quauhxicalli, vncan moquetzaia in jxiptla, injc mjcujlovaia in jxiptla iubq'n tlacaxaiaque itonamecio itech quiztoia in jtonstiuhtlatquj iavaltic vej ihujtica tlatzaqualli, tlauhquechol injc tlatzaqualli, vncan ixpan muchioaia néçoliztli, in tlacoquistiliztli, in tlamanaliztli, in tlacotonaliztli.

796 x
778

Auh inilhûjuh ipã no mjiequjntin miquja mamalti, auh no mjtovaia in iaumiquj : natiuh ichan vjia itlan nemj in tonatiuh.

796 x

10a. Sol-ill, 68.

776
753

woman with a man, or that otherwise the fasting had been broken.[3]

776
755

And when the sick man suffered greatly, he prayed much to him, he cried out to him, he reached his hand toward him.[4] He said to him:

"O Titlacauan, abate [my suffering] for me. May I do no more for thee—may I no longer hear nor serve [thee]! But if now thou shalt heal me, I vow to thee that I shall serve thee. If I shall gain something for myself, I shall not eat of it of a morning,[5] but do thou come to set it at thy foot. I shall bring it [to thee]."

And the sick man [who was] in sore strain, who might not recover, who could not now end [the suffering], who could now endure no more, sometimes berated [Titlacauan]. He said to him:

"O Titlacauan, thou sodomite! Now that thou takest thy pleasure [with me], slay me quickly!"

Some Titlacauan then healed, not angered by this. And some nevertheless then died for this.

776

And Titlacauan they also named Tezcatlipoca, and Moiococztzin, Yaotzin, Necoc iaotl, and Neçaualpilli. And hence was he called Moiococ[tzin]: that which was in his mind, that which he thought of, he forthwith made. No one invented [anything for him]; none might prevent him. And in the heavens and all the earth around, whomever he wished he might endow; he would enrich him. And whomever he wished, he might afflict. And whenever he might be wroth, or might so wish, or when he was neglectful, he would bring down the heavens above us, and we should perish.

[778]

And Titlacauan, [who] extended throughout this world, was therefore besought, called to, and prayed to. And everywhere they set up his sanctuaries, shrines[6] by the road, at crossroads. Everywhere he was awaited. And in the shrines they had fir branches laid on the five days with which the twenty-day [month] ended.[7] Always they went to do this on each of the [five] days with which each month ended.

Enough.

cioacuchi oquichtli, yn ac ipan oquichcuchi cioatl: yoan anoce moneçaualuiltequj.

Auh in jquac in cenca tlaihiiouia cucuxquj, cenca quitlatlauhtia quitzatzilia, ymac tlatetoc; quilhuja.

Titlacaoane, ma oc xinechmocaxaujli, macaocmo iuh njnochioaz, ma onjcac, ma oc notlaiecul: auh intla oc tinechmopatiliz, mouictzinco njnonetoltia, ma njmjtznotlatlaiecultiliz: intla itla njcnonenextiliz, camo njctlacaquaz, çan mocxitzin ic tiemoquechiliquiuh, nican: njcujcaz.

Auh in cucuxquj cenca tlanauj, yn amo vel pati, yn aoc ontlaiecoa yn aoc vel i: in quenmanjan cahouia: quilhujaia.

Titlacaoane, cujlonpole: ic tonmotlatlamachtia, manoço cuele xinechtlatlati:

in cequjntin njman quinpatiaia amo ic qualanja, y cequintin tel njman ic miquja.

Auh in titlacaoan, no quitocaiotiaia tezcatlipuca, moiococztzi, iaotzi, necoc iautl, neçaoalpilli: auh ynic moteneoa, moiocoia, in tlein quiiocoia, in tlein quilnamjquj, njman quichiua: aiac quiiocoia, aiac quelleltia: yoan yn ilhujcatl, yoan in jequich anaoatl tentica, yn aquin quinequj quicuiltonoz, quicuiltonoa: yoan yn aquin quitztiz, in cococ teupouhquj, quitztia. Auh yn iquin moçomaz, immonenequiz, yn iquin tlatziuiz, quioalpachoz yn ilhujcatl topan manj, tipopoliuizque.

Auh yn titlacaoa, quicentzacutimanca yn njca ynic notzaloia, in tlatlauhtiloia in tzatzililoia: auh noviian quitlalilia yn jchial, in mumuztli in vtlica, in vmazac, noujian chialoia. Auh in mumuzco acxoiatl quitlaliliaia, ynic tlamacujki ilhujtl, ynic tzonquiça ompoalilhujtl: muchipa iuh muchiuhtiuia, yn ipan ceceneztl ilhujtl, ynic tlantiuh cecempoalilhujtl.

ic inquich.

3. The corresponding Aztec text of this passage has [illegible] and [illegible], probably means for [illegible] and [illegible].
4. See Pl. 7.
5. In "Postdiscursos de Sahagún" (p. 171, n. 7), Garibay notes that [illegible] may also be more literally rendered "[illegible] o sea 'nunca (fuera) a medio, sin.'"
In this paragraph, we have read [illegible] as [illegible]; it might equally well be [illegible] (I shall dig).
5a. "Pie mañana," in the corresponding Spanish. See, however, Molina, op. cit. ([illegible]), and Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, pp. 14, 182. The term [illegible] is variously translated.
6. See Pl. 6.

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

[651
301
292]

[778 346]

—After Paso y Troncoso

53. Tribute taft for the Spaniards (Chapter 18). 54. Alvarado asks to see the Feast of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 19). 55, 56. Spaniards see preparations for the Feast of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 19). 57, 58. Preparation of the image of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 19).

[p. 44(I)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Astec NU7

532
.778

—After Paso y Troncoso

59-64. Preparation of the image of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 19).

[p. 44(J)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648
[778]

[341]

— After Paso y Troncoso

68. Preparation of the image of Uitzilopochli (Chapter 19). 66-70. Massacre of participants in the Feast of Uitzilopochli (Chapter 20). 71. The massacre is announced to the Mexicans (Chapter 20). 72. War breaks out between the Spaniards and the Mexicans (Chapter 21).

[p. 44(K)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955 . NU7 Aztec NU7

[redacted]

Nineteenth Chapter. Here is told how the Spaniards commanded the Mexicans to observe the Feast of Uitzilopochtli; yet this came to pass not in the presence of the Captain, for at that time he had gone to the coast where Pánfilo de Narváez had arrived.

And thereafter [Pedro de Alvarado] [1] then asked, as to the Feast of Uitzilopochtli, how the festival [was celebrated]. He wished to marvel at and see how and in what manner it was done. Thereupon Moctezuma issued the command. Those of his vassals who had access to him brought forth the word.[2]

And when the behest had come forth from where Moctezuma was imprisoned, thereupon the women who had fasted for a year ground the amaranth and prickly poppy[3] seed there in the temple courtyard. The Spaniards appeared, decked with great war array; they were dressed in battle gear, bedight as warriors. They came into [the group], walked among them, encircled them, looked at each one—stared into the faces of the grinding women. And after this, when they had come to see them, they then entered the great palace. As is known, they say that at that time they would have slain them if many of us warriors should have been assembled.

And when the Feast of Toxcatl had arrived, toward sundown they began to give man's form to the body [of the amaranth seed dough image of Uitzilopochtli]. They formed it, and gave it the look and appearance of a man. And of this one they fashioned the body only of a dough of amaranth seed and of fish amaranth seed.[4] They formed him on a framework of twigs—[the framework of] Uitzil [opochtli; one laid in] angles.[5]

Injc cxxtolli onnavi capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quçinjn Españoles, qujnnecotique Mexica: injc qujchioazque injllujuh vitzilobuchtli: auh inin amo ixpan muchiuh in Capitan: ca iquac in vmpa ia atenco injc acico Panphilo de narbayez.

Auh çatepan, njman ie ic qujtlanj in jilhujuh vitzilobuchtli, in quenamj ilhujuh, qujmaviçoznequj qujttaznequj, in quenamj, in quenjn muchioa: njmã ie ic tlanaoatia in Motecuçoma, in aquijque vel oconcalaquj itechiuhcaoan, qujoalqujxtiaia in tlatolli.

Auh in ovalqujx tlatolli in vmpa caltzacutica motecuçoma: njman ie ic qujteci in oauhtli chicalutl in cioa, mocexiuhçauhque, vncã in teuitoalco, oalqujzque in Españoles, cenca onocecencauhq̃ in jca iautlatqujtl, moiauchichiuhque, moqujchchichiuhque, intlan qujqujça, intzalan qujqujça, qujniaiavaloa, qujnccecmjtta, imjxco tlatlachia in teci cioa. Auh in ie iuhquj in oqujmonjttaco, njmã ie ic calaquj in vei tecpan, iuh machiztic: qujlmach iquac temjctizqujo intla mjec tlacatl cenqujçani toqujchtin. 796

Auh in ie oncic ilhujtl in toxcatl, teutlacpa in qujpeoaltia in qujtlacatilia in jnacaio, qujtlacatlaiaia, qujtlacatlachichtiaia, qujtlacaxnextia. Auh inin qujnaciotiaia çan tzoalli, ie in mjchioauhtzoalli, tlacopechpan in qujtlaliaia, ie in vitzitzillacatl, yoã nacatlacatl. 796 778

1. Cf. corresponding Spanish text.

2. Cf. J.-M.-A. Aubin: Mémoire de la ratio quotidien . . . réproduction du Codex de 1576 (Paris: Imprimerie Poires, 1893), pp. 89ff., where the meaning of the Conquest varies a different version.

3. Clavigero: cf. Brinton, op. cit., III, pp. 202-203 (chiahuitl = argiae; "seeds," Argemone mexicana L.); Sahagún, op. cit., I, p. 482 (chiahuitl); Bernal, op. cit., p. 283 (mexican dragonsnut of Mexico); Cecilio Robelo: Mexican Plants for American Gardens (Boston and New York: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1907), pp. 137-138 (poppy family—dragonsnut genus).

4. Jakobsen, in Hidrja Kapital, p. 101, n. 1, citing Sahagún, III, 1, 22. Identifies xiuhhuauhtli as chiahuitl. See also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II—The Conquest, p. 62.

5. Personal communication from Mgr. Angel Maria Garibay and Byron Mackay, Nov., 1954: "Y a este le hacían en cuerpo con Huitzilopochtli, con Huitzilopochtli (Argemone mexicana, esp. Lehmanni). Hacían el armazón de varas de sauce, y el armazón de Huitzilopochtli, y el armazón de engalanar." Thus authorities explain: "Lo hacían vitzilhuatl o con 'varas de Huitzilopochtli,' porque está formado de palos delgados y cortados del tamaño que se usaban para y figura (miniaturizado en Huitzilopochtli), y el nombre del dios está derivado Huitzilopochtli 'pájaro, colibrí' que significa el dios azteca Quetzalcóatl, el de la izquierda del armazón, que es el sur.—Huitzilhuatl lit. 'varas de colibrí.' La palabra huitzilopochtli, huitzilopochtli tiene varias fases y variantes, entre ellas la de los dioses. Se hallo también en el antiguo mexicano. Huitzilopochtli es 'colibrí, engalanar,' y 'varas de engalanar' significa que era el armazón, o aparato para construcción de varas rajadas o acomodadas en forma de palitroques delgados y trenzados. Sobre este armazón se ponían las flechas o sonajitas de huitzilopochtli, que eran precisamente de la planta dicha. Llamaban también huitzilopochtli, 'flechas de pescado.' Cf. also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 62; Sahagún (Bolaños ed.), I, p. 137, or Sahagún (Acosta S. ed.), I, p. 153.

796
● 778 And when he had already taken shape, then they pasted his head with feather down and made his diagonally-striped face painting, and [gave him] his serpent ear plug of glued turquoise [mosaic]. And from the serpent ear plugs hung the circlet of thorns, [made of] gold, with toes — cut in the form of toes. And his nose rod [was] arrow[-shaped]; of beaten gold [was it] wrought and set with stones. It was shaped of metal plate painted as if with stones. Likewise from it hung what was called the thorn circlet, painted with diagonal stripes. Thus was it diagonally striped: on it were [alternating] blue and yellow [bands]. And upon his head stood his humming bird disguise. Then there was, besides, what was named anecuyotl, [his headdress] of featherwork, round, a little narrow and pointed at its base. After [237] that they placed upon the back of his head the ball of yellow parrot feathers, from which hung his child's lock of hair. And [he had] his cape of stinging nettles,[6] colored black, in five places ornamented with feathers — with eagle down. It was wrapped about him. And below, he was wrapped in his cape with severed heads and bones; and above, he was [532] wrapped, also, in his jerkin painted with the limbs and members [of men] — all painted there with severed heads, ears, hearts, entrails, livers, lungs, and prints of the hand and the foot. And [he was given] a breech clout. Only the breech clout was very finely wrought. And its design was also the limbs and [289] members [of men; it was] so woven. But his large [breech clout was] [7] only of paper; it was of white paper,[8] one fathom wide and twenty long, with a design painted on it in blue. And as for the blood banner with the flint knife at the point: his blood banner was only of paper, painted red, as if [striped] with blood. And the flint knife at the point was likewise only of paperwork, and also similarly painted — colored as if with blood. And his shield, which he carried, was of reedwork; [it was] a shield of coarse reeds decorated in four places with feathers —

Auh in ie utlacat, njmã qujquapotonja, yoan quj-chioa, ixtlã tlatlaan, yoan icoanacochxivitl in tlaqs-lolli: auh in jcoanacoch itech pipilcac in vitznaoaiotl, teucujtlatl xoxopiltic, tlaxoxopiltectli, yoã yiacapilol, mjtl: Teucujtlatl in tlachiuhtli, tlatzotzontli, yoan tlateantli, tlacanaoalli, tlateicujlolli: no itech pilcais moteneoa vitznaoaiutl, ixtlan tlatlaan: injc ixtlan tlatlaan, vncan icac texutli, yoan tẽcuxtli yoã icpac conquetza ivitzitzilnaoal: njmã contoqujlia, itoca anecuiutl, hivitl in tlachichioalli, mjmjltic, achitzin vixtic, achi tzimpitzaoac: njmã ie ic in tozpololli icuexcochtlan in contlalilia itech pilcac tziuhcuex-palli, yoã itzitzicaztilma, tlatlilpalli: macujlcan in tlapotonjlli, quauhtlachcaiotica, qujmolololica, yoan in jtilma in tlanj qujmoquentia, tzotzontecomaio, oomjcallo: auh in panj qujmolpilia, yoan ixicul: injc tlacujlolli tlaquaquallo, ca much vncã icujliuhtoc in tzontecomatl, nacaztli, iollotli, cujtlaxculli eltapach-tli, tochichi, macpalli, xocpalli, yoan imaxtli: çan in maxtlatl, vellaçotlanquj: auh in jtlamachio injc no tlaquaquallo injc tlaqujxtli: auh in jvei[maxtli] çan amatl icboatl in quaoamatl, injc patlaoac cemmatl: auh injc viac cempoalli, injc tlacujlolli texoacxilquj, auh injquezpan qujmamanticatca iacatecpaio: in jexpan çan amatl catca, tlapalli injc tlacujlolli, injc tlaezicujlolli: iacatecpaio, çan no amatl in tlachioalli, çan no iuhquj injc tlacujlolli, tlaezicujlolli, yoan ichimal ictica otlatl in tlachioalli, otlachimalli, nauh-can tlapotonjlli, quauhtlachcaiotica, hivichachapan-quj, moteneoa: Tevevelli, auh chimalpaio, çan no iuhquj in expanjtl injc tlacujlolli: yoan navi imjuh ic qujcentzitzquja in jchimal yoan iopochmacuex imacpilcac, coiotonjtl in tlavipantli, yoan itech pil-catica amatl tlaxoxotlalli.

6. Hernández, op. cit., pp. 390-391, translates as ortiga (Urtica sp.?); on pp. 328-330 he mentions seven kinds: four are Urtica sp.; others are Urtica dioica, var. angustifolia; Berendsohn originally Kozlski Chaney ("quemadura," "ortiga"); and W. urenens — H. B. K. ("ortiga de tierra caliente"). Santamaría, op. cit., I, p. 486, writes of chichicaste: "la ortiga amarillenta. . . . La especie principal es la jarnapha urens L. . . . En México, planta herbácea, semiarrpadera, cuando es de tierras cálidas y templadas" (México desconocido, Representación desconocidamente). Also, "Planta urticácea, llamada también ortiga, mal hombre, malp mujer, quemadora, chichicastillo, duchinola, en México." But also Maximino Martínez: Las plantas medicinales de México (México: Ediciones Botas, 1933), pp. 414-415 — chichicastli (Urera caracasana [Jacq.] Griseb.).

7. In the MS, a blank follows jmi. Seler, op. cit., p. 298, has supplied -xuxo. Reference to the description of this ceremony in Book II, however, suggests that the ceremony is -maxtl.

8. In Victor Wolfgang Von Hagen: The Aztec and Maya Paper Makers (New York: J. J. Augustin, 1944), p. 60, amatl-amatl is given as "coarse, thickly filmed paper, more difficult to fashion than the fig tree variety"; from bell's bark amate (Amate carrizpera). On the other hand, a note in Sahagún (Rubredo ed.), V, p. 231, reads: "la materia amatlmatlatl por la capa de libro de algunos debaxo del gibaro fino. Sirvio de papel para los pintores o los libros, y de tela para hacer los adornos, cuchillos y otros objetos que el indio de los dioses requerian." with eagle down — with tufts of feathers. It was called Amaxolli. And the shield banner was painted like the blood banner. And his four arrows he held together with his shield. And his left arm band was hanging from his arm; it was composed of [strips of] coyote fur, and from it hung paper cut in strips.

And when dawn broke, when it was now the feast day, early in the morning, then those who had made vows before him unwrapped him. Before him they stood in one row and offered him incense; before him they laid all manner of gifts — feast foods, rolls of amaranth seed dough. And this was when they had not yet taken him up and elevated him to Itepeyoc. And all the men, the young, seasoned warriors, were as if determined and eager to proceed with and observe the feast, and thus show, exhibit proudly, and demonstrate it to the Spaniards.

